About master plan

Bureau of Taxation makes no promises

By RICHARD GOLD

Will retention of agricultural land in western Canton under the proposed master land use plan result in higher taxes throughout the rest of the township?

That is a question many residents and businessmen are asking, despite assurances from township Supervisor Robert Greenstein.

Under the plan, backed by Greenstein, at least 6.300 acres in western Canton will be retained as farmland.

Real estate taxes on that acreage will be lowered over a two-year period to make farming economically viable.

But the question of subsidies-other property tax payers picking up the difference when the farm land is devalued-is unresolved in the eyes of the Wayne Coutny Bureau of Taxation.

"WE SYMPATHIZE with what Canton is trying to do." explained assistant director of the bureau George McEachran. "but a lot depends on their zoning ordinance.

If they cut taxes on agricultural land. we could consider it a minus adjustment on their equalization and if the loss to their roll is large enough, it could affect their factor According to Greenstein, taxes on land zoned agricultural-industrial or land that has been designated dommercial farming property, will be reduced 40 per cent this

Next year the full reduction would be made so that all farm land zoned agricultural-industrial would be taxed at its use value rather than its potential value if it were to be developed. Value of land used for farming is between $500 and $700 an acre. Greenstein said. In two years under the proposed plan, farmers would be paying taxes on land assessed at that price.

Tom and Huck

Currently, farm land in western Canton, faced with development pressure from the east, is assessed from $1,000-$3,000 and taxed at 50 per cent of that value.

Last year, the entire township was hit by a .06 factor increase from the county. This year, the proposed factor is .12, which means township residents will be paying about five per cent more in property

According to McEachran, even if a strong zoning ordinance were passed this year, tax cuts on farm land would not be recognized by the county.

He said adjustments in land values in 1976 for the purpose of taxation must be made by Dec. 31, 1975 and at that time, no ordinance reducing the value of farm property was in effect.

'We don't know how much they're cutting this year and we'll have to see the books.

"We'll look at it when it comes in and for this year we'll treat it as a minus adjustment." McEachran explained.

He added that if estimates provided him were correct, the 40 per cent reduction on farm land taxes might result in a .01 factor increase on top of the .12 increase already proposed for 1976.

"There's not all that much involved," McEachran said, "it won't be traumatic."

THE QUESTION of subsidies would be answered in 1977, when the ordinance would take effect.

The board of taxation would decide whether to recognize the reduction in farm land taxes as a loss to the gross SEV of the township.

"The key here is the ordinance," said McEachran. "It depends on what effect it has on the price on farm land.

"Are they going to allow for this downgrading of property?" he asked. "We'll have to see what the lawyers do. We haven't been faced with this and I think we'll need some legal direction.'

McEachran said lif the ordinance is found legal and does devalues farm land, although not all the way down to $500-$700 acre, the board of taxation may allow some of the cut, but not all.

"It really depends on how strong the ordinance is," he said.

"But if the state really wants us to assess farm land at that rate they should pass a law to that effect."

"Any organization should work under rules of order and all should know what those rules are. All the board members and the public are in the same ball game and we'd all like to know what the rules are," Schwall said.

In line with what he considers the needs for a complete set of guidelines, Schwall drew up a two-page document for the board to consider.

Those proposals were discussed in a study session about a month ago and, according to the Schwall, the board opposed

The Plymouth Board of Education has taken the initial step for an in-depth study by University of Michigan of school sites to try for expanded use by the community and greater utilization for educational experiences. The board heard a presentation Monday night during its study session from Dr. Karl W. Grube from the School of Education, University of Michigan.

After listening to the 90-minute presentation, the board informally instructed Grube to prepare four to five program proposals to be submitted to the administration which will then make a formal recommendation to the board for approval.

The university teams will perform such a service at about $640 per square mile, compared to $1,000 an acre spent last year for contour maps by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources using conventional civil engineering methods.

The map has a number of applications for planning as well as construction, Grube said. By measuring shadows shown on the map, it is possible to determine the height of trees or buildings by taking measurements directly off the map. The map's scale is one inch to 40 feet. As the area changes, data can be added to the maps so up-to-date information is always available.

The maps are very useful in teaching trigonometry to 10th grade students by having them measure angles on a map, or go out to do field work on a school site. The maps can be reduced for student use at only four cents per copy, added Grube.

Can altruism be documented

The Gallimore teachers' response to payless paydays was certainly enlightening. According to 16 of the 18 teachers at Gallimore, it is "common" for our elementary teachers to spend from $100 to $200 and more each year for their students.

We have about 13 elementary schools in our district-this could mean that it is common for our elementary teachers to donate something between $23,400 and $46,800 per year! Assuming that other of our teachers are as generous, this could mean it is "common" for them, as a whole to donate some $56,000 to $112,000 per year to our district! Fantastic! This certainly shows a wonderful altruistic spirit among our teachers. These figures boggle one's mind.

However, for those skeptics who might overlook this altruism at "strike" time (and tax time), it might be interesting to see some documentation of these needed expenditures. Would any of our teachers care to elaborate?

"The entire American judicial process has been under suspicion for the last two years," contends Michigan Supreme Court Justice Lawrence B. Lindemer.

"There are people who think the courts have been too lenient and are accountable for the rise in crime."

Despite the criticism leveled at the American justice system, he noted that on a recent trip to China, he was not allowed to view a Chinese court in session. Reflecting on his recent 18-day trip to the Orient, Lindemer said: "With all of its fallacies and problems, our judicial system is greatly superior to that of an elightened dictatorship as apparently as successful as China's.'

After repeated attempts to view a court in China were rebuffed. Lindemer was finally allowed to speak with a group of Peking judges, who he said were reluctant to discuss any actual cases,

SPEAKING TO A John Glenn High School government class, Lindemer explained the Michigan judicial system. Detailing the functions of the Supreme

At 35th District Court

Volunteers join fight against crime

By WILLIAM McCORD Special Writer

Why should almost 100 respectable local residents, be they professional people, factory workers, teachers or students, wish to spend several hours a month hanging around with convicted criminals?

Certainly it isn't for monetary gain, for they receive no such benefits. Nor would it be for want of public approval, for their efforts have gone mostly unnoticed by the general public. Probably most of them do it for the reason that one such volunteer offered: "I do it because I feel like I'm helping someone straighten out his life, and that makes me feel good.

BUT IF ONE wanted a less unselfish reason to serve as a volunteer probation officer (V.P.O.) for the 35th District Court in Plymouth, then they could consider their hours as an investment towards building a better future for their community and so for themselves. This rationale is supported by facts.

Fact-The "criminals" involved here are persons who have been convicted of misdemeanors or "lesser crimes" such as minor theft, fighting and minors in possession of alcohol. These same people will go on to commit 75-95 percent of society's serious crimes or felonies, such as murder. rape and armed robbery. That is, unless they are the recipients of quality probationary efforts. Fact-The percentage of such recipients who commit future felonies has typically been as low as 10 to 25 percent.

Fact-"Quality" probationary efforts require many probation officers to handle the many probationers. If these officers are paid for their service, much money is obviously needed.

Fact-In most court systems, this money is either unavailable in the needed amount, or else its use is sorely needed for other court functions. Consequently, many Michigan courts don't have any kind of a probation system, and of those that do many are unworkably understaffed.

The obvious solution to this problem. and the one employed in the 35th District Court, is for citizens to volunteer to serve as probationary "sponsors" to these misdemeanants and thus help prevent their future felonies. Certainly it would seem that any system which could provide a community with 75-95 percent fewer felonies would have long ago become the prevailing one. The truth. however, is that not only is the citizen participation probation program a fairly recent development, but it also continues to be the exception rather than the rule in probationary programs.

THE FIRST citizen participation probation program was instituted in April 1960, by a young Royal Oak municipal judge who was seeking to keep young misdemeanants from getting trapped in a life

Judge Keith J. Leenhouts saw that jails and reform schools were non-conducive to this purpose and that his regular probation officers were too busy to offer personalized attention to each offender. So he initiated an alternative program wherein volunteers from the community would act as counselors and friends to these young lawbreakers.

A series of Reader's Digest articles in the mid-60s spread the word of Judge Leenhout's continually successful efforts and as his initial eight-person program expanded. other courts began to pick up on the attractive idea. By 1970 the volunteer probationary system was being set up in more than 400 lower and juvenile courts and in almost every state.

THE 35th DISTRICT Court, which includes Plymputh, Canton and Northville, was one of Michigan's earlier participants, as the program was begun concurrent with the court's change from a municipal to a district system in 1969.

Judge Dunbar Davis instituted the program when he took his elected office in January of that year. His decision to do so was based on his own research and a' latter will receive a more harsh punishstrong recommendation from Wayne County Circuit Court. The program began with 13 volunteers under the direction of Dennis Dildy, the first of three directors of probation in the program's history. Dildy resigned in September 1973, at which time Ken Jacobs, an assistant principal at Plymouth Canton High School, took over the job. He served until the demands of his other duties called for his resignation on Feb. 29 of this

The Reverend C. Ronald Phelps, a Plymouth resident and the Presbyterian chaplain at the Allen Park Veterans Administration Hospital, was appointed by Judge Davis to succeed Jacobs. Rev. Phelps will head a staff of 96, of which only three clerks - two in Plymouth and one in Northville--are fulltime employes. The rest are divided between 11 parttime employes and the 82 VPOs.

Along with serving as sponsors for the misdemeanants, the VPOs also perform the equally important function of making pre-sentence recommendations to the judge. These are based on interviews with, the defendant and the consideration of his family and criminal background. Evaluations by volunteer psychiatrists are often included in these reports.

These reports and accompanying recommendations are given to Judge Davis so that he may have a solid understanding of the case and so arrive at the best sentence as regards the discouragement of the defendant's criminal development.

The sentence alternatives include dismissal of the case, fining, jail, probation, work detail or any combination of the Judge Davis said he followed the recommendation of the VPOs to the letter in about half the cases. THE FIRST OFFENDER of a minor crime and the repeater of major crimes aren't the recipients of probationary sentences. Judge Davis said. The former's case will usually be dismissed while the ment, such as a jail sentence. It is the person who hasn't yet committed a major crime but is showing tendencies in that direction that will receive a probationary or work detail sentence,

Judge Davis said. The idea behind the work detail is to punish without creating a permanent record for the defendant. Work detail projects have been very productive, including significant landscaping and clean-up efforts in

Along with serving their work detail sentences, the offenders are usually put onunofficial probation.

PROBATIONARY activities vary from case to case. Most probationers are assessed a monthly fine and all are assigned to a volunteer sponsor, to whom they must report regularly. The nature of these meetings will again vary from case to case.

Judge Davis' outline for sponsor/probationer activities was a simple and flexible one: "The most important thing is for the sponsor to just be a friend to the probationer. Except for sex. alcohol and drugs, they can do just about anything to-

There are no educational, age or other specific requirements for becoming a V.P.O., although Judge Davis said he likes to enlist mature young people--in their 20s and 30s--to whom the probationers can re-

Judge Davis said that about 20 people usually show up at the regularly announced VPO training sessions and of these about half will attend all four required sessions.

Both Rev. Phelps (who has the final choice in VPO selection) and Judge Davis agreed that VPOs are constantly needed. For while the ideal arrangement would have a sponsor for every probationer, currently there are only 82 sponsors trying to handle 756 probationers. Residents who are interested in becoming a VPO are invited to call 455-2640 in Plymouth.

Two losses meant elimination. First place winner was John Ahrens, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Ahrens of 39970 Lynn, Canton Township.

Dan Kelly of 8731 Holly was second place winner, and Fred Sourbeck of 8447 Holly came in third. Craig Sadrack of 8306 Deer Creek won the styling award.

Canton Township Jaycees will host their third annual "Millionaires Party" Saturday. March 27 at the K of C hall, 150 Fair, Cost of the party is $8 per person or $15 per couple, and all Canton males between the ages of 18-35 are welcome to attend.

The party will feature free beer, a buffet, and all the gambling to which $100,000 of play money entitles party-goers. Play money can later be redeemed for gifts from local merchants According to Mike Neal of the Jaycees, the party is one of the better fundraisers for the organization.

"All the money we raise goes right back into the community," he said.

The Jaycees have been involved in several projects in the past year, including sending baskets to 12 needy families at Christmas, donating $100 to the little league, $1,000 to the township for recreation, and installing play equipment at the township recreation field at Canton Center and Cherry Hill.

This spring they will be sending hams and baskets to needy Canton families for Easter.

Civic leader, farmer dies

By W.W. EDGAR

The dwindly ranks of the pioneer farmers who tilled the soil in the Plymputh-Livonia areas were further thinned Tuesday with the death of Ray Grimm, who spent his last days in Plymouth Township after playing a leading role in the incorporation of the City of Livonia.

Fighting the ravages of cancer for more than a year, he died March 16 in St. Joseph Hospital in Ann Arbor at the age of

Born Raymond E. Grimm in Detroit in 1902, he came to Livonia with his family when only a year old and became an authority on vegetable farming through the years. For a long time he and his brother Henry, tilled the soil at the old Grimm farm on the southeast corner of Wayne Road and Ann Arbor Trail.

WHILE HIS CHIEF concern was the raising of melons and tomatoes he took a keen interest in two oddly different circles. He became interested in racks and politics. When the call came to help in the campaign to incorporate the 36 square miles of Livonia Township into a city in 1949 he eagerly responded.

As one of the more colorful figures in the group that preached the gospel of incorporation in all sectuons of Livonia, he was rewarded with a place on the ninemember charter commission and later he served a four-year term on the first city council.

He was charged with getting out the farmer vote (there were 27 farms under cultivation in Livonia at the time). He always came to the meetings attired in coveralls and a farmer's shirt and he spoke the farmer's language. It was often said that his work was the telling factor in the successful incorporation drive.

After retiring from city council he continued to work the farm-even after the death of his brother Henry. About 10 years ago he built his own home on Bricklan Drive in Plymouth Township.

At the time he said, 'I was raised in the mud and I am going back to it.' Left alone with the death of his wife Hazel, he decided to build the home as a means to combat boredom. It is an unusual home in that it has a fireplace built of a stone from virtually every state in the union and he always took pride in pointing out the jewels in each of them.

However, it was as a farmer that he gained his top reputation. With his brother, they worked with Michigan State University in an experimental program dealing with melons and tomatoes.

So successful was the program, that one ummer they averaged matoes on erach plant. And the melons were rated with the best raised anywhere in the midwest.

It was a common occurence, during his political career, to leave a council meeting "to go_tend the fires" in the greenhouses. and later truck the melons to Eastern or Western markets in Detroit.

Several years ago he married Wilma Mae for companionship and seldom left home except to attend Rotary Club. He was a charter member in Livonia and, with senior active status, he was a regular visitor at the Plymouth Club until his ailments forced him forego any outside ven-

Several days before he became a cancer victim, he asked to be taken home for a last visit. He remained only two days when the suffering became so great that

Federal criminal code bodes censorship, prof says

University of Michigan law Prof. Yale Kamisar warns that provisions of the proposed revised Federal Crime Code imposing criminal penalties for publication of secret" government documents verge on overnment censorship of the press.

Kamisar said the so-called official serets provisions go "far beyond what is ecessary to protect the national security. and to the very limits of-if not beyondwhat is constitutionally permissible. . . they do not belong in the new Federal Criminal Code

KAMISAR ALSO criticized sections which deal with "classified information," as being overly "vague." He said the provisions would do nothing to stop the continuing practice of needlessly classifying government information which is already known to the public or which does not warrant protection for national security rea-

Kamisar warned that the "national defense information" clauses of the code would have the effect of transforming "the crime of espionage, usually thought of as involving foreign spies, into a means of censorship of press publication of official secrets." Under these provisions, he noted, publication of the Pentagon Papers by the New York Times would be considered espionage.

These "official secrets" provisions, said Kamisar, give "to the executive branch of the federal government a greatly expanded and virtually unchecked power to decide what information the citizenry of the United States should have access to." This, said the professor, would have a "chilling effect on the free, informed and uninhibited public debate of governmental

"THE EXECUTIVE can withhold government information from the public thereby precluding the citizenry from the democratdecision-making process, while it is free to release bits and pieces of such information as political ammunition to accomplish its own ends," Kamisar continued.

'Such control over the mind is wholly repugnant to the concepts of self-government and democracy. These sections, taken together, constitute a step in the direction of the autocratic state.

Kamisar noted that the "official secrets" provisions are essentially the same as those proposed by the Nixon administration in 1973, when Nixon launched attacks on the press. Kamisar said he agrees with others that "if Watergate has any meaning at all, it is that a vigilant, unintimidated press and a corps of competent investigative reporters are vital to the functioning of our democratic society."

Board members of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) are seeking the ear of Gov. William Milliken and legislative leaders about a "restructuring" bill they say fails to carry out their so-called "tripartite agreement" of September 1975.

The tripartite agreement-between SEMTA, the governor and Detroit Mayor Coleman Young-called for Detroit to sell its bus system to SEMTA when the SEMTA board was reorganized to give the mayor power to make some direct appoint-

But SEMTA board member Marilyn Thayer of Ann Arbor told board members Tuesday that the legislative bill which was supposed to implement the tripartite agreement "no longer calls for that."

"This removes the impetus for the sale and merger" of the two systems, Mrs. Thayer said.

SEVERAL SEMTA board members said they would never have supported the tripartite agreement if it hadn't included the sale of Detroit's Department of Transportation (D-DOT) to SEMTA.

The Milliken-Young-SEMTA agreement provides that the SEMTA board's "restructuring shall become effective concurrently with the sale and transfer" of D-DOT to SEMTA, "and such (enabling) legislation shall so provide.

But a new bill by State Sen. David Plawecki (D-Dearborn Heights), introduced in the legislature earlier this week and referred to the highways and transportation committee, provides for SEMTA's restructuring but no sale of D-DOT.

"This bill puts Detroit on both sides of the negotiating table for the sale and merger of D-DOT," said Mrs. Thayer. She meant that if Plawecki's new bill becomes law, Detroit would get a stronger SEMTA voice first and be able to negotiate the purchase of D-DOT on more favorable terms-if the sale is to be made at all.

The state of the s

"I HAVE the same trouble with this bill Marilyn does," said SEMTA board chairman Joseph Bianco Jr. of Birmingham.

The SEMTA board agreed to ask a meeting with the governor and the so-called 'quadrant committee"-leaders of both parties in both houses of the legislature.

Mrs. Thaver quoted Sen. Plawecki as saying his bill (a substitute for Senate Bill 931) "will be out of committee and voted on in three weeks."

AT PRESENT, the governor appoints three members of the SEMTA board, and the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) elects six at large.

The tripartite agreement called for giving Detroit five of 13 members of a restructured board, but it ran into a buzzsaw of opposition during public hearings in Detroit and Pontiac last fall.

Placwecki's new bill is designed to meet objections that the tripartite formula violates the constitutional "one person, one vote" principle. It would expand the SEMTA board to 15 members as of July 1, Plawecki's formula would give the City of Detroit four or five members, depending on how one splits fractions. All would be appointed by the mayor with the advice and consent of the city council.

Suburban Wayne County would have three to four members, again depending on the splitting of fractions. The first member would be elected by the full Wayne County Board of Commissioners; the second by SEMCOG; the third appointed by the governor with senate confirmation; and the fourth by SEMCOG.

OAKLAND COUNTY would get two or three members with the same appointment formula-the first seat picked by the county board, the second by the governor, the third (if any) by the council of governments (SEMCOG).

Adams resigns SEMTA job

Thomas B. Adams has left the board of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) without ever attending a formal meeting.

SEMTA board members learned Tuesday that Adams, a Bloomfield Hills advertising executive, had told Gov. William Milliken, who appointed him, he would be unable to carry out the duties.

Adams was one of three persons named to the SEMTA board by the governor. The other six members are elected by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

Adams' appointment was to have taken effect Feb. 1. He did not show up for the board's Feb. 17 meeting, however Milliken in 1973 named William Marshall, state AFL-CIO president, to the three-year term, but Marshall resigned at the end of 1974. For a year, the post was vacant, and late in 1975 the governor named Adams to fill the remainder of the term, which expires June 30.

Thus, SEMTA has functioned with no more than eight board members for nearly

Their first member would be elected by the council of governments, the second (if any) appointed by the governor and the third (if any) by the council of governments.

AN EARLIER PLAN for a vehicle tax was dropped in Plawecki's new bill. Instead, it calls for SEMTA to levy a tax of $5 on each $500 of value at the time of sale or transfer of real estate. A house selling or being transferred for a price of $30,000 would be taxed $300, payable to the county treasurer by the seller. The treasurer would transfer it to a state account

Researcher feels'anyone' can murder

Could you commit a murder? Kenneth J. Levi thinks you probably could, under certain circumstances. Circumstances, he contends are the cause of most homicides; not some deep-rooted depravity on the part of the killer. "Killers are usually normal people. caught in abnormal situations," he concluded in his doctoral research project with 35 convicted Detroit-area murderers. They were randomly selected from persons over 16 who had committed a homicide from 1965 to 1972 in Wayne County. Levi received his doctorate in sociology from the University of Michigan last December.

Levi's in-depth interviews support his view of murder as "the settling of a relationship-between lovers, adversaries or

"The love killing is typically a desperate attempt to restore a relationship that has gone sour." he explains. "The killer identifies with another person so completely that he must destroy the other person and himself to hold the relationship together." Of the nine subjects in the study who killed for "love," four were judged insane.

"The 'stranger' killer was often the holdup man who panicked when he thought his victim had a gun. Like the soldier ambushed in the field, the 'stranger' shoots because he feels trapped," Levi says. "He is convinced he is acting in self-defense, and laments afterward 'something went

The adversaries make up the most complex category Levi notes: they include the political assassins, terrorist groups and the premeditating villains in the Agatha Christie novels. Their killings frequently culminate long-festering feelings of hostility and this rose sharply with years of experience.

"But the adversary plots his act, often relishing the anticipation. One young man I interviewed sent letters to several generally tried to force him into her own image of 'a good boy.' Shooting her," Levi says, "was an act of asserting his own free-The motives, like the murders, fall into three distinct categories. Levi says. Love is behind the killings committed by a rejected spouse or fiance; adversaries are driven by power; and stranger killings result from greed-or need-for material

Levi notes that 16 of his 35 subjects killed strangers, and the proportion is probably equally high in other large metropolitan areas throughout the United States. Stranger killings are especially prevalent among the poor, because "they find themselves in the predicament of being without material welfare and without protection for the goods they do possess in a nation that places a premium on both." Levi's study takes no position on gun control, but "it stands to reason that with fewer guns in circulation, there might be less tension between people." He notes that relatively new, unsettled areas such as the South American countries and California have much higher homicide rates than Europe and the New England states. "where people know what to expect from each other. His theory is that you have to feel insecure before being motivated to kill. "The stranger kills to maintain his physical security. The adversary asserts his need for power or psychological security. And the lover is fighting for his emotional security: he kills his victim in order to permanently regain the victim's love.'

The 500,000 men and women who faqilitate the purchase and sale of real estate across the nation have been profiled in a new study by the National Association of Realtors (NAR).

The general impression is that of an increasingly middle-aged group who changed occupations to enter the field and now work long hours to enjoy better than average incomes. The survey of a cross section of the NAR membership drew responses from more than 2,600 real estate persons, generally brokers, and nearly 1,500 associates, usually licensed sales persons.

AS REPORTED by the United Northwestern Realty Association (UNRA), the survey found that 82 per cent of Realtors are men and that women now comprise 37 per cent of all full-time and 41 per cent of all part-time Realtor-Associates.

The median age of Realtors is 50 and that of Realtor Associates, 45.

The study showed a trend toward increased schooling. A 1964 survey found about 40 per cent with only a high school education or less and that only about 30 per cent had completed four or more vears of college.

The new findings showed fewer than 30 per cent had not achieved some college and that more than 40 per cent were college graduates. Similar percentages were revealed for Realtor Associates.

NEARLY FOUR of every five came into the profession from other occupations. Nearly half had been in allied fields such as sales, management and insurance. However. more than 22 per cent had been Realtors for 15 years or more with the median slightly over seven years.

cialized in single family use brokerages with commercial brokerages a distant second with eight per cent

Most, 53 per cent, owned their businesses while more than 20 per cent were stockholders and corporate officers and some nine per cent partners in a business. Better than nine of 10 were not affiliated with a franchised operation.

THE AVERAGE WORK week was 50 hours with 31 per cent indicating they spent 60 or more hours a week on the job. Median income for brokers is now $24,000 annually, double the median income in 1963. Income was shown to rise with age and then decline in later years when less time may be devoted to the busi-

The study also showed a positive relationship between earnings and formal education with one of four completing college graduate study earning at least $50,000 in 1974. An associated rise in income also was noted relating to years of experience and hours worked each week.

Gardeners take heart

Summer rec programs announced

Gardeners, dog enthusiasts, aspiring musicians, ballplayers, and senior citizens are just a few of the people that will be able to take advantage of summer recreation programs in Canton this year.

The summer programs have been scheduled for this year, and there is just about something for everybody.

Three classes for residents are available this summer: dog obedience, guitar lessons, and square dancing.

The dog obedience course starts March 18 and runs for 10 weeks every Thursday evening at 7 p.m. at the recreation center at Michigan and Sheldon.

Guitar lessons will be available once a week for two months at 1 p.m. on Saturdays, and classes are open to youngsters as well as adults.

Square dancing for beginners will be each Sunday evening 7:30/10 p.m., with Ray Wiles handling the calling duties. For members of the Canton Senior Citizens, activities are sponsored every Friday, noon to 4 p.m., at the recreation center, while members of the Royal Senior Citizens get together every Tuesday from 14 p.m. at the Royal Holiday Mobile Home Park. Both groups are for persons recreation office to join the new league. Games will be played at 6 p.m. at neighborhood softball diamonds. All equipment will be supplied.

Interested parents who would like to coach or umpire are urged to contact the recreation office.

FROM JUNE 21 to August 13, the recreation department will sponsor a day camp at Gallimore Elementary School. Cost of the program is $8 per week, per child.

The program runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. five days a week, and recreation leaders will be staffed at various parks throughout the township for crafts, games and sports.

As in past years, garden plots will be available free of charge for home canners. Registration for plots will be through the recreation department only, and enrollment forms will be available at three locations, the township firehall at Cherry Hill and Canton Center, the township business offices at Geddes and Sheldon, and the township recreation center at Michigan Avenue and Sheldon

Registration will be in person or by mail only, and forms will be available after April 26. Plots will not be available until gardens are completely plowed and staked. Site locations will be announced

IN JULY, AT the Plymouth Canton High School courts, the township will sponsor a tennis tournament for men and women of all ages. Registration runs from June 14 to

At a time to be announced later, the township will also host a golf tournament. Discount amusement area tickets will also be available later in the summer for Bob-Lo, Cedar Point, Sea World and Greenfield Village For further information on spring and summer recreation programs, contact the recreation department at 326-6480. After April 1, the number will change to 397-

Among key factors school officials need to keep in mind, said Grube, are: economic implications of school site locations. where schools are located property values tend to rise); stability in housing patterns; educational opportunities to use the outdoors for instruction

"Undeveloped school sites are one of the greatest untapped educational opportunities available," he said, pointing out that next to the state and federal governments, public schools from kindergarten through university are the largest landholders in the United States. Schools own far more land than the railroads. Thus, stewardship of the land is a very important responsibility for schools.

School buildings and sites should be places for people. A building will have a 50- to 75-year life and be used by at least three generations."

Talismans bring mana to owners

According to the Oxford English Dictionary, a talisman is an "object engraven with figures or characters to which are attributed the occult powers of the planetary influences and celestial configurations under which it is made: sometimes worn as an amulet to avert evil or to bring fortune to the wearer.

The word "talisman" comes from the Greek word "talesma" meaning a consecrated object, one over which a rite has been completed.

The use of talisman has been popular since the earliest days of man.

MANA, OR magical power, was attributed to certain stones, herbs, lizards and the like by even our most ancient ancestors. Primitive peoples regarded certain parts of the animals they killed as talismans. For instance, a hunter may carry the horn of a beast to increase his own

The Egyptians and people of other early civilizations were fond of wearing manmade talismans. A talisman that is worn is usually referred to as an amulet.

The most common form of man-made amulets were medallions containing sa-

Board members, meeting March 11 at the ways and means committee, voted to ask the panel of three Wayne circuit judges to reconsider the points of the orders which the commissioners found most objectionable.

THE COMMISSIONERS approved an amended version of a resolution introduced by Smith and Commissioner nomas Presnell (D-Westland) by a vote of 13-0, with one abstention. Final approval at a formal board meeting set for March

The board of commissioners already had appropriated $1.5 million for preparation of a vacant psychiatric building at Wayne County General Hospital as a temporary facility for 250 jail inmates.

The need for additional jail facilities arose when the three-judge panel imposed a 720-prisoner population limit on the County Jail. Excess prisoners are being housed at the Detroit House of Corrections pending the readiness of Building M.

THE COMMISSIONERS directed the attorneys to prepare to ask the panel to reconsider four of the nine orders issued by the panel March 8.

The four are that daily progress reports on preparation of Building M shall be submitted to a monitor appointed by the court: that the commissioners shall allocate additional funds as are "reasonably necessary" payments for the project; and that the county treasurer shall pay all reasonably necessary" funds for the proj-

Commissioners were particularly vehement about the idea of daily reports to the court-appointed monitor because the commissioners fought against paying for the monitors all the way to the Michigan Supreme Court.

John Barr (D-Dearborn Heights), the board's vice chairman, described the order for a daily report to the court's monitor as "an insult.

WITH PUBLIC services for the lawabiding citizenry cut to the bone and the county facing a deficit. I am opposed to spending another penny on temporary stopgap arrangements," declared Commissioner Mary E. Dumas (R-Livonia).

Commissioner Richard E. Manning (D-Redford) predicted renovation of Building M would cost more than the $1.5 million already appropriated. Manning made the motion that the four objectionable orders be appealed.

In issuing its orders, the three-judge panel apparently was reacting to the fact that a joint meeting of two commissioners' committees had voted to recommend that no funds be expended on Building M until a report on feasibility of converting a downtown Detroit building to a jail facility is received. However, the recommendation by the two committees has not been considered by the full board of commissioners.

Amulets are as popular today as they were among primitive people. Many have religious significance, such as medals bearing the likenesses of saints, crosses, crucifixes and the beautiful Star of David. Others are in the shape of letters spelling

If you do, then drop by the board office and spend a few hours (or days) skimming our 823-page summary of State of Michigan General School Laws. When you finish that, you can start on the four-volume policy and procedure manual of the Plymouth Community School District.

A LARGE portion of the activity of the Michigan Legislature is related to education. We are all painfully aware of their deliberations on funding, but many of their other acts have equal impact on schools.

Controversial issues like sex education, teacher strikes, special education and retirement make headlines. Laws also regulate transportation, school lunches, civics, and American history classes, libraries. bond issues and driver training.

The Administrative Staff Policy and Procedure Committee screens all properly submitted requests for changes or new policies. Only the board of education can adopt or change a policy.

The policies and procedures adopted by the board of education help to make the operation of the schools consistent and purposeful. Because they are open to all, the policies also promote accountability.

Barrier of local mistrust must be broken

Cooperation between governmental units in the Plymouth-Canton community is a daily fact of life, in spite of the fact that one of the basic ingredients is still missing.

What is missing is a basic trust among members of the township boards, city commission and school board. This mistrust exists, in large part, because these members don't know each other on personal basis.

THIS PAST WEEK provides a good example of now frequently the need for the local governments to cooperate crops up. Start with Sunday's fire in the city's Old Village. Plymouth Township responded as soon as its firefighters received the request, without any concern about boundaries.

In the area of public safety, it especially has been true that when residents are in trouble. boundaries lose importance, the lone exception being Plymouth Township's refusal to pay half the cost of school crossing guards despite the willingness to do so by Canton Township and the City

THE RESERVE OF THE PROPERTY OF

Monday night the city commission considered a request from the Plymouth-Northville-Canton League of Women Voters to form a watershed council. That same request will be taken to Plymouth and Canton townships within a month. and the need for cooperation here is apparent.

That same night the school board, in a study session, was presented a proposal for use of school sites on a shared basis with the city and

Last night the Intergovernmental Committee held a joint meeting with the area recreation committee to explore how the city and townships might be able to pool recreation facilities to offer broader offerings to a wider range of residents.

IF WE WENT beyond a week's period, there would be countless other examples of joint ventures among Canton, the City of Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Plymouth Community School District. The cooperation, of course, goes beyond governmental action and increases in intensity among service clubs, social organizations. athletics and interaction among residents.

Some have suggested that the long history of failures of past joint ventures, and breakdowns in communication, are largely responsible for the current mistrust among governments. While this may have some truth, another likelihood is that the very success of intergovernmental cooperation in day-to-day operations may have raised expectations to a high level which causes disappointments when greater, long-range challenges are unmet. The governments are quite efficient in daily joint efforts, but when long-range ventures are explored, mistrust among persons becomes

The best and simplest solution would be more frequent personal contacts between government officials from the four units. They should meet socially without the demands of discussing immediate or future problems-for breakfast or lunch during a business day, or in each others' homes on an informal basis

It is important enough to find the time because once officials know each other personally, suspicion and mistrust will decline sharply, and intergovernmental cooperation can begin to enter those larger areas which will have the greatest payoffs for taxpayers.

YOUR IMAGE OF GOVERNMENT?

editorial opinion

Public policy—no secrecy allowed

Periodically, we have a rash of local governmental units using "executive" sessions, which are closed to the public and the press, to discuss problems that they feel the public shouldn't know about. Some local units do this on a regular basis.

Because these local governmental units are elected by the people and are spending the people's money, all such actions can do is create a mistrust by the people. Then the public officials don't understand why people won't vote for their millage requests.

Attorney General Frank Kelley said it better than I can:

Watergate has left people with a strong and understandable desire for open government-government that welcomes both public participation in its decisions and public examination of its decision-making process.

"THE PEOPLE ARE not apathetic and disinterested in their government. They want to know what is going on. The people want to see how public servants are carrying out the functions of our government and how tax monies are being spent. This may be one of the good results of Watergate.

"The people have discovered that big money bought political favors and that corruption exists at all levels of government.

"THE PEOPLE now realize that as citizens they have not had access to their own governEccentricities

by HENRY M. HOGAN, JR.

zens, government is remote, unconcerned and ineffective.

"One basic requirement, if we are to restore the people's confidence in government, is to open the doors of the governmental decision-making process, let the people see what is going on, and go even further and invite their opinions."

The attorney general, in his actions, has been stronger than his words. The following is his formal opinion on public meetings which has the force of law:

"A vital aspect of the public's right to know how their business is being conducted is the right to be present when public bodies meet to discuss matters that concern the public interest. Several statutes and constitutional provisions deal with this important right.

"THE MAJOR LEGISLATION in this area is Act 216, Public Acts of 1968, MCLA 15.251 et seq.

"The act defines a public meeting to be that part of any meeting during which a board takes official action on a matter involving finances, ac-the fixing of personal or property rights, privileges, immunities, duties or obligations of any person or group of persons.' The statute specifically states that no public meeting is required in which a discussion will take place that would disclose the 'institution, progress or result of an investigation undertaken by the board in performance of its official duties."

"UNDER THE STATUTE, public notice must be given of each regular or special meeting prior to the holding of the meeting.

"Since passage of Act 216, I have had occasion to interpret its provisions in several opinions. A persistent problem has been the inclination on the part of the members of some public bodies to go into 'executive session' to discuss a matter and then, after private discussion, open the doors of the meeting and take a vote on the decision already made in private.

"As attorney general, I have ruled that this conduct is not permissible. I said that such behavior was contrary to the intent of the act and that the public has a right to be present during any discussion leading up to the final vote since this portion of the meeting is inherently a part of the requirement that public meetings be open."

The law is specific, the intent is clear. Government is not a private country club. Official government business is not the private reserve of elected officials, but is the public's business and they have a right to know.

Those officials who don't believe this should not

Allies wonder where we're going—and why

I have just returned home from a journey to mainland China, Hong Kong and Japan. During the trip I talked with many people friendly to the United States and what we stand for: Senior journalists, government officials and politicians.

Most of our conversations were about America's role in world affairs.

My report is simple: We are in trouble in Asia and probably elsewhere in the world.

Even our friends doubt our national will to act abroad and question our political capacity to move in a decisive or prompt manner.

An editorial writer for a major newspaper in Hong Kong put it best: "There is such a thing as the free world, and since World War II, America has led it. Today, however, with Russia aggressive and China growing in strength, there seems an almost complete vacuum of leadership from the United States. Without that leadership or the will to assert it, it is virtually inevitable that countries in Asia will act in their own self interest. and that means moving away from the U.S.'

SEVERAL THEMES run through this report on the view of America from abroad.

Vietnam-Since the American withdrawal, the real question is whether we will ever be willing to commit our military forces to any allied country which finds its security threatened. The issue is put crudely but directly: "Since Vietnam, it's difficult to see what would cause America to go to war, except an invasion of California or a direct threat, maybe, to Canada or Mexico." Angola-Ever since the Congress shut down American financial support for 'our" faction, there is considerable doubt abroad whether Congress will allow American financial or military aid to countries which find themselves in trouble. either from outside invasion (Korea) or from internal subversion (Thailand). This doubt does not extend to countries such as Israel or the nations of Western Europe, but there are a lot of other nations who are very uncertain just now, including our best friend in Asia, Japan. Intelligence-Whether or not we like it, covert spying and open intelligence data collection are simple facts of international life today. Everybody does it, mostly because everybody understands that informed intelligence systems are necessary for determining national policy choices and tactical decisions. "What I don't underObservation stand," said a former government official in Japan, 'is why you have allowed the politicians in search of publicity quite simply to gut your intelligence operations. There may have been abuses in the CIA, but the remedy for that is not to destroy it entirely.

POLITICS-which today means the Congress versus the Executive. Most nations run their foreign policy without direct interference from the politicians. Informed people in Asia are mystified at the attempt of the U.S. Congress on a regular basis to participate directly in the management of our foreign policy.

They can understand public debate on broad foreign policy issues, such as detente with the Russians, but they cannot see why Congressional committees are continually peering over the shoulders of our diplomats as they seek to conduct the daily business of foreign affairs.

Attitude- What is at the heart of America's present problems is in fact a fundamental change in our attitudes toward ourselves and our willingness to act. The Shah of Iran was recently quoted as saying that "Americans have become so critical, so distrustful of themselves, so self-punishing that they have almost completely tied the hands of their executive. The U.S. can't use its muscles; it can't use its power. It has just become a crippled giant." This quote was extensively reprinted in Japan, and it met with near-unanimous agree-

MY POINT in all of this is that often we need to talk to foreigners to get a clear sense of perspective about ourselves.

Certainly Americans were disillusioned at the disaster of Vietnam, shocked at the network of corruption revealed in Watergate, alarmed at the pattern of abuses within the FBI and the CIA.

Just as certainly, there is a major debate brewing in this country (unfortunately now drowned out by the high decibel cliches the politicians are now shouting) over what we are as a nation and where we are going as a people as we enter our third century.

That does not mean, however, that our ability to act for good around the world (or even in our own self interest) should be sacrificed without prolonged and thorough debate about it. That, however, is exactly what is happening just now, as they see it in Asia.

I intend to ask our local candidates for Congress about these questions during the coming campaign, and I hope others will as well.

Youngsters ask: What do you do for a living?

Almost as soon as she is weaned, a New Guinea girl is given her own garden plot to till. Off the coast of British Columbia, a Kwakiutl boy watches from the wheelhouse of a fishing boat for small fish jumping-a sign that a school of salmon is near.

And the suburban American child? He or she goes to school for 13-17 years or more and may never see the place where father or mother audits accounts receivable or designs a more efficient engine cylinder. THE SCHOOLS, to their credit, are doing something about it, although they wish they didn't have to. It's called "career education." The idea came from Sidney P. Marland Jr.,

U.S. commissioner of education under President Nixon. It has spread so that careers programs in Michigan school districts are practically manda-

For the foregoing illustrations from Eskimo, New Guindea and Kwakiutl societies, we are indebted to James P. Spradley, associate professor of anthropology at Macalester College in St. Paul.

· Career education, he says, wouldn't be necessary if there were "continuity" between the worlds of childhood and work.

But where children in simpler societies learn to work at their parents' knees, we in America-particularly the white collar and professional suburbs-have divided ours into two disjointed worlds-the school world of the child and the adult world of work.

Families share recreation, and members share one another's personal problems. But they don't share in the world of work.

WORK IS MORE than what an adult does 40 hours a week.

"It means membership in a group with its own customs and mores," says Prof. Spradley, who adds that we know more about work in some primitive societies than in our own society.

His analysis shows that in a society with few careers, there is great continuity between the child's world and the adult's. But when a society has many careers, there is little continuity.

"Discontinuity is one factor that contributes to the upheaval of adolescence," he says in the professorial abstractions whose specific applications we all know first-hand.

It's easy to put down a young generation which believes that everything comes from pushbuttons and that it's easy to get money if you tap the right corporate tills. It's quite another to admit the same youngsters to the world of work.

IN VARIOUS WAYS, local school districts are trying to put the two worlds back together. Sometimes they arrange for students to work on a co-op basis with local industries and mercantile establishments. Other times they bring in speakers or, better yet, arrange plant tours. An effective tool is a high school career education day, in which the kids sign up to attend two or three sessions with speakers from various professions and occupations. Career education has its critics. Some say it's "too confining" to start youngsters thinking about lifetime jobs in their tender years; education should be broad.

Myself, I have great qualms about junior highs' teaching journalism or studying the journalism trades. At 14 and younger, the kids' reading of newspapers is confined to comics and what we call the toy department-sports.

YET THE WHOLE effort must be applauded, and those of us with specific objections should judge cautiously.

It's a darn bother to give up part of a work day to tell a group of kids about your work; you don't get much done that day. Yet it's as important as paying your property taxes and voting for the right school board candidates.

On the positive side, talking to kids forces you to think of the values and ethics of your line of work. Most of us need that kind of stimulation.

By CAROLINE IRWIN

If you are a high school student, chances are you want to spend your summer vacation earning a little cash. Summer may seem a long way off, but you'll spend it broke and unemployed unless you start your job hunt now.

Many of the largest summer employers of youths such as Cedar Point, Bob-Lo and Greenfield Village had job application deadlines months ago, but an enterprising teen-ager will find a number of agencies and organizations to assist him in his search. If he has some sort of skill, the outlook is favorable.

A good place to start is at school. Many area high schools have some form of job placement service. Usually the job offers are from private citizens needing babysitters or maintenance work. These jobs will be listed with the guidance or business offices or posted on a bulletin board.

MOST HIGH schools also have co-op programs. In these, the student works with a coordinator who places hin in a job which relates to his career interests. The student takes classes connected to the job as well, and receives credit from the school for working and a wage from the employer.

Dick Bearup, area coordinator for the co-op program at Plymouth Canton High school, says the program continues to grow, and has more students than the state wants to reimburse the school for. "Our program also operates in the sum-Bearup says.

'We place students in clerical, fast food, gas stations and retailing positions. Most employers are happy with the students we send them," he says.

THE LIVONIA Youth Employment Center offers more extensive placement services. Julia Myer, director of the center, says calls from employers are on the upturn. "When the weather first breaks we get lots of calls from both students and employers," she says.

The center is a nonfee agency funded by the city, the board of education and the chamber of commerce, serving those in the 14-20 age bracket. According to Ms. Myer, the easierst student to place is one with a skill. "Teens with drafting or electrical background and those with office skills are in demand. These are also the best paying jobs."

MS. MYER adds that employers do not have to pay the federal minimum wage of $2.30 an hour to those under 18, and students work for wages that range from $1.80 to $2.75 an hour.

The hardest part is putting the right person in the right job. Ms. Myer says that appearance, attitude and the way a teen-ager handles himself are all important factors during a job interview. The center has a high level of success in placing their workers. "We are conducting 30-day followups," Ms. Myer says; "And the young people are performing from very good to excellent. Some of the parttime jobs even develop into permanent ones after the teen-ager graduates."

Not all the students were happy with their summer jobs. "Every now and then a kid says he was treated unfairly or not paid for the hours he worked," Ms. Myer

"In that case I notify the Department of Labor or have the parents notify it," she

ANOTHER YOUTH employment service is offered by Wayne- Westland Community Schools. Linda McCarter, a co-op student from Wayne Memorial who works for the service, is very much in favor of it.

'It's a way to get money, and kids can always use money." she says.

The service is open to any student in Westland or Wayne and has a variety of job openings. Most of them are for clerical or gas station attendant postions.

Dale Yagiela, a director of the Plymouth Youth Center, doesn't have such a glowing report. "We used to have a formal job placement center but now we only handle jobs informally," he says. "Most of the jobs are for private citizens,"

YAGIELA FEELS the job situation for young people is bad for a number of reasons, among them the depressed economy and the changing community. "Plymouth used to have a lot of farms where kids could get jobs, but that isn't true anymore," he says.

Yagiela adds that many jobs that used to go to youths are taken by older people who can't find anything else.

Another reason jobs for students are hard to find, Yagiela says, is that employers tend to think they will be irresponsible. "Jobs will help teenagers gain responsibility." he points out.

"I'd like to see awareness that this is created by conditions we live under. Kids who are impoverished can get jobs through manpower agencies, but the others don't have much luck. There seems to be a feeling that life doesn't begin until you get out of school," Yagiela says.

SUMMER JOBS are open to teens at government agencies. The Livonia Department of Civil Service has summer openings, but the deadline is March 19. Chella Lewis, personnel analyst for the department, said civil service provides jobs fopr students 15 or older primarily in the parks and recreation division. "We have jobs for summer recreation play leaders, lifeguards, pool managers and playground superintendents," Ms. Lewis says.

"In some cases, a test or interview, depending on the job, is necessary." she

CHUCK PICKERING assistant director of the Westland Department of Parks and Recreation, says his division does hire high school students but is in the process of going through the budget to determine how many. Pickering recommends that applications be turned in before May 1.

"We look for someone enthusiastic about working with people, and who has imagination," Pickering says.

"We try to get an overall picture of the student through an interview, and usually end up getting mature people. The older the person is, the better the program will be. The department tries to give high school students a chance as well." he

Best news of all is that the department pays at at least the minimum wage of $2.30 an hour, even to those under 18.

A STUDENT might also consider going to a commercial agency. Betty Moeller of Kelly Services said jobs in the private sector look good. Kelly will employ 16- and 17-year-olds, but technical jobs go to college science, pre-med, teaching and accounting majors.

One of their divisions is known as Kelly Girls, but Ms. Moeller emphasized, it does not discriminate against men.

The Michigan Employment Security Commission(MESC) also lends a hand to summer job-seekers. The commission puts out a bulletin saying "Minors can be a major help to employers."

The bulletin spells out the legal requirments of 14-17 year olds, lists 70 job examples and notes that persons under 18 must have working papers unless they are out of school. These papers are obtained through the student's school or through agencies like the Livonia Youth Employment Center once a job is landed.

IF ALL else fails, the student can try going out on his own to find a job. Some businesses, like lawn maintenance and restaurants.take on extra people over the sum-

Another alternative is to become selfemployed. Newspapers usually run ads at the beginning of the summer by students who offer their services to do odd-jobs or babysitting. And, during those summer vacation months a teen-ager can make a good living by pet- or plant sitting.

A student with creative talents will find that local boutiques often sell crafts on consignment. Macrame, needlework, candles and pottery are usually big sellers.

A teen-ager with access to a plot of land might consider starting a garden and selling his wares at a roadside stand at the end of the summer

Most important of all in the summer scramble for jobs is foresight. A student who learns to type, gets a lifesaving certificate, or acquires other skills, during the winter will find it a lot easier to get a job when summer rolls around

No smoking in stores bill passed

Gov. William Milliken has signed into law a bill to ban smoking in retail food

The law (HB 4158), sponsored by State Rep. John Markes (D-Westland), takes effect 90 days after the Michigan Legislature adjourns, or about April 1977.

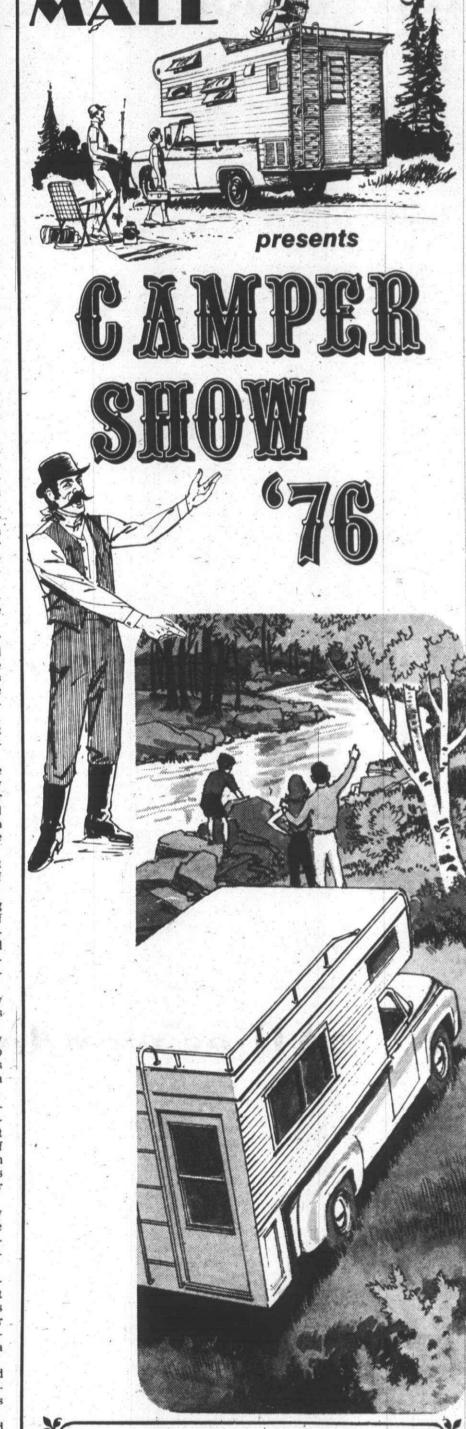

Milliken called it one of five bills he has endorsed to "protect the rights of the nonsmoker as well as the smoker."

The new law requires that signs indicating smoking is prohibited be posted at each public entrance of a grocery store. The store may have a designated smoking area for employees and the public-but the smoking area must be isolated from the retail food area.

Markes said the law is needed because shoppers cannot stop purchasing food, yet smoking currently is permitted in stores; food packaging is not always air-tight; the ban would cause only a short inconven-ience "to those addicted;" and insurance costs could be reduced.

of Michigan demographer Reynolds Farley. Indeed, he says, cities which maintain segregated schools have lost white students at about the same rate as cities undergoing school integration.

Analyzing national data on school racial composition gathered by the U.S. Office of Civil Rights. Farley found that before the late 1960s, there were almost no large cities with integrated schools.

"HOWEVER, THE 1964 Civil Rights Act and a series of landmark Supreme Court decisions required southern districts to dismantle their traditional dual school systems." he relates. "By 1972, southern schools were more racially integrated than northern ones.

"In the north, school segregation has declined by a small margin in many cities and by a large degree only in cities such as San Francisco, Denver and Pontiac, under court order

Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley has announced the appointment of a 20-member committee to review Michigan's current. local government debt situation.

Kelley is chairman of Michigan's Municipal Finance (MFC) which is charged by law with the responsibility of protecting the credit of the state and its municipal-

MFC is a watchdog regulatory agency on municipal borrowings. Before most municipalities can borrow money, they must apply to MFC for review and approval of their proposed borrowing.

Members of the commission are Atty. Gen. Kelley, chairman; State Treasurer Allison Green; and Superintendent of Public Instruction John W. Porter.

"While Michigan's local units of government have an excellent record of debt repayment. I think it is imperative that we subject our fiscal controls to regular review," Kelley said.

The committee will focus on federal disclosure requirements, policies relating to roll over of operating debt and pension Participating on the committee are Stan Arnold, State Building and Construction Trades Council; Stratton S. Brown of Miller. Canfield. Paddock & Stone; Rep. Thomas Brown; Robert P. Cooper of Freihofer, Cook, Hecht. Oosterhouse & De-Boer: Richard E. Davies, City of Taylor Controller: Sen. Anothony A. Derezinski; Billie S. tegrated, Farley examined every American city with at least a three per cent black student enrollment and a total population exceeding 100,000 in 1970. These 125 cities encompassed more than 60 per cent of the nation's black elementary school-enrollment and 20 per cent of the white enrollment in 1972.

"In neither the 50 southern nor 75 northern cities did we find any significant link between school desegregation and white population change," Farley states.

Cities with unintegrated school systems, such as Detroit, Chicago, Baltimore and Cleveland, are losing white students as rapidly as San Francisco, Denver and others undergoing integration.

"The white student population will continue to decline in many cities," Farley re-"regardless of school segregation

The reasons are, he notes: • Falling birth rates - first graders this fall will be 20 per cent fewer than those who entered school a decade ago.

· Population shifts - many large cities are losing both black and white residents. This trend began long before school integration became an issue or a reality.

FEDERAL COURTS continue to insist upon the integration of schools within specific districts," Farley observes. "However! residential segregation impedes school integration.

"Within most large cities, blacks and whites live in district areas and many children must be bussed a long distance to achieve integration in such school districts. In many metropolises, almost all black students attend central city schools while almost all white students attend schools in the suburbs. In the Detroit area, for example, three-quarters of the suburban white students go to schools which enroll no black students."

IN LIGHT of the public's strong opposition to busing as a means of achieving integration. Farley suggests that policy makers investigate other strategies for ending school segregation.

His research at the U-M Population Studies Center points out that only a small minority of whites actually oppose the racial integration of neighborhoods.

"Four years ago, the National Opinion Research Center reported that 84 per cent of a national sample said that it would make no difference to them if a black person with the same income and educational level as theirs moved onto their block." Farley notes

"In 1974, the same research group found only 28 poer cent of those surveyed objected to their children attending a school with a 50 per cent black enrollment. "The greater receptiveness of whites and improved economic potential of blacks now make a high degree of residential integration poissible. Integrated neighborhoods offer the best alternative to busing for achieving school integration and improved racial relations in general.'

By LYNN ORR

The Equal Rights Amendment is necessary, believes former Congresswoman Martha Griffiths, because "women need to be written into the constitution of the United

And, in a talk at Henry Ford Community College's Focus on Women program, she branded as "nonsense" the suggestion that ERA is unnecessary or detrimental because laws now in force protect women.

Women must make some demands," said the Detroit Democrat who served 20 years as representative of the 17th District and now is practicing law with her husband and serving on several corporate

The idea that women have protection from the law is nonsense; the homemaker has the least protection of anyone."

MRS. GRIFFITH CITED cases of women who after divorce discover they have no claim on their husbands' pensions or social security despite their contributions to their marriages as homemakers.

The job of the traditional wife is an important one," she maintained, but Congress has done little to protect her interests. "Less than seven per cent of the divorced women in this country have collected alimony." but alimony has been a big issue in the ERA struggle.

She also put down other arguments against ratification of the ERA. "Women have been pushing their way into the armed forces for years," she stated, but pointed out that opponents maintain the ERA will allow women to be drafted.

A major argument of ERA opponents, she went on, has been the claim that husbands will no longer have to support their wives if ratification is successful

"Your husband supports you because he wants to," Mrs. Griffith told her audience. 'not because there is a law to that effect.

The ERA has nothing to do with private contracts."

ORGANIZED LABOR has backed the ratification, she said, because the communications workers, who are mostly women, threatened to withdraw from the AFL-CIO if support wasn't forthcoming.

Opposition comes from different areas, said Mrs. Griffiths, listing the Communist party and the John Birch Society. The latter, she added, "is leading the fight" and monitors radio and television broadcasts, demanding equal time if someone mentions support of the ERA.

Questioned about anti-feminist women who are opposing ERA, she responded, These women have never appeared before Congress to support women, but they are making a lot of money opposing equal

Thirty-four states have ratified the ERA. Michigan among them. She called rescinding action by two states "against the law." and suggested that one of the ways to halt attempts to rescind ratification, which has a negative effect on states facing the issue, is "to defeat those members of the legislature who are fighting the ERA."

Neighboring Indiana and Illinois will take up ratification in their legislatures this year and supportive groups in Mich-

MRS. GRIFFITHS stressed the need for women to be in politics and told of her experience in the Michigan House of Representatives, her first political office.

"When I first began in politics, I assumed if you had equal intelligence, all intelligence was alike," she said.

"I discovered all of us weren't looking at problems the same way. The fact that I am a woman means I have a different viewpoint. The chief problem of the conservation committee was when to set the hunting season. Women need to be in politics to speak up for a little more than half of the population."

"Because 35 per cent of all women today who are 30 or more will be divorced, laws governing child support need revision," said the speaker. "Child support should be based on a percentage of the father's income and reviewed if the salary rises.'

She also believes that women who have an income should be responsible for child support and alimony if their husbands are unable to support themselves.

According to Mrs. Griffiths, a husband and wife working together cannot draw as much on social security as a man who worked and his wife stayed at home. What the legislature is saying is that a woman's job is not important, she added.

In a question-and-answer period following her speech, Mrs. Griffiths was asked about her future in politics to which she responded laughingly: "If whoever is nominated president wants to nominate me as vice-president-well, you don't have to work too hard at being vice-president.

Cooperative nursery schools have much to offer

"I really believe in cooperative nursery schools because the parents, teachers and children work together to develop the positive self image of all three," said Pat Zimmerman of Redford Township.

President of the Greater Detroit Cooperative Council, she added, "Co-ops are the only place the parent can be in class with the child and watch him develop."

She was referring to the custom of these non-profit pre-schools to ask a parent to contribute a day or two a month to help in the class attended by her child.

Co-ops also expect parents to participate in the day-to-day running of the school. with the result that the parents are then completely involved in the nursery, and the institution is spared the expense of ex-

Court opens counseling office

The Marriage Counseling Service of the Wayne County Circuit Court has opened a branch office in Livonia at 33900 Schoolcraft. west of Farmington Road.

Athough a separate function of the court, the branch will share facilities with the Wayne County Probation Department. The main office, located in downtown Detroit, will continue to serve the entire metropolitan areas. # Many Plymouthites died in Civil War

"In peace the sons bury their fathers," wrote Francis Bacon, "and in war the fathers bury their sons."

Plymouth, like other Michigan communities, buried many of its sons in the terrible years of 1861-1865 when young men answered President Lincoln's call during the war between the states. Monuments to Michigan men who fought in the Civil War stand in every one of the principal battle-

Twenty-three per cent (90,000) of the male population of the state served in the armed forces during the war. The percentage was even greater in Plymouth, where 28 per cent of the entire population of Plymouth Township put on uniform. The township, which then included the villages of Plymouth and Northville, had a population of only 1,500.

· Plymouth men were members of more than a dozen Civil War units, including the Michigan first, second, third, fourth, ninth and 10th Cavalry; the First Mechanics; the First Light Artillery, and the First Lancers. Infantry regiments in which Plymouth residents served included the 13th, 14th, 15th, 30th and the famous 24th.

ORGANIZED IN Plymouth on Aug. 1, Company C of the 24th Infantry Regiment was mustered into service in Detroit on Aug. 15, 1862.

The 24th was part of the celebrated "Iron Brigade" which received its name during a battle at Turner's Gap. During the fight. Gen. George B. McClellan, observing the aggressiveness of the Michigan troops, exclaimed to "Fighting Joe" Hooker. "They must be made of iron." Hooker picked up the name and it stuck. The regiment's chaplain, the Rev. William C. Way, was from Plymouth.

Company C was named the color company of the 24th. It had the youngest average age of any unit in the regiment. One of its corporals. Abel G. Peck, was the first of several color bearers of the regiment who were killed in action. Another of the original enlistees from Plymouth. Charles D. Durfee, later was named color sergeant. "having by long service entitled himself to this honorable distinction."

As part of the 24th, Plymouth's Company C was in the thick of the first day's fighting at Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863. Holding off a superior Confederate force, the 24th gave Gen. George Gordon Meade time to move up the balance of his Union army to meet Lee's attack. The 24th paid heavily for its resolute stand, suffering 80 per cent casualities (399 out of 496 men). It had more dead and wounded than any other of the 400 Union regiments in the three-day

COMPANY C also saw action in the battle of Fredericksburg in December 1862, when General Burnside's superior Union forces were shattered in vain attempts to breach the Confederate position. and at Chancellorsville in May 1863 when the Confederate victory proved to be its most costly in terms of casualties.

The Plymouth company also fought at Fitzhugh's Crossing in April 1863; Mine Run, Va., in November 1863; and the Battle of the Wilderness, May 1864.

The commander of Company C was Capt. Callvin B. Crosby, a local drygoods merchant. Born in Pompey, N.Y., on Aug. 29, 1829, Crosby moved to Plymouth in 1842. After the war, he was twice elected president of the village (in 1871, and again in 1886) and was treasurer of Wayne County twice. He was elected to the Senate, on the Republican ticket, from the second district of Wayne County and served in that post in 1887-8.

The other officers of the company included First Lt. Charles A. Hoyt and Second Lt. Winfield S. Safford. The sergeants were Asa Joy. August Pomeroy, Willard Roe, Charles Roe and Lucius Shattuck.

On Dec. 1, 1862, Crosby resigned from the service at Brooks Station because of ill health. Hoyt, promoted to captain, was later discharged because of wounds. Safford, promoted to first lieutenant, was killed at Gettysburg, as was Shattuck, who was also a first lieutenant before he died. Shattuck's letters from the front were used extensively by Donald L. Smith in his book

'The Twenty-fourth Michigan' (1962). By the time Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomatox on April 9, 1865, Company C had lost 33 of its members. Two officers (Sofford and Shattuck) and 15 enlisted men were killed or died of wounds; 16 others died of disease, accident or as a prisoner-of-war. The company was mustered out June 30, 1865.

PLYMOUTH MEN also served in the Michigan Cavalry Brigade, which had an important part in the Union victory at Gettysburg. The Brigade was commanded by a 23-year-old, golden-haired youth from Monroe—Brig. Gen. George A. Custer, one of the most brilliant cavalry leaders of the Civil War. The highest ranking officer from Plymouth was probably Lt. Col. Solomon P. Brockway, who commanded the 9th Michigan Cavalry.

Plymouth soldiers participated in a famous exploit shortly after the war ended. They were part of the fourth Michigan Cavalry, under Col. Benjamin D. Pritchard, which captured Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America. When surprised near Irwinville, Ga., on May 10, 1865, Davis was said to have donned his wife's cloak and shawl, but his disguise was easily penetrated because of the shoes he wore. Another version of the story is that Davis, attempting to flee. grabbed his wife's coat by mistake.

Among those present when Davis was captured was Plymouth's Harvey S. Heywood, a brother of Mrs. George A. Starkweather. Heywood, a first lieutenant in the 4th Michigan Cavalry, was later promoted to captain. Dar Dunning, an uncle of Margaret Dunning, also was there when David was taken into custody.

Two years after Lee surrendered, Plymouth was incorporated as a village. and four years later the railroads came to the community. By that time, the war was remembered chiefly by those who had buried their sons.

GRAND RIVER BAPTIST CHURCH, 34500 Six Mile, will present the Detroit Bible College Chorale in a sacred concert Sunday, March 21, at 7 p.m.

The chorale is directed by Raymond Shuster Jr, director of music at the col-lege, and will be accompanied on some numbers by a brass ensemble. The public is invited to the concert and there will be

FIRST UNITED METHODIST CHURCH OF PLYMOUTH, 45201 N. Territorial, will present the a capella choir from Rust College in Holly Springs, Miss., in a special concert Tuesday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m. The choir, for many years directed by Natalie Doxey and now under the baton of Lassaye Van Buren Holmes, has won attenmany separate appearances.

AUGSBURG LUTHERAN CHURCH. 24801 W. Chicago, Redford Township, will present the third concert in its current series at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, March 21, featuring its organist and music director, Maureen Born and flutist Sue Pilla.

Church women to show early American crafts

Early homernaking arts will be the focus of a special two-day bicentennial event March 19-20 in Wayne under sponsorship of the Wayne Ladies Literary Club and the Woman's Feilowship of the First Congregational Church of Wayne.

Working in cooperation with the two organizations are the women of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Westland, and the Women's Society of Christian Serv ice of the First United Methodist Church of Wayne. Also assisting with the presentation is the Wayne Bicentennial Committee

The demonstrations of such home arts and crafts as spinning, weaving, woodcarving and whittling rug hooking and braiding, basket weaving, tinware tole painting, chair caning and pottery making. will take place from 1-8 p.m. in the Wayne Community Center located on Howe Road at Annapolis, south of Michigan Avenue East in Wayne.

In addition, the demonstration is to include paper quilling, tatting and crocheting, bobbin lace making, flower and herb drying and others.

Antique show set by Rosedale

A show of antiques, arts and crafts will be sponsored by the senior high youth group of Rosedale Gardens United Presbyterian Church of Livonia, 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Saturday, March 20.

Funds raised will be used to send the oung people to a work camp in Vermont next summer.

The show will include dealers in the area crattsmen and hobbyist who want to show and sell or demonstrate their work.

Some of the crafts to be shown are pa pier tole, pine originals, woodworking, oil painting, tiffany lamps, leaded glass, toy making, china painting and sand painting

KENWOOD CHURCH OF CHRIST, Merriman north of Seven Mile, Livonia, will present a group of young musicians, the 'Disciples" of Great Lakes Bible College, in a concert at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, March

The group offers both instrumental and vocal music in its program of hymns, spirituals and contemporary church numbers. Last fall its members made a four-state tour. Shockley Flick is director.

Lady trustee

Katherine Kakaras of Redford Township is the first woman to be named a trustee by Ss. Stanislaus & Helen Orthodox Church. Mrs. Kakaras, long an active member of the Redford Suburban League, also has served the church, currently making plans to relocate in this area, in many capacities. She and her husband for 30 years operated the Chick Inn restaurant in Redford Township.

Youths will fast to help Indians

Young persons at St. Matthew United Methodist Church in Livonia will fast for 24 hours to raise money to help a hospital on a Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona.

The project has special meaning to them because they've heard about the hospital from some former St. Matthew members. Lloyd and Barbara Geyer, who are now working there.

Memorial society meets

The Greater Detroit Memorial Society will hold its 15th annual meeting Sunday. March 21, at 2:30 P.M., in North Congregational Church, 26275 Northwestern Highway. Southfield.

Mrs. Peggy Fleming, president of the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, will discuss proposed Federal Trade Commission rules for the regulation of the funeral industry and will tell about plans for the First International Assembly of Nonprofit Funeral and Memorial Societies, to be held in June at Wind-

The fast is planned the weekend of March 27-28, with about 35 junior and senior high youth group members beginning the no-food stint at 10:30 a.m. Saturday and continuing until 10:30 a.m. Sunday. All will ask friends and relatives to sponsor their fasting, paying a designated amount per hour. The funds then will be sent to the Geyers in Ganado. Ariz.. to buy some kind of equipment for Sage Memorial Hospital, where they are how employed as x-ray technician and nurse. The young fasters will be on their own until 7 p.m. Saturday, when they will gather with sleeping bags to spend the night at

Movies, including some about the Navajos: will be shown during the evening pro

Youth group sponsors who will be in charge of the all-night stay at the chruch are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Horie of Westland. Al Guilstorf of Livonia. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Shoemaker of Livonia and Karen Boyle of Livonia. Anyone who would like to sponsor a faster to help a reservation hospital is invited to call the office of St. Matthew, located at 30900 Six Mile. Livonia.

Stern solos at DSO tonight

be the guest soloist at three DSO concerts this week in Ford Auditorium, Thursday, March 18, at 8:30 p.m. Friday morning at 10:45 a.m. and Saturday March 20 at 8:30

Music Director Aldo Ceccato returns to the DSO podium after a six-week absence to conduct the concerts, which will include first DSO performances of works by the late Italian composer Luigi Dallapiccola and an American pupil of his, George

The program for the three concerts will begin with the overture to Rossini's opera "La scala di seta" (The Silken Ladder) and continue them with Rochberg's new Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern (for whom the work was written) as soloist. Also on the program will be Dallapiccola's Variations for Orchestra and the second suite from Roussel's ballet "Bacchus et

Friday morning's concert is an NBD Coffee Concert presented in cooperation with National Bank of Detroit. Doors will open at 9:30 a.m. for complimentary coffee, and the concert will be preceded at 10:15 by a fashion show from Bonwit Teller.

Group discounts for Friday morning's NBD Coffee Concert are available at 100 NBD branches. SEMTA buses provide round-trip transportation from many suburban locations, and a special shuttle-bus service is offered by DOT between the parking lot at Third and Wayne (just west of Cobo Hall) and Ford Auditorium. NBD officials have also arranged for five downtown restaurants to accept special post-concert luncheon reservations from Coffee Concertgoers; the restaurants are Top of the Flame, Bourbon Street Bistro, Chin-Tiki, Eastman's Gaslight Room and Russell's Steak House.

Tickets for the three concerts are available at the Ford Auditorium Box Office (call 961-0700 for information), all Hudson and Montgomery Ward ticket outlets. A limited number of tickets for students and senior citizens are available at the Box Office from 7:30 on Thursday and Saturday

Nature from your back door

Why not welcome wildlife?

By GLENN DUDDERAR
While you're thinking over what to plant in the vegetable garden and around the home this spring, consider gardening for wildlife.

I've received numerous inquiries about this venture the past few years and know this venture the past few years and know the rewards derived from such a continuing project, especially if your family has youngsters. But young or old, it can be a gratifying, educational experience.

It doesn't matter if the home is in the

It doesn't matter if the home is in the country or on a city lot, a few dollars spent each year on the yard will become a stage for wildlife to be enjoyed year around.

Established cities and towns have a remarkable diversity of wildlife species. In the open spaces where trees and shrubs are allowed to remain, birdlife is abundant, particularly during migration. Even in the heart of the city, migratory birds can be seen for they are attracted to any small oasis of green amidst the concrete and steel. Raccoon, rabbits, and squirrels are also common residents of such areas.

Wildlife will be attracted to your yard and live there if you supply three basic needs—food, cover and water.

Food and Cover

To provide optimum habitat on your property, trees, shrubs and plants of diverse characteristies should be planted. Tall trees, such as maples and oaks, provide upper story canopy for birds like redeyed vireos, scarlet tanagers and orioles.

if this is not practical for your lot, consider plantings that will provide ground cover or low shrubbery for species that prefer habitat either close to or on the ground. Song sparrows and rufous-sided towhees are examples.

Shrubs and trees of medium height will attract other species. The more diverse the habitat, the greater are your chances of attracting a variety of wildlife species.

Low shrubs (five to 10 feet) include: blackberry, blueberry, snowberry, huckleberry, barberry, viburnum or aromatic sumac. High shrubs (10 to 20 feet) include bush honeysuckle, autumn olive, elderberry, dogwood, winter berry, highbush cranberry, spreading juniper, multiflora rose, or sumac.

Medium height trees are crabapple, hawthorne, mountain ash, pin, choke and other small cherries.

Evergreens are indispensable in a properly balanced planting program because they provide shelter, food and interesting dark background for shrubs and flowers.

On large lots they can be planted in clumps of three to five trees, six feet apart or in double rows to form wildlife travel lanes along the edge of the property. Even a single evergreen planted on a small lot can provide some protection. Suitable species include white cedar, white spruce, red cedar or hemlock.

Vines and ground cover such as wild grape are excellent sources of food and shelter and attracts flickers, thrushes and cardinals. Planted along a sunny fence, grapevines make a good visual barrier. Another good vine is the Virginia creeper, which is attractive grown over walls or trellises, especially in fall when its foliage turns scarlet. Bittersweet is also very at-crown vetch, bearberry, bunchberry and partridgeberry are effective ground covers for rock gardens or beneath trees. Ground-feeding birds such as juncos and white-throated sparrows are some of the species attracted.

. Patches of carefully selected flowers will provide an important source of food for seed eaters during fall and winter. Food patches need not be large. When planted in clumps along hedgerows or in narrow strips, they are capable of attracting gold-finches, juncos and other seed-eating birds

Such plants may include sunflowers, cosmos, asters and zinnias. While annual plants produce an abundant seed crop, the flowers themselves can be attractive to butterflies and hummingbirds, Seeming to prefer red, orange, or purple flowers, hummingbirds readily visit morning glories, honeysuckles, lilies, petunias, hollyhocks and columbine. Let the last flowers go to seed and remain standing through the winter.

Water
When water for birds is scarce, as it often is in residential areas, birdbaths help draw a variety of birds. A small pool with water dripping over a rock is especially at-

Rocks or an old stump near the water are also attractive as preening sites after bathing. On a large lot in the suburbs, a pond landscaped with conifers, clumps of shrubs or a hedge is useful for those birds that need nesting and roosting areas and escape close to water.

The payoff? As your habitat develops and grows, it and the wildlife it produces will become an increasingly exciting and intimate part of your family's life. Your backyard can become a continually changing stage where wild animals are the actors and people the audience.

Inviting wildlife to your backyard is probably the best way for children to learn a simple tenet of the complex science of ecology. Life operates in one large system and everything in that system is interconnected; any change in one part affects the rest of the system.

A good example is the effect of the wildlife habitat on you.

First, the addition of such habitat will make your yard cheaper and easier to maintain (you won't have to spend so much time, energy, fertilizer, gasoline, money, etc.).

Second, the habitat will probably make your home more energy-efficient; cooler in the summer, warmer in the winter.

Third, the habitat will make your yard a more interesting place for your children to play; they really don't use, or need that big, comparatively sterile expanse of grass you work so hard to maintain.

Man's habitat can be wildlife habitat, too. If we are to maintain any contact between urban and suburban man and nature, we must share our living space.

Why was so much electric service out for so long?

Those who were inconvenienced are entitled to answers. Here, from Detroit Edison, are answers to the questions that we have been asked most.

Southeastern Michigan has just experienced one of the worst ice storms in its history. In terms of disruption of electrical service, it was the worst disaster in the 73-year period during which Detroit Edison has served the people of this area.

So severe were the effects of the storm—compounded by succeeding rain, wind, and electrical storms—that it took several days to determine the full extent of the damage.

One out of every five customers was affected directly by interrupted service during this period. Few, if any, escaped the storm without any inconvenience. Accordingly, we are making every effort to insure that everyone has the facts about the storm and the electrical service disruption and restoration resulting from it.

How extensive was the damage?

To date we have counted more than 300,000 homes and businesses that have been without electricity at some time since Monday night March 1. Thus the storm has affected directly more than one million people. Hardest hit were Oakland County with 87,000 homes and businesses out of service, the Thumb area with 81,000, and the Detroit area with 79,000. To put this in perspective, a storm is normally severe if we receive 5,000 telephone calls. So far we have received nearly 225,000 calls regarding this storm!

Could anything have been done to avoid such severe damage?

Not that we know of. We have continued to place top priority on maintaining both our electrical system and the skills of our crews. However, there is no way to avoid the effects on electric power lines of natural disasters such as this.

Why were the extent of damage and number of outages originally underestimated?

Because this storm dwarfed anything ever experienced in the past, the "normal" indices did not apply. For example, where circuit disruptions commonly cut power in 10-20 percent of the homes they cover, this time they were affecting 70-90 percent. Only detailed and time-consuming visual inspections and data analysis ultimately revealed the true figures. In addition, the problem of fallen poles—more than 1,000—and new wire requirements as high as a million feet are totally unprecedented. However, the underestimate in no way delayed a single service restoration. Emergency crews were requested from neighboring utilities early Tuesday evening, March 2, when approximately 16,000 calls had been received.

How were repair priorities determined?

First priority is always to restore facilities critical to health and safety, such as hospitals and municipal pumping facilities, homes that contain life-support equipment, such as kidney dialysis machines, and fallen exposed wires. Second priority is assigned to facilities that will produce the greatest number of service restorations in the shortest possible time.

Did certain geographic areas receive special treatment?

No. The Thumb area is the last to have complete restoration. That, however, is due to the difficulty of determining the extent of the damage there, the need for extensive rebuilding, the time involved in assembling large quantities of materials and manpower, and the added obstacles of mud and water.

Why has it taken so long to complete the repairs? Beyond the factors already noted, much of the damage occurred—or reoccurred—during subsequent rain, wind and electrical storms. Consequently, new outages were still developing through last weekend. Perhaps the whole problem is put in better perspective if you consider that nearly one-fifth of our entire electrical distribution system had to be restored, and in some cases almost.

How many people were involved in making the repairs?

In all more than 5,000 Detroit Edison employees, contract personnel and crews borrowed from other utilities were directly involved, turning their maximum effort to restoring service disruptions following this storm. We are extremely proud of what they have done.

Suppose my estimated bill is too high because of an outage?

This may happen. If it does, you may pay the bill and any overpayment will be adjusted with the next reading. Or you can call or visit your nearest Edison office and ask us to adjust the bill based on the amount of time you were out of service. In either case, the billing will be corrected at the next meter reading.

What did we learn for the future?

The Detroit Edison Company has been dealing with storms throughout its history. In so doing we have constantly improved our capability. Most recently we had instituted a centralized storm center in our Detroit headquarters, consolidated all of our Oakland county operations in a single divisional headquarters building, and developed a computerized storm analysis system. All of these—and more—helped to speed the repair and restoration process this time. And going through this, the worst storm in our history, has taught us much that will undoubtedly help us to do a better and faster job of restoring service in future storms. Also, many of our customers have probably learned that it is wise to keep supplies available for emergency use. Most of all, we learned that our customers are understanding and patient beyond expectations, good neighbors to us and to each other, and the kind of people we are proud to serve.

What can you do to help?

In addition to stocking up for emergencies, please continue in the future to report to us any abnormalities in service or appearance of any of our lines or other materials. By correcting these during non-emergency periods, we can often avoid damage during emergencies.

How much is the repair work costing and who will pay?

It will be several months before the full extent of damage is known in terms of cost—partly because the repair work to our system will continue long after all homes and businesses are back in service. But the figure will probably exceed $10 million—a magnitude of risk that insurance companies have declined to cover completely in recent years. Consequently it appears that about $1 million will be covered by insurance. Most of the remainder is included as an operating expense by Detroit Edison and will be considered by the Public Service Commission—along with all other valid business expenses—in setting rates in the future.

Can it happen again?

That's a frightening question to consider, particularly at a time like this, but just as it happened this month it can happen again. If it does, all of us will be even better prepared to deal with it. In the meantime, we at Detroit Edison will continue to make every effort to provide, reliably and safely, needed electric energy to enhance the lives of the people of Southeastern Michigan.

Figures 1010013

Chatham meat priced lowest.

We don't want you to simply take our word about Chatham's low meat prices. That's why we're letting you know the results of a meat price survey run by a nationally recognized research company. It proved that meat prices were lowest at Chatham.

How the survey was run.

The research team spent four weeks in all of Detroit's major supermarket chains. They compared prices on dozens of the meat items you buy most: things like hamburger, sirloin, pork chops, lamb chops, chicken, bacon, ham and lunch meats.

Quality meat. Low prices.

Not everything was less at Chatham, but when the bills were added up, Chatham was lower priced than any other supermarket. And since we sell more meat per store than any other supermarket chain in town, it's always fresh and flavorful.

Your total food bill should be less at Chatham.

There's one more thing you should remember. The low prices of our meat are the same kind of low prices you'll find on everything we sell at Chatham.

No wonder Chatham sells more meat per store than any other supermarket chain in town.

By DOUG FUNKE Sports Editor

At the conclusion of an athletic season, it is customary for competitors and fans alike to wonder exactly which athlete is best at his or her sport.

It becomes quite difficult to determine athletic supremacy when as many as 13 schools participate in a given sport with little cross-over competition. The problem is compounded when the sport involves a variety of classifications, as does wres-

MIKE KUCSERA

The Livonia Franklin senior, co-captain of the Patriots, placed fourth in the state finals at 98 pounds. Kucsera's trademark this season was versatility.

He wrestled at three different weight classifications during the season and frequently competed one class higher than his actual weight.

A three-year letterman, Kucsera showed a 26-7 record during the campaign including triumphs in the Garden City West and the Livonia Quads. He also won his weight class at the Northwest Suburban meet.

"His finish at the state tournament was our highest in recent years," said Franklin coach Tom Tucker. "He's really an out-standing kid—I'm going to miss him."

Franklin handcuffed by Trenton's checking

By DOUG FUNKE Sports Editor

Livonia Franklin saw its dream of a state championship in another sport-hockey-dashed Tuesday by falling to strong, forechecking Trenton contingent in the quarterfinals, 6-2.

The downriver Trojans limited the Patriots to only 19 shots on goal during the 45 minutes of play and only five in the third period, when Franklin had a man advantage for seven minutes.

"Trenton has a good hockey team," said Franklin coach Paul Ferguson after the battle. "They're on you all the time and force you off your game."

Patriots' netminder Chuck Latour was brilliant in goal during the first part of the opening period. He stopped three pointbrank shots during a Trenton power play and held the Trojans off the scoreboard for a two-man advantage.

However, with only three seconds remaining in one of the Patriots' penalties. Trenton's Don McLaughlin blasted a shot from the slot which dribbled into the goal even though Latour got a piece of it.

A Trenton defenseman was sent off for high sticking at 12:11, and 15 seconds later, following a Franklin mistake, the Trojans led 2-0 on a short-handed goal.

The Trojans made it 3-0 at the 19 second mark of the second period, with Mike Smellie jamming a rebound past Latour after a Trenton puckster had hit the post with a slapshot from the blue line.

Franklin quickly retaliated with a burst that brought the large Livonia cheering section to its feet. At 1:20, defenseman Paul Andrews blasted a drive from the blue line which was tipped into the net by Dan Garbutt, who was parked directly in front of the goal.

Twelve seconds later, Garbutt connected again, this time from Joe Lubig, who had stolen the puck from a Trenton icer between the net and the blue line.

The play which hurt Franklin the most, according to Ferguson, was Smellie's second marker of the contest at 4:18. The forward moved in from the right side of the goal and jammed the puck into the net.

Trenton counted two more goals in the third period and kept the Patriots out of scoring position with an excellent display of forechecking. Franklin never really threatened even though it had the extra man almost half the period.

"I thought the boys represented themselves and the league well," Ferguson said. "Charley played an excellent game in goal and the defense and forwards played well. I think all the kids had fun this year."

Franklin concludes its season with an' overall 25-2-1 record

Thurston, Rockets, RU lose in tourney

Three area volleyball squads were among the eight-team field last Saturday at the Westland John Glenn Regional portion of the state high school girls' tourna-ment, but none were successful at surviving the *day-long competition.

Redford Thurston, Redford Union and Westland John Glenn all made game efforts to advance, but none could match the strength of Dearborn Fordson, which now moves on to the finals this Saturday (March 20) at Schoolcraft College.

As luck would have it, Thurston and RU drew each other in first-round regional play, and the Eagles extracted a measure of revenge, for falling to the Panthers earlier this season, by bouncing RU, 15-12 and 15-4 in a close match.

The Rockets, meanwhile, were disposing of Wayne, 15-8 and 15-12. Other openinground action saw Dearborn nip Suburban Eight League foe Dearborn Edsel Ford, 14-12 and 15-13, and Fordson rip Taylor Kennedy, 15-1 and 15-3.

Jane Robey's Eagles clawed past Dearborn, 15-6, 12-15 and 14-12 to advance to the regional finals, while Glenn, coming up with one of its premiere efforts of the season in the second game, fell a trifle short against Fordson, losing 16-18 after dropping the opener, 8-15.

Thurston put up a battle in the first game of the finals before submitting to the Tractors, 15-13; and Fordson had a much easier time of it in the second, taking a 15-

Long-time intra-city rivals Livonia Franklin and Livonia Bentley last weekend clashed in the state regional volleyball tournament, and after three hard-fought games, the Patriots had ousted the Bulldogs from the competition, 16-14, 12-15 and

Franklin itself was later eliminated by Farmington Our Lady of Mercy, 16-14, 9-15 and 8-11. Ferndale proved to be the strongest of the eight teams at the Livonia Stevenson Regional, and advances to the state finals this Saturday (March 20) at Schoolcraft College

The two local rivals, as the luck of the draw had it, were paired against each other and the tempo of the three games matched that of their two meetings during the regular season, when each defeated the other once.

The Patriots took the first game Saturday by two points in overtime, and the Bulldogs came back to win the second by

In the deciding finale, senior Maryann Moroski served 14 consecutive points to power the Patriots to the second round of regional play.

'The first two games were very close," said Franklin coach Diane Corbett. "Nerves play such a big part in tournament games. The Patriots' coach said that the potent serving of Moroski was the key to the Bentley victory. "She had a backup serve which was a little hard for Bentley to control," Corbett stated Nonetheless, Corbett said the Bulldogs put up a titanic struggle during the first two games.

The Franklin-Mercy matchup was also a nip and tuck affair, with the Patriots losing the deciding third game 8-11 when the eight- minute-time period expired.

"I think if we had played the points and not had a time limit, we could have won it." Corbett said. "We had to go immediately to the Mercy match after playing Bentley and our emotions were so high for Bentley, we came up flat."

The Patriots managed to down Mercy in the opener, 16-14, but the Farmington girls trimmed Franklin in the second game, 15-9 and held the lead when time expired during the deciding match.

The game was really exciting, and we played as well as we could," Corbett sum-

In addition to the Franklin-Bentley first round duel, Walled Lake Western downed Walled Lake Central, 15-10 and 15-6; Ferndale stopped Southfield-Lathrup, 15-3, 9-15 and 15-5; and Mercy bested Farmington Harrison, 15-0 and 15-13.

While Mercy tripped the Patriots in the second round, Ferndale disposed of Walled Lake Western, 15-4, 9-15 and 15-11. Ferndale swept to the regional title, coming from behind, to triumph over Mercy, 10-12, 15-2 and 15-7.

The eight Class A regional winners will compete for the first volleyball state championship this Saturday at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty Road in Livonia.

Quarterfinals begin at noon in the main gym of the Physical Education Building, with the semifinals and finals scheduled from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. General admission tickets will be sold at the door for $2.

Touche, Henley

The Wayne State University women's fencing team completed its dual season with a perfect 11-0 mark. Anita Henley, a Livonia Clarenceville graduate, had an 8-5 individual record in varsity competition for the Tartars.

As was expected, the American Bowling Congress adopted a hard-line policy at its annual convention last week and, as a result, new rules have been laid down for conditioning of the lanes and the surfaces of bowling balls.

To end the charges of "blocking" the lanes, the delegates voted to eliminate the stacking of oil in the center of the lanes by ruling that all finishing in the future must be applied from gutter to gutter.

At the same time, they ruled out the 'soft shell" ball that had its inception in the pro ranks to help produce high scores on the oily surfaces.

The new conditions will go into effect with the start of the ABC fiscal year on Au-

Did you ever notice the interesting conversations that develop rather innocently while awaiting a second cup of coffee at

The other day, for instance, we were discussing the wonderful world in which we can sit in our living room and, through the medium of television, watch a national basketball tournament in living color from various sections of the country or fly across the Atlantic in little more than three hours in the latest supersonic jet.

Then, in the midst of the discussion, some one asked, "Where do we go from

It was a good question because there is a belief that the world doesn't stand still and that the day may come when our present TV sets will be obsolete and travelling may take on an entirely new dimension.

There was a time, and not too long ago. when we proudly boasted of our railroad system and the passenger travel that took us in deluxe style across the land, when silent motion pictures were replaced with "talkies" and later presented in color and we thought we had reached our peak.

HOW WELL The Stroller remembers the thrill of riding "The Black Diamond." pride of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, when he left home to come to Detroit to follow his journalistic career. The "Black Diamond" was a symbol of luxury. To ride in its palatial cars-and even dine in onewas almost like a dream.

It was the same when, in the course of duty, he travelled to New York on the "Twentieth Century Limited," and riding 'The Red Arrow' to Philadelphia on an overnight trip really was something.

Another big thrill came when The Stroller and the little woman who runs our house, made our first trip west on "The Super Chief." It ran out of Chicago and required only 39 hours to reach the Pacific

At the time this was the height of luxury and one can't forget the morning we were arriving on the coast when a woman looked out the car window and said, "My Gad, the roses are even growing along the

The obliging marigolds

Here we let the marigolds speak for themselves with well-deserved pride in their color and their dependable performance.

In our test garden, last year, we planted 26 varieties of marigolds. Plantings were spaced in two beds, 4 feet wide and 50 feet long. They put on a most brilliant show. Visitors who walked the path between the rows reached for their sunglasses.

Much has happened to the marigolds in the last few years. They have been the plant breeders pets. Today there are classes of marigolds that outshine the carnation and chrysanthemum. A few have lost their foliage odor — "A smell that is pleasant and haunting to some, acrid and sharply disagreeable to others."

A noteworthy contribution of the plant breeders has been the new introductions in the triploid hybrid group. What's a triploid? In the Burpee Seeds catalog, the triploid is defined this way: "It is a cross between the big American and little French marigold, combining American vigor and neat French habit. As French have twice the chromosomes of American, the two cannot mate normally. Progeny are like mules, unable to reproduce themselves. Like all living things, they try, but can produce so few viable seeds that they bloom and bloom in order to try to form good seed and are not weakened by seed bearing. Occasionally coarser-leaved, more vigorous, seedlings appear, which do not produce the true mule type and should be destroyed. Germination is below average."

Two of the new varieties in the triploid hybrid group are: 'Showboat'— rich yellow, double, 2½-inch flowers on 13-inch plants. All-America, All-Britain selection. And, 'Red Seven Star'—fully double, 2¾-inch flowers on 14-inch plants are reddish scarlet overlaid on gold.

Of the 26 we grew we chose the 12 displayed on the following page to illustrate the variations in size and nature of the flowers. In the chart at left we give the plant height of a number of individuals and the class they represent.

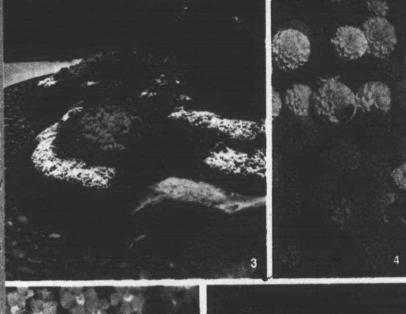

With the few exceptions of the inbred varieties, the height of individuals in our marigold planting tallied with the heights listed by the seed growers. The inbred varieties grew taller than advertised.

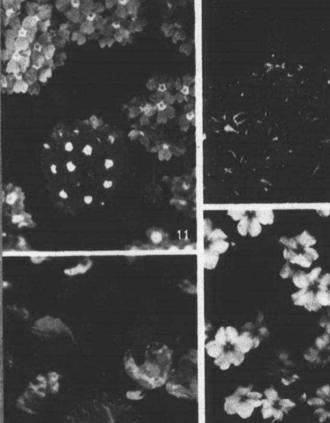

The marigold has the reputation of being the companion plant. The foliage is reputed to repel insects and its roots produce a chemical that kills nematodes. Its value as a nematocide is dependent upon continuous mass plantings for several years. In our garden an interplanting of marigold with cabbage didn't stop the cabbage worms. Snails will strip the leaves of young marigolds overnight.

Marigold height and form

When measuring the height of our marigolds, we were surprised at how often we agreed with the height listed in nursery catalogs. Variations in the hybrids was much less than in the inbreds. All of the tall varieties grew taller than cataloged. Our favorite marigold? There are many. One of them would be 'First Lady' with her tight-petaled head-like a yellow ball cut in half. Another would be 'Senator Dirksen,' a very pleasant marigold without the typical marigold odor. Flowers are like huge carnations, 3 to 4 inches across. After growing this marigold it's easy to understand the late Senator's desire to make the marigold the national floral emblem of the United States.

ORTHO Lawn & Garden Book

Regionalized for gardeners in the Midwest/North

In the garden world there's an annual colorful pageant-first the great seed farms, then in the seed catalogs, then the nursery greenhouses, then the colorful display of seedlings at garden stores, and finally in pots, boxes and borders of instant color in gardens everywhere. This is the ritual of renewal of our most colorful plants. And in this ritual "new" plants, and "new" colors and forms of old plants are selected and scientifically engineered. In this little book we pay tribute to all members of the pageant.

Our cameras caught the pageant in many locations. In the seed fields, photos, 1, 5, 7, 8; in greenhouses, 13 and 14; in spectacular retail nursery displays, 2, 3, 6, 10. (Photos 3 and 10 taken at the new Rogers nursery in Newport Beach, California.) In home gardens, 15-yellow and blue violas, perennial candytuft, with daffodil background; 20verbena 'Spirit of '76'; 4-marigolds 'Nugget mix'; 11-pink verbena; 12-variegated impatiens; 9geranium 'Cherie'; 16-Iceland poppies; 17-impatiens 'Futura': 18-nasturtium; 19-petunias 'Summer Sun'; 21-zinnias; 22-23gazania 'Sunburst'.

The almost instant garden

How "almost" should almost instant be? You can set your own pace. The plant suppliers are getting more "instant" every year. There's a shifting rainbow of "instant color" in nursery flats and in 4-inch pots season by season.

Gardeners who enjoy the experience of growing plants from seed to transplants claim that the buyers of plants in flower are missing most of the fun of gardening-all the sights along the way from sprouting seed to flower.

But there are many good reasons for using the nursery as your greenhouse. When you pick up the fibrous begonia in bloom, you have a flower that is 16 weeks from seed. When the nursery is your greenhouse look at the green-thumbing time you save with many of the most useful plants: ageratum, 12 weeks, browallia 12, coleus 10, geranium 16. impatiens 12. lobelia 12. nierembergia 12. petunias 12-15, snapdragons 14, thunbergia 12-16.

The August wedding

We were forced to prove our good words about instant color when a friend suggested that our home test garden would make a beautiful setting for his daughter's wedding. (It's difficult to say

So, we decided to do an extravagant job and demonstrate what a gardener can do with the help of his nurseryman-in one weekend plus one day.

Between the strawberry wall and the block of corn we built a flower stairway - a grandstand for a display of potted color. See photograph below. To make room for more containers we found space beneath an old, overgrown beauty bush and next to a purple leafed plum for two

almost instant decks to serve as plant stages. (They were simple affairs-three 4x4-inch pieces of redwood were laid on the ground to support precut 2x4-inch redwood decking.)

One trip to the nursery, with the thought of the wedding as an excuse for overbuying, brought into the garden: four flats of white petunias, a flat of dwarf marigolds, a dozen 4-inch pots of pink petunias, a dozen 4-inch pots of annual dahlias, ageratum, annual vinca, marigolds, and white petunias. We had on hand, in the shade garden, a good supply of impatiens in large pots, hanging columns and baskets, fibrous begonias in hanging columns and pots, ferns, and white caladiums.

The new color received a variety of treatments. Some 4-inch material went into 8-inch pots, planter boxes, and a tub that caught our eye at the nursery. Anyway, the wedding was beautiful, the impatiens lit up the shady spots and the petunias and marigolds reflected the sun.

What's new with the old favorites?

When we look at a new variety of impatiens, begonias, or whatever in a trial planting, we ask ourselves: "What would we throw out to make room for this one?"

Of course, if you are a confirmed container gardener, there's no question about space. There's always room for another pot or two. Regardless, these trial winners are definitely worth your

Begonias. The fibrous rooted 'Glamour' has the glossiest, waxy foliage we've seen on a begonia. The shell pink flowers are larger than any other variety in its class. Grown in a flower bed, or pot, instant decks in the shrub-tree borders provided a part-sun, part-shade environment which accepted both shade-loving and shade-tolerant plants.

and copper, plus a chelating agent-perfect for leaf feeding, or applied to the soil to correct conditions causing chlorosis. It is not a fertilizer and should not be mixed with other sprays. It should be used in conjunction with a regular fertilizer program.

Small but mighty

Damage by mites to flowers, trees, shrubs, fruits and vegetables, was definitely on the upswing last year. These minute, insect-like creatures ruin plants by sucking sap from foliage and tender tip growth. Mite presence usually goes unnoticed as they can only be seen with a hand lens. When infestation is severe, foliage becomes yellow, excessively stippled, webs formed by the mites can be seen on the undersides of the leaves. On ornamentals stop these spoilers with Isotox Insect Spray. On fruits and vegetables, follow label directions on ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray, or ORTHO DIAZINON Insect Spray for fruits, or ORTHO Fruit and Vegetable Insect Spray for melons.

Read the label

For the best results and safety read, and be sure you understand, the entire label before using any garden chemical and follow the directions faithfully

With all pesticides the application is at least half the battle. You must be sure to adequately cover the pests and their hiding places as the label directs you. Never spray grass or any plant that is suffering from lack of moisture. Water deeply and thoroughly a few days before spraying. Wait a day or two after a period of strong windso moisture lost from leaves can be replacedleaves should be turgid. And, never spray when bark or leaves are wet from dew, rain or sprinkling-you'll lose much of the spray's effectiveness.

Your own safety

Read the label every time you spray or dust and note especially all the cautions and warnings. Mix sprays on a solid, level surface to avoid spillage.

Avoid spilling pesticides on the skin or clothing and wash exposed skin areas thoroughly with soap and water.

Do not eat or smoke while spraying. Wash hands thoroughly with soap and water immediately after spraying.

Keep all chemicals out of the reach of children. Store in a locked cabinet or on a high shelf. Set aside a special set of mixing tools, measuring spoons, and a graduated measuring cup. Use them for mixing and measuring chemicals only. Be sure to keep all chemicals in their original labeled containers at all times.

Don't store left-over spray. Left-over material in the sprayer should be poured into a hole 18 inches deep and covered over, making it inaccessible to children and animals.

Before disposing of empty pesticide containers they should be allowed to drain upside-down for at least 30 seconds; then rinsed thoroughly with water three times, allowing 30 seconds for draining after each rinse. Dispose of rinse material in the same manner as spray material. Used containers which have been rinsed and drained in this manner are ready for disposal by accepted local methods, such as crushing and burying, or recycling when appropriate. Do not burn empty containers.

The right spray equipment

ORTHO water-powered sprayers are precision built to deliver the right mixture of spray at all times. The water pressure may vary from 20 to 80 pounds per square inch without changing the effectiveness of the sprayer.

ORTHO SPRAY-ETTE 4 delivers up to 4 gallons of spray-enough for 8-10 medium-sized shrubs or up to 800 square feet of lawn. Ortho Super Six SPRAY-ETTE delivers up to 6 gallons of sprayenough for 12-15 medium-sized shrubs or up to 1200 square feet of lawn.

The ORTHO Lawn Sprayer is recommended for liquid fertilizers when large quantities of water are needed to carry chemicals down into the root zone.

New is the ORTHO Lawn and Garden Sprayeractually two sprayers in one. This all-purpose sprayer is designed so you can apply accurately diluted insecticide, fungicide, weed killer, and fertilizer mixtures. Will work on water pressure as low as 25 pounds per square inch. The ORTHO Lawn and Garden Sprayer is easy, clean, and safe to use. The special nozzle adjusts to four spray patterns.

the plant to give all leaves inner protection for 2 weeks or more, which cuts down on the frequency of spraying, even though every insect may not have been hit by the spray.

The standard method of control of various scale

crawlers, mites, and mealybugs, which attack many evergreens is to spray with VOLCK Oil Spray in early spring and follow with ISOTOX in summer, as needed. Follow label instructions. It's for use on ornamental plants only. Do not use on edible fruits or yegetables.

Hail damage

Damage from king-size hail stones may cause not only leaf damage but bark damage as well. After an unusually severe hail storm, it's a good idea to inspect large shrubs and trees with an ORTHO Pruning Paint in hand. A quick spray of any breaks in the thin bark of the branches will allow the tree to heal itself quickly and protect it from insect damage.

Annuals and perennials that have been pounded to the ground should be cut back. Most will recover and put on new growth rapidly.

Rose care

The rose is a high-powered manufacturing plant. To allow it to develop its full power, these simple steps are necessary.

- 1. The supply of water to the roots must be continuous. Leaf growth, checked by partial drying-out, never fully recovers.
- 2. Keep soil temperatures down in hot summer months with a mulch of organic material such as sawdust, ground bark, coarse bark chunks, or peatmoss.
- Don't let seed pods form. Pick fading blossoms as you would a rose bud. New shoots and flower buds form quickly below the cut.
- 4. Protect the leaves and buds from damage by insects and diseases.
- 5. Feed early and often to replenish nutrients used in the high production of flowers.

Winter care. There'll be fewer insects and disease organisms to combat in spring if you do a thorough clean-up job when roses are dormant. Pick off all old leaves and rake up all leaves that have fallen. Spray the canes with ORTHORIX Spray, following label directions. Drench the leaves and the canes.

Black spot. Wherever spring and summer rains are frequent, black spot is rose enemy number one. The best protection is to have PHALTAN Rose & Garden Fungicide on the leaves before it rains. Most rose growers fight black spot by spraying every week throughout the growing season.

About the systemics. The plant has the ability to protect itself from its worst enemies when you fertilize with Ortho Systemic Rose & Flower Care 8-12-4. There will be no need for a separate spray for aphids, spider mites, whiteflies, leafhoppers, and other sucking type and leaf mining insects. Ortho Systemic Rose & Flower Care 8-12-4 will give 6 weeks protection against the listed insects, regardless of the weather.

Different paths to success. Rose growers arrive at the perfect rose by many different routes in their care and feeding.

One rose grower will start his program with ORTHO Systemic Rose & Flower Care and take care of black spot and powdery mildew with PHALTAN Rose & Garden Fungicide.

Or follow a liquid program by combining ISOTOX Insect Spray with PHALTAN Rose & Garden Fungicide and ORTHO Rose & Flower Food 8-12-4.

And don't forget for spot treatments or small jobs it's ORTHO Rose & Floral Spray in the aerosol can. A combination insecticide/fungicide which, when applied as a light mist, will quickly kill insects listed. Also controls black spot and powdery mildew.

Do like the pros do

If both crawling and flying insect pests are a problem inside the house ORTHO HI-POWER Indoor Insect Fogger provides help in a new form.

It's specially formulated to control a wide range of insects including silverfish, cockroaches, flies, and ants.

The aerosol can has been made to automatically release the entire contents, filling the room with a penetrating fog. For professional-like results, do like the pros douse ORTHO Ant, Roach & Spider Spray before activating the total release program of the ORTHO HI-POWER Indoor Insect Fogger.

This combination will give residual control of many crawling pests. ORTHO HI-POWER Indoor Insect Fogger can also be used for spot treatment when the total release is not needed.

At winter's end

At winter's end, both the needled and broadleafed evergreens still show winter's drabness, but new growth is on its way. The recovery from the effects of a cold winter can be painfully slow, especially if winter is followed by a cool spring. In the cold soils of early spring, soil applied fertilizers are not directly available to the plant roots. Soil microorganisms necessary to convert the fertilizers, are inactive. However, a foliage nutrient spray will supply nutrients immediately. The plant begins green growth before the roots are able to absorb nutrients from the soil.

ORTHO liquid fertilizers are formulated to be used for both leaf feeding and soil application. Spray foliage and soil with ORTHO Evergreen & Azalea Food 10-8-7. In one week, compare them with similar plants in your neighborhood—they'll be the greenest on the block.

Carnations. 'Juliet' is the new All-America Selection. The bright scarlet-red flowers are fully double and 2½-inches in diameter. We rated it high for its uniform growth habit. Every plant spread its color at the same height—about 12 inches.

Geranium. If you bump into geraniums in six-packs right alongside the display of marigolds and other annuals, look for the tag 'Carefree' or 'Sprinter'. These are the geraniums grown from seed. In the trials we have seen they have been planted alongside the traditional cutting-grown geraniums. The difference in vigor is astonishing. The seed geraniums produced more flowers over a longer period on bushier plants than any of the cutting-grown varieties.

Impatiens. Due to their ability to furnish color in shady areas and their colorful performance in containers and hanging bouquets, impatiens are enjoying increasing popularity. They deserve it.

The newest introduction, 'Fancifrills', is a stunner. Its flowers are like 1½-inch miniature roses. Each flower has 25 to 50 petals. Plants will grow to 15 inches. The full range of impatiens colors are available — white, scarlet red, rose pink, light pink, coral, and orange. 'Fancifrills' performs equally well indoors and in the garden. It's available as cutting-grown plants in 4 and 6-inch pots.

Marigolds. See chart of varieties on page 32.

Pansies. Last year's new pansy introduction— 'Imperial Blue'—has performed beautifully. Its flowers are clear light blue, with contrasting bluish violet face and gold eye.

Zinnias. Winner of the All-America Gold Medal is 'Pink Ruffles'. Its double pink flowers are carried on 24-30-inch plants. This is an excellent companion to 'Scarlet Ruffles'. Their long stems make them excellent providers of cut flowers.

Hanging baskets

Many an ordinary, common plant becomes a star performer when grown in a hanging basket. But it's wise to remember that when a plant goes skyward its container becomes both functionally and aesthetically important. The hanging container must have more protection from the sun and wind than the same container on the ground. When the common clay pot is exposed on all sides to the movement of air, it becomes an efficient evaporative unit. Experienced gardeners provide insulation in various ways: a pot within a pot, with peat moss as insulation, for example. Wood provides its own insulation and would be used more if it could be shaped in more ways.

Wire, lined with sphagnum moss in both baskets and columnar shapes, gives the basket maker the chance to build a living bouquet. The moss has the natural green garden look most gardeners find appealing.

Many materials are being tried out as substitutes for the sphagnum moss—or as insulating material in addition to the moss.

When it comes to hanging baskets we depart somewhat from the orthodox and make a distinction between the hanging basket and the hanging bouquet. Widely recognized as the "true" hanging basket plants have been the selected forms of tuberous begonias, the trailing forms of lobelia, nasturtium, and campanula. In mild winter climates the basket performers include lantana, lotus, and asparagus fern.

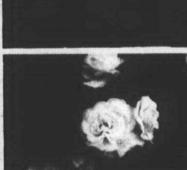

The more or less standard hanging basket plants can be grown in hanging pots of plastic, clay, or wooden containers.

Wire baskets and cylinders of wire (2-inch mesh lined with an inch of sphagnum moss and filled with a light-weight soil mix) make possible the hanging bouquet. Some basket makers fill them with soil as the plants are inserted through the moss; some prefer to insert the plant through the moss into a soil-filled basket. We have followed both procedures with equal success.

The proud look

You learn to really look at plants as you work with them close up in pots, boxes, and tubs. You deal with plants on more intimate terms. The structure and character of a shrub becomes important.

The personality of a plant can be radically altered by changing the container. Witness, in photographs above, what happened to a mugho pine that had grown old in a box, and to a pot-bound, 15 year, old variegated pieris.

How to keep the youthful look

The life objective of annual plants is to produce seeds. The fading flowers are signals of the beginning of seed production. It is then that much of the energy of the plant is diverted from the production of new stems, leaves and flowers, and channeled into seed formation.

To keep the plant youthful at the business of producing new flowers, remove the fading flowers by pinching or cutting back the fading flowers at ½ to 1-inch below the old flower head.

If the seed setting gets ahead of you and the plant has more seed pods than flowers, don't throw it away. Whack it back, fertilize and water it, and watch it start all over again. Plants such as petunias, snapdragons, and verbena respond to this drastic treatment.

The hanging groundcovers

People who like to grow plants in containers seem to develop the ability to see beyond the labeled classification of an object. Their eyes are not fooled by label words.

A plastic waste basket in the supermarket may be a waste basket to some customer, but to the container gardener it's plastic shaped to hold something.

When the hanging basket makers look at a low-growing, wide spreading juniper, the fact that it's classed as a groundcover doesn't fool them. If the juniper spreads wide, it will drape down.

Our favorite juniper for training in almost any shape is the Japanese Garden juniper (J. procumbens). The compact form (J. procumbens 'Nana') does not spread as wide as the species but its needles are shorter and completely cover the wood of its branches.

Looking at the groundcover offerings with an eye of the hanging basketeer, we were impressed with the hardy 'Baltic' ivy, the blue-flowered periwinkle (vinca minor), the purple-leafed winter creeper (Euonymus fortunei 'Coloratus'), and creeping jenny with her buttercup-like yellow flowers.

Dress up

Don't overlook the opportunity of using ground covers in planters supporting shrubs and trees. For example, wisteria trained as a small tree is a beautiful sight in a large tub or box. A mulch of ground bark is one way to dress up the planting, but for better icing on the cake, why not a ground cover of ajuga for a white wisteria, or evergreen candytuft for the purple wisteria? Consider insecticides by their "shell-like" coverings. The crawler stage occurs just after eggs hatch. Crawlers leave the protection of mother's shell and scatter over the plant, exposed to sprays until they find a place to settle and grow their own shells. The scale's life cycle gives you two chances during the year to control them. A late winter spray with Volck Oil Spray will control mature scales. Follow up in late spring and summer with Isotox Insect Spray as needed to clean out scale insects when they are in the crawler stage.

Instant protection for vegetables

For simple and fast control of a wide range of insects in the vegetable garden the new ORTHO Tomato & Vegetable Insect Spray is the answer. The aerosol can makes application simple. Apply in the early morning or late evening when the air is still, treating all foliage with particular attention to the underside of leaves. Hold can 1½ to 2 feet away from the plant and spray in short bursts. And you don't have to worry about spray residue on the vegetables (see list on label) at harvest time. Ortho Tomato & Vegetable Insect Spray can be used to within one day of harvest.

For best results use throughout the growing season, at the first sign of attack, Ortho Tomato & Vegetable Insect Spray can be used on beans, cucumbers, eggplant, melons, peppers, potatoes, squash, sweet corn, and tomatoes. It controls many common damagers including aphids, flea beetles, leafhoppers, hornworm and whitefly.

The onion maggot

It has been our habit to warn first-time gardeners against the almost certain ravages of the onion maggot. The damage done by the onion maggot is always discovered when it's too late to do anything about it. Dusting the furrows about to receive onions to control onion maggots; and also before planting radishes, to control root maggots with ORTHO DIAZINON Soil & Foliage Dust should be automatic. Follow directions on the package.

Last year we made several plantings of onions in a clay pot. With a clean, sterile soil mix the idea of damage from onion maggots seemed remote. But the little worms were there. So now it's a DIAZINON Soil & Foilage Dust treatment for containers of onions and radishes.

ISOTOX is the word

When a plant's in obvious trouble and the trouble is caused by "something damaging the leaves," the most frequent recommendation is to "spray with Isotox." The full name of the product is ORTHO Isotox Insect Spray, but to several generations of gardeners, "Isotox" is the spray.

It's a wide spectrum insect spray formulated to clean out many kinds of sucking and chewing insects and spider mites. ISOTOX Insect Spray contains a systemic insecticide which moves inside

Aphilds
Aphilds come in several assorted colors and sizes to suck plant juices, stunt growth, pucker and curl leaves, and make a nuisance of themselves around the garden. General feeders, especially on members of the cabbage family. These products control aphilds:
ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray, ORTHO Fruit & Vegetable Insect Control.

Beetles
This is a huge and diverse group of insects containing many beneficial insects as well as those that are destructive. The most destructive beetles are illustrated here. The larva of the striped cucumber beetle feeds on roots of cucumbers, muskmelons, and winter squash, while the adults feed on the leaves and blossoms of many plants. These beetles double their damage by spreading such diseases as bacterial will and cucumber mosaic. Peppers, tomatoes potatoes, beans, and eggplant are also attacked by various beetles bamage is most severe on young plants. Controls: ORTHO Tomato

Actorpillars & Worms
Aost of these are the larva of moths and butterflies. They come in all sizes and colors, naked and hairy, some decorated with tufts, or upines. All feed on foliage. Some of the worms that damage yegeables are: cabbage looper, or cabbage worm, cutworm, corn borer, comato fruitworm, pickle worm, and army worm. Use ORTHO Tomato legetable Dust, ORTHO SEVIN Garden Dust, ORTHO Liquid SEVIN, ur ORTHO SEVIN Garden Soray. Check product labels.

Cutworms
Cutworms hide in the soil during the day, feed at night. They cut off young transplants near the soil surface. Best control is to clean them out of the soil before planting with a soil application of ORTHO DIAZINON Soil & Foliage Dust. See label for details.
This treatment also controls wireworms.

Leatheppers
Leatheppers are small, 1/4"-1/2" long, wedge-shaped insects with plercing-sucking mouthparts. They suck sap from the undersides of leaves, causing loss of color, a stippled, wilted appearance, and a general loss of health and vigor. Leafhoppers are carriers of many plant virus diseases. Damage lettuce, beans, tomatoes, eggplant, peppers. Also feed on blossoms of beans and cause a poor pod set.
To control use: ORTHO SEVIN Garden Dust or ORTHO Tomato Vegetabl
Dust or ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray. Check the labels.

To most people, any insect is a bug. To a gardener, "bugs" are an order of insects, generally unpleasant, destructive, and difficult to control. As bugs suck juices, many inject a toxin causing unsight spots and wilting. Control of mature bugs is difficult. Watch for appearance of young nymphs. Apply ORTHO SEVIN Garden Dust or ORTHO Tomato Vegetable Dust late in the day.

Trouble in the garden and how to prevent it

Troublemakers in the garden come in many forms: diseases, birds, rodents, too much water, insects in the soil, or on the wing, and the hazards of the inexperienced gardener.

The seasoned gardener learns to live with a certain amount of frustration and plant damage, but the wise ones take some protective measures against the damagers with well known criminal records. In these four pages we note the action of the wise and the wary.

Choice of fertilizers

Once you look at fertilizers from a plant's point of view one fact that's revealed is that a plant, requires an exceedingly small amount of fertilizer on a continuous basis. Whether you apply enough fertilizer for 60 days at one time, or give just what the plant needs for one day is up to the persuasion of the gardener.

ORTHO's new timed-release fertilizers have an advantage over the conventional once-a-month soluble fertilizers in that they are formulated to release just what the plant needs, day by day, over a 3 to 4 month period. While it's true that these timed-release fertilizers furnish more fertilizer when they are first applied than at the end of the period, they have the facility of protecting plants from lapses in the gardener's attention.

The advantages of timed-release fertilizers in container and hanging basket plantings are magnified. With artificial soil mixes and other light-weight soils there is a need for frequent watering, more frequent than with plants in the open ground. Ordinary soluble fertilizers are leached out more rapidly with the fast drainage, leaving the plant with a fertilizer deficiency. With timed-release fertilizers the fertilizer is made. available to the plant over a long period of time.

There are four new ORTHO timed-release fertilizers, each one designed to meet a different gardening need.

ORTHO Pot & Planter Food 5-10-5. A general fertilizer for all container plantings.

ORTHO African Violet Food 6-9-5. Formulated especially for the care and feeding of African

ORTHO Tomato and Vegetable Food 10-20-5. Great for tomatoes and other vegetables. Can e mixed in the garden soil before planting for long term feeding throughout the vegetable growing ORTHO General Purpose Plant Food 12-6-6. A general fertilizer for application in the garden. Also new is Ortho House Plant Food 5-10-15 in an easy-to-use liquid form. Following label directions, you can apply drops of the fertilizer directly on the soil, or mix a capful to a quart of water and fertilize every time you water.

Slug and snail menace

If you've planted young transplants of lettuce one evening, only to find them without leaves the next morning, you know the habits of slugs

These night feeders use all kinds of hiding places during the day: a groundcover of ivy is a snail haven, but you'll find them underneath pots and planter boxes, any place that's dark, cool, and

The active ingredient in SLUG-GETA Snail & Slug Bait is MESUROL. It produces a paralysis in snails and slugs soon after feeding which prevents them from returning to shelter as daylight approaches. Use it for a clean-sweep control with flowers, shrubs, vines-everywhere except the vegetable garden.

The bait to use in the vegetable garden is BUG-GETA Snail & Slug Pellets. Last year the Environmental Protection Agency registered it for use around vegetables. Distribute bait in the vegetable garden before tasty seedlings come up.

The delightful pests

Birds are a delight to the eye and ear, but can sometimes be a big problem in the vegetable garden or orchard. Many vegetable seedlings and most fruits need protection from bird damage.

Plastic netting is available in sizes from 41/2 x 36 feet to 9 x 200 feet, enough to cover a row crop or an entire tree. It is reusable many times and can be staked and stretched over newly planted corn, peas, and beans, as well as keeping birds from enjoying the fruit on strawberry plants, tomato plants, grapevines, and fruit trees.

Nylon netting, available at department stores and vardage shops is equally effective for protection against birds. It's available in 72-inch widths and unlimited lengths.

In areas where there is trouble with birds eating the kernels on the tip of the ear of corn, the problem can be solved by slipping a paper bag over each ear after it's pollinated. Large clusters of grapes can be protected from yellow jackets and birds by tying a plastic bag around the cluster.

Solve the scale problem

Some of the most popular shrubs and trees play host to one or more kinds of scale insects. Holly, juniper, pine, arborvitae, flowering dogwood, maple, ash, and elm are some of the shrubs and trees that must be watched for scale damage. Scale insects are sometimes hard to detect because their dull colors camouflage them; they're usually just little lumpy things with no signs of legs, mouths, or other organs. Scale insects come in many sizes, shapes, and colors and attack all parts of the plant.

A scale's mouth is a needle-like tube that uncoils 6-7 times as long as its body, reaching deep into plant tissue to suck juices, reducing plant vitality. Foliage pales, leaves or needles drop prematurely.

The product to use is Volck Oil Spray. Volck Oil Spray cleans out scale and other insects by smothering, rather than by chemical poisoning. Except when in their "crawler stage," scales are immobile, protected from predators and most

The season-shopper

Nursery shopping, as practiced by the container gardener is a fine art. In any display of shrubs and trees, there are potential treasures.

For example, in early spring before the spring planting rush is on and the nursery is relatively peaceful, these gardeners look over the star performers of the pre-spring season with an eye for bringing the season up close.

For an early and late performer take a look at the 'Cornelian Cherry'-a species of dogwood (Cornus mas). In early spring it covers its leafless twigs with clusters of small yellow flowers. In September the yellow and red of its leaves are highlighted by clusters of bright scarlet cherries. These ¾-inch fruits are rich in pectin and pleasantly acid in flavor when dead ripe. Just the thing when making preserves.

Soils for containers

Do you need a special mix for containers? The answer is an unqualified "yes." The soil in the container must provide better drainage than garden loam. In a container the moisture retained after irrigation is greater than the moisture retained by the same soil mix in the garden. The bottom of the container (or gravel in the bottom of the container) breaks the capillary action (blotter action) of soil in the garden. Container soil must provide fast drainage through large pores in the mix and at the same time retain moisture in the small pores.

A mix of 50% organic matter, such as peat mossor ground bark, and 50% vermiculite or perlite (or fine sand or a mixture of these) will provide the aeration (air in the soil) and moisture retention needed for healthy growth.

There are a number of light-weight mixes, formulated for container gardening available at garden stores and through mail-order seed companies under such brand names as Jiffy-Mix, Pro-Mix, Sure-Fire Mix, Burpee Growing Formulas, and Redi-Earth.

The synthetic soils offer the container gardener important advantages.

The mixes are disease-free and weed-free.

For large containers, you can use them as is, or give them more "body" by adding 10% of fine sand. They can, of course, be mixed with a good garden soil. However, the disease-free advantage is lost.

Vegetables in the almost instant garden

Determined vegetable growers in apartment houses, townhouses, and high rises are proving again and again that almost every vegetable can be grown in a box, pot, tub, or planter-and in most cases quite efficiently.

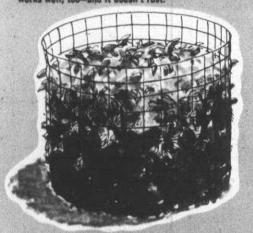

A few years ago tomatoes, peppers and eggplant were commonly grown in containers. Peppers, especially the hot peppers, and the small-fruited eggplants not only are adapted to container growing but have the decorative qualities necessary to earn a prominent spot on the balcony or patio. Tomatoes have a long history of life in containers for various good reasons. A most important one was to escape soil diseases.

Last year, encouraged by neighboring activity, we decided to go all out with vegetables in pots and boxes. We grew potatoes in peck baskets, onions and shallots in pots, chard and kale in planters, beets, carrots, turnips and kohlrabi in boxes. In 30-inch square boxes, 8 inches deep we planted cucumbers, squash and pole beans.

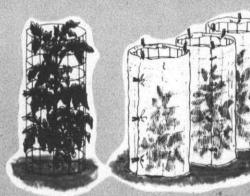

The pots of green onions were a great success. We planted sets, thinned them out when they were in the green onion stage and finally harvested dry bulbs-6 to a pot.

The potatoes (see illustration) were planted a third of the way down in the peck basket. As they grew we mulched the vines with peat moss. The potatoes formed on the surface of the soil and in the peat moss. New potatoes were easily "picked" when the potato vines bloomed. The final harvest was satisfactory but not astonishing. This year we will plant in a bushel basket.

Plant breeders have worked out many special varieties of value to the container gardener. Bush cucumbers are adapted to the confines of a box. The 'Patio Pik' and 'Salty' varieties bear close to the base of the plant. Of course, if a trellis is attached to the box, the vigorous vining types can be trained to grow vertically.

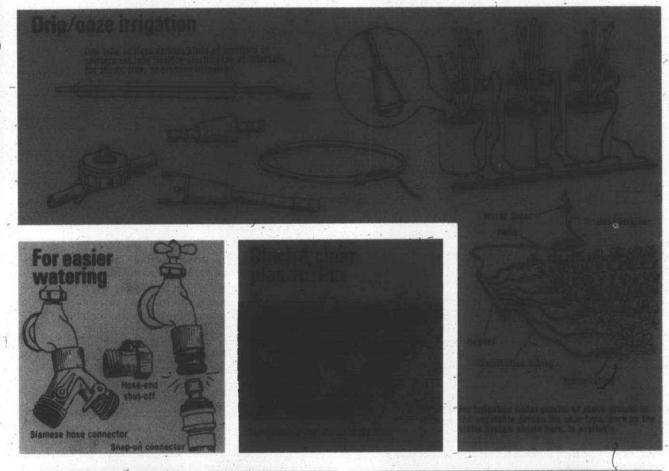

'Rot your leaves in it . . ."

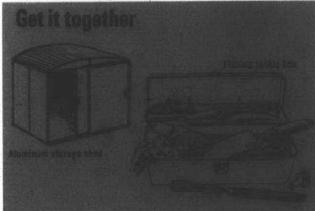

a better buy than two stamped-out cheap ones. With the basic tools, basic manufacturing quality is all important.

Many of the garden aids offered the modern gardener - the items the ancients and the old-timers would have liked to have - have a usefulness only recently appreciated. The good gardeners make use of black and clear plastic films as a mulch, and for frost protection. The drip-ooze irrigation systems pay off in bigger yields of vegetables and fruit. Shredders have made composting a simple affair. Portable power tools have taken the drudgery out of maintenance.

Gardening aids and the wary shopper

In buying gardening equipment, when is a bargain a bargain? Consider the basic tools — shovel, rake and hoe. They haven't changed much over the years. Gardening was centuries old before the machine age. Designers haven't tampered much with the shovel and rake. The hoe continues to be of varied shapes. There are hoes, like the Hula-

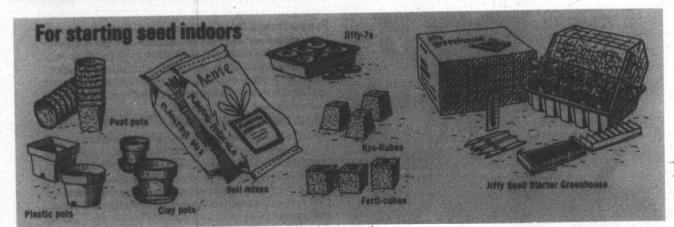

Hoe and the Dutch Hoe which force the gardener into shallow cultivation.

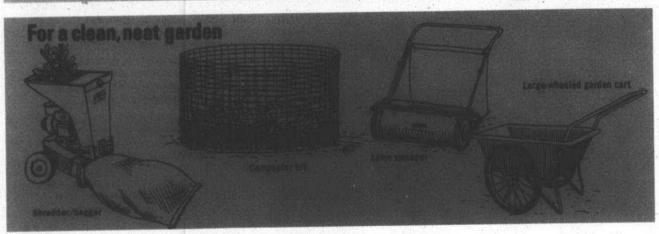

When it comes to the basic tools of gardening, and we include the pruning tools — saw, shears and loppers — we think that the gardener should be wary of bargains. One quality forged shovel is planted to furnish the ingredients for spaghetti sauce, contains marjoram, thyme, garlic, chives, parsley, and basil.

Let your nursery be your greenhouse. When three or four plants are all you need for a generous supply of squash, peppers or tomatoes, it makes good sense to buy the plants. You not only save weeks of time, but with strong transplants the danger of early insect damage is lessened. Today even such vegetables as beans, squash and other vegetables that were direct seeded are available as transplants. Typical advice for squash to the commercial grower goes like this: "Sow direct using 3-inch Jiffy-Pots or Jiffy-7's. Saleable in 3-5 weeks. Sell bush types in Jiffy-Tubs in spring with 6 to 8-week-old plants bearing fruit."

For trouble-free production of vegetables in containers, grow them in a disease-free planter mix such as Jiffy-Mix, Redi-Earth, Super Soil. These light weight synthetic soils provide the fast drainage needed in container soils and all the nutrients required for vigorous growth. Follow label directions and you can't miss. (See page 5 for more about soils for containers.)

All About Vegetables

Whether you are growing vegetables on a 4-foot wide balcony or on an acre, this book is a trustworthy guide. Next time you visit your garden store leaf through its pages.

As the book says: "There is a world of difference between just growing vegetables and vegetable gardening. When you think vegetable gardening, a sequence of operations comes to mind. Planning what to grow in the space you have. What varieties? When should we start? When is the first harvest? How can we stretch the harvest with a succession of plantings? It's a mind-bending exercise in juggling space and time.

"Growing vegetables without a conventional vegetable garden and without trying to supply vegetables in quantity offers many options: vegetables in the flower border, vegetables in boxes and tubes."

A title in the Ortho Book Series available at your Ortho dealer.

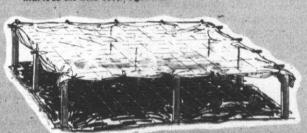

"For row crops I use a half-cylinder lying down, with the points stuck through (the plastic) on one side, and drape the plastic over to the other side where it's heid on with clothespins. That way I can fold the stuff back when it's warm, and throw it back over easily when it's cool . . ."

"Try doing that with peas, and then let the peas climb the wire as they grow."

"Use it to hold the black plastic down . . . hold your mulches in place with it so the wind doesn't get them."

"The combination of black plastic on the bottom and clear plastic overhead really generates and stores some heat!"

Water lilies and water chestnuts in portable pools

A visit with Carol and Bill Uber, the moving spirits of the Van Ness Water Gardens, in Upland, California, changed our minds about growing water plants in containers on terrace balconies, decks, and patios.

We forgot for the moment the "tranquil beauty" of the large water garden, the sound of moving water, and worked with a two-foot round tub.

For our portable tub we used a plastic pool—a 25 gallon affair, 21 inches wide and 19 inches deep. (For sale at the Van Ness Gardens for $10.)
This blue container is shown in the photograph above. These containers can be dropped into more decorative half wine barrels, with heavy casters for greater portability.

Two types of pools were planted. One to feature water lilies; one for water-grown edibles. All plants were grown in gallon-size plastic or clay pots and arranged in the tub at varying heights needed for each type of plant.

Hardy water lilies can be planted February through October, in frost-free areas. In wintercold areas plant in April to August.

The tender, tropical lilies should be set out only after nights get warm and stay warm-May 15 to September 30, depending upon your location.

Winter care

Van Ness Water Gardens advises these methods of winter care: "Hardy lilies may be wintered over safely in the pool if the roots do not freeze. In extremely cold climates cover with boards and give an extra-covering of straw. Should it be advisable to lift the lilies before cold weather arrives, they may be stored in a cool cellar. Be careful that they do not dry out or dry rot will attack them and they will be lost.

"In mild climates they may be left in the pool all winter. We do not guarantee them to live over, but almost without exception they do in the mild winter areas of Southern California. In May get in and see that the bulb is one-half inch under the soil and crown (rough) side up. In cold climates take the bulb out after the lily has gone dormant. Store in a can of moist sand in frost free cellar or garage until May. Plant. Tropicals have so many blooms and are so beautiful they are worth this little extra work."

We like what Bill Heritage says about the hardy lilies in one of our favorite reference books: The Lotus Book of Water Gardening (available from Van Ness Water Gardens, 2460 North Euclid Avenue, Upland, CA 91786. $3.25 postpaid.) "The elegant, almost exotic, beauty of water lilies creates the impression that they must surely need much expertise to grow, and coddling to survive the rigours of winter. In fact they require no winter protection whatever throughout Britain and in most parts of North America. Their constitutions, far from being delicate, are robust enough to survive considerable abuse.

"The hardy water lilies are perennial; growth disappears each autumn and is renewed every spring, year after year. They dislike shade, violent currents and cold mains or spring water. A(I they need to flower abundantly summer after summer is correct planting, a comfortable depth of water for the variety and a place in the sun. The more sun you give them the more flowers they'll give you."

Thatch is the brown layer of old stems, leaves, and roots that piles up between the soil and tops of some grasses. It reduces grass vigor and increases the chance of disease. For small areas remove thatch with a special rake. For larger areas, rent a power rake.

One of the main reasons for lawns that refuse to absorb water is soil compaction. The best way to open up compact soil is to rent a power aerating machine. It lifts out plugs of soil and drops them on the lawn. Rake the plugs up, apply ORTHO Lawn Food and some peat moss on top of the lawn, rake into the holes, and water in.

Certain broad-leaf weeds are easier to kill with ORTHO Chickweed and Clover Killer. It does the best job in fall and early spring when temperatures stay below 65°. Use it for chickweed, clover, oxalis, English lawn daisy, spotted spurge—persistent troublemakers all. Try to catch them at their vulnerable stages. That's early spring for spurge (identifiable by its small spotted leaves and milkfilled stems); young seedlings are just starting out then. Chickweed gets going in fall and should be treated soon after.

Many weeds start each spring about the same time as lawn growth. You can discourage them two ways with ORTHO Weed and Feed 25-3-7. This encourages a lawn to grow dense and crowd out weeds. At the same time, weed killer in the product gets rid of broad-leaf weeds already there.

For crab grass. Its life cycle goes something like this. Seeds leftover from the previous summer start sprouting in early spring. By midsummer, the weeds stand out as coarse, broad eyesores. They then mature, bloom, set seeds, and die in fall.

If your timing's good you can prevent crab grass with one treatment of Ortho Crab Grass Control Plus Lawn Food 18-3-6. This lays a chemical barrier over the soil and kills sprouting seeds as they come up through it. Apply just before weeds sprout in late April. Earlier applications may be leached out by heavy rains.

If you are re-seeding an entire lawn or just some bare spots, the product to use is Ortho Spring Seeding Crab Grass Control Plus Fertilizer 18-3-6. You can apply it the same day you seed the lawn. It prevents crab grass germination, but doesn't interfere with lawn seed germination. It also provides a regular feeding to the lawn.

You can get rid of already-sprouted crab grass with ORTHO Crab Grass & Dandelion Killer. Make 2 applications, 7-10 days apart. If possible, spray before the big surge of growth in late spring. The bigger the weeds become, the harder they are to kill.

For poa annua. Also called annual bluegrass, this yellow-green grass can take over big sections of a lawn. Its roots are so shallow that patches turn brown and die with the first breath of hot, dry weather in June or July. And the seed heads in spring (no matter how low you mow) give the lawn a grayish cast. The seeds scatter in summer, then sprout the next fall or spring.

You might as well resign yourself to following a 2-year program to get rid of poa annua. Apply ORTHO Crab Grass Control Plus Lawn Food 18-3-6 before the fall seed-sprouting season. Apply again in early spring before weed seed germinate. One more treatment the next fall usually winds things up.

For other grassy weeds. Nutgrass, recognizable by its triangular stems, sends up new growth from bulby roots no matter how many times you pull or mow off the tops. ORTHO Crab Grass Killer gets at the roots by way of translocation from the foliage. Complete control calls for some persistence on your part. Start spraying in June; repeat 2-3 times at monthly intervals until no new growth comes back.

When you have a little of everything. One product combines the wherewithal for controlling two of our most troublesome weeds—ORTHO Crab Grass & Dandelion Killer. Also use it for nutgrass, plantain, knotweed, purslane, and pennywort, and many other broad-leaf weeds. Try to spray the weeds while they're small, before midsummer heat fattens and toughens them.

Fall feeding is the year's most important. In late summer or early fall, your lawn notices the same pleasant chill in the evening air that you do; and its growth perks up. Stored food is low after the hard summer and should be replenished. Grass in fall produces less top growth than in spring but develops more roots and tillers. Fertilizing then goes towards building up the foundation. A fall-fed lawn stays green and healthy longer into cold weather, starts out stronger next spring.

The ability of ORTHO Lawn Food 24-4-8 to work fast pays off during fall feeding. It goes into action even after the air and soil have begun to cool off. (The same pattern holds in early spring while the air and soil haven't begun to warm up.)

New life for old lawns

Normal use of a lawn area tends to compact the soil. You will notice some hard spots or the lawn won't take a normal watering without excessive run-off.

Air and nutrients must be able to penetrate every square foot of soil. The first job in renovating a lawn is to improve soil drainage and relieve any soil compaction.

A thorough "aerifying" job will do it. Power aerators that remove cores of soil ½ to ¾-inch in diameter to a depth of 4 to 6 inches can be rented in many areas.

The core holes permit air, water and fertilizer to enter deeply into the soil and greatly increases root development. Best time for aerating is in early spring before the first fertilizer application. Grasses on heavy soils are given new life with an annual "aerifying" treatment.

Sod webworms?

The sod webworm spends the winter as a partially grown larva, several inches deep in the soil. In spring they move to the soil surface and start chewing on the grass, cutting grass blades just above the thatch line. The close clipped grass appears as a brown patch about the size of a softball. If the infestation is heavy, large areas of grass may be damaged severely, or destroyed in only a few days.

By late June and early July adult moths emerge and soon begin to scatter eggs at random in the grass. The second generation appearing in late July and August cause the most damage.

Control with either ORTHO Sod Webworm Control or ORTHO DIAZINON Insect Spray. Apply in the evening just before the worms start to feed. Since several generations may come over the summer, repeat treatment as called for on labels.

Here are some hints for hunting sod webworms: Take a flashlight and look for them feeding at night. Or flood damaged spots with water; any black spotted, gray caterpillars that come up out of tunnels are probably sod webworms. An abundance of birds interested in the lawn usually means that webworms are there.

The egg laying of the webworm adult moth occurs in the evening. The moth flies erratically over the lawn scattering its eggs. This is the only moth that folds its wings just before it lights on the grass.

Grubs?

Grubs have much different work habits than the sod webworm. Instead of attacking the top growth, they feed on roots several inches deep. Part the grass and examine it closely for signs of chewing worms or grubs. Look way down deep around the runners and at the base of the blades. Search for chewed leaves, silvered leaves, transparent leaves. Look also for webbing. With a bit of luck you may actually expose one of the critters himself. But, in truth, you see the damage much more often than you see the damagers. Grubs can chew off grass roots so cleanly that patches of lawn can be lifted like a doormat. If all the evidence points to grubs, treat the entire lawn with ORTHO DIAZINON Insect Spray. Check the label.

Controlling weeds

Even in the best of lawns, weed seeds may blow in, ride in with birds or on people's shoes. Pull them or spot-kill with WEED-B-GON Jet Weeder while they're small. If many weeds crop up or if you're upgrading a neglected lawn, you'll want one of these larger-scale controls.

For broad-leaf weeds. Most of these—such as dandelion, plantain, knotweed—share certain traits that make them susceptible to WEED-B-GON Lawn Weed Killer. This spray affects one of the two botanically different plant groups (broad-leaf plants): and it ignores the other group (narrow-leaf plants). So you can see why it singles out broad-leaf weeds in a grass lawn.

Wild onion and wild garlic don't look like broadleaf weeds but WEED-B-GON Bar kills them; they're so tenacious it may take two or three applications to clear them out completely. This weed killer comes in a waxy bar. Simply drag it across weedy patches.

The edibles

We demonstrated plantings of the edible water plants in one tub to show the variety that can be grown. For a measurable harvest each should have a half wine barrel size container.

Bill Uber estimated size of harvest if each type of plant was given a 25 gallon container. "A planting of lotus in April will produce five or six edible roots when harvested during their dormant period in October or November of the second year. The roots of the lotus can be French-fried, like potatoes.

"A tub of 30 to 40 Chinese chestnuts will grow sedge-like, numerous hollow stems to 2 feet or more, from bulbs in the first year. Then, when dormant, you can expect to harvest about a hundred chestnuts. A few from the harvest should be saved for a second year planting.

"An early planting of 5 or 6 Violet Stemmed Taro (Xanthosoma violacea) in April will produce arrowhead, 5 to 7 inch, bluish green leaves on violet stems about 2 feet high, then go dormant about six months later. Harvest during this dormancy will yield enough tubers for about two dishes of poi. (Only the tubers are edible.)

"Watercress gives an almost instant crop."

Pool balance

The Ubers have worked out ecosystems for pool gardens, in which plants, fish, and snails live in harmony to keep the pool water clean and free of insects. Four elements are needed:

(1) Oxygenating grasses, most important in replenishing evaporated oxygen. Anacharis (Elodea) is the most used and best for average containers.

- (2) Water lilies are essential. Their pads provide surface coverage, preventing loss of oxygen and keeping the water cooler.
- (3) Snails for eating algae, fish wastes and decaying matter which encourages algae growth.
- (4) Fish for eating such pests as aphids, flies, mosquito larvae, and other insects. (A caution, over-feeding fish with commercial fish food will drastically change the water balance.)

It takes time for the plants to get established and begin performing their special function as well as adapt to the particular conditions of your pool. A final word of advice is—patience.

When your house is your garden ...you learn about light

If you live in a garden with mature shrubs and trees, you (if you are a good gardener) are forced to measure the play of light throughout the seasons. How does the garden receive the morning sun—the noon-day sun and the evening sun?

Plants indoors are in an artificial environment, considerably different from their native habitat. They receive much less light, usually from only one direction, and the period of darkness needed for rest is of a shorter duration due to home night lighting. Since plants come to us from areas ranging from dense tropical jungles to sunny, arid deserts, they differ greatly in light-intensity and light-duration needs. When a plant is transported from its native habitat or a controlled greenhouse to the indoors, these differences must be respected or the plant will not thrive.

To a plant, light is life. It provides the energy required for photosynthesis, the manufacture of a plant's food. This energy stimulates plants to convert water and atmospheric carbon dioxide into carbohydrates. With these carbohydrates the plant produces new growth: foliage, roots, stems and blooms. The presence of optimum light fosters luxuriant leaf growth and flowering. With the absence of light photosynthesis stops. Insufficient light impairs photosynthesis, Conversely, excess light or exposure to too much direct sun, can harm some plants. Therefore we must select the right plants for the amount of available light, or learn some ways to provide more (or less) light through supplemental means.

Plants for a Northern Exposure, growing in clear glass, top left: a. Spathiphyllum 'Clevelandii' (Spathe flower); b. Cissus rhombifolia (Grape Ivy); c. Adiantum (Maidenhair fern); d. Aglaonema (Chinese evergreen); e. Philodendron panduiforme (Fiddle-leaf philodendron); f. Dracaena massangeana (Corn plant); g. Chamaedorea elegans (Dwarf parlor palm); h. Scindapsus aureus (Pothos); Dieffenbachia amoena (Dumb cane); and j. Ficus pumila (Creeping fig).

Estimating the amount of light available in a room is essential in order to place plants in the proper setting. Light meters can be employed to take light intensity measurements (footcandles) in your home. Numerous charts, plant lists and books are available with suggested light intensity ranges for plants grown indoors. Retail plantsmen should be able to help you select plants that will grow in your situation.

As the sun performs its daily ritual the light conditions within a room are constantly changing. A spot that was in shadow moments before comes into full light as the sun moves through the sky and enters the house from a different position through windows, doors, or skylights. Another area that was in filtered sunlight becomes shaded as light peeps in from north, south, east, or west. These fluid conditions created by changing intensity and direction of sunlight from various household exposures at various times of the day have an enormous impact on plants. Only four minutes of direct sunlight on a plant provides radiant energy equal to one full hour of bright skylight. Direct morning sun provides fifteen times as much light as the indirect skylight. The light admitted indoors is also influenced by various architectural features -overhangs, awnings, adjacent buildings--and nature-trees, hills, clouds. The four exposures, however, offer some degree of similarity in light quality in all types of homes. Study the patterns of light movement through your home to determine choice positions for plants.

Plants for a Southern Exposure, growing in terracotta, top right: a. Beaucarnea recurvata (Pony Tail palm); b. Citrus mitis (Calamondin orange); c. Echeveria; d. Nandina domestica (Heavenly bamboo); e. Echeveria; f. and g. Coleus blumei; h. Rhododendron species (Azalea); i. Coffea arabica (Coffee); j. Sedum morganianum (Donkey's tail); k. Kalanchoe blossfeldiana; and l. Echinopsis multiplex (Barrel cactus).

The questions they asked about lawns

The options in establishing a lawn in the North are many. There's the option of sowing a grass seed of your selection or a mixture, of laying sod for an instant lawn, and zoysia in the mild winter areas.

Which grass is best?

The perfect grass-disease free in all situations, shade tolerant, draught tolerant, wear resistanthas not yet been found. The best answer the seed companies have come up with for the homeowner is "mixtures." When you shop for seed, read the label. The packager has put together 4 or 5 grasses-one or two improved bluegrasses, red and Chevings fescues, and perhaps the new turf-type Tyes. By mixing several varieties you get insurance against failure. If a portion of the lawn area does not receive enough direct sun for Kentucky bluegrass, the fescues will thrive. If one of the Kentucky bluegrasses succumbs to a disease, the bluegrass partner will take over. It is possible to start with a mixture of 5 grasses and find after a few years that 3 of the grasses have disappeared.

Two types of seed mixtures are available. The "picture," show-off front lawn, and the play area lawn. The seed company's objective in packaging seed for the picture lawn is to bring together the fine leafed modern Kentucky bluegrasses with other fine leafed grasses to produce a perfect blend in color and texture.

The sod producers of "instant" lawns have the same objective—to produce a sod of mixed grass blended to broaden the spectrum of adaptability of the modern bluegrasses.

The requirements of grasses for play areas trade off the appearance of the fine leafed grasses for such practical advantages as lower cutting height and greater wearability.

Turf-type ryegrass

The growers of the turf-type ryegrasses—'Manhattan,''Yorktown,' 'Pennfine', and 'Game'—are finding a place in both the fine-leafed mixtures and in the play area mixes.

Not long ago the common ryegrasses were not looked on as proper companions for the improved bluegrasses. They, the common perennial types, were and are found in the utility mixes and appreciated for their ability to outdistance weeds and weedy grasses in a new turf grass planting.

With the introduction of the turf-type perennial ryegrasses, notably 'Manhattan' and 'Pennfine', a new chapter was written in the history of lawn and mixtures. The new perennial ryegrasses were bred specifically for soft fibers, to provide clean cutting. When mowed, they do not have the frayed ends that give a turf containing common ryegrass a brownish cast.

In addition to their remarkable mowability, these ryegrasses have narrower leaves than the common ryegrass and blend well with the bluegrasses.

What and when to feed?

L'awn people have a convenient way of measuring a grass's fertilizer needs. They talk about the pounds of nitrogen needed per year for each 1,000 square feet of that kind of grass. Common Kentucky bluegrass needs 4 pounds of nitrogen. Because of their extra vigor, the improved bluegrasses need from 6 to 8 pounds. Bent needs 5 to 7 pounds.

If you follow label directions, ORTHO Lawn Food 24-4-8 puts on 1 pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet. So... you can quickly see how many applications it takes to supply a lawn for its whole season: 4 for bluegrass, 6 to 8 for improved bluegrasses, 5 to 7 for bent.

We'd like to suggest spacing applications something like this:

For bluegrass... feed in April and June and then again in September and October.

For improved bluegrasses . . . feed at least once in April, May, June, September, October, and November.

For bent . . . feed on April, May, June, September and October.

'Burpee's Big Early! (62 days). One of the earliest of the large-fruited tomatoes. A heavy bearer all season long, some fruits weighing up to 1 pound. 'Fantastic' (65-70 days). Has produced high yields of medium-sized fruit over a long season. A tall grower, indeterminate in growth.

Like long shots?

Most suggestions for fall and winter harvests for gardeners in winter cold areas are restricted to the cool-weather vegetables. And most of them benefit from a good frost.

How about the gardener who is willing to gamble on the first frost date of fall and plant an extra late crop of sweet corn or beans; for this breed of gardeners, one win is worth two losses. Dealing with a fall frost that varies as much as 30 days encourages the gambling spirit. In one of our test gardens the weather bureau says that October 30 is our normal first frost date. Last year we bet that it would be later and with an August 15 planting we could enjoy fresh corn and snap beans for Thanksgiving. We picked corn on that holiday and into December.

After the harvest

To give each vegetable the optimum temperature, humidity, and air circulation needed for long storage life is not easy. The fact is, that even in the coldest climate, the right storage temperatures are hard to find.

Most vegetables and fruits, however, can be stored under home conditions if you can provide two situations: cold and humid, and cool and dry. The cold can be provided by an old refrigerator that can be lowered to 33°. Any of the green vegetables, such as lettuce, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, broccoli, kale, etc., can be stored for a month or longer if placed in a plastic bag with a few holes punched in it, and then placed in the storage refrigerator.

The driest, cool (50-60°) spot in your garage or basement provides the right storage for winter squash. They keep best if placed on a ventilated shelf, with a little air space between them.

For the following crops, low temperatures (32-40°) and high humidities are best: beets, carrots, celery, celeriac, kohlrabi, parsnips, rutabagas, salsify, and turnips.

Green tomatoes: Warm temperatures (55-70°), and little air circulation.

Potatoes should be stored at 45-50°, away from all light. Above 50° and potatoes will begin sprouting and shriveling. Below 40° potatoes develop a sweet taste as the starch turns to sugar.

Of the four light orientations, THE NORTHERN EXPOSURE receives the least light and the least heat year-round. But northern light is dependable, remaining fairly constant throughout the day, with less intensity variation than there is with the other three exposures. Because of the low light in north windows, maintaining healthy plants can be a challenge. There is, however, a wide variety of low-light tolerant foliage plants suitable for this exposure. Plants grown especially for their green foliage will tolerate north light, even if they prefer brighter light. Colored foliage plants frequently lose some of their color with a northern exposure. Seasonal variation in THE SOUTHERN EXPOS-URE is greater than any other. Fortunately for the indoor gardener the lower winter sun streams across the room for most of the daylight hours, creating a winter "greenhouse" in your southern rooms. In summer, when the sun is farther north, the sun rises at a sharp angle in the morning and is high in the sky by noon, consequently there is direct sunlight only immediately in front of a southern window at mid-day. In fact, if there is a wide overhang of the eaves outside, the summer sun may not directly enter the room at all. THE EASTERN EXPOSURE receives direct morning sun from sunrise to near mid-day, registering bright light-intensity readings. As the morning progresses, the direct sun recedes from the room. This is hastened if there are eaves or other outside overhangs. The sunlight in the east room is cooler than southern or western exposures because the house has absorbed less radiant heat, tolerate an eastern exposure, the majority of

Most shade-loving plants will take some direct sun from an eastern exposure, particularly early in the morning. The early rays of the sun act as an alarm clock, awakening the plants to their day's taskphotosynthesis. Many of the most successful gardeners automatically try an eastern exposure for any plant about which light is in question.

THE WESTERN EXPOSURE receives about the same amount of light as the eastern exposureabout four hours of direct sunlight daily. It also has the highest summer temperatures of any exposure. The sustained heat in a western window may kill many plants, since photosynthesis does not occur at temperatures above 85°F: Cacti, other succulents and annuals are among the few plant types that can usually take a hot western windowsill environment. For protection, other plants should be moved two or three feet back into the room where less intense late afternoon rays will do. little harm. Or it may be necessary to use some sort of curtaining to filter out the sun's scorching rays. Through the year as the angle of the sun changes, so does the amount of light entering the house from the various exposures. It may be necessary to mobilize the indoor garden to move in and out of sunlight as the plants require. Large specimens can be placed on small wooden platforms with casters for easy moving. Small plants can be made more mobile by grouping them on a perambulator or some type of cart to roll to find a place in (or out) of the sun as needed. Hanging plants on pulleys allow them to be raised or lowered into more sun in winter or away from too much summer sun. Swinging brackets mounted on the window frame let you move a plant into the sunlight and even out through an open window to enjoy stronger light as well as a breath of fresh air.

Modifying indoor light

Very few people find too much light to be a problem. Most indoor spaces need more light for successful gardening. Let's consider some ways of adding more light for growing indoors.

Ideally, additional natural light can be gained by opening the home to the sun. The major goal of the indoor plant gardener is to get the most use of windows as openings for natural light. Modern architecture has broken away from the traditional rectangular shell that has comprised the bulk of our houses and apartments. With new forms have come new windows-new ways to admit light. When planning a future structure or a renovation, consider adding more windows. Clerestory windows are strip windows, oriented horizontally, high in the wall. They provide better-distributed light than conventional windows because they throw the light farther into the room. Window walls permit considerably more light to enter than any other kind. They also let you merge the indoor and outdoor plantings. Living curtains of hanging plants are replacing traditional fabric coverings for window walls. Bay windows protrude beyond the wall plane to gather up more light, Extended windows can be constructed from greenhouse components to provide a miniature conservatory indoors.

Skylights can bring light deep into a home to provide life-giving sunlight to areas that otherwise couldn't even support low-light foliage plants. Skylights are widely available in both glass and acrylic plastic, in various translucencies and tints. Most home installations are fairly inexpensive and can be made from stock sizes from a dealer's shelves.

The fireplace can become a summer garden. Here 'plant growth' fluorescents are installed inside the chimney. Aluminized Mylar panels cover sides and back for extra reflectance.

We constructed a mobile case that can be used against the wall or floated in the room as a divider. Hidden lights—both fluorescent and incandescent shine through the glass shelves.

Roots of 'Purple Top' are crisp when 4 inches across. Turnips and rutabagas store well in the soil for winter use. (When stored in the basement or garage they give off odors.)

Squash

Winter squash varieties are important to the 12 month gardener. They can be stored for a long period if allowed to fully mature. Pick them before hard frost. Cut stems from the vine. Fruit without stems does not store well. Fruits are ripe when they are hard to the fingernail.

Winter squash are divided into three classes:

Acorn or Danish Type: 'Table King' (80 days), a bush type; 'Table Queen Ebony' (85 days), large Maxima type (small to large squash): 'Gold Nugget' (85 days) small fruit, bush type vine; 'Buttercup' (100 days) medium size fruit, large vine; 'Hubbard' (110 days) large fruit, large vine; 'Banana' (110 days) large fruit, large vine.

Butternut type: The variety 'Butternut' (95 days) produces small fruits on a large vine. 'Butternut' squash can be used as a substitute for sweet potatoes and pie pumpkins. When parboiled, mashed, and seasoned with salt, pepper, and butter, it rates equal to mashed sweet potatoes.

Disease resistant varieties

The very best way to avoid crop failure due to diseases is to plant disease resistant varieties. The number of resistant varieties is increasing each year. Look for cucumber varieties which are resistant to scab, mosaic, downy mildew, and powdery mildew; muskmelons resistant to Fusarium wilt and powdery mildew; cabbages resistant to virus yellows.

Tomatoes in containers

Growing tomatoes in containers offers gardeners some special advantages: 1) If low summer temperatures are the rule, and tardy ripening the result, placing tomatoes in containers in the warmest spot in the garden-as against a south wall -can increase the amount of heat the tomatoes receive, and 2) if early fall rains or frost put a premature end to the harvest, the containers can be moved to a spot with overhead protection, or the entire plant, container and all, can be covered with a large plastic bag.

The following list contains varieties specially developed for container growing:

'Tiny Tim' (55 days from transplant). The midget of the group. Only 15 inches tall with 34-inch 1 scarlet fruit. Give it a 6-inch pot or hanging basket, or plant two in an 8-inch pot.

'Small Fry' VF (55 days). Vigorous grower to 30 inches bearing 1-inch fruits in profusion. Best in a 12-inch pot, or box, with trellis. Beautiful in a hanging basket.

Burpee's 'Pixie Hybrid' (55 days). Grows 14 to 18 inches tall. Fruits 1% inches. Grow in an 8-inch pot or hanging basket. Will produce indoors in winter in sunny window.

'Patio Hybrid' F (70 days). Extra sturdy, main stem is like the trunk of a small tree. Grow to 24-30 inches. Needs no staking until heavy with its 2-inch fruit. Best in a 12-inch pot or tub.

'Tumblin Tom' VFN (48 days). A new introduction in the hanging basket class. Heavy yield of 11/2 to 2-inch fruits. Vine's 20 to 24 inches tall.

'Presto' (60 days). The small-leaved, rather open vine grows to about 2 feet tall with a heavy yield of half-dollar size fruits. Grow in a 3 to 5 gallon container with support of a short stake.

Tomato varieties

Soil diseases of tomatoes build up when grown in the same soil for more than one season. In the small home garden there's little chance of finding new soil every year. That's one reason why plant breeders are developing disease resistant varieties.

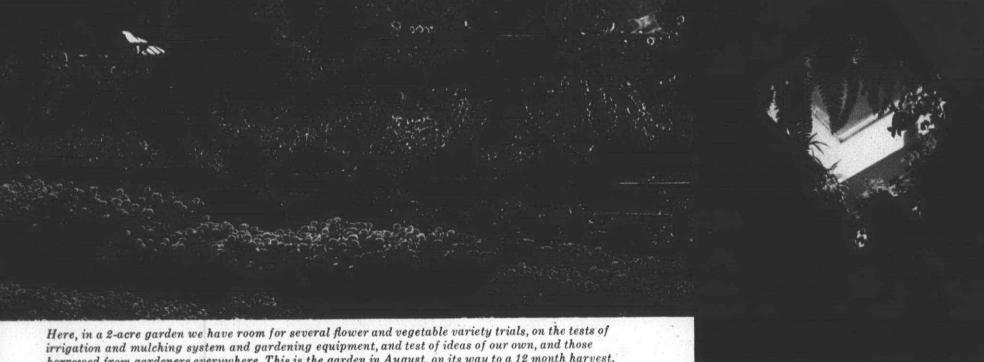

In the following chart we indicated soil and disease resistance by the letters "V"-Verticillium, "F"-Fusarium, "N"-Nematodes, Also charted is their growing habit-determinate, semi-determinate, or indeterminate. The determinate are the bush type, generally 3 feet or less high. The indeterminate are the tall growers, usually grown on stakes, trellises, or in wire cages. The number of "days to harvest" refers to the number of days from setting out transplants to harvest.

If you are not troubled by the tomato diseases and have good luck with most varieties, these are good early season producers in disease-free soil, and are worth a trial.

'Early Girl' introduced two years ago, lost herdisease tolerance along the way, but held her popularity as a good, early producer. Rated at 45 to 55 days from transplant to harvest. 'Early Girl' produces medium-sized fruit on indeterminate, tallgrowing vines. Unlike many "early" varieties, it continues to bear fruit throughout the summer.

borrowed from gardeners everywhere. This is the garden in August, on its way to a 12 month harvest.

Plan a 12 months harvest

Many are the gardeners who have taken advantage of excess production to prolong the harvest through freezing, curing, drying, pickling, and storing. A few have taken the trouble to plan and execute a meaningful "12-months harvest." The 12 monthers make the garden produce both earlier and later. They learn the meaning of succession planting so that no square foot of ground is ever idle. They take advantage of the multiple planting dates that make for an extended harvest. And they choose varieties for their storing potential.

One 12-monther in Michigan reminds us that ground storage can be an important part of the 12-months garden: "Letting Mother Nature store vegetables is no new trick. Come late October, when winter sets into Michigan, we have an ample supply of root and other crops left in the ground to see us through to the next year's first harvest. We give carrots, leeks, onions, salsify, Jerusalem artichokes, and parsnips, a few inches of mulch to keep the ground from freezing (snow is a bonus mulch) and dig them out when needed. And, they are as fresh as can be."

Keep production in high gear

Yields of peas, beans, summer squash, and cucumbers will be drastically reduced if some of the fruits are allowed to ripen. Let one cucumber get fully ripe and the set of new fruits stops. Keep all fruits picked as they reach usable size. A few old pods of peas or beans left on the vine will reduce the set of new ones.

smooth going. Fill the raised bed with a soil mixture of 1/3 garden loam, 1/3 sand, and 1/3 compost or peat moss. The raised bed reduces cracking and decay problems due to excess water. Digging is no problem in the light soil mix. Given the protection of a few inches of mulch (leaves or straw) the root crops will store in the soil. Brush back the snow and mulch, and lift as needed.

We've long been in favor of raised beds for other reasons as well: 1) If the raised bed is filled with a light-weight soil mix, it will never be waterlogged, even though the water beneath the bed drains poorly, 2) when spring weather has been wet and cool, the soil in the raised bed will warm up and be ready to plant weeks before regular garden soil can be seeded or worked, 3) protection from frost, or birds, is an easy addition to a 4-foot wide

In our own experiment gardens we've had success with simple throw-over, clear plastic covers over raised beds to speed germination in early spring. For best results, keep the soil level 2 inches below the top of the headers of the raised beds. Cut the clear plastic a couple of feet longer than the bed itself. Two 2"x2" stakes stapled at opposite ends of the plastic sheet will keep it in place, and allow for speedy removal in warm weather. Two or three slats placed across the bed will keep the plastic cover from touching the soil. Seeds planted in this raised bed "mini-greenhouse" will germinate much faster than in the open soil.

Beets

For storage the variety 'Long Season' or 'Winter Keeper' gets the nod. The beets will grow to ¾ the size of your head-quite unbelievable-and remain sweet and non-fibrous right into spring.

The best storage varieties are the late maturing pungent onions-those with short, shriveled necks, such as 'Early Yellow Globe' and 'Ebenezer'. Onions will keep well if the necks and skin are allowed to dry thoroughly.

Turnip

Harvest early varieties, such as 'Tokyo Cross' (35 days) before they get pithy-usually 2 inches in diameter. Sow 'Purple Top White Globe' (60 days) for fall and winter use.

Top: Recessed space for a hanging garden was built into the light well between the ceiling and the roof under a plastic bubble skylight. Middle: A combination of indoor/outdoor mirrors mounted around windows reflect light from several directions onto indoor garden. Lower: We knocked out an east wall, added three feet and a large window and covered the walls with aluminized Mylar. Light-intensity tripled.

Some of our suggestions for increasing natural light are self-evident, but they may make the literal difference between night and day in a room full of plants. Open the curtains, shades and shutters each morning, or upon retiring at night so that plants can take advantage of the sun's first rays. Prune outdoor plants to admit more light indoors. Keep windows washed inside and out to gain maximum sunlight. Wash or wipe plant leaves regularly to add considerable light to the plant leaf surface.

Light-hued paint reflects more light than darker tones. Matte white is the most effective and can make the difference of 150 footcandles over a dark room with the same light source. Mirrors and mirrorized walls or screens direct and distribute light to an otherwise dark room. Mylar or metalized wall coverings are highly reflective and provide a good method of redistributing light in the darker parts of rooms.

Even if you have made every effort to add more natural light, and there still isn't enough, or if you have an area without any source of natural light, you can still enjoy indoor gardening. Manmade sun or artificial lighting can make a garden bloom in dark places where you would never expect to find plants.

For years artificial light gardeners have experimented with mixtures of incandescent and fluorescent bulbs to provide both the foliage-producing blue light rays and the red and far-red rays required of blooming plants. Today there are "plant-growth" and "wide-spectrum" lamps on the market that concentrate on the emission of blue and red rays needed for healthy plant growth. They are available in a wide range of sizes and types. The "wide-spectrum" growth tubes provide a more realistic visual rendition of the true color of a plant than the earlier purplish plant lights. Whether you learn to admit more natural light into your home, or turn on sunlight in a tube, or use both natural and artificial light in combination you will be surprised at the difference proper lighting can make when your house is your garden.

The Facts of Light

The biggest problem for indoor gardeners is providing proper lighting. This book emphasizes the best use of natural light through structural design (skylights, more windows) and modi-fication (curtains, reflectors, color). Helps you learn how to meet the light require-ments of individual plants. There are idede for turning dark into light with man-made sun (artificial light) as a supplement to nature or as a sole energy source.

House Plants Indoors/Outdoors

This book explores this theory in detail, giving you step-by-step fundamentals of growing in containers, with emphasis on moving plants with the season and for enjoyment of color and blooms indoors, outdoors, all around the house.

Historic gardens

If plants are important in your life—"a comfort to both body and soul"—a trip through the historic gardens of Virginia is most rewarding. You can walk through two contrasting landscapes of early America—the village, and the farm of the "landed gentry" In both cases, the restoration of the houses and their furnishings are so well done you can bring their owners to life—the families seem to have just stepped out for a few moments.

But, the difference in landscapes tell different stories. Williamsburg was a village with much of the restrictions of space we find today. In the farm-estates along the James River you see the love of the countryside and what man could do with it.

The Brandon plantation is typical of the magnificent estates or the James River. Between the house and the river, some 300 yards away, lies the garden. Giant hardwoods, the great size of the dwarf box, of the English yew trees, and the old-fashioned shrubs testify to the garden's age. On the south border of the garden there still stands part of a row of pecan trees. These trees are not native to Virginia but were brought from the West Indies, well over 300 years ago. An ancient and gnarled mulberry tree remains, a relic of the silk industry which was to have been established in Jamestown. Wisteria hangs from the tops of ancient trees and the crape myrtle has grown to extraordinary heights.

Colonial Williamsburg

18th century Williamsburg was a carefully planned town with some of the handsomest public buildings to be found in the English colonies. In 1926, when the restoration was started, the colonial town plan was virtually intact, and 88 original buildings from the 18th and early 19th century had survived.

daughter was the mother of Martha Washington. This formal knot garden speaks of pruning shears.

tender and juicy, and sour. The eating quality is only fair, but its kitchen quality is excellent. 'Lodi' is noted for its tendency to overset fruit and must be thinned early. One of the earliest to ripen, late July—early August. An alternate bearer unless properly thinned.

Tydeman's Red.' It is a 'McIntosh' type. Fruits are almost entirely red, shaped like a 'McIntosh' and of good eating quality. The fruits keep in storage much longer than most early varieties. Its virtue is its early ripening when few other varieties are being harvested. Its drawback is its growth habit—the branches are undesirably long and lanky and need to be controlled by pruning. Bears fruit each year. Ripens late August.

'Paulared.' This variety is rated high on several counts. It has eye appeal—a solid red blush with a bright yellow ground color. Excellent, slightly tart flavor, good for eating fresh and in sauce and pies. Its white to cream flesh is non-browning. Tree is strong upright, with good branch structure. It is somewhat susceptible to mildew and fireblight. It ripens about 2 weeks before McIntosh. Although 'Paulared' colors early, it should not be picked until nearly mature, if you want a quality apple.

'Prima.' This new variety is scab resistant—a virtue that dramatically reduces the need for sprays. 'Prima' is a home orchard variety in other ways. It's both a good quality eating apple and a good cooking apple. Bears a good crop every year. Ripens mid-September.

'Jonathan,' An early ripening apple (about mid-September). The standard 'Jonathan' is one of the top varieties produced by commercial growers in the Central States. This is based on its rich flavor and juicy fruit, making it a good choice for snacks, salads, and all culinary uses.

Those making a choice for the home orchard have two new 'Jonathan' sports to consider. 'Jonagold', named for its parents, 'Jonathan' and 'Golden Delicious', is a dual purpose apple. It is good for cooking and its eating quality is among the very best. Stores well. The trees are vigorous and annually productive. Ripens early October. 'Jonamac' is a 'McIntosh' type dessert apple. The eating quality is very good. It's milder in flavor than the 'McIntosh'.' Bears annually. Ripens mid to late September?

'McIntosh.' If you write down the attributes of a great apple—"medium to large fruits, white flesh, sweet, tender and juicy, very good eaten fresh, or in sauce, or in pies, or as a cider variety"—you would have the 'McIntosh'. An annual bearer. Ripens late September.

'Cortland' According to many apple growers, 'Cortland' rates "excellent" as a dual purpose variety. "It's better than 'McIntosh' " they say. It bears heavy annual crops of red striped fruit with white flesh which when exposed to the air is slow to turn brown, making it especially suited for use in salads. Ripens early October.

'Red Delicious.' Everyone knows that 'Red Delicious' is the number one apple in the supermarket. There is no question about the quality of 'Red Delicious' as a dessert and "eating-out-of-hand" apple. Your best choices are the red sports such as 'Wellspur' or 'Royal Red.' Has tendency to produce full crops every other year unless properly thinned. Ripens early to mid-October.

'Melrose.' A cross between 'Jonathan' and 'Delicious'. It resembles 'Jonathan' in color and shape, but is less tart. Rate it high as a home orchard apple for eating out of hand, for use in sauce and pies, and for its exceptional storage qualities. Although red skinned, the 'Melrose' won't polish like a well grown 'Red Delicious'—but you can't taste the polish. Ripens October 20.

'Golden Delicious.' For a great dual purpose, eating and cooking apple, 'Golden Delicious' ranks as high as any. It makes an excellent grade of sauce. 'Golden Delicious' trees bear very young. Ripens mid to late October.

'Mutsu.' A cross of 'Golden Delicious' and the Japanese variety 'Indo.' This newcomer has gained the approval of both the grower and consumer. Large, oblong, greenish fruits develop some yellow color when mature. Excellent flavor (more tart than 'Golden Delicious') when eaten fresh. Rated high for use in sauce and pies, and as a baked apple. 'Mutsu,' unlike 'Golden Delicious', does not shrivel in storage. The tree is a very vigorous, spreading grower. Bears crops annually. Ripens late October.

'Stayman Winesap.' If your season is short you probably should not consider this very late ripener. Where it can be grown, the 'Stayman' is good for cooking or eating fresh. The fruit is juicy with a moderately tart, rich wine-like flavor. Skin "cracking" is one drawback. Will bear fruit annually. Ripens in November.

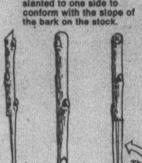

In cold winter areas where some of the favorite apple varieties are subject to winter damage, the hardy varieties developed by the University of Minnesota have an important place.

'Red Baron' is a cross of 'Golden Delicious' and 'Red Duchess.' This big, cherry-red apple is blight resistant with a pleasantly tart flavor.

'Honeygold' boasts a 'Golden Delicious' flavor. The fruit is golden with crisp, juicy, sweet flesh.

For a long keeping red winter apple, the 'Regent' is recommended. Rated excellent for cooking or eating, it retails its fine dessert quality late into winter.

and is used as an interstem with 'Bartlett' grafted on it.

Recommended varieties are 'Bartlett' and 'Clapps Favorite' For good cross pollination, plant both.

Cherries

The 'Montmorency' is the standard tart cherry for canning, preserving, quick-freezing, and, if left to ripen fully, eating right off the tree. Fruit is large (largest of the "pie" or "sour" cherries), bright red, and has excellent quality and flavor. Heavy annual bearer; needs no pollinator. Blooms late enough to escape spring frosts in most areas.

Peaches

The best variety for the home orchard of dwarf trees is the red blushed, yellow freestone 'Red Haven' It ripens early-a month before 'Elberta'with a long harvest season. When it sets a heavy crop, it needs to be well thinned to get full sized fruit. Peaches, unlike apples and pears which bear fruit on long-lived spurs, bear fruit from buds on new wood. To produce new wood the tree is severely pruned after harvest, removing % of the new growth.

Apple varieties

Choosing apple varieties for the home orchard requires some guidelines beyond personal preference. Will the tree bear fruit the first year or two after planting? Is it a "dual purpose" apple-good eating fresh, and in sauce and pies? Will it bear fruit every year or every other year unless properly thinned? Is it unusually susceptible to some disease?

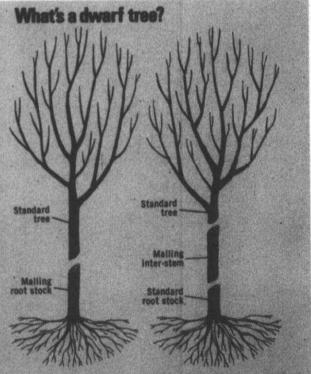

We have kept these guidelines in mind in preparing the following list. Varieties are listed in order of time of ripening.

'Lodi.' A cross of 'Montgomery' and 'Yellow Transparent'. Fruit is medium to large, up to 3 inches in diameter. The skin is light green, and sometimes with a slight orange blush. The flesh is nearly white, with a slightly greenish tinge, fine grained,

A dwarf tree actually consists of 2 or 3 trees. In one type of dwarf, the Malling tree provides the roots, and the standard apple tree provides the fruit. # Only the tree is dwarf

The dwarf trees solve the small space problem. When you see how the experiment stations and pomologists everywhere are handling the dwarf apples and peaches, for example, you realize that the conventional uses of the dwarfs are only a part of the story.

The dwarfs bear fruit a year or two after planting rather than the four or five years required for standard trees.

The dwarfs and semi-dwarfs are easier to care for than standard trees. Spraying and fruit thinning so necessary for usable fruit and consistent bearing is far easier to handle.

The dwarfs can be fitted into the small garden in many ways. They can be grown as a hedge or trained espalier fashion against fence or walls. The apple and the pear are the easiest to handle as an espalier. They produce fruit from short fruit spurs that continue to be productive year after year. No drastic pruning is necessary to produce new fruiting wood as with peaches.

Dwarf and semi-dwarf

In the chart we show the comparative size of trees on the different dwarfing root stocks compared to the standard tree. Actually the size of the dwarf tree varies by the vigor of the scion variety as well as the dwarfing effect of the root stock. For example, on Malling 9 the Red Delicious and McIntosh may be 35% the size of the standard tree, while Golden Delicious is 30%, and Jonathan 25%. On M.M. 106 the Red Delicious will be about 55% of the standard; the Golden Delicious 50%; the Jonathan 45%. Trees on M. 9 grow 6-9 feet; the semi-dwarfs reach 12 to 15 feet.

Close planting

How many apple trees dwarfed on M.9 can be planted in a backyard orchard? On a 25-foot long supporting trellis (wood or wire) you can plant 10 trees, 21/2 feet apart, trained as oblique cordons. The same trellis will handle 6 trees trained as pyramid espalier 4 feet apart, or 3 trees (not trained) 8 feet apart.

The apple and the pear have been used for centuries as prima donna plantings in the garden. The lordly estates in Europe trained these fruits in many espalier patterns-the horizontal Tee, the double and triple candelabra, the vertical and horizontal palmette, and the formal and informal fan.

Looking at the problem of the small-space gardener today, the informal espalier makes good sense. Build a trellis of wood or wire, and plant and prune an apple or pear to grow flat against it, and you have an espalier.

The close planting, as in the variety testing block at the Hood River Experiment Station, can be considered as a type of espalier-the "cordon"

It all goes to prove that you can bring a wide variety of fruit trees into a small garden.

Pollination

When checking out the planting at Hood River with horticulturist W. M. Mellenthin, we were reminded of some of the mistakes a home orchardist might make. We taped his words about cross pollination:

"Never plant just one apple variety. To get really top quality fruit, well sized, and well shaped, cross pollination is necessary. If you want a quality 'Red Delicious' for example, you should also plant a variety that blooms approximately at the same time-a 'Golden Delicious', 'Yellow Newton', or a 'Jonathan!

"The 'Golden Delicious' will pollinate almost any of the standard apple varieties grown. It's a good choice for many other reasons. It's a quality apple for eating fresh and use in sauce and pies. "The one thing to watch out for in the Golden Delicious' is the need for thinning of the young fruits. The variety has a tendency to alternate bearing unless you do a good job of hand thinning early in the season."

Pears

You can train the pear as an espalier.

Most varieties are dwarfed by grafting them on quince rootstock. However, the widely adapted 'Bartlett' makes a poor union with quince and is short lived. 'Old Home' is compatible with quince
