School board ponders four tax hike requests for building, programs

During the next 12 months, voters may be asked to approve four tax proposals by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

The budget process for 1979-80 is still in its early stages, but preliminary indications are that the schools might be asking for a millage renewal, additional operating millage, and two construction bond issues.

The school board already knows it needs renewal of 6.5 existing operating mills ($6.50 per $1,000 state equalized valuation) and likely will go to the voters early next spring.

A decision on whether to seek new operating millage won't be made until a few months, and the amount to request will depend on what is learned about current unknowns such as the total taxbase and state funding formulas.

Current budget work, however, shows that without additional millage program cuts would range from $2 million to $4 million.

Present thinking is to go to voters with two construction bond issues—one for $10 million and another for $13 million. The new millage needed to pay off these bonds, if approved, still is unknown at this point.

RAYMOND HOEDEL, assistant supt. for business, is suggesting that a bond issue election be held in late spring or early next fall.

Hoedel plans to recommend to the school board that the bond issues be split into two separate ballot propositions.

The first proposition for $10 million would be used for projects such as energy conservation, roofing, barrier free requirements, safety requirements, caulking and weather-stripping, boiler replacements and replacement of equipment, furniture, carpeting, and floors.

The second proposition of $13 million would be for new school construction. This would include a new school for grades K-8, another new buildings for grades K-5, and an addition to the high school for 40 more classrooms.

THE 6.5 MILLS which are up for renewal represents about $4.2 million in revenue now in the budget, says Hoedel.

The reasons that the renewal itself won't be sufficient to avoid program cutbacks without new millage, Hoedel explains, is that the district expects 700 new students next fall and because this year the district will be spending more than $800,000 of its fund balance.

In addition during the coming year the district will be negotiating with various employee groups, including the teachers, for wage and fringe benefits.

All the current speculations about bond issues and requests for new taxes are occurring within the context of the administrative budget process now ongoing for the 1979-80 school year.

The suggestions and timetables may be changed once the budget process enters the political stage when the school board will become involved, public meetings held, and public input received and analyzed.

The central administration is developing two sets of budgets: Budget A which would maintain existing programs with an additional operating tax of some amount; Budget B which would continue the current tax rate and reduce programs as needed to balance the budget.

Residents balk at request for another fast food place

As long as you have a buck, you'll never go hungry on Ford Road.

The thoroughfare is turning into a haven for fast-food addicts, and a number of Canton residents are getting fed up.

"Canton is becoming fast-food city," protested one resident at last Wednesday's township board meeting. "How many more fast-food restaurants are there going to be on Ford Road?"

The citizens' protest was spurred by another request for site plan approval by a fast-food restaurant chain. Burger Chef submitted the latest request for site plan approval in order to carry out its plans to build a restaurant on Ford between Haggerty and I-275.

BUT BURGER CHEF representatives picked the wrong time to present their proposal.

Newly-elected township board members and their supporters showed up in force to protest the latest round of fast-food construction plans.

The four members of the lameduck township board who attended Wednesday's meeting were easily convinced to table Burger Chef's proposal because a colored rendering of the proposed building was not submitted.

Supervisor Harold Stein and Treasurer Anne Bradley — both losers in last Tuesday's election — could not comment on the site plan because they did not attend the meeting. Trustee Eugene Daley, a Stein running mate in the 1976 election, also was absent.

The citizens' protest over the growing fast-food phenomenon was not sparked by a specific dislike of the Burger Chef cuisine.

It was sparked by the growing number of fast-food restaurant chains that are sinking their shovels into the dirt along the main east-west thoroughfare.

Chains that have already received site plan approval to build restaurants on Ford between Canton Center and I-275 include Taco Bell, Burger King, Pizza Hut, Arby's, Sambo's and Bob Evans.

Several establishments are already open along the two-mile strip, including White Castle, McDonald's and Big Boy.

The Palace, Canton House, Orient Inn, Cypress Gardens, Ming Garden and Roman Forum offer food to travelers on the two-mile stretch of pavement as does the cafeteria at Meijer Thrifty Acres. The House of Woo is under construction.

CANTON PLANNER Jim Kosteva expressed doubts, however, that the township board can legally deny fast-food site plan approvals if the plans meet the criteria of the township's current zoning ordinance.

Kosteva says the ordinance does not stipulate the number of restaurants that may be constructed in a specified area. Restaurants are allowed in C-2 zoning districts, and restaurants with banquet facilities are allowed in C-3 districts.

"You have to regulate this type of thing through language in the ordinance," he said.

After the citizens' protest at last Wednesday's meeting, Kosteva realizes that many residents want fast-food construction stopped. He has already begun a survey of nearby communities' zoning ordinances to learn how those municipalities regulate restaurant construction.

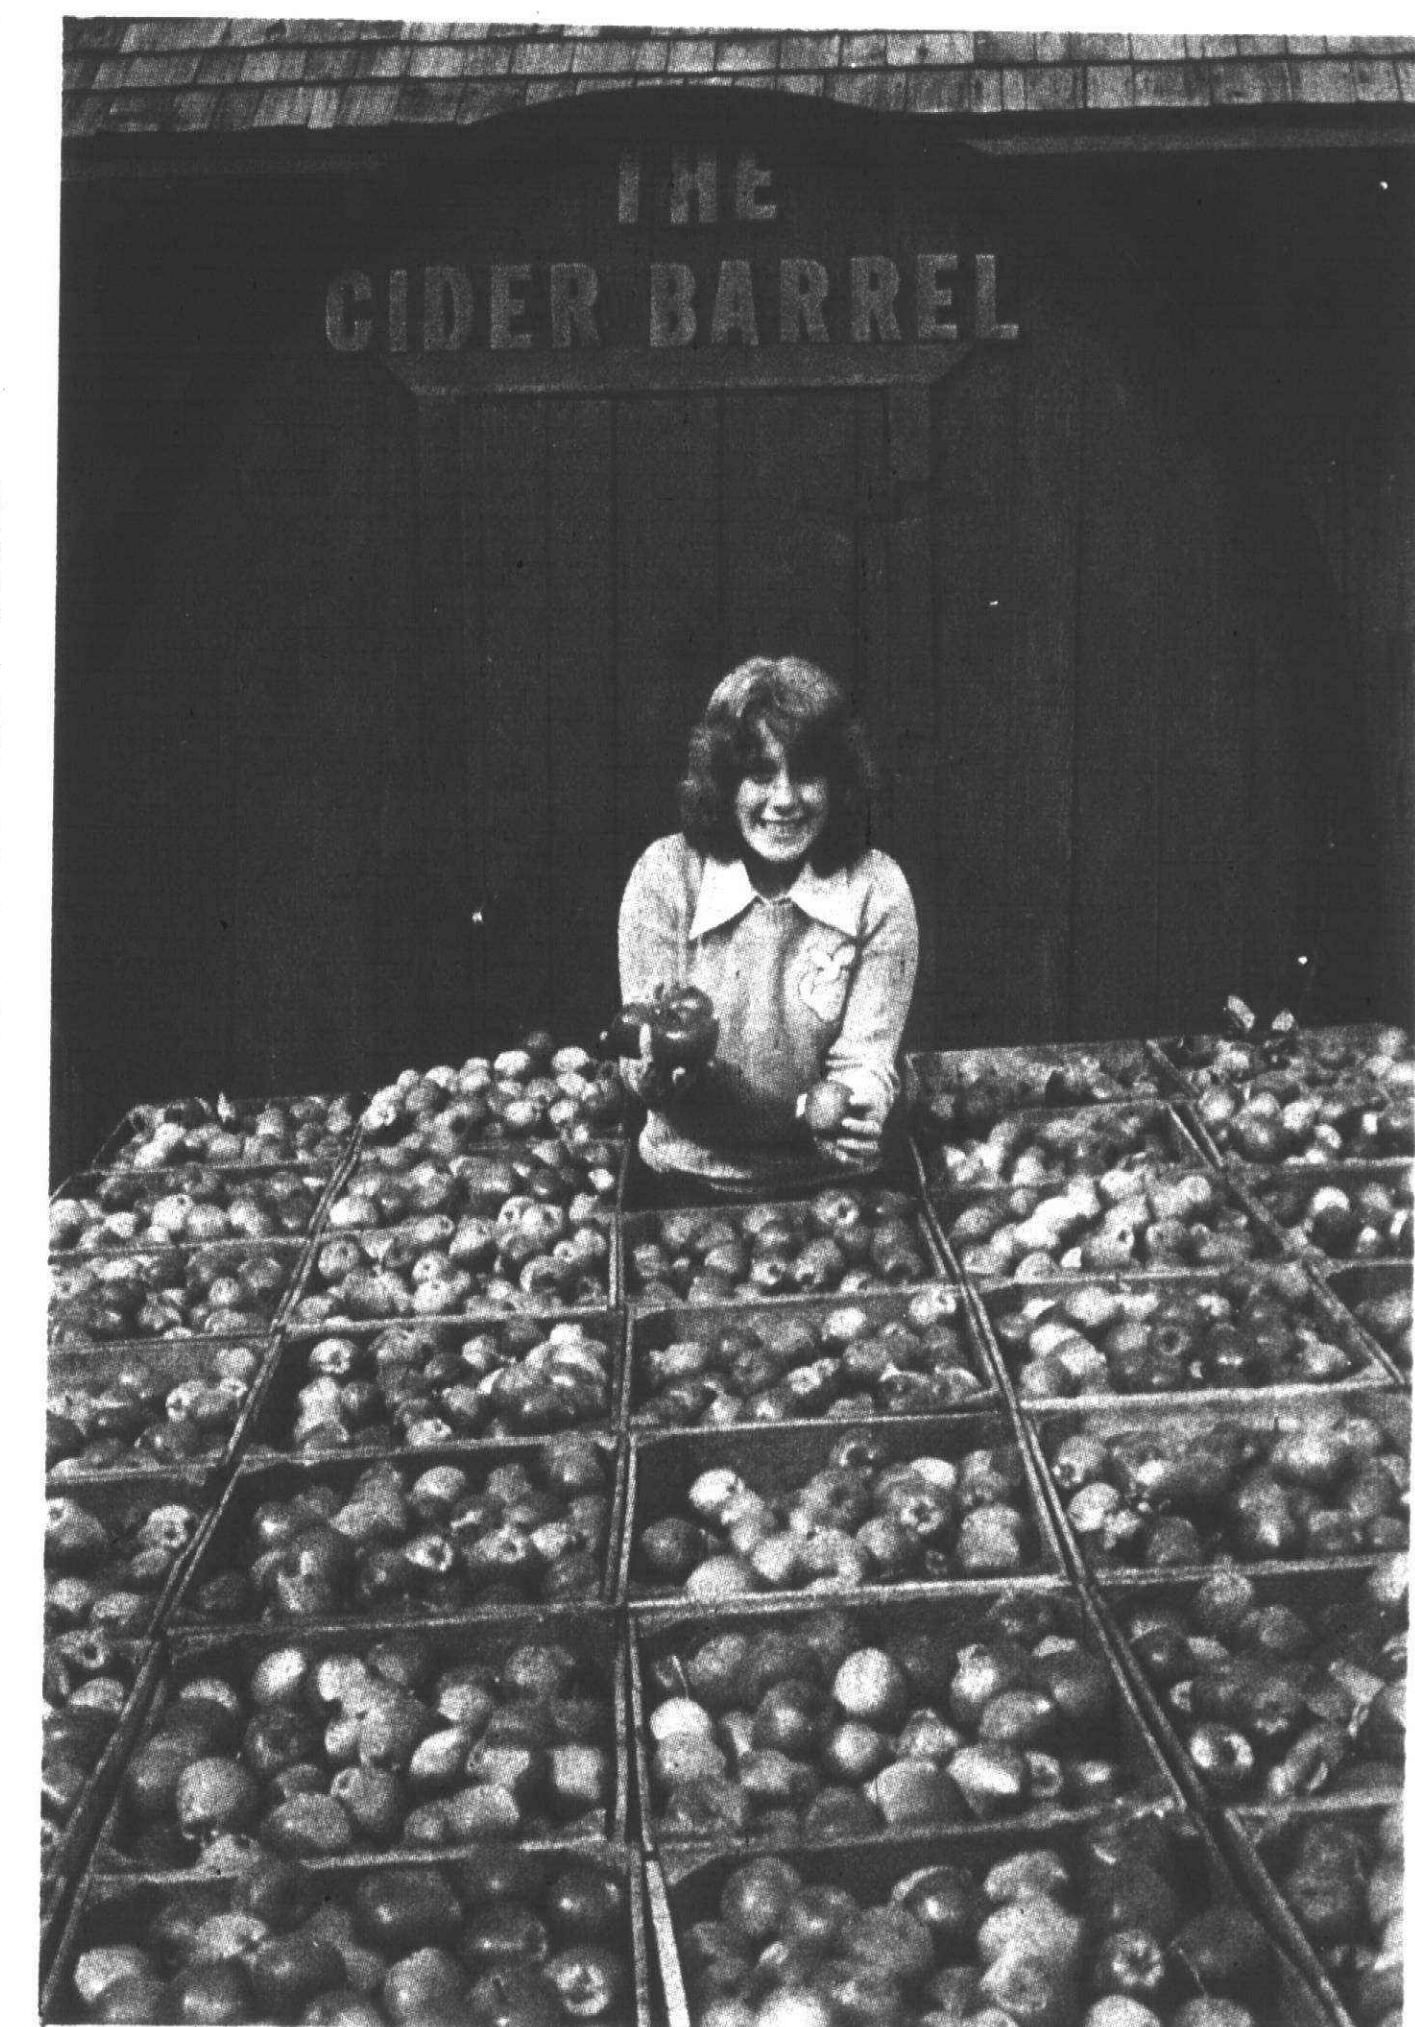

"There is still a lot of vacant land on Ford Road for more of these types of usage in the community," Kosteva said.

"The groundwork for regulating this type of thing should have been laid two or three years ago. You need to lay the groundwork before this type of thing starts happening."

Cocktails in a fast-food joint?

The thought is creating an epidemic of nervous stomachs among Canton residents who fear that a recent request from the Elias Brothers Big Boy restaurant on Ford Road will spur more liquor license requests from the thoroughfare's fast-food strip.

Big Boy's request was unanimously denied by the Canton board last Wednesday to appease residents who filled the meeting hall to protest recent liquor license allocations.

Apples, tasty harvest of fall

Fall apples, crisp and juicy and coming in many varieties, have been harvested now from the orchards in this area and are piled temptingly in the markets. Do booze and Big Boys mix?

Supervisor Harold Stein, Treasurer Anne Bradley and Trustee Eugene Daley were absent from the meeting.

In recent weeks, the board awarded two of the township's seven remaining liquor licenses to the Palace and Canton House restaurants on Ford Road.

Although the Big Boy request was denied, board members invited restaurant owner Peter Khoury to reappear before the new township board that will be seated Nov. 20.

The seven-member board will feature four new members after inauguration ceremonies. The new board is expected to establish criteria that will govern the allocation of liquor licenses.

MARIA FALKIEWICZ, who lost last week's election for township treasurer, summed up the fears of Canton residents at Wednesday's meeting.

"If Big Boy wants a liquor license, so will McDonald's, White Castle and Burger King," she said. "By giving out these liquor licenses, we're not even protecting businesses because we're affecting their competition."

Mrs. Falkiewicz presented petitions, signed by 90 residents, which asked for a moratorium on liquor license allocations until standards can be established.

"The township board has got itself into a catch-22 situation," trustee-elect Robert Greenstein said of the recent liquor license allocations for the Palace and Canton House restaurants.

"You've set up criteria by the lack of it. You've got a respectable businessman (Khoury) coming in to ask for what his competition already has."

Greenstein, who was township supervisor from 1974 to 1976, said his administration used a three-fold criteria to determine which applications for liquor licenses were approved:

- Recipients were required to own restaurant property.

- Licenses were not granted until a restaurant was completely constructed.

- The restaurant had to "substantially" increase the township's tax base.

The standards were used when the township had only a few liquor licenses to allocate. The number of liquor licenses that a municipality holds is based on its population.

Canton's liquor licenses increased after the 1975 census. The township is expected to receive additional liquor licenses following the 1980 census.

"IN MY TWO YEARS on this board, I've never received any more phone calls than I did over this license request from Big Boy," said Trustee Lynne Goldsmith, one of three township board members who will retain her seat after Nov. 20.

"Everyone who called me was against it. Everyone said, 'Please set up standards.'"

Khoury's presentation to the board somewhat appeased residents at Wednesday's meeting, however.

A CHEAP JOURNEY

Want to take a cheap but adventurous journey? A lot of adventure and intrigue, at a reasonable price ($2) is available this Wednesday at Plymouth Salem High by attending the travelogue series sponsored by the Kiwanis Foundation of Plymouth. See Page 2A.

Visit to Colombia is Wednesday

"Adventure in Colombia" will be featured in the Wednesday night travelogue series sponsored by the Kiwanis Clubs of Plymouth.

The second program of this year's series will begin at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Plymouth Salem High School, Joy Road west of Canton Center Road.

Margaret Yerkes, 61, was Plymouth native

As she had requested, a simple cemetery gathering of only immediate family members marked the death and burial of Margaret Buzzard Yerkes.

The 61-year-old native of Plymouth, wife of Edmund P. Yerkes of West Dunlap, died Nov. 1 at John Knox Village Convalescent Center near Ann Arbor where she had been ill for the past two years.

Cremation and burial arrangements were made through the Ross B. Northrop Funeral Home. The ashes were buried in the Yerkes family cemetery in Northville Township off Eight Mile Road.

Mrs. Yerkes had suffered a cerebral attack two years ago that left her body and speech mechanism completely paralyzed. It was the third such attack suffered during her lifetime, the second in 1959 leaving her left side paralyzed.

"When I go," she had instructed her family three years ago, "I want everything kept simple. Just a few words at the graveside, then some happy conversation at home."

Although she was born in Bay City on March 14, 1917, Mrs. Yerkes was taken by her parents, Claude H. and Lucile Buzzard, to Plymouth soon afterward.

A 1934 graduate of Plymouth High School, Mrs. Yerkes lived in Plymouth until her marriage to Edmund on June 24, 1939.

She graduated from Michigan State University in 1938, and in 1961 began part-time studies at Eastern Michigan University where she received her master's degree in education.

Tickets are available at the door for $2.

ROMAIN WILHELMSSEN of East Lansing will narrate the presentation on Colombia.

Wilhelmsen, who attended St. Joseph College for two years and graduated from Pasadena Playhouse, started his professional career on the stage and enjoyed two successful seasons on Broadway.

After leaving the stage, he set out for a life of adventure and exploration. When he had gathered enough history on an area to speculate where old treasures might be located, Wilhelmsen set out to find and film them.

He not only has found lost cities, missions and forts, but treasure, weapons of war, and armor which had not been seen by white men for centuries.

His unsurpassed adventure and exploration films, excellent photography, combined with stimulating narrative, help make Wilhelmsen one of the country's most interesting and successful travel and adventure artists.

AND IN THE FILM on Colombia viewers will find a treasure chest of adventure criss-crossed by lofty Andean ranges, Shangila-like villages, and dense tropical forests.

The gateway to the southern hemisphere, Colombia is a multifaceted coffee country with thatched hut villages, jaguars and crocodiles, floating markets and snow-capped mountains only hours from tropical beaches and cosmopolitan cities studded with 16th and 17th century architecture.

The country is less than five jet hours from New York, and travellers arriving there find the exotic world of the old Spanish Main — with its great stone fortress city of Cartagena — and the capital city of Bogota, the second fastest growing city in the hemisphere.

WILHELMSSEN VISITS these regions and probes into the legends of an ancient area.

There is the legend of Lake Guatavita in which the "old ones" over a millennium of time threw their precious gold and emeralds. The Spaniards dredged out a half million dollars worth but there is much more there, he claims.

Down the Amazon River, more than three hours by plane from Bogota, is the Colombian border outpost of Leticia. There viewers will explore the rain forest and seek out a strange tribe of shy Indian nomads living amid the jungle animals and luxuriant forests.

Then Wilhelmsen will travel to the unsurveyed southern mountains where in 1960 he was shot in a gunfight with Colombia bandits. From there a trip to the Valley of the Giants where huge 12-foot stone statues stand defiantly in the mountains defying all attempts to identify them.

By jeep and pack train viewers will follow this mystery into the back country and see the strange underground tombs and the remains of a vanished civilization yet to be investigated by an archaeologist.

Tickets for future series may be purchased in advance at $10 for six persons per show or three persons for two shows, or other combinations. A $2 discount is available for senior citizens and students.

The travelogue is sponsored by the Plymouth Kiwanis Foundation of the Plymouth Kiwanis Club and the Colonial Kiwanis Club of Plymouth. For tickets phone Harold Fischer at 455-5100, Joe Crowther 455-6350, Tim Yoe 453-6280, or Jim Case at 455-7938.

Running now

Dr. Gerald Cox of 32761 Maplewood, Garden City, will seek a second six-year term on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees in June 1979. A high school business teacher in Detroit schools, Cox said he expected a large turnout of candidates. Three trustees' terms will expire, but only two persons will be elected under a state law reducing the board's size from eight to seven.

Carrier of the year

Darryl Kotcher has been named Carrier of the Year for the Canton Observer. He is shown here receiving a trophy from Observer circulation director Fred Wright (left) and Canton area manager Larry Parnell. The carrier of the year is selected based on length of service, amount of collections, prompt settling of accounts, least amount of customer complaints; neat organization of route book and up to date records; and status as a former carrier of the month.

Falkiewicz ponders offer of deputy treasurer job

Maria Falkiewicz lost the treasurer's race in last week's election.

But she can legally sit on the township board as treasurer-elect Jim Donahue's temporary replacement if she decides to take a deputy treasurer's job.

Donahue, a Republican who beat Mrs. Falkiewicz in the treasurer's race last Tuesday, surprised everyone election night when he named Mrs. Falkiewicz his deputy treasurer.

Under a 1977 state law, all township clerks and treasurers must name a deputy to take their place, when they are absent. The deputy is paid a salary determined by the township board for work performed. The deputy is eligible to sit on the township board during the elected official's absence.

The current deputy clerk and treasurer have apparently performed none of those duties, however.

WHEN CONTACTED by the Observer last Friday, Mrs. Falkiewicz said she had not decided whether she would accept the deputy treasurer appointment.

"It was a very generous thing for Jim (Donahue) to do," said the Democrat. "Especially since we were both treasurer candidates."

"But I really haven't decided yet whether I'll accept the position. At this point, I don't know what the job would entail. I'll have to sit down with Jim and discuss it."

Mrs. Falkiewicz said Donahue telephoned her on election night after the Republican was projected as the winner in the treasurer's race. He asked her then to become deputy treasurer.

Donahue said he selected Mrs. Falkiewicz for the appointment because he felt she was the second best treasurer candidate.

Incumbent Treasurer Anne Bradley also ran for the administrative post as a write-in candidate.

George Bradley, Mrs. Bradley's husband, is the current deputy treasurer. Bernice Flodin—Clerk John Flodin's wife—has been Canton's deputy clerk for years.

But Flodin said his wife has never performed any administrative duties for the township or received a salary. She has never sat on the township board when he has been ill.

"She doesn't do anything, so why should she get paid?" Flodin asked.

"I don't think it would be right if she sat on the board either. She wasn't elected. I was. Like a lot of wives, she's violently opposed to a lot of my ideas. She could vote for something I'm against."

Bradley has never sat on the township board in Mrs. Bradley's absence. Flodin said Bradley has never performed any treasurer duties as far as he knows.

The Bradleys were unavailable for comment.

Bradley gets write-ins, but won't be constable

There were no surprises in Thursday's certification of Canton election results—unless you consider the defeat of Treasurer Anne Bradley, in a wide-open constable race that saw Donald Duck and Iggy Pop finish in a tie for third, with one vote apiece—a surprise.

The out-going treasurer was viewed as a strong contender for the position of constable before write-in votes were counted by the township board of canvassers.

Mrs. Bradley garnered two write-in votes compared to the 10 votes given to winner Robert L. Suggs.

Both Suggs and Mrs. Bradley were unavailable for comment on the constable race outcome. Duck and Pop could not be reached, either.

"LOT OF PEOPLE" got votes for constable," township clerk John Flodin said, adding that the write-in vote count for constable was the biggest chore that faced the canvassing board on Thursday.

The constable race was wide open because only three candidates—Jack Blevins, Irene Murphy and Sam Natoli—ran for four constable positions.

Township constables perform a variety of duties on a fee basis, such as serving papers for the 35th District Court. The position is otherwise unsalaried.

"It's kind of an antiquated job," Flodin said. "They really don't do much anymore."

Candidates in the more hotly-contested races of township supervisor, treasurer and trustee lost or gained a few votes in the election certification process.

But winners enjoyed such a large margin of victory that the certified results failed to change the election outcome.

Official, certified results show that Democrat Noel Culbert received 5,096 votes to make him the winner in the supervisor's race. Republican candidate John Longridge received 2,824 votes compared to the 1,130 given to incumbent Supervisor Harold Stein, a Democrat.

Democrat Mrs. Bradley won only 990 votes in the treasurer's race, compared to the 3,485 given to her Democratic opponent, Maria Falkiewicz, and the 4,523 given to Republican Jim Donahue.

In the race for two trustee seats, Democrat Carol Rodenmiller won 5,606 votes and Democrat Robert Greenstein got 5,321. Republican Gary Roberts lost the race with 4,261 votes.

The official vote totals show that the farmland preservation proposition failed by 542 votes. A total of 5,074 residents voted against the proposition, while 4,532 voted for it.

New LEMS system assists local police

If Canton police want to know what the typical car thief is like, all they have to do is ask LEMS.

And if they're curious about what a speeder has been up to in other parts of the state, they simply call up LEMS.

LEMS (Law Enforcement Management System) is a state-wide computer network that enables police departments to keep tabs on crime without spending hours compiling statistics.

Since Oct. 1, Canton police have been filling out special computer forms for every report. The forms are shipped to the Michigan State Police department in Lansing at the end of every month.

The forms ask for details such as the age, race and sex of persons arrested, as well as a description of the scene of the crime and what injuries may have been sustained by victims.

Other details include information about crimes, evidence, and procedures.

In return for sending off the LEMS forms, Canton police get a computerized feedback on information they file. They can request a tally on any information, such as how many robberies occurred during October.

Canton police feel the new system is an improvement over the UCR (Uniformed Crime Reports) they used to file.

"The UCR was a nice system, but very time consuming. LEMS gives a more accurate account of what kind of crime is happening in Canton," said Barb McEwen, a police clerk with the department.

The UCR system involved six forms that had to be filled out, and weren't as detailed as LEMS' standard incident form.

State police also like the new system. "It's a tremendous way of recording records," according to Sgt. James Belcher of the Michigan State Police in Northville.

"By using this system, we've been able to schedule personnel efficiently."

As with any new system, LEMS is sometimes hard to get used to. Ms. McEwen said numbers recorded on the forms won't be accepted by the computer if they aren't exactly as the state police suggest.

"It's like learning to write all over again," she said.

According to Ms. McEwen, the forms go through three computers three times. If one of the computers does not agree with the other two about a number, the form will be kicked out of the system.

Some police object to LEMS because the two carbon copies of the form (the rest goes to Lansing) that the police keep on hand tend to be difficult to read.

LEMS is being used by almost 600 police departments across the state.

MARIA FALKIEWICZ

Correction

A story in last Thursday's edition of the Canton Observer erroneously stated that Robert Padgett attributed defeat of the farmland preservation proposition on last week's ballot to an "excessive" request for four mills.

Padgett actually attributed defeat of the ballot proposition in part to the public statements of some township board candidates that the four-mill request was too high.

Padgett, chairman of the farmland education committee, has maintained all along that a four-mill tax levy is necessary to finance the public purchase of farmers' development rights.

Ramblings

By CAROLINE PRICE

The long and the short of it

Some waitresses at a Metro Airport bar are going to long lengths to solve a short matter.

The women have decided that their uniforms expose more of their anatomy than necessary, and they have made their objections in legal form.

It's about time waitresses stood up for the right to be able to bend over without embarrassment. I've been to the particular airport establishment in question, and one look at the costumes these women endure makes me wonder why they didn't file suit sooner.

The uniform's bodice is cut low and the skirt is almost non-existent. There is a froth of ruffles peeking out of the costume fore and aft.

The women who work at this bar are not especially young, and in some cases, aren't particularly svelte. However, on the whole, they are good waitresses.

As anyone who has ever been a waitress knows, good feet are much more useful than a good body.

I did my stint as a waitress during college, and I know there's a lot more to doing a good job than leaning over a table to see how much bosom can be displayed. It's hard work.

I was not an especially good waitress, but I did happen to be the youngest one at my former place of employment. We didn't have to wear stupid costumes, but the women who worked in the bar section had to wear hot pants and tall boots.

Whenever one of the cocktail waitresses took ill, they dragged me out of the main restaurant to work in the bar.

I really felt like an idiot tricked out in the bar costume and probably developed a large share of my nasty temperment from the nights I had to endure cocktail waitressing.

But I did learn this much. A brief costume doesn't cover up poor waitressing. It only uncovers waitresses.

According to the reports, the women who are involved in the complaint against the airport lounge have years of experience as waitresses. Usually the ones who either hate the job or can't do it well drop out somewhere along the way.

Presumably then, the ones remaining know the job and do it well. What more could a restaurant manager want?

Apparently, some restaurateurs feel the quality of their food and service should be obscured as much as possible by waitresses who look like can-can dancers.

The good, experienced waitresses get forced out of their job when their age and figures make it a humiliating experience to squeeze into outfits that leave nothing to the imagination.

Another thing restaurant managers seem to forget is that women patronize their establishments as well as men. I really don't care what a waitress is wearing. What I want is good service and good food.

I suspect most men don't care much about the outfits of their servers, either. The fairy tale that revealing costumes mean bigger tips is bunk. Men who tip well will tip well no matter what the waitress has on. Cheap-skates will still be cheap-skates, and will simply be more inclined to pinch and grab. Ugh.

There's a happy solution to all this. I suggest that the male employees, including the managers et al, be required to don equally revealing costumes as the female employees.

Thus, we females will feel entitled to a show of flesh, since that's why the management thinks we go out to eat and drink.

The male attire can consist of bright red bikini trunks and a cut-away tuxedo-style jacket. They can wear bow ties and no shirts. They can have black sandals to match.

They will wear these costumes no matter how old or fat they are, or how efficient.

We customers will giggle at them, pinch them, and leave them the same tip we would have if they had been fully dressed.

The males will wear these costumes until they decide that everyone in the place is entitled to dress with dignity.

I suspect that decision would be made very quickly.

Reader applauds mental health club

Editor:

For the past two years, I have sat in on several meetings of a group for better mental health, by the name of Fieldbrook Association.

During this time I have listened to this small group of deeply loyal, compassionate, caring persons—volunteers themselves, who have taken time out of their own heavy busy schedules, trying to solve some of the problems of mental health and help the loving and concerned persons of the mentally ill.

They have through local newspapers, openly invited the community and concerned persons to attend these meetings, to obtain a better understanding of mental laws and problems pertaining to such, and also to back and support this group. Only myself on most occasions, or two or three other concerned citizens at other times, have responded and been at a meeting.

These rare and dedicated persons have tried many avenues to gain sufficient recognition and assistance, so that they in turn could offer their skills and help to those in desperate need, not knowing where to turn.

The purpose of Fieldbrook Community Mental Health Association is to provide a comprehensive mental health program for the cities of Livonia, Plymouth, Northville and the townships of Redford, Plymouth, Canton and Northville.

Their aim is to be an after care center and follow up for previously hospitalized patients; but perhaps even more important of all as a preventive center, where a person could go at any time of the day or night for emergency service, without a lot of red tape being involved, and also for the best possible advice as where and what to do next, in the case of a loved person who is ill.

Rev. James Spilos has offered his church, "Holy Trinity," as a meeting place, and is himself an interested and participating person in this group.

These people have simply knocked their heads against a brick wall due to a (1.) lack of funds (2.) enough concern and backing from the community.

In fact there seems to be a complete lack of awareness by the public that this association even exists.

Yet, these very interested and dedicated people have never given up. They keep plugging away on our behalf, yours and mine, for in this day and age there is hardly a family that is not under some sort of stress and strain, or under pressures from various groups and community living, also concerns for their children or some dear, relative, friend or neighbor. Here stands a caring group, ready to stretch forth a helping hand and most of us are unaware of this!

I attended an emergency meeting Oct. 18 concerning a newly-to-be formed Community Health Center, which unlike Fieldbrooks intention, would only handle a percentage of after-care patients, until their funds would run out (this would be their cut off line), but not for prevention.

As we have been reading in newspaper articles, magazines, etc. in all illnesses, whether it be cancer, heart attacks, mental illness, prevention is far better, quicker (not to mention less expensive) than when an illness strikes.

Candidate thanks those who helped

Editor:

This is a tribute to the behind-the-scenes people who devoted their talents, energy and time to my campaign.

Since May, 1978, through the November election, the committee of "Friends to Elect Maria (Dolly) Falkiewicz Treasurer" is well deserving of recognition. Their names are too numerous to mention, however, I extend my sincerest appreciation to each and every one.

A special "thank you" to Deana Salhaney, my campaign manager; Mike

Gorman, Canton's financial director, and my family.

Thank you all very much for your support (especially when times got rough) and your sincere dedication throughout this campaign. It was a real pleasure working with all of you.

Also, I'd like to extend my congratulations to Jim Donahue, our new treasurer and a fine opponent. Congratulations also to Noel Culbert, supervisor; and Robert Greenstein and Carol Bodenmiller, our new trustees. Best wishes for a successful political career.

Clout helps get Lansing bucks

There are two ways to get state funds out of Lansing—the usual budget process and political clout.

Schoolcraft College us had and used political clout to get $633,000 toward its $1.56 million culinary arts a construction money.

The clout, said President C. Nelson Grote, came from U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), a member of the State Senate from 1970-76, and current senate majority leader William Faust (D-Westland).

In 1975, Grote said, Sen. Pursell called him from Lansing to say that state funds of $550,000 were about to be cut because of a revenue shortage in that recession year.

But Pursell, a member of the senate appropriations committee and many subcommittees, is a master of the intricacies of lawmaking, Grote said. Pursell had a token $50,000 inserted in the budget to keep the project legally alive in Lansing.

This year, Schoolcraft asked for the rest of its money. This time, however, the governor's budget director, Gerald Miller, opposed the funding.

"When that happens," said Grote, "you've got to get the project added through the political process."

Faust went to the joint capital outlay committee and got the funding approved over the objections of the budget bureau.

And even though Pursell was in Congress by this time, he made a number of calls to old friends in key legislative spots, such as Sen. Bill S. Huffm an (D-Madison Heights) and Rep. Russell Hellman (D-Dollar Bay). All local legislators supported it.

Gov. William G. Milliken last month got the culinary arts addition as an item in the Capital Outlay Appropriations Act of 1978. He could have used an item veto but didn't. He signed the bill into law.

And Grote summed it up: "We got it the hard way—the political way."

By W.W. EDGAR

While dozing off to sleep the other evening there came the faint sound of muffled drums, a bit of martial music and the Stroller was about to enjoy one of the finest dreams he has had in a long time.

As the sound of the music drew closer and the shuffling of marchers droned on he suddenly found himself back home in the Dutch country on the morning of what then was called Armistice Day.

The Pennsylvania Dutch are intense people. When they set their plans on anything you can rest assured that whatever they are doing is well worthwhile. So, it wasn't surprising on this morning that me, women and children began gathering to play tribute to those who made the supreme sacrifice and the others who fought in the war that was supposed to end all wars.

As The Stroller, in his dreams, reveled in seeing the clans gather—the rich, the poor, the day laborer and the members of the cloth—his eyes suddenly focused on the old Colonel, his grandfather who was a professional veteran.

ON THIS particular morning he was attired in his finest uniform that marked the oldtimers who had fought in the Civil War. And the Colonel never missed a chance to strut his stuff before what he referred to as the young whipper snappers.

The Colonel liked nothing better than to regale the young folks with tales of his army career.

He never liked being disturbed in the midst of telling his stories and his eyes blazed when The Stroller asked, "How were things at Gettysburg?"

"They were three bad days," he answered "and no one realizes the suffering we had to endure."

"Colonel," the Stroller asked, always respecting his grandfather's army rank, "how were things at Vicksburg?"

Forgetting that the battles of Gettysburg and Vicksburg were fought on the same days, the Colonel's eye gleamed as he answered, "Talk about suffering, they were three of the toughest days I ever experienced."

NOW REALIZING that the Colonel was taking advantage of the day and forgetting that we young folks had studied history in school, The Stroller cut him off with:

"I guess the only battle in which you fought was the Battle of Who Run and all those who didn't run are there yet."

Everyone chuckled, except the Colonel. He realized he had been caught in a trap. He quickly raised his foot and gave the Stroller a good, swift kick. And would you believe it, he still feels it to this day.

Despite his embarrassment of being caught in an untruth about his service with the Union Army, the Colonel had a great day.

When the parade formed for the march up Front Street and then across the bridge to the cemetery he was up front.

When the procession reached the Lehigh River, the World War I veterans gave him the honor of throwing the bouquet of flowers into the river and later gave him the place on honor in the ceremonies at the chapel in the cemetery.

All these sights came rushing back though the years as the Stroller enjoyed his dream while dozing off in his easy chair.

As the years passed they have changed the day from Armistice Day to Veterans Day and the Colonel is long gone. But you can bet that when the flowers are laid at the graves each year he is looking down and smiling. It was always his big day.

And each year The Stroller always spends Veterans Day with him—if only in memory.

Chrysler on offensive

New Elite endangers production, growth

The pendulum has swung too far in one direction, according to a spokesman for the Chrysler Corporation, and now's time to bring an end to "regulatory overkill."

"We know it (the pendulum) will swing back, we hope it will begin its return at the earliest possible moment," S. L. Terry, vice-president of public responsibility and consumer affairs for Chrysler, told the Rotary Club of Plymouth on Friday.

Federal regulations to clean up the air and water were necessary, Terry stressed, but bureaucracy has reacted with requirements that far too stringent, he said.

Terry suggested that if balance is not regained, economic growth will come to a halt in many large cities in the U.S., and the automobile companies may come to the point where they must halt car production.

"The EPA requirements already have reached the point of diminishing returns," Terry said. "Now it is a question of whether we can keep producing automobiles."

IN HIS POSITION, Terry directs Chrysler's automotive safety and environmental regulations programs. Another of his duties is to keep the company alert to its responsibilities in areas such as customer service and energy conservation.

Besides automotive tailpipe emissions, Terry explained, the government has established standards for evaporative emissions—the emissions produced when gasoline evaporates and escapes from the fuel system.

A testing problem is that "a new car emits hydrocarbons from other sources, too—not just the fuel system which we're trying to control," Terry said. Also included are emissions from the paint, the vinyl roof and the plastics in the seats. "The car doesn't stand a chance of passing the test if its tires happen to roll through an oil slick on the way into the testing shed," Terry added.

"In fact, a car right off the assembly line can give off enough hydrocarbons to flunk the test, even though the fuel system is bone dry," he said.

"To have any chance of passing the test, we have to take a car off the line and let it sit for a month and age it to get rid of the hydrocarbon emissions which contribute to new car smell," Terry said.

The test is cumbersome, time-consuming and expensive, according to Terry. "It adds to the cost of a new car, but adds nothing to air quality."

IN THE PAST 10 years, Terry continued, American industry has been subjected to a stream of "ridiculous, unnecessary, and conflicting regulations and procedures."

"We have air quality standards so severe that the air in the middle of a natural pine forest can't meet them. We have water standards so severe, rain water straight from the sky can't meet them."

Regulatory agencies are handcuffing industry with nit-picking test procedures and bureaucratic red tape, Terry added. "As a result, regulation is estimated to cost this country at least $100 billion a year."

Terry then raised the question: "How did we get to a point where senseless regulations have become such a burden for business and the consumer?"

He suggested that the answer lies in the birth of a new class, which he dubbed the "New Elite." He described that class as the young people who grew up in the affluent 1950s, went to college during the turbulent '60s and '70s, and then to law school.

"Somewhere along the way," he said, "they became convinced that America needed to change in some very fundamental ways, and they had some legitimate gripes. It seemed the system was out of whack, and they didn't have any faith at all in its ability to solve problems.

"These critics are contemptuous of the life and values of the average American, as expressed by the cars we drive, the TV programs we watch, even the suburbs many of us choose to live in."

"Naturally, anyone who wants to change society quickly will go to Washington to do it, and that's just what happened. One estimate is that there are nearly 85,000 people now on the federal payroll just to write regulations," Terry said.

There are members of the New Elite, he added, who believe regulatory agencies should be insulated from political interference. "That means interference by the people, or by anyone who doesn't happen to agree with their prejudices."

REGULATIONS ALREADY have added more than $600 to the price of a new car, Terry said, and by 1985 the price will increase by another $1,000.

Beyond this price tag, there is the problem of dealing with the EPA making unnecessary changes in regulatory procedures.

"We've been trying for months to pin EPA down on their final certification procedures for the 1980 model year. Until they make up their minds, we can't do the proof testing necessary to certify our 1980 passenger cars for production. And right now we are eight weeks behind schedule," Terry said.

"Further delay will result in disastrous shutdowns and layoffs affecting tens of thousands of employees in our plants and suppliers' plants."

"Over the years, the New Elite has used and misused the law to attain its objectives. We have seen the New Elite clutter the courts with lawsuits which have hamstrung the government and private business," Terry said.

"We have seen construction of a needed dam stopped dead in its tracks because of a lawsuit to protect the Shal Darter, a nearly extinct fish. And we've seen exploration for oil and gas, and development of energy sources, stymied for years by nuisance lawsuits of one sort or another."

The New Elite, however, will soon find the public reacting to "regulatory overkill," as prices continue to soar unnecessarily, Terry predicted.

"Despite the best efforts of the New Elite, the government still does listen to the voice of the people People are waking up to the tragic mistake of regulatory overkill, and they want to do something about it."

Terry urged his listeners to write U.S. Senators and Congressmen. "We had an election this week—tell them you haven't forgotten their promises to get government under control. Let them know you are watching."

"The issue goes beyond any one industry, or any one foolish regulation. It's really a question of who governs this country, and how the people in government can be held accountable for their actions," Terry said.

Representation

By TIM RICHARD

Garden City Board of Education members reacted favorably to a suggestion from Schoolcraft College leaders on how to get broader geographic representation on the community college board.

Garden City officials were guests of the college board for dinner and talk Wednesday evening.

Schoolcraft board acting chairman Harry Greenleaf and President C. Nelson Grote got nods of approval when they outlined the so-called "Delta plan," named for Delta Community College.

Delta board members are elected at-large, as are Schoolcraft's. But Delta's selection of candidates at any one election is limited to one geographic portion of the district.

For example, in Year I only persons from Community A would be eligible although voters from Communities B and C would also vote. In Year II, only persons from Community B would be eligible to run. And so on.

SCHOOLCRAFT'S political problem is that, while the college is composed of five K-12 school districts and portions of a sixth, seven of the eight trustees were elected from the Livonia School District which has about half the population. (After being elected, Trustee Mark McQuesten moved to Plymouth-Canton.)

Gerald Cox of Garden City is the only non-Livonian elected in recent years. No trustees come from Clarenceville, or Northville.

When Schoolcraft was founded, each member K-12 district elected one trustee, and three were elected at large, for a total of eight.

That setup ran afoul of the U.S. Supreme Court decision known as Baker vs. Carr—"one person, one vote." Plymouth-Canton, which then had only one-fifth of the population, would wind up with as many as four persons on the board. Livonia was mathematically under-represented.

Since Wayne Circuit Judge Roland Olzark in 1971 ruled that plan unconstitutional, Schoolcraft trustees have been elected at large.

Livonians have been the big winners, in part because of the district's population but also because large numbers of Livonians have run while the smaller districts have fielded few candidates.

In the last three elections, only Dr. Cox has run from Garden City. Clarenceville has had only one candidate, and Northville none. Plymouth-Canton has had only one strong contender.

SCHOOLCRAFT Trustee Len Wozniak, however, was opposed to the Delta plan.

"I find no difference in thinking north or south of Joy Road, or east or west of Haggerty," said Wozniak, a Livonian.

"In the year and a half I've been on the board, no issue has divided us geographically."

Trustees Rosina Raymond and McQuesten disagreed. They saw better support for Schoolcraft bond and millage issues if each K-12 district had personal contact on the college board.

Between 1971 and 1977 voters have turned down three property tax increase proposals. The college has 177 voted mills, the last increase coming in 1966.

THE DELTA plan is a modification of sub-districting ideas that have floated around Schoolcraft since the 1971 reapportionment.

Sub-districting, college leaders agree, runs into two problems:

First, the districts are of unequal size; Clarenceville, for example, has only about five per cent of the total Schoolcraft population, and Northville isn't much larger. To give Clarenceville one seat on the board, apportionment standards, would require a 20-member board.

Second, it would be extremely difficult to draw up equal-sized sub-districts. School districts don't follow census tract lines. A tiny portion of Clarenceville slops over into Oakland County, and slivers of Plymouth-Canton follow old farm lines in Washtenaw County and a fraction of Novi is part of the college district.

The Delta plan would call for carving out sub-districts for candidate recruitment but would avoid the election chaos of candidates' trying to campaign and elect them in inconvenient sub-districts. All candidates would run at large.

A Delta plan would require permissive law from the Michigan Legislature.

Headlee may nix culinary center

By TIM RICHARD

Schoolcraft College officials are scratching their heads for a way to raise nearly $400,000 more toward construction of a home for its nationally prominent culinary arts program.

"When we filed an application for state funding," said administrative vice-president W. Kenneth Lindner, "we had $536,000 in the bank. The cost of the project was estimated in January of 1978 at $1.56 million.

"We applied for state funding of 50 per cent, or about $780,000. The state funded 40.5 per cent, or $633,000 plus a share of cost overruns, in the 1978 capital outlay bill.

"Our problem now is how to raise $396,000 now that the Headlee amendment has passed," Lindner said.

THE COMMUNITY college official referred to Proposal E, the tax limitation amendment to the state constitution which voters approved Nov. 7.

The Headlee amendment contained a provision that bond issues would have to be approved by voters if they are to be backed by the government's full faith and credit.

Until Headlee, governing boards could float construction bond issues and raise the property tax rates to pay for them. (Operating taxes were another matter; then and now, they had to be approved by voters. Thus, Schoolcraft has floated no recent bond issues, though the board had power to do so, because voters turned down operating millages in three straight elections.

"THE BOARD will get information at the Nov. 15 meeting, and it should decide what to do by Dec. 15," said Lindner.

Without power to float bonds by resolution, the board may either put a $396,000 bond issue on the ballot or receive a $396,000 gift. No one knows of any $396,000 gifts going begging.

Meanwhile, the cost of the culinary arts addition is rising. In 1974, when Schoolcraft first sought state funding, the price tag was $1.1 million. As of January it was $1.56 million.

The Greater Detroit Real Estate Board estimates costs of school type construction have been rising at 6.0 to 10.9 per cent annually in recent years.

The addition would cost $120,000 a year to operate—about one per cent more than Schoolcraft's current $11 million budget.

THE CULINARY arts addition would be a two story attachment to the north of the Waterman Campus Center on the Livonia campus.

Its upper story would house the two-year certificate program which trains chefs for the growing hospitality industry. Student affairs programs—such as counseling, financial aids and the student newspaper—would be assigned some of the space, although Lindner said exact assignments had not yet been made.

Culinary arts would be able to expand its enrollment from the current 58 to 120. It would also be able to cut its four-year waiting list for admissions, Lindner said.

If the Headlee amendment had lost and the college had been able to bond by resolution, bids could have been taken in March of 1979, and the work could have been completed by mid-1980, Lindner said.

THE CULINARY arts program currently operates in cramped quarters in the existing Waterman Center. Visitors can sometimes see classes meeting in the cafeteria area.

The new addition will have these facilities:

- A teaching laboratory with space for 60 students. This will include a full bakery for 20 students; a full service

- commercial kitchen lab, 20 students; and a pantry and butcher shop area, 20 students.

- A demonstration lab with space for 60 students. It would be much like a science lab with a dais, movable seats, audio-visual capacity, demonstration table with hot and cold running water and cooking equipment.

- Faculty offices, secretarial area, small conference area with space for the instructors' personal libraries of 3,000 volumes. (Instructors are reluctant to place those in the general library.) Student activities will get some of this space.

EMU fetes 10 local Scouts

Ten local Girl Scouts were among those honored Saturday during a special pre-game ceremony which highlighted Eastern Michigan University's Scout Day football game.

Nearly 2,000 Scouts from the southeastern Michigan Wolverine and Huron Valley Councils were guests of the athletic department for the Huron's game against Central Michigan University.

Before the contest, this year's Eagle and First Class Boy and Girl Scouts were introduced on the field.

Among the Plymouth Scouts honored were these members from Troop 626: Laura Bobean of Forest; Jennifer Courter of N. Harvey; Elizabeth Griffing of Duxbury Court; Ann O'Reilly of Penniman Avenue; Melinda Paul of Terry; Mary Ellen Wessels of Amherst Court; Leanna Wheeler of Holbrook; and Jeanne Yoe of Pacific Street.

Also honored were members of Plymouth Troop 501: Nancy Bentley of Betty Hill; and Linda Scruggs of Sheldon Road.

Hewlett hounded by colleges in 2 sports

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Loyal Plymouth Salem sports fans remember Rich Hewlett's prep debut.

He was the center of attention, of course, coming off the bench as a freshman basketball player, sparking the Rocks throughout the 1976 district competition. Just one look at all the poise, maturity and instinctive skills of this ninth grader, and one could tell Hewlett was going to be a good one.

Now, four years later, the 6-1, 190-pound athlete is one of the most sought after major college recruits in the state—for basketball and football.

He has been contacted by nearly 75 schools around the country who are willing to give him an athletic scholarship.

The University of Michigan has made Hewlett its number one football recruit this season.

While the Wolverines, along with Alabama, seem to have the inside track on Hewlett's services next year, the Salem senior says he isn't close to making a decision—especially with the basketball season approaching.

"There are two colleges (Michigan and Alabama) that are talking to me the most and are really interested," Hewlett said.

"But there are other colleges interested too. I have six visits and want to use them all."

"People say 'I know you're going to Michigan' but I don't think it's fair for them to say that. I'm not denying that I'm not interested because they've talked to me the most, but coach (Tom) Moshimer says that other schools will come after the season."

Hewlett says he's may be interested in playing college basketball as well. He mentioned Oklahoma, Notre Dame and all the Big Ten schools except Ohio State as other football possibilities. He also included the Ivy League schools as potentials for both football and basketball.

HEWLETT ended his three-year football career at Salem last week by scoring three touchdowns and passing for another in a 35-7 victory over Farmington Harrison. He finished his season with 675 yards rushing on only 101 carries. He scored 15 touchdowns and passed for six more.

In his career, Hewlett played part-time as a sophomore in Salem's 5-4 season in 1976. He earned all-state honors last season leading the Rocks to an undefeated 9-0 season, a Suburban Eight League championship and a spot in the state playoffs.

This year, the Rocks finished 8-1 and second in the Sub-8 to state-playoff contender Trenton. Hewlett finished his career with 2,261 yards rushing on 307 carries for a 7.4 average. He scored 32 TD's and passed for 19 six-pointers.

Hewlett also started on the basketball team as a sophomore and is expected to have a strong season this winter. An all-state football candidate again this season, Hewlett is in a running battle with Birmingham Brother Rice's Jon English, a passing quarterback. Both are considered the top two signal callers in the state. It looks as if English may get the nod at quarterback, however, because his passing statistics are more impressive than Hewlett's.

The Salem senior is a wishbone quarterback. While he has thrown 19 TD's in his career and completed 56 per cent of his tosses, Hewlett only averages about five passes a game because of the wishbone option.

"I'd love to play against him (English) just to see how the option would do against the pass," Hewlett said. I would have loved to do it last year when we had all that talent on the line.

"I don't see any difference in a running or passing quarterback," Hewlett said. "There's no set rules to be a quarterback. Just because one hands off and runs while the other passes doesn't make a difference (in performance)."

HEWLETT injured his back last season at football camp in August and has played hurt most of his last two football seasons. He had to miss summer basketball five months ago because of the injury.

but he says it's getting stronger every week. Hewlett is prepared to nurse it regularly when basketball season ends in the spring.

IT IS NO secret that Rich Hewlett has been a positive and graceful chapter in Plymouth Salem athletics these past three years. He is one of the reasons the Rocks have produced winners in basketball and football.

But Hewlett considers himself the fortunate one for being part of the Salem athletic program and the Plymouth-Canton community. He felt playing varsity basketball as a freshman was "a dream come true" after watching the Ellinghausens and the Agardys perform when he was an eighth grader at West Middle School.

"When I look back, it's going to be hard to leave Moshimer and (Fred) Thomann," Hewlett said about his football and basketball coach. "They were just great for me."

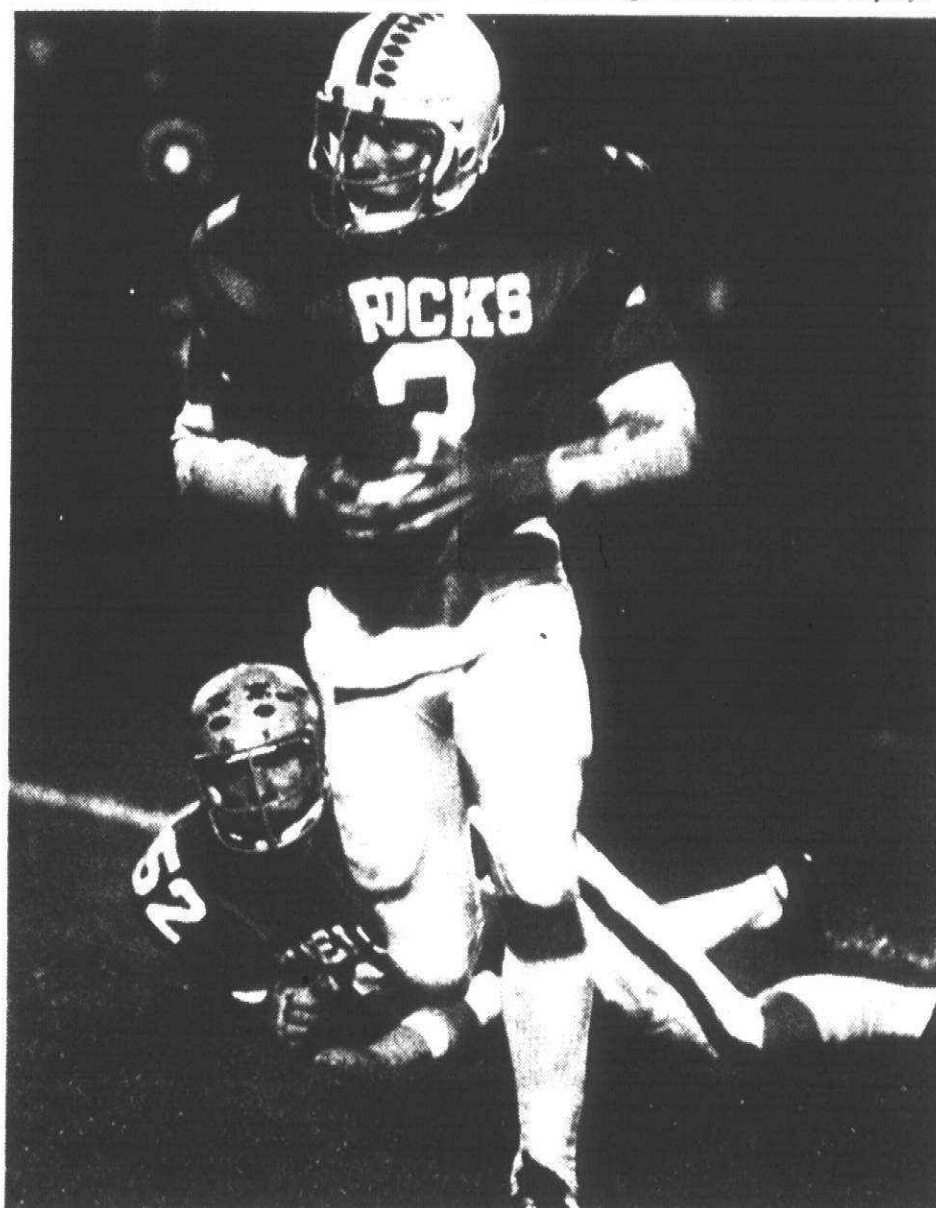

"This football season was really great. Everybody got along and no one was expecting us to win at the beginning of the season because everybody graduated. You could see us make mistakes at the beginning. People said we might be all right, but all the players knew we could be good. You could see our confidence building each week."

Hewlett also has fond memories of Craig Bell, now the head basketball coach at Plymouth Canton. He said Bell was an inspiration as his junior varsity football and basketball coach at Salem. Hewlett also talked of his appreciation for Jim Sinclair and the Plymouth-Canton Junior Athletic Association for all the help the organization gave him before he competed at the middle school level.

Although Hewlett was gracious in his thanks to all who helped him, most coaches and fans equally appreciate the excitement and memories Hewlett has given Plymouth Salem and the community.

Rich Hewlett, the versatile all-around athlete who excels both on the basketball court and football field, will have a tough decision facing him when the college recruits begin to hound him for his athletic services. (Staff photos by Art Emanuel and Gary Caskey)

Salem catches Bentley and wins in OT, 56-51

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Plymouth Salem scored the first seven points in overtime to secure a 56-51 girls basketball victory over Livonia Bentley Thursday night at the Bulldogs' gymnasium.

The action-filled victory not only extended the Rocks' unbeaten string to 16 games this season but also put a lock on the Suburban Eight League crown. The undefeated Rocks only have to beat lowly Trenton and Allen Park this week to secure the title. Both games are at home.

Bentley, which had a chance to tie the Rocks for the league lead, saw its record drop to 7-2 and its overall mark dip to 14-3.

Salem easily topped the Bulldogs earlier this season on its home court, but had to play catch up all night long before edging their rivals on the road.

"It was a struggle, wasn't it?" said a relieved Salem coach Bob Blohm. "That was a big victory because it showed we can go on the road and play. I told the girls if they kept it close they would win."

Bentley coach Tom Lang was disheartened after

Marathon game to raise funds

The Plymouth Canton boys basketball program will conduct a 24-hour basketball marathon Friday night and all day Saturday to help raise money for the varsity and junior varsity squads.

The Chiefs, under their new head coach Craig Bell, plan to split their varsity members into two squads and play basketball for 24 straight hours. There will be a running score, but a new game will start every 32 minutes.

Bell, along with junior varsity coach Pat Cunningham and assistants Dave VanWagoner and John Gravin, will officiate the entire 24 hours.

Varsity players are presently seeking pledges from people in the Plymouth-Canton community who wish to donate funds for each hour played.

All the action begins at the Canton gymnasium Friday night at 8 p.m. and lasts through Saturday at 8 p.m. Admission is free, but pledges will be taken at the door.

VanWagoner started the marathon idea. He said Central Michigan University once raised $2,500 for muscular dystrophy under this format.

Anyone interested in pledging may call Bell at Canton High School's counseling offices, 453-3100.

Big 4th period sparks Chiefs

By SCOTT ADLER

The Plymouth Canton girls varsity basketball team exploded for 31 fourth quarter points to run away from Western Six rival Waterford Mott 61-30.

It was the Chiefs' eighth straight victory in conference play and raises their record to 15-2 overall.

Canton started fast thanks to six first quarter points by Vicki Cavallaro. The Chiefs led 15-6 heading into the second stanza.

The Chiefs seemed to be losing momentum right from the start of the second period. Canton coach Mike McCauley blamed it on himself for substituting too much too soon.

A problem for the Chiefs, which has plagued them the entire season, has been the turnovers. Canton has given up the ball nearly 20 times a game during the season, which has limited their scoring and also hurts their fast break, which could be even more effective if the ball remained in their possession.

In the second quarter the Chiefs scored early and held the Mott offense pointless through the first five minutes of play.

The Canton defense slacked off, however, and Mott ran off seven points in the final three minutes.

The Canton junior varsity won their 14th game of the season against three defeats. Freshman Pearlle Cunningham, coach Pat Cunningham's sister, led the Chiefs with 14 points.

Passing game lifts grid champs

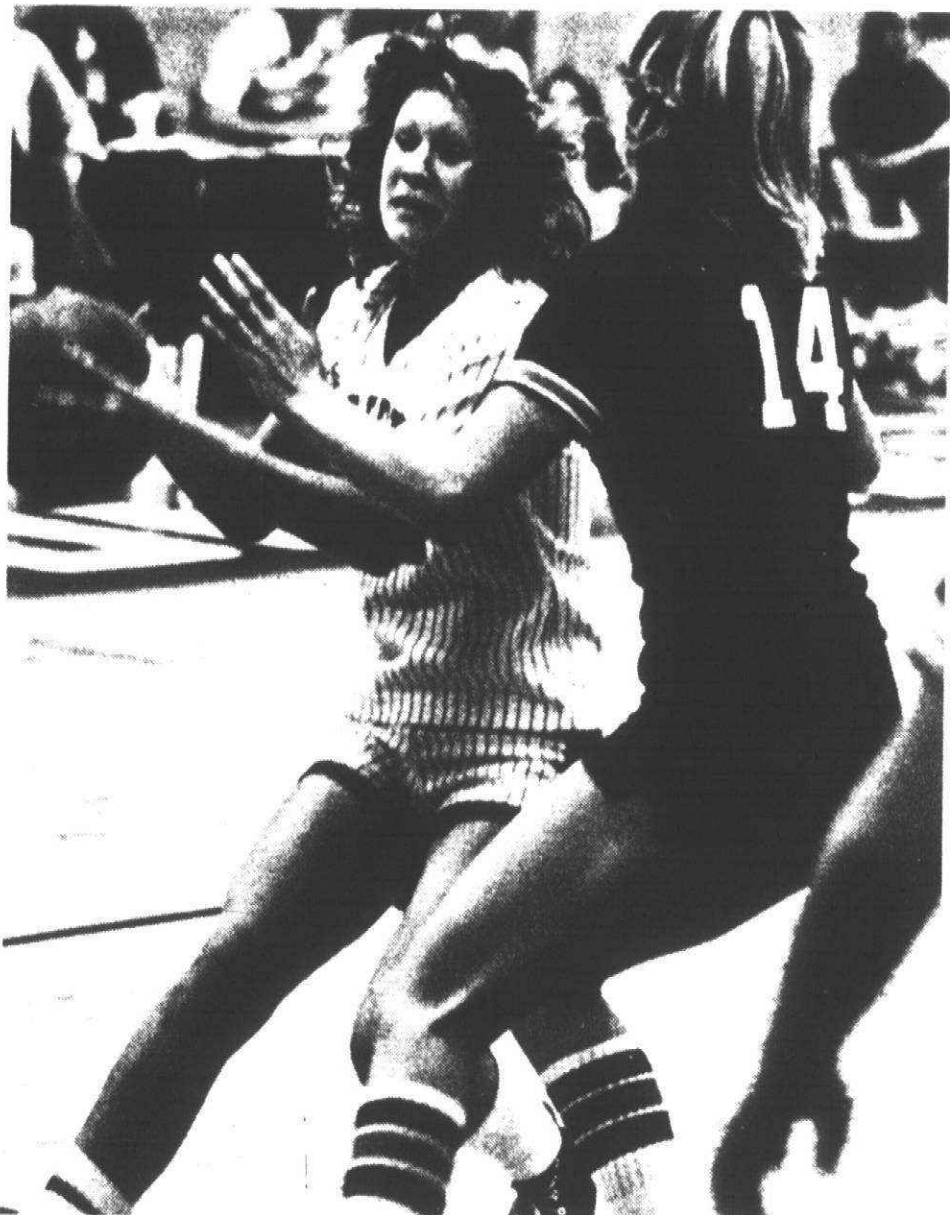

Quarterback Gary Shuzustak threw four touchdown passes and ran for a two-point conversion last Sunday to lift the Hashshashins past Lake Forest Homes, 26-6, in the Farmington Hills Men's Touch Football League's playoff championship game at East Junior High.

Coach Bruce Bird's Hashshashins finished with an 11-1 record.

Shuzustak hit Larry Obey with a pair of TD passes. Kevin McElroy and Bill Kelly each grabbed a scoring pass.

In the semifinal games, also played last Sunday at East, the Hashshashins defeated Dunleavy's Pub & Grub, 22-16, and Lake Forest Homes stopped F.R.A., 26-6.

Stevens honored

Members of the Plymouth Salem varsity golf team elected captain Craig Stevens as the team's most valuable player for the season.

Stevens led the Rocks to a Suburban Eight League title this season and an 11-2 final win-loss record.

Co-captains for next year will be Blake Lundberg and Bob Jarvis.

Sophomore Jeff Trim was voted the most improved player on the team.

Coach Bob Waters coached the Rocks to a sixth-place finish in regional competition this year failing to qualify for the state finals. Prior to the regional competition the Salem squad was ranked number one in the state.

"The team next year has a lot of potential to do very well," said Waters. "This year's team has played extremely well throughout the season and played like the true competitors they are at every match."

WSDP news

Girls basketball at the Centennial Park will be the main sporting event featured by WSDP-FM radio next week.

Chris Koepke (play-by-play) and Tim Sonnega (color commentary) will be at Plymouth Salem Tuesday and Thursday nights with live Suburban Eight League action of the Rock cagers.

Salem battles Trenton on Tuesday and Allen Park on Thursday. Both games will be broadcast live from court-side, starting at 8:10 p.m.

The following week, John Matthews and George Hamblin will be at the Plymouth Canton gym when the Chiefs battle non-league foe Farmington High on Tuesday, Nov. 21, starting at 8:10 p.m.

WSDP, the student-operated radio station of the Plymouth-Canton area, will also broadcast girls basketball state tournament action later this month.

WSDP is at 88.1 on the FM dial.

DeRenzo will also serve as the basketball coach for the middle school. The Eagles begin play Dec. 5 at Powers Junior High School.

DeRenzo received a bachelor of science degree in physical education from Grace College in Winona Lake, Ind. He played both baseball and soccer for Grace College.

SCRAFT VOLLEYBALL

Schoolcraft College finished second to Kellogg Community College last week at the state junior college volleyball tournament.

The Owlets, who lost to Kellogg twice earlier in the season, fell again in the final, 15-13, 15-7 and 15-1.

Schoolcraft defeated Lake Michigan Community College to get into the state final, 15-3, 15-11, 9-15 and 15-11.

"Peggy Moore was our outstanding hitter, Robin Dithzay served the last seven points of the second game against Lake Michigan and Karen Kowalski helped out defensively," said Schoolcraft coach Tom Teeters.

the game, but he thought both squads put on an excellent show.

"You saw a fine girls basketball game," the Bentley mentor said. "We've never been in a close game before and they (Salem) have. That made the difference. A basket here or there at the right time and we would have won — but it never came."

BENTLEY TOOK advantage of Salem's slow start, jumping to a 6-1 lead after the first three minutes of play. The Rocks didn't score a field goal the first nine times down the court.

The Bulldogs maintained the five-point advantage after the first quarter, 10-5, and continued to hold the lead until halftime, 24-16. Salem's excellent free-throw shooting (eight of 10 in the first half) kept the league leaders within striking range.

Bentley came out strong in the second half, dominating the early portion of the third quarter. The Bulldogs held a nine-point advantage, 30-21, at the 4:36 mark of the period before the Rocks began their comeback.

Krista Pray, Bentley's dominating center, had controlled the boards throughout the game. At the 3:35 mark, however, Pray fouled out of the game after committing her four misfraction of the period.

"Probably, the boards turned at that point of the game," Lang said. "But we were still in it."

"Obviously in the end, Bentley had its people on the bench," Blohm said. "Let's give them credit. That's when we went inside. Krista really played well. We didn't challenge her inside."

Salem quickly closed the gap to only four points, 34-30, going into the final quarter.

Bentley's guards, Carla Hally and Beth Burgess, picked up the offensive slack earlier in the final period and kept Bentley in control, 41-36, with 4:34 to go in the game.

But a three-point play by freshman Eileen Moore, who played perhaps her best floor game of the season, and another outside shot by left-handed sophomore Cheryl Sobkow, tied the score at 41-41.

Salem then lost Moore on fouls at 2:12 and things looked dim for the Rocks as Bentley started applying the pressure.

Junior Salem co-captain Nan Horwood responded with two quick baskets, however, and Salem took a four-point lead with 1:04 remaining. But without Moore, Salem was victimized by Bentley's pressure and committed two straight turnovers which allowed the Bulldogs to tie the game.

Junior center Patty Weidman had a chance to win the contest for Salem with three seconds left. She had a one-and-one free throw situation with the score tied at 47-47.

After two Bentley timeouts, Weidman missed the first shot and the game went into overtime.

Erin Moore, Eileen's older sister, then took advantage of Pray's absence by moving inside and scoring the first four points of the overtime. Horwood added a free throw and Weidman scored a basket on an offensive rebound to put the game out of reach.

Salem went to a 2-3 zone defense in the overtime and Bentley was unable to penetrate it.

Bentley's Burgess took scoring honors with 15 points. Hally added 11. Kim Plachta eight and Pray seven.

Salem had balanced scoring. Horwood led the way with 11 points. Erin Moore netted 10, while Weidman and senior Doris Hoelscher added nine each. Eileen Moore scored eight and Sobkow chipped in with seven.

Senior forward Diane Goodrich reinjured her knee at the 3:04 mark of the third quarter and sat out the rest of the game.

Successful golf coach credits winning tradition

The old ideology that something good only happens if you are in the right place at the right time held true in the case of Plymouth Salem golf coach Bob Waters.

After the opening of Plymouth Canton, golf programs at the Centennial Educational Park (CEP) were split to allow for one team at each school (Salem and Canton).

Prior to the split, Waters spent the 1972 season as assistant coach to John Crosson and later moved into the head coach position at Salem.

"I was very fortunate to step into an already very successful program," said Waters. "The previous coaching of John Sandmann (current athletic director at the CEP) started the fine success of the Plymouth golf program. I'm just an extension of previous coaching quality."

"A program that has already been going, and going with a great deal of success, is an easy thing to keep going."

"The program itself has grown each year with more than 100 golfers trying out for the boys team the past three years," he continued. "Traditionally, more guys go out for varsity golf than any other sport. Appointments had to be made this year in order to try out. This year, the girls team will also have a cut as the interest and the skill of the girls trying out has improved over the past three years."

The youth program started by Chris Burkhardt at Hilltop Glen golf course was given a great deal of credit by Waters for contributing to successful Plymouth golf teams.

"If it wasn't for the excellent youth program started by Chris at Hilltop, a lot of excellent young players might never have been," he said.

Sporting a personnel win-loss record of 77-14 with the boys golf teams since 1973, Waters has coached the Salem squad to a win in every possible tournament for a high school golf team, including a state championship in 1973, two outright Suburban Eight League championships and one co-championship, one regional victory and victories at both the Plymouth Best Ball Invitational and the Dearborn Invitational.

Waters has coached the Salem boys golf team to a state tournament five out of the last seven years and placed in the top 10 in all of them.

Starting a girls team in the spring of 1976, Waters has already coached the girls team to a league championship in the Central Five. The league will become the Central Six with the addition of Pinckney to the league.

Waters has also led the girls squad to a 10th place in regional competition in 1976 (the girls first year), seventh in 1977 and a third place finish in 1978 leading to a 10th place finish in the state tournament. Overall, Waters is 17-10 with the newly formed girls program.

"The upcoming two seasons will be what I'd consider a coaches dream," said the coach. "Both the girls and the boys team will have a lot of players back from previous seasons and the amount of potential is tremendous."

Waters went on to explain that the development of the girls program has been very gratifying. The first year of existence, Waters said the girls team had only one experienced player on the team and that each year the team had grown not only in size but in skill and competitive status.

Graduating from Eastern Michigan University in December of 1971 with a major in industrial arts, Waters was given the position of teaching wood working at Plymouth Salem in January of 1972 with the opening of Canton.

A native of Plymouth and a Plymouth High school graduate, Waters was director of the Plymouth

YMCA from 1968 until 1973.

"I had a lot of experience working with a wide range of youth while working with the YMCA," said Waters.

Playing in the second-doubles spot for Plymouth High school on his senior year, Waters passed up a tennis scholarship from Eastern to work as an undergraduate lab assistant in electricity and electronics.

Waters finished a masters in guidance and counseling from Eastern this past August.

Hobbies of Waters and wife Karol include photography and collecting antique cameras.

Canton splits loop meets

By M. DAVID CAMPBELL

The Plymouth Canton girls swim team sought revenge from Walled Lake Western Thursday and got it.

From the first shot of the gun until the final race, Canton was in control, as they placed first in every event except diving enroute to a 96-78 win.

"We went in with the attitude to beat Walled Lake Western," said coach Anne Massey.

In the 200-yard medley relay, the team of senior co-captain Cindi Shelansky, Bronwyn Firtzgerald, Mary Reardon, and Kim Massey placed first with a time of 2:11.8. Freshman Lisa Forsythe placed first in the 200-yard freestyle in 2:16.8. Massey took another first in the 200-IM with a 2:29.2.

Forsythe also took first in the 100-yard butterfly, with a 1:08.8. Missy McMurray placed first in the 100-yard freestyle. Reardon took the 500-yard freestyle in 6:30.7. Shelansky placed first in the 100-yard back, clocking 1:10.0.

Massey, for the fourth time this season, broke her own record in the 100-yard breaststroke. This time she shaved her time to a measly 1:17.4. The 400-yard freestyle really team of McMurray, Jenny North, Debbie Dickinson, and Forsythe placed first in 4:24.6.

CANTON-NORTHVILLE

How do you compete against a team that has six AAU swimmers on it?

That's how powerful the Northville Mustangs are. The Mustangs allowed the Chiefs one first place as Canton lost the meet, 58-25.

Canton's lone first place came from diver Chris Winnerberg with 158.8

points. The 400-yard freestyle team of Lisa Forsythe, Kim Massey, Missy McMurray and Jenny North placed second in 4:21.0.

Forsythe took second place in the 200-yard freestyle in 2:11.9. Massey took second in the 200-IM, with a 2:27.1. Forsythe took another second in the 500-yard freestyle, in 5:51.0.

RU beats GC East

REDFORD UNION—GC EAST

Redford Union claimed at least a share of the Northwest Suburban League championship with a 59-43 girls' basketball win last week over Garden City East.

The victory was the 12th in a row for the Panthers.

RU scurried out to a 14-4 advantage after the first quarter, 30-19 at the intermission and 47-26 after three periods.

Nancy Lawson notched 16 points for the victors. Lori Pastula added 14. Terry Gonda 13 and Micki McLain and Betty Owens eight apiece.

Sharon Raftery scored 18 points for East and teammate Cathy Arseneault added nine.

RU used a full-court, man-to-man defense up to the middle of the third quarter to pull away from East. However, RU did foul quite a bit.

East players canned only 12 field goals, but they went 19-35 from the free-throw line. Raftery made 10 of 13 from the charity stripe.

RU coach Ken Dersey said he was especially pleased with the play of sophomore forward Lori Pastula.

"She shot 45 per cent from the floor and had 17 rebounds. She's been a steady performer since I moved her up to the varsity."

RU's overall record was 2-3 when Pastula was promoted. The Panthers haven't lost since.

East edged RU in the JV contest, 42-41.

Doc's Corner

Hewlett can handle public pressure

Rick Hewlett is more than just an athlete.

While most sports fans, including the Good Doctor, have cherished every instinctive move this young phenom has made, both on the gridiron and the basketball court, the Plymouth Salem senior is also quite a stable young man who should have no problem handling the pressures of major college athletics no matter where he decides to go to school.

While he admits that the pressure of question after question concerning his college career has bothered him, it's apparent he's able to handle each situation just as he does when he runs the wishbone option.

In fact, when I was questioning him about such pressures during an interview at a local restaurant, Hewlett was approached by a fan who asked him the same question he faces every day: "What school are you going to?"

I can see where the constant pressure must not only bother him, it must be a nuisance, as well, especially in public places.

I'm sure that Hewlett loves the attention, as any high student would, and yet it's apparent that being in the public eye isn't as agreeable to him as it might be with other students his age.

One such pressure which I'm sure gets on his nerves is the constant assumption that Hewlett will attend college 15 miles west of Plymouth, competing for the Maize and Blue of Michigan.

The Wolverines have been "winning-and-dining" Hewlett for two years now. Former Plymouth High School graduate Rob Thornbladh, now a U-M assistant, has been hounding him ever since this season began.

Admittedly, Michigan is in the running as one of the school's Hewlett would like to attend. After all, with the graduation of record-setting quarterback Rick Leach, the Wolverines are looking for another four-year option quarterback.

Hewlett fits that Bo Schembechler mode of a quarterback and definitely could produce in the Wolverine system.

The Salem senior wants to make it clear, however, that he has not made any decision about next year. His name is not on that dotted Maize and Blue line like some people think.

You see, while Hewlett's main goal is to play professional football some day, the 6-1, 190-pounder also happens to have a love for basketball which may influence his choice of a college.

He would make some major college a good point-guard in the future.

Besides, the real heavy recruiting hasn't even started yet. It usually doesn't start until after the football season or midway into the basketball year.

Michigan and Alabama now have the inside track, simply because both showed the most interest during the football season.

But there are plenty of other schools who are also interested in Hewlett's services, both for football and basketball. And soon, as they join the big chase for this marvelous athlete, the guessing game will be even greater for those fans who wonder where Hewlett will compete.

Hewlett gets plenty of visits to different colleges around the country as part of the recruiting game. And you can bet a decision won't be made until he takes every trip.

In the meantime, the pressure will continue, and countless questions will be asked. But Hewlett will handle it in stride and in a first-class manner, because he's a smart kid with a lot of poise.

He knows that playing football for Michigan would be a dream come true for any athlete, but he also knows there are plenty of other colleges which could be more attractive and rewarding than the school in Ann Arbor.

That's a decision everyone will be waiting for—especially Bo.

Poet is 'recycling Plymouth'

Resale shop offers Christmas treasures

By BETTY MASSON

What do a poet and a painter have to do with your Christmas shopping list? Well, they might be able to help if you find that inflation is snarling up the Christmas purse-strings.

The poet is Betty Nelson and the painter is Jessie Hudson, both of Plymouth.

Mrs. Nelson is owner and operator of Hidden Treasures, one of the few furniture and china (among other things) resale shops in this area. Ms. Hudson is a retired Plymouth art teacher, who, along with Mrs. Nelson's daughter, Mary Ann, helps out in the shop, located at 728 S. Main, Plymouth.

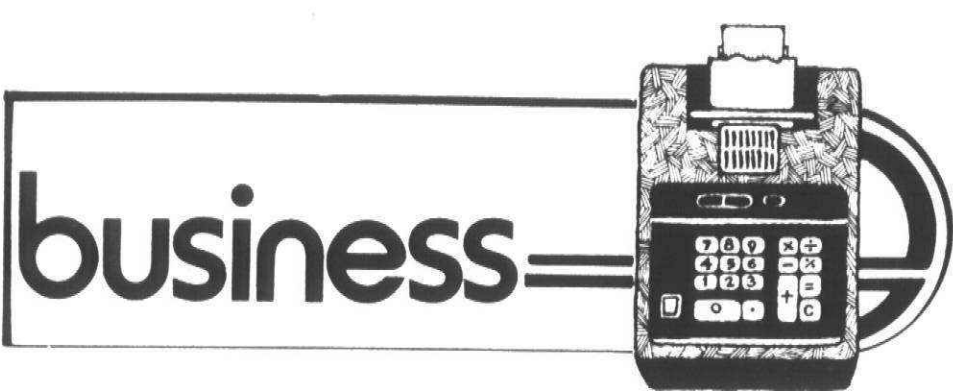

Mrs. Nelson reports that she began getting visits from grandmothers with six grandchildren looking for Christmas toys about two weeks ago. She expects to get a fresh supply of toys this month, as parents begin to go through toy boxes, making room for the new.

FOR CHRISTMAS shoppers, Mrs. Nelson recommends visiting antique shops.

"If you have someone who collects something, you can get them a great present in an antique shop and save money," she said. "And your thoughtfulness will be really appreciated." But this takes time, and it is well to shop early.

Mrs. Nelson has a few antiques in stock, an antique doll bed, for instance, but her primary job, she says, is "recycling Plymouth."

For instance, one customer recently brought in some bisque figures she was tired of. A possible buyer arrived on the scene. But first she had to dispose of some pictures. The lady with the figures loved the pictures, bought them, and the lady with the pictures got the bisques.

This happens often, said Mrs. Nelson, who began working for Gloria Reinhold a little more than a year ago at Hidden Treasures, which was then located on Penniman.

Mrs. Reinhold decided to retire, and in June, Mrs. Nelson bought her out, and the "fun job" became a full-time business.

Previously, Mrs. Nelson had taken creative writing workshops at Schoolcraft College, had written a children's book, "What Do You Do When You Visit a Zoo?", had helped publish it and found Alura Press.

Although she has little time to spare now, she still writes poetry for Alura's quarterly literary review and still belongs to the Livonia Writers' Workshop.

SHE DOES A LOT of bookkeeping these days. Sales price for articles are determined by Mrs. Nelson and her staff in consultation with the consignors. For antiques, she prefers to call in a professional appraiser.

If the consignor is not happy with the price, he is under no obligation to sell. If the price is mutually satisfactory, the consignor gets a percentage of the selling price for the items.

There are provisions for reducing prices if the items do not sell within a specified time.

At the moment, Mrs. Nelson is expecting to start receiving items from people cleaning up and out for Christmas.

Year-round she receives goods from people who are moving. A good source of supply for treasures is from older couples who are moving into smaller quarters. At the present time, the store is helping dispose of the goods of one couple who is moving from a nine-room house to a mobile home.

"We're at item 400 and still counting," said Mrs. Nelson. But the count has come to a halt for the moment. The owners have gone to Florida for a rest.

ITEMS SOLD include furniture (large items are stored in a warehouse in the back), silver, china, glassware, toys, sporting goods, records, drapes and bedspreads, lamps and appliances, but not clothing.

Any day now, they are expecting to get an old copper Detroit street lamp, and recently they sold a old Mobil Oil sign, complete with gargoyle, to a collector from Houston, Texas. Mrs. Nelson is still wondering how he got it on the plane.

The store is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays. On Fridays, it is open until 8 p.m.

Great Scott not closing

It's business as usual at the 10 area Great Scott supermarkets. That's the word from William McMasters, a public relations man speaking for money-losing Allied Supermarkets, Inc., owner of the chain that recently filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws.

According to McMasters, "The Great Scott shopper will see no change in the supply of food, quality of food prices or in the attitude of employees." He added that Allied has no plans to close any of its 58 Michigan stores. 56 outstate stores or its large Livonia distribution manufacturing-office complex.

"The court has assured the Great Scott customer that the store has the capability to continue business as usual," said McMasters.

He pointed out that Allied did not file for bankruptcy, which he says usually involves the liquidation of stock, but for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11, which involves the reorganization of the Allied corporation.

"There was confusion in previous stores because under federal law Chapter 11 is filed in the bankruptcy court," said McMasters.

Allied has been losing money since the 1960s, partly because of a money-losing chain of K-Mart food stores that are now defunct, and the Livonia warehouse that was built in anticipation of large volume increases.

The next step, according to McMasters, is for Allied to begin the reorganization of its corporation and to draw up new credit terms by which to pay its 11,000 creditors.

Market Watch

By JOHN E. VERNIER

The stock market has reacted violently to the anti-inflation and support-of-the-dollar measures announced by the White House. The initial reaction was on the plus side to the tune of 35 points in the Dow Jones Industrial Average.

There have been second thoughts, however, as the impact of the announcement has been digested, and the market has since given up a good part of the gain.

The principle measure taken — an increase in the Federal Reserve discount rate to the highest in history, 9 1/2 per cent — can be construed only as a negative as far as the domestic economy is concerned.

The cost will increase considerably for all forms of commercial and consumer loans. It may make some totally prohibitive.

The building industry particularly will be greatly affected by the increased cost of borrowing. Mortgage rates were already at a devastating level. Now, they must slip even higher.

SOMETHING HAD to be done, however, and the Administration didn't have many choices. It had received a discouragingly negative response to its plea for voluntary restraint. The dollar's weakness increased at an alarming rate following Mr. Carter's nationwide appeal for cooperation, and gold skyrocketed to new all-time highs.

It was clearly evident that foreign bankers were not in the least impressed with the response to the President's call for cooperation.

More drastic action was needed. This is what provoked the President to act quickly.

The question now, of course, is what will the future trend of interest rates be?

This will depend upon whether or not the increase in interest rates reduces the inflation rate and stops the run on the dollar. If immediate progress is evident in these two quarters, then chances are that the rate is at or near a peak, and that a reduction in rates could be the next trend.

If the increase does not stop the two problems, however, rates could go even higher.

HIGH INTEREST rates alone cannot solve the problem, however. The whole mess relates to the fact that the United States is buying more foreign products (primarily oil) than we are selling abroad. We are running a high deficit in our balance of payments.

Eventually, steps must be taken to correct this imbalance. The solution lies more in the hands of the Congress than it does in the hands of the White House.

Unless Mr. Carter calls Congress back to an emergency session, nothing will happen until after the first of next year.

In the meantime, there is little doubt that the stock market will continue to be turbulent. It is an extremely sensitive barometer, and it is quick to reflect the hopes and fears of the investment community.

During this period of uncertainty it might be wise to recognize that common stocks generally represent some pretty solid values. The price-earnings ratios of most stocks are at historically low levels, and many yields are more than generous.

The recognition of a problem is a giant step toward its solution. Hopefully this will be the case in our current situation.

Briefs

The Eastern Michigan chapter of the Associated Builders and Contractors, Inc., has announced the opening of a "merit shop" apprenticeship program. Fifteen trades have received approval and have been registered with the Department of Labor.

They are bricklayer, carpenter, cement mason, electrician, iron worker, operating engineer (mechanic), operating engineer (grade and paving), operating engineer (plant equipment), operating engineer (universal equipment), painter, pipefitter, plasterer, plumber-pipefitter, sheet metal worker and glazier-glass worker.

Application is open to all men and women, 18 or older. Application must be made in person, Monday through Friday, between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. at 2901 Auburn Road, Auburn Heights.

Hadley's, a Livonia based women's fashion chain, recently took an important step in its marketing program with the opening of a 13th store in the Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi.

Until this, all Hadley's stores were located in neighborhood centers. President Fred Bernstein said that at Hadley's current stage of growth the chain has become more compatible with the shopping hours and customer mix of the larger, regional malls.

Robinson founded Perry Drug Stores in 1957 as a one-store venture and it has now grown to a chain of nearly 60 outlets. His designation to receive the Eleanor Roosevelt award "recognizes his many years of continuing concern for Israel's economic development and his years of community leadership to Michigan and the United States."

Merchants gear for returnable bottle problems

The following article was written by by Charles Ashcraft and officials of the Michigan Food Dealers Association, of which Ashcraft is president.

Michigan's grocery stores and supermarkets are gearing up for a new era on Dec. 3, when Michigan's new mandatory deposit law takes effect.

The new law, which was approved by Michigan voters in November, 1976, requires retailers to collect a deposit of at least 10 cents on every can or bottle containing beer or soft drinks.

The only exception is the certified container which is refillable and is used by more than one brewery or soft drink manufacturer.

Officials of the Michigan Food Dealers

Assoc., the state's largest food industry trade association, are concerned that the average customer is unaware of the impending change.

Many consumers have forgotten that they voted two years ago for a bill that will force them to pay at least a 10 cent deposit on every can or bottle.

The association has spent millions of dollars revamping their stores to accommodate an all-deposit system. Most of the additional cost comes in the form of expanded storage facilities and alterations to existing check-out stations or even installation of special stations to accommodate customers returning bottles or cans.

A few retailers have even invested substantial sums of money in installing mechanical redemption stations.

But over time, retailers expect the greatest cost impact to come from the additional labor required to accept, sort and prepare returnable containers for shipment back to wholesalers and distributors.

HOW DOES THE retailer get paid for his service? Under a deposit system, the retailer pays the deposit to the distributor or wholesaler, who may in turn pay the brewery or soft drink manufacturer.

Customers may experience a few temporary inconveniences at the outset, due to the lack of a "phase-in" period (as in the case of the phosphate ban).

Essentially, on Dec. 3 we will be selling beverages in non-returnable containers and be on an all deposit system.

This means that some retailers may be short of product just prior to Dec. 3 since they must dispose of all non-returnables. However, we expect to begin seeing some new containers appear on grocer's shelves.

In addition to the dollars involved in getting ready for D-Day, retailers have other concerns, namely, security and sanitation.

With Michigan's deposit the highest in the nation, cans and bottles will become a valuable commodity and a temptation to the unscrupulous.

So, retailers will be instituting new security procedures to guard against shrinkage and double redemption.

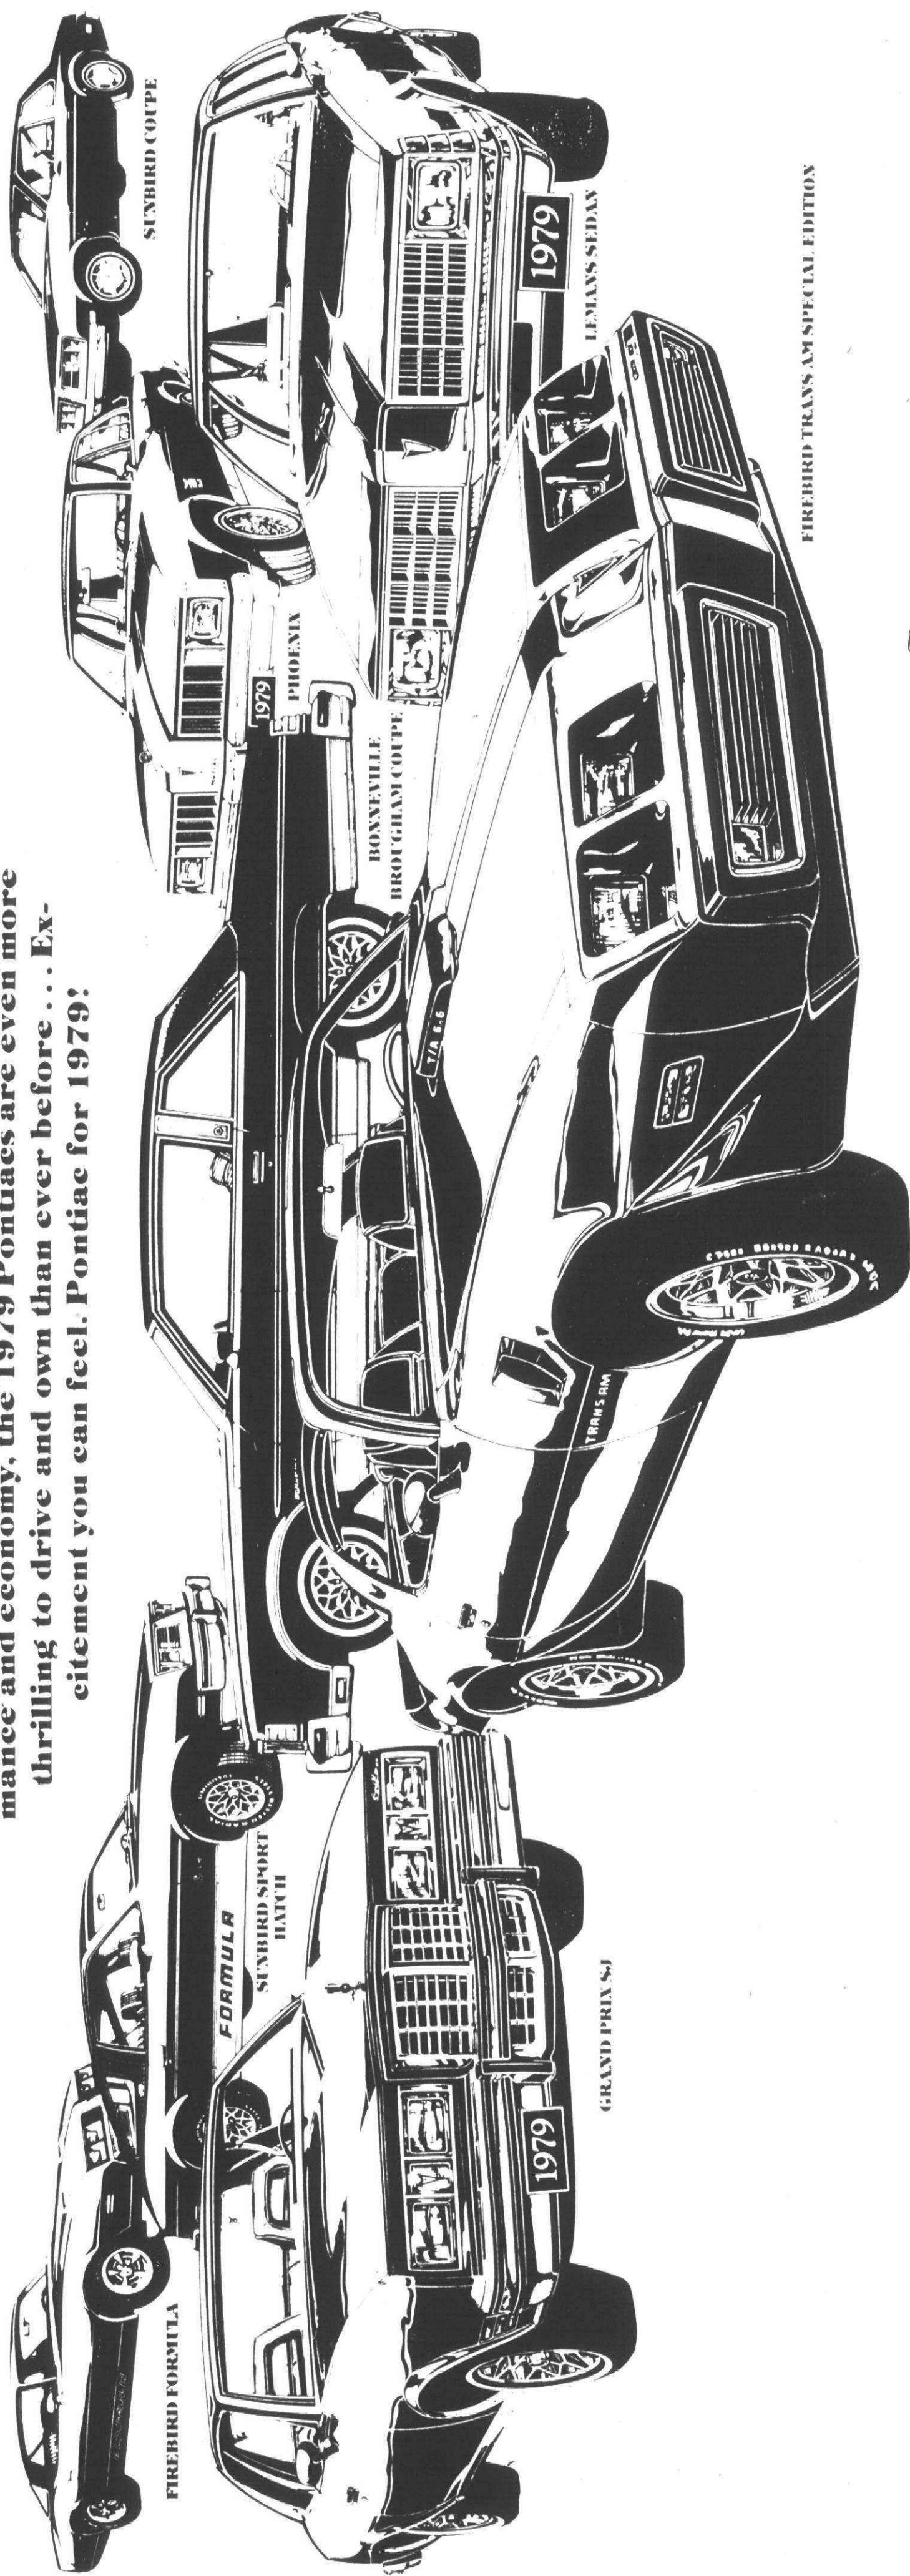

BY LAW, ALL new containers will be marked with a legend, Michigan Refund 10 Cents, and this will come as a shock to some people who have been hoarding cans and bottles in hopes of making a killing on returns.

By law, retailers must keep their stores in a clean and sanitary condition. This requirement is made more difficult in an all-deposit system because of the volume of containers stored on the premises and the residue of beverage left in those containers.

Customers should help retailers maintain sanitation by rinsing out cans and bottles before returning them. Other ways customers can help are returning cans and bottles on each shopping trip, rather than allowing them to pile up and returning them in their original cartons where practical.

'Horseman' takes new approach to classic western

These have been lean years for westerns, as film makers search for a solution to the difficult problem of presenting the traditional motifs of the western (lawmen vs. outlaws, ranchers vs. homesteaders) in ways that will be acceptable to sophisticated, contemporary audiences.

Now we have two western movies appearing within the same month. "Goin' South" used the bare-dirt comic approach. It exploited the humorous potential of grubby work, gross people and survival through a kind of rascally shrewdness.

On the heels, or hoofs, of "Goin' South" is "Comes a Horseman" (PG), with a totally different approach, one based on romanticized realism.

The film was written by Dennis Lynton Clark who was born and raised on a ranch in Montana. His script emphasizes the awesome and terrifying beauty of the land that demands so many sacrifices from those who love it.

SET IN MONTANA in 1945 (although most of the location shooting was done in Colorado), "Comes a Horseman" is the story of small ranchers struggling to hang onto their land against the pressures of cattle barons and oil companies.

James Caan is a returning World War II veteran who buys a piece of high valley grazing land and is immediately beset by hard times. He throws in his lot with neighboring rancher Jane Fonda and her grizzled ranch hand Dodger (Richard Farnsworth).

From one season to the next, they are able to round up just enough cattle to make the mortgage payment and stave off a takeover by power-mad cattle baron Jason Robards, who would like to own the whole valley.

Jane Fonda etches another remarkable characterization as Ella Connors, a proud and fiercely independent rancher. She can't smile, can't be tender, can't give an inch because the struggle for survival is too intense to permit such luxuries.

Caan manages the delicate feat of projecting sincere and likeable male strength without sexist dominance. The most surprising portrayal though comes from Richard Farnsworth who plays Dodger. Farnsworth has been a Hollywood stuntman for most of his life. He has hardly ever recited more than a line of dialogue.

THERE IS AN uncanny naturalness about him. He looks like one of those weathered, salt-of-the-earth people from an Andrew Wyeth painting. His voice, inflections, movements are just right. It's the kind of honesty that post-war Italian directors achieved when they used non-actors for major roles.

All this is brought together by Gordon Willis' photography which gives impressive visual impact to Clark's screenplay. It is the great strength in a film that is not without its problems.

One of these is the obscure nature of Ewing, the cattle baron played by Jason Robards. Ewing is vaguely defined and enigmatic. We are unprepared and unable to accept his actions at the film's end.

Another problem is the ending itself which condescends to the shoot-em-up mentality. It's an unnecessary finale in a film that has already made its point, eloquently.

Sancerre: Robust images as clear as premier vin blanc

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

SANCERRE, FRANCE—Some people bring back French perfumes and expensive silks from Europe. We import memories, like the moment when Jeanine Carroi stood outside the ancient French city of Sancerre and said: "C'est ma pere (It is my father)."

Her father, Monsieur Carroi, looked as gnarled and sturdy as grape stalks as he trudged up and down the vineyard with a small cigar burning between his teeth, a black beret shading the sun from his head and a metal container of picked grapes strapped to his back.

For him, it was just another Thursday morning in the grape fields, spread in a patchwork of muted color near the Loire River. But for us, it was a travel souvenir to treasure for a lifetime.

Experiences like that are never really an accident. They happen because you are ready to grasp the opportunity when you travel.

We met Jeanine when we were looking for a viewpoint marked on the city map. She was walking into a courtyard under a sign that read perception.

Perception does not mean viewpoint in French, as Jeanine explained in fluent French and fractured English, but "there is a nice look you come I show you."

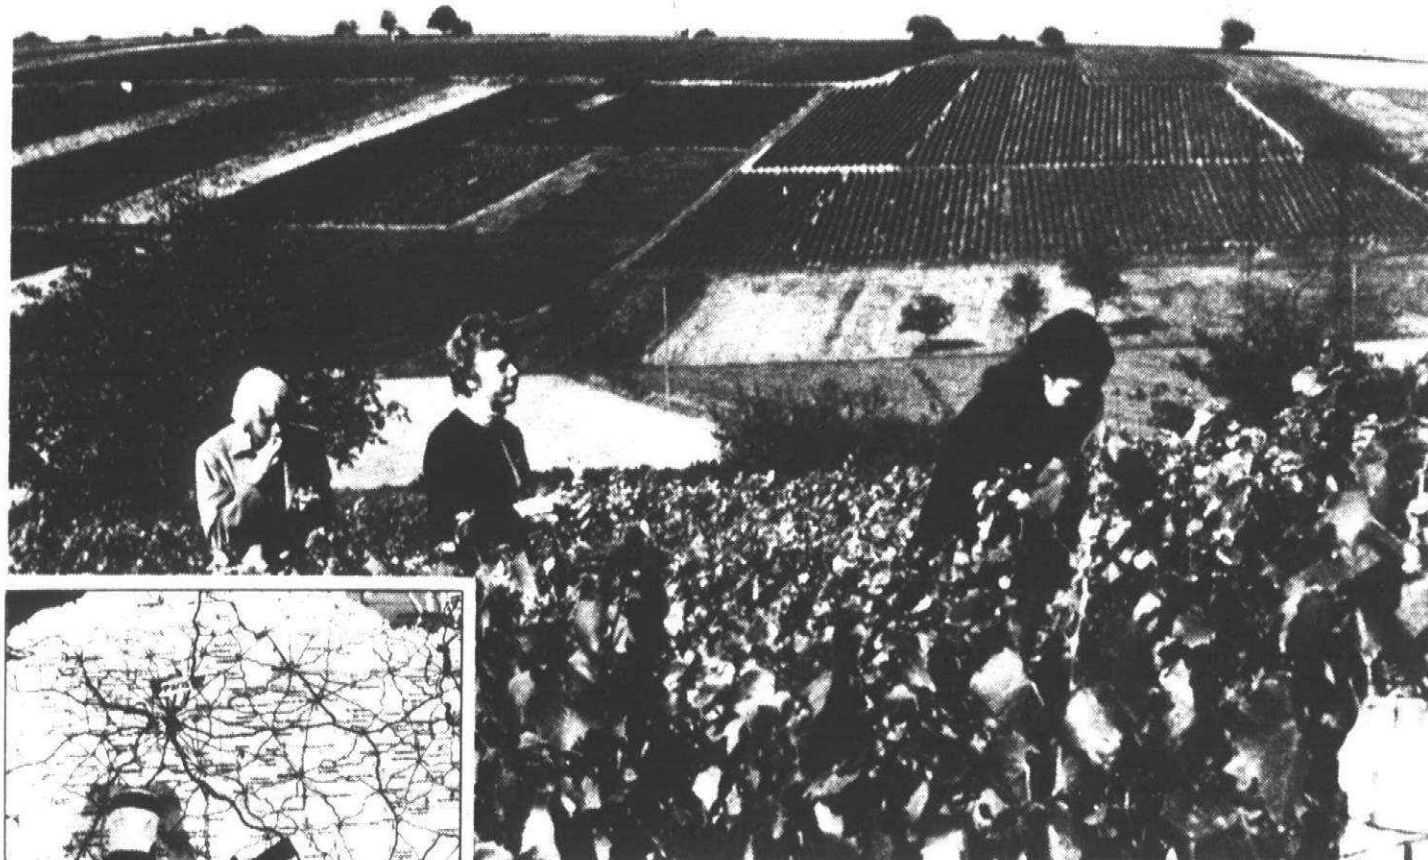

She put her finger to her lip to shush us as we followed her up the stairs of the Hotel de Ville, that combination city hall and mayor's house marked, as in every French town, by a tricolor flag. The view from the city council chambers was superb.

We did not understand her next question. She persisted. Soon we were hurtling down the hill in her Citroen to where red tractors spot the vineyards, each carrying loads of grapes picked carefully by hand.

Jeanine is a school teacher. The schools in Sancerre are open Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturday mornings, but closed Thursdays, so she drove us down the hill and parked beside a field of grape vines where men were working in the sun.

"C'est ma pere," Jeanine said. Only then did we understand that this was her father's vineyard. The question she had asked was: "Have you seen them picking the grapes?"

If you are a traveller who prefers palaces to people, you might not value a morning spent in a harvesting vineyard with a young schoolteacher, a winemaker and several Spanish road to the Sauvignon grapes used in the white wine, and through the fields of muscat table grapes which Jeanine piled in our arms to sweeten our journey.

Jeanine's mother greeted us in the small group of buildings where the Carroi family lives in the village of St. Satur, at the foot of the road leading up the hill to Sancerre.

Honeysuckle grew near the caves, which were not really caves at all but stone and stucco buildings where the white grapes were pushed through a hole in the floor for immediate grinding and the red grapes were left to sit for a few days in their own juice.

It was a small vineyard but there were huge wooden barrels against one wall, concrete containers against the opposite wall and a plastic vat in the middle of the room.

"All the same for making wine, the old way and the new way," Jeanine said as she lead us across the hard-earth yard to the building where empty bottles were piled outside for re-use and full bottles were piled inside for drinking.

We bought three half-bottles of the white wine with the tingle-against-the-tongue flavor that only comes when wine is fresh, and a large bottle of the fruity red.

The wine of Sancerre is marketed cooperatively under the single name Sancerre, but each vigneron, like Carroi, adds his name on his own label.

As we drove away from Sancerre, across the Loire towards Never, Chalon and the Alps, we carried with us the wine, a back seat full of muscat grapes and a gift that has no name. Jeanine has given us a morning of her life among the new grapes, in the shadow of an ancient town, a souvenir of greater value than French silks, or French perfume or cognac bought at a duty-free store in Paris.

Sancerre Adventure was Jeanine's gift and our own, because adventure is never an accident. It happens because you make it happen when you travel.

Carroi tamped grapes into the barrel with a wooden mallet. He did not smile at jokes about people who stomp grapes with their feet.

TRAVEL LOG of Iris Jones

It's not what you wear

BETWEEN PLANES—Travel sometimes leaves you with snapshot impressions that later affect your perception of world news. Such impressions need not be recorded on film; they quickly may be seen and filed in your mind.

I have shared some impressions of Moslem women with friends here since the fighting between Moslem leaders and the Shah of Iran escalated this month.

Many travelers, such as Bill and Mary Schoen of Birmingham, comment on the veiled Moslem women they have seen while traveling through Morocco.

Most of us interpret their garb as repressive. It is hard to imagine that a woman can be in any way contemporary when she wears a long black robe, and a veil that hangs to the knees, with only a cardboard visor opening for the eyes.

We may conjure up this image, and all that it implies to us, when we hear of the conflict between the Shah's plans to modernize Iran and the attempts by the Moslem community to retain traditionalism.

I cannot tell you what the veiled Moslem costume means to women in the Middle East, but I can share some impressions that contradict the idea that all veiled Moslem women are sealed into a tiny insular view of the world.

THE MENTAL snapshot of mine I like best is that of the contemporary lobby of Bombay's Taj Mahal Hotel. The old hotel goes back more than half a century, but the new International Hotel addition is as contemporary as it is decoratively Indian.

The lobby teams with men and women in both traditional costumes and western dress: business suits, saris, dhotis, dresses, slacks, calans, African robes. Most of the dress is western.

On a hot September afternoon, I saw a memorable sight across that lobby: two Moslem women, completely robed and veiled in black, sitting on a circular settee with their heads together. They were conversing as friends do anywhere.

That may not seem strange until you consider that Indian Moslems are seldom so robed. These two women probably were from a Middle Eastern country thousands of miles away.

It was hard for me to fit their dress, and my perception of it, into the concept of women who were internationally travelled enough to be thousands of miles from home, and staying in a contemporary Indian hotel.

I knew then, as I now know, that this puzzlement reflected my own ignorance about the world. I often discover that my expectations of other peoples are antiquated, insular and unrealistic.

I shared this memory recently with Bob Goren of Birmingham, who had his own mental snapshot. He was aboard a plane somewhere in the Middle East when a Moslem woman, robed and veiled in black, boarded the airplane, and just as quickly disappeared into the ladies room. In a few moments, she emerged wearing blue jeans and a blouse.

Priscilla Jackson, formerly of Oakland county, but now traveling regularly between Florida, Vermont and a Detroit apartment, added one final picture to the mental slide show we shared.

She told us of a woman who had lived for several years in an Arab country. After a few years, she began wearing the veiled dress because it was cool, it kept the sand out of her eyes, and she could dress as sloppily as she pleased underneath the gauze costume. "It isn't nearly as repressive as you think," she said. "In some ways, it's quite freeing."

Such small sights are hardly insights into world affairs. But in a small way, they help travelers see a slightly different facet of a world situation than was seen before.

BITS AND PIECES: There is an intriguing travel idea in the mail that I would like to share. If you are interested in European skiing, you might want to send for a brochure called the Alpine Experience, put out by Europe on Skis, Inc., 1414 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019. Or you can telephone them at 212-838-1550.

The offer is an air and land package for skiers, and guarantees rates in the brochure for anyone booking before Nov. 30.

I cannot recommend a travel experience I haven't pursued, but anyone who guarantees rates in the face of the fluctuating dollar is worth exploring.

A COLD Spanish soup was described in this column several weeks ago. I listed it as the culprit in the only case of turista, or travelers diarrhea, I ever suffered. I assumed the soup was made of milk.

Southfield reader Pat Lane has sent me the authentic information on what turns out to be Cordoban Gazpacho Blanco, and it doesn't have a drop of milk in it.

"It does look like milk but it is made of olive oil, vinegar, water, garlic and almonds," Mrs. Lane said. "My friends have found it delicious, though none have guessed the ingredients."

This is a perfect example of how a traveler (me) can blame an upset stomach on a perfectly harmless set of ingredients just because it is eaten in a foreign country.

Ghana wants $$ and tourists

If the annual tourist volume in Ghana is to increase from the current 55,000 to more than 300,000 by 1990, facilities there will have to be improved and increased.

So says a study by the government in Ghana and developed by a Danish study group under a Danish government grant.

To make the necessary improvements, the government there is looking to encourage foreign investments in hotels and other properties with special tax exemptions on income and employment, exemptions on import duties, deferral of registration fees, and authority to repatriate a large percentage of after-tax profit.

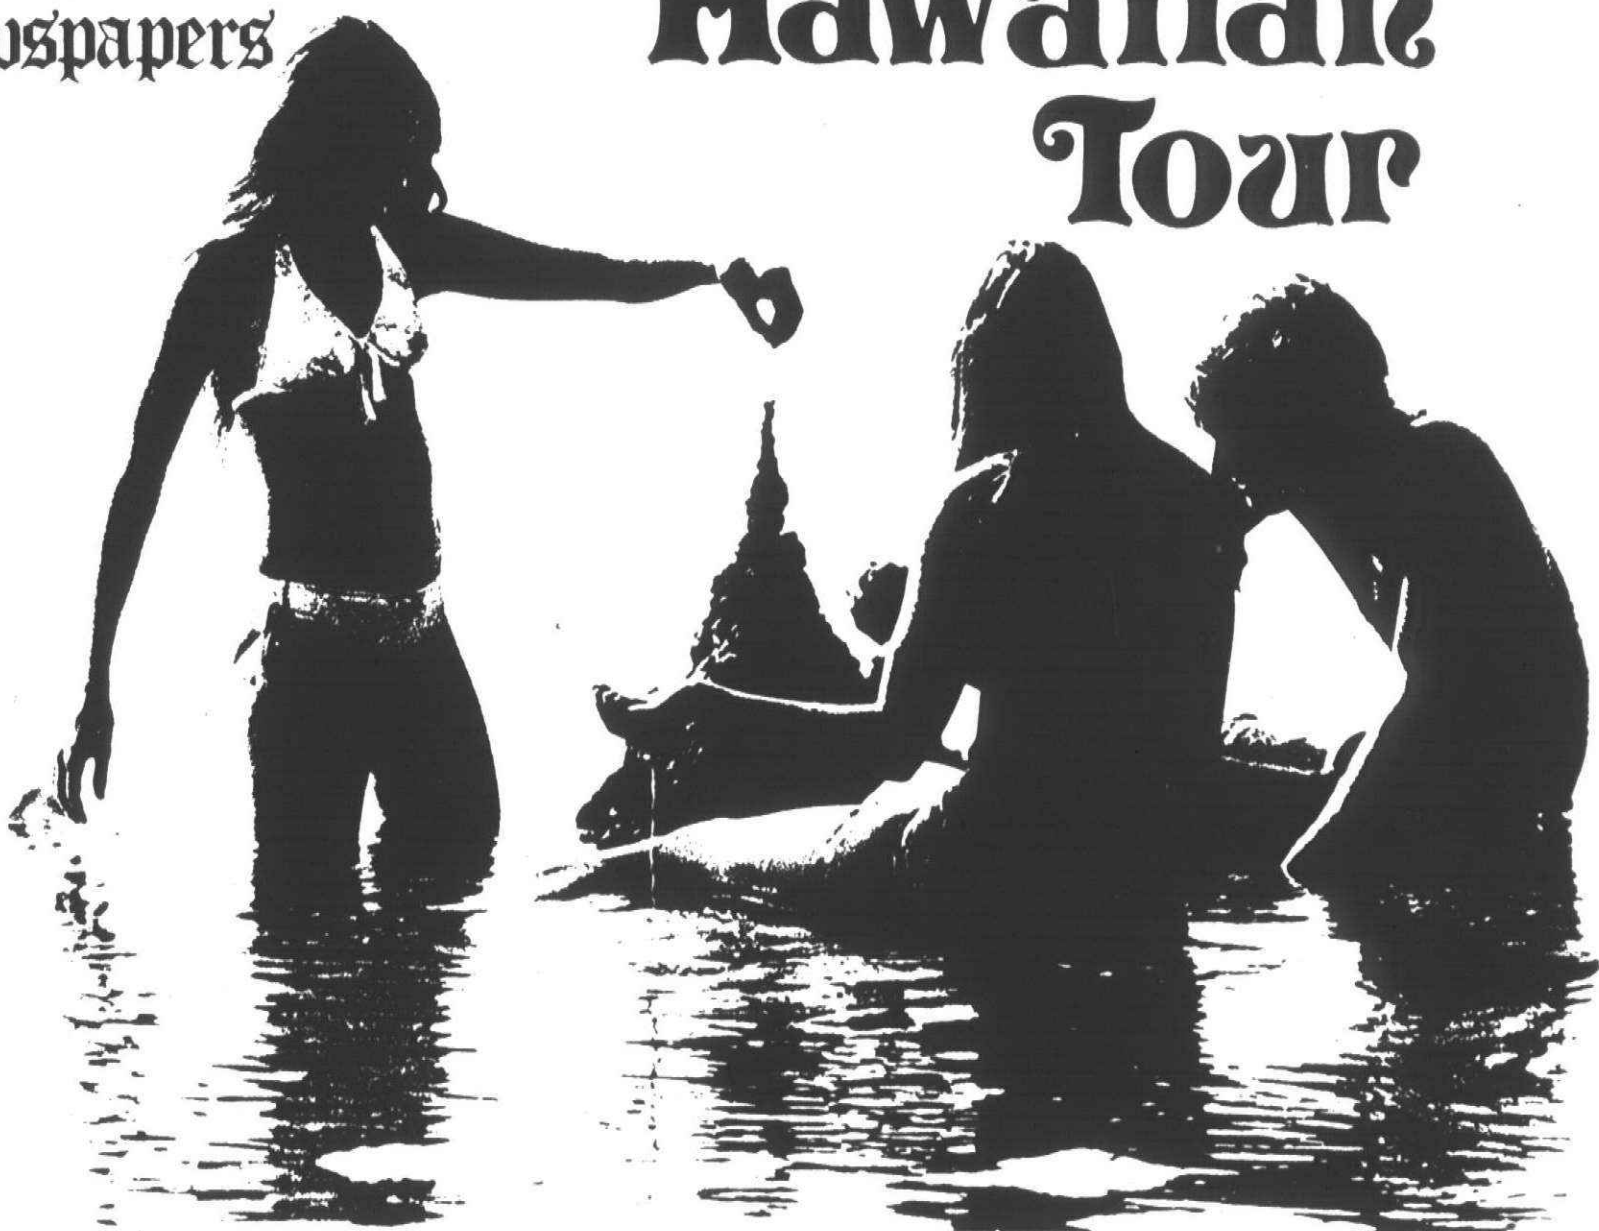

The program suggests that improvements are needed in the areas of beach resort complexes, with provisions for golf, tennis, horseback riding and other activities; lodges in game parks; first-class hotels with meeting facilities for business groups; hotels in the western region, linked to a new international airport at Takoradi; motel-like rest houses; and multiple price level accommodations for various market segments.

Government and tourist industry planners forecast a requirement for an expenditure of about $93 million for the period ending 1990. Of that amount, about $26 million will be the requirement for private investment from foreign and local sources, the balance coming from government. Additionally, foreign involvement in hotel management and as lessees of government-owned hotels is projected.

The study indicates a need to provide means for visitors to see the Ghanaian festivals and to meet the country's people outside of the tourist facilities.

W.W. EDGAR

If the present trend continues, bowling's Wonderland Classic may establish a record by having every member of the loop break the 700 barrier at one time or another.

Scarcely a week goes by when at least one member reaches the coveted goal. Several bowlers boast more than one series of the lucky seven and the two zeroes.

During the past week, Bob Cooker joined the ranks when he put together games of 227, 253 and 256 for 736 to pace the entire loop. But a good share of the spotlight focused on Ed Austreng, who rolled counts of 246, 267 and 217 for 730. It was the third time since the season opened that he has broken the barrier.

In the ladies section, Jean Zereld took the top prize with consistent games of 200, 205 and 206 for 611.

EVEN THOUGH Marge Kropacek was unable to bowl Wednesday night in the ladies Major League at Crown Lanes, her team came through with flying colors.

The team rolled a 2,954, highest series of the night, and Eleanor "Cookie" Stroud, a member of the team, outrolled all other league members with a 254 in 656. Aleta Rzepecki was next in line with a 254 in 626.

THE BUCKS AND DOES league produced the highest count of the week at Woodland Lanes when Bob Lee fashioned a 688 on games of 222, 265 and 201. The other high counts came in the Ford LTD league, where Mel Alberti rolled a 255 in 670. John Samonek had a 667 and Jim Parrar had a 234 in 637.

Bob Crider contributed to the oddities of the week with a Dutch 200.

JIM O'HARA also contributed an oddity when he rolled an all spare game of 200 at Mayflower Lanes. Meanwhile three new members were admitted to the split conversion club when Lenore Trembley toppled the 5-8-10. Audrey Bolstrum erased the 2-10 and Alice Valeri swept off the 6-7.

In scoring competition, Delores

Chebuea posted a 600 on games of 182, 217 and 201.

WOMEN DID MOST of the high scoring in the Classic at Westland. Surprisingly, Karen Mech, a 145-average bowler, paced the field with counts of 209 and 224 in 621. Others included Judy Griwicki with 612, Jan Marce-niak with 577, Jan Boyster with 571 and Mary Ann Schneider with 581.

There was an interesting family battle when two sisters, plus a set of twins, performed in the same league. The sisters were Pat Males, with a 624 and Judy Whalen, 603. Each of them had a 232 game. The twins finished only one pin apart when Marilyn Bourgoin posted a 222 in 566 and Marlene Oppen had a 233 in 565.

BARBARA DARLOW easily paced the ladies classic with a 655 at Garden Lanes. In the Vinco league, Larry Snoff was top man with 627 and Don Donegan was next with 611. In the parents without partners loop, Bill Brown and Scotty McIntosh took top prize with a 611.

AMONG OTHER good performances around the circuit, Elmer Newman set a new high for the season in the senior citizens loop at Plymouth Bowl with a 234 in 556, and Winfried Schultz fashioned a 230 in 544.

Buzz Hines led the parade in the Las Vegas league at Super Bowl with a 628. Ed Zych was right behind with 610 and Ralph Rushlow had a 590.

Sandi Wolter paced the ladies with 583 and Jim Nasser, a 165 bowler, had games of 226, 214 and 202 for 642. Evelyn Tischltz had a 576 in the Sundowners loop at Merri-Bowl.

WITH THE AID of a 279 game Jim Timmerman rolled a 716 series to pace the Bel-Aire classic. Along with the big game he also had scores of 237 and 200.

Next in line came Dean Shifman with a 679; Dan Kinsorski landed third with a 641 that included a 259 game.

Sharing the spotlight with the scoring leaders was Erv Jones, who carries a 182 average. He rolled a 194 triplicate.

American Can ready to close

By MICHAEL MATUSZEWSKI

The news was quick, sharp and expected by many.

The Chicago-based National Can Corp. announced last week that it was closing its metropolitan Detroit plant in Livonia Nov. 17. Only days before the announcement, the corporation's officials were denying that the plant would close.

More than 50 persons will be out of a job at the end of the week, but corporation spokesmen said they will try to find their employees jobs elsewhere in the area.

National Can, over the past eight years, has closed manufacturing plants in Washington and Massachusetts.

AS WITH THE other plant closings, company officials blamed the passage of a ban on throwaway bottles and cans.

Michigan's "bottle bill," which was approved by the voters in 1976, is set to go into effect Dec. 3.

In the two years since the ban's enactment, officials said, sales from the Livonia plant have dropped in half and were expected to tumble even further.

"The legislation caused a tremendous, rapid change in the marketplace," company spokesman Michael Sistrick said from his Chicago office.

NOT ONLY were can consumers not buying as many cans, Sistrick said, they were buying a different type of can, one not produced in Livonia.

The plant produces three-piece cans, increasingly less popular with beverage producers than the newer two-piece can, which National Can makes at its plants in Indiana and Ohio.

Sistrick said excess capacity at the corporation's two-piece plants, the bottle bill, the declining demand for three-piece cans, and high cost of refitting the Livonia plant for two-piece can production were all factors leading to a decision to shut the plant.

PLANT MANAGER George Cohen estimated that it would cost more than $10 million to refit the plant. That was more than National Can wanted to spend.

While the corporation watched sales slide, employees got pink-slipped. In the two years following the throwaway ban's passage, National Can cut its Livonia work force by 40 per cent.

Cohen, who was transferred from the corporation's St. Paul, Minn., plant in January, said there has been a "cloud over the plant" throughout the year.

"Most employees realized something was coming," he said. "I understand there were rumors floating around back in January 1977."

On the eve of the 1976 vote, company officials vowed they would close the plant if voters approved the throw-away ban.

Despite that threat, the Livonia plant remained open for two years.

C-C backs unified services

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce has lent its support to efforts of the city and township to reduce tax expense by sharing municipal services.

At its last meeting, the chamber's board of directors approved a resolution supporting the study efforts of the Citizens Committee for Unified Services.

That committee is engaged in study in two areas: The desirability and feasibility of Plymouth and Plymouth Township sharing services, and the long-range goal of eventual consolidation of the two governmental units.

The chamber board noted that citizens are concerned about taxation, and that the city and township governments have areas of duplicate administrative and equipment costs which could be shared.

"There is the possibility that considerable tax savings would be effected by combining certain city and township services into singular departments, thereby sharing administrative and equipment costs," stated the resolution.

That resolution urged the township and city "to approach and study the recommendations of said committee in a spirit of cooperation and with the full understanding of the importance of saving tax dollars while making every effort to preserve the level of services now being enjoyed by the Plymouth community."

RECOMMENDED READING

Best sellers come and go. A current novel may enjoy a brief burst of fame as it hits the best seller list, only to be forgotten in a few short months. But the classics are with us always. And they find popularity with each new generation of book lovers. They are recommended reading through the years.

The Classified pages of your hometown newspaper are classics in their own way and belong with every wise person's recommended reading list. Just as they served generations in the past, the classified columns are popular, profitable reading today, and will be read and used by future generations.

Minor parties lose muscle

The Arm & Hammer logo found on baking soda boxes was notably absent inside the voting booth Tuesday.

Besides making your refrigerator smell fresh, the muscular arm and mallet of the Roman god of fire also serves as the symbol of the Socialist Labor Party.

The hippopotamus representing the Human Rights Party was nowhere to be found on last Tuesday's ballot either. And, for all the proletarians out there, add the hammer-and-sickle signature of the Communist Party USA to the list of minority parties absent from the ballot.

The only off-brand party on the ballot in Michigan last Tuesday was the American Independent Party (AIP). An eagle serves as the party's logo, but from the comments of two of the party's top officials, internal conflicts may make flying difficult.

AIP was the only minority party in the state to meet new guidelines for getting candidates on the general election ballot.

TO WIN a spot on the primary election ballot, a party first must file signatures equal to at least one per cent of the ballots cast for the winning candidate for secretary of state in the most recent election.

Last Tuesday Secretary of State Richard Austin won reelection with 1,828,496 votes. That means minority parties will have to collect approximately 18,285 valid signatures of registered voters to win a spot for their candidates on the 1980 primary ballot.

In the primary—where no ticket-splitting is permitted—that party must receive one-third of one percent of that figure (6,095) to qualify for placement on the general election ballot.

This year only the AIP was able to garner enough votes.

James Wells of Southfield, an attorney for many right-wing causes and AIP candidate for secretary of state, guaranteed the party's position on the ballot through 1982 by receiving slightly more than two per cent of Austin's vote total. Wells received 39,094 votes.

What makes men like Wells and the AIP's candidate for 17th Congressional District, Hector McGregor of Redford Township, run knowing full well they will lose?

"BY MY RUNNING the AIP is assured a spot on the ballot through 1982," Wells answers.

He admits that what amounts to the nation's third party reached its heyday under George Wallace and is facing tough times.

Michigan's only announced right-wing party is split into two factions. One of them, headed by Vern Morris of Battle Creek, calls the other, headed by Josephine Chapman of Belleville, a group of "compromising conservatives."

The bitterness goes back to a struggle two years ago over whether each faction could field different candidates for the same job. The state supreme court said they couldn't. Candidates to this year's state AIP convention could only agree on one state office candidate—Wells.

"I think the only reason they agreed on me is that I'm confined to a wheelchair and posed no real threat," Wells says sharply. "That's one advantage of being a cripple."

Wells, 48, was struck down by terminal bone cancer two years ago. Like many other rightwing activists, Wells believes victims of terminal illnesses should be allowed to take any drug that makes them feel better.

"That includes placebo drugs like Laetrile or anything else," Wells says. He calls the federal Food and Drug Administration a "bureaucratic madhouse."

Wells himself is reportedly taking a drug that has not been approved by the FDA. Although it is not arresting his debilitating condition, Wells says the drug is designed to "short-circuit certain enzymes." He claims brain cancer victims have benefited from the drug, manufactured by a Roseville bio-chemist.

DESPITE HIS right-wing reputation Wells refers to himself as a "devout Democrat" but adds the disclaimer: "in the true sense of the word."

Conservatives, Wells said, had more reason to cheer about the statements of Democrats than of the Republicans in the most recent election.

"Carl Levin amazed me during the campaign with his attitude on taxes," Wells said. "My word! The man was talking about cutting government expenditure. He must not be from the same family that spawned Sander."

"This past election was the first time in years I haven't heard someone justify the national debt by saying 'We owe it ourselves.' More and more people are saying we must balance the budget. This is heartening to fiscal conservatives."

Conservatives are too often branded as warmongers and racists—undeservedly, Wells insists.

"We were opposed to the Viet Nam conflict on the basis of it being a waste of time. We kept quoting the late Gen. (Douglas) MacArthur who said the U.S. should not involve itself in an Asian war. We talked about our entangling alliances. We are Jeffersonian Democrats."

The Michigan AIP must have taken that position either before or some time after Wallace named ex-Gen. Curtis "Bomb 'em back to the Stone Age" LeMay as his vice-presidential running mate.

MANY SEGREGATIONISTS are in the right wing, Wells admits. But he argues that the right wing "umbrella is broad enough" to encompass people who believe in integration and also "people with strong feelings about 18 per cent of our population, that being the blacks and the minorities."

In all, 11 candidates ran under the AIP eagle logo last Tuesday. None won. Wells got the most votes because he was the only AIP candidate for a statewide office. But one of the highest percentages of an AIP candidate was won by Hector McGregor of Redford Township.

McGregor has made news over the last five years for his peculiar penchant for collecting mountains of junk and old trucks in his backyard.

Even after losing numerous court fights over litter citations, McGregor still says it's his constitutional right to keep his yard as cluttered as he likes.

His surprisingly good showing Tuesday (three per cent of the vote) could be because his opponent, incumbent Democratic U.S. Rep. William Brodhead was not opposed by a Republican.

Even the chairman of the Michigan AIP said she doesn't know if she'd tolerate McGregor's trash if she lived next to him.

"I certainly wouldn't appreciate it from what I've heard about the place," said Mrs. Chapman. "But I guess he's entitled to his opinion."

And that, friends, is why we have different political parties.

New National Smoker Study: Merit Taste Impresses Toughest Critics.

'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco proved satisfying even to high tar smokers in latest research.

What do smokers of high tar cigarettes—the toughest taste critics of low tar smoking—have to say about low tar MERIT?

Read what they thought in a new, nationwide research effort:

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And current MERIT smokers reported:

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an “easy switch” from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is the first real taste alternative for high tar smokers.

Can government protect consumers?

The best cosmetics watchdog is the user

Women who use cosmetics today have more agencies concerned with their safety than ever before in history. Still it remains the responsibility of consumers like Barbara Tyson of Rochester to follow directions on the product and use cosmetics wisely. (Staff photo by Mindy Saunders)

By SUSAN TAUBER

There are several agencies which regulate the cosmetic industry, controlling ingredients in products and requiring labels with explicit directions.

But none of these agencies can act as watchdogs over the major misuser of cosmetics—the consumer.

All the professionals can do, according to three panelists in "Cosmetics: The Dream Factory" workshop given recently at Cobo Hall, is give consumers directions on how to use the products, information on ingredients, and hope the products are used wisely.

The speakers were Martin Greif, assistant to the director, Division of Cosmetics Technology, U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and Norman Estrin, vice-president of Science, Cosmetic, Toiletory and Fragrance Association (CTFA). Both men are from Washington, D.C.

Dr. Harold Plotnick, associate professor of dermatology at Wayne State University School of Medicine, offered safety tips on using cosmetics, including hair dyes and nail polish. The workshop was part of a day-long conference, "Consumers Can Compete," sponsored last month by a state committee of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, Detroit District.

IT WASN'T UNTIL 1938 that cosmetics were federally regulated. The first law, passed in 1906, didn't include cosmetics, according to Greif.

Even since 1938, the cosmetic industry has changed. Women no longer have to get up hours before their husbands to put on cosmetics since it was once frowned on to wear them. Now women have to compete with their spouses to get a mirror to use to put on the new cosmetics, available for every part of the body.

Greif and Estrin both discussed labeling, and how their agencies have been working to improve the information given to consumers.

"We've issued several regulations about labels to provide meaningful information. Manufacturers have to disclose a list of ingredients in decreasing order of dominance and if a firm thinks its inappropriate to list a certain ingredient, because of a trade secret, it can be exempt if FDA agrees," Greif said.

These secrets ingredients are listed under "and other ingredients" on the label.

"Fragrances and flavors don't have to be disclosed because they are too complex to put on a label. Each may include 50 to 200 complex ingredients," Greif added.

ANOTHER CHANGE in cosmetic labels came from a petition by CTFA, asking that FDA issue a regulation for uniform names for ingredients.

"Labeling wouldn't mean anything to consumers unless manufacturers could use the same name for the same ingredients. CTFA decided to find out what's in cosmetics and assign names for everyone to use. We invited FDA to participate," Estrin said.

The results are published in a reference dictionary, "Cosmetic Ingredients Dictionary."

The book is valuable to dermatologists, Estrin said, and Plotnick told how he uses the dictionary for reference.

"If a cosmetic irritates you, stop using it," the Franklin resident said. "Bring the preparation to a doctor. He understands the ingredients and will help you find a preparation without that ingredient."

Plotnick said the cause of irritations comes from two causes, either the concentration of the product is too strong or the consumer is allergic to it.

"If you're allergic, you can't dilute the product. You have to eliminate its use," he advised.

Plotnick offered more advice. Asked if products which purport to help hair grow really work, he said, "The only thing that makes hair grow is good nutrition."

HE ADVISED consumers only use roll-on deodorants, since aerosols are like refrigerants and freeze the skin, causing it to peel.

"Don't use deodorants on the outside of the arm pit either, just around the pit itself. The hair in the pit protects the skin," he added.

The doctor's main advice, however, was about cosmetics with perfume. He said that 98 per cent of all skin problems he treats are from cosmetics with perfumes.

The only contradictions in the hour-long workshop, moderated by Mary Jane Bostick, professor of Family and Consumer Resources at Wayne State University, involved hair dyes.

"The most visible FDA concern right now is hair dye safety," Greif said. "Two large manufacturers of hair dye have removed one ingredient, called 4-MMPD, is-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine) from hair dyes. FDA has said products still containing it must have a warning label."

"The product contains a carcinogenic agent and penetrates the skin in small quantities. FDA thinks there is an element of risk from 4-MMPD," Greif said.

Estrin said his agency did studies suggested by the American Cancer Society. The ingredient was put on the skin of animals and there were no adverse results.

"Even if the studies were valid, it would be a weak carcinogen," Estrin said. "But we had manufacturers reformulate hair dyes because of letters from consumers. We don't believe 4-MMPD is harmful."

The workshop on cosmetics was part of the conference because FDA regulates food, drug and cosmetics. The agency, which is part of U.S. Health, Education and Welfare, can only take legal action only after a cosmetic has been shown to cause harm or when its label is misleading.

"Cosmetic provisions haven't been changed in 40 years. Until the law is amended, FDA must prove a cosmetic is harmful before taking action when with other products, manufacturers must prove the products are safe before marketing them. Hopefully, this FDA regulation will change," Greif said.

Agencies ask those who buy to help regulate

By SUSAN TAUBER

Government is concerned about the needs of consumers.

That was the theme of a recent gathering in Cobo Hall that found top officials of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) exchanging ideas with some 400 knowledgeable consumers.

The workshop, called "Consumers Can Compete," brought to town the head of the FDA, Commissioner Donald Kennedy, and the assistant chairman of the FTC, Christian White.

They shared the spotlight with workshop leaders who were brought in by Detroit FDA consumer affairs officer Diane Place.

"We need to hear from consumers," White told the gathering. "There are a lot of strong voices businessmen can raise, and it's easier to document those than to seek consumer help. We need consumers to tell us about the intangible benefits of consumer protection."

Ms. Place said that a major purpose of the conference was to give consumers "tools they need to make wise decisions in the market place."

"We invited people who can carry the messages given here back to others," she said.

KENNEDY PUSHED the same message.

"We moved the Office of Consumer Affairs to the FDA office in Washington so we can avoid any time lag of information between the two agencies," he said.

"But we need local meetings like this one to help consumers get through to government."

Kennedy said that his top priority is getting the Drug Regulation Reform Act of 1978 through Congress.

"This is the first full reshaping of drug regulation since the law was passed in 1938," Kennedy said. "Nine out of 10 prescription drugs on the market are new since the law was passed. There's been a failure of the law to respond to scientific changes and progress."

"This raises a serious question we didn't have to answer in 1938. New drugs aren't being used just to treat acute infections the way we used to use medicine," Kennedy continued. "Now drugs are taken for long term chronic illnesses and are used to change the way we feel. Examples of these are contraceptives, antidepressants and hypertensives. The law is now outmoded. Science has made government less responsive to your needs."

THE NEW LAW will make the FDA more responsive to consumer needs in various areas, according to Kennedy. It will increase consumer protection by putting all drugs in the same system of regulations.

"We have to stop kidding people about safety," Kennedy said.

He said the new law will also aid in encouraging drug innovations, will enable the FDA to put necessary, important drugs on the market immediately; will make it easier for generic drugs to get into the marketplace and, accordingly, will lower the costs of drugs, and will involve the public in the process of making drugs safe for consumers.

"We're opening up the process of public hearings. We'll pay attorney fees for citizens' groups to participate," Kennedy said.

KENNEDY DESCRIBED one of the other studies that the FDA is currently conducting: Trying to learn what consumers want on food labels.

"The labeling laws are decades old. By the 1950s more than 50 per cent of the food eaten in America was processed. We're asking consumers for their views on ingredient labeling," Kennedy said.

"About cosmetics," Kennedy said that "the FDA has been a little quiet lately, and we will be quiet for a while longer." "Out statutory requirements with cosmetics are weak and need changing. Right now the FDA can protect more people if we work in areas where our authority is strong and the most people are helped."

Changes are coming

Food labels don't tell the whole story

By SHERRY KAHAN

"You are what you eat," according to the adage.

If that's true, the place to discover what you really are is on the ingredients label of the food you eat. But you may be disappointed to find that the information there is less than adequate.

Consumers are complaining that the labels don't tell them what they want to know about the food they buy.

Feeling the heat from the nation's kitchens on the food labeling issue, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has decided to lend an ear to consumer suggestions. It has been holding a series of hearings around the country on the subject. One such hearing, or series of workshops, was held recently in Cobo Hall.

At the workshop, FDA commissioner Donald Kennedy raised more questions than answers about the labeling problem.

"Is the present system adequate?" he asked in his keynote address. "Should the open date on the label be a pull date, a pack date or an expiration date? Should ingredients be listed by percentages?"

AT THE PRESENT TIME certain information must be on the labels of foods.

- The name of the product.
- The net contents or net weight, which in canned foods will include liquid in which the product is packed.
- The name and place of business of the manufacturer.

On most foods, ingredients must be listed by weight, with the heaviest first. Additives must be included, but the colors and flavors don't have to be mentioned by name. If flavors are artificial, they must be mentioned.

A recent decision requires that labels on food products identify fats and oils by names, such as cottonseed or soybean, to help consumers avoid

'To me the date is the time when the product begins to smell. But this confusion only makes it clear that perishables must have a date that is meaningful to everyone.'

—FDA officer Blanche Erkel specific oils or fats for health or religious reasons.

However, manufacturers like to change the kinds of vegetable oil they use in margarine without mentioning it on the label. Regulations permit them to say their vegetable shortening may contain one of three different oils, but the customers don't know which ones.

Nutrition information is voluntary unless the manufacturer makes specific nutritional claims about the product being fortified, enriched, low or high in calories and a good source of certain vitamins.

If nutritional information is included, it must state in grams the amount of protein, carbohydrates and fats per serving.

The use of the word "imitation" is required when a food is nutritionally inferior to the product for which it is a substitute. If nutritionally equivalent, it can't bear the name of the food for which it is a substitute.

In cases where consumers might be misled or confused, the basic nature of the food must be listed. For example, Tang must carry the statement that it "is not a juice product or soft drink." It is a "brand of instant breakfast drink."

On certain packaged foods words like "you must add chicken to complete the recipe" must be added if there would be confusion otherwise.

BUT WHY ARE SOME foods, such as cream, allowed to go on the market with no ingredients mentioned? This was discussed at the Cobo Hall workshop on labeling.

Using the term "standard brand," Blanche Erkel, of the Minneapolis FDA office, revealed why these brands escape the ingredient-listing rule.

To be standard, a product has to use the same official recipe. For example, fruit cocktail has to have certain fruits, and they have to be in proportions arranged by the standard. If it conforms to the standard, it doesn't have to spell out its contents.

But the standard range was so wide, and the exceptions so frequent, that complaints arose from customers who resented being kept in ignorance of what was being used in ice cream.

"By July 1979 ice cream packages will have to include a list of ingredients," Ms. Erkel said.

MAKING A PITCH for the listing of ingredients by percentages was Sally Herberlein, a former UAW staffer now working for Detroit Common Council president Erma Henderson.

"Listing ingredients in order of prominence simply doesn't do the job," she said. "It should be done by percentages. If I see that a product is 10 per cent sugar, that helps me more than seeing it listed in third place on the box."

"It is also important to know the full sugar content, rather than having separate listings for sucrose, corn syrup and others. All sugars should be lumped together in one category with the percentage."

She made a joke of her confusing dating practices can be: "To me the (perishable) date is the time when the product begins to smell," she explained. "But this confusion only makes it clear that perishables must have a date that is meaningful to everyone. On labels we need clear information presented in an understandable manner."

VALA STULTS, dietician for the Kellogg Co., raised a subject that led to a prolonged debate. She pushed strongly for listing ingredients by grams. She claimed that consumers who were tested preferred ingredients listed this way.

A man in the audience objected to the Kellogg presentation. "We've been honored by, or subjected to, a slick, well-honed presentation on the beauty of sugar," he said. "It's hard to punch holes in it. But why not say that a product has 56 per cent sugar?"

Another man called the Kellogg slide presentation "a contrived study to show us we don't need percentages."

"The public is upset by the metric system," observed Detroit FDA representative Diane Place of the after the meeting. "Listing by grams is useful to dieticians and to anyone on special diets. They understand grams. But the rest of the consumers would probably prefer to have percentages used."

Many of the participants concluded that the Kellogg Co. advocated using grams to disguise the amount of sugar in its products. A recent article in Consumer Reports noted that Kellogg's Applejacks has 16 grams per serving. A medium-sized apple has 17 grams.

The magazine added that Kellogg did not mention that a one-ounce serving of Applejacks had 57 per cent sugar, while the apple had only 11 per cent.

Consumers who could not attend the Cobo Hall workshops may send their opinions to the FDA by Nov. 10 by writing: FDA, room 4-62, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20857.

Nancy Rentz, past president of the Canton Township Jaycee Auxiliary (left), and Jennifer Casper, chairwoman of the upcoming art auction, displayed the type of art works which will be for sale. The art auction will be Tuesday night in the Canton Recreation Building, Michigan at Sheldon Road. There will be a wine and cheese preview at 8 p.m. with the bidding starting at 9 p.m. Admission will be $1 and the event will be open to the public. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Ferrell-Murray

Former Plymouth residents Tom and JoAnn Ferrell of Brentwood, Tenn. announce the engagement of their daughter, Sandra Kay of Plymouth to Joseph Matthew Murray son of Mrs. Joanne Murray of Northville and James Murray.

The bride-elect is a 1977 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School. She is employed by the Northville School Board. Her fiance graduated from Northville High School in 1974 and is employed by Ford Motor Company. Both attend Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College. No wedding date has been set.

Funerals becoming more personalized

In a recent funeral service in Livonia, those in attendance applauded as the casket was carried to the car.

Unusual. Yes. But it is reflective of the new thinking in funeral services. The deceased was a member of a drama club, so his friends decided that applause was important to him.

During the ceremony, a song he sung in a recent play was performed, and members of the club wore the special club T-shirt to the event.

"To some, this might be morbid," said Frederick Walsh Jr. of Maney-Burrell and Turowski, Livonia funeral directors. "But they felt it was appropriate."

Funeral directors are now beginning to encourage grieving friends and family to redesign the funeral service to make it more personal.

"By personalizing the service, it has greater meaning," said Walsh, who recently attended a seminar dealing with this new trend.

LIFE APPRECIATION service is the name that funeral directors give to their new thinking about the ceremony for the deceased.

"The services were conceived out of a sincere effort to respond to the needs of the individual in a helpful and meaningful way," read a brochure from the seminar. "It is a service with a purpose, reflecting personal values and individual feelings."

"Life appreciation services are for the family and friends of those whose lives could best be remembered through a service that is not entirely traditional. Basically a life appreciation service is one whose form is dedicated not by tradition, but by what is meaningful to those who are experiencing the loss."

"The main rule is that the only rules are those that love and dignity make appropriate."

The concept started in California, said Walsh, due to the fact that a large percentage of people there have no religious affiliation.

"We feel in Michigan religion is most important," he added, "but we give people an opportunity to incorporate into the ceremony things about a person's life that were important."

HE POINTED out that in a small ceremony he attended those present told of two incidents that took place involving themselves and the deceased.

"The lady was a very giving person, and all the incidents concerned what she had done for the person who told the story," he said. "It gave the husband of the deceased a chance to hear what she'd done for others. What they confirmed was what he felt about her."

"The ceremony was moving and beautiful. Something like that was very beneficial to the spouse."

"The old way is best if that is what the family wants," said Walsh. "But we also offer another avenue to help the family through the grief process. We don't tell the family what to do. We let them decide what is best."

Funeral Homes, Inc.

Can I have a traditional funeral service and still donate my body to medical science?

In most cases, the normal funeral customs and procedures may be observed.

Medical science has greatly improved the techniques of transplanting organs, providing sight to many blind people and prolonging life to others—due, in part, to donations of vital organs for transplants. There is, today, an urgent need for organ donors. While living donors, related to the patient, may be selected for kidney transplants, some organs not present in pairs must come from non-living donors. These organs, when removed immediately after death, function just as well as those from related living donors.

One must give permission before organ donations can be made. In the case of a relative who has died, the family, knowing of the relative's expressed opinions on the subject, may give permission.

You may have wondered if you could donate your own body and/or organs to medical science upon your death, yet you may wish to conform to the traditions of full funeral services. I would be glad to discuss this in confidence with you.
