Stein has doubts that farm rights proposal is legal

After two years of costly research, Supervisor Harold Stein wonders if Canton Township can legally buy development rights from farmers.

Stein asked that question at Tuesday's township board meeting despite a board decision two weeks ago to try to put the development rights issue on the November ballot.

The township board has already spent about $35,000 for a study that compares the estimated $15.2 million cost of buying farmers' development rights to the cost of allowing the agricultural land in the southwestern portion of the township to develop into commercial and residential areas.

A committee that will educate residents on the ramifications of buying the development rights has been appointed.

BUT STEIN told board members Tuesday that he now has doubts whether Michigan law allows townships to purchase development rights.

He asked the board to approve a $2,000 legal opinion on the type of financing the township could use for the developmental rights purchase—if the action is legal at all.

Board members unanimously approved the supervisor's request. Attorney Bert Burgoyne is expected to deliver the opinion by the board's next meeting on July 11.

"I was just sitting at my desk and I thought, 'Hey, what are you doing?'" Stein said. "I thought, 'Is this legal in Michigan or isn't it?'"

The proposal to preserve agricultural land through the public purchase of farmers' development rights has never been tried in Michigan before.

Stein noted the lawsuits that have filed against other communities that have launched pilot land use programs.

Referring to a growth control policy implemented by Petaluma, Calif., Stein said, "If they had done a little legal research, they might not have had this problem."

Although Trustee Lynne Goldsmith voted in favor of the legal opinion, she asked why the opinion had not been sought before.

"If the attorney comes out and says we can't do this, I'm going to be hard pressed for spending $35,000 for that (cost comparison) study," she said.

THE PUBLIC purchase of development rights was recommended by a citizens study committee last spring as a way to preserve the township's dwindling agricultural land from encroaching urban sprawl.

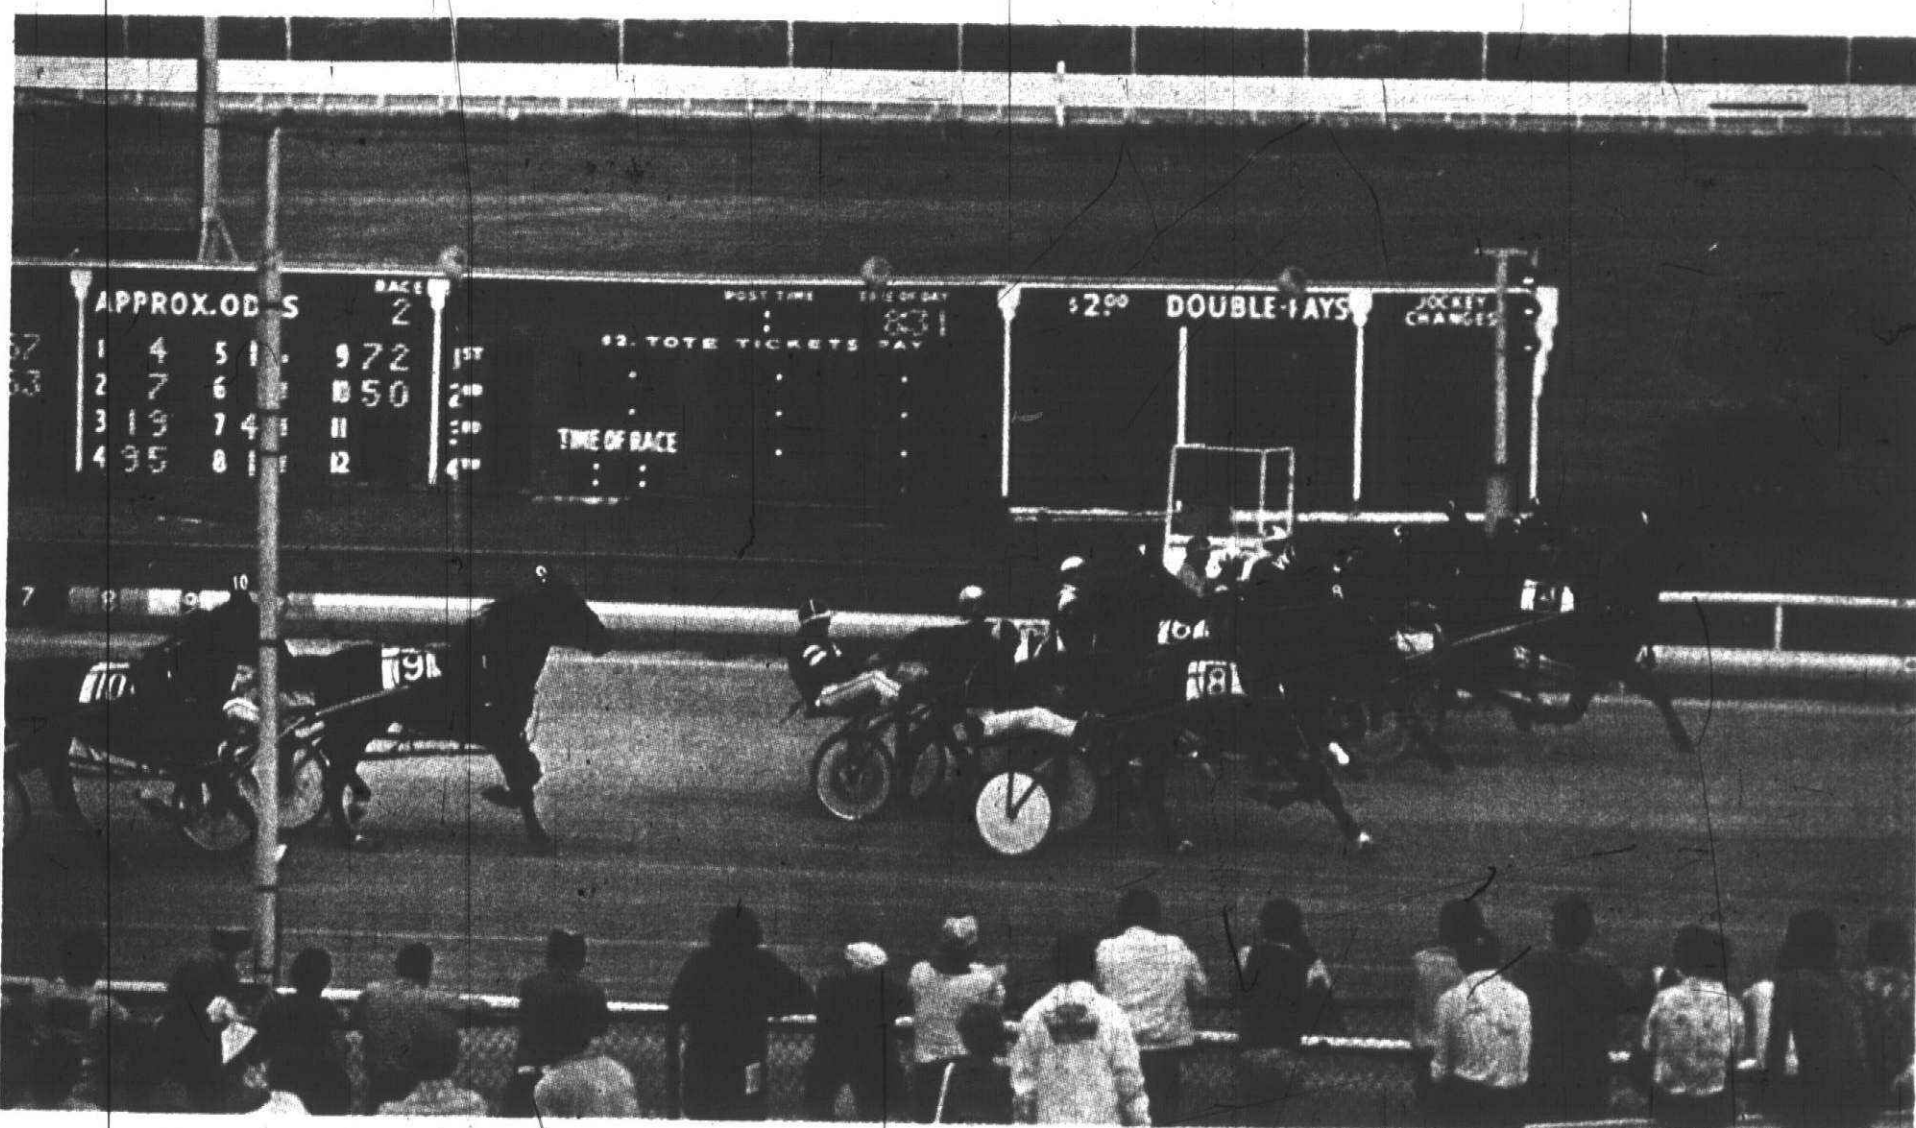

Two weeks ago, the board approved a recommendation of planning commission chairman Robert Padgett to appoint a seven-person committee to educate residents on the development rights issue.

The committee will submit a recommendation on whether the development rights issue should appear on the November ballot and be responsible for the wording of the ballot question.

The board has not yet determined a method to finance the purchase.

The educational committee was scheduled to hold its first meeting Wednesday night despite the board's decision to seek a legal opinion on the developmental issue.

The educational committee is composed of Padgett, Bart Berg, Bill Gilmore, Mary Hawk, Gary Sands and representatives of the Canton Observer and Canton Eagle.

Horse sense reigns supreme

A throng in the neighborhood of 10,000 persons... wagering in excess of $1 million at the pari-mutuel windows... many perhaps entranced by the mystique of horse racing's own little world... these are only a few of the colorful factors which tonight will send Wolverine Harness Raceway into the final two weeks of its 1978 meeting.

Wolverine presents the trotters and pacers in 10 races at 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday as a tenant of the Detroit Race Course at Schoolcraft and Middlebelt in Livonia.

The scene has been repeated more than a thousandfold since the 50s and will continue through Saturday, July 15. Then the thoroughbreds, ridden in the saddle as opposed to harness racing's driver sitting in a trailing sulky, will take over.

On that big digital tote board in the infield in full view of stands and clubhouse known to accommodate upwards of 15,000 spectators at peak times, the three words which never know the difference between one type of racing and the other are win, place and show.

THIS IS MICHIGAN'S only one-mile track and it is one of horse racing's fastest. When the horses come off the far turn with 990 feet yet to go to the wire, harness drivers flailing their steeds with buggy whips, it is not uncommon to have four, five or six horses storm to the finish line head-to-head.

The finest standard-breds in America have been racing at Wolverine this season, and through June 29 there had been 118 one-mile races in which the winner had been clocked in less than two minutes.

In harness racing that's the dividing line between real class and pretenders, the 2:00-flat mile.

Marks to shoot at in these last two weeks are a 1:55.4 pacing mile by Fulla Strikes, under the rein of leading driver Bill Gale, and 1:58.3 for trotters. The latter was posted by Lola's Express.

BY NO MEANS is racing just a man's world. Not only is it tradition that the stickpin handicappers among feminine clientele often come out bigger winners than the men, but on the track itself women have gained at least matching status.

This is demonstrated at Wolverine by the fact that Beatrice Farber is leading all "reinspersons" in the percentage of horses she has brought into the money.

Routes to the track are easy, there is parking for 10,000 cars, grandstand admission costs $2.50 and the clubhouse $3.50. Neophytes who catch the fever should remember that at 10:30 a.m. every Tuesday and Friday, qualifying races are held to establish levels of performance for the horses. There's no betting, but there's no admission fee either.

A builder's cry: 'We're the fall guy'

By CRAIG PIECHURA

The Canton Township primary is right around the corner and Gene Gleba—general manager of Crescendo Homes—says he's "tired of watching builders become the fall guy just before every election."

Gleba specifically singled out Gary Roberts, Republican candidate for trustee as an example of someone who is fueling anti-builder sentiment to further his political career.

Gleba and Neil Spizzen, president of Crescendo Homes of Madison Heights, said the present furor over deliberate delays in new home construction, lack of follow-up repairs and shoddy workmanship is being "orchestrated" by people who canvass neighborhoods soliciting building complaints.

"One party out there, I won't mention him by name, is out there canvassing complaints door-to-door," Gleba said. "There's got to be a motive behind what he's doing. If someone stood on your porch long enough and asked you to come up with a complaint about the place you're living in, you could come up with something."

Spizzen says solicitors have gone as far as prodding residents into listing a building complaint by telling them, "You must have something."

His partner Gleba adds: "One guy got so mad at them that he almost literally threw them out. But you don't hear about those people. Newspapers don't write about the thousands of satisfied home buyers." Candidate Roberts was out of town Friday and unavailable for comment on Gleba's charge.

Crescendo officials also reacted strongly to a letter from the Department of Licensing and Regulation that was critical of Crescendo's building complaint follow-up procedure.

The letter written Nov. 16, 1977 was released publicly by Canton Trustee Robert Myers who charged that Supervisor Harold Stein deliberately withheld the document in an effort to suppress building complaints. Stein had since called Myers accusation

Power out for 5 hours

More than 8,000 residential and commercial customers of Detroit Edison were left in the dark for almost five hours Wednesday night when a 120,000 volt transformer conked out.

There are two transformers in Edison's Wayne distribution station, 43100 Cherry Hill, but one was down for routine repairs when the other transformer malfunctioned.

"Heavy use of air conditioners could've added to the problem," said Peter Georges, in charge of customer and marketing services in Edison's Wayne division. "But that back-up transformer should've been able to handle the load."

Meijer Thrifty Acres' Canton store employees put all food perishables in refrigerated trucks during the power outage. Kroger also made arrangements to protect its food.

Canton Police called in 15 additional officers to direct traffic at intersections that were without working traffic lights.

The power went out at 8:47 p.m. and most of the customers were back in service by 11:50 p.m. By 1:36 a.m., power was restored to all Canton customers, Georges said.

The area hit by the blackout was approximately 15 square miles large, affecting the most populous areas of the township. It was bounded by Joy to the north, Cherry Hill to the south, Hannan to the east and Denton to the west.

No serious emergencies were reported in the blackout.

Once-proud fleet in ruins

Vandals trash 40 buses

Calvin Heard's fleet of once-proud buses is in ruins.

Last Wednesday night, vandals broke into the school district bus yard and trashed 40 buses.

Just a few months ago, Heard, the garage manager for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, was taking bows for passing a Michigan State Police bus inspection with high marks.

Not one of the district's 100 buses had a single defect. And it was the fifth year in a row that Heard's fleet had no safety violations.

After reading the Observer article which appeared when the inspection results were made public (March 16), even Gov. Milliken sent Heard a congratulatory letter.

"I'm just sick about this," said a bitter Heard Friday. "The damage will run into the thousands of dollars, let alone the work it will take to get the buses back in shape."

ACCORDING TO HEARD the vandals—who he believes were teenage boys—punctured 15 tires, slashed seats, broke mirrors, stole flares and took the gas caps of some of the buses and emptied fire extinguishers into the tanks.

"We may have to pull tanks and motors to get these things back on the road," he said sadly.

Even with summer vacation, the district still has to provide 40 bus runs a day. And Heard said there were barely enough buses running to meet the need.

"We're even getting calls from someone asking us how we are doing

A FULL FOURTH

A full day of holiday activities to keep young and old busy all day tomorrow include the Fourth of July parade, five-mile marathon run, bicycle decorating contest for the kids, a chicken barbecue at the VFW post and a fireworks display at night. For more details on tomorrow's happenings, see Page 2A.

Parade, fireworks, race spotlight Fourth here

Thousands of residents will be lined up and down Main Street tomorrow for the annual Fourth of July Parade, one of many activities planned here for the holiday.

The festivities will begin at 9:45 a.m.

In Northville with the Five Mile Marathon. The race will begin at Northville Downs and proceed down Edward Hines Drive to Plymouth Point Park at Starkweather and Mill in Old Village.

The parade will begin at 1 p.m. at Main and Theodore, proceed south to Hartsough, and then to the disassembly point at East Middle School.

The fireworks will begin at dark, between 9:30 to 10 p.m., at the Massey Field on Plymouth Road. Parking will be at the Burroughs parking lot across the road.

From noon to 5 p.m. the VFW's annual chicken barbecue will be held at the Mayflower VFW Post on Mill just north of Ann Arbor Road.

THE PARADE, fireworks and marathon events are sponsored by the Plymouth Jaycees, which have been conducting a fundraising effort to cover the expenses involved.

As of last Friday, however, the Jaycees had fallen short of their goal and were considering charging an admission fee or parking fee for the fireworks Tuesday night. Pledges and collections total about $1,850, while the parade expenses were estimated to be $1,600 and the fireworks, $2,850. The Jaycees were expected to make a decision over the weekend on whether to charge for the fireworks.

SOME SIX BANDS have been lined up for the parade Tuesday.

Bands expected to be marching down Main are Plymouth Fire and Drum Corps; Amherstburg, Ont. Band; Clan McRae Bagpipers; Farmington Community Band; and the Taylor Troubadours.

Groups entering floats include

Plymouth Theatre Guild, Schoolcraft College, Plymouth Community Chorus, Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church youth group, Colonial Pizza, and Mayflower Hotel.

Other entries in the parade include the Canton Riding Club, Redford Township Unicycle Club, Vickie's Baton Twirlers, Rocking Horse Association of Michigan, two elephants sponsored by John Smith, old cars, bicycles, and clowns.

A bicycle decorating contest for school students also is being staged as part of the parade. To enter, youngsters should be at the Cultural Center at 12:30 p.m. Those who enter will then ride in the parade. Prizes will be awarded for the best entries.

Betsy car in parade

A zany fleet of vehicles, including a 20-foot pizza on a flatbed truck, the police car used in the movie "Betsy," and a 32-foot hydraulic lift, will be among the entries in Plymouth's Fourth of July parade Tuesday.

Jerry Harb, Plymouth pizza store owner and promoter who air-shipped 185 pizzas to Florida for a gourmet brunch last February, is, of course, emphasizing pizzas in his mobile entourage.

The car used in the Harold Robbins movie, says Harb, sports a banner urging the anticipated 25,000 to 30,000 spectators to "arrest" their hunger with Colonial Pizza.

In the next vehicle two pizza makers will be demonstrating the art of twirling and flipping pizza dough from their 35-foot high platform perch, while a fresh 20-foot pizza travels along on a flatbed destined to satisfy the hunger of spectators at the parade's conclusion.

The final vehicle in Harb's section of the parade will be a customized dune buggy with the sign reading "the end" dangling from its back bumper.

Feller to lead German-Americans

Roger Feller has been elected president of the German-American Club of Plymouth.

Other officers recently installed include: Maria Mulzer, vice-president; Edith Scherer, secretary; Mary Ann Sudhoff, treasurer; L. John Miller and Robert Fitzner, auditors.

The club meets regularly at 8 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month in its new meeting place, the IOOF, Hall at E. Ann Arbor Trail and Elizabeth Street.

President Feller announced several noteworthy events for the new year at the installation ceremony. Plans are completed for the German Junque sale at the IOOF, Hall Saturday, July 22, at 10 a.m.

This is not the customary or common garage sale, reports Feller, although a car (in running condition) has been donated and will be offered for sale at a "junque" price. Many items of clothing will highlight the sale.

This also will be the kickoff of the ticket sale for the first authentic Plymouth "Oktoberfest" which will be held Saturday, Sept. 30, in the Plymouth Community Cultural Center.

German beer, German wine, German food will be featured along with German and modern dancing to the music of "The Melodias"—the band which performed for the club's Fasching parties—all in the true Munich beer hall atmosphere.

The club's administrative board pledged to concentrate on improving the club through its cultural classes and more gemuetlichkeit in dinner meetings and outings.

The July meeting will be a family picnic at the Gunsolly Mill Site in Edward Hines Park at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, July 20.

Things are shaping up at Canton's new address

The township's new $2.7 million federally funded city hall is shaping up on Canton Center at Proctor. Officials are aiming for a August 4 opening date.

Securing dry wall to the interior of the new city hall is one of the tasks which remain before the building opens in August.

Work on the exterior of the ground floor includes installing the building's plumbing.

Workers are practically tripping over each other in an 11th hour effort to finish cosmetic work on Canton's brand new township administration building before the Aug. 4 deadline.

A sheet metal worker's strike has delayed installation of ductwork for heating and air conditioning but cement work was almost complete last week.

Finance Director Mike Gorman said Friday he expects to meet the projected Aug. 4 target date.

"We've been told that the sheet metal workers will probably be back next week after they're through with the Fourth of July weekend," he said.

Tile was being laid last week and ceiling tile on the first level of the three-story structure was put in.

"Everybody's going bananas around the place," Gorman said. "Practically everybody's there at one time and messing up the new floor with all their materials. But they're really going to town. We should make it in by Aug. 4."

Canton Township's new hall is located on the northwest corner of Canton Center and Proctor roads.

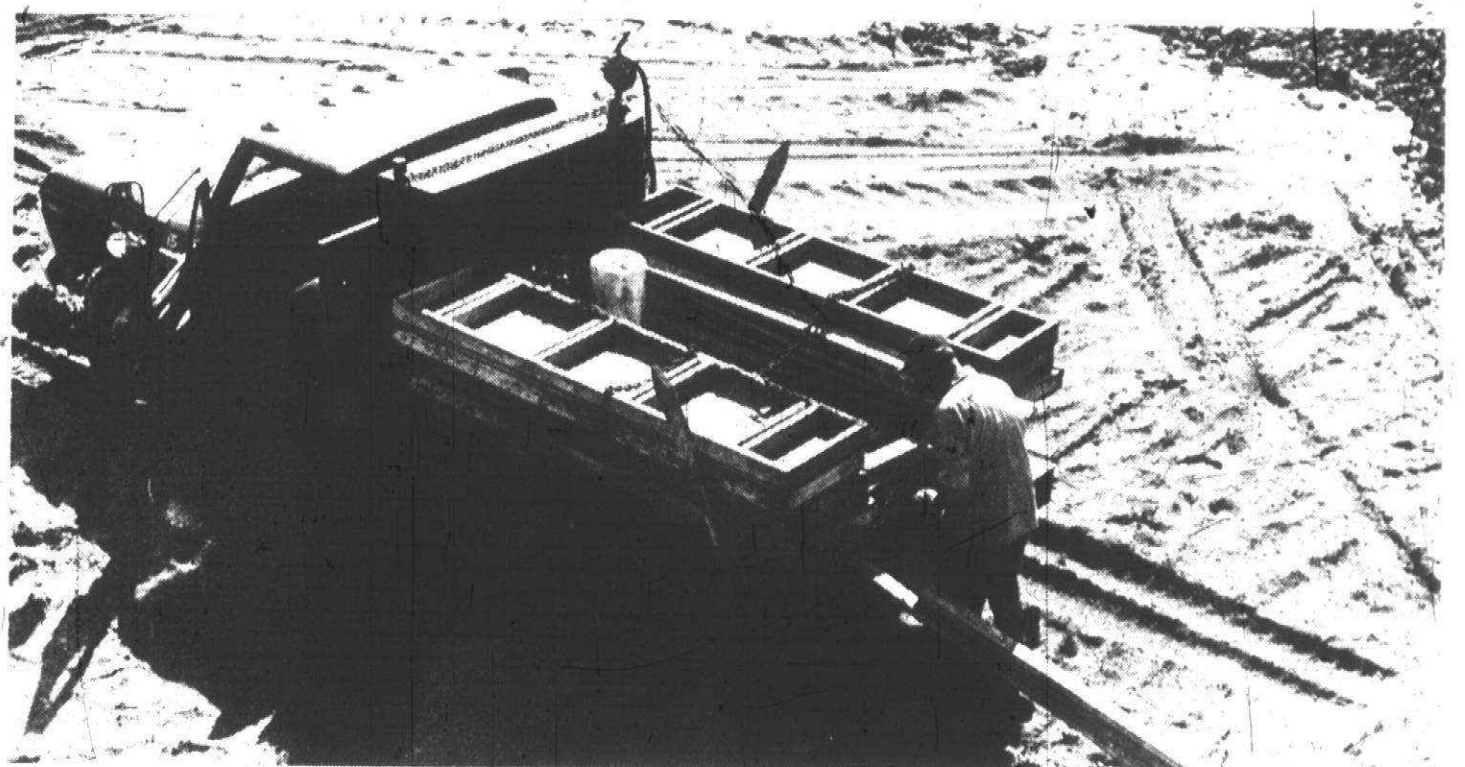

The building itself was made possible by a $2.7 million federal job-incentive grant. Canton Township will have to pay to furnish the third story and provide furniture in some offices.

Landscaping and grading are still not finished at the site.

Putting the finishing touches on a door frame, this workman thinks twice while applying plaster.

Seeing a workman unload materials from a truck in front of the new city hall is a common sight, now. By next month there will be fewer construction workers on the scene and considerably more city employees.

Lower grades crunched by cuts, 2 trustees say

The 1978-79 operating budget for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools approved last week drew complaints from two school board trustees unhappy with cuts in various programs.

School board trustees had voted unanimously to make cuts in certain areas if the 1½ additional mills failed in the June 12 school election.

But last Monday, Richard Arlen, board vice-president, and Flossie Tonda voted against the $29.6 million budget, saying the proposed cutback penalized elementary students. The budget passed by a 5-2 vote.

Tonda thought insufficient funds had been allocated for building upkeep while Arlen felt some of the proposed cutbacks cut too deeply into basic education at the elementary level.

While other individual trustees criticized specific recommended cuts, the remaining five board members voted to approve the budget because they had reached the June 12 consensus on where cuts would be made.

The budget goes into effect July 1 and serves as a guideline for expenditures until June 30, 1979. Should the district receive more or less revenue once the state aid formula and the official student count is known next fall, the board will be notified and asked to make adjustments, said Ray Hoedel, assistant superintendent of business.

WHILE the 1978-79 budget is approximately $4 million larger than last year's budget, it is almost $1 million less than what was sought in the additional millage.

The most dramatic reduction in the approved $29,636,049 budget is the hiring of only 14 new teachers instead of 36 needed to accommodate an expected 850 new students this fall.

A $49,000 cut will be made in the athletic department by eliminating seventh and ninth grade sports. Student supplies will be cut by $6.50 per pupil. There will be a number of staff reductions and significantly reduced allocations for the school radio station (WSDP), the school farm, student newspapers, debate, drama and other clubs.

Elementary school will start one hour later one day per week. This will be caused by the elimination of six specialist teachers.

In approving the thinner budget Monday night, the school board got a substantial jump on previous years' budget approvals. Last year's budget wasn't approved until mid-October.

"The board set a goal to approve this year's budget prior to the start of the fiscal year," Hoedel said, "so we began work on this document 11 days after the current year's budget was approved last October."

One question mark in the approved budget is the amount of state aid the school district will eventually receive. The budgeted $7½ million reflected represents a reasoned calculation based on current information, Hoedel explained.

IN RESPONSE to a question from the audience at last week's school board meeting, Supt. John M. Hoben noted that the student population is increasing at a rate of about four per cent a year with the first signs of decline showing up at the kindergarten level. Growth could level off in four to five years, added Hoben, but the opening of the M-14 expressway could offset that by opening up development in western Plymouth Township.

When it came time to vote on the 1978-79 budget, Trustee Arlen said he was concerned about some of the cuts included in the administrative recommendations for belt-tightening made before the millage election.

Arlen was particularly critical of the cuts proposed in elementary instruction where some kindergarten classes would exceed 35 pupils per teacher.

"AND THIS IS not a way to obtain good, basic education—even for an old conservative like myself."

"District-wide we may have a good student-teacher average ratio, but whenever we have 35-1 we are cheating 35 pupils."

"I'd rather cut at the top levels because it doesn't hurt as much there than when you cut at the bottom," Arlen said. "Younger kids bleed more."

Tonda agreed, saying youngsters will find it easier to learn in later years if they're given a sound education at the start.

The remaining trustees thought that since budget cuts were discussed and drawn up before the millage election, they must swallow the bitter pill.

The school superintendent said that he was concerned that funds for building maintenance might come up short with the voters' denial of one-half mill earmarked for maintenance.

"The district has more than $100 million in stock which we must protect with proper maintenance," Hoben said. "And if the repairs aren't made now, it will just cost us more in the future."

Builder tired of being 'fallguy'

unfounded and politically-motivated.

The letter written last winter by Ms. Silvernia Kanoyten, deputy director of the Department of Licensing and Regulation, a state building license agency, said in part:

"This department has other consumer complaints against Crescendo Homes, Inc. and, as a result, we are in the process of preparing a formal complaint against Crescendo. This formal complaint action, if successful, could result in a suspension or revocation of Crescendo's license.

"I should like to stress the importance of having complaints similar to Gerald Cuper's filed with this department within 18 months of completion or occupancy of the structure, which ever occurs later. In this way, the department is able to retain jurisdiction over the matter and if the complaint is not resolved by the licensee, can proceed with licensing action."

loch, complaint analyst in the Department of Licensing and Regulation reported four "active" consumer complaints pending against Crescendo in the state agency.

Gleba of Crescendo reports that three of the four cases that the Department of Licensing and Regulation lists as "active" have been settled to the satisfaction of the homeowner. But the state said it has not yet received word that those complaints have been dropped.

Firemen get contract

A three-year contract with total pay increases of 19 per cent has been approved for the Canton firefighters.

The Canton board unanimously voted to ratify the contract retroactive to Jan. 1 Tuesday night. Local 2289 of the Firefighters Union ratified the contract by a 23-1 vote Monday.

The contract increases the maximum pay of firefighters from the former level of $17,100 to $20,550 during the third year of the new contract, based on a 56-hour week.

The contract gives firefighters a nine per cent pay hike the first year and five per cent pay increases during the second and third years of the contract. The union's former contract with the township expired Jan. 1.

The agreement also gives firefighters additional benefits.

For the first time, firefighters will receive dental insurance and overtime pay for time worked over 56 hours a week. In the past, firefighters received $7.50 plus a regular hourly wage in lieu of overtime pay.

The contract also increases firefighter's annual longevity pay to a maximum $500 a year.

Myers said last week that "such an important piece of correspondence" sent to Stein should have been distributed to the entire township board because it could have affected township policy. Stein said he followed up Cuper's complaint and made no attempt to cover it up.

Crescendo officials blasted Ms. Kanoyten for putting the building company "in a bad light" with the letter.

As of Friday, June 30, Cheryl Tul-

In the one claim still disputed, Gleba says Crescendo replaced a Canton homeowner's driveway once and the company now is being asked to install another because the driveway peeled again.

Gleba says Crescendo hired a testing firm to see if the cement was poured correctly and found out that weather conditions, not workmanship, was the culprit.

on making our transportation runs," Heard related. "I assume it is one of the people involved in the destruction."

Plymouth Police Det. Ralph White said that some of the same kind of flames stolen from the bus yard were used later that night to start two cars on fire in Plymouth Township.

"I'm assuming now that it was the same people who got the buses. The flames were identical."

Although White said he had suspects in the case, he declined to name them.

"I'm pretty sure they were juveniles who hated school. It was really a hateful thing the way the damage was conducted—it wasn't just malicious destruction. Some of the buses they got hadn't even been on the road yet," White said.

Owner wants land rights poll instead of ballot

Editor:

Please excuse the handwritten letter but I do not own a typewriter and I feel I should voice my opinion about the questions which have risen concerning keeping part of Canton for farmland.

Since I live on the northern boundary of this proposed farm section, I am totally against one man and his theories, and putting this on a ballot for others to vote on. We who own this section of land are, of course, in the minority as far as votes are concerned. It would be fairer if a poll was taken of the concerned people and their property—of their wishes to see if they agree or disagree with a 10-year (or more) binder on the commercial sale of their property.

There are quite a few neighbors who own fewer than 10 acres. Why should we be bound to an agreement which concerns such a little bit of land?

Also, why would the people of Canton veto school millage increases and then support a bill using their's (and mine) tax dollars to pay us for not selling commercially.

Every article I have read in the paper so far is for this proposal. One important dollar figure that is never published is the speculation of what it would cost the taxpayers if this property went commercial or in multiple dwellings.

Sure, more residents means more schools, but these residents are paying taxes too. Won't this be enough increased revenue? Commercial businesses pay added taxes also.

What is the advantage of keeping all this property, zoned rural farm, etc. with lower taxes coming from us?

Residents, we must go before a zoning board to get a change anyway. Why is it necessary to ask the other residents of Canton?

It would seem that farmers who would be for this legislative act would pledge their land and get a tax cut, without involving others and paying someone $35,000 to make a study for Canton on this.

Thank you for taking time to read this letter, but I believe I should let the people know how I feel, being a property owner on this plot of land.

Lineman badly burned

Edward Hill, a lineman for the L.E. Myers Construction Co. suffered third degree burns last Tuesday while installing power lines through Canton's Edison corridor.

The Myers firm does work for Detroit Edison and Tuesday was the final day on the job for the work crew.

According to Canton Fire Chief Mel Paulin, Hill was installing a ground regulator when he brushed against a cable that still carried a strong charge of static electricity.

Hill's wife, Jacqueline, said the shock entered her husband's thigh and the jolt went through his fingertips, causing third degree burns. Other workers were unable to reach Hill, who passed out for a short time. The Canton Fire Department arrived on the scene and sent a rope up to him.

"Somehow he brought himself back under control," his wife explained. "He kicked the wire away and was able to lower himself down on the rope sent up by the firemen."

Hill was listed in "fair" condition Friday at the University of Michigan Burn Center in Ann Arbor. He is expected to be hospitalized for a month.

The accident occurred at 12:19 a.m. near the intersection of Cherry Hill and Corrine.

My doctor pronounced me cured of cancer.

My boss didn't.

My boss didn't understand that I was healthy again.

So I was let go.

A lot of people are like my boss. They think that everyone dies of cancer. I thought so, too. Until the American Cancer Society, through one of its service and rehabilitation programs, helped me return to a normal life.

The ACS also has local Units that help Americans who've never had cancer understand it better.

Today, more and more, cancer is a curable disease. Ignorance about cancer is curable, too.

The 'working poor' gains sympathetic support

The difference between the working poor and the welfare poor is not a matter of income, but of effort, says a University of Michigan researcher.

Americans make a strong distinction between the "lowest class," who they perceive has "given up," and the "next-to-lowest class of the working poor," whom they see as "still trying."

"Trying" means working, according to Prof. John E. Tropman of the U-M Institute of Gerontology and the School of Social Work.

"Americans are resentful and even hostile toward people who are chronically on the public dole and making no apparent effort to better themselves," he says.

"But they are sympathetic toward those who have a job—even one of low salary and status. Welfare is acceptable in this situation as an occasional subsidy for making ends meet."

"The important thing to retain, at all odds, is independence."

The findings are from Tropman's ongoing study of American attitudes toward the poor. In a series of in-depth interviews with residents of Boston and Kansas City, he has been examining class consciousness and what people are class conscious about.

"The most frequently mentioned traits of the 'lowest class' were lack of a job, lack of education, and 'being on welfare,'" reports Tropman. One-third of those interviewed indicated that the poor were at fault for their condition, citing lack of ambition, laziness and unwillingness to get a job.

"Working, however, moves the poor person up a notch on the social ladder," he said. Here the key characteristic is not lack of a job, but the type of a job: one with low pay, little security and no outside benefits.

"There would seem to be little status in being a dishwasher or domestic worker," Tropman said. "On the surface, one's life would closely resemble that of the welfare recipient: inadequate housing, limited opportunity for recreation or culture, and only the bare necessities of food and clothing. In many cases, one would still need to accept charity and welfare occasionally to sustain the family."

"But the working poor, at least, appear to be trying. And that is what causes them to be regarded with compassion instead of resentment."

Tropman notes that the second lowest class was rarely described in terms of fixed characteristics, like being old, ill or handicapped. And less than five per cent of those interviewed mentioned race, sex or ethnic origin.

"There is no indication from this study that people equate women or minorities with lower class status," he says.

Instead, the working poor were described in terms of their jobs, education and social status—all things which could potentially be changed.

"Education is considered the most important factor in getting ahead," Tropman said. "The more education one has, in fact, the more value one tends to place on it. 'Inner motivation' is also cited as an element in achieving success."

"What bothers people most about the poor on welfare," according to the U-M researcher, "is their dependency."

Tropman says welfare has a dual image in America. The dominant negative image associates welfare with pauperism and moral failure. Americans are incensed if they feel lack of effort is rewarded by government subsidy, he says, and are always suspicious that such help will be abused or wasted.

But they have a much more positive attitude toward working individuals who occasionally need assistance because of a job layoff or other family hardship. "Perhaps this is also why Americans complain about the bureaucratic 'welfare system,'" he says, "yet give ungrudgingly to charity."

Market Watch

By JOHN E. VERNIER

If he makes it through the night, Uncle Sam will be 202 years old tomorrow.

That's pretty old by normal comparisons. But, related to the British Lion he is just a youngster, and to the Chinese Dragon he is only a newborn child.

He was born in a very turbulent atmosphere. His parents were some folks who saw fit to leave their native land because their freedom of religious expression was being denied.

They risked life and limb to reach these shores.

Later, they expressed even greater obstinacy by dumping their tea in the Boston harbor in objection to the unfair tax imposed on them. They thought it important enough to go to war over the issue. They won their independence and Uncle Sam was born.

THINGS WERE FINE for a while. Then trouble developed that Sam found difficult to understand. A philosophy had been agreed upon regarding the fundamental rights of all citizens, but it was not being practiced.

Sam objected to slavery. He called upon a great man who, surprisingly, looked much like Sam to resolve this great problem. At the eventual sacrifice of his own life and after a bitter war between his own people, Sam's problem was solved.

These and other experiences molded Sam into a rugged individual. His people were strong and determined, and the Lord had given him a land rich with wealth and beauty.

SLOWLY, BUT DELIBERATELY, Sam encouraged his people to develop their resources. They cleared the land and dammed the rivers. They reached relentlessly to conquer this new-found land, to replace the mule with the tractor, the horse with the auto, and kerosene lamps with electricity.

The world watched with awe and amazement as Uncle Sam and his people transformed life from a simple existence to a world of beauty and accomplishment.

People from all lands stood in line to become part of this great new utopia.

Uncle Sam's land, America, became a melting pot of mankind. All nationalities, religions, races and creeds blended to become known as "Americans."

Sam was proud. He became a leader of the world community. As time evolved, however, some of his friends abroad found themselves in a militant predicament with their neighbors, and they called upon him for his help.

He didn't hesitate. Twice this happened. Not only did his young people willingly respond to his request to pick up weapons and risk their lives to help his friends, but he tightened his belt and threatened himself with bankruptcy to supply the tools necessary to finish the job.

IT DIDN'T END THERE. The world was in deep trouble. The lands were decimated, many cities destroyed, economies in despair, and the people destitute.

Sam said, "All of you, friend and foe alike, my country will help you rebuild. We want you all, someday, to enjoy the level of life that we enjoy."

Cries for help came from everywhere. Sam and his people responded. The job was well done. Maybe too well done!

By strengthening others he weakened himself. He is no longer the dominant factor in world trade that he once was.

Conditions have risen that have caused unrest among his own people. Like their forefathers, they are revolting against excessive taxation.

Uncle Sam is concerned and worried. He is asking, "Where do we go from here?"

Alcoa presents automated plan to reclaim cans under new law

By MAURIE WALKER

What are beer and soft drink distributors to do when they are deluged with thousands of empty cans after Michigan's container deposit law goes into effect?

Alcoa, the nation's largest aluminum producer, says it has an answer.

The company has offered wholesalers an automated machine to flatten cans and load them into trailers. The recovery system, if established statewide could recycle 60 million cases of cans annually, according to Alcoa officials.

These 40-foot trailers, where the redeemed containers can be stored, will, when fully loaded, be hauled by Alcoa to a regional processing center. There the mixed aluminum and steel cans will be sorted and weighed.

Aluminum cans will be compacted into 800-pound bales and shipped by rail to Alcoa reclamation plants in Indiana and Tennessee. Steel cans will be sold to steel companies.

"ALCOA'S MICHIGAN automated can processing system will be as fast and productive as modern technology can make it," said George Herrman, Alcoa's manager of aluminum reclamation.

"There's a potential 24 million pounds of aluminum cans and 78 million pounds of steel beer cans awaiting recovery in Michigan," Herrman said.

"Soft drink containers will raise these totals even higher. We're going to do our part to recover and recycle every metal beverage can in Michigan."

Herrman said all of the state's more than 200 beer wholesalers and 32 soft drink bottlers have been invited to participate in the container recovery program.

The company initially has committed $2 million for equipment and facilities to support the Michigan activity, including machines to flatten and load cans, trucks and trailers and one receiving center. The latter will be in this area and will have specialized can processing equipment. The scope of the program could be increased significantly to accommodate a greater number of participants.

SEVERAL AREA wholesalers, including Wayne Distributing Co. Inc. of Livonia, have joined the program. Herrman said more than 60 Michigan wholesalers have joined the program.

Herrman said an estimated 70 per cent of Michigan's packaged beer is sold in aluminum and steel cans. This is equivalent to 60 million cases of 24-ounce containers.

"Alcoa expects that a very high percentage of these cans will be redeemed. About 40 per cent of packaged beer (23 million cases) is sold in aluminum cans."

Herrman said the aluminum industry is committed to recycling aluminum "for reasons which make economic sense."

"In a world of increasing energy costs, recycling saves 95 per cent of the energy needed to produce aluminum from ore. The value of aluminum as a resource argues convincingly for its recovery and reuse."

He said that in 1977, Alcoa recycled 2.2 billion aluminum cans, about 94 million pounds of metal. This, he said, is the equivalent of about half the annual production of an average aluminum smelter.

law. The other states are Maine, Vermont and Oregon.

According to Herrman, advantages to wholesalers in requesting the Alcoa service, which includes equipment, maintenance, prompt removal of cans, a storage trailer that gives maximum security against loss and also acts as a means of warehousing cans, and a proven system for determining weights and value of used aluminum and steel cans.

"In addition to being a dependable metal source, can recycling in major quantities is an attractive alternative to building new primary aluminum plants. Facilities to remelt used aluminum containers may be built in a fraction of the time and at a cost far less than building a new smelter," Herrman added.

Distributing company launches $1 million expansion program

By MAURIE WALKER

Construction is under way of an approximately $1 million addition to the warehouse of Action Distributing Company at 35901 Veronica in Livonia's industrial corridor.

Action is a beer distributor. The present 46,353 square foot warehouse will be expanded to 86,600 square feet when the addition is completed sometime in October.

Located on 6.5 acres, the addition is west of the present building. In addition to the expanded warehouse, Action is building a 2,515 square foot truck repair building on the property.

Ben Celani, owner of the center, said Action services some 1,300 accounts, including bars, stores and clubs. The company's territory covers western Wayne County from Wyoming Ave. in Detroit on the east, the county boundary on the west, Eight Mile on the north and I-94 on the south.

"We serve everyone in this area who has a liquor license," Celani said.

The company, which has been on its present Livonia site since March 1976, is distributor for all Miller Brewing Co. products, Hamm's Beer, Olympia Gold, Lowenbrau, Cinci and Black Horse Ale, a Canadian product.

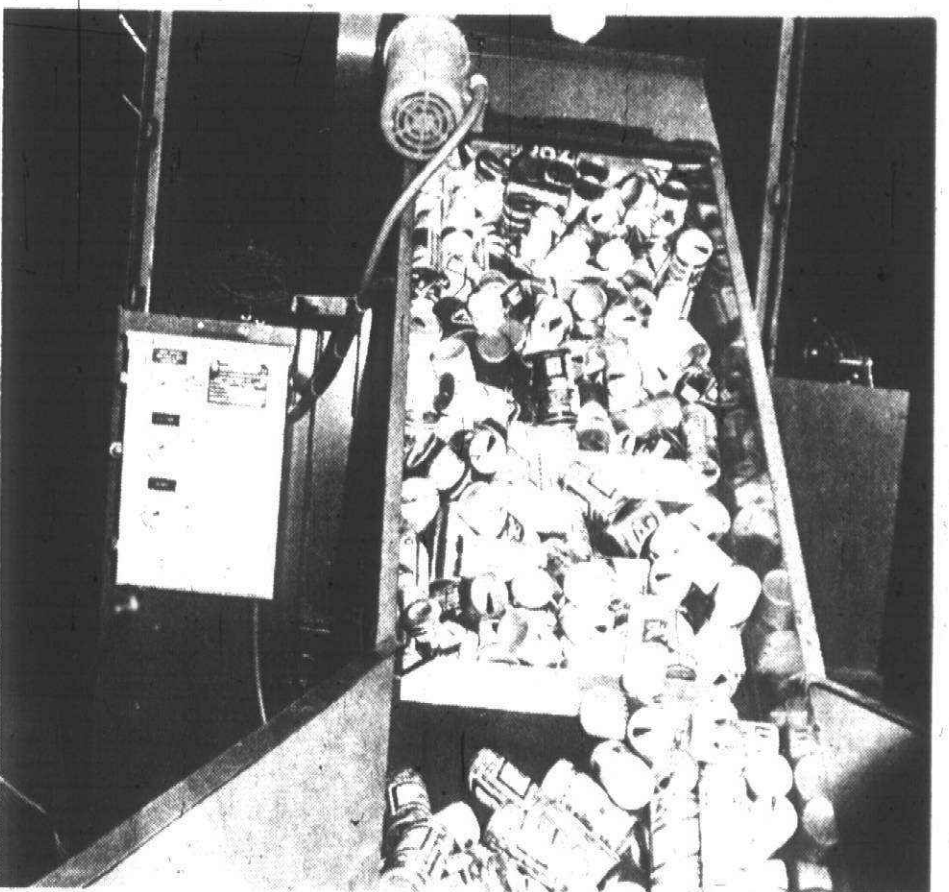

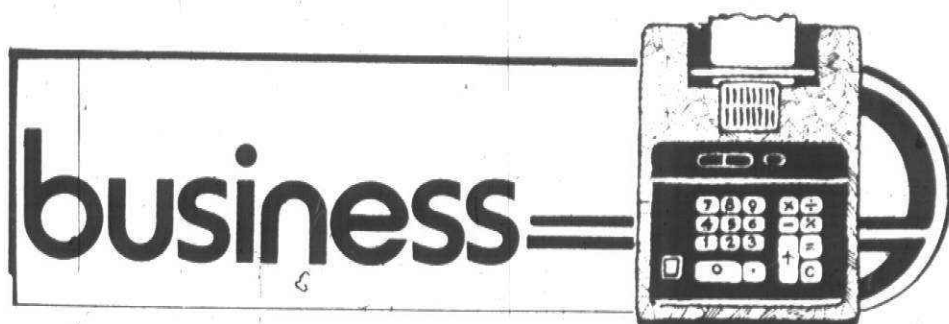

Celani said he moved the company from Garden City to the present location "because of access to the railroad and the convenience of the freeways around Livonia. Approximately 80 per cent of the company's shipments from the breweries come in by rail where trucks run directly behind the warehouse."

"We are strictly a wholesale company. Our 35 trucks deliver not only beer by the case but kegs too," Celani said. "We average 10,000 cases of beer per day or about 2½ million a year."

Action employs 70 persons, including office help, driver-salesmen and mechanics. The addition will require the hiring of more persons Celani said. "We don't know just how many more jobs this expansion will create in Livonia, but it will be substantial."

The company was purchased by Celani 11 years ago but he had been in the beer distributing business 30 years. He owned Action when it was located in Detroit. In 1969 he took over Northwest Distributing Co., located at Ford and Middlebelt Roads in Garden City. Prior to moving to Livonia, he put in about $200,000 improving the present building which had been sitting idle for two years.

He has handled Miller products

An estimated 60 million cases of beverage cans will be recycled annually under Alcoa's plan. The process starts when the cans are dumped on to a belt leading them to the automated flattening machine and into a waiting trailer. (Staff photo) since 1969. He started in the business as a driver-salesman, a job he had for 12 years. Later he moved to salesman and traffic manager for another beer distributor.

General Manager Dick Rose has been with Celani since Celani purchased Northwest. He has been in the business 20 years, all of it in the Detroit area.

"I started as a truck driver, a job I held for 10 years," Rose said.

The warehouse, in addition to storing space for cases of beer, has a refrigerated area for the storing of keg beer. The addition will also be equipped with refrigeration.

At the present time there is a recycling area where aluminum cans are processed for re-use. With the new building, all cans and bottles will be recycled and reclaimed by the breweries.

One of the prime reasons for expanding the warehouse is the non-returnable bottle law which goes into effect in December.

"We simply are going to need more storage space since we will be picking up all the cases we deliver to our customers," Rose said. "We had returnable bottles some 30 years ago but the volume wasn't as high as it is now."

Celani said that under the bottle bill, all bottles will be sent from the stores and bars back to the distributors.

Peak beer seasons are in the warm months, May through August, and again in November and December.

Territories for distributors are set up by the individual breweries so there is no competition with the same product. Beer distributors are licensed by the state and federal governments and controlled by the Liquor Control Commission.

Livonian honored with awards by engineering group

William M. Brennan of Livonia, a specifications engineer with Johnson & Anderson, Inc., consulting engineers in Pontiac, has been named winner of three awards by the Construction Specifications Institute at CSI's annual June convention in San Antonio.

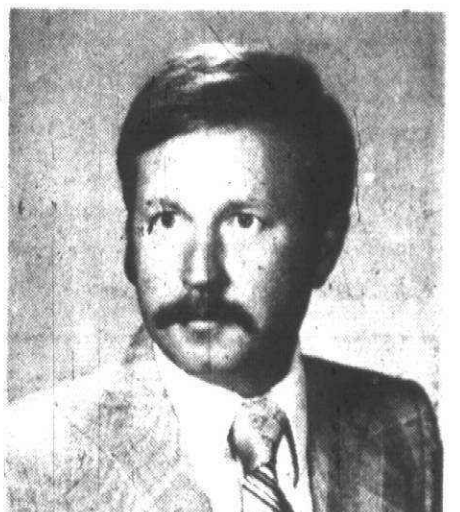

Brennan was one of six persons selected for multiple honors in the 22nd annual awards program conducted by CSI to promote improvement in specification practices.

"The Livonian won specification awards for his work with the Muskegon Township maintenance garage, and for the village of Oxford's water system improvements."

His third award was a technical commendation for "his continued contributions to the technical aid services which inspired the Detroit chapter to the most ambitious undertaking of any chapter participating in this CSI program."

A.J. Kuker III has been promoted to staff manager in the Garden City district office of the National Life and Accident Insurance Co. He began his career as an agent in 1977 and has won numerous company and industry production honors and awards. Previously Kuker served in the Oakland district office. National is the nation's fifth largest combination life insurance firm and operates in 25 states.

George A. Ski of Livonia has been appointed by the National Bank of Detroit as assistant vice-president in the investment division. SUMMER WORSHIP

July 16—The congregation of The First United Presbyterian Church of Plymouth will continue to worship in its sanctuary at Main and Church Streets until July 16, when it will hold services through the summer in the Masonic Temple, opposite Kellogg Park. Extensive renovations will necessitate the move. Earlier, July 2 was slated as the moving date but building plans have brought about a change to July 16.

SUMMER SCHOOL HOURS

Summer office hours are now in effect at the central administration offices of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools on Harvey Street in Plymouth. Hours through Aug. 25 are 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Citizens Committee for United Services (CUS) is beginning to explore specific issues on the practicality of the City of Plymouth and Plymouth Township merging fire departments.

Citizens Committee for United Services is the newly-adopted name for the study group informally referred to in the past as the unification study committee.

The study group consisting of representatives from city and township is exploring the desirability and feasibility of combining fire departments and other municipal services. It is also exploring the possibility of eventual total unification of the two communities.

Because no conclusions have been reached yet, however, on the desirability or form of unification the mem-

Design award winner

Straub, Van Dine, Dziurman Architects have received an award from the Engineering Society of Detroit for their design of the Cavell vacation home on Lake LeAnn south of Jackson. The 950-square-foot project, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Cavell of Carol Street, Plymouth, is the smallest project to ever receive this award. The award was based on the project's innovative construction method, quality of its design, appropriateness of its materials, and environmental considerations including energy consciousness.

Group taking closer look at joint fire service bers had decided that "unification study committee" was an inappropriate label.

THE COMMITTEE'S present inclination is to give first priority to considering the joining of the two fire departments, and to consider later joint ventures for public works and recreation.

The members are now exploring whether a vote of township residents would be needed to form a joint fire department because township firefighters fall under Act 78 Civil Service.

The committee also has discussed the possibility of establishing a special district for fire protection. The present thinking is that the combined department could operate two fully-manned fire trucks—one on the north side operating out of the Lake Pointe station and one operating out of the station at city hall.

A concern of the committee at present is what impact joint service ventures might have on the longer-range goal of combining the two governments. Some members feel unification of one service department, such as fire, could act as an example that joining together does work. Others, though, feel voters might assume there is no need for further consolidation if police, fire and other service departments are joined.

ALL MEETINGS of the study group are open to the public, and interested residents are encouraged to attend.

The committee meets at 7:30 p.m. on the second and fourth Thursday of each month. The meeting on the second Thursday is held in Plymouth Township Hall at Mill and Ann Arbor Road, and the fourth Thursday meeting is in Plymouth City Hall at Church and Main.

Committee members are: Robert Batterman, chairman; Archie Vallier, vice-chairman; William Hartman, Carol Levitte; Mary Jean Willette; William Silvus; Thomas Turner; W. Edward Wendover and Joe West. The secretary is Mark Wollenweber.

Abbott found dead in car

Thomas S. Abbott, a former purchasing agent for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, was found dead in his car Friday morning.

According to Wayne County Sheriff Detective Terry Shank, Abbott's car was found at 10 a.m. at Haggerty Road and the C&O railroad tracks, just north of Plymouth Road.

Abbott, 51, a Livonia resident, was hired by the school district in 1973 and resigned in May of this year.

At press time, the Wayne County Medical Examiner had not determined the cause of death.

Grandchild Life Insurance

Introducing the first life insurance policy that can grow along with your grandchild, through investments primarily in the stock market.

The name of this new kind of protection is Variable Life Insurance. But since it's designed for the future, and your grandchild can benefit from it, you might call it "grandchild life insurance." It's available only through Equitable Variable Life Insurance Company—EVLICO—a wholly owned subsidiary of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

Here's how it works: the funds supporting the policy are invested in a Separate Account managed by the professional investment staff of The Equitable. The insurance coverage on your grandchild increases or decreases, depending on the performance of the Account. But the policy always guarantees at least the amount of insurance protection you bought.

Also, if you include an Option to Purchase Additional Insurance, when your grandchild is between the ages of 25 and 40 up to $300,000 more coverage can be purchased—regardless of his or her health at that time.

The cash value of the policy also increases or decreases, depending on the Account's performance, but there is no guaranteed minimum.

Remember, too, that the low premium you pay now, because of your grandchild's youth, never changes—even if he or she decides to take over the payments later on. For more information about the Separate Account and our grandchild life insurance policy, including charges and expenses, obtain a prospectus by mailing the coupon, or calling 313-425-4630. Read the prospectus carefully before you purchase a policy.

Available only through EVLICO—a wholly owned subsidiary of The Equitable.

The owner, Mary Maxwell, has more than 30 years experience in business, industry and professional offices. She worked with a doctor for some 10 years, worked seven years for Ford Motor Company, and for 10 years managed a travel agency.

Wanted: trustee for Schoolcraft

If you're interested in becoming a member of Schoolcraft College's Board of Trustees, you better dust off your resume and brush up your interviewing technique.

The college's board last week approved a plan which would require all applicants to file resumes with the board. While it did not make the proposed public interviews mandatory, it left open that possibility. It did not set up a time schedule.

The vacancy, which must be filled by an appointee, will open open August 1 when Trustee Ron Cowden is expected to resign. He recently accepted an offer to become principal of Manistee High School.

Whoever is appointed will serve out the remainder of the Cowden's term, said Helen Rousseau, secretary to the board. Two board seats, however, will be up for election in 1979.

TWO TRUSTEES contended that the entire selection process was a farce, though.

Mark McQuesten and Rosina Raymond objected to the proposed selection process, but for different reasons.

McQuesten called the process a "charade."

"I've made up my mind who I'd like to see appointed," he said. "I'm sure most of the others have too."

"Why put these poor people (who might apply) up to this? There's no reason to go through with this routine. It's a moot question," he contended.

Other board members, however, disagreed that Cowden's replacement had all but been determined.

"I'd like to approach this with an open mind and I'd hope all other board members would too," said Trustee Leonard Wozniak.

Cowden, even though he is resigning, said the proposed selection process was "a golden opportunity."

"It's a chance to get away from the smoke-filled room," he said.

Mrs. Raymond, the board's senior member, objected to the board advertising for candidates for the soon to be vacated seat.

"We should appoint someone who is known, someone whose philosophy is known."

"If somebody is going to serve on this board, he or she should have some interest in this college. They should have at least found their way into this room," she said.

In The Pocket

By W.W. EDGAR

While the final choice will not be made until next February, word from American Bowling Congress headquarters in Milwaukee is that Detroit is still in the running to be the site of the ABC Hall of Fame and Museum.

When the original invitations were studied, the list was reduced to 19 cities, and Detroit was rated high on the list. Nothing has happened since to change the city's bid.

There are many good reasons why the Detroit metropolitan area should be selected. First, it boasts the largest associations of both men and women bowlers. Second, for years it has been known as the Capital of the Bowling World because many of the outstanding events had their origin in the area.

This is true with such things as the Champion of Champions tournament sponsored by the Proprietors Association, the captain-sponsor event and over-average competition.

Aside from that, the Bowling Proprietors Association of America was organized in Detroit in 1932, eight years after the Detroit proprietors formed their own association. And it was in Detroit that the seeds for the National Bowling Council were sown.

It was also Detroit that established the first Bowling Hall of Fame in an individual city, outside of the ABC in Milwaukee.

Most every town and hamlet now boasts its own Hall of Fame, but Detroit was the first and it was established in the heart of the cultural center—in the Historical Museum. It since has been moved to Cobo Hall.

So, Detroit has many favorable points to back its invitation.

WITHOUT MUCH FANFARE, the bowling proprietors are establishing their own "farm system" to assure bowlers for the adult leagues in the future.

Among the foremost of these is Merri-Bowl where a program has been set up to include two games of bowling, hot dogs and pop for two dollars. That also includes instruction.

As proof of the popularity of the program, 125 youngsters participated in the activity during the past week.

Much the same is being done at Woodland Lanes and Plymouth Bowl. From such beginnings will come the stars of the future.

JOAN ROSS showed the way to all her rivals in the Morning Glory league at Woodland Lanes, even though she is only a 113 average bowler.

Taking her regular turn on the lanes, she put together games of 133, 176 and 157 for a 466 series.

Next to her came Sophia Kay, a 105 bowler, with a 430. Her count came on games of 142, 144 and 144. Third place went to Connie Hejka. With a 93 average, she posted a 122, 107 and 147 for 376.

THE HITS AND MISSES group from Plaza Lanes topped the field in the area section of the Champion of Champions tournament at Plymouth Bowl.

To gain top place, the team posted a 3282 to beat out the Jaws squad from Oxford Lanes that rolled a 3191. Mel's Golden Razor team landed third with a 3186.

Emergencies--Leaky Pipes

If you're the average homeowner, learning what to do when you have a leaky pipe can save you many dollars in damages to your home.

The first step is to shut off the water supply to the break. Make it a rule to know where the shutoff valves in your house or apartment are located. Valves are often under or near plumbing fixtures. The hot water supply for the entire house can generally be turned off at the hot water heater. If necessary, cut off all water in the house by closing the main water valve.

Emergency repairs can range from taking temporary measures while waiting for the plumber, to making repairs that will last for years. But even minor leaks should be attended to promptly to prevent further damage. Leaks tend to enlarge over a period of time and dripping water can damage plaster, stain paint and wallpaper and create an electric hazard. Knowing what to do can not only save on repair bills, but on determining how much your house is worth when you're ready to sell it.

And for quick cash for those unexpected repair jobs, sell your usable unused items with

Collins meets the stars

By KEN VOYLES

Long hours, hard work and very little money, are the negative sides to being a batboy at Tiger Stadium.

But the excitement, glamour and prestige of being involved with the league's big name ballplayers make the job worthwhile.

Bob Collins, who will be a senior at Livonia Franklin next fall, should know what it's like to be a batboy for a professional baseball team. He has been one for the last four years.

Collins is the batboy for the visiting teams at Tiger Stadium.

A number of years ago, the Tigers' management asked Collins' father, Rip, to be the visiting clubhouse manager. He accepted.

About four years ago, the elder Collins was having trouble with a number of batboys. It seems equipment was being stolen from the visitors' locker-room. In 1974, he called in his son and asked him to keep an eye on the other batboys.

"My father wanted me down there to keep an eye on things and pretty soon I was doing their job. One thing led to another and I became the full-time batboy in June of that year," Collins explained.

Collins played hockey at Franklin last winter and hopes to do so this year. He also plays on a summer baseball team when he gets the chance to work in the games around his Tiger schedule.

There are many things about the fulltime job that would make the average person shy away. Collins sometimes spends 13 hours a day at the stadium. He is paid $14 a day no matter how long he is there.

It has its rewards, though.

"It is a good experience," Collins said. "There are a few fringe benefits to being a batboy, such as being able to sell the used and broken equipment. Even that stuff goes for a big price."

Collins remembers he was once offered $400 for Carl Yastrzemski's Boston Red Sox uniform. He didn't take the offer because that would have been outright stealing on his part.

Besides the obvious benefit of getting to know the ballplayers, Collins said he gets the best possible baseball education at Tiger Stadium. "I have some great teachers down there at the stadium. I love baseball and would like to play in the major leagues someday."

A typical summer day for Collins begins around 1 p.m. when he arrives at the stadium for a night game. After arriving, he changes into his uniform for the day, be it Boston, Chicago, or New York, and starts to clean up the clubhouse before the visitors arrive.

The visiting teams supply the uniform, and Collins gets to keep the hat.

Collins mops the floor, cleans out the lockers, shines shoes, picks up the uniforms and sets them out for each player.

Two other boys help Collins do the dirty work. They're known as clubhouse assistants.

Once the team shows up at the stadium, it is Collins' job to make sure the equipment and uniforms for each individual player is satisfactory.

Between the time he cleans up the clubhouse and the start of the game, Collins has a little free time. He can get something to eat, take a nap or walk around the ballpark.

When the teams take to the field for batting practice, Collins is right there with them. Either he's shagging hits, playing catch with the pitchers or just watching the teams at work.

During the game, Collins does various things like picking up the equipment around the dugout and preparing bats for each player. He watches the game when he can.

The hard work starts when the game is over. Collins picks up the locker-room, cleans the whole place over again and does the laundry. He practically does everything that he did before the game. Collins' day typically ends at about 1:30 a.m.

"It's not as glamorous as everybody thinks, being a batboy. I tell my friends that and they just can't believe it," Collins said.

"I was on cloud nine my first year as a batboy. In my second and third summers, things weren't so great. I realized that the players on your toes all of the time," Collins continued.

Being around such great players all of the time has taken some of the fun away from the job for Collins. He no longer collects autographs although he does collect equipment the players give him. He has hats, spikes and even a glove here and there from the traveling professionals.

Overall, according to Collins, the visiting team players are very nice to him although some irritate him by calling him "clubby" instead of Bob.

"Sometimes I sit down and talk with the players about everything from school to girls to baseball. Most guys like to talk before the game but not after," Collins said.

Dave Nelson used to be Collins' favorite player. Nelson played for Kansas City until he was released two years ago. Collins has not seen him since.

"We used to talk and joke all of the time. He called me, 'Tobacco-chewing Bob' because I was the only batboy he'd ever seen that chewed tobacco," Collins explained.

Not all of Collins' memories of the job are good ones. Collins cites last August, when he was hit by a line drive, as being the most memorable incident of his batboy career. He was about twenty yards into the outfield helping Frank Howard and another player with hitting practice. Collins was relaying the ball back into the infield.

Collins made the mistake of turning toward just as a player cracked a line drive at him.

"All I remember is seeing a ball coming right at my face," said Collins.

The ball smashed into his face and shattered his nose. The blow put him out of action for a couple of weeks. It was the only time he'd been injured at the ballpark.

This summer will most likely be Collins' last as a batboy. He'll be 18 years old soon and the Tigers prefer younger boys for the job.

Collins has been offered a baseball scholarship at Florida State once he completes high school. He said that he is most likely going to accept the offer.

RU stifles Plymouth Elks

Redford Union knocked off Adray Community Connie Mack League baseball foe Plymouth Salem last week 5-2. RU tallied 10 hits, while holding Salem to just two.

Kirk Marsh was the winning pitcher. He walked four and struck out four. John Holdsworth was the losing hurler. He lasted five frames.

RU scored three runs in the first inning when Bill Lezotte walked, Darryl MacDonald tripled, Kirk Hunter hit a sacrifice fly, Bill James singled, Marsh walked, Mario Bravo singled to load the bases and Scott Reaume singled.

RU scored its other runs in the third and sixth frames. Salem collected single runs in the fifth and seventh innings.

MacDonald and Hunter each cracked two hits for RU. MacDonald had a triple and a single, while Hunter had two singles. Hunter collected two RBIs, MacDonald one.

Golf league remains tied

Bruce Watt and Bill Lindley, and Merph Eminger and Charlie Sheets remain tied for first place after seven weeks of action in the Canton Men's Golf League. The men play only one more week before reaching the halfway point of the schedule.

Watt and Lindley combined to take all five points from Jack Mogelnicki and Sam Natoli to stay in first place with 30½ points. Eminger and Sheets also swept five points from Jim Thomas and Art Lawrence to keep pace with 30½ points.

Three golfers tied for the best score of the night with a score of 39. Jack Koers and Dick Kraft, along with substitute Don Johnson, all recorded this low round.

LOUISE SNIDER

'Jaws 2' here just in time for summer swim

You don't tamper with success, so if you want a big summer movie like "Jaws," then do the same thing over again and call it "Jaws 2" (PG).

Well, almost the same thing. Richard Dreyfuss and Robert Shaw who added so much lustre to the original movie are conspicuously absent. Of course, Shaw couldn't reasonably resume his role because he was filleted by Bruce, the shark in "Jaws."

Dreyfuss, as the marine biologist, would have added some color and humor, but that's wishful thinking, I guess.

So much for what might have been. As for what is, a recap of the first movie, the teenage movie crowd seemed more than satisfied with what they got.

ROY SCHEIDER and Lorraine Gary are back as Police Chief Brody and his wife. Murray Hamilton and Jeffrey Kramer also repeat their roles as the mayor and police deputy, respectively. Bruce was sent to Davy Jones' locker, but his replacement is more than adequate.

Another great white shark has appeared off the coast of the little New England town of Amity and started it on the way toward Zero Population Growth.

Once again we have the familiar lineup of heroes and villains: Brody versus the mayor and town council and people versus the shark.

Brody is a nervous Nellie who sees a shark lurking under every wave. The town fathers want to know nothing about sharks. They're interested in promoting the tourist trade, not destroying it.

One new complication has been added (which for some unknown reason is never pursued beyond its introduction). Brody's wife handles public relations for an important real estate developer in Amity. He's trying to attract summer residents to his new condominium complex, and sharks aren't the proper bait for the job.

WHEN BRODY starts "upsetting" everyone with his wild talk about sharks, he gets fired. Meanwhile, the great white is devouring every nubile young body in sight—not to mention boats, motors, and other trifles.

Tension mounts when a flotilla of sailboats with Brody's two sons and every teenager of consequence embark on a morning sail. They are attacked and some of them gobbled by the great white.

"Jaws 2" does have its scream and clutch moments. However, the mechanical shark alone couldn't generate them. His man-made hulk and glassy eye look comically unconvincing whenever he surfaces to wolf down a tender teen (if a shark can be said to wolf down).

John Williams' musical score and some excellent underwater photography contribute heavily toward creating the sense of menace and terror.

It's corny and familiar, but familiar or not, "Jaws 2" scares, as the shrieks and gasps of the audience attest.

Roy Scheider (right) tries to convince town mayor Murray Hamilton (center) and the rest of the city's governing selectmen that there's another killer shark menacing the area.

New season begins for U-M Repertory

The Michigan Repertory will open its 1978 season Wednesday, with five consecutive performances of the modern musical adaptation of Shakespeare's comedy, "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

The Performances will continue in the Power Center for the Performing Arts at The University of Michigan.

The musical is the first in the repertory of four plays being presented by the University company, celebrating its 10th anniversary season. "Two Gentlemen of Verona" will be followed by three plays in a rolling repertory: Tom Stoppard's "Travesties," (July 25 and 26, Aug. 3 and 6), "The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window" by Lorraine Hansberry; (July 26 and 29, Aug. 1 and 4), and George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara;" (July 27 and 30, Aug. 2 and 5).

"Two Gentlemen of Verona" is a pop-musical version of Shakespeare's play about deceptions and intrigues in the game of love. Set in Italy during the Renaissance, the play is peopled with characters trying to find themselves "in love."

The major part of the story concerns the mishaps, mistaken identities and false vows between two couples: Proteus and Julia, and Valentine and Silvia. The four become involved while Proteus and Valentine are "seeking their fortunes" at the Court of Milan, where Silvia's father is the Duke. The play is full of youthful zeal for love and life in a not-quite-real world where love is everything.

THIS MODERN MUSICAL adaptation takes Shakespeare's comedy and turns it into a fast-paced, wild romp set in a contemporary version of 16th century Italy. The tempo is set by the pop/rock score written by the composer of the famous hit, "Hair," Galt MacDermot.

Shakespeare's script has been adapted, in places, by John Guare and Mel Shapiro, two contemporary playwrights. The three collaborated to produce an updated version which eventually won the Tony and N.Y. Drama Critics' Circle awards for Best Musical in the 1971-72 season.

The Repertory production is under the direction of Steven C. Reynolds with the musical direction of Richard Berent and the choreography by TeDee A. Theofil. Tickets for "Two Gentlemen of Verona," at 8 p.m. Wednesday-Sunday, with an additional 2 p.m. matinee Sunday, are currently on sale at the Michigan Repertory Ticket Office in the Michigan League, 227 S. Ingalls, Ann Arbor, MI, 48109. The Ticket Office is open Monday-Friday: Noon-5 p.m.

Subscriptions for the entire four play Michigan Repertory season are still on sale, a four plays-for-the-price-of-three value. Tickets are also available through all Hudson's Ticket Outlets and through Central Travel and Ticket in Toledo. For additional information, call 764-0450.

Star Ship Encounters to do 2d performance

Meadow Brook Music Festival has added a second performance of its Star Ship Encounters program on Monday, July 24 at 8:30 p.m.

Leon C. Petrus, festival managing director, explained that the additional scheduling resulted from an unusually fast sell-out of all pavilion and lawn tickets for the Star Ship Encounters show to be performed on Sunday, July 23.

This program, billed as a musical voyage to outer space, will feature the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Richard Hayman, performing a variety of familiar songs from "Star Wars," "Space Odyssey," 2001," "Star Trek" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" plus selections from Holst's "The Planets."

Narration will be provided by William Shatner, best known for his television role in "Star Trek." To enhance this musical outer space adventure, a unique laser light show will be shown throughout the program.

Tickets for the July 24 Star Ship Encounters show are on sale at the Meadow Brook Box Office, as well as at all Hudson's, Sear's, Montgomery Wards and Grinnell's ticket services. Mail orders will be filled according to the date they are received. For further information, call 377-2010.

Barbara Acker as Emily Brent, David D. Montee as Rogers, the butler, and Gerald B. Roe as General Mackenzie are occupants in a mansion of death.

Murder mystery opens at Hilberry

Agatha Christie's murder delight, "Ten Little Indians," opens at the Hilberry Theatre on July 19 for a two week run. This classic thriller plays Wednesdays through Saturdays until July 29, at 8:30 p.m.

The setting for Dame Christie's play is perfect for murder: An old mansion on an island off the English coast, approachable only through an unreliable motor-boatman. The times is the 1930s. To the island a group of people have been invited by the mysterious U.N. Owens.

As all settle in, the guests and servants learn that sometime in his life each person in the house has been responsible for the death of another. Also in the mansion is a mantelpiece full of Indian statuettes, each with an embossed nursery rhyme telling how the Indian died. Soon, the occupants of the mansion begin turning up dead, each in a manner prescribed by rhyme.

In leading roles of "Ten Little Indians" are Erick Devine, Mark Robbins, Cynthia Dozier, Jim Bird-sall and Douglas McBride, all members of the Hilberry Repertory Company. The thriller is directed by Robert Emmett McGill, with set design by Russell Smith, costumes by Ellen Ryba and lighting by John Toia.

BECAUSE PLAYS in the Hilberry's Eighth Summer Theatre Festival are running in series and not repertory as they do in the regular season, patrons are urged to make reservations now, since performances are limited.

"Ten Little Indians" runs concurrently with "Chronicles of Bohikee Creek" by Robert Unger, downstairs in the Studio Theatre, and matinees of the children's play, "Step on a Crack" by Suzan Zeder and the Paw Paw Puppet Theatre. Contact the Hilberry Theatre Box Office at 577-2972 for exact times and reservations.

Station hosts open house

An open house will highlight the thirty years of broadcasting celebration at University of Michigan radio station WUOM on July 5.

The station, located in the Literature, Science and the Arts Building on the central campus in Ann Arbor, will be open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. On-air staff will be present to greet visitors and conduct tours of the facilities.

The new studio will be inaugurated during the open house with a live edition of Afternoon Musicales, a daily classical music program.

Stephen Skelley will host a 3 1/2-hour concert by area musicians. The program will be carried live on WUOM-FM (91.7) beginning at 1 p.m.

The celebration will continue into the evening with a second live music broadcast from 8:05 to 10:30 p.m.

Can you give Fido needed first aid?

By SUSAN ROGERS

Do you know the difference between a crisis and an urgent emergency in the case of Fido?

According to Dennis T. Crowe, veterinary surgeon, common sense is what you usually need in dealing with animal emergencies.

"Be first aid-minded," said Dr. Crowe at a workshop sponsored by Faith Community Church of Plymouth.

"The main thing is to be prepared, and a lot of what you'd do for a person in an emergency can also be used on your pet. It's common sense."

Dr. Crowe, affiliated with the Westcott Animal Clinic in Detroit, recommended having a first-aid kit handy for use on both animals and people. He suggested the kit could contain alcohol, soap gauze, tape, eye wash, bandages and a thermometer.

What constitutes an emergency in a pet?

"It can be anything from a laceration from running on the sidewalk to being hit by a car," said Dr. Crowe. "Some are easy to tell—a dog with a foot caught in a lawnmower or a cat with a stone caught in its throat. Others aren't so simple."

THERE ARE three kinds of emergencies, the speaker said. A crisis demands care within seconds, an urgent problem needs care within minutes and a pressing problem should be acted upon within hours.

"The idea is to decide what case you have and make a plan for action," he stated. "If in doubt, call your veterinarian. You should be able to tell him what happened, where the victim is and ask what you should do."

An breathing passage problem, he said, needs action more quickly than a vet could be called, so pet owners should be prepared to recognize it.

"You can suspect an airway problem if the animal has blue gums or tongue or if it is gasping or choking or not breathing. Help in breathing is needed, but not the kind you give humans."

"The problem with artificial respiration in animals is that it's difficult to obtain a good 'seal' on the mouth because of the long nose," Dr. Crowe pointed out.

"In the absence of breathing, it may be necessary to do a tracheotomy—cutting a slit down the center of the throat."

"You may then use a straw to blow in air for a small animal or your mouth for a larger one. This is used only in extreme emergencies."

CARDIAC ARREST is another kind of crisis, the vet said.

Heart attacks in dogs are rare, but a puppy could suffer cardiac arrest while chewing on an electric cord.

Cardiac massage might be used, he said, and added:

"Cardiac massage in animals is very similar to the type used for people. Compress the heart about 100 times per minute on a small animal and about 80 times a minute on a large one."

Urgent emergencies for pets he listed as poison, burns, shock, severe bleeding, convulsions and coma.

"Poison can be suspected if you find an open bottle, sudden, unexplained illness, convulsion, coma or profuse salivation," said Dr. Crowe. Things like sugar coated pills and houseplants may be poisonous to pets.

He suggested a teaspoon of salt or peroxide in water to induce vomiting, or flushing with water or eye wash if the contamination is external.

"We see a lot of burns, especially in dogs," said the speaker, explaining that pets do things like knock down tables and spill hot coffee. Quick use of cold water can help, he added.

"Check his breathing and call the doctor. Don't apply ointments, remove the hair or break the blister."

AN ANIMAL can go into shock after being hurt in a traffic accident or a fight, the speaker said.

"Keep him calm, warm and dry and lying on his side," was his recommendation. He added an animal bleeding excessively may be saved by applying pressure for five minutes under the leg and under the groin.

For both shock and bleeding, the injured animal should be transported to an animal hospital as quickly as possible.

"The important thing when transporting," instructed Dr. Crowe, "is to keep him rigid and on his side to prevent further injury. Use a board or anything you have around that is stiff."

"Remember an animal in pain is afraid and though you may be just trying to help, you may get bitten. It may be necessary to use a restraint—this can be a handkerchief tied around the nose and on top of the head."

THE KIND of emergency Dr. Crowe defined as pressing but not crisis or urgent would include fracture, paralysis, laceration, persistent diarrhea or fever or persistent bleeding.

"You can suspect a fracture if the animal refuses to use his limb or you see swelling," he stated. "Keep the limb from dangling. Don't straighten it, but put on a splint—a popsicle stick for a small animal or a newspaper or magazine for a larger one."

Lacerations should be cleaned with warm water or peroxide, he said, and the animal should then be taken to the hospital.

Fever, he went on, should be measured only with a rectal thermometer.

"The old trick with the warm and wet nose doesn't work," he said, and added that shivering, seeking warmth and panting are symptoms of fever. Temperatures up to 103 are normal for dogs and cats, he said, but call the veterinarian if the temperature is 104 or above.

LEAVING AN ANIMAL in a locked car during the summer is absolutely to be avoided, Dr. Crowe said, because animals cool themselves by panting rather than through perspiration.

If an animal should become ill from being in a hot car, he said, give it water and a cold compress on the forehead.

The veterinarian also suggested special care in summer to keep animals away from running lawnmowers and to avoid clipping animals' fur too short.

The speaker was asked about injured animals found on the roadside.

"Again, use common sense," he stated. "The animal is usually in a lot of pain, so he may cooperate and he may not. Get a muzzle on him and you can do almost anything."

Dr. Bill Gregg, veterinarian at the Wayne County Animal Shelter in Westland, demonstrates how to hold an animal to see whether something is stuck in its throat. (Staff photos by Art Emanuel)

Dr. Gregg checks a dog hurt in a lawnmower accident (above) and then prepares a metal splint for the injured leg. Temporary splints can be made of newspapers or magazines while an injured animal is being transported to the hospital.

Discussion group planned

Here's help if you cringe when your ex visits kids

By SHERRY KAHAN

In divorces involving children, visitation rights are frequently the basis on which couples continue their marriage battles.

Mom claims the kids are too sick to go out with Dad. Dad brings them home so full of candy and cake they become ill. Mom doesn't have the youngsters ready when their father comes by to pick them up, so he decides to bring them home late.

He might turn up with a number of drinks under his belt. She might be too strict, and become upset when criticized.

"There is no easy answer to these problems," said Carl Gunderson, coordinator of a pilot program dealing with visitation set up by the Wayne County Circuit Court. "The problems of the couple are not usually resolved by divorce and they continue to fight, only this time the fight is over the right to visit the children."

"If the man is late to pick up his kids, it might be a way to work out his anger against his wife," explained Jack Bradford, marriage counselor of Family Counseling Service of the Wayne County Circuit Court.

"Michigan law uses the term, 'reasonable visitation rights,' but no one can decide what is reasonable," Bradford added.

"Usually it can be worked out. But it probably can be better handled in a sharing, educational atmosphere than by tying up court time and judges."

WHAT THE CIRCUIT Court is proposing, and will begin Wednesday, July 5, is a plan of group meetings for divorced persons with visitation problems.

Groups of 20, including only one partner per severed marriage, would meet in discussion sessions led by Gunderson.

"Hopefully, they would be able to loosen up and help each other by looking at their common circumstances," he pointed out. "These meetings will help them focus on what visitation is, and what effect it has on children."

"We can help people look not only at the other person's behavior, but their reaction to it. Is it appropriate? There has to be some sort of negotiation. If he is sloshed and she is the custodial parent responsible for the child's safety and health, she would be irresponsible to let the child go with him. But maybe he's only had a couple of drinks and she gets uptight and overreacts."

For the most part, participants in the visitation group will be referred by judges and the friend of the court. But others who wish to participate may apply to the Family Counseling Service, 900 W. Lafayette, Detroit 48226 or call Gunderson at 224-5286.

Besides the July 5 group, there will be one starting Monday, July 10.

GUNDERSON AND BRADFORD say the word 'visitation' is not indicative of what they believe is the crucial problem in divorces—the reaction of children.

"Initially, when one parent leaves the home, the child feels abandoned," began Gunderson, a former pastor of St. Timothy Presbyterian Church in Livonia. "He wonders if one parent leaves, why not the other? Since he thinks the world revolves around him, he assumes there is something he can do to bring his parents together again. If he doesn't see one parent, he fantasizes about him."

"Statistics show that children of divorce are more apt to withdraw into themselves. They act up in school. They become discipline problems and their grades go down. They regress in development, although they may come back later."

Some of these problems can be limited, however, if visitation is handled properly. Frequent visits by the absent parent reduce the feeling of abandonment in the child. If care is taken, the absent parent may relate better that before.

"It is very desirable for both parents to be a part of the child's life," noted Bradford. "We are finding that children go underground with their concerns and don't talk about them. Their feelings may not surface until their teen years."

"If ONE PARENT talks against the other, the child might think that if the other parent is bad, he must be bad too."

Gunderson indicated that how upset the child becomes depends on how the parents handle the situation.

"If they can handle the visitation problem in a reasonable, civilized fashion, then the children will be less disturbed," he said.

Once the adult group dealing with visitation is underway, the county plans to form a group to help children cope with it.

To leave parents with little doubt as to the serious impact divorce and visitation squabbles have on children, the Family Counseling Service has prepared a list it calls the 10 commandments of visitation. Here they are:

- You shall put nothing before your child and his best interests.
- You shall not use your child to check up on your ex-spouse, to get back at him or her to solve your personal problems.
- You shall not criticize your ex in front of your child or do anything else that will undermine the relationship between your child and his parent.
- You shall not keep your child or your ex waiting at the beginning or end of visits.
- You shall not surprise your child or your ex by last-minute changes.
- You shall not promise your child anything that you will not do.
- You shall not invade your child's privacy.
- You shall not ask to have visitation times spelled out unless every effort at a more flexible arrangement has failed.
- You shall not ask the court to solve your visitation problems until you have exhausted every means of working out the difficulties yourselves.

OU programs are on aging

Five programs dealing with the potential of the later years in life will be offered this summer to older adults, their families and people who work with the aging.

These programs are sponsored by the Continuum Center for Adult Counseling and Leadership Training, on the Oakland University campus and in various suburban locations, and are supported by grants from the National Institute of Mental Health and the Administration on Aging.

According to Betty White, coordinator of the Older Adult Project at the Center, people often do "to little, to late," in planning for their own aging or in responding to the problems of aging family. This happens because people don't know what to do and because they focus on the potential problems rather than the potential growth possibilities of this time of life.

The following programs are offered by the Continuum Center to help people respond more positively and confidently to the problems and potentials of aging. They are: Training Workshops for those who serve older people, July 5, 12, 19 and 26 in Rochester; an Advanced Assertiveness Training, July 10 to 19 in Birmingham; A Conference on Counseling Older Adults and Their Families, July 10 to 14 in Ann Arbor; three workshops called Focus on Me - As I Grow Older, Aug.

7, 14 and 21 in Farmington Hills; and a one-day program called, "You and Your Aging Parent", Aug. 15 in Rochester.

THE TRAINING workshops are designed to expand the skills of people already working with the aged. The content will include an overview of aging, communication, counseling skills, the dynamics of group work, and the training and use of volunteers. There will be 4 sessions on Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., July 5, 12, 19 and 26. Advanced Assertiveness Training, "Growing More Older and More Bolder," will be offered to older adults who have participated in an introductory assertiveness course. Participants will learn how to deal assertively with family, neighbors, medical helpers and others.

The Conference on Counseling Older Adults and Their Families is co-sponsored by the Institute of Gerontology, the University of Michigan and the Continuum Center of Oakland University and will take place in Ann Arbor from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., July 10 to 14. It will focus on counseling techniques and current issues relating to the elderly and their families.

FOCUS ON ME, which will be held from 1 to 3 p.m., Aug. 7, 14, and 21 at the Mercy Conference Center in Farmington Hills, will include three topics: Myths and Realities of Growing Older, Assertive Communications and Support Systems for Older Adults.

You and Your Aging Parent provides information about the aging process and the various skills and resources helpful in coping with the problems of aging parents. Health and counseling professionals are invited, although the program is designed primarily for the children of the elderly. It will be held at the Continuum Center, Butler Road and Adams in Rochester.

Other summer programs sponsored by the Continuum Center are Career Development, July 11, Assertiveness Training on Aug. 11 to 10 in Rochester, and Alternative Career Options for Teachers, August 15 in Southfield.

For further information, contact the center at 377-3033.

Most working women don't know potential

Large percentages of women in the labor force consider work as only a job rather than an activity spanning much of their life cycle, researcher Maryann Albrecht writes in a University of Michigan publication.

She concludes that "women do not have an accurate picture of their opportunities within a firm" and that many would reject a promotion which involved taking on added responsibility.

"Since the number of women in the work force has doubled during the past 25 years and will continue to grow," she adds, "the organizational challenge is to help these women. They need training to consider their work as an important part of their lives, to help them enrich their current work condition, and to prepare them for growth and possible advancement."

Ms. Albrecht, author and management professor at the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, interviewed 160 women representing a broad cross-section of major industries and occupations.

The findings were published in Human Resource Management, quarterly publication of the U-M graduate school of business administration.

ALTHOUGH most of the women in the sample were in relatively low ranks within their occupational group and thus obvious candidates for advancement into higher skill levels or managerial positions, almost 44 per cent believed that they could not be promoted from their present job, Ms. Albrecht found.

Among those women who perceived themselves as "promotable," most saw a promotion in negative rather than positive terms, referring to the added responsibilities, longer hours or additional travel required as additional "demands."

"Only 25 per cent of the promotable group noted such benefits as the additional respect or personal development which might emerge from a promotion, and only six per cent mentioned an increase in salary," the author noted. "They view promotions as a series of demands on them which benefits the organization rather than as positions which can make a positive contribution to their lives."

The educator decided that the main reason one in three eligible women would reject a promotion is the problem of added responsibility. Other factors are pressure and time demands, possible conflicts with family demands, and training requirements.

"The findings suggest that many women were not prepared for roles requiring a growth in decision-making and planning skills," she observed.

MS. ALBRECHT did find, however, that younger women already performing in supervisory or management functions, or those women who felt that a woman's role properly extends to work outside the home, are much more likely to accept advancement.

Whatever their present occupational roles, working women have some common training needs, according to Ms. Albrecht. She listed development of work goals; learning interpersonal behavior skills and time management; and development of technical skills for current and future job performance.

Many training programs are ineffective, she concluded.

"One reason for this is that the content is not always based on demonstrated need," she explained. "Often it is based on a desire for organizations' affirmation of equal employment and a review of popular women's programs. A second is that method in which all women in a particular occupational category receive the same lecture at the same time."

Big IFs apply in refreezing

You can refreeze meat if it has been thawed in the refrigerator, if it is still fresh and good—if it is still cold and still has some ice crystals left.

You do need to recognize though that each time a cut of meat is frozen and thawed, you lose some of the goodness you paid for to begin with.

There's a drying tendency, due to loss of juices, in the process of thawing and refreezing. The better method though is to keep the thawed meat in the refrigerator and cook it as soon as possible.

Armstrong-Mulrooney

Bentley High School graduates Deborah J. Mulrooney and Mark W. Armstrong were united in marriage in a ceremony in St. Maurice Catholic Church of Livonia. The Rev. Thomas Cain officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mulrooney of Summers Street, Livonia, and Mr. and Mrs. William Armstrong of Hoy Street, also Livonia.

The bride wore a white chiffon gown with silk appliques on the bodice and carried pink roses and baby's breath.

Cheryl Kirm, her only attendant, wore a pink dress with a chiffon cape and carried a basket of pink and white carnations.

Rick Bowman was best man.

Following a dinner reception in the Hillside Inn, Plymouth, the couple went to Florida for their honeymoon. They will live in Plymouth.

The new Mrs. Armstrong is studying nursing at Schoolcraft College and her husband is employed by the Fisher Body-Fleetwood division of General Motors Corp.

Petrie-Dzendzel

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Petrie of Plymouth, formerly of Livonia, announce the engagement of their daughter Bonnie Diane to Daniel John Dzendzel, son of Fred and Jenny Dzendzel of Custer, formerly of Livonia.

The bride-elect is a 1973 graduate of Livonia Franklin High School and is employed by First National Bank of Plymouth. Her fiancé is a 1972 graduate of Livonia Stevenson High School and is the manager of Reliable Bicycle Shop.

An Aug. 25 wedding in Rosedale Gardens in Livonia is planned.

New piece is set in crib death puzzle

University of Michigan scientists are inching closer to the cause of crib death.

Earlier this year epidemiologists of the U-M School of Public Health announced they had discovered antibodies in the lung tissues of infants who had died from nontraumatic causes. Children dying suddenly from an accident, a fall, or injury do not show antibodies on autopsy.

It is now believed that mothers of SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) may have been exposed to the disease-causing agents before the birth of the infant. This exposure, causing the mother to develop protection (antibodies) against the disease agent (antigen), may make the unborn child disastrously sensitive.

The U-M investigators speculate that a parallel between measles and crib death has a "theoretical basis." They do not claim that crib death is caused by measles virus, but rather that maternal exposure to the cause of crib death resembles the hazards of measles exposure during pregnancy.

"IT SEEMS highly probable that the mother had contact with the antigen (agent) before the birth of the infant, and, as a result, she developed antibodies (defense). We found antibodies in the blood of both mother and the expired infant," states W. Wilbur Ackermann, Ph.D., U-M professor of epidemiology and head of the SIDS study.

"There is no evidence, however, that the cause of crib death is a single virus," he adds.

Dr. Ackermann states that there are three more critical steps in unravelling the riddle of crib death: to determine whether one or a group of antigens is involved; to provide more precise diagnosis of SIDS; and to try to recognize high risk groups by prenatal examinations.

"ONE THING" is clear from our studies to date, and that is that the presence of antibodies proves that crib death is not mysterious but caused by specific even though complex agents," Ackermann states.

The U-M team includes Nick H. Mavarakis, Ph.D., assistant professor; Warren E. Eveland, Ph.D., professor emeritus; and Clara Raven, M.D., former deputy chief medical examiner of Wayne County.

They present their findings, along with a scientific exhibit, at a meeting of the American Society of Microbiology this month.

KRANKEL-YANSKA

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Krankel of Plymouth announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Anne to Randy Edward Yanska, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Yanska of Buckley.

The bride-elect is a 1978 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School and will attend Michigan State University in the fall. Her fiancé is 1976 graduate of Kingsley High School and is currently attending Northwestern Community College.

The couple plan a July 6 wedding at Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church in Plymouth.

Antique exhibitor

Sandra Anne Richards of Plymouth will be one of the featured exhibitors at Michigan's Largest Antiques Market Sunday, July 9, at the St. Joseph County Fairgrounds.

The July Market, open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., will feature more than 250 antique exhibitors from 17 states.

One of the special features will be the introduction of a new definitive book on chair caning, "Let's Be Seated," by Ms. Richards, who teaches chair caning classes at Greenfield Village Henry Ford Museum and for the adult education department of Ann Arbor Public Schools.

Many patterns not previously illustrated are shown and explained in the new book, such as the Star of David and spider web. Ms. Richards will be available to autograph her book and talk with those interested in this old craft.

A new service for collectors also will be introduced—a free, no-obligation search system. If the show visitor is unable to find his or her "treasure" among the 250-plus antique exhibitors, a want list will be filled out and left at the show. The items the collector is looking for will be listed following the show and mailed to all exhibitors in the August Show.

The fairgrounds is on M-86 in Centerville, Mich.

Garden club meets July 11

Members will be meeting at 1 p.m. July 11 at the University of Michigan Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor for a tour.

The Tonquish Creek branch of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association will be taking a botanical tour Tuesday, July 11.

Scouts lift restrictions for retarded

The Clinton Valley Council of Boy Scouts of America has announced lifting of age restrictions on enrollment and advancement of mentally retarded and severely handicapped Cub Scouts, Scouts, and Explorers.

Through action taken by the BSA's national executive committee, the BSA's rules and regulations will include new guidelines for registrations and advancement of mentally retarded and the severely handicapped youths, including the blind, deaf, and emotionally disturbed.

E. Earl "Sonny" Hays, council executive of the Clinton Valley Council said the new regulations will apply immediately to those presently enrolled as well as all pending cases for exceptions to former regulations.

In order for members to meet the new guidelines, appropriate medical authority must certify that the candidate has a severe mental or physical handicap as defined in BSA regulations, and the council's appropriate committees must certify as to the completion of all existing requirements for each progress award, including the Eagle Scout award.

If proper certification is given, Cub Scouts may remain in the program after their 11th birthday. Scouts can participate after age 18, and male and female Explorers may remain in their units after the age of 21. All of them will continue to be eligible for their respective advancement programs.

New Voices

Mr. and Mrs. David L. Kirchenbauer of Ann Court, Plymouth Township, announce the birth of their son, David Lester II.

Born on June 23 in St. Mary Hospital, Livonia, he weighed eight pounds, six ounces. David has a sister, Melanie Anne, 17 months of age. Grandparents are Mrs. Mary Wallace of Novi and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kirchenbauer of Van Wert, Ohio.

Local artists at 75th exhibit

Four local residents were among those with artwork entered in the 75th Anniversary Exhibit of Ford Motor Co.

The exhibit to commemorate Ford's 75th anniversary was held in the world headquarters in Dearborn, and was open to Ford employees and spouses.

Residents whose work was shown in the exhibit included Robert and Betty Manthey of Plymouth, Roland Spelch of Canton, and Audrey Paul of Plymouth.

Manthey earned a third place ribbon in pastel, and Spelch a third in water colors. The exhibit ended June 30.

Graphologically speaking

Dear Mrs. Green,

What a fascinating subject handwriting is! And it's amazing how much you can tell from what is (I suppose) an extension of one's muscular coordination.

Tell me, please, what my handwriting says to you. I keep watching your column for handwriting similar to mine thinking I might find some key to me. It really doesn't make sense to try and read some of me out of someone else's handwriting, though, so I'm doing the most simple thing — writing to you directly!

W.G.-Farmington Hills

Dear W.G.,

Yes, handwriting is an extension of one's muscular coordination. But it is even more than that for we do not write with our hand alone but with our brain, our muscles and our nerves. Thus it follows that how we write must reflect our physical, mental and emotional states. It explains why, although as children we were taught to form letters according to a copy book model, each of us develops our own individual script. This is why there are no two people in the world who write exactly alike.

It is a mistake to attempt to find your personality in the strokes of another person's handwriting. No stroke stands alone, but must be evaluated within the framework of the entire writing sample.

of one's muscular coordination. Tell me please, what my handwriting says to you. I keep watch

The first impression I get from your handwriting is the optimism (lines that slant upward). You have the tendency to think in positive terms.

The gestalt picture is that you are a very active person with many interests. You prefer to do things in a quick manner. The expedient method is usually preferred to the slow, methodical one. You have a quick mental grasp of things. While you realize that details are important, you often do not concern yourself with them (many omitted i dots).

You are very adaptable, sociable and establish relationships with others easily (garland connections between most letters). In fact you are very dependent upon your environment for your happiness (far forward slant).

The combination of sarcasm and humor (points on the ends of t bars and wavy beginning strokes on your w's makes you quite witty at times).

Your personality is many sided and you do not follow a set pattern of behavior. You do not make waves. Somehow you desire to be all things to all people (letters in some words that are reduced to a thread). When you cannot be, the large buckle on your small k's tell me that you have learned not to be too concerned what others think.

By LORENE GREEN

The female influence on your early life was much stronger than the male (shape of the capital I).

Some of your t bars are long and indicate your contagious enthusiasm. While the remainder of your t bars represent many different lengths, heights and pressures which tell me that your goals have not been crystallized as yet. I think it is this lack of commitment to your goals that is responsible for your aggressive behavior at times (word endings that shoot straight out).

If you have a question about your personality write to Lorene Green, certified graphologist, in care of this paper. Use a sheet of unlined paper and write in the first person singular. Note to S.K. of Birmingham! Sorry I do not teach classes in the Birmingham area and do not know of anyone who does at this time. Fall classes I know about will be in Livonia, Farmington, Plymouth and Redford Township.

What is your ecological rating?

Summer always seems to bring a barrage of questions, or should I say pleas, from readers dealing the pressures of modern life on the habits of ecology-minded individuals.

Air-conditioning going full blast on hot summer days, electric gadgets that run the gamut from facial saunas to doughnut makers, and commercials for easy, fast-cleaning products and processed foods even are temptations that hit the most committed environmentalist.

The following lifestyle guide may tell you how environmentally pure you're being in our less-than-perfect world.

HEALTH CONCERNS— Give yourself points if you:

- Grow your own fruits or vegetables (1)
- Eat meat no more than twice a week (1)
- Read ingredient labels before buying food (1)
- Try to prepare meals without using processed foods (1)

TRANSPORTATION— Give yourself points if you:

- Live within three miles of work (2)
- Live between 3 - 5 miles from work (1)
- Commute on foot or by bike (3)
- Commute by car pool or public transit (1)

- Get between 20 and 30 miles per gallon (1)
- Get over 30 miles per gallon (2)
- Don't own a car (3)
- Use radial tires (1)
- Subtract 1 point if you own a recreational vehicle

RECYCLING— Give yourself points if you:

- Know where your nearest recycling center is (1)
- Recycle aluminum (1), glass (1), newsprint (1)
- Buy soft drinks and beer only in refillable containers (1)
- Avoid buying products sold in aluminum or with excess packaging (1)
- Compost garden clippings and garbage (1)

HOUSEHOLD ENERGY— Give yourself points if you:

- Turn off unnecessary lights (1)
- Turn off water while shaving or brushing your teeth (1)
- During the winter, keep your thermostat set at 68 during the day and 55 at night (1)
- Know whether your house is optimally insulated (1)
- Know how to do or where to get an energy audit of your house (1)
- Remove the pilot light on your gas stove (1)
- Have fewer than five small specialized kitchen appliances (1)

- Don't use a frost-free refrigerator, instant on color TV or a self-cleaning oven (1 each)
- Subtract 1 point if, excluding the kitchen and bathroom, you live in more than 2 rooms per person

PERSONAL—

- Give yourself points if you
- don't use any fluorocarbon sprays (1)
- don't smoke cigarettes (1)
- don't own any products made from wild animals (1)
- have spayed or neutered your dog or cat (1)
- regularly engage in simple recreation like hiking, or bicycling (1)

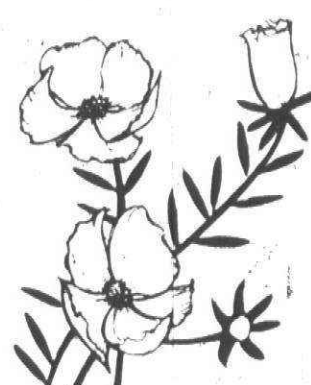

Add up your score. If you scored 7 or less, go directly to jail (do not pass go, do not collect, etc., etc.) On the other hand if you scored a perfect 34, you may be eligible for sainthood. The average score of environmentalist surveyed was 20. Whatever your score, try to add one additional to your lifestyle. Added up it CAN make a big difference in the total environmental game. The next column will be a quiz to let you know a little effort can go a long way.

I UNDERSTAND SOME PEOPLE PRE-PLAN THEIR OWN FUNERALS, WHY DO THEY?

Three important reasons come to mind to at once.

Pre-planning permits free choice, makes one's wishes known, and does away with any possible disagreement among the bereaved as to what to do and how much to spend.

In effect, one eases the burden placed on the immediate family—in terms of both the proper course of action to follow and the peace of mind in knowing that arrangements have been made in advance.

Because we feel that this question may be of value to many residents in the community we serve, we're glad you asked.

We welcome your questions and comments on this and other subjects — in private or publicly through this column.

School facilities seek control

Tennis courts charge fees

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Everybody visiting the two Plymouth-Canton School District tennis courts will find a surprise waiting for them this year.

They will have to pay to play on the courts during prime time evening hours and on the weekend.

The community's two school-run tennis courts, the Central Middle School facility in town and the Centennial Park courts on Canton Center Road, are charging $1 per person to compete at night and weekends. Any non-resident must pay $2.

Those tennis regulars wanting a season pass to pay $5 for a single and $8 for a couple.

Non-residents must pay $30 for a season pass.

In the past, anyone was allowed to play on the two facilities with no charge at anytime. So when the new rule came into effect last month, many players were quite surprised, and even upset, when a supervisor met them at the gate asking for the new fee.

Larry Masteller, Director of Continuing Education in Plymouth-Canton and originator of the fee system, says the majority of the people he's contacted are in favor of the program, however.

"Many people were disappointed at first because it wasn't like that before," Masteller, an avid tennis player himself, said. "But now that it's been a few weeks, I really feel there are more supporters of the program than negative—but that's hard to gauge."

MASTELLER said the continued growth in the community puts an added demand on the courts.

"It seems there were more and more concerns registered either through this office (Continuing Education) or the superintendent's office about lack of control on the courts," Masteller said. "Many times I received calls saying a non-resident league or organized clubs from Livonia or Ypsilanti would come en masse and take all the courts."

Masteller said this problem resulted in many people coming and waiting for courts to open during the early evening hours. Because there was no supervision, there was no way of regulating court time, he said.

Masteller brought his concerns to the education administration cabinet meeting last winter and it was decided to hire a person to supervise the courts, limiting the playing time to 1½ hours, if people were waiting.

The fees were set to pay for court supervisors. The higher non-resident fee was devised to reduce non-residents usage of the courts. The program is supposed to be self-supporting, but the schools are losing money presently.

The supervisors originally worked from 4 p.m.-9 p.m. on the weeknights, but those hours have now shifted from 5 p.m.-8:30 p.m. Still, the Centennial Park courts are relatively empty until 7 p.m.

Supervision is provided all weekend long—morning and night.

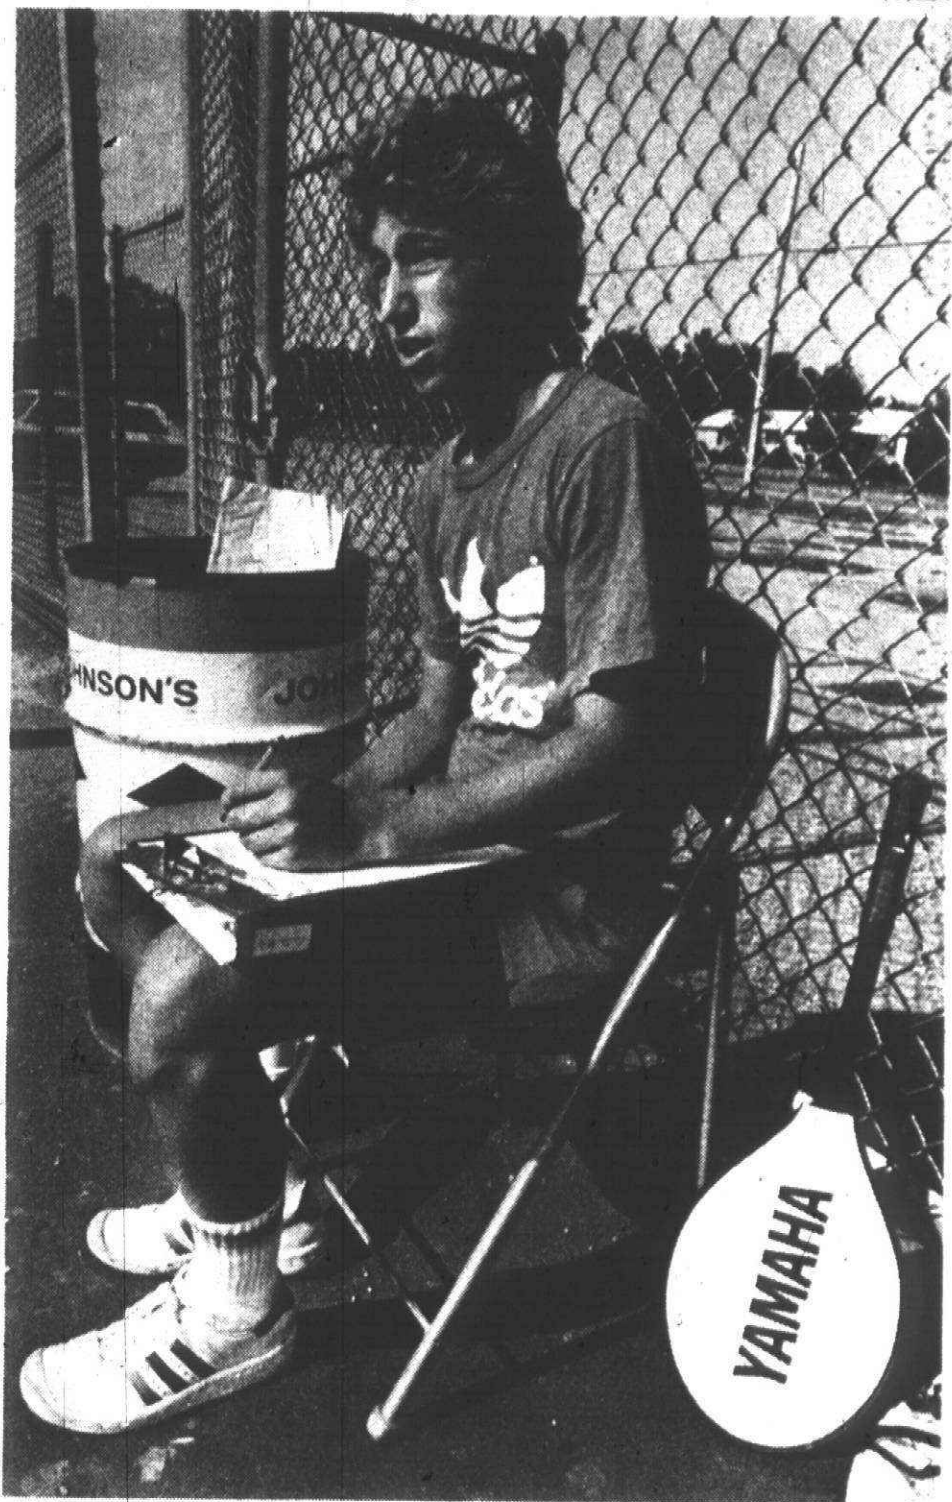

Play at both courts is down this year considerably, however, as many players have sought other places to play tennis for free.

"I think, in a sense," Masteller said, "it (the program) helps the regular players because there is control."

"We also tried to accommodate the people who play once or twice a season. We felt $1 per person was fair, but I guess it would bother the people who only play once or twice because they don't want to invest in playing."

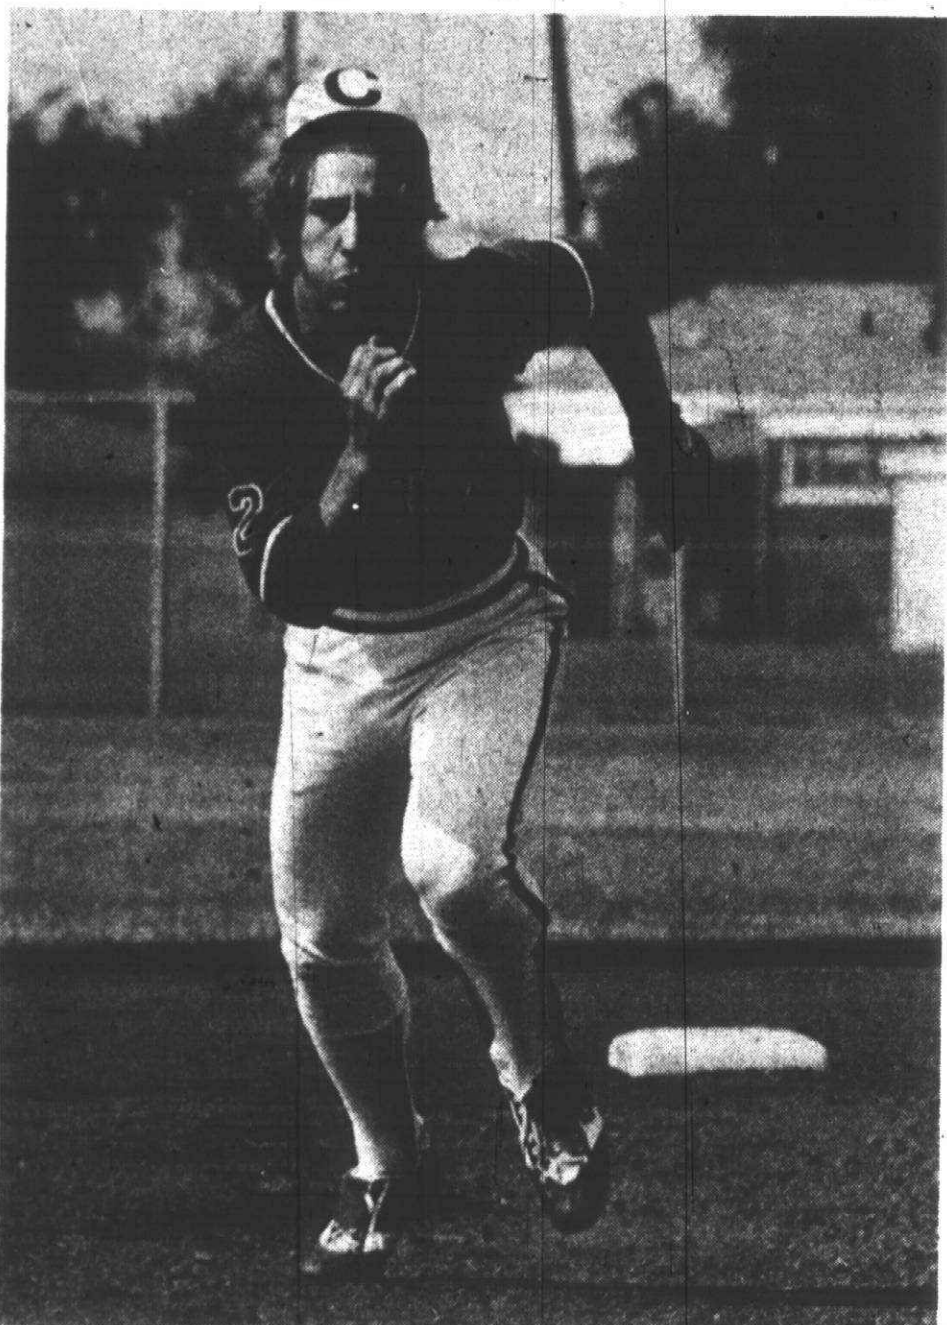

Masteller hoped that 300 residents would sign up for passes but that figure hasn't been reached yet.

The courts are still free at the Centennial Park on weekday mornings and afternoons when the summer physical education classes aren't using them. The Central Middle School courts are usually filled with tennis lessons in the morning and afternoon, sponsored by the Continuing Education Department.

Baseball contracts not sweet enough for Plymouth draftees

Scott Collins will attend the University of Missouri this fall rather than sign a professional contract with the Baltimore Orioles. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Plymouth's three major league baseball draftees will not play professional baseball this year—but future aspirations to wear major league uniforms are still in the minds of all three diamondmen.

Scott Collins, drafted in the eighth round by the Baltimore Orioles, Brian Stemberger, a 10th-round selection by the Chicago White Sox, and Tom Willette, a 20th-round pick by the Kansas City Royals, have all declined major league offers at this time. Contract terms were not disclosed.

Collins will be eligible for the next draft in three years, while Willette and Stemberger re-enter next season.

COLLINS, a 1978 graduate of Plymouth Canton High School, plans to attend the University of Missouri this fall as part of a four-year athletic scholarship for baseball. He recently plays summer ball in the Redford Adray League for Livonia Griffin.

"They (Baltimore) didn't think I was going to sign anyway," Collins said. "So I didn't think they wasted a choice. I was thinking of signing."

Collins, 18, announced his agreement with Missouri before the amateur draft last month, but always maintained he wanted a chance to turn pro. Although he is disappointed with Baltimore's offer, Collins is ready to go to school.

"The offer wasn't much," the Canton star said. "I think I'll go to school for three years before the next draft. Unless I get hurt, I can't see myself doing anything but improve."

Collins just finished his senior season with the Chiefs. The three-year varsity letter-winner once again led his team and the Observer-area in batting with another .450-plus average. The Chiefs' shortstop was recently selected to the All-Observer, All-Western Six League, All-Regional, and All-State teams for the second consecutive season.

STEMBERGER, a 1975 Canton High graduate, recently completed his third season of college baseball. He started his career at Mott Junior College before becoming the regular shortstop for Eastern Michigan University these past two seasons.

The Chicago White Sox didn't offer the former prep All-Stater enough money to turn pro. The 21-year-old plans to finish his college playing days and education at Eastern next year.

"The big thing with 'Stem' has got to be enough money to pay for the last year of college and some more," said Canton coach Fred Crissey. "He wants to go badly (to the pros)."

Stemberger still has one more year left in his scholarship at Eastern.

"I definitely want to turn pro," Stemberger said. "I just wish the offer was a little better. I'll just have to wait."

The rangy infielder completed another successful spring at Eastern, finishing as the Huron's second-best hitter with a .319 average. He was voted as the Most Valuable Player in the Mid-American League this season. The Hurons won the coveted title for the third time in the last four years.

Stemberger played in all 63 Eastern games and led the team in total bases with 104. He registered 63 hits in 197 times at bat, adding 10 doubles, eight triples, and five home runs. He scored 37 runs and batted in 43.

He presently plays summer ball in the Cape Cod League in Massachusetts.

Canton tankers plan fundraiser

The Plymouth Canton boys swim club will begin a summer-long campaign this week to help raise money for automatic judging and timing equipment.

The cost of the pool addition is approximately $10,000.

Chief coach Bill Faunce, who is spearheading the fundraising campaign, said his team members will visit local merchants soon for donations.

A walnut plaque, with the names of all the merchants who contributed a minimum of $25 toward the project, will be placed outside the Canton pool area.

Faunce stressed that the new swim equipment is portable and will be used at the Plymouth Salem pool, as well.

Both the boys and girls swim teams will benefit from the purchase.

The Canton mentor also said the new equipment will be an asset to the fast-growing Plymouth-Canton Community Swim Club, which includes some 300 families in the area.

Faunce hopes the new equipment will help bring the Western Six League swim championships to Plymouth.

Anyone interested in donating any amount toward the project may call Faunce at 453-2738.

Area soccer teams excel in Great Lakes

Many Plymouth-Canton community soccer teams won league and cup titles in their first year of competition in the newly-formed Great Lakes Soccer League.

The Canton Stingers, coached by Bob Harrison, won the 10-year-and-under boys league crown. The Canton Devils not only won the Huron Division title in the 12-years-and-under boys competition, but also brought home league and cup championships. The Devils were coached by Ed O'Donnell.

The Canton Strikers, of the 12-years-and-under boys league, won the Michigan Division title and the league crown for coach Bruce Strachan.

Jerry Grady's Canton Shamrocks won the league and cup championships in the boys, 16-years-and-under Division 1 competition. The Canton Cobras, coached by Ken Johnson, won the league championship in Division 2 of the boys 16-years-and-under competition.

The Canton Wildcats girls 18-years-and-under also won a cup title under the direction of coach Beryl Monk.

All the cup winners survived a post-season, single-elimination tournament for the honor.

Collins sparks Griffin

A three-run rally in the seventh inning enabled Griffin Sport Shop to snap a 3-3 tie and defeat Burger King, 6-3, last week in a Livonia Adray League baseball game.

Scott Collins started the ball rolling that inning by drawing a walk. He moved to second base on a sacrifice bunt by Ron Colone and advanced to third on a groundout by Ken Scarpace.

Ken Murphy then blasted a triple into right center field to score Collins.

Rob Taraskavage walked and then attempted to steal second base as soon as he had reached first. Burger King's pitcher elected to try and pick off Murphy at third base during Taraskavage's steal attempt, but that strategy proved unsuccessful when the throw to third went wild.

Murphy crossed the plate and Taraskavage stopped at second base. Steve Morman then hit a sharp single to score Taraskavage.

Griffin had produced its first two runs during the second inning and its third run in the fifth frame.

Burger King scored twice in the third inning and once in the fifth.

Brent Erickson, who relieved Mark Wilkins on the mound in the fourth inning, was credited with the victory. Jim Canfield, who hurled all seven innings for Burger King, took the loss.

Murphy and Morman each swatted three hits for Griffin and Colone clubbed two.

Craig Walker, Steve Raymond and Canfield all had a pair of hits for Burger King.

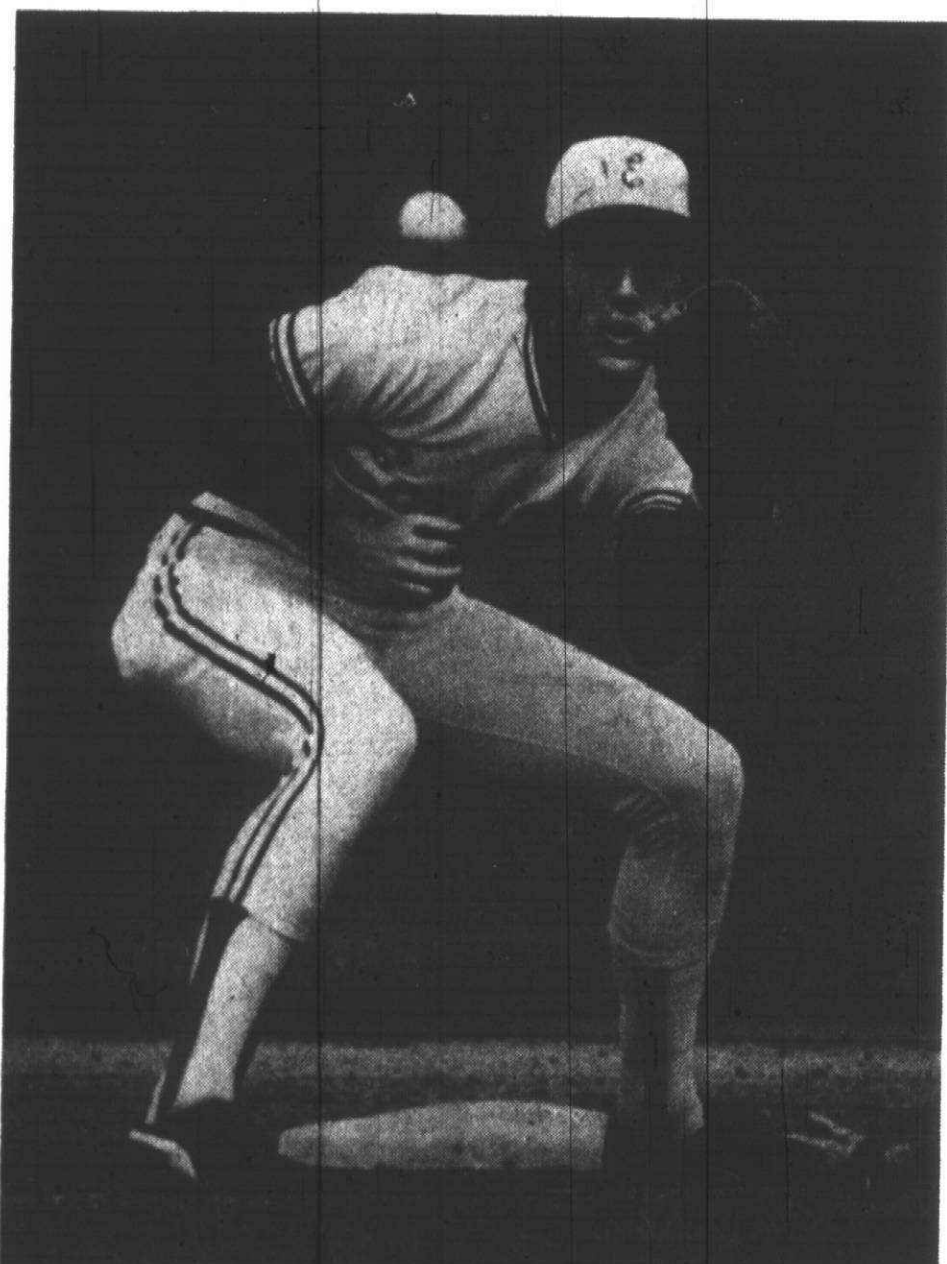

DiPonio plays

Plymouth Salem's Mickey Mantle League contingent, sponsored by DiPonio, will host the championship game of a holiday tournament Tuesday at the Salem High School diamond.

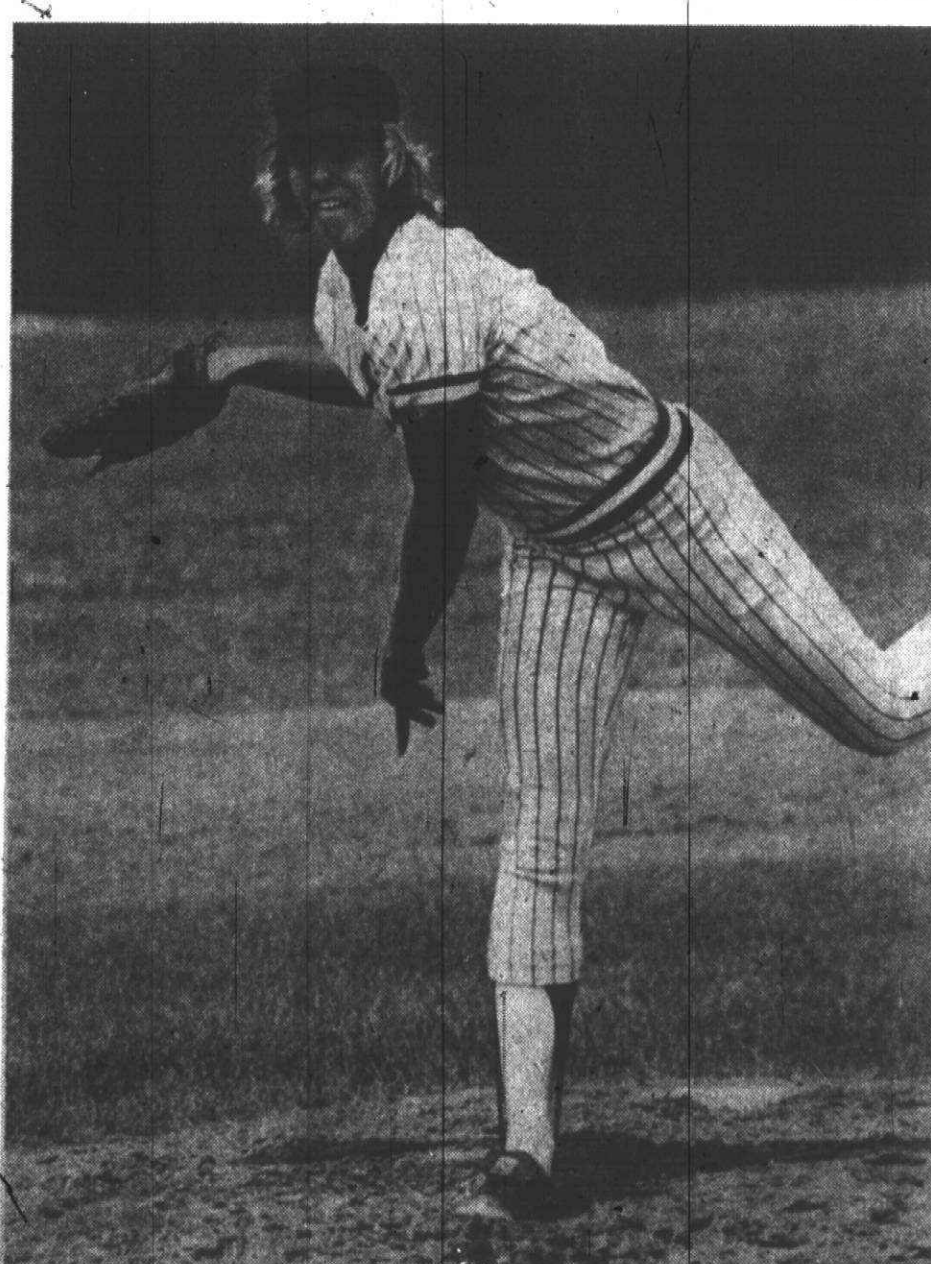

The tourney, directed by the Plymouth squad and coach Mike Michalek, started Saturday. Four teams, Windsor, Southgate, the Detroit Eagles, and DiPonio, have been competing in double-elimination action all weekend.

The Fourth of July championship contest will start at noon. Both finalists will receive trophies after the contest.

Admission is free and refreshments will be served behind the diamond.

Brian Stemberger will return to Eastern Michigan University for his final season at shortstop rather than play for the Chicago White Sox.

Tom Willette will probably turn down an offer from the Kansas City Royals and return to North Carolina State University.

Making Your

Observer & Eccentric

Classified Ad Work Is As Easy As...

1 Include The Price...

Advertising price in an ad promises greater response. Research shows that 48% of the people will not respond to an ad unless the price is advertised. That's almost half of your prospective buyers eliminated. If your price is negotiable say so in your ad.

2 Don't Use Abbreviations...

Another way to kill results or turn off prospective buyers is to use abbreviations. WSW, PS, CBS, PB, AC, AT, WW may be clear to you but maybe not to your buyers, and most will not take the time to figure them out. One survey showed that 42% of readers didn't know what WSW tire meant.

3 Give Enough Information...

People today want all the information they can get before they buy. People want to know all the benefits of what they purchase. Not listing all you can in your ad will cause it to run longer with fewer results. Use brand names for extra pulling power.

4 Stay Near Your Phone...

If you're home all the time, including just a phone number in your ad is enough. If you work or can't be home, specify what hours you can be reached. Some people will never call back if they can't reach you the first time. The easiest way is to be there when your ad is running.
