Construction thieves hit hall site

Nearly $6,000 worth of metal roof decking was stolen at the new Canton administration building site by people who, police say, must have connections in the construction field.

Last weekend's theft was the second in less than two weeks at the construction site. More than 200 sheets of metal decking were taken.

Value of the 268 corrugated metal sheets was $5,956, said Dick Recor, job superintendent for R.E. Dailey Co.

"What gets me is that they really had to work to get it out of there," Recor said. "They had to get in the mud and the water and lift those bundles off the two-by-fours that they were sitting on. Now they must've had an outlet for what they got. When I came in to work today I was flabbergasted."

On Nov. 11 about 60 sheets of decking, about 20 feet long and 1½-inch thick, were stolen, apparently by people with a flatbed truck equipped with a crane.

Three tool trailers were broken into at that time, with hand tools, a skill saw and a pipe threader reported stolen.

In that theft, one of the construction workers said he saw a boom truck leaving the site with two large bundles of roof decking at 7:50 a.m., Saturday, Nov. 12 The worker could not give police a license number or the name on the side of the truck but Recor and the Canton police believe the two larcenies were committed by the same group.

In last weekend's theft, dual tire tracks were noted by police but they were "unable to distinguish tire tread," according to the Canton police.

The building material is insured by an agent for R.E. Dailey, the company that is acting as construction manager for all work on the municipal site. Companies that lost tools and materials are the Norm Boelter Co., mechanical contractors; Gilles Electric and Kanfer Construction Co., masonry contractors.

The R.E.Dailey Co., representative said it will take another eight to 10 weeks to reorder the roof decking. He said the workers will concentrate on other aspects of the building, "but it will put us behind schedule some." Recor said it it up to the township to decide if the thievery warrants hiring a security watch to guard the goods overnight.

Farmers organize for parity

By DARLENE STINSON

A number of Plymouth-Canton area farmers may decide to support a nationwide strike on food production and sales next month in a last-ditch effort to raise the price of crops and make a "livable" wage.

Guy Bunyea, a Plymouth Township farmer who's leading the effort to gain support among southeast Michigan farmers for the Dec. 14 strike, said farmers from Wayne, Washtenaw, Livingston and Monroe counties may take a strike vote Friday.

A meeting, chaired by a newly-organized group of Michigan farmers headquartered in Coldwater, is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m., at the Saline County Fairgrounds.

ACCORDING TO BUNYEA, the Coldwater group and a national organization of farmers based in Springfield, Colo. want crop prices raised to "parity" level. Parity prices reflect an inflated cost of living and would give farmers the same buying power they had in 1967.

Unless Congress acts on their demands to raise crop prices by Dec. 14, farmers have threated to halt the production and sale of crops. They have also threatened to boycott the farm equipment industry and refuse to buy farm equipment and supplies.

Bunyea, who called this year's crop prices the "worst in years," believes farmers must pull together in their demands to raise prices.

About 40 farmers from Wayne and Washtenaw counties gathered at Bunyea's home two weeks ago to discuss joining the Coldwater group.

Although food prices have steadily risen at the supermarket in recent years, Bunyea and Canton farmer Alfred (Fritz) Lobbestael insist that the price farmers receive for their crops has fallen.

Last year, Bunyea sold 20,000 bushels of corn for what he considered a low price—$2.80 a bushel. This year, the price of corn fell to $2.08 a bushel, even though the price of seed, fertilizer and machinery has increased.

"When you go to buy a car, the salesman will tell you the price," Bunyea said. "But when the farmer goes to the grain mill, he has to ask them, 'What are you going to give me?'"

LOBBESTAEL PINS the blame for supermarket inflation on the "middleman." Although a loaf of bread contains only about five cents worth of wheat, the loaf is priced at about 65 cents at the supermarket, he said.

Lobbestael, however, says he does not personally favor a nationwide strike of farmers.

"I'm not against the farmer getting a fair return for his investment of labor, but I am against a strike of this magnitude that could panic the whole world. I personally feel that kind of strike is not the answer.

"I'm sure there will be many people at Friday's meeting who wouldn't be in favor of such a drastic measure either," Lobbestael said. "But, on the other hand, I'm sure there will be many people who would go along with a boycott to force industry to take a stand against low crop prices."

The director of the Michigan Agriculture Department, Dale Ball, refused to comment on the impact a farmers' strike would have on the state's economy and food supply.

"A comment at this point would be purely speculative," Ball said, "because I have no idea how many farmers would participate.

"However, I am sympathetic to the farmers' problem. They deserve parity, but they haven't had it in years. I'm beginning to think it's an antiquated term."

Hiring criteria forces cops to hire attorney

By CRAIG PIECHURA

With more than 60 applications already in for 10 unposted jobs as full-time Canton Township patrol officers, only one person presently on the force as a part-time officer has applied.

And no Canton police officer is among 30 applicants undergoing testing for three full-time sergeant jobs and one detective position.

It is the fervent position of the Canton Police Officers Association (CPOA) that existing part-time officers (who hold certified or reserve training status) should fill the new positions.

"We already have jobs as police officers in the township, that's the way I look at it," said one officer who refused to be identified for fear of reprisal. "That's why none of us are putting in applications. It's got to be a unified position of the CPOA."

The Michigan Municipal League, an independent, private testing agency has been selected by the Canton Police Commission to test and review applicants for the full-time jobs which were established as a result of a $450,000 police millage that narrowly passed this summer. The police commission has also drawn up a qualifications necessary to be hired for a full-time job sometime in the beginning of 1978.

The commission's hiring criteria opens up all 14 full-time positions to anyone living in Canton with certification status who wishes to apply and passes oral, written, physical and psychological tests. Some of the criteria for the new positions gives slight preferential treatment to existing officers on the Canton force.

IN THE LISTof qualifications for hiring patrol officers, "present members of (the) Canton Police Department, reserve and certified, will receive an additional 5 per cent" on their written test score. A minimum score of 70 per cent on the written exam is required.

Only one officer already on the part-time force was even eligible to apply for the three sergeant and one detective positions. The reason for this was the qualification that applicants for the sergeant job must have at least eight years prior police experience. The one eligible officer on the force applied for sergeant testing and was eliminated Nov. 16 in an agility test administered by the Michigan State Police.

John Longridge, CPOA president, said the association has retained James Garber, a Plymouth attorney, to represent present officers in their fight to fill the full-time positions with existing part-time police employees. Garber said Tuesday he could not comment on the hiring qualifications because they have not yet been adopted by the township board.

"Our position is that there are no open jobs in the Canton Township Policer Department," Garden said. "There are 14 certified officers in the department and they township is asking for 10 patrolmen, three sergeants and one detective. So, I see no open jobs.

"Apparently the township is trying to draw a distinction between part-time employees and full-time employees when there is no such distinction."

Garber would not say what legal steps the CPOA intends to take if its position is ignored by the township board.

Canton Police Chief William MacGregor said he has no desire to alienate his officers but intends to find "the most qualified persons in Canton Township" for the jobs.

"I didn't say there is a bunch of incompetents on the force," MacGregor said. "But I am looking for the best most competent officers, through fair and impartial testing.

"They (existing officers) were hired as reserve officers, they were not hired as regular police officers. That's the crux of the whole thing as I see it. They were hired as reserve, part-time police officers, they were not hired on a permanent basis."

CLERK JOHN FLODIN,head of the police commission, agreed with MacGregor's assessment.

"If they (existing officers) are the most qualified, the exam will reveal that they are," Flodin said.

The unnamed certified police officer said he's optimistic about resolving the hiring conflict and has high praise for MacGregor. But the patrolman says he wonders why the township trusts certified officers to police the community now if they have any doubt about the qualifications of present officers.

"Fourteen of us went through the academy (Criminal Justice Institute) last fall," said the officer. "We passed every test there and were certified as police officers and hired as police officers. So why do we have to go through another test?"

Butchers in area process record amount of venison

By GLENN BUNTING

If slaughterhouses are any indication of the success deer hunters can expect in 1977, this season is shaping up to be a record kill.

Although the state deer hunting season is just more than a week old, meat packing houses are processing unprecedented numbers of deer.

And the prize catch of the season thus far was gunned down in our own backyard—at 10 Mile and Napier Road in Novi Township. The big buck weighed nearly 200 pounds and had a 10-point rack—the largest this area has reportedly seen in a long while.

It's all legal, too. Hunters can obtain special permits to hunt on nearby open property with written permission of the land owner which they must produce upon request. The buck was nailed on a 100-acre field owned by a Novi farmer.

The 200-pound deer has been turned over to Carl Hughes' Salem Packing Co. in Northville, where business is booming. Hughes has received more than 100 deer for processing after the first hunting weekend.

The Black Angus meat house in Canton Township normally handles 250 deer in one season, but has already processed nearly 100.

"HUNTERS LIKE to get 'em back after the first weekend. Everyone's anxious to get their first deer of the season and have them processed. After that, business slows a little, but it's still steady," Hughes said.

The Salem Packing Co. has been processing deer since 1964. Hughes, who is 70, says he's been doing it all his life.

"We've got it down to a science. First, we weigh the deer and put them into a cooler. Then, we skin 'em and put them in a holding cooler for five to eight days. This breaks down the tissue and tenderizes the meat."

Hughes said he sets one day aside each week exclusively for cutting deer meat. "But we've been cutting all day yesterday (Sunday) and today because of the heavy business."

The Packing Co. charges $30, up $5 dollars from last year, for skinning, grinding into hamburger and freezing. Hughes said customers often request pork be added to venison for better taste.

For practical purposes, there isn't anything meat houses won't cut up. Hughes said he regularly accommodates hunters of moose, bear, wild

At last: Jeffries expressway opens to traffic

By TIM RICHARD

"At last!"

That was the most profound thing anyone could say as a yellow ribbon was snipped Monday, opening the final 12-mile stretch of the Jeffries Freeway through Livonia, Redford Township and the west side of Detroit.

Within minutes after Allan Williams, a retired state highway engineer, wielded the scissors, traffic was moving in the four westbound lanes. Not much later, the four eastbound lanes were opened.

ON THE SURFACE road, Schoolcraft, there was frequent screeching of brakes.

Over the weekend, the highway department had placed "yield" and "stop" signs on Schoolcraft at each of the exit ramps from the freeway. A block later, those cars had to stop again for a red traffic signal at one of the mile roads.

The sun peered hazily through clouds, and a chill wind whipped out of the west at 20 mph or so, encouraging the state and local politicians to keep their remarks brief.

The Jeffries, scheduled for completion in 1972 and delayed by a contractor's bankruptcy and a host of construction problems, was finally complete, and not even the politicians wanted to delay it any longer with rhetoric and oratory.

A BANNER from the Detroit Race Course in Livonia summed it up: "16½ minutes from downtown."

DRC, with both runners and harness racers, had seen itself losing ground to the more accessible Hazel Park on the northeast side and particularly welcomed the new freeway.

It will be a boon, too, to Detroiters, downriver residents and local folks who want to reach Northville Downs. I-96, the Jeffries' formal name, intersects with the north-south I-275 for easy access to Northville as well as Schoolcraft College.

OAKLAND COUNTY, too, will get some relief. For months, the Jeffries had ended at the M-39 (Southfield) freeway, and that northbound artery had been jammed.

The final link in a Detroit to Muskegon freeway, the Jeffries will also relieve the John Lodge freeway of some cross-state traffic.

I-96 replaces the old US-16. Williams, who did Monday's ribbon cutting, had been there 51 years ago, in 1926, for the ceremonies marking paving of old US-16.

He was aided by Dr. Benjamin Jeffries, nephew of the late Edward J. Jeffries, popular mayor of Detroit who died in 1948.

On the youth and beauty side were Ms. Michigan Transpo, Gloria Crafton of Lansing; cheerleaders, baton twirlers and bands from South Redford's Thurston, Livonia's Franklin and Detroit's Southwestern high schools.

In between were such officials as Peter Fletcher of Ypsilanti and Weston Vivian, chairman and member, respectively, of the State Highway Commission; U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), whose 2d Congressional District is the prime beneficiary of the new route; State Sens. R. Robert Geake (R-Northville) and Jack Faxon (D-Detroit); State Reps. Jack Kirksey (R-Livonia), Robert Law (R-Livonia) and John Bennett (D-Redford); and Wayne County Commissioner Mary Dumas (R-Livonia).

The only local chief executive to make it was Redford Township Supervisor Patrick McDonald.

Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara was absent because of a family illness. Detroit Mayor Coleman Young didn't show, though he was on the program. Detroit was represented by Councilman Jack Kelley.

The last segment of the Jeffries cost $126 million, or better than $10 million for each mile. Federal funds paid 90 per cent of the cost; state funds the remainder.

Russ Powell's death invokes tales of colorful life

By W.W. EDGAR

When Russell K. Powell died last week it marked the passing of one of the most colorful citizens the community has known.

Many are the stories they are now telling of Powell, known to his closest friends as "Butter" because he once was in the milk, butter and egg business with his father, Madison, known to the area as "Matt."

It is not generally known by the present generation, but it was Powell and his father who covered Tonquish Creek. They turned that trick in 1937 because of the agile mind of Matt.

AT THE TIME Tonquish Creek flowed through the heart of downtown Plymouth and was considered a nuisance.

According to the story now being told, Matt told Russell to put in a bid at half the sum of the bids they had and the job would be theirs.

His listeners laughed at the thought. But they forgot that the father and son combination was doing some work at the training center. They were in the contracting business then, and getting the Tonquish Creek bid would enable them to have their trucks loaded on both ways on their trips.

Russell did as he was told and, sure enough, the bid was theirs.

There was some doubt where the job could be done, but Matt, according to the legend, had a keen mind and succeeded in setting up a plan that worked. And today, few people realize that the creek still runs through the center of the city. But it does without a sound on the surface. That is a monument to Powell and his father.

RUSSELL WAS only 74 when he died in St. Joseph Hospital. But those who recall some of his activities like to tell the story of how he brought the first truckload of beer into the Plymouth community, when prohibition ended.

He had taken over a dealership for the Stroh Brewining Co. and was ready to open his business when threatened by the mafia, which, in 1932, controlled the liquor traffic.

This didn't bother Powell. He sought the aid of two of his friends—Paul Anderson and Bob Burley—and how they succeeded is one of the prize stories of the times.

When the truck loaded with Strohs started for Plymouth, it was feared the mafia might succeed in its threats.

But the beer came through safely because Anderson and Burley sat on the top of the truck, each with a shot gun in hand.

That was the start of the Powell distributorship that existed until recently when Russell sold the business at the corner of Ann Arbor Road and Mill Streets.

"The Powells were a great pair," Jack Selle, the Buick dealer, recalled. "Many were the times I have gone duck hunting and fishing with Russell. 'Butter' was a great fellow to be with."

And Ralph Lorenz voiced his surpise at Powell's death. "They were original stockholders in the Mayflower. The old gent died some time ago, but I talked with Russell only a few weeks ago. I invited him to the 50th birthday of the hotel. He said he couldn't make it."

All agreed that the community lost a colorful citizen in Powell's passing.

There's a battle of the bands underway in Canton's senior citizen program. Above is the Canton Senior troupe, and their competition is the Royal Holiday Seniors Kitchen Band. In the picture at top right, Isabel Hale hums an oldie while (bottom right) Ina Ross plays a looney tune on her patented tooter.

Bells and rhythm blocks are attached to Doris Eaton's down-home washboard. Mrs. Eaton knows all too well it "don't mean a thing if it ain't got that swing."

Band makes a joyful noise

The musical instrument called a "kazoo" has often been the target of vicious ridicule from so-called music lovers. Well, two senior citizen groups in Canton Township are out to change all that by elevating the lowly kazoo to lead instrument in both kitchen bands.

The bands feature other sophisticated instruments such as the gutbucket, ukelele and washboard.

But above the joyful din the kazoo cuts through with a nutty, nasal resonance.

In fact, the Canton Seniors Kitchen Band even has a custom kazoo craftsman on its roster. Ina Ross built an invention she calls the "teapot tooter" which is a kazoo with a teapot mute and a funnel horn.

She's also built a drum that sounds remarkably like a tom-tom. She's working on a few more kitchen instruments that should set the music world on its proverbial ear when she unveils them.

The bands, known as the Canton Senior Kitchen Band and the Royal Holiday Kitchen Band are scheduled to perform at the Dion and Hanlon nursing homes in December. The songs are

Geer Thanksgiving bash is school's 96th annual

Practically every school in the United States has some kind of a Thanksgiving pageant at this time of the year. But few can boast a 96th consecutive Thanksgiving dinner program like Geer Elementary School.

The two-room schoolhouse is too small to accomodate all the Geer students and their families so the dinner was held last Wednesday at Hulsing Elementary.

Instead of the time-worn play about the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, the Geer Thanksgiving program was all about the Civil War. Slavery was depicted with songs such as "John Brown's Body," "Cotton Needs Pickin'" and "I'm Gonna Sing."

The play, written by the students, also touched on the heroics of Harriet Tubman and her work on the Underground Railroad.

In one scene, the Civil War was in full swing and the eight different flags which sprung up at the time were displayed by students. A story of the surrender of General Robert E. Lee was written and performed by student. The stirring "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was a contrast to the song "Goober Peas."

THE LIFEof Abraham Lincoln was the subject of Act 3. Young Lincoln meets and marries Nancy Hanks amid the strains of "Jimmy Cracked

New congregation here

Faith Community Church, a congregation affiliated with the Moravian denomination, will begin worship services 10:30 a.m. Dec. 4 in Pioneer Middle School, 46081 Ann Arbor Road.

Rev. Darryl Bell, pastor the new church, explains that the worship style of the Moravian faith is similiar to that of "other mainline Protestant churches such as Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, etc." Faith Community Church has purchased land on Warren Road, west of Canton Center and will begin construction at that site soon.

A nursery is available for parents of small children and a children's religious lesson is part of the service. A sunday school for three-to-six-year-olds is planned for some time in January, according to Rev. Bell. Persons who wish to contact the reverend should call 459-2199.

Butchers here have no beef with hunters boar and antelope. The Black Angus is cutting up a bobcat shot in Marquette.

HUGHES HAS RULED out pheasants after an experience last week with 17 birds brought in by a customer hunting in Canada. Hughes, who says there is no such word as "can't," could not pull the feathers off the birds, denpite heating them in water and trying to pluck them dry.

The Packing Co. ended up skinning the birds for $1.50 apiece. "From now on, I'm not taking any more pheasants," Hughes said.

The Black Angus will not pluck a chicken or kill a pig. "I'll cut 'em up, but not kill them," a worker said.

Penniman Market in Plymouth, now under new ownership, no longer handles deer meat. "It's too much work. You should have a separate cooler and keep it separated from the beef. There's just too many problems involved for us," said Russ Webster, one of the market's new owners.

The result is shops like The Packing Co. and The Black Angus mop up on the deer processing business because of a lack of competition. Hunters from as far away as Jackson are regular customers for both butchers.

JOHN VANDENBERG

Good marriages made better through counseling—therapist

Although most couples only think of seeing a marriage counselor when they are having trouble, John Vandenburg believes that a good relationship can be made better through counseling.

Of course as a therapist who does marriage counseling he may be biased, but he admits that, too.

"Believe me, a lot of people who come to see me have waited until it's too late. By the time I talk to them they're in a last ditch effort to 'save the marriage ' If they had come in a little earlier, there would have been more to work with."

Vandenburg and his partner, Joseph Damiani, are the co-directors of Associated Counseling Services, 352 N. Main Street, Plymouth.

Along with the other members of their staff, they offer therapy and counseling in a wide variety of areas, including family therapy and school counseling.

According to Damiani, however, it is easier for women to make the initial move toward getting outside help than it is for men.

"Usually it is the woman who calls or comes in first," he said. "And I think that's because women have been raised to believe they don't have to do it alone. Men haven't."

DAMIANI said that from his point of view, the late 20s and early 30s are the ages when people are apt to need some form of marriage counseling.

"It's a tough time of life. If the couple is just moving to the Plymouth community, chances are the man is moving up in the career, and the woman is not working. In any case, it's the time of mid-life crises for a number of reasons."

The most common reason that couples give for seeking professional help is "failure to communicate." But Damiani believes those words cover a multitude of meanings.

"What it usually means is 'We're arguing too much. We don't know how to stop, and it's getting very uncomfortable.' When the relationship reaches that point, one or both of the people are thinking about getting out."

But even then, he said, some couples use the therapist for a number of reasons besides working out their problems.

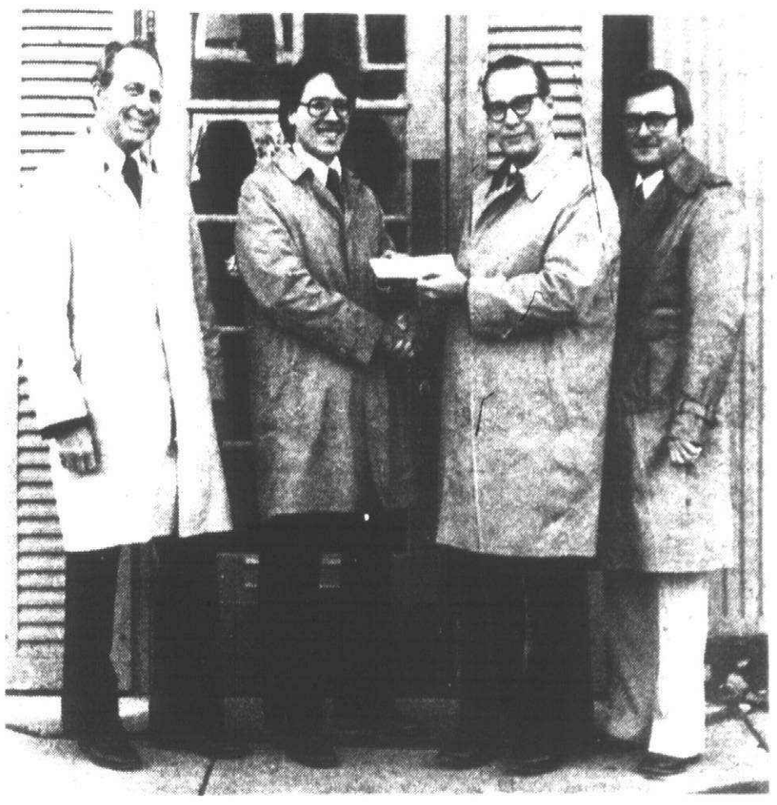

"Occasionaly, one person has ulterior motives. For example, people might want to use the therapist to regain control of a relationship that has had a power shift. Or they might want to get the therapist to take their side in a particular argument.

"It seems that each person tends to feel the other person is not living up to his or her responsibility. And often it just becomes a question of finding out what 'responsibility' means."

He also noted that marriage problems can stem from "a million different causes. A couple may say they argue about money all the time or about who has to pick up around the house. Most of it is symptomatic. The underlying problem is always the same: something is not working."

As a therapist, Damiani said he tries to remain neutral. He neither counsels his patients to stay together or split up. "I don't want to get in the position of recommending either course of action.

"I just want them to reach the point where they take responsibility for the marriage as a unit and make the decision about what they want to do for themselves."

When local 'law' held sway

Besides eating turkey tomorrow, I'll be getting a taste of venison for Thanksgiving dinner when the family gathers around my sister's table near Saginaw.

Just got the word Sunday night that my nephew Rick bagged his first deer last week, someplace in the north woods near Gladwin. So the young proud hunter will be slicing the meat tomorrow, repeating a family tradition which hasn't been performed for quite some time now.

ABOUT 20 YEARS ago, when I was in my mid-teens, our family would gather at my aunt's in Harrison or grandparents in Marion for the Thanksgiving feast.

We'd always have turkey, but usually there always was a slab of venison on the table also. In those days, all my uncles went deer hunting and one of them was bound to have had good luck. In fact, for reasons to be explained later, we always had venison on the table.

The tradition was that whichever uncle bagged the deer would get to cut the first slice after grace was said, much like someone making the first slice in the cake on their birthday.

Usually there would be venison roast, with some special venison-burgers made up for the kids. Sometimes, depending on which uncle furished the meat, we'd enjoy venison steaks.

THE APPEARANCE of venison on the Thanksgiving table wasn't really a matter of chance or hunting skill, as you might assume.

In the 1950s Harrison wasn't as developed as it is today, and the pace of life was much slower and simpler. For the most part, everyone knew everyone else and the farmers and towns people lived by their own self-imposed code of honor.

This code of honor was derived from the local mores and customs, and were based on very practical experience. And this local code of honor was for Harrison residents "the highest law of the land." The local code, for all practical purposes, supplanted state law—especially the rules and regulations of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

Which is a roundabout way of saying my relatives in Harrison were poachers. At least, that's what we'd call them but they'd react in anger and righteous indignation if the term was used to their face.

The local residents knew a lot about the deer herds in their territory, much more than the DNR boys in Lansing. They know when the deer faced starvation. They knew the number of hunters who could reasonably be expected that coming November to "harvest" the correct number. So the local folks took it upon themselves to keep the deer population in balance which is to say they weren't against shooting a buck before opening day— or on the Fourth of July for that matter.

There wasn't any problem with hunting before season opened, or shooting two bucks instead of one during season, because the only enforcement officer was the local justice of the peace. The boys in Lansing only set the limits, and the prescribed days within which to hunt, but in those days never sent out anyone to enforce the rules.

So anyone who happened to be caught with one deer too many, or with a deer during the off-season, was brought before the local JP for "justice." And, for many years, the local justice of the peace, was my uncle. And it was my uncle who more times than not was the one to take the first slice of venison on Thanksgiving day.

THAT LOCAL arrangement worked fine for years, until my uncle finally decided he didn't want to be justice of the peace anymore.

The major reason was that JP's once in a while would be called upon to conduct a marriage ceremony. And my uncle got very nervous about conducting weddings. As the town's population grew, and more and more young people were marching into his parlour to be wed, the pressure finally got to be too much. He announced he'd no longer serve and wouldn't seek re-election as JP.

The neighbor up the road announced for the post, and won by acclamation—without opposition. To everyone's suprise, the new JP took the job seriously--at least more seriously than my uncle had for the past decade.

The first thing he did, almost, was to fine one of the local hunters for bagging a buck in July. The local folks were in an uproar because never before had state law been enforced as a higher force than the local code.

Nobody else wanted the job next time around so the "new" JP got re-elected by default. So gradually the local code faded away and state law held sway. And the appearance of venison at our family gatherings then depended upon chance and the hunter's skill.

After my grandparents died, the "extended" family gathering shrunk the the "nuclear" family gathering, and since my brother or I don't hunt—and my brother-in-law doesn't hunt particularly well—it's been a couple decades since I've eaten venison on Thanksgiving. I wonder how it'll taste tomorrow. Considering Rick's pride, I know I'll try a slice or two.

Why shopping pays off

A "Christmas Shop Plymouth" campaign is being launched to encourage Plymouth residents to do their holiday gift shopping in the Plymouth area.

Chuck Heidt, president of First National Bank of Plymouth, announced that his bank will again sponsor the campaign.

In support of the program, local merchants are receiving a supply of buttons for their employees to wear between now and Christmas.

The buttons, which picture a holly wreath, bear the legend "Christmas Shop Plymouth." Each store will be given a door sticker and window posters which feature the slogan, plus other materials for the merchant's use.

"Right here in Plymouth our stores are carrying more and better merchandise every year," says Heidt. "It is hard to think of many items that are available in larger cities which cannot be found right here in Plymouth."

Heidt said First National Bank of Plymouth is committed to the future of Plymouth. Citing the many benefits to the local economy of shopping at home, he mentioned the indirect value of keeping dollars in the Plymouth community. Specifically mentioned were the providing of more jobs, encouraging the growth and development of new stores and shopping areas, and expanding the amount of merchandise available.

"It isn't necesssary that people shop only in Plymouth," said Heidt. "But because our dollars work twice as hard when they are spent at home, we want to encourage everyone to "Christmas Shop Plymouth."

The specifics of the campaign will be introduced to retailers at a breakfast Nov. 29 in the Mayflower Meeting House.

It's a water wonderland

Over 200 rivers empty into Lake Superior. The length of Superior—from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. to Duluth, Minn.—is approximately 400 miles.

However, if you were to travel the entire shoreline by boat, you would cover a distance of 2,880 miles.

At its deepest point, Lake Superior is 1,330 feet deep.

Guard against fire hazards

Along with cold wind and snow, the winter months bring additional dangers of home fires.

To make sure that your house is as free from fire hazards as possible, the American Red Cross urges you to:

•Have your heating system thoroughly inspected and, if necessary, overhauled.

•Make sure your heating system is properly vented to the outdoors.

•Defective appliances, clogged flues and chimneys can make a home a lethal gas chamber. Protect open fireplaces with screens that completely cover the openings.

•Defective wiring is a serious fire hazard—hire a professional electrician to repair any faulty wiring in your home.

•Be certain that electrical circuits are equipped with proper-sized fuses or circuit breakers. Inspect all cords and outlets for faulty switches, loose connections and signs of wear. Have the defects repaired by a professional immediately.

•Clear closets, attics, stairwells, garages and other storage areas of unused, potentially combustible materials.

Appointments are confirmed

Plymouth City Commission Monday night confirmed the first appointments made by Mayor Thomas Turner. All confirmations were by unanimous vote.

Commissioner Beverly McAninch was named the city's delegate to the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) with Scott Dodge as alternate.

Mary Childs was appointed the city's representative to the Intergovernmental Committee with Mark Wehmeyer as alternate.

Appointed to the Board of Canvassers for four-year terms were: Nancy Johnson, Republican member; and Thomas H. Healey, Democratic member.

THE COMMISSION also agreed to allow the leasing by the Tity of three parking spaces in the East Central Lot to M. Manogian, owner of a building at 200 S. Main, across from the city hall.

The lease arrangement will allow location of a barbershop, the Yankee Clipper, in that building. Without a lease of parking spaces or granting of parking credits, the barbershop would have faced a deficiency of parking spaces. The commission decided against granting parking credits, opting instead to lease three spaces at $15 each per month.

The commission also voted to allow free parking in downtown Plymouth from Dec. 12-24 as a goodwill gesture for Christmas shoppers. A related resolution provides that future budgets will indicate the free parking decision has resulted in a loss of revenue of $2,800 to the parking fund.

Arnold Schwarzenegger

Body building star draws crowd

By SANDRA ARMBRUSTER

By the hundreds they came to see him. Some to oggle, some to ridicule and others to take pictures and perhaps get him to autograph his new book—"Arnold Schwarzenegger—Education of a Body Builder."

Schwarzenegger came to Westland and Northland Shopping Centers last Saturday as part of a three-day book promotional tour sponsored by J.C. Penny Co. More than 100,000 copies of his book have been sold.

Thronging to the shopping centers for a little early Christmas shopping, suburban residents from a Westland high school class to a Plymouth woman with a pointilism portrait of Schwarzenegger, gathered to glimpse the television and movie star who has won numerous worldwide body building titles.

Those titles have included Mr. Junior Europe, Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia from 1970-75. But that part of Schwarzenegger's life closed with the Mr. Olympia contest in '75.

"I had just won the contest for the fifth time in South Africa. I took my prize, my money, and five minutes later my mind was on something completely different," he said. "It came too easy for me all of a sudden. My interest wasn't in it that much anymore.

"There was a lot of pressure from the top to stop competing," continued Schwarzenegger. "I kept winning and no one else seemed to have a chance at the top. It really started backfiring. And I was always for the idea of promoting the sport."

For Schwarzenegger, body building is very much a sport. He began weight training at the age of 15—against his parents wishes.

Coming from an athletic-oriented Austrian family, Schwarzenegger was "very much into sports, but I chose weight training. I hope with my book to relate to boys who now are trying to get into weight training and their parents don't want it. They can read my book and know that it happened to me.

"Each sport does something different. It depends on what you want to do, who you want to be later on in life," said Schwarzenegger. "Weight training works on the mind as well as the body. Psychologically, it gives self confidence, a sense of achieving things."

Schwarzenegger believes thaq weight training promotes "health and fitness building rather than destruction. It provides a sense of self pride, and liking yourself a great deal can carry into other areas of life like your job and relationships with people.

"In sports, you have to know yourself really well. You have to cut negative things out and be in touch with yourself," he added.

Greeks once believed that the ideal male body was muscular, according to Schwarzenegger, because "then the spirit and body— mentally and physically—would be well developed.

"Some people who are just interested in bodies say, 'That's a great body.' But others see more than that. They see more than just the body; they see what's inside."

Now Schwarzenegger is interested in relating to 95 per cent of the people, who he says are interested in health and fitness. "Most don't want to look like me. They're goals can be whatever they want them to be. They can train to meet their goals.

"Most of the nutritional books out now are too technical. People can't understand them. We need to keep things simple. We need to teach how the body functions so everyone can totally relate to it."

Exercises like jogging aren't the answer, according to Schwarzenegger. "It used to be the biggest suicide rate was for jogging in this country. That's more than running. In jogging you become stiff, not flexible. Besides, why just train your legs?

"There are 10 to 20 exercises you can do for every muscle in your body," he said. "Exercises can do everything from strengthening a cardio-vascular (Heart and circulatory) system to causing weight loss by getting the blood circulating through those muscles, cleansing them."

Physical fitness and weight training is just as applicable to women as it is to men, according to Schwarzenegger, who noted that about 60 per cent of the people enrolling at gyms and health spas are women.

"It was absolute insanity for women to think that exercise takes away from their femininity," he continued. "Now, too, women can get off on looking at a man's body. That's good. Now men come and say, 'I want to look good.'"

Besides beginning a new picture for Paramount and writing a book specifically for women, Schwarzenegger's future is uncertain.

Books on weekends

For the first time since budget cuts of two years ago, the Schoolcraft College library will have weekend hours this semester.

President C. Nelson Grote announced, after consulting with Dean Fred Stefanski and Library Director Patrick Butler:

•The library will be open from 1-8 p.m. Sundays, Dec. 4 and 11, just prior to the winter semester final examinations.

•The library will be open from 1-8 p.m. Sundays during the winter semester, which runs from January to the end of April.

"Sunday is recommended because our records show that Sunday's attendance has been consistently higher than Saturday's," Grote said.

IN OTHER plant matters, the college board:

Was asked by Grote to decide by Dec. 14 whether to move the climate systems program (heating and air conditioning technology) from a former warehouse at Venoy and Ford Roads in Garden City to the Harrison Center in Garden City. A lease on the warehouse structure expires Sept. 1. Remodeling the Harrison Center will cost $57,200 versus $71,800 for renting and further remodeling the warehouse.

Received a progress report from vice-president Kenneth Lindner on development of a driveway north from Six Mile on the main Livonia campus that would serve both the college and Trinity Baptist Church's facility for the elderly. The driveway would be between the I-275 freeway and Haggerty Road.

REOPENING the college library on weekends to students and the public was discussed at the board's weekend study session in late October, when Grote was asked to report back on the possibility.

From 1969-75 the library was open Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sundays from 1-6 p.m. Weekend hours were dropped during the energy shortage, which coincided with a recession-born cut in state aid.

"The cost of a part-time librarian is contractually agreed to at $9.50 per hour," said Grote. "To provide 10 hours of library services for 28 weekends would cost $2,660 plus 15.7 per cent for social security and retirement, or a total cost of $3,078.

"The cost for the student assistant is usually at a minimum wage and was normally paid from the regular student aide account in the library budget center.

"Indirect costs for utilities and for added custodial services are very difficult to calculate on a per-hour or per-day cost."

Library director Butler estimated 150 to 200 persons would use the library.

"We all believe," said Grote, "that an institution of higher education has a responsibility of providing library services to our students and to the community at times when they can be most used."

Michiganians, like Pilgrims, owe debt to Indians

In school our youngsters draw pictures of the first Thanksgiving, with Pilgrims and Indians dining together and with tributes to Squanto, the Pawtuxet Indian. Squanto is credited with teaching these English-speaking settlers how to plant corn and serving as an interpreter when a peace treaty was made with the Massasoit Indians.

What we tend to forget is that Michigan settlers also owed much to the Indians' knowledge of food gathering, travel and medical treatment.

What brought this thought to mind, as Thanksgiving Day approaches, is the opening of I-96 in the suburbs, completing a link from Detroit to Muskegon. This eight-lane superhighway is a slicked-up version of an old Indian trail. The road that takes us to our capital at Lansing and the state's second largest city, Grand Rapids, essentially parallels the route the red man used in his travels. I-75, used by residents of the northern suburbs to get to Detroit and the Mackinac Straits Bridge, in part follows "a narrow pathway hardly perceivable," in the words of Alexis deTocqueville, who traveled it to the end of civilization, Saginaw, in 1830.

I-94, WHICH many of us will use to visit relatives in Ann Arbor, Jackson, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and St. Joseph, parallels the Old Sauk Trail, which centuries ago carried Indians from Detroit to the southern shores of Lake Michigan.

Long before we had freighters 1,000 feet long, white settlers traversed the Great Lakes and paddled up our shallow rivers in another Indian invention, the birch-bark canoe. Today, the increasingly popular canoe is made of aluminum or fiber glass,but we have improved only a little on the design and speed.

The white man's progress across the American continent was incredibly swift, for the Indian guided him more often than not.

The Indian taught our forefathers about maize, which we call corn, for it was difficult to cultivate wheat, rye and barley—the European grains—on Michigan's virgin soil.

Wild berries and fruits nourished the settlers, for the Indians taught them which to pick and where to find them.

Herbs to treat diseases and wounds were provided by the Indian to settlers who had to wait years for an educated physician to come to town.

OUR LANGUAGE is the richer for the Indian—raccoon, opossum, moose, skunk, squash, paw-paw, persimmon, toboggan, mackinaw, and those colorful political words, mugwump and caucus, are derived from Indian languages.

Folk tales that rival Grimm in imagination and Andersen in language were picked up from the tiny Chippewa tribe, massaged by American authors and made world famous.

Not everything the Indian gave us was good. Tobacco—the curse of our lungs in offices and lobbies and schools—was introduced to us by the Indian.

But we got more than even. We introduced the native American to booze.

As we give thanks to the Almighty God for the blessings of the season tomorrow, let us add a word to Gitche Manito for giving us such a friend as the Indian.

Sorry, Mayor

One small step for Young

Tim Richard

I cheerfully apologize to Detroit Mayor Coleman Young. I had doubted Young would show up for last week's transportation conference sponsored by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) especially because he would have to share equal billing with a suburban official, Oakland County Executive Daniel T. Murphy.

I underestimated the mayor. He showed.

Young did, however, maintain his hard line, which amounts to "Detroit uber alles." He maintained his adamant position that a rapid transit system must have at least eight miles of subway within Detroit's city limits.

Transit experts estimate the cost of underground construction at 10 times the cost of grade (surface) work. Young said he doesn't want the city split by rail lines the way it was split by freeways. The more likely explanation is that the old union organizer is seeking all the bucks he can get for the construction industry and trades, whether the best interest of public transportation is served or not.

IN CONTRAST, Murphy took a moderate position. He urged looks at other SEMTA plans that would have a total price tag more in the $800 million range (figuring the friendly federal government means what it says about limiting its contribution to $600 million).

Young's ideas would run the price tag into the billions. For that kind of wampum, we could set up plush buses all over four or five counties.

At the other extreme is the Oakland County Road Commission, which, to hear them tell it, is a fountain of social wisdom while SEMTA is a mud puddle. The road commission's transit plan, strongly attacked by SEMTA and Southeast Michigan Council of Governments leaders on technical competency, would have nothing underground, not even in Detroit's crowded downtown.

LO AND BEHOLD! The day after the SEMTA conference, the road commission said it "applauds the position" taken by Murphy. That's a rarity, for often has the road commission been at odds with the county executive on a multitude of matters.

Examining the road commission's statement of 250 words, I cannot detect where it agrees with more than Murphy's generalities on the "need to build bridges of cooperation between the City of Detroit and the larger populations in the suburbs." Yet the abrasive attitude of the road commission has disappeared for the moment, and for that, persons of reason and good will may be thankful.

If the extremists on the Oakland County Road Commission can cool their "us versus them" attitudes, why can't Coleman Young?

THE FOLLOWING DAY, Young was up to his old tricks. There was an executive committee meeting of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG), of which Young's city is a member, and the mayor didn't show. To my knowledge, he hasn't shown up at any SEMCOG function during the nearly four years he has been in office.

SEMCOG is a good place for reasonable persons from Detroit and its metropolitan neighbors to get together.

The best thing about SEMCOG meetings is not the regional plans that are laid there, but the gentlemanly and ladylike way people talk to each other. There's none of this garbage about "hit Eight Mile Road" and "there's no way in hell. . ."

Mayors and councilmen and county commissioners from western Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties and the rest show up. Young doesn't.

But he did make that SEMTA conference. That's one small step forward, and Young gets as much credit as it's worth.

Regulation's high price tag

Eccentricities

by HANK HOGAN

More than two years have passed since the nation's chief executive set an ambitious goal: To shrink the mountain of federal regulations, red tape and paperwork pressing down on businessmen, state and local governments and ordinary citizens.

That chief executive isn't in the Oval Office any longer, but his successor's rhetoric is even more expansive.

"We will cut down on governmental regulations, and we will make sure that those that are written are in plain English for a change," Jimmy Carter vowed.

Perversely, however, the federal regulatory mountain is resisting shrinkage. In most areas, it has continued to grow at the same rapid pace of the past decade.

ONE OBSTACLE to cutbacks is that regulators, lawmakers and business executives who pay lip service to deregulation fight hard to keep their own regulations intact.

To show the present administration's headway in reducing the number of regulators, we cite a recent story in the Washington Post. "New Energy Agency Budget $10.6 Billion," says the newspaper.

It continues, "The proposed budget for the first year of operation of the new U.S. Department of Energy will be $10.6 billion, compared to an estimated $10.2 billion that all companies will spend on drilling and exploration in the United States during 1977. . ."

The new Department of Energy will have a staff of almost 20,000 and will consolidate the functions of the Federal Power Commission, Federal Energy Administration and the Energy Research and Development Agency as well as acquiring energy functions from four cabinet departments and one independent agency.

ACTUALLY, BY totalling the number of employees and the fiscal budgets of all the departments and energy functions that will now be assumed by the new department of energy, they will employ 19,767 persons and dispose of a fiscal 1978 budget of $10.6 billion.

To put that budget in perspective, consider the following:

1) It represents $500,000 per department employee.

2) It represents $50 for each and every member of the U.S. population (212 million).

3) It represents $266,871 for each of the 39,763 wells drilled in 1976.

4) It represents $58.35 for each of the 181,855,700 feet drilled in 1976.

5) It represents $3.59 for each barrel of domestic crude oil production in 1976.

6) It represents $1.67 for every barrel of petroleum products consumed in 1976.

7) It represents 10 cents for every gallon of gasoline consumed in 1976.

8) It represents 34 cents on every barrel of proven crude oil reserves as of Dec. 31, 1976 (30.9 billion barrels).

9) It exceeds 1975 capital and exploration expenditures by the petroleum industry to explore for and produce domestic crude oil, natural gas and natural gas liquids ($9.4 billion, according to the Chase Manhattan Bank),and it is almost three-fifths of capital expenditures in all U.S. petroleum sectors that year ($17.7 billion).

10) It exceeds the 1974 profits of the seven largest oil companies—profits which were called "obscene."

If you believe this budget won't increase next year, you'd look under your pillow in the morning. . . someone may have left you a quarter.

The Stroller

Thankless man ate well

By W.W. EDGAR

"What have we got to be thankful for?" The Stroller's cynical friend asked.

Without waiting for an answer, he related the reasons for his mood at a time when there should be joy and merriment.

"We are caught in an inflationary spiral, and nobody knows just how high it will go. The cost of living is almost out of this world. Just the other day I had to pay $45 for a pair of shoes that cost only $20 a few years ago. And today, in one of our popular dining rooms, I was charged 95 cents for a piece of pie."

Scarcely drawing another breath, he went on:

"Look at the prices of new cars coming on the market. They are being priced right out of the market. And even if we could afford them, the price of gasoline is getting to the point where you won't be able to purchase it.

"So we are supposed to be thankful?"

WHEN HE FINALLY stopped moaning, The Stroller asked him what his folks were having for their Thanksgiving dinner. He half-snarled, "Oh, turkey—as usual."

As he departed, The Stroller couldn't help pitying the poor fellow. He was going home to dine on a luscious turkey with all the trimmings and the pleasure of his family all about him. Yet he saw nothing for which to be thankful.

Suppose he had been present at the first Thanksgiving when the Pilgrims dined on a few wild turkeys, a bit of cattle and the pigs they had been raising in the wild New England countryside.

Suppose the old cynic had to sit down to a meal of non-aged meat and Indian corn—and only a sparse share at that.

Then he could have reason to moan. But that's what the Pilgrims dined on that day.

According to the yellowed pages of history, Gov. Bradford, the Pilgrims' leader, sent four men out "fowling" to help make it a special day. They returned with enough meat, but the Indians joined them and brought along their chief, King Massosoit, with 90 tribesmen. So you know the feast wasn't a hearty meal where one could eat to his heart's content.

The next year brought a poor crop, so poor that the corn had to be rationed. When the calculation was finished, the Pilgrims were each given five grains of Indian corn daily. The Stroller wonders how his cynical friend would like that.

HOWEVER, IT WAS the start of setting Thanksgiving as a feast day, and The Stroller well remembers the meals set on the table by his mother and other Pennsylvania Dutch women.

Even though we were considered a "poor" family, Mother always managed to have a turkey. And she spent the better part of two days preparing it.

First, there was the ritual of taking the turkey's life. She would tie the bird's legs and hang it on the wash line. Next she'd take it by the head and cut it off at the neck, leaving it to hand there until all the blood was drained.

Then came the tedious job of cleaning the pin feathers. All the while, she was preparing a special bread dressing and such extras as plum puddings, mashed potatoes, stewed corn and gravy—all important parts of the Thanksgiving Day table.

Such things are not done today. The turkey is dressed before purchase. The dressing is packaged. It is good eating, but not like Mother used to make. The puddings also are purchased and taken from the can before serving. And Mother always had a few luscious pumpkin pies standing by, waiting for the turkey to be devoured.

Those were great Thanksgiving dinners. Now most people dine out and feast on sliced turkey and many of the other ingredients taken from cans. Yet it is all good eating.

IT IS A FAR cry from the first Thanksgiving Day when the Pilgrims had to go out into the woods and shoot their meal—and then add the fowl to the pigs and cattle that were being roasted.

And The Stroller, who still prefers the old-fashioned "stuffing" his mother used to make, can't help wondering how cynical his friend would be if he had to attend the first Thanksgiving Day feast and subsist on five grains of Indian corn each day.

Surely, in spite of the high cost of living and spiraling inflation, we have a lot to be thankful—and, his Thanksgiving dinner should be No. 1 on the list.

Citizens can win

SBT: The moment of truth

By DOUG ROSS

The fight to reform the state's Single Business Tax (SBT) to give small businesses some desperately needed tax relief this year will be decided over the next four weeks in Lansing.

The outcome? That will depend largely on the efforts of small business people themselves.

Last spring, frustrated by a lack of real legislative action to either repeal the new state business tax or to make it more equitable for smaller service oriented businesses, the Michigan Citizens Lobby joined with a number of small business associations across the state to form Citizens To Save Small Businesses. This grassroots coalition of consumers and small business people set one goal for itself: a major revision of the SBT this year retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977.

Citizens To Save Small Businesses developed a proposal to allow all smaller businesses in Michigan to pay a tax on their profits instead of the SBT, which is primarily a tax on a business's payroll. This Alternative Profits Tax offered small businesses a fairer method of taxation as well as substantially lower tax bills.

UNDER THE active leadership of State Sen. Patrick McCollough (D-Dearborn), the Alternative Profits Tax was passed by the Senate as part of Senate Bill 734 in September.

However, at the same time that the State Senate was responding to the requests of small business people for tax relief, the House of Representatives was passing a very different proposal of its own for changing the SBT. It offered certain businesses an opportunity to reduce the size of their SBT tax bases if a very high percentage of their costs consisted of payroll.

This proposal, which was passed by the House in September, was undoubtedly well meaning. But it has won very little small business support thus far for three reasons:

•It offers less tax relief to small businesses than the Senate'sAlternative Profits Tax;

•Very few businesses that currently pay the SBT qualify for the House provision reducing a business' SBT tax base, whereas the great majority of all small businesses would qualify for the Alternative Profits Tax;

•And under the House proposal, smaller businesses would still be paying a tax on their payrolls, which most small business people regard as a poor measure of their ability to pay taxes in a given year. (It's possible to have a large payroll and record a profit loss at the same time.)

The Alternative Profits Tax offers small businesses an alternative to a payroll tax, and, in effect, repeals the SBT for most small businesses in Michigan.

BECAUSE the State Senate and House each passed different proposals for changing the SBT, a Senate House conference committee (consisting of three members from each) was established two weeks ago to work out a common proposal.

It is this committee that will determine what kind of SBT relief, if any, small businesses get this year. The next three to four weeks will tell the full story.

Citizens To Save Small Businesses is urging small business people in Oakland County to write to Speaker of the House Bobby Crim, to express their support for the Alternative Profits Tax plan as the best way to give smaller businesses the justice they deserve. His address is Bobby Crim, State Capitol, Lansing, Michigan 48909.

With this issue, as with all others, citizens can win . . . .but only if we're willing to get involved.

Introducing the '78 version of the car that doubled sales in '77.

The small car of the future is here today. We've combined innovative design and engineering with exceptional comfort, performance and economy to create a totally new kind of car.

Detroit's Idea of a Small Car vs. Le Car's Idea of a Small Car.

Le Car is not a big car scaled down to be a small car. We didn't leave features off, we added features on. The result is a car with a solid, well-made feel. An exciting, responsive car that is fun to drive.

Le Car comes with front-wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, four-wheel independent suspension and Michelin steel-belted radials, all standard. Chevette, Rabbit, Honda Civic and Ford Fiesta don't.

Front-wheel drive gives Le Car better traction and stability. What it doesn't give you is a drive shaft tunnel. So that bulge in the middle of the car is gone forever, and four adults can ride in what may be the most comfortable seats this side of a luxury sedan.

While you won't have to race Le Car around a track to appreciate its incredible handling and cornering, others have. During the first 8 months of 1977 Le Car amassed a total of 122 first, second and third place finishes in 132 SCCA races.

Comfort and Luxury Unheard of in a Small Car.

Le Car's ride is remarkably smooth, even on the roughest roads. One reason for this is a longer wheelbase than any other car in its class. The wheels have been placed at the extreme corners of the car farther away from the passengers.

Another nice touch: the rear seats fold down to give you 96% more luggage space than Civic and 21% more than Chevette. Outside, we've added the biggest sun roof (optional) on any small car. We call it a "fun roof."

Le Car gives you 41 MPG, highway, 26 MPG, city according to 1978 EPA figures. Remember: These mileage figures are estimates. The actual mileage you get will vary depending on the type of driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition and optional equipment.

When you drive Le Car you'll discover what nearly 2 million people around the world already know. The small car of the future is here today. Prices start at only $3,495*.

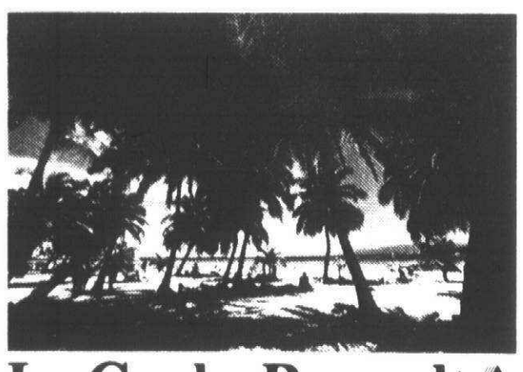

*Sweepstakes end November 30, 1977. Offer void where prohibited. †P.O.E. East Coast Price excludes transportation, dealer preparation and taxes. Mag wheels optional at extra cost. Prices higher in the West. Renault USA, Inc. 1977

Le Car/Club Med Sweepstakes

Come in and test drive a '78 Le Car. You could win a 1-week, all-expense-paid trip for two to the Club Mediterranee of your choice in the French Caribbean.*

If you're one of the six winners chosen, you'll be provided with round trip transportation and accommodations in an air-conditioned bungalow. And like all Club Med members you can enjoy unlimited food and wine at lunch and dinner and nightly entertainment. Sports activities available include tennis, scuba diving, sailing, water-skiing, snorkeling, swimming, volleyball, ping-pong, bocce ball, water polo, basketball, archery, calisthenics and yoga.

DAR marks anniversary

Nine members of the Sarah Ann Cochrane Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, received 25-year certificates Monday when the chapter celebrated its 51st anniversary with a birthday luncheon at the Plymouth Hilton.

Letitia Eldridge Ambler, Marjorie Philbrick Bain, Ruth DuBois Blomberg, Edna M. Blunk, Ruth Yerkes Burkman, Marjorie Horan Coolman, Ruth Robinson Stark, Helen Hoover Thasms and Maxine Geddes Willoughby were awarded pins.

Mrs. Albert Heindryckx, chapter regent, explained that although all the recepients had more than 34 years of membership, the National Society DAR had made the 25-year certificates available for the first time this year.

"The chapter wanted to show it's appreciation now, rather than wait for 50-year recognition," said Mrs. Heindryckx. "Together, they represent a total of 341 years of service in the DAR. Sarah Ann Cochrane Chapter is proud of these ladies who have contributed so much, but it also is grateful for the junior members entering the chapter.

"Last year, the chapter won the Michigan Society Daughters of the American Revolution Award for admitting the largest number of junior members when 10 young women joined." Junior members who attended the luncheon were Terry Lapham, Mrs. Thomas McDonald, Dr. Cynthia Baumhart and Jacqueline Merwin.

REGENTS FROM neighboring chapters were honored quests at the anniversary party. They were Mrs. John Oncley, Sarah Caswell Angell, Ann Arbor; Mrs. John Buchanan, General Josiah Harmar, Grosse Pointe Park; Alice Serrell, General Richardson, Pontiac; Mrs. James Reeves, Ezra Parker, Royal Oak; Mrs. Joseph H. Embury, Fort Pontchartrain, Highland Park; Mrs. Paul Trimmer, Piety Hill, Birmingham; Mrs. John Siegmund, vice regent, John Sackett, Redford; Mrs. John Schmidt, Quakertown, Farmington and Mrs. Charles Parsons, Ypsilanti.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. Roswell Tanger presented a slide-talk program, "Famous Gardens of the World."

Mrs. Hugh Lafferty, vice regent, was in charge of luncheon arrangements. Mrs. D.H. Baumhart handled reservations, and Terry Laphan, Mimi Merwin McDonald, Joyce Greenler and Mrs. Robert Greenler, planned the decorations.

'Your beds are unmade– go home and do the dishes'

By SHIRLEE IDEN

HOUSTON—Outside the Houston convention hall, lay preachers barked through bullhorns at the women entering for them to listen to their pastors and their husbands and read the Bible.

"Go home, your beds are unmade. Go home and do the dishes," one shouted.

Inside, 2,000 women strong, delegates to the International Women's Year Conference (IWY) took a different stand and asked for equality and independence, for employment and credit rights, for equal rights under the U.S. Constitution, abortion rights, minority rights and the right to sexual preference.

Mostly they won what they fought for inside, but not without some dissention.

Incidents of physical violence were limited to an assault on two women by men believed to be members of the Ku Klux Klan One woman was punched in the stomach, the other was hit on the head.

The IWY conference was the unity with diversity and the coming together of a human and concerned sorority.

Highpoints of the dramatic "herstoric" weekend were passage of planks on in favor of the ERA, on reproductive freedom (abortion), and finally, after passionate dialogue, on sexual preference.

Betty Friedan, often called the mother of the feminist movement, spoke for both the ERA and lesbian rights. The latter, was a capitulation

Canton Observer
Suburban Life
Thursday, November 24, 1977 (C)1B

on her part.

"I'm known to be violently opposed to the lesbian issue in the women's movement," She said. "It's been used to divide us, and it has alienated many.

"As someone who grew up in middle America and as someone who has loved men too well, I have trouble with this issue, my passionate objective must be passage of ERA, but there is nothing in ERA to protect the rights of homosexuals. Now, I believe we must help lesbian women gain protection of their own civil rights. We need every ounce of effort in the next 13 months to get ERA passed, but today we must vote for the revolution of sexual preference."

Before passage of the pro-ERA resolution on Saturday, Ms. Friedan called the tightly-run convention "the most beautiful job of manipulation I ever saw."

"The women are marvelous, but the control and manipulation are horrible. The only thing that will get ERA passed," she said, "is the independent power of women and this circus won't do it. The people who co-opted this conference are corrupting the independent energies of women."

In contrast, Helen Milliken, wife of Michigan's governor, thought the conference was run very well, and that it effectively mobilized the women's energies. "I feel it's one of the great experiences of my life and a consciousness-raising for women all over the country," she said.

U.S. Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman (D-N.Y.) was also impressed by the proceedings. "It's been an orderly conference and in my talks with delegates, they've said it's been fulfilling," she said. "I heard an anti-ERA woman say on TV that the $5 million the government expended was the best money ever spent."

Pat Burnett, chairperson of the Michigan Women's Commission and National Organization for Women (NOW) activist, said that everyone in the Houston meeting was beyond parties, special interests and personalities and that the conference was "just great."

Another Pat, Pat Barbour, national director of the anti-feminist group Happiness of Womanhood (HOW), an alternate from Dearborn Heights, said the meeting was "reminiscent of what happened at the Lansing meeting in June where the delegates were elected.

"They had the votes. It was rigged in Lansing and it's the same here," she said. "It's a package deal, and they've got it all tied up in a blue ribbon."

Phyllis Shlaffly, national chairwoman of Stop ERA, said in a press conference she will continue her six-year fight. She termed the ERA vote in Houston as "played out a scenario at taxpayers expense."

Kari Lavalli, 17, a Dearborn High School student, and Michigan's youngest delegate, found a convention mostly positive expressive. "I came here because it's about my future," she said, "and it was better than I expected. I thought there would be more dissension but I do think there should have been more input from young people."

Laura Callow, of Livonia, breathed a sigh of relief that the predicted violence and disruption never materialized. "I'm not a delegate, just an observer, but I was present and I watched and I liked what I saw," she said. "I attended two workshops, one on displaced homemakers, and one on the media which showed how it presents women and also told how to use the media to get our stories told.

"The vote on the ERA was exhilarating and I've met and talked with women from many other states, including antis, and there's been an exchange of view that I find very positive.

"One sign outside said 'Talk to your pastor and your husband,' and I thought it funny, because both my husband and my pastor support ERA. I talked to an anti woman, and she told me the heart of this conference was the one-to-one conversation we had, and I agreed."

Loretta Ross, of Plymouth, a NOW member, and housekeeper in a hotel, was optimistic. "I'm happy the ERA resolution passed and it will be even better when it gets ratified after three more states OK it." She said the convention was well-run, but she had a few complaints about Houston's hotels. She said she had a tough time getting into her room, like hundreds of others.

Darlene Otis, of Jackson, said she too was elated about passage of the ERA plank, and thought everyone had bent over backwards to be fair.

"However, I think abortion should be a very last resort," she said, "but even though everyone is not pro-abortion, we are pro-choice, and it must remain a viable choice."

Michigan women most experienced in the political arena, saw the state delegation and the conference as outstanding successes.

Libby Maynard, of Flint, vice-chairperson of the Michigan democratic party, said the women proved they can manage a large conference like this in an orderly way. "There was dissent but that's part of things. It went well."

"Amen," said Lillian Hatcher, of Detroit, an international representative for the UAW. "It was a good thing that ERA went through without a lot of 'who-shot-John,'" she declared. "The antis were quite outnumbered. It was a pure, clear majority. ERA's passage set a pattern to open the minds of women everywhere."

Dorothy Haener, another labor leader form Detroit, had praise for Michigan's delegation. "It's gone beautifully and I'm proud to be from Michigan," she said. She was an IWY commissioner.

"Not surprising," said Janet Goode, of Farmington Hills, "but very inspiring, and I'm thrilled to be a part of history. She said "I've mailed my daughter and granddaughters materials from here which are sure to become collector's items."

Lawrence Edlebrock, of Detroit, who has seven children, said the chairpersons at the conference were excellent. "But I resent the fact that because there are are a couple of points we don't agree with, like ERA and abortion, that it's said we're against everything. I don't like being called an ogre and an enemy."

Former State Sen. Lorraine Beebee said the Michigan delegates worked and talked together despite great diversity. "So much has been accomplished," she said, "After this, I'll speak anywhere and share this and separate the facts from the fantasy."

Sallie Snieder, 25, who lives in Royal Oak and works as an optical dispenser in Southfield, said she acted in a NOW chapter and her interest in the IWY deliberations included a deep concern for equal rights for senior citizens.

"They're just not respected enough, and I'd like to see better care," she explained. She was elated when the plank on the elderly passed, but said confernce proceedings could have gone smoother.

State representative Ruth McNamee, of Birmingham, said she had "a great feeling of moving ahead in history," but warned "we need to understand that the national resolutions we've made were not letter or word perfect. They are guidelines that have to be fine-tuned, if and when they're introduced to the legislative process."

Women make history too over weekend

By SHIRLEE IDEN

HOUSTON—Because they are women, those assembled at the Houston International Women's Year Conference (IWY) showed a special interest in children that went far beyond rhetoric.

About 150 children were enrolled in child-care centers convenient to the meeting hall, and their care and feeding for the four day assembly was paid for by the IWY, itself funded by a $5 million congressional grant. One delegate, Joanne Alter, a state legislator from Illinois, brought her eight-week-old daughter to the conference, and because she was breast-fed, kept her close in sessions, caucuses and press conferences.

Another woman went into labor while waiting in line to register.

s on many other issues, children brought unity and diversity

Margaret Mead, renowned sociologist, touched on family and child care problems in a press conference. And Odessa Smith, who says she is a "poverty woman," spoke of the plight of children of unwed parents.

Dr. Mead told the convention that she hoped that despite the threat of nuclear holocaust, "we may be able to produce a world where our children and others may be safe.

"But," she declared, "this country is polarized on almost every issue. It's polarized by people interested in progress and by those who want to stay where they are. . The last two decades have been marked by people working both for good and to destroy each other."

Asked if men might be threatened by this meeting and the femininst deliberations, she said "I don't think men are threatened at all. That's just newspaper talk. Men have never been able to act completely without women."

On children, Dr. Mead said 12-hour day-care centers should never be used except in dire circumstances. "But millions in this country are in dire circumstances.

"I don't think people should get married in the first place if they want 12-hour day-care. I'd rather people had fewer children if they need 12-hour day-care."

On abortion, she said, "I think it's barbarous to first say as the Supreme Court did, that abortion is legal, and then deny it to the poor. What we really need is male contraception."

Odessa Smith said she's been into "social things" for three years, but her particular interest is the cause of children born to unwed parents. Her vehicle to lobby for these voiceless victims has been a group she founded called Illegitimate Children's Liberation of the World.

"What I have tried to do is to disassociate these children from the stigma of the word "illegitimate,' she said. "It causes child abuse and many other legal problems. I want it removed from all legal documents."

Ms. Smith, herself an unwed mother, ran unsuccessfully for the Detroit Council this month. "I wanted to get an amendment passed here at the IWY, among other things, but I couldn't get to the mike," she said. "However, I don't see it as a defeat, but a stimulus to fight harder. The word 'illegitimate' discounts these childern before they're born."

State Rep. Barbara Rose Collins (D-Detroit), was happy the abortion plank passed. "I think a lot of people need to be realistic about moralistic feelings about saving the fetus, and they are forcing Medicaid women into the hands of butchers. These people fighting abortion have never before been concerned about anyone's human rights, but suddenly they're for the rights of the unborn."

Maryann Mahaffey, Detroit City Councilwoman and social worker said, "Children are not the property of their parents. They're human beings in the process of development. The plank on child abuse may be a beginning toward addressing our concerns about children."

Shirley Monson, of Farmington Hills, was calm and smiling, whether making the rounds of the delegations or passing out fried chicken dinners to weary and hungry delegates after more than six hours of deliberations. During the debate on the elderly, she commented: "One of the anti women said that if women want freedom of choice about their bodies when they are young, they ought not to expect us to care for their bodies when they become old. That's difficult for me, because I just lost my mother two days ago. I have relatives, a couple over 75 years of age, and his health is failing. If he has to go into a nursing home his social security will go with him, and she won't have anything. We must solve these problems."

Jean King, chairwoman of the Michigan delegation and Ann Arbor attorney, was a mother figure to her delegation, and even brought along two teenage daugters, Sally and Nancy. No one could figure out who had the best time. Michigan's women delegates, observers and alternates, mostly agreed, but at times they agreed to disagree. Overall, they seemed to rise to a great sense of purpose, and joined together in moving women forward.

Dial for news on area child care

If you are wondering how to locate child care facilities iin the area, remember 591-6400, extension 368.

If you call that number between 1-3 p.m. Monday or Tuesday, you will reach Jan Burke or Mary Jo Keller, who will be sitting in the Women's Resource Center at Schoolcraft College waiting for the phone to ring.

They will be be speaking for the Livonia Council of Early Childhood Services, formed to make information concerning locations, fees and services available to parents seeking child care.

To do this, the council has compiled information from questionnaires sent to licensed child-care facilities in Farmington, Farmington Hills, Garden City, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, Redford and Westland.

With this information LCECS can answer questions about fees charged by the various facilities, ratio of adult supervision per child, number of meals served and the minimum and maximum number of hours a child can be in the center, including evening, holiday and after-school hours.

"Parents requesting information will be given the names of three to five facilities that may meet their particular needs," explained Ms. Burke, who is chairperson of LCECS. "They are advised to contact and visit the given centers prior to making a decision."

A booklet will be sent to callers describing what to look for when trying to decide which facility to choose, plus a parent checklist to be used in evaluating the facility.

"After a six-week period a follow-up call will be made to parents to determine whether or not their needs and the needs of their children have been met," she said.

"My students in child care classes at Schoolcraft are absolutely ecstatic about the service," reported Ms. Keller. "They can get a list and go observe the various kinds of child care offered. It gives them an idea of what's available, and helps them make career decision."

November is a great month to pay tribute to the American Indian. Thanksgiving, the highlight of this month, goes hand-in-hand with the nation's first inhabitants.

Many school children have been studying about the first Americans all month. Many have taken trips to Central Middle School in Plymouth to see an Indian display.

Last week Cub Scouts from Gallimore Pack 766 paid their own tribute to the American Indian. Each den performed or told about what they had been doing all month.

From Den 1, Joyce Kline and her boys told an Indian story. Each part of the story was written by each boy.

Carol Massey and Den 2 had studied an Indian song. Den 3, headed by Linda Lopez, peformed a brave dance in costumes they had made.

Marlana Krolicki's Den 4 did a skit called the Bionic Indian Brave. They also displayed the tepee they had made.

Diane Darts' Den 5 showed Indian necklaces and bracelets. They also wore their costumes.

The boys from Den 6 wore their costumes and beat their drums to the Hopi Snake Dance, which is a rain prayer.

Margaret Shields and Den 7 showed their costumes and drums. They also made a totem pole and played a game once played by Indian boys.Den 8, led by Anna Walden, shhwed the tepee they had made.

All in all, the boys have been very busy this month learning about the first Americans.

The cubs also have donated enough food for two Thanksgiving baskets to be given to needy families.

WHILE ERIKKSON'S junior Girl Scouts from Troop 526 are busy making stuffed toys for the children at the Plymouth Center for Human Development the Brownies from this school are busy too.

Troop 640 headed by Jane Peterson and Troop 244 headed by Susan Pidsasny are designing the gift wrap and making the Christmas cards to go along with the gifts the juniors are making.

Erikkson's troops were organized last year by Ruby Monk, who serves as troop service director. She was awarded a silver cup from the Girl Scout Council for doing such a great job in getting the troops off to a good start.

Marge Altobello and Dawn Harter are the leaders of the other Brownie troops from Eriksson.

Ruby is the area association chairwoman for the sweatshirt sale. The shirts are specially designed for the leaders of Girl Scouts and Brownies. She reminds leaders in the Plymouth, Canton, Northville area that the deadline for ordering the shirts has been extended to the end of November. Call her at 981-1626 for more information.

I WONDER HOW many of us stop to remember what Thanksgiving means. How many of us remember the first Thanksgiving Day when the Pilgrims feasted and gave their thanks for making it in a new world?

Has this day just turned into a day for turkey and the start of the Christmas season?

Maybe it's hard to be thankful when you feel you have many problems and worries. At times you may think "What in the world have I got to be thankful for?" I'm sure if you search deep in your heart you'll find the answer.

Let us be thankful for our families, our children and especially our friends. Let me be thankful for you and you be thankful for me. Remember no matter how tough life gets there's not much of an alternative.

I'm thankful that I can once again say "Have a Happy Thanksgiving" to all you in Canton.

IN WEST DEARBORN . . . ACROSS FROM JACOBSON'S

PARASOLS & Galoshes

By GAE McCORD

Today I lost a dear friend.

I would not write of this if it were strictly a personal loss. But it wasn't. My sadness is shared by an entire community. The people who knew Hazel Larson intimately, those who worked with her casually and those whose lives were touched by her indirectly.

She gave much to our town. The symphony, her church, the high school musical groups, Panhellenic and the Arts Council all grew and were richer for her special kind of attention. All are better organizations because Hazel gave her special touch to them.

But then, Hazel always gave an extra special something to whatever her involvement happened to be. . .a personal warmth and humor and love. And love was what Hazel was all about.

Each friend (and there were many of all descriptions) to Hazel was a special treasure whom she nurtured and nourishedin her own unique way.

She wrote weekly letters to a friend who had suddenly lost a young son. She made a bargain with a teenaged boy. When he came through on his end of the deal she knitted him a large complicated sweater. When heart-broken parents returned to Plymouth after the tragic loss of a child, Hazel was on their doorstep with her welcoming arms outstretched. She rejoiced when we were happy, shared our small victories and large defeats and wept when we were sad.

She welcomed newcomers, called to say your six-year-old was climbing a tree with a hatchet in hand and maybe you'd want to do something. She took in the new baby when the fire department was busy putting out a house fire set by adventurous children. She rescued puppies from the street.

And she wrote. While she occasionally popped out with a vocal surprise, (which some of us called Hazelisms, and loved her for them) when she put pen to paper her eloquence was clean and true. She wrote in times of joy and sadness. She sent just the right words of hope to friends in despair and shared the simple joys of flowers and sunlight and children with homesick castaways.

Her letters of sympathy and of congratulation were always so special and so personal we often felt she could read our innermost thoughts.

Hazel has left a beautiful family, of whom she was justly proud. To Arthur, Al, Sue, John, Skip, Sally Hobbs and little Erin, the whole community extends our heartbrken sympathy.

So, dear Haze, we thank you for the lessons you taught us about love and forgiveness, and patience and what the true meaning of friendship can be.

We hope we don't forget them, for we shall never forget you.

To you, good friend, we say what we've heard you say so many times. "Good bye, Darling and thanks."

Nursing home aides offered scholarships

Partial tuition scholarships will be provided 100 persons who volunteer time to assist aged residents of nursing homes in a gerontology program at Madonna Collee, Livonia. Similar to programs which have already trained over 400 persons to assist the elderly, it is intended to provide volunteers with some professional knowledge about the process of aging.

"This program has been so successful," according to Sr. Colleen Morris, chairwoman of the Madonna gerontology department, "That some of our previous volunteers have found new full-time or part-time careers in gerontology centers. All have improved the quality of their volunteerism."

The new training program begins at Madonna on January 10, but enrollment should be completed immediately.

Volunteers will meet for 15 Tuesday evening seminars to participate in discussions of the physical, emotional, and spiritual needs of aging persons confined to nursing centers. There will also be discussion of services available to the elderly through public agencies.

Seminar leaders will be professionals currently active in the field of gerontology. They include Judy Schneider, a supervisor for volunteers for the Lutheran Churches of Detroit, Dr. Joseph J. Gadbow, internist and geriatrician at Henry Ford Hospital, Sr. Joyce DeShano of the National Catholic Chaplain Association, David Banks of the Greater Detroit Society for the Blind, and Lawrence Dibble, hearing and speech consultant, Bureau of Personal Health.

"Spiritual Well-Being" will be discussed by Rev. Philip O'Dwyer of the Madonna faculty, and "The Team Approach to the Dying Patient" will be the topic of Dr. John Burrows, clinical professor at Wayne State University and staff physician at St. John Hospital.

Certificates will be awarded persons who complete the training program and devote at least six hours per week of service in a nursing home as a related field experience.

Volunteers who wish to receive college credit may apply for admission to Madonna College. Since partial tuition scholarships of $88 are provided for the training, the cost of the four-credit course is only $75 for enrollees, including tuition, parking fee, and special student assessment. The program is partially funded by the federal Administration on Aging, Title III, Older Americans Act.

Further information about registration may be obtained from Sr. Colleen Morris, chairwoman of the gerontology department, Madonna College, Livonia, or by calling 425-8000, ext. 53.

CHURCH BULLETIN

WESTLAND ASSEMBLY OF GOD, 1075 Venoy Road, Garden City, will participate in the "Revivaltime" World Prayermeeting all day Sunday.

The Prayermeeting is organized by "Revivaltime," International radio broadcast of the Assemblies of God, released on approximately 660 stations. According to the Rev. F. G. Lemelin, over 100,000 persons across the nation are expected to participate in more than 2,000 volunteer prayer groups.

Each of the prayer groups will receive duplicated lists from the compiled requests. Each prayer partner will be asked to pray for 12 to 15 specific requests.

GRAND RIVER BAPTIST CHURCH, 34500 Six Mile, Livonia, will have a candlelight Thanksgiving Eve service, 7:30 p.m. with the Chancel Choir. Pastor Gough's sermon is entitled "Five Kernels for Thanksgiving."

Dr. Howard Haworth will speak at 10:45 a.m. during the Sunday Service. There will be a "Night of Music" at 7 p.m.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH, 43065 Joy Road, Canton, will present the Renaissance, one of the most popular trios in gospel music circles, at 6 p.m. Sunday.

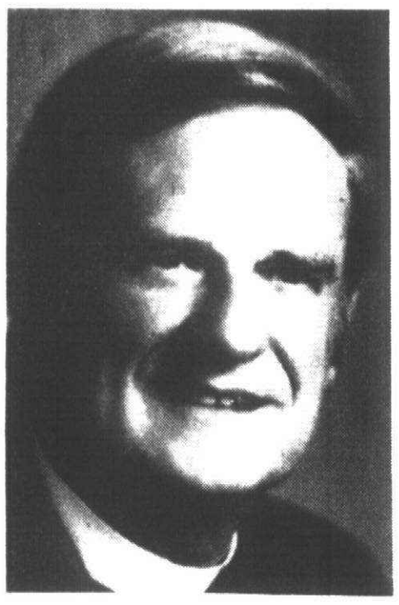

The Renaissance, recording artists for Singspiration Records, are in constant demand throughout the United States and Canada.

The group will present a variety of contemporary and traditional gospel music.

THE UNIVERSALIST UNITARIAN CHURCH OF FARMINGTON, 25301 Halstead Road, will host Bernie Offen, prisoner of the German concentration camps, 10 a.m. Sunday.

Offen will join the Rev. David Phreaner in "Exodus Auschwitz," a service that will explore Offen's experience in the camps and consider how meaning in life can emerge from tragedy.

The public is invited to attend.

GARDEN CITY FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, on Marquette at Henry Ruff Road, will present Gerald List, directing the Lutheran Choralaires, a 24-voice male chorus, 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 30.

The chorus, founded shortly after World War II, is composed of singers from the Detroit metropolitan area. The Garden City program will include anthems, Christmas songs and several patriotic numbers.

ST. ANDREW EPISCOPAL CHURCH, 16360 Hubbard Road, Livonia, will host Rt. Rev. H. Coleman McGehee, bishop of the Diocese of Michigan, for the confirmation of about 25 young people, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 30.

Bishop McGehee will also dedicate and consecrate a faceted entrance way and a seven-foot bas relief statue of St. Andrew at this service.

All area women are invited to attend the annual Christmas luncheon at 12:15, Friday, Dec. 2 in the church.

The luncheon will be followed by the installation of officers by Mary Lou Anderson. Music will be provided by the Stevenson Village Singers.

For reservations call Mrs. Frances Cash at 421-2049 by Nov. 30. Child care will be available.

WARD UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF LIVONIA, at the corner of Farmington and Six Mile, welcomes Gary Hopwood, a recent graduate of Wheaton College in Wheaton Ill. who will succeed Terry Prisk as director of youth ministries.

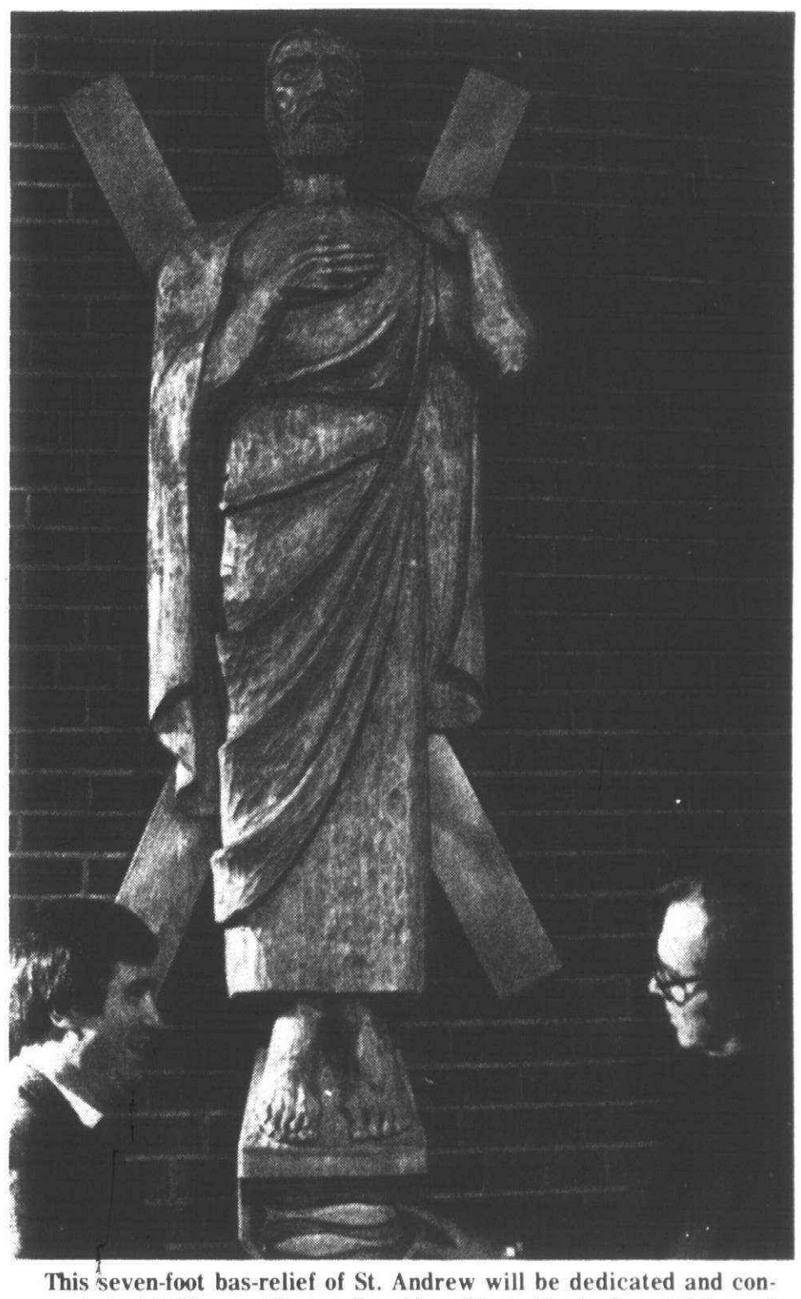

Prisk, 22, has worked with teens in church programs and on the college campus. One of his most recent involvements was organizing and leading wilderness camping trips at Honey Rock Camp in northern Wisconsin and Michigan's upper peninsula. Some of these camping trips were in conjunction with the juvenile courts of Illinois.

DETROIT FIRST CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE, which meets in Stevenson High School, 33500 Six Mile, Livonia, will present a Thanksgiving festival of praise at 10:50 Sunday, Nov. 27.

Appearing in concert will be the Speers, who will present gospel music.

ST. TIMOTHY UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, 16700 Newburgh, Livonia, will have as its speaker at the Thanksgiving eve services, Wednesday, Nov. 23 at 7:30 p.m., Dr. James Keefer.

Dr. Keefer and his family are missionaries in Ethiopia, serving the United Presbyterian Church of USA. He has been teaching New Testament subjects and New Testament Greek in Mekans Yesus Seminary in Addis Abbaba. He is in this country until the political situation in Ethiopia improves.

This seven-foot bas-relief of St. Andrew will be dedicated and consecrated at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 30, in St. Andrew Episcopal Church, 16360 Hubbard, Livonia. Standing beneath the sculpture are the Rev. Richard S. Krejci (left) and the Rev. Kenneth Davis, rector of St. Andrew. (Photo by Cyd Abatt)

Church medieval festival is royally proclaimed

An evening of entertainment, dating back five centuries in its origin, will be hosted by Village United Presbyterian Church, Redford, Dec.2-4 and Dec. 9-11.

A dancing bear, acrobats, mime-court jester, magician, strolling minstrels, bagpipe and drum corps, Scottish kilted dancers, and the Jewish Community Center Renaissance Dancers will entertain at the Boar's Head Festival. A jovial king and queen, as well as a scarlet robed cardinal will preside over the festivities.

Choir members, attired in medieval costumes, will sing 15th and 16th century English madrigals and chorales.

After a procession of the Boar's head and stuffed pheasant by costumed Beefeater guards, a full course dinner, including the wassail bowl, beef barely soup, roast beef, chicken, vegetables, Yorkshire pudding and plum figgy pudding will be served. All food will be prepared with authentic recipes from 16th century England. The setting for the meal will be a candlelit room decorated in the manner of an old English Great Castle Hall, including a moat and drawbridge.

The complete dinner theater presentation cost is $12.50 per person. The church is located at 25350 W. Six Mile, one block east of Beech-Daly Road. Seating is limited to 175 people, so the church suggests reservations be made early. For more information, call Robert W. Harring at 569-3590.

Modras named to advisory committee

The Rev. Ronald Modras, professor of systematic theology at St. John Provincial Seminary, was appointed to the advisory committee of the Secretariat for Catholic-Jewish Relations.

Fr. Modras was appointed by Bishop Francis J. Mugavero of Brooklyn, the present episcopal moderator of the Secretariat. The committee offers suggestions to the Secretariat and the bishops, and helps spread and implement their decisions.

Fr. Modras has a bachelor's degree in sacred theology from the Catholic University of America, a master's degree in philosophy from the University of Detroit and a doctorate in theology from the University of Tubingen, Germany. He has authored several books and was one of the editors of the book "Human Sexuality."

"The cause of Catholic-Jewish relations has long been of special concern to me," Fr. Modras said, adding that he is looking forward to working with the advisory committee.

The committee's major objectives include promoting Jewish-Christian relations, maintaining a liaison with the Jewish community, assisting organizations within the Church and encouraging dialogue and social action between the Catholic and Jewish communities.

Livonia organist featured

James Proffitt is the musical director and he will play along with Mrs. Crute at the console. He is active on the organ committee of the Convenant Baptist Church and was the previous organist of Grand River Baptist Church, Livonia, and Zion Lutheran Church, Ferndale.

Guild prepares for a really big show

The Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford, with eight singers and dancers and 25 loyal backers, looked over 50 years of Broadway musicals to come up with the core of an expanded, tuneful show. They're calling it 'Pieces of Eight,' and it plays the next three weekends at their playhouse on Beech Daly, south of Five Mile.

By ANN SHAW
Special writer

What does it take to put a show on the road? If it's a musical revue by the Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford, ask and they have the formula.

For instance, you can take eight singers and dancers, add about 25 loyal backers who stitch and sew costumes, get prompters and prop teams in rehearsal, and stage directors who have to keep track of everything—and you have the production formula.

Take 50 years of musicals with 800 songs or skits to choose from, select a top-notch musical director and his able helpers (Jack and Judy Pierson), choose songs worth listening to—and try it.

The first such experiment clicked last fall for TGLR, and they won high praise from the state convention of Michigan Community Theaters.

The guild decided to put the show on the local stage this fall, and they're calling it "Pieces of Eight." That makes sense because they are only eight performers.

Performances are scheduled for three weekends: Nov. 25-27; Dec. 2-4; and Dec. 10-11. Curtain is 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 7:30 Sundays. Tickets are $4. Shirley Hulet at 421-3124 handles reservations.

THE OBSERVER decided to watch them in rehearsal because we already expect them to give their best in performance. Our question was, How can they do it?

Watching rehearsal of a musical revue is like watching a host and hostess the morning before the party. The house is being cleaned, unwanted clutter is stuffed into closets, and the list of things to do seems impossible to complete before the guests arrive.

The Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford has been getting itself ready to entertain company.

While songs and dances are being rehearsed—these range 50 years from Richard Rodgers' first musical "The Garrick Gaieties" to the recent Broadway hit "Annie"—other guild supporters are measuring, cutting and stitching costumes, and trying to find props. The producer-director, the invited former director, and the choreographer sit at the front table and take notes, waiting for the second break.

I LOOKED AROUND the street-front playhouse and wondered how they would put it all together. The usual row of chairs was missing; the usual set design on stage wasn't there.

What I saw was not just "back stage" but a house putting itself in order.

Behind the scenes, I saw the egg, beer and whisky cartons marked "Wigs, Children's Costumes and Tops." It's fun to be part of a sneak preview, and certainly good to be reminded of the necessary coordination of so many factors in a musical.

THE SIDELINE details were amusing, but we were really interested in whether the production would be worth buying tickets for and actually going to see.

With a week of rehearsals left, they had their entrances, exits and timing down. They knew the tunes and lyrics. The program is demanding, but the company was nearly ready. By opening night, they shouldn't miss a beat.

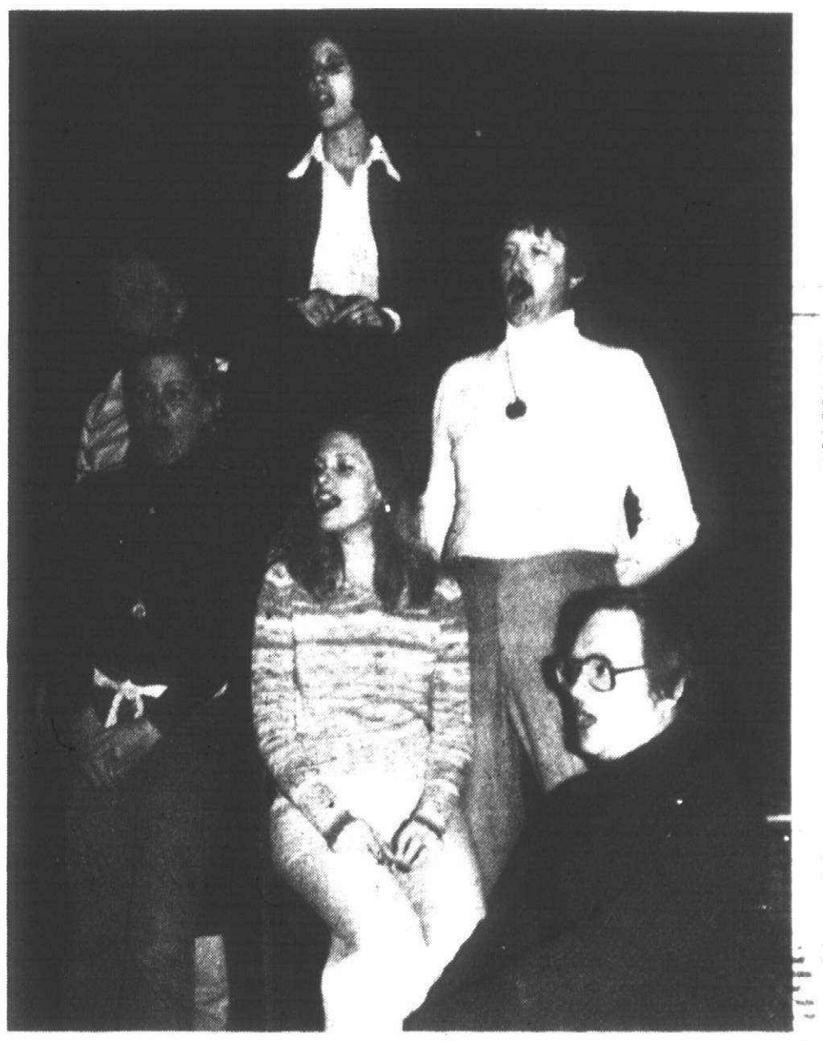

Rough as rehearsals are, the stage presence and voice caliber were excellent. All four women—Mary Cione, Beverly Gotch, Kay Grismer and Julie Milazzo—are experienced and talented. Cione and Grismer have professional credits; Gotch and Milazzo have also played leading roles in musicals. They are well met and matched by their four male counterparts.

HOWARD EGAN, well known to TGLR goers, is at his best in this one, and Andrew Henderson seems to be as entertaining and precise in "Pieces of Eight" as he was in directing last spring's TGLR production of "See-saw."

Hardly an amateur, Doug Kerr has sung the night club round in southeastern Michigan, Chicago and Toronto. Dave Tucker's voice is exactly what the composer ordered in "To Each His Dulcina" from "Man of LaMancha."

The cast holds its own in solos; and even in rehearsal, it sounds good in chorus.

It's a small theater guild on a tight budget, but the rehearsals for this show are promising. The only thing left to one's imagination is how Leonard Bernstein's "Candide" ever intended eight voices to sound like an orchestra.

Davey Singers, Rotary Clubs in harmony

Area Rotarians are making an early pitch to help Easter Seals by promoting a special benefit Christmas concert featuring TV personality Ed Asner and Detroit's own Max Davey Singers and Orchestra.

The benefit is set for 2 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 4, in Ford Auditorium and combines business with pleasure for all the participating Wayne County Rotary clubs that make up District 640. While proceeds for the show will go to the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Wayne County, Rotarians themselves will bask in the spotlight briefly at the benefit that has "Rotary Appreciation Day" as its subtitle.

Part of the special script developed for the Sunday show only will trace Rotary's support of Easter Seals back to the 1900s when Edgar Allen, a prosperous businessman through personal tragedy saw the need for helping handicapped people. With the assistance of fellow Rotarians, he opened the Gates Hospital for Crippled Children in 1915 in Elyria, O.

Rotary's district governor, Dr. Gerald Ebmeyer, of Westland, is serving as honorary chairman of the benefit. Tickets at $10 for the Sunday performance are available by contacting Ford Auditorium or by calling Easter Seal Society at 722-3065.

Sunday's benefit, which is open to the public, follows the annual Max Davey Christmas concert at 8 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 3, at Ford Auditorium. Tickets for that performance are available also by contacting Ford Auditorium or by calling Concert Series, Inc. at 476-6276.

Max Davey's involvement with Easter Seals is no mere coincidence, he notes. His family benefited from Easter Seal services when a younger brother was stricken with polio.

"I'm only too glad to repay the favor," commented Davey.

Davey has long been known for his family-type shows and it was this fact – coupled with the Easter Seal benefit – that helped him "sell" Asner on coming to Detroit in this rare personal appearance.

Asner, multiple-Emmy winner on TV, is rapidly gaining fame for his portrayal of the tough metropolitan city editor in the new dramatic show, "The Lou Grant Show." He has also gained acclaim for his serious acting roles in the history-making "Roots" and the TV novella, "Rich Man, Poor Man."

But as narrator of the Max Davey Christmas show, Asner will shed that gruff facade and seriousness to become the "family man" he is in real life. The Detroit appearance, Asner feels, gives him the rare opportunity "to play myself."

Energy crisis affects housing

The proportion of new homes with electric heat increased from 27 per cent in 1971 to 44 per cent in 1976. For the same period—reflecting the scarcity of natural gas in some areas—the percentage of homes build with gas heat dropped from 68 per cent to 47 per cent.

Stanwoods spark Sub-8 crown

Rock tankers breeze to title

The Plymouth Salem girls' swim team had no problems defending its Suburban Eight League title with an easy league meet victory over six other conference opponents last week at the Salem pool.

The Rocks, which went into the meet with a perfect 6-0 dual meet loop record, easily outdistanced their closest opponents from Trenton 321-200 for the crown.

Dearborn finished third with 175 points, Belleville added 128, Bentley 119, Edsel Ford 113 and Redford Union 79. Allen Park does not have a swim team.

This was the second straight conference victory for coach Chuck Olson and his squad. Salem goes into the state meet with only only dual meet setback—a non-league loss to Livonia Stevenson.

Salem senior Marion Stanwood broke her old league record in the 200-yard free style with a 2:01.73 clocking. She also won the 500-freestyle race.

Marion's freshman sister, Sarah, was the other double winner, taking the title in both sprint races with a :26.93 clocking in the 50-freestyle and :58.44 in the 100-yard freestyle.

The third Standwood sister Sue, twin sister of Marion, also performed well with a second-place finish in the 200-yard individual medley.

Dasher, Hewlett named AP all-state

DENNIS O'CONNOR

Plymouth Salem gridders Bob Dasher and Rich Hewlett were honored as all-state selections on the Associated Press poll last week.

Both gridders are all-Observerland players and unanimous picks on the all-Suburban Eight League team.

Dasher, a 6-3 235-pound offensive center and defensive tackle has been recruited by many major colleges in the midwest. He was the backbone of a strong Rock interior line which helped Salem to a 9-0 regular season and state playoff appearance.

Plymouth runners shut out in Observerland selections

By DOUG FUNKE

The 1977 all-Observer cross country team is a blend of something old and something new.

Garden City East and Livonia Stevenson, which both advanced to the Class A state finals last year, repeated the accomplishment this season, and each placed runners on the all-area honor squad, three from Garden City and one from Stevenson.

Redford Bishop Borgess, the new Catholic League champion, landed one harrier on the team, Redford Thurston was represented by two runners and Livonia Churchill and Livonia Bentley, one each.

Area coaches met recently and named the following harriers as the best in the area:

Charlie Cole, Redford Bishop Borgess. A junior and two-year performer for the Spartans, Cole finished first in five dual meets this fall.

He also finished third in the Catholic League Meet, eighth in the regional, ninth at the Wayne County Meet and 11th at the Shrine Invitational. Cole's best three-mile clocking was 15:18 at the regional.

"Charlie's improvement over last year has been tremendous," said Borgess coach Jim Gavin. "He has dropped a minute and 20 seconds. Next year, he'll probably be the leading runner in the area."

Jaime Galindo, Livonia Stevenson. Galindo, a senior and three-year varsity letter-winner, led the Spartans to a second- place finish in the Inter-Lakes League this fall and earned a spot on the all-conference team.

He placed second in the Ann Arbor Pioneer Invitational, ninth in the regional and 12th at the Redford Union Invitational. His best time this season at Cass Benton Park was 15:58.

"Jaime is like having an assistant coach," said Stevenson coach Paul Holmberg. "He is one of the most conscientious kids I have ever coached. He sets a great example for kids to follow."

Dave Hosey, Livonia Bentley. Only a junior, Hosey finished first in the Livonia City Meet with an effort of 16:13 at Cass Benton Park.

He also placed first in five dual meets, fifth in the Suburban Eight League Meet, seventh at the Schoolcraft Invitational and 11th at the Redford Union Invitational. Hosey missed qualifying for the state finals by only one place at the regional.

Bentley coach Ron Fedraw said of Hosey, "He's the only (quality) runner I had. He ran injured with a lower back and leg problem the last month of the season."

Curt Reynolds, Redford Thurston. Reynolds, in addition to having the best time of all competitors in the state finals, 14:47.3, won the Northwest Suburban League individual title with a record-setting time of 15:47.

A senior and three-year runner, Hess finished second at the Ferris Invitational, fourth at the regional, fourth in the Redford Union Invitational and fourth at the Schoolcraft Invitational.

Hess is also a good student with a grade point average of 3.5.

"Obviously Curt is the best distance runner I've ever had," said Thurston coach Ray Williams. "He'll do well at a major college as a distance runner."

Kevin Kitze, Garden City East. A cross country runner since his junior high school days, Kitze, now a senior, made the all-invitational teams at both Schoolcraft and Redford Union with respective finishes of 14th and fifth.

Sitze, a B student, placed fourth in the Northwest Suburban League Meet, earning a spot on the all-conference team, and 26th in the state finals.

"Kevin has been an inspiration to his team and plans to attend college and pursue cross country and track," said East coach Ron Clifton.

Tim Phillips, Garden City East. Phillips, also a senior, really came on the second half of the season and virtually became the Panthers' number one runner.

He finished sixth in the regional and 24th in the finals. His best effort at the Cass Benton course was 16:22.

"Tim is a very sincere and dedicated young man," said Clifton. "Tim has a good grade point and was a fine leader."

Jeff Perrine, Garden City East. Although competing with nagging injuries much of the season, Perrine still managed to gain a position on the Northwest Suburban League all-conference team.

The senior also placed sixth at the Schoolcraft Invitational, 20th at the regional and 98th at the finals.

"Jeff gave a solid base for our team and did a fine job this year," said Clifton. "Jeff is a good student and plans to attend college."

Brian Hess, Redford Thurston. The senior placed 12th in the state finals, second at the Schoolcraft Invitational and third in the Northwest Suburban League Meet.

A three-year letterman, Hess also finished fifth at the Ferris Invitational and sixth at the Redford Union Invitational. His best time of the season at Cass Benton was 15:53. Either Hess or Reynolds finished first in every Thurston dual meet.

"Like Curt, Brian is a real good runner. Going into the last week of the season, there was not too much difference between the two. The one complemented the other," said Thurston coach Ray Williams.

Tobin Jones, Livonia Churchill. Jones, a senior and three-year runner, finished second in the regional, second in the Livonia City Meet, seventh at the Redford Union Invitational, ninth at the Western Six League Meet and 10th at Schoolcraft.

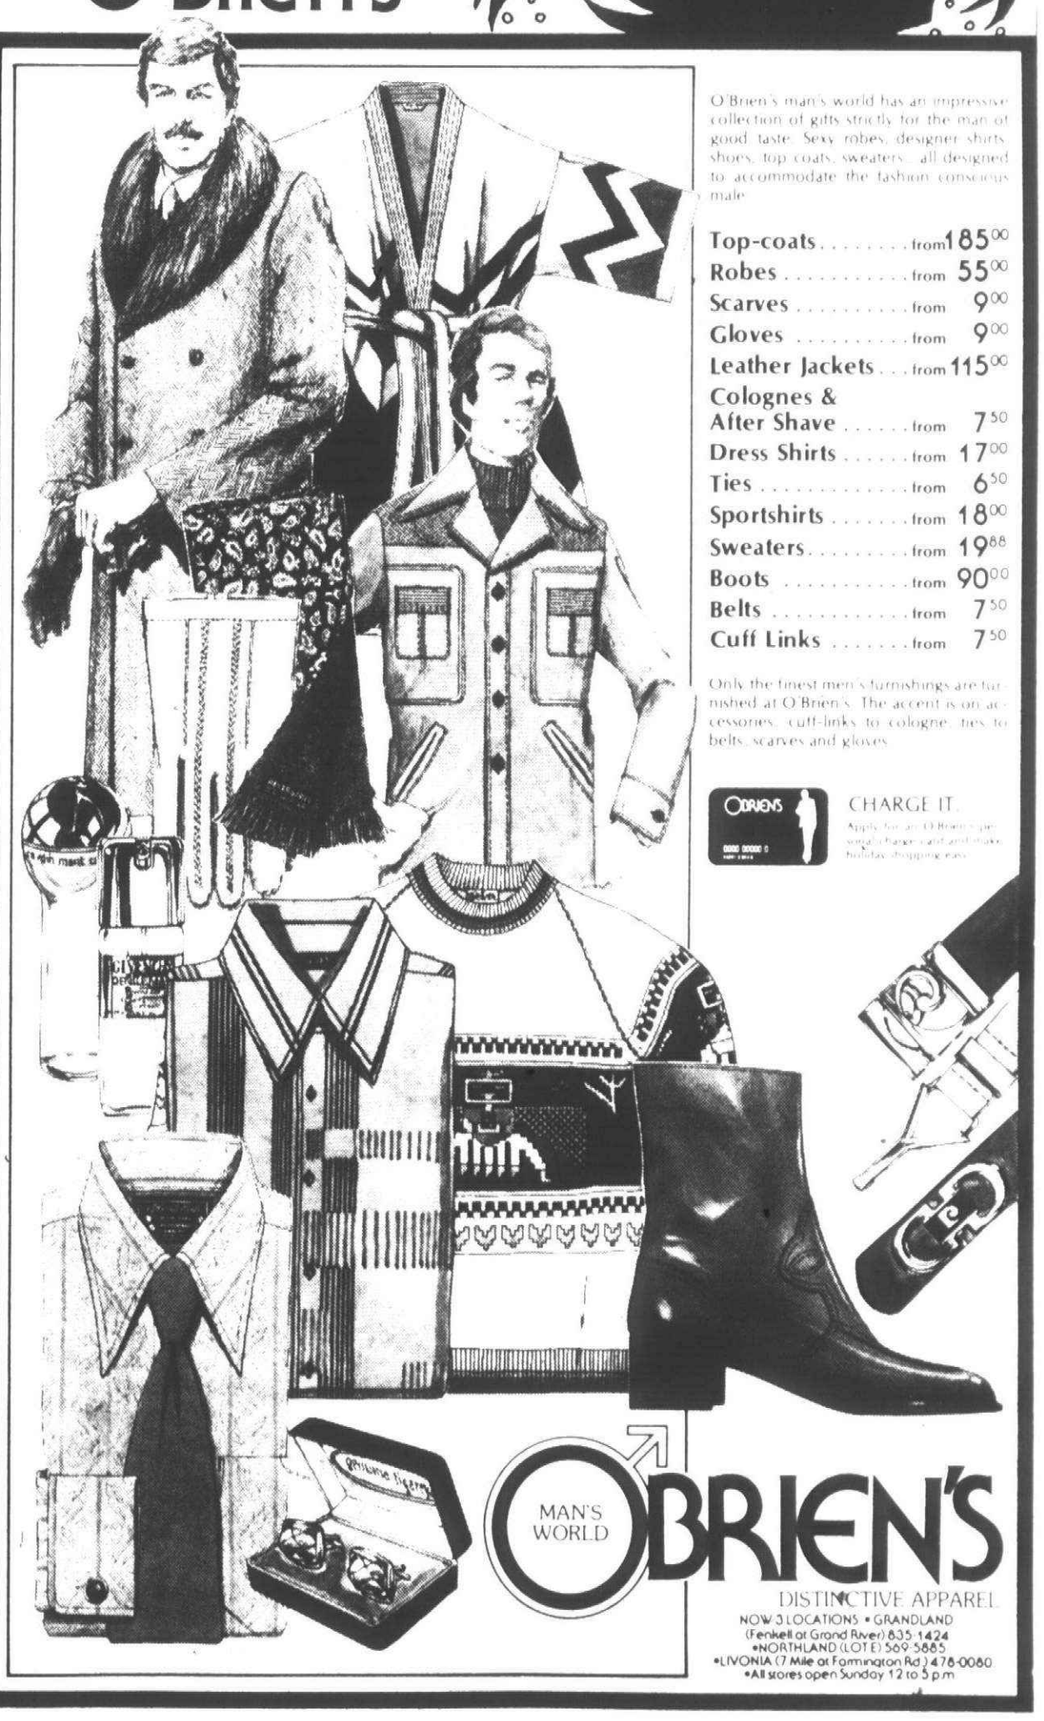

He placed 22d in the state finals and first in five of seven dual meets. Jones, a co-captain, had a best Cass Benton timing of 16:00 this season.

"Tobin, by far, was my best runner," said Churchill coach Dave Westover. "He's a very dependable runner the kind that never lets injuries bother him."

In The Pocket

By W.W. EDGAR

The Detroit metropolitan area is certain to have a few more bowlers named to the American Bowling Congress Hall of Fame within the next few weeks.

The ballots have been mailed to the nation's bowling writers, and it is significant that Detroit has six of its stars on the list of candidates.

Those who have been named include Lee Jouglard, one-time member of the Stroh and Pfeiffer teams; Tony Lindemann, one-time captain of Stroh's; Harry Smith, who once bowled with Pfeiffers; Billy G. who came down from Grand Rapids; Bob Crawford, also a former Stroh captain; and little George Howard, who came over from Kalamazoo to make a name for himself in the all-star leagues.

The author has cast his vote, and he'll be anxious to see how his choices stack up against the rest of the country's writers.

He named Jouglard because he thinks Lee never has received the recognition he deserved for setting the ABC singles record of 775. The record has stood off all challenges since 1951.

Next, he named Tony Lindemann because Tony was a good steady bowler and while he may have lacked color he could knock over the pins when it was necessary.

His third choice was Harry Smith, known effectionately as "The Tiger," Harry was a great bowler in a pinch. He could do more acrobatics on the approaches after posting a clutch strike than any bowler in the area.

The fourth choice (four was all that was allowed) was Bob Crawford, a good, steady bowler, who carried the Stroh team to many honors in recent years. He's still bowling, but he has backed away from the strenuous schedule of the Stroh team, with its league nights and weekend exhibitions.

If it should happen that the author was right in his selections, Detroit will have more members in the Hall of Fame than any other area in the country.

THE GRAND OLD game has taken on a new twist. For years it has thrived on weekly league bowling.

Now, with other attractions cutting in, and the need for more space for the record number of bowlers, a semi-monthly schedule has been inaugurated.

In this manner, keglers don't tire of what they termed "The long grind" and more bowlers now have a chance to engage in league bowling.

The metropolitan area is one of the first locations, in the country to try the semi-monthly league schedule.

ONE OF THE MOST colorul of all tournaments is scheduled at the Thunderbowl in Allen Park.

IT'S CALLED the Old Timers Tournament and this year it will attract more than 500 entries. Each of them will be older than 55 years.

The competitors will range in age from 55 to 90—and no group has more fun on the lanes than these old timers.

They'll bowl on two squads starting at 11 a.m. and will have the annual banquet at 3:30 p.m.

This year's event is dedicated to Norm White, who, for years, was an artist on the WJR schedules and who later served as president of the Old Newsboys.

At Canton's Super Bowl

Goebel hosts fundraiser

The Goebel Beer Men and Women Bowling teams will host an exhibition at the Super Bowl in Canton this Sunday, Nov. 27. Super Bowl is located on the corner of Ford Road and Canton Center Road across from Meijer Thrifty Acres.

The exhibition is the fourth of 10 planned by the Goebel Bowlers to help raise money for the Leader Dogs For The Blind school in Rochester.

"Our original goal at the beginning of the year was $4,000," said organizer Bill DeCesare, who also bowls on the Goebel team.

"But we've raised $3,460 after three exhibitions so our new goal is somewhere between $10,000-$12,000."

This is the first year the Goebel people have sponsored these exhibitions. DeCesare hopes it will become an annual happening.

The Canton Super Bowl exhibition is supported and assisted by the Canton Lions Club.

Interested amateur bowlers should bowl by Sunday. The bowler can use his or her league average with a 100 per cent handicap to a 200 score.

One may bowl as often as desired. The donation is $1 per try.

The top 12 will qualify to bowl against male and female professionals from the Goebel teams in mixed doubles matches on Sunday.

There will be prizes for local qualifiers, including trophies for the top two contestants.

Trick shots, magic acts, an auction, additional prizes and many other surprises will be at the exhibition.

Spectators are welcome free.

All the prizes were donated by Goebel and the Canton Lions Club to help with the cost of the exhibition.

Fear of Spartans helped spark Wolverine victory

By W.W. EDGAR

While the air waves and the public prints were filled with all sorts of superlative adjectives hailing the University of Michigan's great defensive stand that brought a victory over Ohio State, few realized at the time that it was more than a trip to the Rose Bowl which drove the Wolverines on to their greatest triumph of the year.

Sure, there was a lot at stake—a share of the Big Ten title, the glamorous trip to Pasadena and higher ranking than fifth place in the national polls.

But overall, this was the disconcerting thought of what defeat would have meant. The share of the Big Ten title would have vanished in the gathering dusk. The trip to the Rose Bowl would have become a shattered dream, even though th Sugar Bowl and a trip to New Orleans for the holidays would have been a nice reward.

The thoughts of the Sugar Bowl didn't disturb the Wolverines as much as the knowledge that a loss would have enabled Michigan State University—one of their top rivals—to finish ahead of them in the Big Ten and break up the "Big Two."

Had this happened, it would have been a real dignity chaser.

Here was Michigan State, a team that is still serving out a term of probation for violations of the Big Ten code, breaking up the "Big Two" for the first time in the past 10 years—and a team still in the rebuilding process.

Sure, they sneered at this possibili in Ann Arbor for the past week or two, but you can bet the players were reminded of it in the emotional speeches before they took the field.

Ever since the day when Michigan Stat was admitted to the conference, the Spartans have been a well-respected rival. But it was a different case this year when State was not expected to cause too much havoc.

And now, here it was, the final week of the conference race, and the Spartans, highly favored to win over Iowa to climax a comeback no one expected, standing by to challenge Michigan for a higher ranking.

It is no wonder the Wolverines fought so tenaciously though beaten badly in the statistics against the Buckeyes.

Coach "Bo" Schembechler admitted after the conquest of the Buckeyes that this was the most tenacious and most determined team he ever had coached.

Yet, in the dying moments of the great struggle at Michigan Stadium, the Wolverines earned all the laurels that were coming to them.

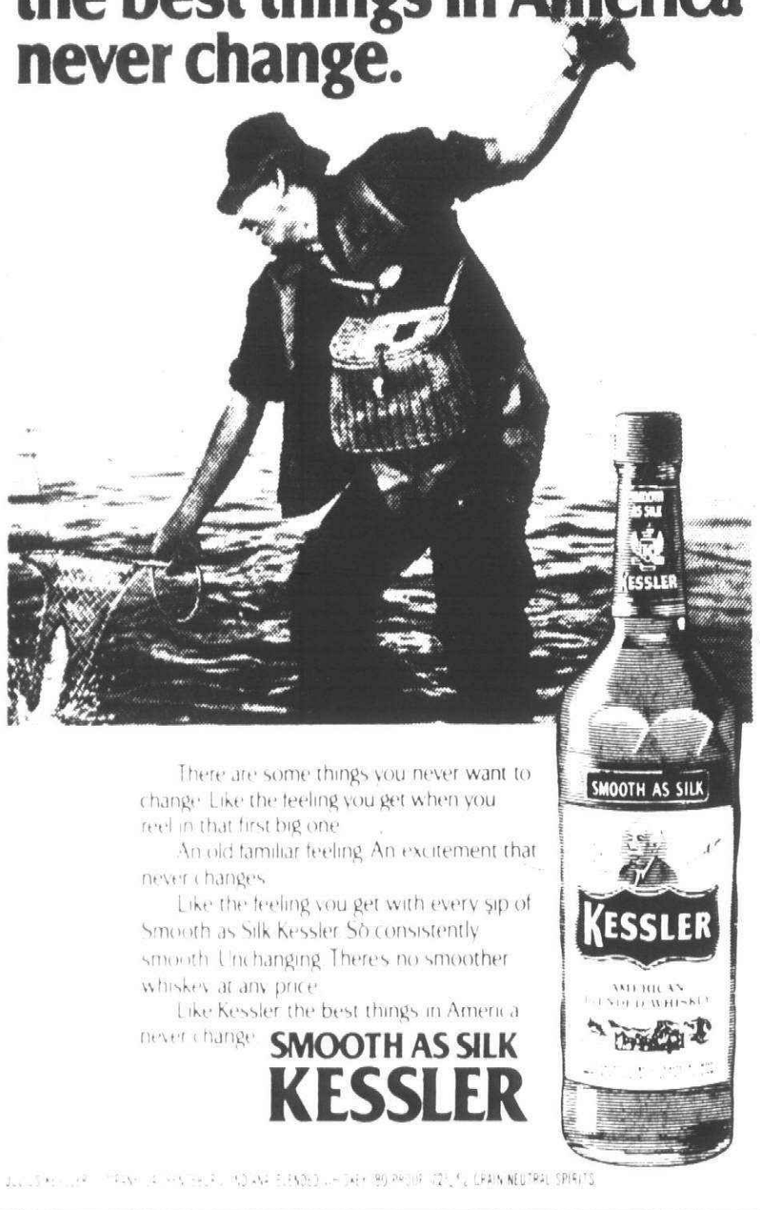

They held off a good Ohio State team that had been undefeated in conference play until it stepped onto the Ann Arbor artificial turf. What's more in keepinp the Buckeyes from scoring a touchdown, it marked the second year in a row that Ohio has not crossed Michigan's goal line.

For Michigan quarterback Rick Leach it was a great afternoon too, even though he completed only a few passes. When he croseed the goal line for Michigan's second toughdown of the 14-6 victory it made him the Wolverines' career leader in touchdown production.

When the officails raised their arms to officially declare the touchdown, it marked the passing of Tom Harmon's record of 50 touchdowns scored during the seasons of 1938-39-40. And Leach still has his senior year remaining.

And just think, the thought of the cross-state rival—Michigan State—finishing in front of the Wolverines may have been the reason for the heroic effort.

Thank goodness the best things in America never change.

There are some things you never want to change. Like the feeling you get when you reel in that first big one.

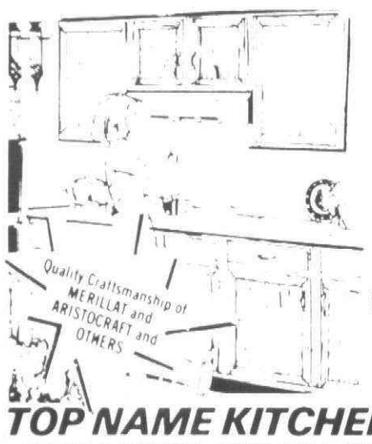

An old familiar feeling. An excitement that never changes.

Like the feeling you get with every sip of Smooth as Silk Kessler. So consistently smooth. Unchanging. There's no smoother whiskey at any price.

Like Kessler, the best things in America never change.

Practices should run much smoother

The winter sports season officially opened last night with the debut of the Plymouth Salem Rocks boys basketball team at Walled Lake Central in a non-league battle.

But for most of the other winter teams, most of the action doesn't start until next week.

For the past few days it has been preview time where the good doctor has looked at the boys basketball, wrestling and swim teams which have high hopes for successful seasons.

Last week, I took some time out to visit the Centennial Park to see how the wrestling and basketball teams were doing at their respective practices.

And for the first time since I've been covering Plymouth-Canton area sports, I visited two separate facilities—one for each school.

And was a pleasure it was.

No longer could I see the varsity and junior vasity basketball teams from both high schools practicing on half courts at the same time because there was only one gymnasium.

No longer could I see the Plymouth-Canton wrestling team sharing the upper balcony of the Salem gymnasium with the Plymouth gymnastics club.

And for the first time, I saw the freshmen cage teams practicing at the Park. In past years they were forced to find room at the middle schools.

And no longer could I see the boys swim teams sharing the same pool.

Most practice sessions started right after school and not many of the athletes were around past 6:30 p.m.

In past years, with only one facility, some practices never got started until 7 p.m. or 8 p.m. and the boys weren't getting home until 10 p.m.

But all of that has changed now.

And what a relief the opening of the new Canton gym that has to be for Plymouth Athletic Director John Sandmann who is responsible for scheduling all practice sessions and had to bear a lot of the headaches the inconvenience of one facility caused everyone.

And yet, Sandmann is the first to continually thank his staff and both the Salem and Canton coaches who had to work together during some trying years.

But now most of these headaches have been resolved with the addition of the new Canton athletic complex.

Not only do the Chiefs have their own home, but, under the Park concept, both facilities can be shared by the two high schools which help make for better and earlier practice sessions.

All the coaches and athletes have deserved two facilities for a long time and now it's finally here making life easier for all winter athletes.

Ladywood takes consolation game

In spite of one of its slowest starts of the season, Ladywood came back to defeat Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher, 40-35, last weekend in the consolation game of the Catholic League girls' basketball playoffs.

Ladywood, normally a run-and-gun team, was limited to seven points during the first quarter and four in the second.

The Blazers, trailing 18-11 at the intermission, took a 26-24 lead after three quarters mainly on the shooting touch of Marti Wallace, who scored eight of her game-high 17 points during the third eight-minute period.

Ladywood out-pointed Gallagher 14-11 during the final quarter to gain the slim victory.

"We weren't moving well at all," said Ladywood coach Ed Kavanaugh of the first-half effort. "We came out with the press (in the third quarter) and caused a lot of turnovers."

2 gridders honored

Hewlett, a 6-0, 195-pound junior quarterback, gained an incredible 901 yards in only seven games this season. He was the spark behind Salem's powerful wishbone offense before he broke his collarbone in the eighth week of the season.

The Associated Press all-state team included 23 members, 10 interior linemen, four ends, six backs, two quarterbacks and one kicker.

Dasher was a unanimous choice with his 96 defensive tackles and 90 per cent blocking record this year. He was a three-year starter for the Rocks.

Hewlett was the second of the two quarterbacks selected. Oddly enough only four signal callers received votes.

Gary Lee, Flint Southwestern's outstanding prospect received 11 votes and Hewlett bagged seven.

John English, Birmingham Brother Rice's notable junior quarterback, got five votes and Saginaw Arthur Hill's Kurt Young received two.

Other all-staters included ends Brad Bache (Harrison), John Horvath (Northville), Bill Cibulka (Fordson), Carey Kipke (Arthur Hill), linemen Dave Smith (Portage), Steve Maidlow (East Lansing), Lewis Sharpy (Det. Southwestern), George Cooper (Det. Northern), Earvin Walker (Pontiac Central), Steve Facine (Hazel Park), Sid Spandrind (Clarkston), John Groutzner (Romeo), and Randy Verbeke (Lake Shore).

The backs included Dave Cassel (Trenton), James Ames (East Kentwood), Tony Greene (Det. Kettering), Bruce Brownie (Kimball), Ross Rockeleau (Lake Shore) and Reggy Mitchell (Flint Southwestern).

The kicker was Harrison's Brett Homovec.

Spikers star in College

The successes of former Plymouth Salem girls volleyball players have continued in the collegian years of six Rock spikers.

Heading the list of college performers is 1976-graduate Jean Sellman, who is a sophomore at the University of Michigan playing her second season on the Wolverines' varsity squad.

Sellman's former teammate at Plymouth, Linda Agardy, is also making the grade at the varsity leval at Eastern Michigan University.

Another 1976 graduate, Anne Schwaller, a student at Schoolcraft College, plays for one of the top junior college volleyball teams in the country.

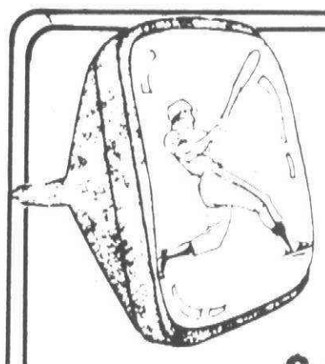

Cheri Leville, a 1977 graduate at Salem, competes at Central Michigan University, while her former teammates Peggy Moore and Sandy Ezzo play at Henry Ford Community College.

Theater-in-round comes to dinner

SC's 'Vicarage' boasts old-fashioned large cast

By TIM RICHARD

SPOTLIGHT

Thursday, November 24, 1977 1E (F,L,P,C)

Dinner theater is suburbia's fastest growing industry. What, then, can be different about Schoolcraft College's Dec. 2-3 offering?

For one thing, it will be theater-in-the-round, a phenomenon which hasn't been seen in these parts in a half-generation. The performers are surrounded on four sides by the audience, and everyone is closer to the action.

For a second, it's Agatha Christie's "Murder in the Vicarage," with a cast of 13. Most dinner theaters offer shows specifically written for that medium, with casts of four, two and even one actor, to hold down costs.

For a third, there's the Schoolcraft culinary arts program's cuisine. Anything associated with dining there is usually a sellout as soon as a two-paragraph announcement hits this newspaper. At this writing, there may be no tickets left at the bookstore on the main campus at 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

Buzz Buzzell of Livonia plays the vicar, whose pomposity is offset by the cockney maid, Mary, played by Karen Weinberg of Clarenceville.

"THIS IS KIND" of an experimental thing," said Dr. Lawrence Rudick, instructor in speech and theater and director of the student performance.

"I've done some theater in the round in the past. The old rules of movement? You practically throw them out the window because they don't apply."

Not only will the action be in the center of the room in the upper level of the Waterman Campus Center, but the stage is 36 inches high, adding visibility.

"One problem is that the openness of the stage demands good vocal projection. I'm surprised it (our cast) is as good as it is. We do use some mikes," he said.

A second problem is British accents. That problem was solved for Dr. Rudick and the cast by London-born Claire Islip, who works in the two-year college's registrar's office.

Dr. Rudick, a 10-year veteran of teaching at Schoolcraft, returns as director after a two-year rest. In the past, he has directed "Our Town," "A Doll's House," and "Born Yesterday" and worked with other directors.

"I used to belong to a community group—the Hartland Dramatic Club," he said. "I played character roles."

In 1971 he earned his doctorate from Stanford University in dramatic literature and play production, writing a 641-page dissertation on the Detroit theater from 1962-75.

IN AN AGATHA Christie play, you can be sure there will be two mysteries: Who will be the victim (answered in the second scene of Act I)? And whodunnit (sometimes never answered)?

Her detective in "Vicarage" is Miss Jane Marple, the dignified student of human nature and of gardening, played in the movies by square-jawed Margaret Rutherford.

Schoolcraft, no longer dominated by recent high school graduates, will have Betty Hancock, 49, of Northville, in the role. "She knows quite a bit about theater and travels to New York to see plays, though she has done only a little on stage," said her director.

Only Miss Marple and Dr. John Haydock, a physician who enjoys philosophical discussions with the vicar, are above suspicion. Dr. Haydock is played by Charles Montgomery of Plymouth.

THE 11 SUSPECTS—the rest of the cast—are:

Rev. Leonard Clement, the serious and sometimes pompous vicar—played by Buzz Buzzell of Livonia, a Navy veteran and band musician who has some stage experience in Utah.

Grisolda Clement, the vicar's devoted and young wife—played by Lisa Danke of Livonia.

Dennis, the live-wire, thrill-seeking teenage nephew of the vicar—played by Steve Massel of Northville.

Ronald Hawes, the intense but sarcastic curate—played by Michael Groves of Northville.

Lettice Protheroe, Dennis' girlfriend (with eyes for another cast member), a rich, spoiled brat—played by Paige Lysinger of Northville.

Lawrence Redding, an artist, charming and two-faced—played byMarc Harlow of Livonia.

Inspector Slack, who quizzes everyone—played by Steve Swansonof Livonia.

Mary, the cockney maid—played by Karen Weinberg, who is well acquainted with the technical side of theater from her work at Clarenceville High.

The constable—played by Kenneth Keating of Plymouth, who also plays the corpse.

Anne Protheroe, Lettice's stepmother, who at one point confesses the murder (as does another character)—played by Anna Maria Warmann of Livonia.

Mrs. Price Ridley, who has spent years in India and considers herself above everyone else—played by Janine Hill of Livonia.

BOB GREGORY, known for his high quality of work at Clarenceville High, is teaching Schoolcraft's technical courses in theater and is technical director of "Vicarage."

Said Dr. Rudick: "We're building. This year we have the most number of persons interested in theater that we've had since I've been here."

Chef Robert Breithaupt has announced a menu of cornish game hen, tossed salad, herbed rice with watercress, assorted rolls and breads, and choice of beverages and dessert.

Betty Hancock plays Miss Jane Marple, one of novelist Agatha Christie's best-loved detectives.

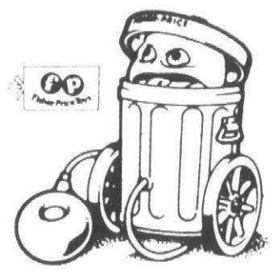

Nearly everyone is under suspicion in an Agatha Christie tale. From left: Mrs. Price Ridley, played by Janine Hill of Livonia; (background) curate Ronald Hawes, played by Michael Groves of Northville; the rich, spoiled Lettice Protheroe, played by Paige Lysinger of Northville; and artist Lawrence Redding, played by Marc Harlow of Livonia.

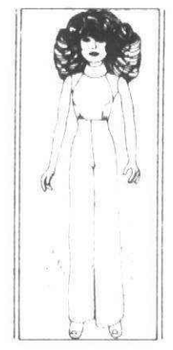

Theater-in-the-round will present some problems of movement and acoustics, but director Lawrence Rudick enjoyed the challenge and plans to make visibility excellent.

Stay-at-home daddies sought for research

Fathers who have taken over at least 50 per cent of the care of their pre-school children are being sought for a University of Michigan research project.

The study is comparing the social and emotional development of such children, aged 3 to 5, to that of youngsters in more traditional families in which the mother is the primary caretaker.

"We are interested in intact families, not situations in which the man is divorced and has custody of his children," explained U-M social work Prof. Norma L. Radin, who is conducting the study. "Also, since it is a small study, we are limiting the comparisons to white middle class families."

Three groups will be included: families in which the father has assumed most of the child's care; families in which the couples share child care about equally, and a "control group" in which it is still primarily the mother's responsibility.

Participating in the study will take about three hours of the family's time, Ms. Radin said. The researchers will conduct separate one-hour interviews with the father and with the mother in their home. The children will be present during the father's interview, and will be interviewed on a third occasion by themselves.

"We will be looking at several aspects of the child's development," Radin says. "These include sex role identification, task independence, empathy and 'internality'—which means the degree to which the children feel they have control over what happens to them.

"We are interested in how young children in the non-traditional households perceive what fathers do all day, and what mothers do. Are they more influenced by what they see on television and in the neighborhood, or by what goes on in their own homes?"

Ms. Radin is curious to see how the division of child care responsibilities affects other household tasks. Does the father who is home with the child also prepare meals and do the laundry? What kinds of support networks are needed by these families?

Ms. Radin is not making any predictions on the research outcome. But on the basis of her former studies of parent-child relationships, she expects the father who spends large amounts of time with his pre-schooler to have a very positive effect on that child.

"A man who would willingly elect to stay home with his children would tend to be very independent-minded and self-assured, and would thus be a good role model. We would expect him to be nurturing and sensitive—traits which would also be likely passed on to the children.

"Once they reach school age, the children might be temporarily self-conscious about having a mother who is at work during the day and a father who stays home," she remarked. "But in the long run, I would expect them to develop into very well-rounded, independent adults with a strong sense of the wide variety of life-styles open to them."

Families interested in participating in the study should contact Ms. Radin at (313) 764-6128.

State offers senior discount program aid

In continuing support of senior discount programs, the state Office of Services to the Aging (OSA) is offering technical assistance to communities interested in establishing a local senior discount program or expanding existing ones.

Recognizing that many communities have been unable to implement a discount program because of the high cost of the photographic equipment, the legislature provided funds to purchase camera equipment that will produce a discount card with a color picture. This equipment is now available to local communities for a nominal fee through their area agencies on aging.

Local senior discount progams enable senior citizens to purchase goods and/or services at a reduced rate. Businesses participate in the programs on a voluntary basis and offer discounts ranging from five to 40 per cent. In the 15 existing local programs, the average discount ranges from 10 to 15 per cent. Businesses determine the amount of the discount and when it will be given.

Persons or organizations interested in local senior discount programs should contact their local area agency on aging or the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, located at 300 E. Michigan Avenue, P.O. Box 30026, Lansing 48909, (517) 373-8560.

Radio retailing rising rapidly

By GREG TAVALIRE

Would a financially sound business consider spending at a rate of $200 per second a good investment?

It might seem that if a business did, it would not remain financially sound for long, but according to Joseph Kelly, vice-president and Detroit sales manager for ABC radio, many do because $12,000 is the price of a one-minute commercial during prime time on network radio.

"Although television is a larger megabuck operation," Kelly explained, "radio has more creative flexibility. "It can afford to experiment. The thing about a radio advertisement is you can hear it in the morning and be in the store by noon."

As Detroit sales manager for ABC, Kelly is in charge of the network's advertising sales in Michigan and Ohio.

A 15-year ABC veteran, Kelly and his family moved to Troy from Chicago in 1976. Since his appointment as sales manager, the Detroit office's sales have more than doubled. Kelly views this increase as part of a national trend.

"Radio advertiseemnt is a lot less publicized, but it has experience as much growth as television," he said. "Radio has exceeded three times what it was three years ago, and by 1981 radio advertisement will double where it was in 1975.

"It's gone from being a small potato to being larger than Time magazine."

Kelly attributes this success to radio's ability to meet the listening needs of its audience, which have been known to change almost overnight. He said, "It's more difficult for the print media—newspapers and magazines—to change their formats than for radio to change. For instance, if a newspaper wanted to change to a magazine format, it would have to buy a lot of new, expensive equipment. But if a radio operation decides to change its format—say from music to news, it can still use most of its old equipment."

Kelly said it is this flexibilty which keeps radio in touch with its audience "mix," a term which frequently appears in Kelly's speech. Simply, mix is a station's audience categorized analyzed by factors such as age, income and locality.

With more than a dozen successful radio stations in the Detroit metropolitan area, Kelly said the competition between opposing stations is intense. He said selling advertisement spots is "like selling insurance in a way," because each station can only offer so much. When approaching a major corporation or a small retail store, Kelly offers his potential client basically the same thing.

Whether the client decides to further develop' peak sales periods or fill in the valleys, Kelly presents various methods of radio advertising the business can employ to add customers.

However, network advertising isn't cheap. During prime time, which is considered the morning drive period from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m., rates run as high as $12,000 a minute. The least expensive time period, usually about $100 a minute, is during the overnight news. After the morning drive period, the most expensive time periods, from most expensive to least, are mid day, p.m. drive and Saturday, Sunday and weekday evenings.

Kelly believes network advertisement is worth the expense because it allows businesses the opportunity to reach more people than any other media besides television. "It's amazing what radio advertisement can do," he said. "One time a man selling coats from a hotel bought three one-minute spots on the Dick Purtan show on WXYZ (an ABC affiliate). In two days, the man sold all his coats. It was incredible.

"With radio, you are able to reach a large amount of people. You can contact one million people four times as opposed to reaching 100,000 people 40 times, as you might in newspapers or magazines.

"Actually, four spots seem to be the ideal amount. Any more than that and you might irritate the listener."

Recently, many critics of radio and television advertising have said that many commercials are irritating no matter how many times they are viewed. Kelly disagrees.

"I like most commercials. A lot has been written about them, and there's been a lot of controversy but generally they are well written. They are tasteful and effective.

"The purpose of a commercial is to produce sales, and maybe some people think irritation can produce sales. I don't.

"They have to be tasteful. Today, men write commercials which are truly funny—for example the Kmart pharmacy commervial and the one by the Detroit News with the character of Norman. These are examples of commercials that you enjoy hearing.

"I would say 99.9 per cent of all commercials are tasteful and, while not 99 per cent, most are delightful and enjoyable. If the public finds a commercial distasteful, it can vote against it by listening to it less. This will evntually be shown in sales."

Although ad agencies have recently spent a lot of money to learn what type of advertisement is most successful for each age and income group, Kelly contends that the same approach can be used successfully for all, with a few small changes.

"When you try to sell something to teenagers, you have to be straight to them," he said. "We found it's best to give them solid information presented pleasantly or humorously. Products should be presented quickly, concisely and with few gimmicks.

Holiday of bygone era

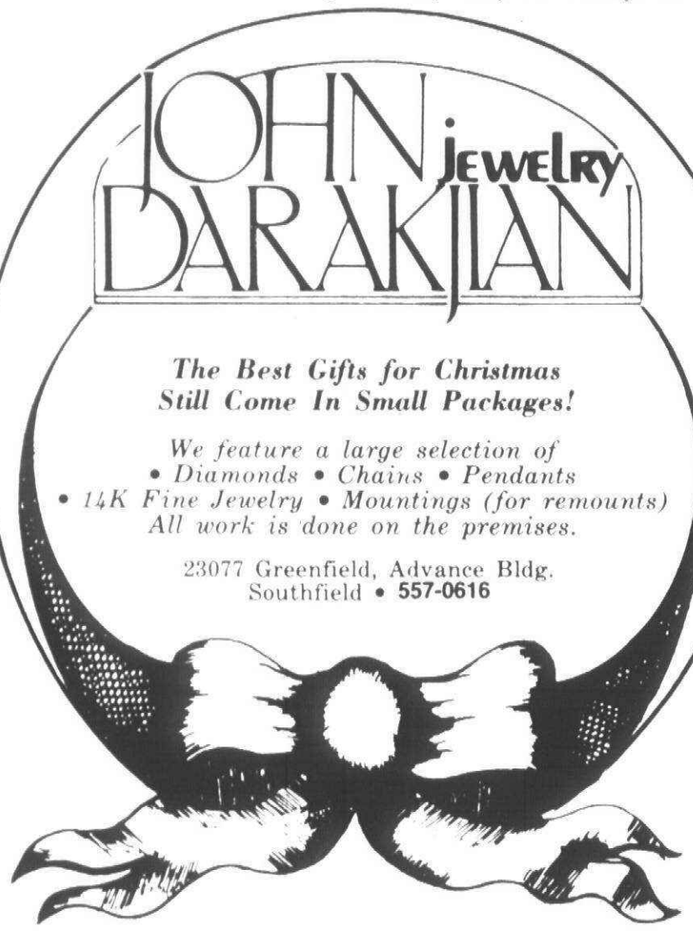

Anyone wanting to get a look at the celebration of Christmas at the turn of the century will want to see the special holiday displays in the Plymouth Historical Museum, N. Main Street at Church adjacent to Plymouth City Hall. Besides this organ from the early 1900s in the parlor room, other displays include a sweet shoppe, carolers, homemade blocks and nativity figures. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

'Ability to pay' is key

Ferency supports state progressive income tax

Zolton Ferency, Democratic candidate for governor in next fall's state election, may have found a way to have a graduated state income tax.

In a talk before Livonia Democrats recently, Ferency proposed that there should be a study of basing Michigan's personal income tax payments on the individual's federal tax payments.

Michigan's constitution prohibits graduated rates on personal income taxes and the state now uses the flat rate system.

But Ferency pointed out that since the federal income tax system is based on a graduated rate, Michigan may possibly retain the state flat rate system but piggy-back it on the federal graduated rate system.

Most of his comments before the Democrats were about taxes and how they should be paid.

"Those of us who are truly dedicated to a fair tax system in this state will continue to push for an amendment to the state constitution which would permit a graduated income tax system based on the ability to pay," he said.

"In the meantime, there are some major improvements that can be made to Michigan's flat rate income tax provisions which will make those laws more fair and equitable as far as low and middle income taxpayers are concerned.

"First, the present personal exemption can be changed from a deduction to a tax credit on a formula basis. That would equalize the benefit of a personal exemption rather than penalize lower income taxpayers.

"Secondly, Michigan could follow the lead of other states and tax capital gains the same as ordinary income. At present, by using the federal tax base, Michigan is providing its own loopholes for the higher income capital gains taxpayer.

"I see no reason why we have to compound the errors in the disgraceful federal tax laws by continuing to incorporate them into our own taxation programs and policies," he continued.

He proposed a re-examination of the possibility of basing state income tax liability on the person's federal tax liability.

"If this were done on a flat percentage rate, it would seem to satisfy constitutional requirements," Ferency said.

The candidate, who ran for governor against George Romney in 1966, added:

"At present, income tax laws, state and federal, weigh most heavily on those least able to pay, and rather than tinker with the system by arguing over fractions of percentage points, we ought to re-examine basic philosophies that underly our entire tax system."

Gov. William Milliken, in his second four-year term, hasn't announced whether he will seek a third term. The state-wide primary is next August with the general election in November.

Don't bag heart attack hunting

It's that time of year again—the great American hunting season—when thousands of people take to field and forest in the quest for game. Some will be successful, proudly bearing home the catch, others will return with nothing more than the story of the 14-point buck who got away, and some, sadly, will be hunting casualties.

Every year during the weeks of hunting season the papers are full of stories about hunters who didn't come back. Probably when hunting casualties are mentioned, most people think of shooting accidents. Far too many hunters, however, are the victims of heart attack because they failed to realize the hazards of unaccustomed exertion during cold weather.

Dr. Sol Pickard, Henry Ford Hospital cardiologist and president of the Michigan Heart Association, explained that "cold weather in itself is a hazard to the heart."

"The body reacts to cold weather by constricting its small arteries," he added, "thus making it harder for the heart to do its job of pumping blood to all parts of the body.

"While this is happening, the hunter may be putting himself through the added exertion of cross-country hiking which he may not have experienced since last year at this time. Combine these two factors, and you may be a candidate for a heart attack."

Dr. Pickard said there are several precautions a person can take to reduce these hazards while hunting.

"First of all, never hunt alone," he advised. "Get a good rest before starting out and be moderate in your eating and drinking. Also, be very cautious about smoking in cold weather, since smoking also constricts the blood vessels."

Other precautions you can take, says the Heart Association, are:

•Wear several layers of light warm clothing. This will keep you warmer than one heavy layer.

•If you are on medication for your heart, be sure that other members of your party know what it is, where you keep it, and instructions for its use.

•Know the symptoms of a heart attack: A sensation of fullness, heaviness or squeezing pain in the center of the chest, which may spread to arm, shoulder, neck or jaw, and may be accompanied by nausea, vomiting, sweating or shortness of breath. Symptoms may subside and then return.

•Get help to "drag the bag" out of the woods back to camp—it caan be very physically demanding to do so.

"It has been found," concluded Dr. Pickard, "that hunting may quadruple the demands normally put on the heart as extemes of weather, change of altitude, rough terrain and the stress of the chase can levy heavy tax on the hunter's capacity. Don't be one of the casualties."

My time of year

Summer and fall are gone and only the cold and snow remains for 1977. But there are residents of the Detroit metro area other than skiers and snowmobilers who are ready to enjoy the offerings of winter. (Staff photo by Art Emanuel)

UL urges workshop safety

With inflation driving the prices of home improvement and accessories up, do-it-yourselfers are making their own improvements and repairs.

Carelessness and unfamiliarity with safety rules often results in accidents.

Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL), an independent, non-profit organization testing for public safety, offers the following suggestions to keep in mind while working in the workshop.

•Never wear neckties, jewelry or loose-fitting clothing with baggy sleeves, which can become entangled in power tools. A snug-fitting shop apron, safely tied in the back, provides good protection against tool moving parts.

•Keep workbench free of litter and floor clear of loose pieces of lumber and nails.

•Store all combustible fluids such as solvents and thinners outdoors or in a low fire probability location. Store oily rags in enclosed metal containers, disposing of them frequently.

•Keep a fully-charged UL Listed Class B & C or an A,B,C multi-purpose fire extinguisher handy for flammable liquid and electrical fires.

•Keep hands away from moving saw blades, drill bits and router cutters. Use a notched stick to push wood work pieces the last few inches past the blades of an electric bench saw.

•Never remove the guards from tools.

•Electrical supply cords of all power tools should terminate in a three-pin grounding plug, which should be connected to a three-terminal receptacle. When necessary, adapters should be provided for two-pin plugs, and the green-wire pigtail of the adapter securely fastened to the center screw supporting the receptacle box cover. Again, make certain that the receptacle box is properly grounded.

•Wear safety glasses or goggles.

•Look for the UL Listing mark on all power tools. This indicates that the design of such equipment has been tested, and found to meet recognized safety requirements.

Getting the kids home is one of the best parts of the holidays, if you plan ahead.

Getting home

I've arranged for you to come home for the holidays," mom shouts into the phone just three days before Christmas. "All you have to do is go to the airport. Your ticket is waiting for you" Visions of childhood, home and good food run through his mind. He grabs a suit case, packs a few things, jumps in his car and speeds to the airport. He doesn't know what time his plane leaves so he rushes to the nearest ticket window. He tells his name to the ticket woman. She tells him to hurry to gate 90 because flight 256 is now boarding.

After waiting in the slow moving line, he finally boards the plane and takes his seat. He looks down and for the first time notices the thick ticket in his hand. "Dallas to San Francisco to Las Vegas to Kansas City to Atlanta to Chicago to Detroit," he says aloud. "You've got to be kidding."

This attempt at a reunion between mother and son is ficticious, but wouldn't it be nice to have your friends and relatives home for the holidays. Whatever you do don't wait until the last minute.

If the agent suggests putting you on a waiting list, go for it.Good ticket agents only put people on lists if there is a good possibility of cancelations. If your on a list you have a very good chance to get a seat. If an agent tells you the waiting list is long and still suggests you add your nome then there is a strong possibility that another flight could be planned if the right circumstances arise.

The cost of a ticket is a big problem in most cases. There aren't any 'holiday only' specials. Night excursions are the least expensive but day excursions are only a few more dollars.

On an excursion, often referred to as a type of charter flight, reservations must be made 14 days in advance (if flights are available). The person must stay a minumum of seven days and a maximum of 30 days.

The following flight price list provides approximate figures for planning that trip home. The coach fare from New York City to Detroit is about $132 and the excursion price is about $106. A night excursion is a few dollars cheaper. The coach fare from Boston to Detroit is about $154, the excursion is about $122.

Coach fares to further destinations like Los Angelos run about $356, with excursions about $285 and night excursions $284. It's about $208 for coach from Dallas, Tex. and $166 for excursion. From intercontinental states, such as Denver, the the coach fair is about $230, $181 on excursion.

A few year-round specials can be found. One is from Miami or Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. These flights depart on a Friday and return the following Monday. Delta Airlines offers the deal at $121. The special cannot be used out of Detroit to Miami, however.

Eastern Airlines offers an unlimited mileage fare which allows the traveller to go anywhere the airlines flies. The person must stay in three different cities and the trip must take more that seven days and less than twenty-one.

Popular with residents of the Middlebelt Nursing Centre of Livonia are laprobes, such as the one here being admired by Helen Schatz (left) and Ida DeWulf (right), residents of the home. Center is ward clerk Jane Kew, who reminds people to visit the home during the holidays. (Staff photo by Bob Woodring)

The people in your life who don't get around as well as they used to, might like a special Christmas gift from you—your time.

The elderly who live in nursing homes, or who, because of health problems, are confined to one small area, would enjoy the pleasure of your company.

"More than receiving material things, these people want to be remembered on the holidays with a visit," says Margaret Adams, activities director of the Middlebelt Nursing Centre of Livonia.

"They also like to get Christmas cards and to have caroling groups stop off to sing.

"For our residents, a visit is wonderful throughout the year. They love to have people coming in from outside. When you take the time to drop in on them, it tells them you are concerned."

An invitation to your home for the holidays also shows your interest. If they are mobile, they would enjoy a dinner with the family.

For general gifts, Mrs. Adams suggests something practical, like packets of tissues, slippers, socks and combs.

"Steer away from sending food," she advised. "So many here are on a controlled diet. It's hard to be a diabetic and receive a box of luscious cookies.

"But we like them to have fresh fruit."

Reading material, cologne and aftershave lotion are popular selections. Another possibility for those who spend much of their time sitting, sometimes in wheelchairs, is a laprobe to ward off the chill of winter.

Last year the centre gifted the residents with lap robes. They had special meaning because so many people had a hand in them. Staff members cut out the designs, residents used liquid embroidery to "paint" in the colors and members of the Pioneer Unit of Bell Telephone Co. sewed the blocks together and added the flannel backing.

Laprobes can also be crocheted or knitted, and might be just the present for either grandma or grandpa. Other possibilities are scented soap, talcum powder, hand cream, tooth paste or jewelry for women. Men

Holiday pressure's on as Grabda keeps watch

Cherubic faces warmed by the soft glow of twinkling little lights wrapped around a $24 Christmas tree—that's what Christmas is.

For some, it's the sight of piles of gaily-wrapped presents under that same $24 tree. For others, it's peals of laughter from their children ripping all the gaily-colored paper from all those presents.

But for Walter Grabda of Garden City, this Christmas will be another away from his wife and three children.

Instead of twinkling lights and the smiling faces of his children, Grabda will be watching a console of gauges and listening to the cyclical opening and closing of seemingly countless pressure valves in the University of Detroit's power plant.

"It's the loneliest time of the whole year," Grabda said.

"It would be nice if everybody could have all the holidays and weekends off. But somebody has to do the job."

Grabda will be the only person manning the powerhouse at the University's otherwise-deserted campus.

This will be the first year he has kept the school's four gigantic boilers company on Christmas, but it will not be the first year he has spent the holiday away from his wife, Anne, and children.

Five of the past six years, Grabda has missed the family holiday. Last year, he was able to spend the entire holiday weekend with the family, though.

"It was a ball. I got to take the kids to the drive-in and it was the first time they ever got to see Santa Claus with me. We were able to go shopping—it was great," he said.

Of his three children—Angelique, 5, Anthony, 3, and Josephine, 2—the 5-year-old will balk the most, Grabda said. "She'll say, 'Don't go to school' or 'Sneak home.'"

While it will be lonely, Grabda said all he has to do is keep busy. "The time will fly by."

That may be easier said than done, especially when the entire operation is fully-automated as it is at U-D. "I can always repack some valves and drain some pumps. And I suppose I can always keep the place clean."

Even though the estimated $176 Grabda will make working that day should ease some of the loneliness, Ed Gajewski, director of U-D's physical plant, said, "It's one job I sure wouldn't want to have."

you up a tree?

types are Blue Spruce and Scotch Pine.

Scotch Pines are characterized by long, slender needles. Blue Spruces have shorter needles. There are other small differences in appearances, too.

So the long and short of it is that picking a tree is just a matter of taste?

No Christmas tree tastes that good. But you are correct, selectinga tree is mostly a matter of personal perferences. Still there are differences you should keep in mind.

For instance, the short-needled trees tend to have a more delicate, softer appearance. The size of the needles and the configuration of the branches tend to make these better suited for hanging decorations.

What about Scotch Pines? Any advantages to these trees?

Some people prefer the appearance of these trees, even though the long clusters of needles make placing ornaments more difficult.

Others buy the these trees for different reasons. Often the trees are cheaper and easier on the vacuum cleaner.

Vacuum cleaner?

Yes, Blue Spruce and similar trees are known to lose needles more quickly. Many a homeowner has heard the unsettling pitter-patter of small needles falling to the carpet late at night.

Can't that be prevented?

Yes, there are many ways to preserve trees longer. As a general rule, the longer a tree remains indoors, the more likely needles will fall.

Keeping a tree in a water-filled stand can slow the process. Storing trees outside until ready to use also will help.

One of the best ways is to go out and cut your own fresh tree. But even then, a tree kept indoors long enough will eventually dry out and the needles will answer the call of gravity.

So needles and carpet must eventually meet?

That ain't necessarily so. Technology has provided us with what has rather uncharitably been referred to as the "fake tree". These man-made trees are available in silver, white and even green.

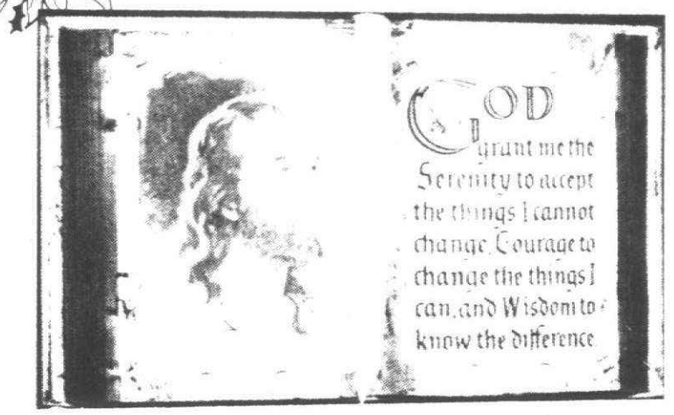

For the true nature lovers, real green fir trees are potted and now sold in most plant stores. These trees are smaller and more expensive, but each is alive and with care can last a lifetime.

All right, now that I know all about Christmas trees, where can a find one?

No problem. Any major intersection in your community can blossom into a tree lot this season. It's not hard to find a place that sells trees, but it is usually recommended that you shop around a bit for the best price and the fresher trees. And with a little luck, you'll find the perfect tree.

Christmas pines got

Buying a Christmas tree is always an adventure. But it doesn't need to be a gamble. Knowing the kind of tree that will suit your needs can go a long way toward enhancing your holiday season.

First of all, who decided a tree should even be part of the Christmas season?

The Christmas tree, often the focal point of decorated homes, is also the bearer of a somewhat shady past.

Blame it on the Egyptians. In ancient ceremonies a palm tree was used in the worship of the Egyptian goddess Isis. A palm tree with 12 shoots, one representing each month, was carried in a festival at the winter solstice—a time marking the end of one year and the beginning of another. The solstice, not so incidently, occurred around Dec. 25.

So why not buy a palm tree for Christmas?

You could, but you would have trouble placing the star on top or hanging ornaments. Actually, conifer trees became the popular Christmas tree for another reason. The trees were more readily available in northern climates. Palm trees don't grow well in snowy weather. In time, the evergreens were adapted to the Christmas celebration.

Assuming you decide to buy a regular Christmas tree—rather than a palm—what kind of choice do you have?

Plenty. There are about 240 species of pine trees; some 35 native to North America. They range in size from stunted shrubs to towering Redwoods. Neither of those two extremes, of course, makes much sense for Christmas trees.

What does make sense?

There are several small varieties available in Michigan for Christmas tree shoppers. Michigan, in fact, is the largest producer of Christmas trees in this country—and maybe in the world. Two of the most common

For others of all ages who may be temporarily or permanetly bedridden, there are always books and records. Games, both ones they can play themselves as well as those which will bring you close to play with them would be good choices.

A puzzle can pass lots of time, as can a variety of hobbies. Perhaps your gift of sketching or painting materials could introduce them to a whole new world.

Children celebrate holiday at home

If you think institutionalized children don't have Christmas, we have news for you.

"That's a myth," said Bruce Binstok, director of professional services for the Methodist Children's Home Society, a Redford Township residence for "highly disturbed" children. "Our children do the same things as anyone else."

The home tries to provide a homelike atmosphere, said Binstok. Special dinners and parties are planned for the residents, who range in age from two-and-a-half years to 15, many of whom have been abused or neglected.

About half the children have families to visit during the holidays, while others remain at the home.

"Sometimes people call and want to take a child for Christmas," said Binstok. "It's dumb to ship them off to a strange family for the holidays, and we don't do it. That isn't meaningful for the child."

If you want to help the Methodist Children's Village, the residence can always use play and sports equipment such as bicycles, sleds, camping equipment or large games that children can use in small groups. For more information, call 531-4060.

At Merriman House, a live-in facility for trainable mentally retarded young people in Garden City, plans are underway to make sure every youngster has a happy holiday. Six males and six females, between 14 and 21 years live at Merriman House.

"We'll decorate a huge artificial tree with ornaments the kids have made," said Phyllis Betz, residence manager. "Each year we add a few more pieces."

The staff gets involved in preparing the party and selecting gifts, said Mrs. Betz. "The party is important because it gives the residents a chance to see each other in a different light."

"I never cease to be amazed at the goodwill of people," said Mrs. Betz. Throughout the year, she said, community groups such as the Knights of Columbus, Rotary, Jaycees and the Garden City Business and Professional Women's Club, to name a few, donate gifts. A Garden City cake decorating club brings cakes.

Sometimes Scout troops come to sing Christmas carols, said Mrs. Betz. "We prefer older groups, such as teenagers because very young children tend to stare at our residents."

CB Residential is a new facility for mentally retarded in Southfield. Six persons of varying degrees of retardation live at the home.

"We'll try to take a few to the Thanksgiving parade," said administrator Colleen Brayton. Other special events such as parties and gift exchanges will take place as Christmas draws near, she said.

"Of course we'll decorate a tree, but we don't have one yet," she said, explaining that the home is still being furnished and many things have not yet been purchased.

"Music will be a big part of our celebration because our clients enjoy it," said Ms. Brayton.

Anyone wishing to donate a record player, television sets, records and radios should contact Ms. Brayton at 355-3041.

A cottage, tucked away in snow-steeped woods, may be the starting place of new traditions for one family.

Memories revive old, new tradition

Each year when Christmas cards begin to arrive, I find myself lingering over those with scenes of long ago and yearning for the simplicity they represent.

Small, snow-covered country churches, bundled-up family groups skating on a small pond, or a farmhouse nestled in the trees, all represent a gentler time and provide a sharp contrast to my own feverish activities and preparations for the holiday that leave me limp when Christmas day finally arrives.

Perhaps it was the memory of these scenes that made me so receptive when my 15-year-old daughter Laurie asked, a few weeks ago, if we could spend Christmas at our cottage in northern Michigan.

Why not, I thought. Heat was no problem—our two oil stoves and fireplace had kept us warm enough during past winter trips to the cottage for skiing and snowmobiling. The annual family gathering of far-flung relatives would have to take place without us, but I hoped they would understand.

When the idea of spending Christmas up north was broached to my husband and the rest of the children they responded with an enthusiasm that surprised me, and we began to make plans.

We have decided to de-emphasize gift giving and concentrate instead on a few shared activities which we hope will give new meaning to our holiday.

We will each buy, or better yet make, one gift for each member of the family. Gift lists are out, a fact that has made us more aware of each other, searching for respective likes and dislikes. I mentioned, the other day, that a bright place mat for my solitary morning cup of coffee would be just the thing to start my day off right. I saw a pair of eyes light up at the hint.

Our plans call for a trip or two up north before Christmas. We'll use our skis or walk through the acres of woodland behind the cottage and pick out our tree, to be cut the weekend before Christmas.

Plastic tinsel and gaudy tree ornaments will remain undisturbed in their dust-covered boxes in the attic at home. Instead, we'll make garlands of popcorn, popped in the cottage fireplace, fashion ribbon bows and use pine cones and nuts so readily available only a few yards from the cottage door.

These we have already begun to gather on our fall weekends up north, and will arrange them into ornaments and wreaths. Creativity is spilling over, matched only by our enthusiasm.

We'll decorate our tree with these handmade ornaments on Christmas Eve and then attend services at a small non-denominational church within the village—services which are conducted by a visiting priest or minister from one of the nearby towns. This too seems somehow fitting as we start a new tradition.

Our Christmas menu is still in the planning stage. Laurie and I are poring through old cookbooks, looking for ideas for an old-fashioned feast.

Baking will be done at home before the holidays. One of our favorite ways of spending an evening when wind whistles in the eaves and snowflakes fly past the windows is in a flour-speckled, dish-eveled kitchen, with good smells coming out of the oven.

And the rest of Christmas day? We have plans for that too. A quiet walk on skis over trails that run for miles in back of the cottage, where a bird's cry is startling in the stillness, and afterward, if the lake ice is strong and smooth enough, a skating party with friends who live nearby.

And then perhaps that evening, while sitting with friends before a crackling fire, I'll feel as if I have stepped into one of my favorite Christmas cards.

Wrap it up

Let's get it straight from the beginning: I never wanted to be a J.L. Hudson giftwrapper. But the tuition was due and when the personnel woman waved an extra 35 cents per hour at me, I forgot my dream of working in a safe department like hardware.

It was a decision I lived to regret.

Disregard the fact that every Northland shopper felt that because giftwrappers stand behind an official-looking counter, they are encyclopedias of shopping trends and trivia.

Disregard the fact that at least every two weeks someone would inquire: "Before you go home at night, do you say, 'Well, that wraps up another day'?" No, I didn't say that. What I did say was: "If I don't get out of here in 36 seconds, I'm going to miss my bus."

What you can't overlook is that the gift wrap department is the most holiday-oriented corner of dhe store. Sporting goods may be flooded at Father's Day, and candy and perfume sellers must surely abhor Valentine's Day. But it's the giftwrapper who learns to dread every holiday.

To those of you who have never taken a plastic number and stood in line for the gift wrap service: giftwrappers do not only wrap gifts using festive papers and ribbons. They also wrap boxes in unfestive brown for mailing purposes and are expected (by customers, anyway) to come up with boxes to fit anything from fishing rods to pieces of furniture.

One woman I remember purchased a handkerchief and wanted a box for it—and the tennis racket she had brought from home.

These customers are few in number, but I have a deep suspicion that theysave up all their bizarre requests for the Christmas season.

The adage that Christmas brings out the best in people certainly can be challenged by any person working as a giftwrapper.

My first Christmas Eve was the most memorable one. Even before the store was open, customers began lining up.

At about 9:30 and 15 seconds, a swarm of humanity descended upon us. The crowd never abated until 6:30 p.m., a good hour or more after closing.

During the course of the day, customers accused us of juggling the order of numbers called, grumbled about our lack of speed, complained because we had sold out of some papers and swore at the supervisor for letting us do such unthinkable things as go to lunch. The next year I caught the flu—and was glad of it.

On behalf of all those beleagured souls standing behind gift wrap stations everywhere, do both yourself and them a favor by:

Shopping early in the season.

Shopping early in the day if possible.

Selecting your wrap before your number is called.

Having the salesperson selling you the item get you a box. It's part of their job.

Being courteous to the wrapper. After all she's been standing there a lot longer than you.

Of course I do have some pleasant memories of working in gift wrap. Some of the people were quite nice. I learned a useful skill. And not only that, the typewriter salesman working across the aisle later became my husband.

P.S. he wraps his own Christmas gifts.

— MARILYN FITCHETT

What was that star?

Many astronomers discount the idea that the Christmas Star was an extra-large meteor or fireball because such "shooting stars" appear for only a few moments. If the Wise Men followed the star, as the nativity story relates, then it would have to remain in the heavens for a much longer time.

In the Detroit area, the planetarium at the Cranbrook Institute of Science is open for an excursion into the world of the heavens.

Season still glows

Rather than saying "bah, humbug" to the whole shebang, people throughout the area are maintaining a traditional Christmas in spite of criticism of commercialism during the holiday.

They agree the commercial aspect of Christmas is here to stay, but it doesn't stop them from enjoying the season. Certainly, they add, the celebration should remain a predominately family-centered event.

Beverly Tavares of Redford, says she and her husband limit the amount of money their children spend on gifts for one another.

"It's important to us that our kids learn that it's all right to get presents but also to give presents," she says. "Usually, they buy small, inexpensive things."

This year Jose Tavares, her husband, is out of work. She says, that in the past, her four children have never received as many gigts as most children she knows.

Ms. Tavares stresses one objection to an aspect of the Christmas season today.

"What I object to these days is carolers accepting money," she says. "When I was younger, we had a ball. I used to love to go caroling, but we didn't accept money. It just isn't right."

"I don'y like to see photographers taking pictures of each child," she says. "Let the parents bring their own cameras. It's to0 commercial for Santa Claus."

Roger Jones of Canton Township says stores should advertise less and later in the season.

Jones says people should spend more time ar home during the holidays, travel less, and enjoy family get-togethers.

"It's chaos to get presents in December," he says. 'If you don't have it done by November, it's a mess."

Beverly Jones, his wife, says she likes the excitement of buying gifts but hates fighting crowds. Even though she dislikes crowded stores, she says it adds to the hustle and bustle of shopping, which she says is fun.

"I get mad that it's so commercial sometimes, but in a way it's fun," she claims.

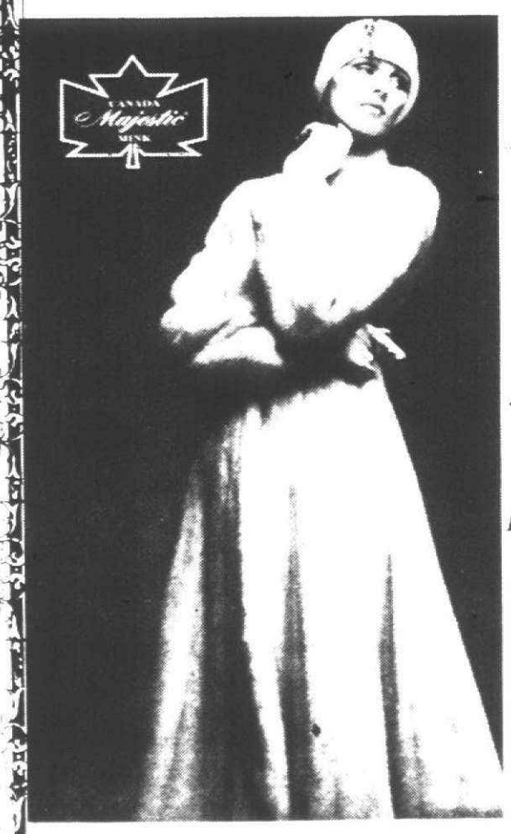

John Helliensel, of Plymouth, says he doesn't feel the spirit of Christmas is being abused by commercialism. He compares department store displays with television and says, "You don't have to buy anything if you don't want to. Like television, you can turn it off."

About Christmas, he says, "It's a good time of the year to give something to people, and a good time of the year to make an excuse to give something to people."

Helliensel also commented on the practice of sending Christmas cards.

"Cards should be sent to those people you don't see regularly, as opposed to people who you see frequently," he says. "It's kind of redundant to send a card to someone you see every other day.

Donate to charities

Now that Christmas is near, do you dread finding a gift for Aunt Mamie who has everything or Uncle Lewis who wouldn't appreciate anything you can afford?

Instead of a bottle of booze, silk handkerchief, tie or poinsettia plant, why not make a donation to a research foundation or charitable organization in your friend or relative's name.

People have often made donations to such groups upon the death of a loved one. But what about donating in honor of those who are very much alive and able to appreciate your thoughtfulness?

Certainly groups like the American Cancer Foundation or Arthritis Foundation can use every dollar they get. But so can many of the organziations in your friend's community. The Kiwanis, Jaycees, Rotary, American Association of University Women and other groups use the funds they raise for needy children, scholarships and various community programs.

So can the Detroit Institute of Arts or Detroit Historical Museum. And don't forget the food for animals program at the Detroit Zoo. Donate a year of meals for an animal, and a giraffe might be your best friend.

Gifts of stationary or calendars from UNICEF can be purchased now at many stores or until Dec. 17. at the Troy Post Office, 2844 Livernois, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Before making your contribution, be sure to contact the group to find out how best to handle your donation. Names and addresses of some organizations follow:

good pair

better-built skates," he says.

"But if your child outgrows them after one year, you may be able to sell them for 50 to 75 per cent of their original price. So, it's possible it would cost you only 25 to 50 per cent of the original price to equip your child with better-built skates."

In Hans Brinker's day, Dutch children simply strapped wood skates onto their shoes. Arch support wasn't a concern. Today, it's a major consideration.

"In the case of figure skates, look for leather boots with steel blades that are screwed into a leather sole," Ms. Rachmiel says. "These skates are of higher quality and provide firmer support. Avoid blades that are riveted on, are made of aluminum or are matched with cheaper-quality leather."

A good pair of stock figure skates costs between $30 and $50 for children and between $40 and $60 for adults, according to Ms. Rachmiel. Such skates also are available used.

Better-built hockey skates start at $50 a pair and range up to $400 a pair, says Walden, who advises buying less expensive hockey skates only for recreational purposes.

Stock racing skates cost between $45 and $80 a pair new and between 50 and 70 per cent of the original price used, according to Walden.

Youngsters ages 5 or 6 who want to pursue speedskating should start on hockey skates, then switch to a used pair of speed skates after a year or two, Walden suggests. He says it doesn't pay to buy custom racers for children because they would outgrow them too fast.

Youngsters hooked on competitive figure skating don't need custom skates either, Ms. Rachmiel says.

"Less expensive hockey skates have aluminum blades, which aren't tempered so they bend more easily," Walden explained. "Besides, they don't hold an edge for very long and are very difficult to sharpen. The boot is lacking too, offering little toe and ankle protection from hard shots."

"Buy them boots and blades separately, however," she says. "Blades run between $18 and $85. Stock boots cost between $40 and $100. Then get a good mounting. That makes a big difference because a bad mounting can lead to stumbling and awkwardness."

What about toe picks on figure skates?

"You need them for jumps and spins so make sure they aren't removed when your skates are sharpened," Ms. Rachmiel says.

"Adults who aren't interested in doing jumps and spins may have the very bottom pick ground off. But if it's at all possible, keep the picks on because they can't be restored once they're removed. If you're stroking properly—meaning on the edge of your blades—the picks won't bother you anyway, and you'll go further without tiring as fast."

Both Walden and Ms. Rachmiel note:

- That they prefer to see children and adults in a good pair of used skates than in a cheap pair of new skates.
- That correctly-sharpened blades provide countless advantages over dull skates.
- That when trying on new skates, remember the leather will stretch.
- That serious skaters should have well-planned conditioning programs and recreational skaters should have frequent workouts.
- That it's a wise practice to shop for better-built skates in sporting goods stores or pro shops at ice arenas, not in department or discount stores.

As in other sports, coordination in skating is invaluable.

"The more you practice, the quicker you'll get your body to do what you want it to do," Ms. Rachmiel says. "The trick is to relax, bend your knees and not be rigid."

Skating is one of the few sports in which families can participate, Walden likes to emphasize.

As he puts it, "Families today are missing some of the joys of skating. On a nice winter day, they can go out to a county park or metropolitan park, or even to a nearby pond, and have a cookout while skating. It's a great way to have an inexpensive family outing."

Heavens skates–get proper fit,

Ice skates have gotten a sleek new look since the days when Mary Mapes Dodge's fictional Hans Brinker glided along canals in 19th century Holland.

Today, each form of skating—figure, hockey and speed—has different skates for special competition. In each case, the boot and the blade are designed with precision.

Figure skaters wear different skates for free style and dance. Speedskaters have indoor and outdoor skates. In hockey, goalies use skates that are made differently than those of other players.

There's also greater emphasis now on proper fit. Without it, even the most talented skaters face a challenge in staying on their feet.

"The biggest mistake of parents is buying skates for their children that are a little bit larger so they will fit a year later," says Reina Rachmiel, an Oakland County figure skating instructor.

"If your skates are too big, they not only upset your balance by forcing your feet to slide, but also force you to skate on your ankles rather than on your blades.

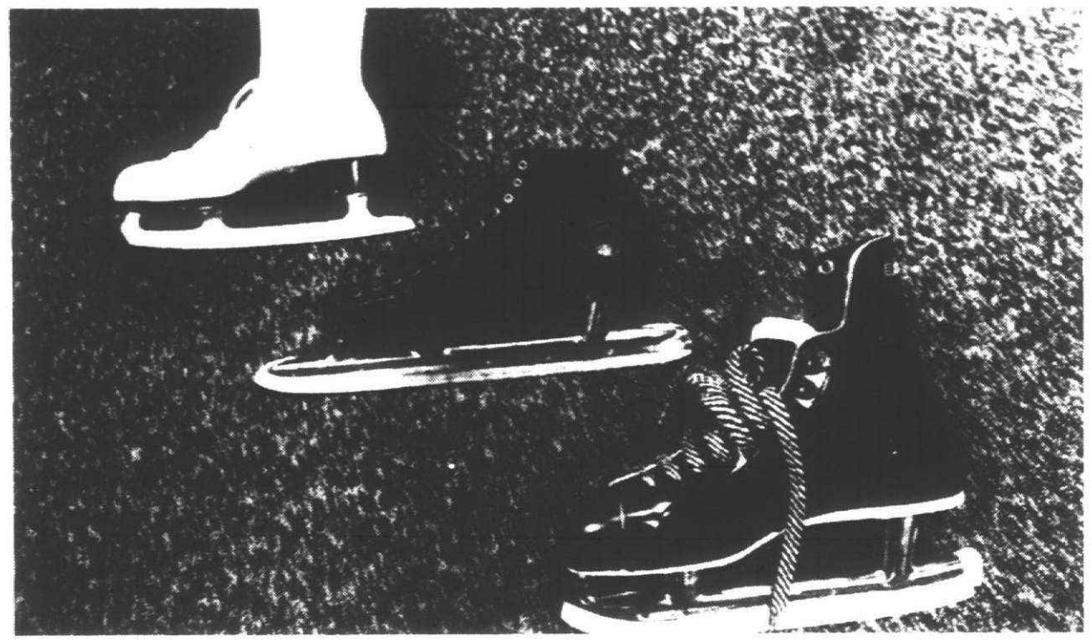

"So parents should buy their children skates that are right to foot size, which generally is a bit smaller than street-shoe size. You've got to be able to pull the boot right over your foot for tightness while you have only one pair of socks on."

How do you decide whether a pair of skates fits properly?

"Stand up with the skates on but without lacing them," Ms. Rachmiel says. "If your toes aren't pinched and there's enough pressure on the sides of your heels so that you can't pull them up, then the skates fit. If you can pull your heels up, which can cause chafing, the skates are too big. It's that simple."

Another indicator: When tied, the laces should measure 1¼ inches across the tongue of the boots. If they measure less than that, the skates probably are too big.

The key to buying skates is knowing what you want, then knowing how to find it, so you aren't talked into a pair that's too expensive for your child's needs and ability.

Ice skates are available in a variety of styles, including those used by (from top) figure skaters, speedskaters and hockey players. Note the difference in boot design and blade length (Staff photo by Doug Bauman)

Parents should shun double runners for their children, says Mike Walden, long one of the Detroit area's leading authorities on ice skating and bicycle racing.

"Double runners just slide on ice," he says. "They don't strengthen your ankles at all.

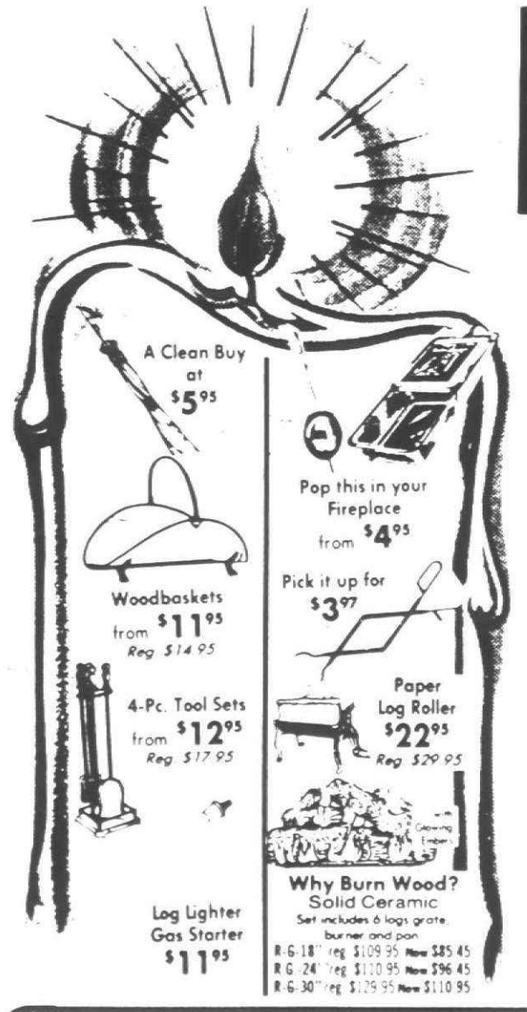

"I'd say children 4 or 5 years old can learn how to skate with single-runner skates. We've got some even younger, but they're exceptionally coordinated. The fact is, double runners actually set you back in learning how to skate correctly."

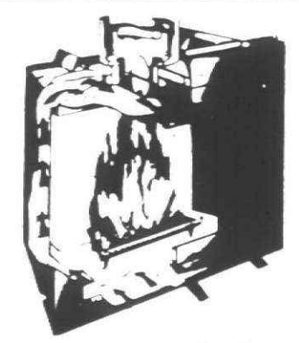

The more active children are, the more you should consider equipping them with better-built skates, Walden says.

"Normally, you should be able to get three or four years of use from

The Christmas Place

Twinkle, twinkle what's that star?

Star of wonder, Star of light. Star of royal beauty bright. . . "

Every year at holiday time we see starts. They're sprinkled onto greeting cards and wrapping paper, made into sugar cookies and hun atop Christmas trees.

The star, now a common symbol of Christmas, first surfaced with the story of the Wise Men. The nativity story tells that the Wise Men were guided to the birthplace of Jesus by a shining, bright object in the sky.

Most research indicates that it probably wasn't an ordinary star.

The Wise Men are thought to have known the heavens too well to have been attracted to something visible on any night.

So the game began. Was the Christmas Star — the Star of Bethlehem — an extra-large meteor, a triple conjunction of the planets Mars, Jupiter and Saturn, a nova (exploding star) or a comet?

Or perhaps it can be explained by a popular belief that the Christmas Star was a supernatural phenomena and had nothing to do with astronomy.

Researchers find it is a risky task to fix both the precise year of Christ's birth and to dig up records of any extraordinary events in the heavens which might coincide with the birth.

Many researchers place Christ's birth before 4 B.C. because the Bible story of the nativity notes that King Herod was ruler of Judaea. Historians assert that Herod died sometime in 4 B.C.

One theory about the Christmas Star has caused astronomers to trace back to the positions of the stars and planets over Bethlehem in those early years.

Sometimes two or three planets come together in the heavens to form an unusual pattern or configuration. It is thought that these conjunctions of planets were seen as events of great importance in ancient times.

It is interesting, then, to know that some researchers believe that in 6 B.C. the skies were brightened by the triple conjunction of the planets Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. Such a grouping might have attracted the eyes of the Magi.

Other theories suggest that the Christmas Star might have been a comet. The brilliant jets of light sometimes remain bright for weeks or months. But astronomers disagree on whether a comet was visible in the sky during the years around Christ's birth and whether they were considered an evil or auspicious omen.

wrap up local art work in downtown Farmington on Grand River, east of Farmington Road in the pillared building. Those willing to climb the flight of stairs to this charming gallery-co-op studio will find a bonanza of moderately priced art.

The rental and sales gallery at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, 1516 S. Cranbrook in Birmingham is another outlet for local talent—all of it better than average.

In Plymouth the Penniman Avenue shops are a readymade convenience for buyers looking for unusual things, from the Alphabet Gallery through Family Emporium, Lead Line with lots of leaded glass gift items to the leather shop with handmade crafts.

There's also good local art to be found in Plymouth's Phoenix and Village galleries.

For those with a taste for poetry, "The Third Coast," an anthology of Michigan poetry, is a treasure to be savored. It came out in paperback in the last year and is available at most area book stores.

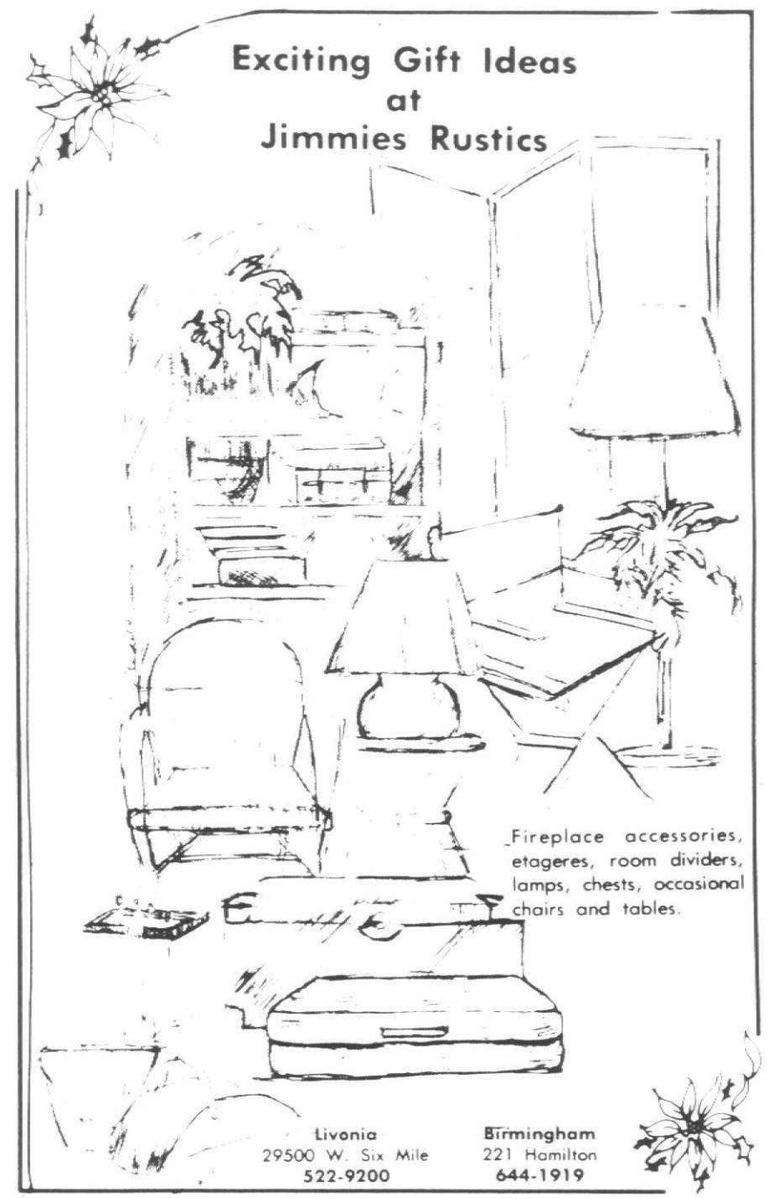

Grant Engard's newest intaglio in soft colors is titled "Mrs. Brown Goes Shopping."

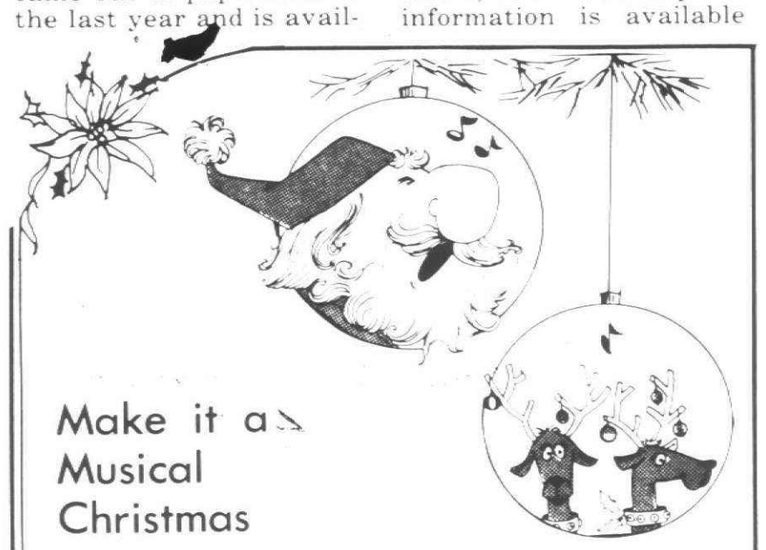

Another Michigan product worth considering is a new publication of the arts (this includes photography, prose and poetry) and is headquartered in AuTrain.

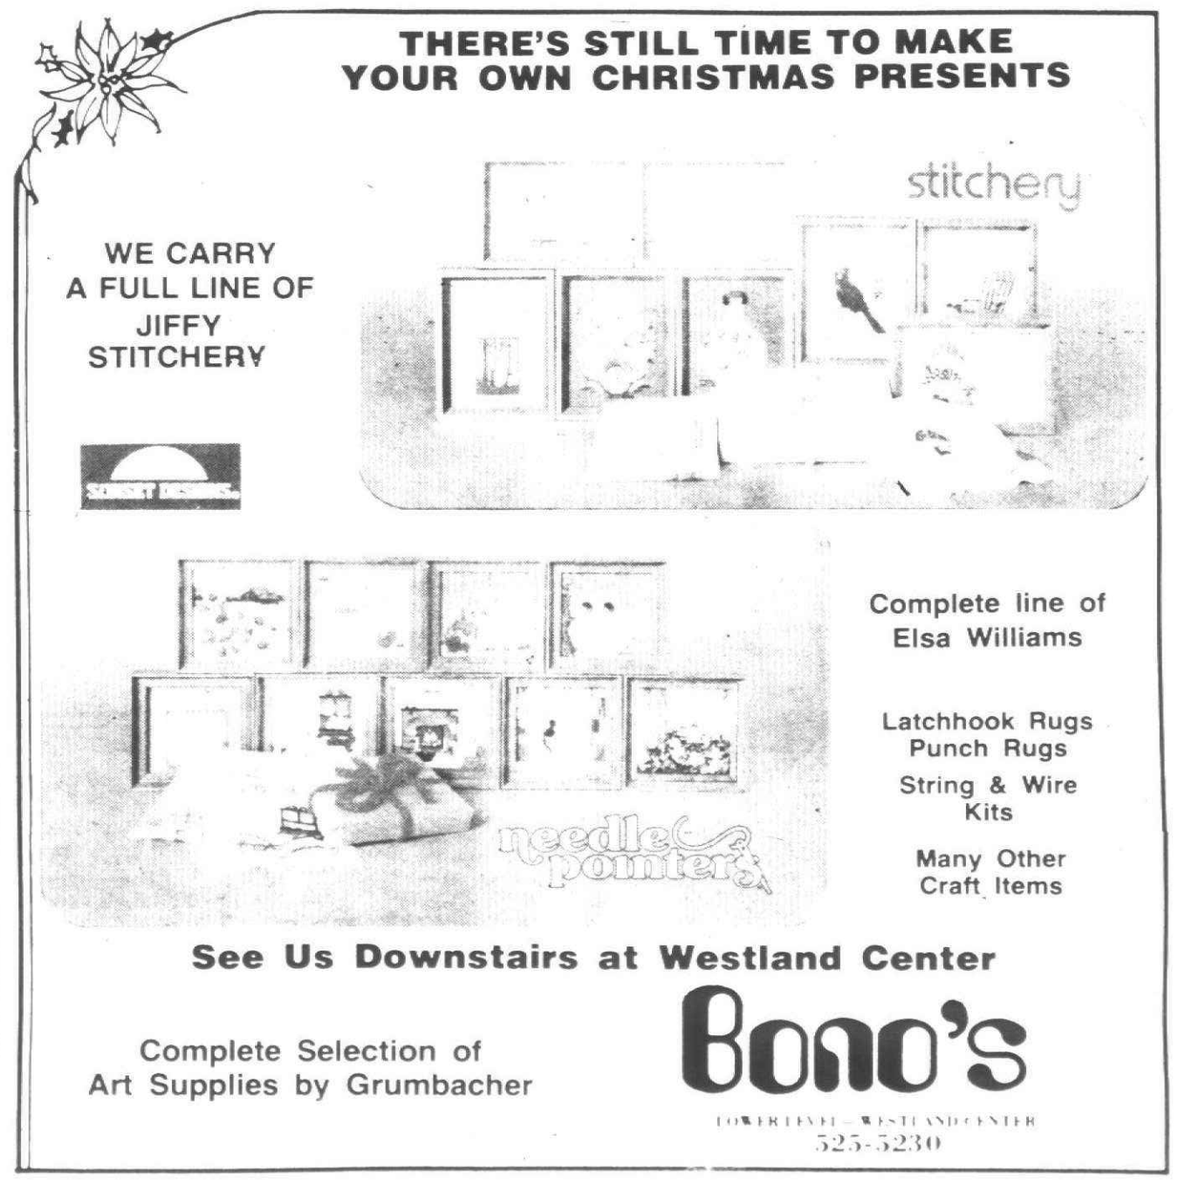

It is called "South Shore," and subscription information is available by writing to Post Office Box 95, AuTrain, 49806.

For friends married or about to be, "The Total Couple" by Albert and Carol Lee of Southfield is almost certain to please. The Lees chart a way to live together happily without becoming one or one and a half.

Frame pleasant present,

Artist Janet Courtney used scratchboard to show the beaver at work off Footprint Island near Michigamme.

Buying art or literature as a holiday gift is one of those areas where only angels or experts usually score well.

Still, if you are going to tread this rather shakey path, you might do best with local products. Besides, art by local artists and books by local authors have a way of helping support a feeling of regional identity. Too frequently, the Midwest has lagged behind the aggressive east and west coasts in plugging its own talent.

For instance the husband and wife artist team, Sidney and Janet Courtney of Beverly Hills, both delight in depicting the beauties of their home state in various media. Because of a deep love for the Rocky Mountains and the magnificent scenery in that area, they use it for subject matter as well.

Courtney, retired vice president of Manufacturers Bank in Detroit, has an abiding love of nature and is a hiker, fisherman and hunter. His pen and ink drawings, also available inexpensively as prints, are outdoor scenes of northern Michigan and Ontario, some of Wyoming and the rugged western terrain.

Because he studied at the Art Institute of Chicago specializing in drawing animals, much of his work includes deer, bear, and bighorn sheep in their natural habitat.

Janet Courtney accompanies her husband on all but the hunting trips. Her interest in nature is as deep as her husband's and is reflected in her watercolors and scratchboard pieces. She is also a sculptor and particularly likes working in alabaster.

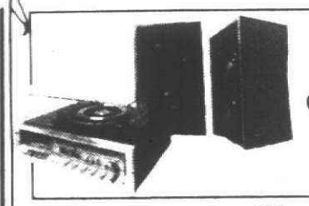

The Countneys welcome visitors to their home studio and both are willing to describe the place and the moment which inspired individual works of art. For an appointment, call 642-7953.

Grant Engard, graduate of the old Birmingham High School, class of 1960, now lives in rural New York, north of the Big Apple.

But his ties with this area are still close and he is back at regular intervals to sell his art door-to-door. In his woodcuts and etchings, Engard moves between realism and abstract, sometimes combining both in the same piece. Most of his prints have several color; all are moderately priced and they are available through several sources when the artist himself isn't in the area ringing doorbells. His family, the H.G. Engards of Birmingham, have prints to show as does one local representative, Stephen Goodale of Bloomfield Hills. The Troy Art Gallery also has some of Engard's work.

Another source of local art is The Garret Gallery

All dolled up

The doll waits, with a shy smile painted on her molded lips, cradled in layers of tissue paper inside a brightly wrapped box. She is truly a beauty, with ringlets of real hair glued to her porcelain head and blue glass eyes that gaze solemnly at the world. She is a present to delight any child, this doll waiting under the Christmas tree.

But the doll isn't a gift for a child; her recipient will be an adult who has turned her childhood love of dolls into the third most popular collecting hobby in the world.

Doll collecting—second only to stamp and coin collecting—can be as cheap or expensive as one wants to make it.

All dolls are collectable. Dolls of the early 1950's are found in antique and doll shops now. Many people are collecting the modern character dolls like Cher and Farrah Fawcett. These will be the antique dolls of tomorrow.

But those who begin by plopping down a few dollars for a Marie Osmond doll usually end working their way up to the high-priced variety.

Antique doll collecting can be an expensive enterprise. One French bisque doll made around 1875 was recently sold at a Concord, Mass. auction for $5,500.

French Jumeau and Bru dolls of the 1880 to 1890 period sell from around $650 to more than $4,000.

Even German bisque dolls made in this century sell for at least $200.

For people who yearn for antique dolls but can't afford them, there are reproductions available either in kits or already assembled and ready to be dressed by the buyer.

For those who want to start from scratch, greenware for porcelain and cermaic dolls can be bought at ceramic shops, which offer classes in how to make them. Almost all of the really expensive and desirable antique dolls can be found in a reproduction.

A perfect blend can liven holiday spirits

For each drink, use ¾ oz. each of Cointreu, brandy and Tia Maria. First, add Cointreu (orange liqueur), light with match and swirl till sugar melts. Add brandy, then pour coffee from pot till flames go out.

Be careful not to burn your hand, or burn too long and burn the sugar. After flames go out, put whipped cream on top. Then add ½ shot Tia Maria (coffee liqueur) on top.

Other festive drinks for the holidays can include Eggnog or a dessert drink called a Hummer. "You can make a shaker of Hummers, the same way you mkae milkshakes," Burns said. Following are his recipes:

EGGNOG

Per drink, use 1 egg, ½ oz. whipping cream. Whip cream first, blend egg with ½ teaspoon sugar, 1 oz. milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla extract, 1 shot rum. Mix with spoon. Let lumps of whipped cream float, garnish with fresh grated nutmeg.

HUMMER

Combine equal parts of ice cream (1½ scoops) with rum and Kahlua (½ shot each).

Bill Smith, head bartender at Machus Red Fox in Bloomfield Township, also provided two recipes that may be us d for Spanish Coffee, or Irish Coffee if you use Irish whiskey, instead.

SPANISH COFFEE

½ oz. Cointreu
½ oz. Kahlua
½ oz. Cognac

Pour into mug, add coffee and whipped cream.

SPANISH COFFEE

(This recipe is less expensive.) ¾ oz. creme de cocoa

¾ oz. cognac

Add coffee and whipped cream.

Here's another traditional drink that is served over the Christmas holidays, and Smith's recipe:

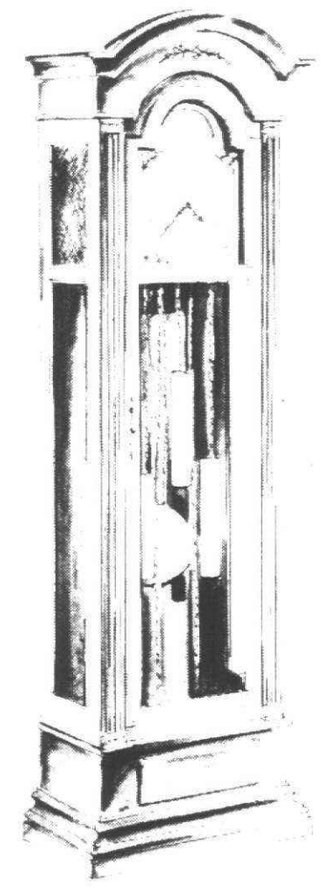

TOM AND JERRY

Make a bowlful. For every 2 drinks, make a batter of 1 egg, 1 oz. honey, 2 shots rum (light or the heavier dark), 2 shots brandy. Blend in blender, pour into mug and top with nutmeg.

Merry Christmas!

Holiday spirit–

If you're looking for delicious drinks to serve during the holidays, you needn't look further than these recipes provided by popular suburban restaurants.

Sherri Procter, bartender at Beau Jack's Food & Spirits in Bloomfield Township, says, "Frozen drinks are good for holiday entertaining. They're colorful and can be served anytime."

Here are recipes for drinks she created especially for Beau Jack's:

RASPBERRY RUSH

4 or 5 raspberries
½ oz. raspberry juice
½ oz. blackberry brandy
½ oz. wild cherry brandy
1½ oz. lemon mix
1 on-the-rocks glass filled with crushed ice

Blend until ingredients are of sherbet consistency.

FROZEN STRAWBERRY DAIQUIRI

3 fresh strawberries
½ oz. rum
1 oz. strawberry liqueur
1 rock glass filled with crushed ice
2 oz. lemon mix

Blend, garnish with strawberry.

BANANA (OR PEACH) DAIQUIRI

½ fresh banana
½ oz. rum
1 oz. banana liqueur
2 oz. lemon mix
1 rock glass crushed ice

Blend to sherbet consistency. Garnish with banana slice.

To make the Raspberry Rush, frozen raspberries are best to use because they have the syrup with them, Ms. Procter said.

For the Strawberry Daiquiri, it is better to use fresh strawberries, although you can use either fresh or frozen. Bananas are available any time of the year. For the Peach Daiquiri, "You can use canned peaches. It tastes very peachy," she said.

Lemon mix for the drinks is available at any liquor store, but be sure to get the presweetened kind. The mix can also be used in making any sour or collins just by adding liquor and blending, according to Ms. Procter.

At Birmingham's Midtown Cafe, Assistant Manager David Burns described how to make spectacular flaming Spanish Coffee, as the Midtown bartenders do it.

Make a cinnamon sugar, with 3 parts sugar to 1 part cinnamon and arrange in decorative bowl.

Fill a glass half full with hot water to heat it, then rinse. Take an orange slice, wet rim of the glass with the slice, and save to use as a garnish. Rim glass in cinnamom sugar (¼ inch).

Nativity makes scene stores.In recent years many of the decorations of Christmas have become highly collectable, so figurines of yesteryear may well find their way to a spot under Christmas trees of 1977.

One store with a supply of nativity scenes ranging widely pricewise is the J. McDevitte Co. at Seven Mile and Farmington Road in Livonia.

There you can choose a 13-piece set with figures averaging four-inches and done in an antique finish for $59.95. A wooden stable to go with the set ranges in price from $12 to $40.

There's also a 12-piece gold-painted set about the same size for $39.95, or a set with just the three central figures in a wooden stable for $28.95. For just $2.95, there is a five-inch square with Mary, Joseph and the baby.

The store also sells the different figures separately for those who want to make up their own crech.

J.L. Hudson Co. stores have some unusual manger scenes, one in porcelin with a built-in music box and made by Bernam and Anderson Co. of New York. It's priced at $25. There you can also find a creche with simple, modern-style figures in unstained wood. The set comes in two sizes and costs upwards of $7.

Two creches at Hudson's are from Prese Nativity Creche Kripper and made in Italy. Both are moss-covered wooden stables with 10 figures in the scene.

— MARGARET MILLER

Away in a manger

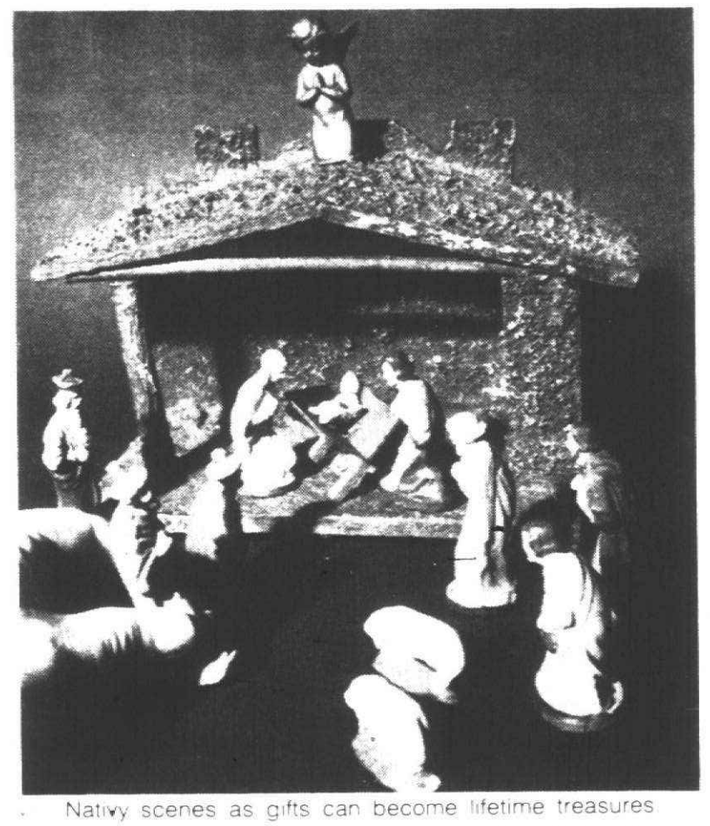

"This year," said the mother of two nearly-grown daughters, "I'd like to give the girls something that would last all their lives."

So she passed up the shelves of sweaters and books and records and sports equipment and went shopping for creches, or manger scenes.

The creche, which has a French name but knows no nationality when the world marks Christmas, often forms a focal point of home decoration and has a time-honored place in the home each year.

The manger scenes can be as simple as a grouping of the mother Mary, the father Joseph and the baby Jesus, or they can draw in the whole cast characters in the Christmas story — an array of shepherds, Wise men , sheep and camels, even a band of angels.

Creches are available in any price range, too. Hummel sets, the Cadillacs of the nativity scene scene, range upwards of $300. You also can find a creche imported from Italy with plastic figures for $14.

Nativy scenes as gifts can become lifetime treasures

The Hummels and other European imports that haven't been stocked are in short supply this Christmas, report a couple of buyers.

The Scrooge in this case is an east coast import embargo that is cutting off shipments from Europe.

Nativity scenes are available at some antique

Old-fashioned dolls, along with newer models, continue to cause squeals of delight on Christmas morning.

A doll for yours'

Garage sales and thrift shops can be sources for those who collect modern dolls. Dolls representing real people are especially popular. There are dolls of both well-known and obscure, forgotten celebrities.

Some of these are "Twiggy," Haleake (The Hawaian singer from Arthur Godfrey's show), The Dave Clark Five, Linda Williams, Ellie Mae Clampett, Dorothy Collins and LuAnn Simms.

There are dolls representing John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Some of the manufacturers of these beautiful (and expensive) dolls are still in business. The bisque may have turned to plastic and the hair may be made of nylon, but the dolls still have the look and personality of their predecessors.

Madame Alexander and Effanbee are American manufactures of of high quality dolls, usually priced from $25 up.

Effanbee even has a numbered, limited-edition doll that is offered at a reasonable price each year to members of its Effanbee club.

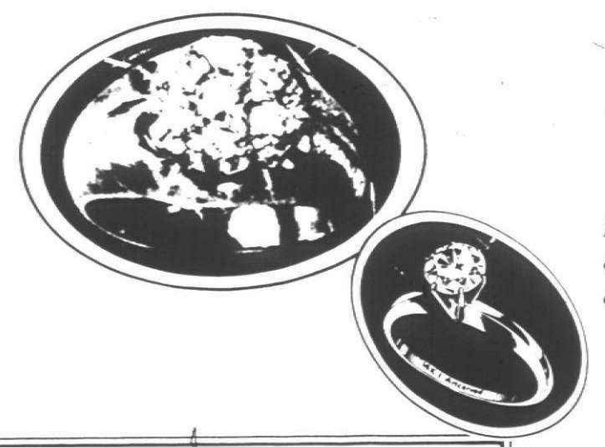

Avid doll collectors in the Detroit suburban area can pursue their hobby easily, as the area abounds in stores specializing in dolls—MARY PRICE
