Blizzard emergency outpost operates for trapped motorists, heatless residents

By PATRICK TOUHEY

Patricia Robinette couldn't stand the cold one more night.

At a little before 9 a.m. Thursday the power went out in her home on Ann Arbor Trail—and with it went the heat.

Night fell, bringing with it screaming winds and more swirling snow. But still no heat.

She and her three young children put on their sweaters and then their coats as the thermometer inside hovered above 40 degrees.

"I didn't know what I was going to do. The kids were cold. I was getting desperate."

But they hung on through the night, hoping somehow the furnace would kick back on with that familiar and comforting sound.

But it didn't. And she and the kids slept huddled together to keep warm.

Friday morning dawned and still no heat.

"I knew I couldn't stand it for one more night," she said pulling her coat tighter around her body. "I knew I had to do something."

"I went out to try and start my car and to check on my next-door neighbor. She's almost 70, and I knew she didn't have any heat either."

AS SHE WAS digging her car out from a snowbank, a Plymouth police car drove up and stopped. Mrs. Robinette poured out her fears to one of the officers.

He told her about the Red Cross emergency center that had been set up at Central Middle School on Main Street.

Now, she was there, getting ready for some hot coffee and a warm meal. Her kids had already wandered down to the gymnasium where a trampoline had been set up beside the Red Cross beds.

"I'm so thankful this is here. If we don't get heat back by tonight we're going to sleep here."

Lester Scott had the jump on her by one night. The Canton police had driven by his trailer park in Westland late Thursday night. Scott was outside standing by his car which was mired in the snow. He told them there was no heat in his home and he was just trying to get to his sister's house in Livonia.

Instead, they took him to the Red Cross center in Plymouth.

He, along with a half-a-dozen other people, spent Thursday night on canvas-and-aluminum cots being ministered to by Red Cross volunteers.

"They treated us real well," offered Scott. "And the food was real good. But I think I couldn't use one more blanket. I had to sleep with my coat on."

HIS STORY HAD a familiar ring. The power went out in his neighborhood as he was getting ready to go to work Thursday morning.

"I didn't think too much of it at the time. But when I got home in the afternoon, it must have been about 30 degrees in my trailer."

"I sat around inside with my coat on for awhile. Then I turned on my gas oven and opened the door. But it was still cold. I called my sister, and she said her house had heat and to come on over before I blew my head off foolin' with the gas."

"So I went out to my car. But it wouldn't start. When the Canton police came by I don't mind tellin' you I was worried."

But persons like Glenn Dillon and his wife Yvonne were there to ease a little of that worry. They drove to the Red Cross office in Detroit from their home outside of Milford during the height of the blizzard Thursday to pick up a 50-bed emergency pack. Then they drove to Plymouth with it.

"I haven't slept a wink all night," said a bleary-eyed Glenn. "Yvonne didn't either. But I'm gonna stay here until this is all cleared up."

Georgianne Vandecor, a neighbor of the Dillons, came in with them to help cook, brew pots of coffee, and keep morale high.

SOME RELIEF for the tired front-line Red Cross troops arrived early Friday morning.

Rosemary Uzelac, a Red Cross nurse from Northville, got to the school at 7:30 a.m. just in case anyone needed first aid treatment of any kind.

However, Dan O'Day had the distinction of being the youngest volunteer responding to the call of duty. The 12-year-old Plymouth youth "had heard they sent up a center at Central Middle (School)," and came up Friday "to see if there was anything I could do."

Although there weren't that many persons at the school, Plymouth Police Chief Timothy Ford said the center was going to stay open until heat went back on in the houses.

"I couldn't even guess how many people in Plymouth and Canton are without heat. I know the whole southeast section of the city is without power, and so is the Old Village area."

"We've gotten calls from Canton, Plymouth Township and I don't know where else. We're just telling everybody about the Red Cross center."

A spokesman for Detroit Edison Co. said more than 70,000 homes were without power in western Wayne County. Road crews were out working Thursday and Friday, but there was no official estimate of when full power would be returned.

Ford said the city administration decided to set up the emergency center early Thursday afternoon when it became apparent the blizzard had done considerable damage to the power lines.

"Our switchboard was flooded with calls and everyone of them had to do with power outages. I talked to the city manager, and we got the wheels moving to set up the center."

The first call went to the Wayne County Office of Emergency Preparedness. Next the Red Cross office in Detroit was notified. Ford said he then called the American Relay Radio League, a Plymouth-based group of amateur radio operators.

By 9 p.m. the center was set up and manned. The only problem was the difficulty in getting word out that it was there.

"Our officers are telling people. The Radio League put it on the air. But we just can't get to everybody who needs it."

Where the hours were wiled away

By CRAIG PIECHURA

Practically everyone who was supposed to work Thursday and Friday didn't.

But did they all stay inside and off the roads as they were instructed to by police over every TV and radio station?

Fat chance.

Dave Tanis, assistant store manager at Meijer Thrifty Acres' Canton store, said he can't understand why the same snow that stranded so many of his employees didn't deter the hoardes of shoppers who descended on the store Friday afternoon.

"Right now I have 15 lanes open and people are backed up six, seven deep. There's a half-hour wait in the grocery lines," Tanis said.

Hank Prekowski of Canton was in line buying fishing rods for his sons, who weren't going to let the Great Blizzard of 1978 cancel their steelhead outing to Manistee.

"We've got a four-wheeler, so I'm going," the ardent icefisherman said, gloating over his unhampered mobility.

In the next check-out lane, two brothers were buying close to $200 worth of food for four families who live in the Canton hinterlands. Their means of transportation to the store was snowmobile.

BOWLING ALLEYS were doing land office business Friday too. Westland Bowl had 180 bowlers at 2 p.m. with a half hour wait for an open lane. All lanes at Super Bowl were filled with students who didn't have to go to school, factory workers who didn't have to work and housewives who bowl every Friday afternoon anyway.

Glen Love of Garden City said he and his classmates drove out Ford Road to the bowling alley because they had the day off and because there was a special deal—"three games for a dollar, we never miss it."

As one disc jockey on rock station WABX put it, "Only essential services, such as McDonald's are open."

Last week's bitter winter storm made millions miserable—not so for 3-year-old Melissa Rogers, who made her first snow angel in nearly ideal circumstances. There were almost 10 inches of snow and

ELAINE KIRCHGATTER

Mrs. Kirchgatter named new school board trustee

Elaine Kirchgatter, a familiar face in school circles, is the newest Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Trustee.

She replaces George Lawton, who recently resigned. Mrs. Kirchgatter, one of six candidates for the seat, was unanimously elected by the board last Wednesday to serve until June.

She is one of three women on the seven member board. There are now three trustees each from Canton and Plymouth Township and one from the City of Plymouth.

Other candidates for the vacant seat, none of whom were nominated, included James Walasky, Richard Ostella and R. Richard Hayes of Plymouth; Elizabeth Griffith of Plymouth Township and Richard Smith of Canton.

A Plymouth-Canton area resident for 13 years, Mrs. Kirchgatter has been active in the Parent Teacher Organization (PTO) and district committees. For two years she was chairwoman of the district's boundary committee. Her three children attend district schools.

She was nominated for a board vacancy last summer, after Marcia Borowski resigned, but trustees elected Carol Davis of Plymouth. Smith and Hayes were also candidates last summer.

Almanac is off on snowstorm

The fabled Farmer's Almanac said the storm that hit the Canton area last week shouldn't have happened.

In fact, the Detroit area was officially hit with more precipitation last Thursday and Friday than the Almanac said would hit for the whole month of January.

Well, for what it's worth, here's the Almanac's predictions for February, which starts Wednesday.

Feb. 1-4, cloudy and cold with some flurries around here, and Feb. 5-8, sunny and mild with a cold snap and some snow to hit Feb. 9-13. It'll be cloudy and cold, Feb. 14-17, with Feb. 18-21 set for rain and milder temperatures, with the rest of the month called cold, partly cloudy and salted with light snow.

"I'M INTERESTED in all problems in the district," Mrs. Kirchgatter told trustees in a pre-vote interview. "I don't have any ax to grind and I'm not associated with any special interest group."

She said her main concerns were budget, millage, and bond request. Mrs. Kirchgatter said she hasn't decided yet to seek election to the board in June.

The new trustee holds a bachelor's degree in home economics from Iowa State University. She served a three-year term on the fall festival board. She is a member and past president of the Plymouth Branch, American Association of University Women, past president of the Plymouth Community Arts Council and a member of the Symphony League and Plymouth Historical Society.

Mrs. Kirchgatter and husband Richard moved to Plymouth Township in 1965 and four years later moved to Canton. He is a veterinarian who shares a practice with Clifford McClumpha.

Trustees Steve Harper, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Kirchgatter have less than a year's board experience. Richard Arlen and Flossie Tonda have less than two years.

Storm tough, cleanup tougher with little salt

By MICHAEL MATUSZEWSKI

Wayne and Oakland Road Commission crews battled the first 36 hours of the "Great Midwest Blizzard" in vain. Rain followed by snow followed by frigid gusts of wind kept road crews from making any significant progress until Friday afternoon.

Through the first 36 hours of the storm, 200 road crews took to the major streets and highways with plows only.

Spokesmen said salt, which is in short supply throughout the tri-county area, would have been ineffective until crews were able to clear away most of the snow which blanketed the road surfaces. Blowing and drifting snow made that task nearly impossible.

"WE HAD TO rescue our own trucks in western Wayne County," said Louis

Sugo, a spokesman for the Wayne County Road Commission.

"They were just running into some whopper drifts," he said. "A couple of trucks got stuck in drifts which came up to their fenders."

Snow plows in Oakland County ran into the same problems and a new one with a different twist. "There was ice building up on the blades and it was lifting the plows right up off their drive wheels," said Dennis Pajot, a spokesman for the Oakland County Road Commission.

ROAD SALT, a precious commodity in Snow Belt states, is in short supply in both Wayne and County Counties.

Wayne County has only 4,000 tons in reserve and Oakland County is in more desperate shape—it has only 2,000 tons left.

"We don't have any salt," Pajot said. "Once you start salting you have to keep going."

"The storm on the ninth (Jan. 9) took everything we had. We just haven't been able to recover," he said.

One average salting run would consume about 555 tons, he said. At that rate, Oakland County crews could make only four complete runs. "Face it, we're in pretty desperate shape," Pajot said.

The Oakland County Road Commission has been unable to get regular salt deliveries since the beginning of the month, Pajot said. Oakland County's major salt suppliers are Morton Salt of Canada and International Salt of Detroit.

The lucky ones who broke down were those who could find a tow truck. This corner, Stark at Plymouth in Livonia, was the scene of many tie-ups. (Staff photo)

MONTGOMERY WARD

WONDERLAND CENTER Plymouth at Middlebelt 427-1600

A boy's work is never done, to borrow from an old saying. Jim and Doug Eades learned that last week as they tried to keep the driveway clear in their Canton Township home.

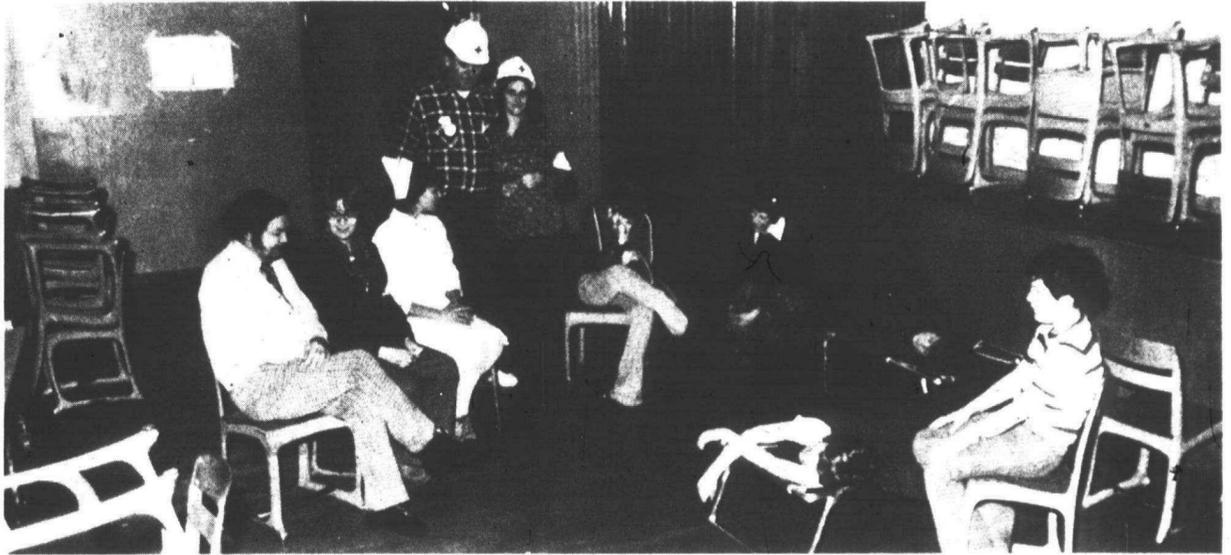

"A stalactite or a stalagmite?" asks Doug Champ of Canton. How about just an icicle? Plenty of them formed as rain and wet snow buried western Wayne County and the rest of the area.

Livonia firemen, putting out a routine engine fire on Eight Mile east of Farmington Road, encrusted this van with ice.

The loneliness of the long-distance driver. A drive down I-275 could be a lonely and hazardous proposition. Here, the normally well-traveled stretch of freeway crossing Ann Arbor Trail was reduced to a glazed strip of concrete.

The worst storm of the winter of '78 closed schools and factories and opened Red Cross emergency centers. (From left) Lester H. Scott of Westland, Georgianne Vandecar, a Milford volunteer, Rosemary Uzelac, a registered nurse from Farmington Hills, and Glen and Yvonne Dillon of White Lake helped man the center set up in the Plymouth Central Middle School. The Robinettes—Daneen, Pat, Jon and Matthew, a Plymouth family—found refuge at the center. Dan O'Day (far right), a 12-year-old Plymouth resident, weathered the storm helping out at the center.

Athletes benched by blizzard

There were no cheers reverberating through high school gymnasiums and swimming pools last weekend as athletes, coaches, officials and boosters played second string to Mother Nature.

However, while most competitors took time off, athletic directors found their responsibilities much more complicated with postponing the cancellations and trying to reschedule the contests.

John Sandmann, athletic director for the Plymouth-Canton Community School District, demonstrated a knack of clairvoyance by postponing all athletic events in his district as early as Wednesday, well before the brunt of the blizzard struck.

Deciding to cancel an event is the least of the problem for athletic directors.

"The very first thing is we must contact the opposing team. It is very difficult sometimes because you have to contact them at home," said Don Domke, athletic director at Westland John Glenn.

"Next, you have to contact all the officials. The coach has to set up a system to get a hold of every kid on each team.

"Then, it is very difficult to match-up again.

"We have had a lot more cancelled games in the last years. It seems to be getting to be more and more each year," Domke said.

"There have been more problems this year simply because of the weather conditions," concurred Carl Fetz, athletic director at Livonia Stevenson. "It's not usual to have to cancel three (basketball) games in a year."

The two major problems which developed over the past couple of days involved basketball games and conference wrestling meets.

The Michigan High School Athletic Association limits prep basketball teams to 20 games per season with no more than two permitted during any one week.

Ironically, most of the same cage match-ups which were scheduled for Friday were also postponed in the first-round of league round-robins Dec. 9. The reason back then? Snow.

They included Troy Athens—Rochester Adams, Rochester—Milford, Southfield-Lathrup—Royal Oak Dondero, Southfield—Birmingham Seaholm and Farmington Harrison—Waterford Mott.

Others were West Bloomfield—Clarkston, Bloomfield Hills Lahser—Birmingham Groves, Plymouth Salem—Dearborn, Plymouth Canton—Walled Lake Western, Livonia Bentley—Redford Union and Livonia Stevenson—Milford Lakeland.

Some of the Dec. 9 postponements had already been made up, others not. Most teams have enough, but just barely, open dates now until the start of the state tournament to reschedule.

Garden City West, however, has nine games on its schedule and only eight more allowable dates to get them in under the two-games-per-week stipulation.

"What we're going to have to do is work something out with a non-league team," said Bill Pinnell, athletic director at West.

In years past when snowstorms forced the cancellation of basketball games, coaches appealed to the MSHAA to waive the two-game stipulation to allow makeups. The MSHAA has never permitted that.

Many metro-area basketball teams have not played since Jan. 20 and may be adversely affected by a long layoff caused by the weather. Momentum becomes crucial near the end of the season and near tournament time.

Redford St. Agatha, Livonia Stevenson, Garden City West and Redford Union all last competed Jan. 20. RU is currently riding a four-game winning streak.

Ken Dean, who has coached North Farmington to a 10-1 record so far this winter, pointed out another potential danger of cancellations due to the elements.

"I want our players to be in school. If they're out of school, you always have to be concerned they're out skiing, ice skating and shoveling snow and maybe pulling a muscle," Dean said.

Mike Teachman, coach at Farmington Harrison, sees a silver lining to the snow problems.

"I think this will help us a little bit," he said. "Our guys were really down after losing to Plymouth Canton last week, so not having a practice or a game may help them."

Coaches similarly situated may feel the same way.

Wrestlers and their coaches find themselves in an even bigger quantity than those associated with basketball programs.

Most squads had scheduled season-ending conference meets last weekend, while others have slated duals early this week prior to the state districts Saturday.

The Tri-River League attempted to complete its festival as scheduled last weekend, but most other league meets were postponed.

Is it good or bad for a wrestler to go all out in a highly-emotional setting of a league tournament only a couple of days prior to the districts?

Jim Urick, Redford Thurston coach, and Bob Lusk, from Westland John Glenn, both said they would rather have no competition scheduled the week before the districts. The emotional and physical aspects of the sport were cited.

Other sports—swimming, volleyball and even hockey—were also affected by the weather.

The anticipated swimming dual between a pair of strong Livonia teams—Stevenson and Bentley—was postponed for the second time of the season, both by snow.

Pat Duthie, whose North Farmington team was to swim against Livonia Franklin, said he regretted that cancellation.

"Our kids were disappointed," he said. "They really wanted to swim Franklin. I'm sure we'll make it up, but I couldn't cancel."

SYNOPSIS OF MINUTES Board of Education Livonia Public Schools Special Meeting December 21, 1977

The following is a summary, in synopsis form, of the Board of Education's special meeting of December 21, 1977; the full text of the minutes is on file in the office of the Superintendent, 15125 Farmington Road, and in the principal's office of each school and is available to the public on request.

President Pridgeon convened the meeting at 7:12 p.m., in the Board Room, 15125 Farmington Road, Livonia. Present: Thomas Davis, Constance Hierta, Marvin Pridgeon, Mark Scarr, Ronald Withers, Charles Akey (7:17 p.m.) Absent: Carol Strom.

Special Election Date: Paul Kadish, Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees, addressed the Board. They are very much aware of the dilemma faced by the Livonia District in terms of declining enrollment and its financial impact. Schoolcraft also faces a difficult financial situation and had hoped to present a ballot on February 27, 1978, on which the only issue would be the Schoolcraft millage request. However, if it is decided by the Board of Education to request a February 27 election date, Schoolcraft will be supportive of their efforts to gain voter approval of millage requests.

The Superintendent reviewed the problems faced by the Board in determining an election date; i.e., legal problems involving proximity of elections and the numbers of other governmental elections that are scheduled. He pointed out the necessity of contemplating scheduling more than one election if one is not successful, and recommended, with reluctance, that the Board request the Wayne County Election Scheduling Committee to approve a February 27 election with Schoolcraft. While the district is well aware of Schoolcraft's problems, this appears to be the only option if the Board needs the flexibility to hold more than one election.

Motion by Davis and Withers that the Board of Education request permission of the Wayne County Election Scheduling Committee to hold a special millage election on February 27, 1978, for the purpose of renewing and/or seeking additional millage for operating purposes. Ayes: Akey, Davis, Hierta, Pridgeon, Scarr, Withers. Nays: None.

Adjournment: President Pridgeon adjourned the meeting at 7:30 p.m.

Publish: January 30, 1978

SYNOPSIS OF MINUTES Board of Education Livonia Public Schools Regular Meeting December 5, 1977

The following is a summary, in synopsis form, of the Board of Education's regular meeting of December 5, 1977; the full text of the minutes is on file in the office of the Superintendent, 15125 Farmington Road, and in the principal's office of each school and is available to the public on request.

The meeting was convened at 8:00 p.m., in the Board of Education office, 15125 Farmington Road, Livonia. Present: Charles Akey, Constance Hierta, Marvin Pridgeon, Mark Scarr, Carol Strom, Ronald Withers. Absent: Thomas Davis. Regarding an agenda item concerning the date of a special election, President Pridgeon stated that Schoolcraft College has requested the Board to delay any action to enable their Board of Trustees to review the matter of Schoolcraft's possible election date.

Communications were approved as follows: letter from Sandy Smith, letter from Ted Langlois; letter regarding mathematics program; letter from Paul Kadish, Schoolcraft College, regarding possible election date; letter from Rita Radzowski, St. Mary's Hospital, regarding human growth and development unit, large number of communications pertaining to request of Basilian Fathers to purchase school-owned property.

Resolution: Irene Majewski, Central Office Head Custodian, was presented a resolution in appreciation for her outstanding service to the school district.

Other Communications: Robert Nicolai addressed the Board relative to his concerns about the quality of the educational program and the level of taxation. Father Bedeweg, Basilian Fathers of Catholic Central, addressed the Board relative to his organization's desire to purchase school district property on which to construct residences for the Basilian fathers. President Pridgeon stated that the Board would be meeting in closed session later in the evening to discuss this property matter. (Following the closed session the Superintendent was directed to communicate with the Basilian Fathers relative to the Board's process to be followed for the sale of this land.)

Resolution: The Board unanimously adopted a resolution expressing appreciation to the Optimist Club and congratulating the young people selected by the Optimists to be honored during Youth Appreciation Week.

Minutes: The minutes and synopsis of the regular meeting of November 21, 1977, were approved as written.

President Pridgeon said this had not been decided but is something that can be considered. Also in response to a question by Mr. Withers, the Superintendent will provide to the Board an update concerning the administrative evaluation process.

The newest bank in town is giving away the oldest bank in town.

We're using this authentic antique bank to get you into our brand new bank on the corner of Ann Arbor and Sheldon Road.

You see, we'd like you to become better acquainted with all the convenient banking services our newest branch offers. So, we're holding a drawing to give away the antique mechanical coin bank pictured here.

It's one of the earliest mechanical banks made—first appearing in toy shops in the 1870's. The fat man represents Boss Tweed when his group controlled New York City's politics. When you place a coin into his right hand, he drops it into his coat pocket and nods his head in appreciation.

Today, this bank is a valuable collector's item. And it could be yours by just filling out the coupon and bringing it into our new branch office.

That's not all we're giving away.

To make it even more inviting, we're offering other prizes and incentives:

Receive a Libbey Glass Owl or Piggy Bank absolutely free when you open a new savings account of $5 or more.

Open a new savings account of $100 or more, and we'll add $5 to the account.

Enjoy an interesting display of antique mechanical coin banks from all over the world. Then, pick-up brochures on the pieces displayed.

Watch a film entitled "Penny Lane" which tells the story of antique banks.

So you can see, there's a lot going on. Stop by. We're looking forward to seeing you...and serving you. Hours from 10:00—4:30 Monday through Thursday, and 10:00—7:00 on Friday. For more information call John Swek at 459-8555.

What makes them so special? It's their delicious and unusual flavors. Available in chocolate pudding, peanut butter, coconut, mandarin orange, coffee, anise, green apple, cinnamon baked apple, boysenberry, licorice, root beer, cotton candy, marzipan, watermelon, cream soda, ice mint, lemon or banana, Jelly Bellies are priced at $2.50 per pound. Wallflowers

For that special baby, here's a very special one-of-a-kind gift idea. Klara Orley paints charming wall murals for children employing marvelous colors and incorporating such objects as elephants, monkeys, giraffes, clowns, trains and rainbows into marvelous designs. Born in Budapest, Ms. Orley went to Israel at the age of 13 and was the chief graphic artist for the Israeli Army in Tel Aviv from 1969 until 1975. Then, luckily for all of us, she moved to this area. Ms. Orley also does hardedge super graphics, watercolors, pen and ink drawings and oil paintings. Klara Orley, 689.4259.

Fringe benefits

In ancient France, these colorful hanging tassels were attached to the keys that were put in the keyhole of a desk or chest of drawers. If the key fell out, the owner was sure to know. Today people use them in all sorts of creative ways. For example, they look terrific tied to the handle of a drawer, as window shade pulls or hanging from a belt. In stock in both solid and multi-colors, three lengths are available. The six-inch tassel is priced at $8, the eight-inch tassel at $12, and the ten-and-a-half-inch tassel at $17.

Driving in a blizzard can be a fearsome thing, especially when an abandoned car looms suddenly in front. (Staff photo)

Afraid to drive on snow?

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

Fear of snow is a learned response, and it can be unlearned.

That's the word from Steven May, a behavioral psychologist at Ann Arbor's Center for Behavior Therapy, who treats many patients for fear and anxiety.

"A number of people are afraid to go out in the snow," May said. "They are afraid to drive in it, to walk in it and sometimes they get anxious looking out the window at snow."

"It can stop them from going to sleep at night, because they are worried about what would happen to them if they were to go out in snow. It's a way of preparing yourself for something you can't cope with."

May specializes in behavior modification, especially as it applies to fear and anxiety. He has some specific recommendations for people who are afraid of snow.

"If you are in the house feeling anxious, do something else to keep yourself busy. Your long-range goal is to learn how to approach the feared situation while you are still in control of it. For that reason you may want to go walking in the snow or do a little shoveling.

"Try not to let your thoughts run wild, because that escalates the anxiety and you start imagining even worse things."

Fear of driving in the snow is a different matter.

"Your first concern should be safety. Don't go too fast. Try to feel you are in control of the car at all times. Test the road by pumping the brakes very lightly. When you skid put the car in neutral. "If all that is too much for you, then try going out into an empty parking lot and practice spinning where it's safe. In the final analysis you may need professional help."

Counselors and psychologists around the metropolitan area can help a person whose fears are so strong that they are prevented from leading a normal life.

May counsels a number of people with this problem at the Center for Behavioral Therapy, until recently known as the Institute for Behavior Change.

May also teaches group workshops called "Don't be Afraid" at the Continuum Center for Adult Counseling and Leadership Training at Oakland University.

May's final word to anxiety-ridden snow haters is this: "Don't be afraid. You learned the fear reaction and you can unlearn it. Sometimes it means imagining the worst thing that could happen, and in snow, if you drive slowly, that probably means a fender bender or an hour of being stuck in the ditch. Most people imagine the consequences of any feared situation as being much worse than they really are."

What to do if you collide

Most drivers increase their awareness and caution in negotiating winter's slippery roads, but the grim reality is that one out of every four drives will end in a traffic mishap, ranging from a fender bender to a total loss.

The Insurance Information Institute, source of that statistic, also had some information on what to do to prevent confusion if you are involved in an accident.

It listed specific tips, and suggested that a copy of the suggestions be kept in the glove compartment of the car so the driver will know what to do in such a situation.

Here are the suggestions:

- Stop, identify yourself and summon aid for the injured.
- Exchange names, addresses and driver's license numbers.
- Explain the details to the police officer on the scene. Too often drivers walk away from an accident forgetting to look at the police report. Once the report is filed, the driver has no means of changing the account of the accident.

• Never admit fault under any circumstances.

• Make a note of the officer's name, badge number and jurisdiction. Also get the number of the police report for your insurance company.

• Refuse to sign any liability waivers or assurances that you're not injured. Many injuries are not immediately evident, so see a doctor if you suspect any injuries.

• Take notes on the circumstances surrounding the accident including time, place, weather and road conditions, any evidence of a law violation, approximate speed of cars and relevant details.

• If the other driver admits fault, get it in writing and before witnesses, in case of a suit.

• Diagram the scene of the accident as accurately as possible, including the precise placement of cars and people.

• Report the accident to your insurance representative promptly, since most policies require such notification within a specified period. To speed up the claims settlement, include your policy number and all details of the accident in your report.

• If you or your passengers are injured, keep detailed information and bills from any medical examinations. The insurance company will ask for them later.

The storm couldn't get us down

One man bought a bathing suit—and an expensive leather coat while he was at it.

One craft teacher surrounded herself with silken flower petals, and a resourceful mother went to the backyard grill to cook hotdogs amid the banks of snow.

People warmed themselves by fireplaces and oil lamps and traveled by cross-country ski and snowmobile.

They played games, caught up on reading, engaged in special baking projects.

In short, suburbanites from Plymouth across to Rochester found that there's more to a big storm than what stalls the cars and chills the bone.

Fred Hill, a Plymouth clothier, was chortling over business never better as drifts of snow stalled activity and closed some marketplaces.

One customer, stranded at the Plymouth Hilton because roads out of the area were impassible, stopped in to buy a bathing suit so he could use the hotel pool. He also went back with a new coat.

Others stranded stocked up on basics like socks and underwear they hadn't thought they would need for a short junket in these parts.

And then Hill waited on Stan Hone, who skied into town from a subdivision several miles away, purchased a suit and skied back.

ROCHESTER TOO had its share of stranded guests. The two motels in town, Rochester Motor Lodge and Spartan Motel, were full of conventions that couldn't end when they were supposed to. There was "no room at the inn," as someone put it.

A group of professional women bowlers were to have left Thursday after their tournament, but instead stayed for the weekend because, even if they could leave Rochester, it seemed folly to head for homes in Ohio and Indiana.

They wound up piling into one big car and heading cautiously for the only open restaurant in town, Chris Kavan's, for nourishment.

Stalwart members of the Farmington Family Players camped in Franklin Community Church to be ready for the Friday night opening of their first sellout "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory."

The players were busy finishing sets, and when Sally Sawyer, producer and founder, got to the church with her family groceries, she decided she might as well cook a potluck meal for everyone on hand.

Several of the involved families, the Steve Harfaths and the Steve Radoms, as well as Jim Morgan and Bill Lucas, had been prepared with bed rolls for an all-night stay anyway.

All classes in the Farmington Community Center were pushed back a week because of the storm.

Mary Foran, whose class will involve making silk flowers, also had a dentist appointment cancelled, so she stayed home with an dining room table full of silk petals, using the unexpected time to put them together and create some beauty for those who want to think spring.

IMAGINATION appeared to be the key ingredient when it came to coping with knee-high snow and crippled calendars in Birmingham, Bloomfield and Franklin.

Residents who just don't have the words "killing time" in their vocabularies settled down for a weekend of games, television and favorite hobbies.

Rather than wait behind closed doors for the eventual release back into frenetic activity, the communities merely changed directions and prepared to enjoy the unexpected break in routine.

Along with a change of pace came some unusual sights.

Some hardy souls such as needlepoint enthusiast Mary Kay Davis strapped on cross-country skis for quick trips to the grocery or leisurely trips around and about the unusually quiet landscape.

Another couple traveled with ease down Woodward past Birmingham's 555 Building aboard a matching pair of snowmobiles.

It was, said Rosalind Blind of Birmingham, "a time to smell the daisies" (metaphorically speaking, of course, Rosalind) so the area took full advantage of the storm.

"We tend to be snowed in," said Isabel Smith, speaking of her Birmingham street.

When the Smith family couldn't make a planned weekend trip to Ohio, the adults settled down to favorite novels and the children happily slept through the normal school alarm.

In Franklin, Janice and Fred Morganroth were't the kind of people who would let a little thing like a complete power failure mar the time they were snowbound.

With Greg, 13, Candi, almost 12, and Erik, 8, home from West Maple Junior High and Franklin Elementary school, Janice kept the youngsters entertained popping corn over and open fire in the family room.

Time whistled by faster than the wind while the children played a game of Rummy-O, which their parents had imported from Israel.

When power returned on Friday, Janice corralled the children in the kitchen and let them help make Chinese egg rolls, a treat she had planned to take to the staff at the elementary school where she serves as community education director.

Then, taking full advantage of the high snowbank covering the rear of the family's rolling Franklin property, the children, their laughing mother and pet poodle Brie spent hours outside in rambunctious snow-throwing contests and fights with giant icicles reminiscent of "Star Wars."

"There is absolutely not one moment of the day worth wasting," commented Janice, a graduate lawyer who set aside her career until after her children are more self-sufficient.

"These days I'm busy being a referee."

JEAN HANDY of Redford Township was probably fulfilling everyone's dream of what to do during a snow storm when was interrupted by a reporter. She was sitting in her pajamas reading the morning paper. She was also looking out the window. "It is really beautiful," she said, "and very peaceful."

His great-grandmother wasn't all that happy. Lack of hot water for a cup of tea seemed to her an impossible hardship.

IT TURNED OUT to be a day of bird watching, snow shoveling and, in our opinion, coming up with ingenious methods of survival.

The cats, Esmeralda and Bowwoody, joined the squirrel and bird watching session at the dining room window. Esmeralda's jaw quivered as the fat red squirrel dumped seed out of the birdfeeder for an assembly of cardinals, juncos and sparrows.

For the first time—we had nothing but time—we tried to identify the spar-

Having just come into the house, his arms sore and his ears pink from snowshoveling, Chris Miller, also of Redford, was stoking the body furnace with chocolate chip cookies and hot chocolate. He was planning next to do some serious resting.

Another Redfordite, Helen Bergin, spent the morning browsing through flower catalogs.

"I just made out an order for 10 kinds of flowers I never had before," she said, adding, "I like to plan ahead."

"Nothing," reported Ann Jakubiec of Garden City when queried about what she was doing during the storm. "I just got home from work, and I'm glad to be here. I think I may do some baking or reading or watch TV."

Ivan Thibeault, another Garden City resident, was planning on taking a nap. He deserved it, he had been out shoveling.

Over in Westland, Carol Schwartz was questioned about her activities. "My husband and the kids and I are playing Scrabble."

Who is winning? "Who is winning?" she called to her family, and then returned with the answer. "I am," she said with a laugh.

Sheila Richards, also of Westland, regarded the day as a big bonus. "The office where I work closed, so I came home," she said. "I'm using the extra time to study for my accounting class."

PETE CELANO of Livonia, a Churchill High School student, enjoyed snowmobiling with a friend. Now the guy who came in from the cold, planned "to sit around for the rest of the day."

"I'm working in my kitchen," was the word from Laura Riley of Livonia. "I just spent about two hours there cleaning. It looks very nice. I'm doing a real good job today. After all what else can you do?"

Livonian Rick Mozier, 17, kept busy clearing the long driveway at his family's home, eight times Thursday alone.

He and his mother Norma were keeping the home fires burning.

His father was in Kansas City, spending the storm time hoping he'd be able to get into Metro Airport on a return flight scheduled during the weekend.

"We did lots of togetherness things for the first time in 20 years," reported Mrs. Daniel Kachnowski of Livonia.

She hauled out two years of food sections she'd been saving from daily papers and filed away the recipes she wanted, even trying out some of them.

The family's 19-month-old smallest member "went bananas" with all the company, reported this mother.

Sharon Decker, also of Livonia, didn't mind having her boys out of school for a day or so.

"We got a lot of housekeeping done," she reported.

IN SOUTHFIELD, parts of which were without lights and heat Thursday, most persons settled in to enjoy being snowbound.

Sally Krugel, who lives with husband Richard and their family in the Eleven Mile-Lahser area, is known in her neighborhood as a creative problem-solver.

tributed around the room. They were supposed to radiate warmth.

A large pot of coffee was perked at a neighbor's house. To keep it hot, we wrapped it in newspapers, then slipped two shopping bags over the whole thing. With an opening cut for the spout, it retained its heat for hours.

An antique, double-wick oil lamp was reactivated. It gave a cozy glow. But the fumes of the scented red lamp oil over-powered its aesthetic quality. We blew it out.

A stone crockery "pig" or bed warmer, another antique, was filled with hot water. It was the best foot warmer of all—especially with a blanket over your knees to contain the heat.

When the electricity went out early Thursday, she wrapped her three sons warmly and played charades beside the fire. At dinnertime, she stood in snowdrifts in the middle of her back lawn and cooked hot dogs on the barbecue.

Some of her neighbors were stuck in the snow and some went to a hotel for the night, but Sherri Lumberg, who lives with husband and two children in the same area, decided there is some advantage to being stranded at home in a blizzard.

"I love to go outside and get together with all the neighbors who are out shoveling snow," she said. "It's the only time we see them in the winter."

Some Southfield residents didn't think the storm was as bad as it was made out to be. "We see by television that many people had a bad time, but in our family it was 'What blizzard?'" Sydney Reiter said. She kept all her planned appointments Thursday and her husband went to work as usual.

They had a moment of worry when the electricity—and with it the heat—went off, but an hour later it was on again. And Sydney was wishing she could go back to her job at Oakland University.

The same casual attitude prevailed at the Franklin Road apartment of Myron and Adele Cohen.

"We're senior citizens and as long as we have each other we're fine," Mrs. Cohen said. "I went shopping Thursday to stock up for the weekend and then we snuggled in by the fire."

"I'm a big reader, so it doesn't bother me to be snowed in."

Mrs. Cohen added that she and her husband are better adapted to being snowed in than most people because he has arthritis and just can't go out much in cold weather.

"But our activities have always revolved around each other anyway," she said.

PERHAPS THE AREA'S coping Oscar should be awarded to Sheila Holden, who lives in the Wood Creek Farms subdivision of Farmington Hills.

Her electric clock stopped at 9:09 a.m. Thursday morning, and that was when all power in her home went off, including the heat.

Mrs. Holden, a senior citizen who calls herself the original bionic woman because of the surgical metal that pins the bones of her hips together, has osteoporosis and lives alone.

She's used to coping—with a sense of humor and a cane if necessary—so she gathered all her candles together and drew the curtains to conserve the heat from her now-dead electric furnace.

At 6 p.m. she telephoned a friend, but before she could be rescued the electricity came on again, so Mrs. Holden decided to stay home. Half an our later the lights and heat were off again.

She read Ellery Queen by candlelight and shivered in her bed until 7 a.m. Friday, when she called the police and asked them to deliver her to the home of a friend.

A couple of hours later, cold but still smiling, she had her first hot drink in 24 hours.

Or you might go traveling on cross-country skis. (Staff photo)

No lights, no heat? Try some bird-watching

By ELINOR GRAHAM

The offer of a ride home in a four-wheel drive vehicle was too good to turn down in the midst of Thursday's blizzard.

With an electric typewriter and a police scanner from the office, copy for Monday's paper could be turned out at home while keeping an ear on goings-on in the community.

It wasn't to be. The electricity had gone off at 11:45 a.m. It did not return until 12:45 the next morning. As the temperature slowly declined from 70 to 58 degrees, 8-year-old grandson was enthusiastic about saving all that energy.

"Just think," he said, "the only energy in this whole house is that little battery in the radio."

row families. The word got around that we had arranged a sort of wind-break for the feeding ground and a fine congregation of birds gathered.

Paul Butterfield, the old Siamese, didn't have time for bird watching. He was in one of his snits—wandering from register to register in a hopeless search for warmth.

IN AN ATTEMPT to keep one room comfortable, we installed a makeshift curtain in the arch between the living and dining rooms.

Candles were lit and everyone exclaimed over their warmth. Water from the taps still was reasonably warm. Three one-gallon milk jugs were filled with hot water and dis-

Another "bright idea" didn't work out so well.

Recalling that plastic garbage bags had served as foot warmers at football games, I decided they should work as well at Scrabble games. With a gallon jug of hot water in there, and the plastic bag held in place by sitting on it, it was perfect.

It worked so well that in a short time, my feet started to perspire. My fuzzy socks actually felt soggy. And yet, it wasn't all that warm. It wasn't until the end of the game that I discovered the jug had been leaking. My feet were sloshing around in an inch of water.

DINNER WAS a picnic-style repast in the living room—warm soup, bread and cheese.

The camping out atmosphere continued when grandson was allowed to spread his sleeping bag on the living room floor for the night.

Outside, The snow removal continued. A neighbor cleared the walk with his snowblower. The city snowplow cleared the street and another neighbor helped clear the driveway.

Finally everyone was snuggled down with hot water bottles and extra blankets.

Suddenly there was a flash of light. Just about every light in the house came on, the furnace purred into action and a radio blared.

The blackout was over.

MSU scientists recycling sewage for lake, land

Show drifts gently down as skaters trace delicate patterns across the ice. A few months later, a fisherman casts a fly line across the water, the fly lands with an inaudible plop and almost immediately disappears in an explosion of water as a "lunker" largemouth bass takes it and draws the line taut.

Not exactly the everyday idea of a sewage treatment plant, but these activities are already underway or being considered possible at Michigan State University's Water Quality Management Project.

After 10 years of planning, building and experimenting, scientists are about ready to recommend their design as the way to go for small and medium-sized communities in the Midwest.

The system is in two parts—a lake recycling system and a land recycling system.

The lake system consists of four man-made lakes and three ponds on MSU's south campus. Wastewater from the East Lansing sewage disposal plant is pumped to the first lake and is cleaned of pollutants as it flows to the second, third and fourth lakes.

The cleaning occurs as plants take up nutrients, including phosphorus. Later, the plants are harvested and fed to livestock or used for compost. Thus, the pollutants are removed from the water and put to good use.

Water from the lakes is also pumped to the nearby land system where irrigation sprayers apply the nutrient-laden water, providing fertilizer and moisture to fallow fields, crops and trees.

SCIENTISTS from the MSU Agricultural Experiment Station have been heavily involved in the project since the initial idea stages. Their contributions continue as evaluations of the system's efficiency and applicability.

Howard Johnson, fish and wildlife scientist, has been studying the role that fish can play in the lake system. "Smaller species feed on the small aquatic life-forms that live in the lake," he says. "In turn, the largemouth bass we have introduced live off of these smaller fish."

"The environment is apparently ideal for the bass," says Johnson. "Their growth and maturity rates appear comparable to those for bass in Louisiana and Florida waters."

Across Interstate Route 96 from the lake system, crop and soil scientist M.B. Tesar and James Hook have been applying wastewater from the lakes to experimental plots for four years. "Our results show that corn, alfalfa and grasses can be used effectively in a single year to remove nitrates and phosphorus from wastewater," Tesar says. "There is little, if any, contamination of the soil water or streams."

Alfalfa and perennial grasses, such as orchardgrass, are most effective at removing phosphorus from the effluent. Even at high irrigation rates these crops can remove more phosphorus than is present in the water.

Corn could be used in July and August to remove the nitrates, according to Tesar. Additional nitrogen would be needed, however, if yields of more than 100 bushels per acre were desired. Alfalfa and perennial grasses could be used in the spring and fall—before and after corn's peak nitrogen needs.

"According to our data, this would effectively keep nitrates in the soil below accepted Environmental Protection Agency standards from early April through mid-November," Hook says.

professor Don White, "the major cleaning" has so far been occurring in the soil. However, we think that the trees may take up and use a greater portion of the nutrients as they mature and develop larger root systems."

No toxic symptoms or other detrimental growth patterns have been observed. The trees that responded with the most growth were cottonwoods and black walnuts. Other trees that have benefited from wastewater nutrients were white ash, red oak, and white spruce.

An MSU entomologist also frequently haunts the forested portion of the WQMP. Harold Newson's activities center around the biting insect populations in the wooded area. "We are interested in whether or not the sewage irrigation influences the numbers of these insects—particularly mosquitoes," he says.

Two major mosquito populations exist in the area and one is known to be a vector of diseases that can affect man and animals. "Our early data have shown a very interesting result," Newson says. "Heavy irrigation operations are apparently depressing the species that is a potential disease carrier." Another entomologist, Rich Merritt, spends his time with the WQMP dredging up bottom samples from the lakes and then identifying and counting the mud larvae present.

"We are interested in discovering the distribution of these tiny flies in the lake bottoms, and in finding out whether or not they could become a nuisance factor in similar systems designed to handle sewage for small communities," he says.
