Chief confirms plan to leave police force

Police Chief Walter MacGregor said he has "every intention of sticking to his decision" to resign from the Canton Police Department.

MacGregor submitted a letter of resignation Nov. 17 immediately after talking with former Supervisor Harold Stein.

Stein said he asked the police chief to inform trustee-elect Robert Greenstein that he could not be inaugurated as township trustee Nov. 20 unless he resigned as a certified reserve in the Canton Police Department.

MacGregor's resignation becomes effective around Dec. 8 after he takes the approximate three weeks of vacation time he has accrued during his 15 months as police chief.

MacGREGOR would not comment on the reasons behind his resignation beyond saying that his decision was based on "personal reasons."

The police chief admitted, however, that "it didn't take me long to submit the letter of resignation" after talking with Stein on Nov. 17.

"But I had considered resigning prior to that," MacGregor said.

Stein said he asked the chief to inform Greenstein of a 1976 state statute that prohibits public employees from taking elective office in a municipality where they are employed.

Greenstein works as a certified reserve in the Canton Police Department for a salary of $1 a year.

Greenstein said reserve police officers are not considered public employees, who are bound by the state statute under a 1977 Michigan attorney general's opinion.

Greenstein, who established the Canton Police Department in 1976 while serving as township supervisor, took a leave of absence from the police reserves to compete in this year's race for the township board.

Greenstein and acting police chief Jerry Cox last week attributed MacGregor's resignation to a dispute between the chief and the former supervisor over Greenstein's inauguration.

They claimed Stein had ordered MacGregor to block Greenstein's inauguration as township trustee on Nov. 20.

"BUT I DIDN'T order him to do anything," Stein said. "I just asked him to inform Mr. Greenstein prior to the swearing-in ceremony that he couldn't be trustee and employee of the township at the same time."

MacGregor said he followed Stein's request and informed Greenstein of the state statute that prohibits public employees from taking elective office.

Greenstein was sworn in as township trustee on Nov. 20.

Newly-inaugurated Supervisor Noel Culbert said he will appoint a temporary replacement for MacGregor until a new police chief can be hired.

Police Sgt. Jerry Cox is currently the police department's second-in-command. He is serving as acting police chief while MacGregor uses his accrued vacation time.

The 58-year-old MacGregor was hired as Canton police chief last year after retiring as police chief in the City of Wayne.

The Wayne resident said he does not know if he will remain in police work after his resignation from the Canton Police Department.

Canton feeling Headlee effects

By DARLENE STINSON

To Canton Clerk John Flodin, voter approval of the Headlee tax limitation proposal earlier this month will mean an almost certain hike in the township's special election costs.

To other township officials, Headlee portends higher interest fees for some future water and sewer projects.

Heralded by some as a curb on government spending, Headlee limits the growth of local property taxes to the growth of the Consumer Price Index and places a ceiling on state spending.

But another section of the law that prohibits government from issuing general obligation bonds without a vote of the people is causing the most concern among Canton officials

THE BONDS—which are backed by the residents of a community—carry a lower interest rate than communities must pay on other types of municipal bonds.

For that reason, Canton has issued general obligation bonds to finance its last two bonding projects—the purchase of Fellows Creek Golf Course and the construction of a sanitary sewer along Sheldon Road.

Neither bonding project required voter approval. Residents who opposed the projects had 45 days to protest the bond sale before the Municipal Finance Commission. According to finance director Mike Gorman, municipalities could levy a millage to pay off the bonds without a vote of the people in case of default.

Most of that will change Dec. 22, however, when the Headlee tax amendment takes effect.

After that date, Canton will have to delay the sale of general obligation bonds until regularly-scheduled elections, or call for a special election to win voter approval of the bond sale.

Gorman and Treasurer Jim Donahue agree that voters will probably defeat bond proposals for some water and sewer projects that benefit only a minority of township residents.

That means that Canton will probably have to sell other types of municipal bonds that carry a higher interest rate, Donahue says.

Although Canton officials are not proposing any bond projects at the current time, Donahue cites the need to construct a water main from Joy Road to the southern end of the township.

THE WATER MAIN would alleviate water pressure problems that are particularly severe for residents south of Cherry Hill.

But Donahue believes that residents in the northern section of the township—where most of the township's population is concentrated—would vote against a bond issue for construction of the water main because the benefit to them would be minimal.

If Headlee had been in effect at the time Canton purchased Fellows Creek Golf Course, Donahue believes that voters may have turned down a general obligation bond proposal for the purchase.

But Donahue, who was a vocal opponent of the golf course purchase, still believes that Headlee's prohibition against issuing general obligation bonds without a vote will hurt Canton Township more than it will help.

"It will be very cumbersome and costly to issue bonds under Headlee," the new treasurer maintains. "The golf course was the only bond issue in the recent past that caused objections. I think it will put restraints on things that people want done."

Township officials also believe that Headlee will lead to an increase in special elections because of the bond issue vote requirement. Regular elections in Canton Township are now held in August and November of even-numbered years.

FLODIN ESTIMATES the cost of special elections at $7,500 to $10,000.

"Special elections cost more than regular elections," the clerk explained, "because Canton must pay all the costs."

Flodin said Wayne County finances the printing of ballots and the costs of supplies for regular elections.

Besides regulating the sale of general obligation bonds, Headlee limits the growth of local property taxes to increases in the Consumer Price Index.

Gorman is still unsure what that stipulation will mean for Canton Township. The finance director says he is also confused about the effect Headlee will have on the current right of municipalities to levy a millage without a vote if it defaults on general obligation bond payments.

4 nabbed in safe burglary

Four people, two of them juveniles, have been arrested by Canton Police on charges of safe burglary.

Michelle, 18, and Danny Grainger, 21, will undergo preliminary examination Nov. 27 in 35th District Court. The fate of the two 16-year-old boys who were picked up Nov. 18 along with the Graingers remains uncertain.

According to Sgt. Larry Stewart, the four people were arrested for allegedly stealing the safe from the Roman Forum Restaurant sometime during the night of Nov. 6.

Stewart credits the arrest to one of the department's new officers, Robert vanLith, who was investigating officer.

Police believe, from vanLith's investigation, that one of the 16-year old boys involved hid in the restaurant at closing time. The boy allegedly put the safe on a dolly after everyone was gone and pushed it to the Grainger apartment at 1161 Canterberry, not far from the restaurant.

The safe contained about $2,500 in cash, as well as assorted checks and other papers.

Police say the second juvenile was waiting at the Grainger home when the safe was brought in about 2:30 a.m.

The safe door was pried open, the money taken out and the safe dumped some distance away from the apartment.

According to Stewart, vanLith discovered who had taken the safe partly because one of the juveniles went around spending large amounts of money, although he had no source of income.

Mrs. Grainger was freed from jail on $3,000 bond. Her husband is still being held at the Wayne County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bond.

A conviction on safe burglary could carry as much as a life sentence, Stewart said.

Skydiving: 'Like sitting on swing'

By MAURIE WALKER

Have you ever wondered at those "dare devil" skydivers, who float through the air and form patterns with other divers with apparent ease?

Are they scared? Or do they just get into an airplane, jump and pull the chute?

It's really not as dangerous as it appears, says Observer photographer Art Emanuel, who learned to parachute at Fort Benning, Ga., during World War II. He joined a bunch of dedicated skydivers at the Tecumseh airport for one of their weekend jumps.

He strapped a camera to his helmet and took shots in the planes, on the ground and even on the way down.

"As a Signal Corps photographer during the war, I had to learn to jump in the event of an emergency," said Emanuel, a Plymouth resident who has served on the Observer & Eccentric staff for nearly a decade.

"Frankly, I was hesitant about jumping after 35 years, but I couldn't resist the urge to try it again."

Skydivers understand, said Chico Martinez, a jump master out of the Tecumseh airport, and Cathy Bunk of Ann Arbor, who made her first jump in 1971 and has been skydiving for the last 18 months.

"A person gets addicted to jumping," Ms. Bunk said. "For some reason or other, you have to go back and do it again.

Up there, she added, "it's like sitting on a swing, so peaceful you can hear yourself think."

MARTINEZ SAID before a person is permitted to jump, he must have at least half a day of ground training and be emotionally and physically fit.

Those trained in skydiving learn to maneuver their bodies as they fall at the rate of 160 miles per hour and more.

They learn how to use the maneuvering to fall slower or faster, or go to the right or left.

Canton officer completes new breathalizer training

Sgt. Jerry Cox, of the Canton Police Department, says he doesn't drink anything alcoholic.

But he can tell, down to the last tiny millimeter, how much firewater other people have been imbibing.

Cox is the first Canton police officer to have completed a 40-hour session at the Michigan State Police Training Academy in the use of breathalizers.

A breathalizer is an instrument that measures the amount of alcohol in a person's system. Police departments use the instument to determine whether a person can be legally considered intoxicated.

Canton's department doesn't have a breathalizer yet, but Cox hopes the township board will approve his request for the equipment.

Cox says dealing with drunks, or those suspected of being intoxicated, is a time-consuming process now because the suspect has to be taken to another police department to have the test run.

"We're using the Wayne, Plymouth, sheriff's department and occasionally the Westland police facilities now. It ties up a car for more than an hour for something that should only take 25 minutes," Cox says.

The sergeant says Canton also seems to be blessed with "an unusually high number of DUILs (Driving under the influence of liquor)." According to Cox, an average of 10-12 DUIL suspects are brought in every week. He says one of the reasons for the relatively high figure is because of "a lot of young, interested officers trying to do a good job. Canton was relatively open before we had a full-time police force. There was no regular, consistent patrol and people tended to be a little more careless (about drinking)."

Cox expects the problem of drinking drivers to get worse as the holiday season progresses—and even worse if the drinking age is raised to 21.

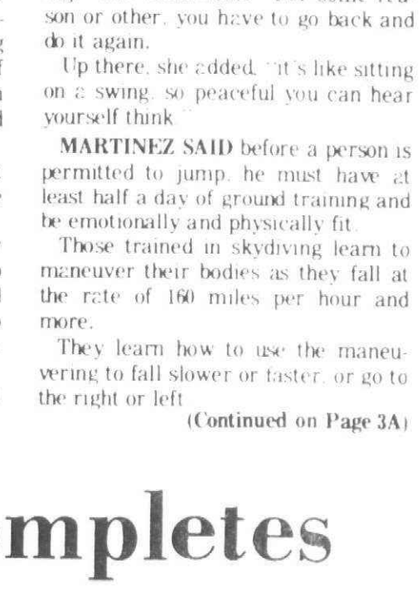

"Once you've opened the door, it's hard to close it," he says.

Although Cox says he hopes to have the breathalizer in time for the holidays, the township board must first decide whether a purchase of $1,500 is warranted.

The actual instrument costs less than $1,000, but the additional equipment needed to constantly test the breathalizer's accuracy push the price higher.

"A pure delight."*
THE GIFT BOOK OF THE YEAR!
Summer Places
BRENDAN GILL
DUDLEY WITNEY

In preparing Summer Places, the authors traveled across North America from Ontario's Thousand Islands to California's Coronado Coast to provide us with a lavish look at the places where the rich and not-so-rich have long spent that most nearly perfect season of the year. The visual result, captured in nearly 100 color plates and 115 black and white photos, is as rich and varied as this vast continent's landscape.

Summer Places is an always affectionate, sometimes nostalgic look at the architecture and atmosphere of a unique and wonderful North American phenomenon.

"After running around the four corners of the earth, it is a pure delight just to put your feet up and relax with SUMMER PLACES. The book is a delightful evocation of that wondrous, 19th century concept, the American summer home. Gill... writes here with warmth and restraint, while Witney's photographs have a properly nostalgic air"—Saturday Review

"A beautiful, well-made gift book, with a dash more class than most of its kind... you'll enjoy its warm nostalgia, its rich and elegant look and feel."

Falling at the rate of 160 miles per hour and more may seem frightening to some. But to the avid skydiver it's addictive. "For some reason or other, you have to go back and do it again," says one skydiver. Approaching the end of a successful jump is Dr. Ruth Rydstat (below) of Ann Arbor. This photo was taken from the ground with a 200 m.m. lens.

Skydiver Bob Domier was photographed by Emanuel at 7,000 feet with a Minolta XG-7 camera equipped with a motor drive and cable release on his arm with the button in his glove. The motor clicks the shutter and advances the film automatically.

Parachutists take the plunge

maneuver their bodies as they fall at the rate of 160 miles per hour and more.

They learn how to use the maneuvering to fall slower or faster, or go to the right or left.

Richard Crayne, who was a parachute jumper four of the six years he was in the Army, said he got into skydiving "because I could enjoy jumping without being shot at."

THE TECUMSEH airport is designated as a commercial drop area.

"We have people coming out every weekend to jump and they come from all over the area. Some even come from Canada, Martinez said.

Persons wishing to jump hire an airplane, usually carrying four persons. To jump from 7,500 feet, the price is $5.50 per person.

In some areas around the country, a group of 35-40 persons will rent the larger airplane, a DC-3, which might climb to from 12,500 to 15,000.

"Martinez said the basic rule in skydiving is that the person actually learn how to fly.

"Different movements of the hands, arms, head will change a person's direction while diving," he said.

"The U.S. Parachute Association sets up the basic safety regulations for jumpers," Martinez said.

"Most of the jumpers do it as a hobby. Some do it on a dare. In fact, out of say, 50 persons who might jump, only two or three will continue to do so as a hobby."

Martinez has been jumping since 1976. He said the basics include steering the chute and handling an emergency.

"Jumpers wear two chutes. For the novice, the operation of the chute is controlled from the ground, should a person panic."

Ms. Bunk said it is understandable that there is a natural fear to jumping.

"It's only natural when you step out into open space to feel some sense of fear, but those who make skydiving a hobby learn to accept it.

"There is no sensation in falling. It's almost as though someone dropped you off in space and hung you in the sky."

Crayne said skydivers come from all walks of life.

"A person has to be 18 years old, but we had an 83-year-old woman who jumped recently."

Martinez said there have been blind persons, persons without arms or legs who have jumped.

"It's just one of those sports that if a person really gets into it , he can't quit."

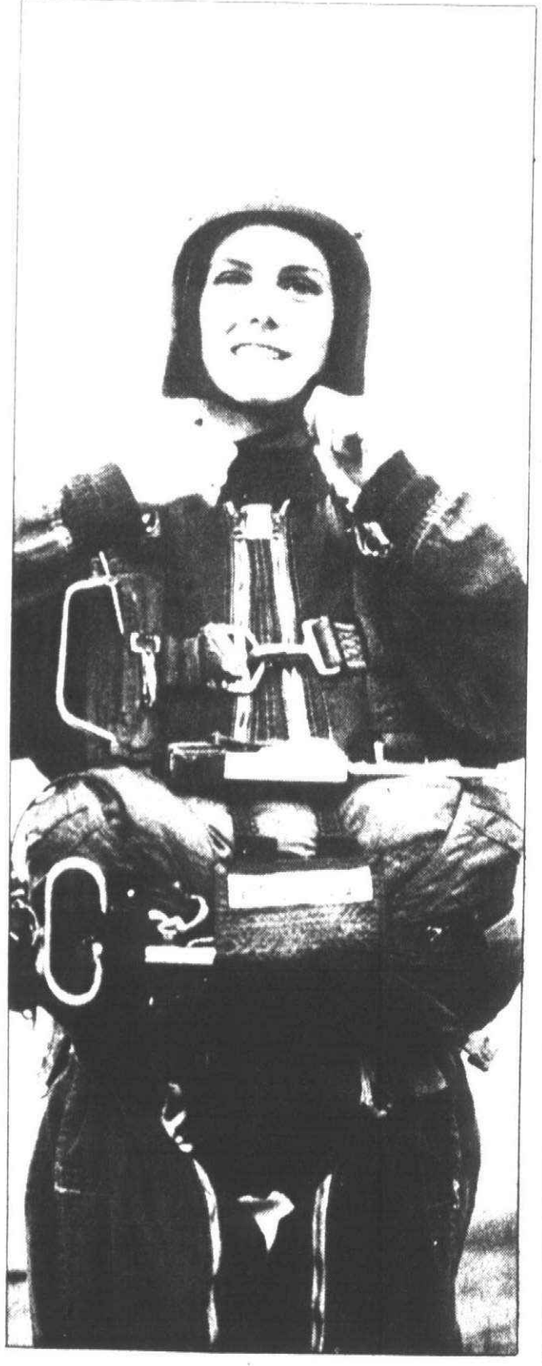

Emanuel said he was amazed at the inovations on landing and the modern equipment being used.

"It sure was fun jumping again and I'm looking forward to getting back into the sky in the near future and take up where I left off."

Ed Slowinski of Redford Township was among four skydivers in the single engine Cessna plane piloted by Mike Bodack.

Paid voc ed training aids area unemployed

"Out county residents are eligible for vocational training that will help them enter careers with upward mobility patterns," according to Marlene Dewling, area CETA program manager.

Hundreds of training slots are open to qualified persons who live in Wayne County, excluding Dearborn, Detroit and Livonia, and who meet other screening criteria.

Students will receive minimum wage ($2.65 an hour) for the time they attend the federally funded program.

If they qualify, applicants may select training in fields such as medical, computers (programming and operating), mechanics, clerical and drafting design.

Vocational training programs are administered through the Wayne County Office of Manpower and funded by CETA, the federal Comprehensive Employement and Training Act, reenacted by Congress this fall.

"If qualified people who need and are interested in this training were aware of its existence, they could contact our office today. They could then be enrolled in most programs and have money plus educational benefits by the early part of the New Year," says Ms. Dewling.

As with most federal programs, certain guidelines must be met. Applicants must meet the out-county residency requirement. They also must meet income and unemployment criteria. Low income, unemployment or underemployment is also a consideration. Age is no factor, but applicants should have a high school diploma or equivalent.

Who would benefit most from vocational training programs?

According to Ms. Dewling, training seems best suited for:

- The high school graduate or GED recipient who wants to study a specific field but can't afford college programs.
- The single parent who needs some income while training for a future career.
- Minorities who typically have a hard time breaking into today's job market at meaningful levels.
- The woman who has spent much of her life caring for a family and now, perhaps alone, finds herself in need of work or training.
- Persons with GED's who find they need accredited training to get jobs in today's competitive market.
- The college drop-out now trying to make it on his or her own.

Vocational students come from all walks of live and cultural backgrounds, says Ms. Dewling. Training is as diverse as the needs of the person applying.

After completing training, which lasts from one to two years depending on the program selected, students are assigned with job placement.

After completing training, which lasts from one to two years, depending on the program selection, students are assisted with job placement. The vocational educationl program can't institute a training program in excess of two years. However, primary emphasis is on one-year programs.

It takes about three to four weeks to get into training.

For more information on how you can qualify, call Evonne Hunt at 956-1581.

Cop can detect alcohol

needs to be tested on a weekly basis, because the fate of drunk driving convictions rests on accuracy. The difference between an intoxicated person and one who has been drinking is miniscule.

In Michigan, a person is considered intoxicated if his or her blood alcohol by weight is .10; .08 is considered the impairment level. Cox believes the percentage is a liberal one. "It's been established that a person with .05 blood alcohol by weight is impaired," he says.

It doesn't take much to reach that level. According to Cox, a 150-pound person who has one drink per hour is raising his or her blood alcohol .025. A drink is measured as a 12-ounce beer or one ounce of whiskey.

When someone consumes more than that amount per hour, or more often, the alcohol level also increases. Cox says a person who isn't used to drinking may stay drunk longer because the alcohol irritates the stomach lining and causes a stomach muscle to close off. This prevents alcohol from getting to the lower intestine. Instead, it stays in the upper part of the intestine, where it is absorbed almost immediately.

Cox says he was an observer, rather than a participant, in one of the state police training exercises. The officers are allowed to drink under controlled circumstances) and then test the amount of alcohol in their systems.

Other Canton officers may decide to try the test on themselves, however, when some of them go for the breathalizer training in January.

Travel agent helped raise bread for doughboys

By CRAIG PIECHURA

National news anchormen could be excused for saying the World War I doughboys visiting France and England this month came all the way from "Salt" Ste. Marie, Mich.

The mispronunciation was insignificant compared to the international acclaim the 11 men in the World War I Drum and Bugle Corps received "over there" on the 60th anniversary of the Armistice.

But the unsung hero behind the hoopla was Jerry Halloran of Southfield who runs Imacom Travel.

Contacted at home in "the Soo," the corps' commander Oral J. "Moose" LaCombe said the historic trip back to England and France would not have been possible without Halloran's help.

"We thought he did a wonderful, wonderful job," Moose said. "Every arrangement from start to finish worked out beautifully. I think he did more for that trip, as far as getting us over there with the aid of the local fundraising committee, than anybody I can think of. He handled that part of it very nicely."

Halloran read a newspaper story in September describing the problems the Sault Ste. Marie fund drive was having in drumming up funds to send the World War I vets to Armentieres.

The bandsmen wanted to serenade the mademoiselle mentioned in the famous song about the city.

Without knowing where the additional money would come from, Halloran got on the phone that night and contacted LaCombe, 82, the commander of the drum and bugle corps. He told Moose LaCombe to have his group pack up their troubles in their old kit bag because they were going to Europe as scheduled on a no-frills tour.

THE FRILLS came later.

"I guaranteed him that even with the money they had collected at that time ($15,000) we could take 28 to 29 people to France and provide them with transportation, hotels and at least breakfast," Halloran said.

Apparently more people than Halloran responded to the last minute plea for funds. By the time the group of 11 band members, ranging from the age of 79 to 86, left Detroit Sunday, Nov. 5, more than enough money had been collected to send the old doughboys "over there." And hotels lowered rates for the famous "Sammies."

More than $30,000 was collected; enough for a welfare fund to be established for the future of drum and bugle corps members.

Due to sickness or other obligations, seven of the 18 surviving members of the drum and bugle corps could not make the trip. But their colleagues remembered them at every performance and the men staying home wished the corps well before they left.

But the trip didn't just fall into place. It was planned by Halloran with the help of the French and British consuls in Detroit and the American embassy in France.

Halloran dipped into his own pocket twice for two trips he took. The month before the doughboys shoved off for European shores, Halloran went to Europe to make arrangements with government representatives and representatives of the British and French military.

THAT'S WHEN Halloran got discouraged.

"As far as the British government and the British Legion went, nothing was accomplished on that first trip I made to firm up our schedule."

He received a rather abrupt brushoff from a spokesman for the Royal British Legion stating that they were too busy to meet and greet their World War I allies when they arrived.

Frustrated with bureaucrats who kept telling him the doughboys "didn't fit in with their pre-arranged plans or they'd never done things that way before," Halloran took his cause to a small British Legion branch in Worcester Park Surrey, about 12 miles from the London city limits.

"They were delighted that a group from America, especially a group that old, would help them observe the Armistice," Halloran, himself a veteran of World War II and the Korean War, said. "They even made arrangements to have American beer waiting for the men when they came to dinner.

"The trip showed me how uncooperative bureacrats can be and how helpful people the world over are when you're dealing with them in a people-to-people type situation."

ARRANGEMENTS WERE also made in advance with the deputy mayor of the town of Armentiere, who loved the idea of performing doughboys.

From that point on, Halloran said, every other detail fell into place and press coverage became phenomenal.

With Halloran's help, the vets were able to meet 150 English World War I vets at the Chelsea Hospital and perform a few tunes like "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" for their compatriots.

They visited Runnymede, site of the Magna Carta signing. It is also the home of President John F. Kennedy's memorial.

They played "Mademoiselle from Armentieres" in the town's square and placed a wreath at the tomb of the unknown soldier in France. Deputy Mayor Yves Plotkin invited the doughboys to come back next year when a statue honoring the mademoiselle is unveiled.

But the highpoint for many of the doughboys was a solemn visit to Oise-Aisne American Cemetery near Fereen-Tardenois. A member of the Soo contingent, Dominic Grego, was buried there. His brother, Jack, went on the trip and saw the grave for the first time Nov. 12. The group's bus driver, Brian King of England, played taps on a harmonica after the doughboys paid their respects.

The doughboys weren't glorifying war by revisiting its haunts, Halloran said.

"I still think there's such a thing as patriotism," Halloran said. "It was not a case of glorifying war but an awareness of what war is. There probably wouldn't have been a World War II or a Vietnam if people remembered that. It's due to a lack of awareness that we continue to have wars. It's the removal from reality of war and the horrors of Belleau Wood.

AT THIS POINT, Halloran plays a tape recording from one of the vets who accompanied the drum and bugle corps, Goldie Slater. Slater talked of the cemetery they visited where Grego was buried along with Pvt. Eddie Slovik and Joyce Kilmer, poet.

"There were too many of those crosses marked 'Known only to God.' For the first time it dawned on me. 'Why should any man follow a power-crazed leader in a war that nobody can win?' "

But the trip also had more than its share of humor. The world read about drummer Sam Mirabelli's daily breakfast of beer and All-Bran cereal. In fact, Kellogg's of Battle Creek shipped cases of the stuff to him in England and France.

LaCombe said this week that a Sault Ste. Marie restaurant is offering beer and All-Bran on its breakfast menu in honor of the 85-year-old doughboy.

"We are kings now in town," LaCombe said. "Everybody wants to shake our hand and wants to know how it went. We can't explain how wonderful it really was."

Off the Walls

Life goes on outside the fishbowl

By NANCY WALLS SMITH

I've always been somewhat skeptical about people who seem to get overly emotional about animals.

Oh, I, too, get all silly inside when I see a cotton-ball kitten or a roly-poly puppy, but I could never understand those ladies and gentlemen who find happiness in lavishing all of their parental affections on a morose mongrel or a crotchety cat.

I couldn't understand, that is, until I found myself in the midst of an intense emotional relationship with a goldfish.

BUT PERHAPS I should start this sordid confession at the beginning.

Throughout my lifetime I can honestly say I have had very little occasion to give much thought to fish of any sort. I've never cared for them on my menu, but it was nothing personal. I just don't like the taste.

I suspect my indifference to their personalities was based mostly on the fact that they don't seem to have one. You can't pet a fish, or nuzzle their nose, or even scratch behind their ears. Not much fun there.

I guess that's why I just couldn't get up any enthusiasm when one day my husband suggested, "We should get an aquarium." I think I replied something like, "Eh. What's on TV tonight?"

I considered the matter closed until a few weeks later when my dear husband spotted a used aquarium at a garage sale where we searching for treasures amidst the trash. In exchange for a mere $2 this five-gallon aquarium was ours to do with as we saw fit. I thought it would be a nice place to store condiments (you could see what was on the bottom). But hubby was serious. He wanted to put fish in it.

Our sons, ages four and two years, were both intrigued by the idea. Of course, being children, they could work themselves into a gleeful frenzy at the prospect of owning a pet worm. I finally condescended with the realization that goldfish were probably the most easy-to-care-for pet that the coming years would bring to our homestead.

NEXT STOP WAS the store. I honestly hadn't realized how many necessities of life the little fin-tailed critters require until the cashier rang up $18.

Without too much thought, I'm sure I could come up with several different enchanting things to do with $18 rather than spending it on some colored rocks and a ceramic castle. But the rest of the family were enjoying themselves so much that I decided this was not time for practicality.

I even helped them pick out the new members of our family. One was a black and white number (and I had thought all gold fish were gold) whom the boys christened "Volkswagon." The other was a huge thing that was given the name "Chew-Gum."

It was hard to tell if Volkswagon and Chew-Gum were happy or not when we got them home and settled into their cozy little tank. They just swam around a lot and kept opening and closing their mouths. Immediately I started feeling my first twinges of concern for their well-being.

"Why are they opening and closing their mouths so much?"

My husband looked at me patiently as he replied, "Because they're fish."

"Well, why do fish do that?"

"To breathe, dummy!"

"Well these two look like they're gasping."

"That's how fish breathe. They gasp."

I decided to leave it at that without displaying any more of my ignorance regarding marine life. All that afternoon I found myself drifting over to look into their wet little faces to see if I could detect any signs of destress. They were swimming closer to the surface, opening and closing their mouths as if to say, "Help me. Help me." My feelings were not unlike that "new mother syndrome" where you keep going to check on your newborn to see if he's still breathing. My new babies weren't looking so good.

The next morning my husband gently woke me and softly gave me the news. "Chew-Gum died." My whole day was spent in mourning. But Chew-Grum wasn't the only cause of my sadness. Volkswagon was now skimming the surface of the water as if he were trying to get out. He was clearly uncomfortable. I found myself going to him throughout the day, offering words of encouragement like "Hang in there, little fellow," and a few gentle pleas of "Please don't die."

THAT EVENINGS my husband brought home a replacement for Chew-Grum. He was also named Chew-Gum in honor of his predecessor.

By this time Volkswagon was looking a little peaked around the gills. My husband and I spent the better part of the evening in earnest discussion trying to figure out where we had gone wrong. We were both deeply concerned about the mortality rate of our new charges.

Our sons, on the other hand, were taking the entire fiasco quite well. When I had haltingly broken the news of Chew-Gum's demise to my eldest, he didn't even bat a eyelash as he came back with, "That's O.K., mom. We can get another one at the store."

I fear this new generation is a cold one!

The next morning Volkswagon was floating on his side. I was devastated. Clearly, my emotional involvement with these fishies had reached a level of intensity which previously I would have sworn was reserved for fanatic environmentalists or perhaps a flake with a fish fetish. I was neither.

Nevertheless, when my husband arrived home that evening with Volkswagon's replacement, whom the boys immediately labeled "Choo-Choo," I decided that this time we weren't going to mess around. I rushed out and bought a new air pump and a 10 gallon tank (maybe they needed more exercise) and a few pretty rocks and figurines I just couldn't pass up. All for only $27.13. Our original investment of $2 had now evolved into something closer to $50, counting deceased fish.

Fortunately, the story has a happy ending. Today, as I sit here writing, not four feet away from me is our lovely, though crowded, aquarium. Swimming among the plastic fronds and little plaster caves can be found four healthy fish.

Geer gets Kmart for hour of play

Geer Elementary School pupils will have a Christmas shoppers dream come true thanks to Dan Reed of the Kmart store on Ford Road in Canton.

Geer's total school enrollment, in grades first through fifth, will have the entire store to themselves for one hour on Wednesday, beginning at 9 a.m.

Geer is a two-room country school of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools which was built in 1880 and has been in continuous use since it was built.

Other elementary schools in the district with much larger enrollments are able to bring in items and have their own "Secret Santa Shop" for their students. But this would not be practical for Geer because of its size.

When Reed was first approached in October about the feasibility of opening Kmart to Geer students he enthusiastically agreed.

The Geer PTO set up a banking operation for the students and every week now students bring in money to the school and deposit it in their "accounts." The students take turns acting as tellers and giving out receipts. The PTO is paying interest on monies saved by the pupils.

For many years, the Detroit Women's Bowling Association, with a membership of more than 130,000, has been a leader in charity donations and offering a helping hand to the unfortunate.

Now the women are involved in one of their greatest efforts. They are planning the purchase of a bus, valued at $24,000, that will be used to transport maimed war veterans from their hospital and other parts of the area, to the weekly bowling sessions at Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park.

Just recently, the women also visited the Michigan Cancer Foundation's Meyer L. Prentis Center, and donated $2500 to help the cause.

SPEAKING OF CHARITY, the Goebel team of the All-Star leagues, recently raised $9,386 at the Bowlcraft Center to boost its leader dog fund to more than $14,000 for the year.

There still are five more exhibitions scheduled and it is possible that returns will provide sufficient money to train at least a half dozen dogs for the Leader Dog School in Rochester.

This would be twice the number provided last year.

KEN LAND picked an opportune time to win his first title in the Michigan Majors Bowling Association. He won the championship in the annual battle at Sunnybrook Lanes last Sunday. He averaged 237 and won his final 10 games after losing the first two.

Fred McClain, one of the top pin-toppers in the all-star leagues, finished as the top money winner with $2430.

MIKE SAMARDZIJA celebrated his return to the Stroh lineup after a year's absence by rolling a 695 series and now is well on his way again to stardom.

JOHN HURLEY, who has been on a scoring spree in the Monday league at Westland Bowl, is writing his name indelibly on the pages of local bowling history. This week, he rolled a 740 series on games of 225, 258 and 257. It was his sixth 700 series of the season.

He was not alone in breaking the 700 barrier as Hal Jolley accomplished it in the Little Caesar classic when he put together games of 202, 287 and 216 for a 705 series.

Paul Christensen was right behind him with a 696 that was made possible by a 257 opening game. On the ladies side, Jean Essa was tops with games of 213 and 202 for 599.

WHEN HURLEY rolled his big series he left his rivals far behind, as Bob Gotts landed second place with 688. Don Shale placed third with 673 where he tied Dave Antal.

One of the most unusual series of the season was the work of Jim Blake. Bowling in the Monday League, he missed the first game, then rolled counts of 143 and 290 for a 144 average.

JIM JESSON will have reason to remember rising early last Sunday morning. Competing with the Sunday Sleepers at Westland, he scattered the pins for a 656 series that is high for the season in the league.

NEIL BECKMAN was back in the winners' circle in the mixed classic at Farmington Lanes.

He uncorked a 258 game for a 661 series and beat his closest rival, Ken Marsh, by 53 pins. Others who bettered double-century figures were Joe Driscoll with 608 and Mike Kehrer with 601.

In the ladies classic, Audrey Sirola showed the way with a 214 in 622 and Carol Socala had a 236 in 596. In the high school league, John Ponke paced the boys with a 222 in 635 and Linda Hamlin was tops among the girls with a 226 in 556.

In the junior house league, Lou Brugman took the pace-making role with a 273 in 637.

BETTY MARKWARDT scored one of her biggest victories of the season when she won two games and the series in the Livonia Ladies classic. She took the second game with 179-36—215, the third with 187-36—223 and the series with 546-108—644. Lois Merriman won the other game with a 218-23—241.

DOUBLE-CENTURY figures were the order of the day at Garden Lanes where Russ Kunn paced the County league with 613 to beat out Al Fernandez by 13 pins. Steve Turzewski showed the way in the St. John Bosco league with 610 and John Gavin had 600 to top the mixed league.

IT WAS LIKE a dream to Judy Parvi, a 143 average bowler, when she rolled a 660 series on games of 232, 212 and 216 at Fiesta Bowl. Along the way, she posted 23 strikes.

IN OTHER outstanding performances, Lil Duguid paced the Merri-Bowl doubles with 614, and Mike Dembrec, a 12-year-old boy, fired a 614 in the Father & Son league.

CHIROPRACTIC CARE KEEPS THESE WORKERS HALE AND HARDY

The welfare of the American worker is of great importance to everyone in our society. On the job injuries account for a loss of 100 million person hours every year.But even more important is the pain and anxiety suffered by the American worker, his family friends and neighbors,when such accidents occur.

The Grassam Chiropractic Life Center is a multi-faceted complex designed to meet the health needs of the worker. Don't suffer in the darkwith some ailment or injury. Call in and let chiropractic help you.
Here are two examples of what chiropractic has done to aid our friends and neighbors.

I had been suffering with a jammed disc in my spine for several years. The pain was severe and constant. I also developed a serious nervous problem.
As a result of these health problems, I could barely cope with my job. I was always looking for the easiest work possible. When I realized what I was doing, I decided I must do something about my health problems. It was then that I remembered a fellow employee telling me about his chiropractor and all the people he had helped.

After only one week of chiropractic care, the pain in my back was gone and I began to feel better all over. I had a sharper mental attitude and wanted to give 100 per cent at work. I was astonished at how much easier it was for me to breathe also.

When my family saw the results I was getting, they all became chiropractic patients. My wife, two daughters and I all come in together and now we're all healthy.

The only thing I regret about being a chiropractic patient is that I did not learn of it sooner. I hope by hearing of the excellent results I got, other people won't wait so long to find out about it.

PAUL STIGLICH

One day I received some literature in the mail about chiropractic. I figured I might as well try it since anything is better than nothing.

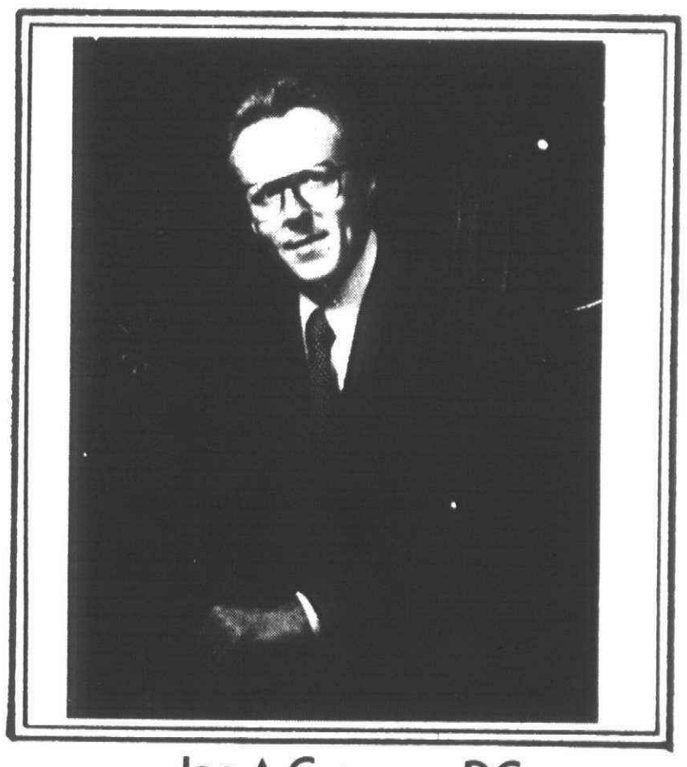

I had an injury at work which left my right arm in pain and I was unable to lift it up past my shoulder. I was even losing my grip with my right hand. I couldn't work with tools because they would slip out of my hand.

I went to a medical doctor who gave me a shot every two days, but that didn't do any good. My left hip and leg would hurt and it left a burning sensation. I had a previous injury in my left arm so I had to get my right arm healthy, it was the breadwinner.

I visited my chiropractor and after two adjustments the numbness left and I started to improve. In a month or so I got my strength back again. If I hadn't gotten chiropractic care, I hate to think what would have happened to me. Now my breadwinning hand is bringing home the bread again.

It proved that chiropractic is good for your overall general health.

"Hey Doc, What About My Family?"

That's a question that we have heard for years and we have now devised a plan to enable your whole family to enjoy the many benefits of good health.

Many times in the past, after being restored to good health through chiropractic care, our patients have asked about care for their entire family. "I just can't afford to have the entire family treated at the regular office fee," they say Even though our $10 office call is the very lowest in the area, we realize that it can be a burden to large families.

So, to serve the needs of patients who do not have full family health care insurance, we are proud to announce the Family Health Care Plan which will make good health a family affair.

Under our new plan, which is in effect whenever two or more family members who do not have full family insurance visit us on the same day, the first member pays only $8. The second family member would pay only $3 and the third is only $1. All members after three, no additional charge. In other words the maximum cost for the family would be $12.

We have designed this plan to extend good health to everyone. There is a genuine concern that families should stay healthy together. Good health is, indeed, a family affair and it is an affair to be remembered.

Take advantage of our new plan today. Call now — 422-7800 and ask about our Family plan.

Salem's overall depth will edge Canton cagers

Doc's Corner

By DENNIS O'CONNOR
Sports Editor

You've heard of that old saying—"Play them one game at a time."

That's all one ever hears from a coach when state tournament action comes along. And this year is no different with the Centennial Park girls basketball coaches, Bob Blohm (Plymouth Salem) and Mike McCauley (Plymouth Canton).

It's district time and, beginning tonight at the Plymouth Salem gymnasium, are two girls basketball games which will no doubt produce Plymouth winners in both contests.

Blohm and McCauley are both cautious to admit such things since they don't want their girls "looking ahead" to the inevitable Salem-Canton battle for the district title on Thursday.

So before we begin talking about the biggest game of the season, let's—for formality sake—predict the outcome of the two semifinal games.

Game 1—Plymouth Canton vs. Livonia Churchill, Monday, 7 p.m.—The Chiefs from Canton, 18-2 overall, have beaten Churchill twice this season en route to their second consecutive Western Six League title. Both Canton victories were by wide margins. Canton by 16.

Game 2—Plymouth Salem vs. Westland John Glenn, Monday, 8:30 p.m.—The Rocks from Salem, the champions of the Suburban Eight League and the top team in the Observerland area, face the dismal Rockets, who finished with a sub-par record in the Northwest Suburban League. Salem never played this season but, just to give you an idea, Canton defeated the Rockets, 80-35, at the Glenn court last month. Salem by 32.

NOW THAT this nonsense is over, let's get down to business and talk about the district final, which happens Thursday starting at 7:30 p.m.

To put it simply, it seems this game will be a battle between Canton's quickness, especially at the guard position, against Salem height with its giants on the front line.

Canton runs three guards in its offense and won't be afraid to use its ball-handling skills with its patented four-corner offense, if it gets an early lead.

Salem relies on the height of its three front line players, who outmatch Canton physically. The Rocks stress a strong transition game.

Defensively, both teams are similar, although Salem lately has played a tougher schedule and the better defense. Both squads will press up and down the floor, sticking to stingy man-to-man defensive.

What do the coaches think?

"I don't think we are as quick as they (Canton) are," said Salem's Blohm. "The one thing we can't allow is to let Mac (McCauley) get ahead and go to the four-corner offense.

"But I've never seen our kids come into a big game not ready to play. I think we have the people who can handle their pressure.

"It won't be a pretty game. There will be a lot of tension and emotions out there like any tournament game.

"Each team has pride. Canton has a helluva program. Mac has established himself as a coach. I don't think it will be a blow out. It will be close."

Canton's McCauley was his usual carefree self when talking about the Salem-Canton match-up.

"They (Salem) have a very talented team and Bob Blohm's doing a heckuva job. They handle pressure well," the Canton mentor said. "It's not going to be one essential thing that will help us win. It'll be a scrappy game all the way. It's going to be physical. Our girls are going to make sure they wear knee pads. But if it's close in the third quarter, we'll win. We go on momentum."

Always the jokester, McCauley, a believer in psychological methods of getting his teams prepared for a big game, just wanted eveyone to know his club was ready to "TOGA-ize" Salem, whatever that means.

What does the good Doctor think?

At the beginning of the season I was definitely leaning toward the Chiefs. Coming off an undefeated regular season last year, Canton has waited a long time to win a district title, especially after last year's disappointment at Detroit Mumford.

Salem, however, has been playing the better ball of the two clubs in the past month. Two of the Rocks' big girls, Erin Moore and Diane Goodrich, will play sparingly because of injuries, but Salem has proven it has people on the bench to pick up the slack.

The keys—Can Salem handle Canton's pressure? Can Canton cope with Salem's height? Can Salem stay out of foul trouble? Can Canton's four-corner offense stop Salem's rugged defense?

How can Kelly Heaton and Evie Pasek of Canton perform on the boards against Salem's big three of Patty Weidmann, Moore and Goodrich? Can Nan Horwood and Eileen Moore of Salem stay with Canton's speedy guards Kathie Peck, Vickie Cavallaro and Jill Pedersen?

There are a number of questions which will be answered Thursday, but I think the real difference will be Salem's stronger depth.

The Rocks have been consistent in maintaining an unbeaten record all year long. The Chiefs, on the other hand, are just too erratic. At times they play poorly, but if they get momentum, they can be explosive, offensively.

And that's where the bench play comes in.

Ron Egloff lugs the pigskin.

Gridder remembers Plymouth

Egloff loves pro life

By BRUCE GERISH
Special Writer

"Don't look back, there may be someone gaining on you."—Satchel Paige.

The Denver Broncos invaded Detroit this week on Thanksgiving Day to play the Detroit Lions, but unfortunately Ron Egloff of Plymouth was not among them.

He suffered a torn hamstring muscle five weeks ago in a battle with the Baltimore Colts and must remain in Denver for therapy.

He's a disapointed young man. He had made plans to visit his high school friends...the Steve Robb's and Rob Willette's, the Jim Szilagyi's. Those plans were now non-feasible.

Ron Egloff is not an All-Pro, and he is not a former All-American. He is not even a starter. But he is a member of the American Football Conference (AFC) Champion Broncos, and one of, if not the best back up tight ends in the business.

He also is a 1973 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School, where he starred in baseball and basketball, as well as football. That makes the 6-5, 234 pounder kind of special.

I had a chance to spend some time this summer with Ron, and I was a little apprehensive about meeting with him. I wondered if we would have anything in common, him in the limelight, me still here in Plymouth.

I had nothing to worry about. Ron wanted to talk about Plymouth more than his success.

Success has treated him well. Ron loves Denver, and the city loves him. He has been adopted as somewhat of a favorite there, and appears on everything from pop cans to T-shirts. He has made public appearances and a couple of commercials with his teammates. Not at all bad for a 23-year old kid.

We met at a restaurant in Denver's south side, and the first thing the rugged good looking blond wanted to talk about was a letter teammate Roy Lytle had received from Plymouth's Joe Pierce.

"How is Joey Pierce?" he asked, "And what's his dad's name...Mac. How's Mac Pierce doing?"

Once I has assured him that all was well with the Pierces, I turned his attention to his high school days, particularly the coaching. His eyes sparkled as I brought up the subject of his high school mentors.

"You know, I don't think they realize what a big help they were in getting my career started," he said, in reference to coaches Wayne Sparkman and Tom Moshimer.

"As far as Fred Thomann goes, well basketball was always my favorite sport, and I liked the way Thomann exhibited fairness to all of his players."

He asked if Salem had kept winning, and about star quarterback Rich Hewlett. The conversation drifted on, and the questions kept coming. He had really kept everything in perspective.

The coaches also had admiration for Egloff. Why shouldn't they? He was a football co-captain in 1972 and gained All-Observerland, All-Suburban Eight League and All-Metro honors. He also played center on the basketball team and first base in baseball.

After his senior year of football, Ron was courted by a host of college coaches, including the University of Wisconsin's John Jardine. It was at this school he received a full four-year scholarship to play tight end.

Just as he had in high school, Ron enjoyed success in his sport. After two years of learning behind All-Big Ten selection Jack Novak, Ron started for the Badgers his last two campaigns. Novak, like Egloff, went on to the pro ranks, logging time with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Some of Ron's college successes included three catches and one touchdown against the University of Michigan in his senior year.

But Ron's greatest thrill as a collegian was his spectacular diving catch in the end zone for what proved to be the winning touchdown over Nebraska when he was a sophomore.

Then came the disappointment. Ron was not drafted. The year he left Wisconsin was the year that the NFL reduced its draft from 16 rounds to 12, and while he certainly would have been chosen in the final four rounds, he wasn't picked in the 12 that took place.

It wasn't all that bad, however. The night after the draft, Ron received phone calls from both the Atlanta Falcons and Broncos seeking to sign him as a free agent.

"The Broncos showed the most interest in me on the phone," said Egloff. "The next day they sent a representative out to see me, and I signed for the minimum contract plus a bonus two days later."

The next step for Ron was to report to the Bronco's mini-camp held in May for rookies and free agents.

After putting on an impressive per-

Krueger is confident wrestlers are winners

One outstanding season doesn't make a high school team a state power.

If any prep program wants to be recognized as a state power every season, it must have the ability to maintain excellence, even after losing many seniors to graduation from the year before.

This is the challenge facing Plymouth Salem wrestling coach Ron Krueger and his young Rocks this season.

Salem was ranked ninth in the state last year before finishing 15th overall in the state meet. It placed second in the districts, fifth in the regionals, and won the Suburban Eight League meet en route to a tie for the conference crown.

With all these accomplishments went a host of brilliant seniors which made the Rocks' line-up one of the most feared in the state.

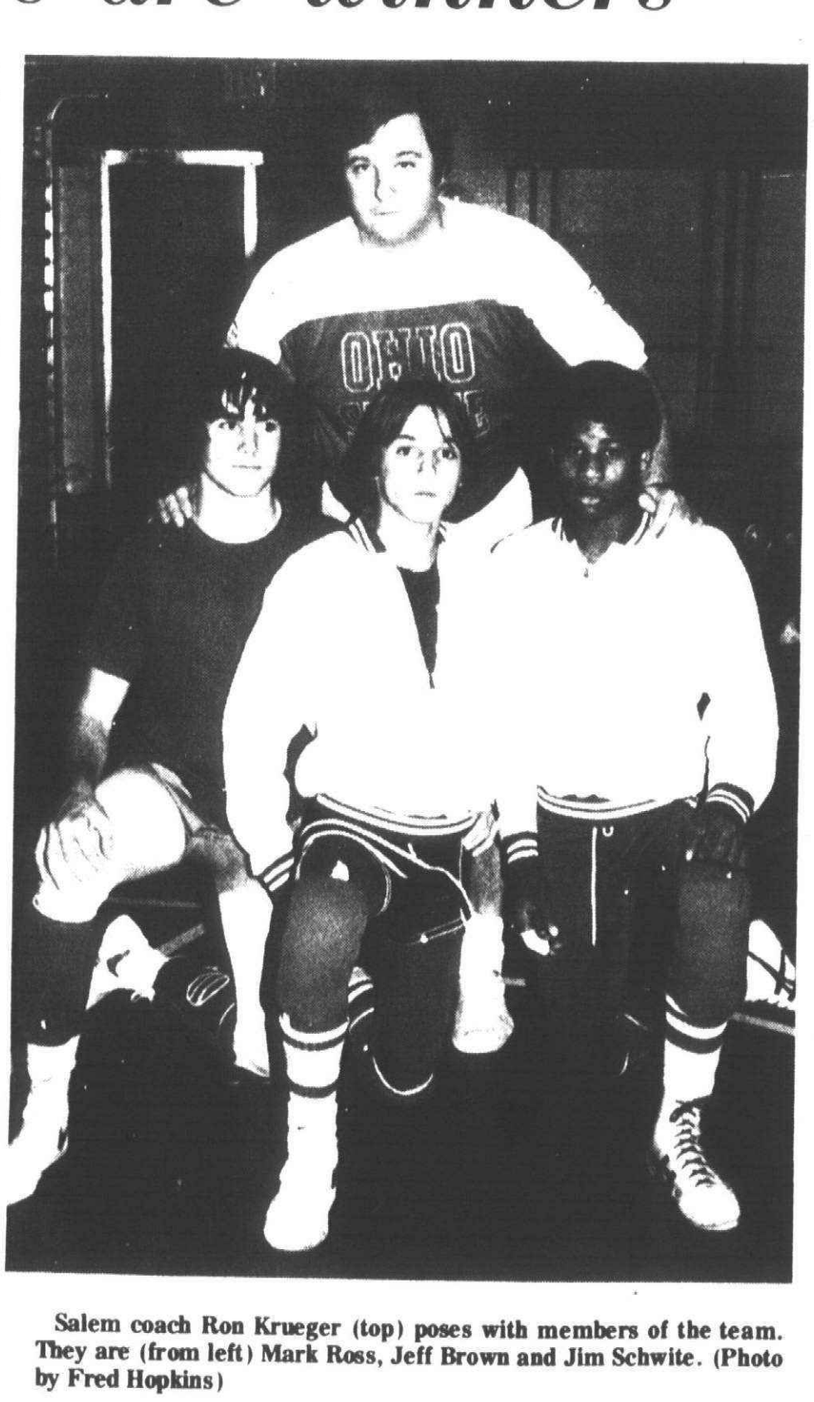

This season, Krueger has only four seniors on the varsity squad, which is predominately full of juniors. While most coaches would think Salem is one year away from being a state contender, Krueger feels this year's squad can still make a run for the Sub-8 crown and finish respectably in the state meet.

"I don't think were 'down' this year," Krueger said. "I feel we can place higher in the state because we have four or five kids who can go far in the state meet."

Senior co-captains Randy Vipperman (119 pounds) and Joe Piccola (155 pounds) return to the line-up after successful seasons. Vipperman is a defending league champion, but missed state meet competition when he failed to make weight. Piccola wrestled for the first time last season, but has made great improvement over the summer.

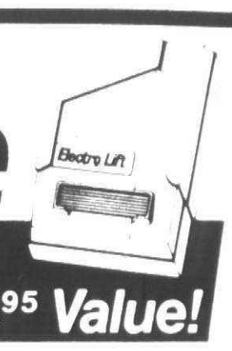

Jeff Brown heads the list of powerful juniors. A state qualifier as a sophomore last season, Brown already has

Chrenko hopes his new team nabs victories

It will be a new look for the Plymouth Canton wrestling team this season, as coach Dan Chrenko begins yet another rebuilding process after losing eight starters from last year's squad.

It was, indeed, the most successful season ever for the Canton program last winter. The Chiefs finished with a 6-5 overall record and a third place finish in the Western Six League. It marked the first time ever the Chiefs avoided a last-place finish at the league meet.

Now, with as many as 58 kids trying out for the team, the bulk of which are freshmen and sophomores, Chrenko hopes the maturity of his program will shine.

"It's a whole new ballgame," the Canton mentor said. "Now we have a new group of kids with even more potential because the program has advanced.

"In six years, I've never had a group of kids with this kind of attitude. They're just super kids. They're working and working and they want to do it. It's a great feeling.

"I really think with the way we are working and conditioning, that we can be competitive and surprise some people. It should be an exciting year for wrestling. The kids want to prove they can wrestle."

Chrenko admits, however, that it is tough to lose eight starters, seven of which were four-year senior members of the program. The Chuck Walkers, Scott Collinses, Dave Marches, Kyle Heatons, Craig Lees, Jeff Reys and Mark Bartletts are all graduated and now it's time for Canton to regroup and stay competitive.

Heading the list of Canton prospects this season is senior co-captain Dennis Howell, who will probably wrestle at 155 pounds. He comes off an 18-16 record last season and is expected to improve as the year progresses.

Probably the most promising wrestler on the squad is junior co-captain Tommy Harreld. A defending Western Six League champion, Harreld, at 105 pounds, has a good chance to go to the state meet. He missed qualifying last year when he injured his shoulder in the districts.

George Hamblin is another returning senior with some experience, but he is the Chiefs' biggest athlete at 178 pounds. Canton still doesn't have a 191-pounder or a heavyweight, which will definitly hurt its chances in dual meet competition.

Jay Lee is a senior who saw limited action last season but should be in the starting lineup at 138 pounds. Junior Paul Mooney wrestled last season as a sophomore, and should fit in at 165 pounds.

Juniors Steve Penar, Andy Kitti and Dave Vaughn from the JV come to the varsity level with hopes of getting into the starting lineup. Steve King, a junior varsity heavyweight last season, is academically ineligible for this season.

Another possible starter for Canton is senior Tim White, a transfer student from California who has two years of experience at 112 pounds.

Once again, Farmington Harrison and Walled Lake Western look like the two top teams in the Western Six. Chrenko has set his sights on finishing in the upper half of the league once again this winter.

WSDP airs championship

Girls basketball district action will be broadcast live from the Plymouth Salem court on WSDP-FM (88.1), the student-operated radio station of the Plymouth-Canton community.

John Matthews (doing play-by-play) and George Hamblin (color commentary) will be on hand for the Plymouth Canton-Livonia Churchill battle tonight starting at 7 p.m. The microphone assignments then switch to Chris Koepke (play-by-play) and Tim Sonnega (color commentary) when the Plymouth Salem-Westland John Glenn contest follows at approximately 8:30 p.m.

WSDP-FM will also broadcast the district championship this Thursday night starting at 7:30 p.m. The district finale features the winners of the two semifinal games on Monday.

In the event of a Salem-Canton match-up, Koepke and Matthews will share the broadcast duties at courtside.

Best area girls' swim efforts

Area girls' swimming coaches are encouraged to contact Ben Rosinski, who is compiling the best performances of the season. He may be reached at 425-2629 9-10:30 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Krueger shapes up team

50 career victories on his record. Krueger thinks Brown can be the top 105-pounder in the state this winter.

Mark Ross (126) and Jim Schultz (98) are two other juniors who return to the program for their third seasons. Both are aiming for possible spots in the state meet. Other juniors who should crack the starting line-up include Scott Piper (165), Jeff Powers (178), Stan Snider (191) and Greg Gattoni (heavyweight). All these grapplers have had experience in the program over the past two or three years. Many are untested at the varsity level, however.

Jerry Valchine and Jeff White are two other seniors who may get into the starting line-up with hopes of stablizing the Rocks' squad.

Sophomores Steve Becker and Mark Janos, juniors Jeff Dunson and Greg Lipka, and senior transfer Larry Rossetti are other possibilities to break into the starting line-up.

Krueger sees the Sub-8 league as one of the top wrestling conferences in Michigan. Belleville has to be favored to win the league title this season. It is also considered one of the favorites to take the state title.

Edsel Ford has everyone back this season, and Trenton, according to Krueger, is the toughest dual meet squad in the league.

Krueger thinks Salem has one of its most balanced line-ups in recent years.

"I'm going to show up. I'm not going to concede (the league)," the Salem mentor said.

"I think wrestling at Plymouth Salem is here to be a power and we're going to do it. We've got the people to do it this year and it's my job to make sure it gets done."

Egloff's injury feeds deep disappointment

formance, he received an invitation to the regular training camp in July, where he proceeded to beat out veteran Boyd Brown who had been a mainstay with the club for four years.

While his action was limited to special team assignments and double tight end situations, Ron managed to gather in two passes for 27 yards that first year.

The next season Ron fulfilled every boy's dream, starting at the first training camp and reaching all the way to the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

As we talked, I admired his "runners-up" ring. The AFC championship ring. It is beautiful. The ring is the size of two high school graduation rings, and sports a football made up entirely of diamonds in its center.

I asked what he would do if Denver ever won another championship. The imposing bachelor gave a sly smile and replied, "Well I've got nine more fingers."

There was talk of moving Ron to offensive line this year, in reflection of his superior blocking ability; it is talk that Ron does not particularly like to hear.

"I kind of like tight end," he said. "I always liked catching the ball." Still with that change in mind, the Denver management spent their number-two draft choice on Southern California tight end Bill Gay.

The "Blond Bomber" had to prove himself once again.

This time, Ron let his action do his talking. Due to an injury to All-Pro Riley Odoms, Ron was thrust into the starting role during the pre-season.

He won the praise of the Denver coaching staff by leading the team in reception yardage, accumulating 116 yards in seven snares. Included in that batch was an exceptional game against San Francisco, in which he caught four aerials for 65 yards.

Odoms was ready to play at season's start, but Mr. Gay had been sent packing. (he was traded to Detroit).

Still, Ron had shown he was very capable of catching the ball. The statistics showed he gathered in four passes, double his first year total, for 43 yards in Denver's first seven regular season games.

Among that group of catches was his first professional touchdown, a two-yard scoring strike from the had of quarterback Norris Weese.

Then one week later, it was an Egloff block that sprang the ball carrier into the end zone with the winning touchdown in a hard fought battle with the Chicago Bears. Things were falling into place.

But then came the Baltimore battle. Ron was streaking down the field when his hamstring simply snapped. An operation the next day was successful, however, and Ron reports that the leg is nearly back to normal.

Chief cagers devastate Farmington

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Plymouth Canton closed out its regular season with a 53-30 non-league victory over Farmington High School last Tuesday night in girls' basketball action at the Canton gym.

Coach Mike McCauley's Chiefs, 18-2 overall and Western Six League champions, enter district play tonight against Livonia Churchill at Plymouth Salem.

The Falcons from Farmington, coached by Bob Lekovish, finished the regular season with a 9-11 overall record. They host powerful Farmington Our Lady of Mercy tonight in a district semifinal contest.

Canton broke open a close game in the last two minutes of the first quarter. The Chiefs held a 12-10 advantage in the waning moments of the initial period but scored four straight baskets to lead 20-10 before the buzzer.

Once again, it was Canton's full-court pressure which caused numerous Farmington turnovers.

Canton maintained the margin thoughout the ball game, as all its players saw action in the final three quarters.

The Chiefs led 33-20 at halftime and took advantage of the Falcons' cold-shooting third period to lead 43-24 going into the final quarter of play.

Madrid defies age-odds

At the beginning of the junior soccer season, the Canton Madrid decided to compete in the 19-and-under age bracket of the Great Lakes Soccer League, despite featuring a squad of 15 and 16-year-olds.

The age difference didn't seem to bother the Madrid, however, as they went on to win the division title with a 6-0 slashing of Allen Park in a recent championship game.

The triumph advanced the Madrid into a Thanksgiving tournament in Garden City held last weekend.

Goals by David Argonis, John Dudley and Ron Pethrage, along with assists from Dan Burnett and player-coach Howard Monk, helped the Canton squad to the victory over Allen Park.

The defense also played one of its most impressive games of the season, holding Allen Park scoreless.

Thurston topples Bulldogs

Redford Thurston outpointed Livonia Bentley 11-7 during the final eight minutes last week to earn a 43-39 non-league girls' basketball win.

Gina Maceratini netted 12 points for the victors while teammates Jean Rowley and Sue Beger kicked in with nine and eight points, respectively.

Krista Pray led Bentley with 14 points.

"We were just lethargic the whole ball game," said Tom Lang, coach of the Bulldogs. "We just couldn't put it in the hole. We had plenty of shots and rebounds."

Bentley shooters canned only 18 of 78 trys from the field for a miserable 23 per cent accuracy rating.

Carla Hally and Kim Plachta both played while recovering from injuries, but their shooting touch, as well as that of their teammates, was described by Lang as "atrocious."

Jobs in fast food restaurants fill cash needs for teenagers

Bill Pummill, 16, of Garden City is one of the teenagers helping himself financially by working at a McDonald's restaurant. Manager Randy Clark (left) not only supervises Pummill, but also has 50 other employees in the Ford Road establishment. (Staff photo)

By SUSAN ROGERS

To many young people seeking a little extra cash for fun, a car or education, a job at a fast food restaurants seems to be the answer.

Hamburger joints seem to attract lots of young workers, many often still in high school. Of the managers and employees interviewed, both employer and employee are pleased with the situation.

Wendy's Hamburgers, an new chain restaurant on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth, employs about 57 workers, most of whom are high school students.

"I take a lot of time in hiring," said co-manager Mike Bishop. "I look for the best people and do a lot of reference checking before I make a choice. I like to hire kids in school who are willing to work."

And work they do. Wendy's features an assembly-line type set-up, with each crew member assigned to a specific job, from grilling the hamburgers to preparing chili. Bishop said each employee is trained to do a specific job at first and advances to other jobs.

"We like them to know how to do other jobs, too. You never know when you might have to call someone to come in and fill in. There's never a dull moment in this business."

Bishop sees Wendy's and other fast food places as "a great opportunity to earn money." He says he used to pull weeds and dig to earn extra money when he was young, and that this is a better way to go.

"We pay minimum wage, which is $2.65 an hour, but a kid can earn $20 to $40 per week, depending on how long they work," said Bishop. "Some use it for spending money, although we do have about five young people here who are earning money to go to school."

Although Wendy's does provide employees with their striped uniforms, they offer no benefits or paid vacations. The work is hectic, "but we do have a lot of fun around here," said Bishop.

The youngest employees at Wendy's are just 16.

Although Wendy's pays minimum wage—$2.65—it is possible to make as much as $2.80 per hour. Raises are not unhread of, and crew leaders, the employees that put out that extra effort, are rewarded with higher pay, said Bishop.

Advancement at Wendy's means getting into management.

"A person must be 18 in order to qualify for the management trainees program," said Bishop. "He or she must also show the initiative and hard work it takes to be a manager. Right now I have recommended two women from this store to go on. It's not an easy job—a manager susally works up to 50 hours per week."

Bishop believes that working when young is a valuable experience.

"It's a combination of fun and stress," he said. "We depend on teamwork here and everyone has to help."

Bishop said he enjoys working with the young people on his staff and likes "the challenge of trying to get the kids to help themselves."

"Work like this is a demanding experience in a demanding world. The kids learn to work with others and do their job as a team."

Tyrone Sally, 18, of Plymouth, began working at Wendy's in July. Although it wasn't his first job, it was his first in a fast food restaurant.

"I work mainly for the money," said Sally. "I skate in competition and use the money to finance skates, trips, etc. My parents paid for my skating for so long I decided to help them out."

Sally works at Wendy's about 35 hours per week and says he enjoys the work.

"I like the atmosphere of a restaurant and all the crazy people who work here. There is lots of responsibility to the job, but I do enjoy it. I like meeting new people."

Sally isn't sure if he will make "hamburger slinging" his career.

"I haven't really checked into the manager training programs, but I don't think I want to do this for a career right now," he said.

The workers are treated fairly, said Sally, and how you are treated depends on your attitude.

"Some work real hard and some just come in and do enough to get by. The hard workers get paid off in one way or another."

Going to school and having a full-time job isn't a problem for Sally. He goes to school in the morning, his job in the afternoon and skates after work.

About 85 per cent of the workers at McDonald's on Ford Road in Westland are teenagers. Head manager Randy Clark said he has 51 employees now.

Clark says he has several older women employees because it is difficult to find kids to work during school hours.

McDonald's also starts workers at minimum wage, the youngest employees being 16 years of age. McDonald's offers free uniforms, food half price and the yearly anniversary of employment as a day off.

Unlike other food chains, about 95 percent of the managers started out as employees, said Clark.

After employee, you can become a crew chief, then join the manager training program. It takes form about two to five years to work your way up, depending on the person."

Clark said McDonald's offers a training program for new employees as well as managers. The training is in the classroom and on-the-job.

"Most of our employees start out learning one thing and move on to others. They all know how to do just about everything. Some kids come in and say they're too good to do a particular job—those kids usually don't last too long."

At present, the Ford Road McDonald's has in its employment a homecoming queen and several junior miss contestants, said Clark.

"The kids here do a lot of activities together during their off hours," said Clark. "They are from four or five different high schools, but there is no rivalry or anything like that. They learn to meet each other not just on the football field."

Clark finds it challenging to work with kids.

"I have to play all kind of roles. I'm a guidance counselor as well as a big brother. I have to be a psychologist, but can't be a heartbleeder as far as the problems go."

He indicated McDonald's tries to be fair when working around kids' schedules in school.

"We've got lots of kids involved in band, choir and sports," he said. "We try to be fair and work around school, but we can't always bend over backwards."

Bill Pummill, 16, of Garden City, thinks McDonald's does a fair job of working around his school activities.

"I'm in a singing group at school that takes a lot of outside time," said Bill, who has worked at McDonald's for 10 weeks. "They're considerate here and give me the time I need off.

"I told them at first that school is my number one priority now, but that I would like to work. I find I can do both here."

Pummill works because of the money and also to pass the time when he's not in school. He says there aren't enough free-time activities for high school age young persons and he gets bored with nothing to do.

"I enjoy the work—it has it's good days and its bad days, however. I really like cooking and working in a restaurant, but I'd like to do something different with my life."

He added that he thinks minimum wage should be $3 and thinks McDonald's gets their money's worth out of hiring teenagers.

Although not really a hamburger joiny, Arby's, on Middlebelt in Livonia, has it's share of young employees.

According to manager Don Tuma, the bulk of his workers are high school age and older.

"I think the young people seek jobs in the fast food business because such jobs are readily available and there are so many of them around—it's easy to get a job in one," said Yuma.

Training of new employees is done on the job, with an older, more experienced worker, said Tuma. They usually learn five of the restaurant's six jobs depending on age. Employees under 18 aren't allowed to run the roast beef slicer.

Arby's benefits are more extensive than some of the other food establishments, according to Tuma.

"We offer our hourly employees paid vacations, paid meals, paid breaks,a hospitialization plan and a savings bond plan. There are more benefits here than most people would realize."

He added that employees under 18 usually aen't included in the hospitalization plan because most are covered under their parents' insurance plan.

The youngest Arby's employees are 16, and all begin at minimum wage, although after 250 hours on the job they get a 10 cent raise. It continues up from there.

Tuma enjoys working with young people.

"They're so fresh and full of ideas—some good ones and some not so good. We're really molding them for tomorrow. I think it's very valualble for a young person to have a job. They learn the value of the dollar and how hard it is to get."

Cynthia Jugon, 18, of Livonia, is one Arby's employee who has gone on into manager training, which is offered by Arby's. She has worked at Arby's for nine months, deciding on food management as a career after high school graduation last spring.

"I had planned on college, but decided to get into food management after working here. I think they have the best program here," she said.

She added that she thinks the management at Arby's is very fair. She has seen no incidences of managment taking advantage of minors, who are only allowed to work certain hours. She feels the pay is fair.

"I enjoy the work—the people I work with are just great," said Ms. Jugon. "I like the atmosphere and like the challenge of meeting new and interesting people."

Market Watch

By JOHN E. VERNIER

After the 120 point decline from early October to the beginning of November, the stock market gradually stabilized at the 800 level.

The initial surge in stock prices in response to President Carter's announcement of his anti-inflation measures was tempered to some extent by a further increase in the prime lending rate to 11 per cent.

The U.S. dollar has found support since the Carter announcement, which has added to investor confidence.

While it has improved only slightly against most European currencies, it has strengthened considerably compared to the Japanese yen.

That strength, however, is based more on the yen's weakness than it is on the dollar's strength. Japan has a balance of payments problem, just as we do.

Trading activity has declined and the market might best be described as being in a holding pattern.

THERE IS NOT enough evidence yet to convince investors that the steps taken so far by the administration will lick inflation. It will take some time before the true results will become evident.

The stock market is certain to be extremely sensitive to the various economic statistics as they are released.

Another factor that will become increasingly important to the stock market during December concerns transactions motivated by tax considerations.

Capital gains and losses are either taxable or tax deductible. Investors will be making purchases and sales for the primary purpose of reducing their tax liability, or attaining the maximum tax credit.

This is the time of the year when dividend declarations will affect individual companies. Many companies maintain a conservative rate of annual pay-out that may be supplemented with a year-end extra, providing the company has had a good year.

General Motors, for example, has a regular dividend of $4 annually. It is usually supplemented, however, with a mid-year and year-end extra.

The company recently declared a special dividend of $1.50, compared to a special dividend last year of $2.25.

The stock market reacted with disappointment to the declaration, and the stock declined from around 60 to 55. (Of the decline, $2.50 represented the x-dividend, so the true decline was $2.50).

The total pay-out for 1978 by GM is $6 per share. At $55, this computes to a yield of just under 11 per cent.

WALL STREET considered the reduction in the year-end declaration as a signal at GM's management was viewing the future with some concern.

Thomas A. Murphy, chairman of GM's board of directors, stated in an address to the New York Chamber of Commerce and Industry that the reduction was a prudent move in view of the huge expenditures the company must make next year.

He was quoted as saying that "the reduction was apparently misinterpreted by Wall Street as a sign that we lack confidence in the sales outlook for the automobile industry. Let me tell you as strongly as I can that nothing could be further from the mark."

General Motors is generally regarded as a key indicator with regard to stock market strength or weakness. It might serve well to pay particular attention to the market action of General Motors.

The company's fourth quarter, ending Oct. 31, was the 14th consecutive quarter in which record sales and earnings were posted. In all of fiscal 1977, the chain earned $1.7 million, or $1.42 a share, on revenue of $69.7 million.

National Bank of Detroit will celebrate renovation of its Cherry Hill-Merriman office in Westland by presenting a donation of $500 to the Loan Closet of the Westland Fire Fighters Association Thursday. The Loan Closet is a volunteer service sponsored by the association that supplies medical items such as wheelchairs and crutches to citizens on a loan basis.

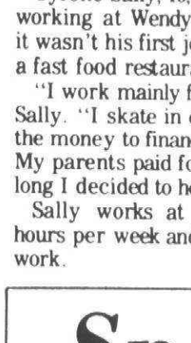

Chrysler-Plymouth dealers won top honors among car dealers in the Detroit area's United Foundation campaign for the second year in a row. Management and employees of Chrysler-Plymouth dealers pledged $43,525 to UF's Torch Drive. Thirteen dealers earned UF's Gold Award for maximum employee participation. Among them were Rollie Barrett Chrysler-Plymouth of Livonia and Metro Chrysler-Plymouth of Garden City.

Manufacturers National Corp. has declared a quarterly cash dividend of 50 cents to be paid Dec. 15 to shareholders of record Nov. 28. It is the first dividend to be paid on the increased number of shares that resulted from the three-for-two stock split to shareholders of record Sept. 1. Manufacturers is a bank holding company with banks in Livonia and Southfield, among other cities.

The voters were fair

Citizens have spoken, and now those wishes will be implemented.

On the whole, the voice of citizens heard at the Nov. 7 election was quite reasonable and responsible.

While I may not agree with every decision, neither does anyone else. Taken as a ingle voice, the message was not one which should cause anyone to shudder much.

On the issue of taxes, the voters sidestepped the slashing approach of Robert Tisch and chose the more moderate limitation step proposed by Richard Headlee.

The voucher plan was likewise turned down as too drastic a move away from the principle of public education established in this state since its inception, almost.

THE APPROVAL of Headlee will not make life easy for school, city and township governmental leaders. But neither will life be a nightmare.

The immediate impact, locally, is the requirement to gain approval of voters before borrowing any money for renovating existing buildings or constructing new buildings.

Thus the City of Plymouth must go to the electorate to seek a "yes" vote to borrow funds for an addition to the city hall. Without Headlee, the city would have been free to borrow that money with a vote of the commission (the people's elected representative), and pay off the loan by levying additional millage as long as total millage did not exceed the ceiling in the city charter.

Holding a special election will delay construction of the city hall addition, and prices will go up during that time. But that is the price residents will pay for a taste of direct democracy, which apparently they prefer to trusting elected representatives.

A lot could be said about why elected boards and commissions should be allowed to make such decisions, but I don't choose now to present arguments against an idea which voters already have approved. I accept the verdict.

The school district also is allowed by current law to approve bonds for construction and levy a certain amount of mills without voter approval. The school board never has taken advantage of that provision in law, always choosing instead to seek voter approval for bond issues.

So Headlee doesn't represent any great change for the schools, as far as raising funds for construction goes. They simply will continue to follow past practice.

THE REAL IMPACT of Headlee will come later on in 1979.

One of the first will be "bookkeeping" problem for tax-collecting units—city, township, county. If the governmental unit's total tax base increases at a rate faster than the rise in state personal income (plus an inflation factor), then the millage rate must be lowered before the tax bills are sent out. If the tax bills already are sent out, then the local units must rebate property tax payments to achieve the balance required by the Headlee proposal's formula.

There's nothing particularly wrong, at the local level, with adjusting property tax millage rates as the tax base rises to keep total revenues the same from year to year. The idea is fine if we overlook the bookkeeping problems.

We also must overlook present level of services and be willing to accept some reductions. The problem, of course, is that there doesn't exist any magical force in the marketplace which will make sure that such things as insurance and utility expenses don't rise faster than the state's personal income.

When total revenue is limited to the cost of living, and some expenses in the free market are allowed to rise faster than average inflationary growth, then some cutbacks in service will be needed to balance the budget. And I think voters on Nov. 7 were saying that such cuts would be acceptable.

The other problem, on a state level, is the impact Headlee will have on the sunny day fund. The state has accumulated a "surplus" in revenues to be held in reserve for the rainy days (like the recession expected in mid or late-'79). The reserve is being held to reduce the need for drastic cutbacks in state funding of schools and other services during a single year when state income will drop.

The tax limitation proposal will result in the dissipitation of the sunny day funds. Thus some very drastic cuts in state funding can be expected during the latter part of 1979 or early in 1980.

As 1978 draws to an end, I don't foresee any crisis emerging from the Headlee proposal being enacted. And I don't see any crisis in the next couple of years either. Things will get difficult, and public budgets will become very tight. There will be a contraction of services, but likely not a wholesale elimination which would have come with Tisch.

Toads, for good or evil, had great magical use

In Shakespeare's "As You Like It," the Duke remembers:

"Sweet are the uses of adversity; Which like the toad, ugly and venomous; Wears yet a precious jewel in his head."

In Shakespeare's time, it was believed that certain old toads concealed a precious jewel or magical stone inside their heads.

It was also believed that stones which resembled a toad in shape and color had magical properties. It was thought that you could tell whether such a stone was genuine by holding it in front of a real toad.

If the toad jumped toward the stone, it was real. If it jumped away, the stone was counterfeit.

Perhaps because these little animals resemble ugly, grotesque, miniature people, many superstitions have existed about witches turning themselves, or other people, into toads.

When frightened, the toad gives off a substance through the glands in its skin. This substance contains two quite potent poisons. Dogs have been know to die of this poisoning.

However, there is no truth whatsoever in the belief that handling toads causes warts.

The milky poisonous substance which toads emit contains bufagin, which has properties similar to digitalis and serontonin. It causes the blood vessels to constrict. So it is not hard to see why witches sometimes used toads in recipes for making medicines to treat heart patients.

They also used dried toad's blood as a remedy for diabetes. Recently, at McGraw University in Ontario, it was discovered that toad's blood is very nigh in insulin content.

I WOULDN'T BE surprised, however, to learn that the earlier witches had as many failures as they did successes in the use of their strange cures, because toads also contain bufotenine, an hallucinogenic drug resembling LSD in its effects. Some of their heart patients may have died from the shock.

Toads, as well as frogs, were frequently used in spells to cause rain. Some people still say that to see a toad crossing a road is a sign of a storm.

In Rumania, a toad-killer was believed capable of murdering his own mother. Such was the reverence for toads that they were not killed under any circumstances.

In Devonshire, England, toads were burned because they were believed to be in league with the devil.

In 1593, Thomas Hyll wrote a book on gardening. He stated that before you plant seeds, you should draw a toad on a string around the garden, and then bury it in the center of the garden. After the seeds are sown, the toad should be dug up to prevent vegetables from being bitter.

If a gardener took these precautions, he would then have a successful crop, undamaged by "creeping things or small animals."

I don't know about that, but it is good to have a live toad in your garden, for they eat an enormous amount of harmful insects.

The Stroller:

Let them eat poi

By W. W. EDGAR

In recent weeks the newspapers have carried full-page invitations to enjoy the sunshine, the cooling breezes, the wonderful beaches and the scenery on the Hawaiian Islands.

The invitations are attractive and luring enough to cause a person to consider hocking the family jewels to get away from the oncoming winter weather—even if just for a short time.

But after reading and digesting every word, The Stroller feels that the invitation, as genuine as it could be, also should tell the prospective tourists how to prepare for a stay on the islands.

For instance, not a word is said about the exercises that should be taken to enjoy some of the Hawaiian pleasures to the fullest. There is not a word of warning of the embarrassment that may be suffered if you have not learned how to arise from the floor after feasting at one of the Japanese gardens.

And neither is there a word of advice about the strange sight of seeing the natives enjoying their favorite dish, poi, by sticking their index finger into the bowl and then licking it with great enthusiasm.

These things can cause great embarrassment on the trip. The Stroller should know. He has been there. And he has suffered the embarrassment that comes to those who haven't been warned.

THE STROLLER never will forget the night he provided a lot of laughs in the most famous of the Japanese tea houses along Waikiki Beach.

He was in a party that was invited by the Hawaiian bowling proprietors to enjoy a "real" Japanese dinner. When we arrived and the gates were opened, The Stroller's breath was almost taken away by the beauty of the gardens. Then, on entering the house, he was asked to leave his shoes at the door. That was not all.

The dinner was served on tables only about a foot high and we were asked to sit on the floor to enjoy the meal. Getting down was easy. But when it came time to arise, The Stroller could not make it. He had to have help and was the laughing stock of the party. So, if you are planning to go to Hawaii be sure to practice getting up from a sitting position on the floor.

Trying to be polite and eating the poi was another matter. We were guests at what was called an "official" luau. Everything was fine until we sat at the table that was well stocked with all the popular fruits of the Pacific Islands and the large platters of pig that we had seen being barbecued.

We were just about to enjoy everything at the table until the poi was passed. The Stroller looked at it and wondered how to eat it. Noticing that he was a bit puzzled, one of the native hosts smilingly said: "This way." Then he stuck his index finger in the bowl, pulled it out and licked it.

THAT MAY HAVE been where Col. Sanders got his idea for the slogan "finger licking good." But to The Stroller it was a sight that brought a peculiar lump in his throat.

He turned his back on his host and then called to his party, "Let's get the hell out of here and get something good to eat."

We did just that. We paraded up the main street at the beach on a Saturday night and dined at the Candliss, the American restaurant, where we all enjoyed a good steak.

So let this be a warning to the tourists who may accept the colorful invitation to Hawaii: Practice getting off the floor from a sitting position, and learn to stick your finger in a bowl of poi, which some in The Stroller's party claimed "looked like wallpaper paste and tasted just as bad."

Contacts cost jumps with price of services

Contact lenses are becoming more affordable. However, a large portion of the cost for lenses usually goes for professional fees and related services.

The cost of the lenses themselves may be a relatively small part of the total charge.

Ask your prescribing doctor for a cost breakdown and compare it to the price offered by others. A discount offer may apply to the lenses alone and not include all physicians services.

Ramblings

Utility futility

There's nothing like moving to make you believe the whole world has gone mad, including yourself.

Struggling with boxes and furniture is nothing compared to the complete frustration one faces with our friendly public utilities.

I used to believe the process of getting phone, electricity, gas, et al, connected without undue mental anguish was performed by the average person as a matter of routine. I was the only one who had problems.

As I mention the woes of dealing with utility companies to others, I noticed there was always that quick, understanding nod followed by a nightmarish tale to rival my worst moments with Ma Bell.

Actually, the phone company was reasonably cooperative this time around. But I don't think anyone over at the Bell Telephone Co. knows what a plain, ordinary telephone with a dial and an unassuming color looks like anymore.

When you call to get a phone put in, the representative goes through a big routine about all the services available to you, such as call forwarding and metro service and the like.

These services, like most things in life, do not come free.

All I ever wanted was a phone I could pick up, dial, and be reasonably assured that I would be connected with the party I'm seeking without undue effort.

SOME OF the services are marvelous gimmickry. Imagine being able to program your phone to ring at someone else's house. You could really drive your neighbors crazy.

I've wondered if it's possible to program your phone to ring at a friend's house in Alaska, so the poor unsuspecting fool who calls is stuck with a monstrous phone bill.

By the time I get the rep convinced that a phone of minimum capacity is quite all right with me, she launches into a description of the types of phones available.

You can get phones that look like Mickey Mouse, phones that you hide in boxes and phones that look suitable for a bordello. They still have phones that look like phones, but you have to ask.

There also seems to be a need to get entire litters of telephones rather than one lowly model.

I do not live in a large place. I can hear a phone no matter where it is.

Nonetheless, I'm supposed to feel compelled to get a phone for every room in the house, preferably in different styles.

Bad as the entire process of getting a telephone is, I found my first experience with the gas company even more traumatic.

I THOUGHT I would be smart and tell all the utilities to come on the same morning so I only had to stay home part of one day rather than several times.

As everyone knows, public utilities don't have to adhere to schedules. There's no such thing as setting an exact time for a service person to arrive so you can make arrangements to be there.

Instead, you are told the service person will be at your home either sometime during the morning or sometime during the afternoon.

I arranged to stay home all morning for the utility hook-ups (unwillingly) and was delighted to find the phone installed by 8:30 a.m.

The gas service person never showed. I called the company, where the rep said there was no record of my having requested service. I know I called, and everyone else in the office knew I called. Apparently the gas company was in the twilight zone that day.

Of course, it meant another morning of waiting around.

I've decided there's only one way to cope, since you can't exactly take your business elsewhere. You become quite familiar with Murphy's Law ("If anything can go wrong, it will.").

Then you repeat slowly to yourself, "It's only a movie, it's only a movie. . ."

Haze Wilson, Community Relations Manager, Livonia, offers you this telephone tip:

"Two-Party Budget Service may help you save money on your phone bill."

Two-Party Budget Service is especially designed for people with fixed incomes, such as retirees. For a low monthly charge* you would share a two-party line and have an allowance of 44 local calls a month. Extra local calls you make are only 5.1¢ each. This is about the lowest-cost phone service in the country. If you think Two-Party Budget Service might be what you need, just call your Michigan Bell Business Office and talk to a service representative about it.

*Plus rural zone charges where applicable.

LOUISE SNIDER

Ballerina's story bubbles honestly despite soapy touch

Nothing could be easier than to tear apart "Slow Dancing in the Big City" (PG) for its outmoded conventions, outdated leading character and outrageously sudsy ending.

Nothing would be easier, except that it would be dishonest to ignore the genuine emotional appeal of this film's sappy combination of documentary honesty and dramatic cliches.

"Slow Dancing" devotes large segments of its footage to the world of ballet. Its de-glamorized presentation of dancers committed to long hours of agonizing repetition and exhausting work is one of the major merits of this film.

Another is the choice of Anne Ditchburn, ballerina and choreographer with the National Ballet of Canada, to play Sarah, the principal dancer and leading female. She conveys the intensity, as well as the beauty and talent, that distinguishes the character.

SARAH IS REHEARSING with an independent ballet company preparing for its debut at Lincoln Center. She's young, svelte and very single-minded about her career.

She has just ended an affair with a wealthy and snobbish admirer when she meets Lou Friedlander (Paul Sorvino), who lives in an adjoining apartment.

Lou is a tough talking newsman with a heart of gold. He's an overweight, middle-aged slob more familiar with pasta than pas de deux. Everyone knows and loves Lou, who writes a regular column about the little people ("little" meaning lack of status, not stature).

He is not your '70s reporter working at a video terminal or carrying a portable recorder to interviews. He's from a bygone era, but Sorvino brings warmth and charm to the role and makes you want to believe in him.

Somehow the unlikely twosome of Sarah and Lou become likely. In spite of severe pain from injured muscles (she needs an operation, naturally), Sarah's practicing night and day for the Lincoln Center performance. Lou respects her courage and dedication; she admire his compassion and concern. As she puts it, "I walk around New York and everything I see is yukke. You walk around and all you see are good stories."

JOHN AVILDSEN, who directed "Rocky," directed "Slow Dancing." It displays some of the same feeling for gritty authenticity of sets and, more to the point, it shares the same kind of upbeat feeling and optimism.

The story isn't credible, the subplot is hokey, several characters are stereotyped and the ending is absurd. Against these sizable deficiencies, you have to weigh the engaging performance of Sorvino, the artistry of Ditchburn, some truly exciting dance sequences and the appeal of an old-fashioned love story: Boy meets girl, boy loses girl, boy gets girl—without the obligatory scene between the sheets.

NEW RELEASES

THE BIG FIX (PG). Another fetching performance by Richard Dreyfuss who plays a former college activist turned private eye.

BLOODBROTHERS (R). Hard look at lives of two blue-collar brothers whose macho values affect their families.

THE BOYS FROM BRAZIL (R). Some fine actors at their worst (except for Laurence Olivier) in loony film about fiendish Nazi plot.

A DREAM OF PASSION (R). Melina Mercouri and Ellen Burstyn star in modern story that strains in its parallels with Greek drama, "Medea."

GIRL FRIENDS (PG). Melanie Mayron and Anita Skinner star in Claudia Weill's directorial debut that focuses on marriage versus career.

GOIN' SOUTH (PG). Fine character study by Jack Nicholson in adventure that proves there's still hope for the Western.

INTERIORS (PG). Woody Allen's serious film explores the tensions within a family where neuroses and artistic sensitivity dominate their lives.

LORD OF THE RINGS. Hobbits and the creatures of Middle Earth are energetically recreated in Ralph Bakshi's animated version of J. R. R. Tolkien's classic fantasy.

MAGIC (R). Anthony Hopkins is a psychotic ventriloquist with an x-rated dummy.

NATIONAL LAMPOON'S ANIMAL HOUSE (R). Outrageous and raunchy comedy about life at Delta Fraternity House, the bottom-of-the-barrel fraternity on a small college campus in the early '60s.

PARADISE ALLEY (PG). Cornball sentimentality but also a lot of vitality in Sylvester Stallone's upbeat film about three brothers from tough neighborhood.

SEPTEMBER 30, 1955 (PG). Richard Thomas stars in wistful reminiscence of the '50s set at time of James Dean's death.

SLOW DANCING IN THE BIG CITY (PG). Sudsy story but super dancing distinguishes this romantic film about a newspaper columnist in love with a ballerina.

UP IN SMOKE (R). Dope jokes from Cheech and Chong who celebrate the weed in their usual gross manner.

Rehearsal of "Waltz of the Flowers" for Severo's upcoming performances.

Severo's ballet classic marks change

Story: CORINNE ABATT
Photos: STEPHEN CANTRELL

When the house lights dim and Sandra Severo's ballet company appears on the stage of the Birmingham Theater Dec 1, 2 and 3, it will signal the beginning of a new era.

The company will give performances Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and a 2 p.m. Saturday matinee. The Friday and Saturday 8 p.m. programs will include "Serenade" choreographed by George Balenchine, "Concerto" and "Portrait of a Ball" both with choreography by Ms. Severo.

The Saturday matinee and the 7 p.m. Sunday evening program will be the "Nutcracker" ballet.

FOR 20 YEARS the Severo ballet company's "Nutcracker" with the Detroit Symphony was as much a part of the holiday celebration as corner Santas and "Jingle Bells." She has no exact count of how many children saw it, but she knows they spanned more than one generation.

"Now," Ms. Severo said as she made plans and attended to last minute details for the local performance, "We're right back at the beginning again."

For in those decades when her studio was located closer to the city, her students were minutes away. As the population moved out, so did her students.

She estimates that three-quarters of all her students now live in this community or close by. Finding a location was a task that several years.

"I need a minimum of 5,000 square feet and I like to be on the second floor," she said leading a tour of her second floor studios at 1610 South Woodward.

SHE OPENED closets full of costumes and storage areas stacked with scenery to illustrate the need for a large room for dance where she can hold her Saturday seminar programs as well as classes, smaller rehearsal rooms, offices and ample storage space.

Because it is a child's fantasy—sparkling, romantic fantasy—"Nutcracker" costumes alone occupy considerable storage space.

This will be the same "Nutcracker" some of today's adults saw at Masonic and Ford auditoriums in years past.

"In my 20 years with the Detroit Symphony, everytime I made a little change, everybody had a fit," she said with a wide smile. "If I left out the Russians one year, everybody would want to know if the Russians were back the next year?"

She began to realize the passing of time when one year's mice were snowflakes (or assistant snowflakes) the following year and sugar plums after that.

Even the symphony musicians would comment on how much one little dancer had grown in the year between performances.

The absence of live musicians in the Birmingham performance leaves her somewhat saddened, but the cost of hiring 35 professional musicians well-acquainted with ballet is financially out of the question.

But, as she was having the music tapes checked this week to be certain there weren't any unwelcome clicks, she said quietly, "We're trying to give the best possible performance that we can."

SOMEDAY SHE hopes to have a new production of "Nutcracker." But that presents problems.

"Changing requires so much money for new costumes and sets and I don't want to do it unless it can be first class all the way." She returned to the project at hand.

In Balenchine's "Serenade," the taping of the music is tricky because Balenchine didn't stay with the score as written by Tchaikovsky.

"Now," said Ms Severo, eyes bright, "Mr. Balenchine has taken all kinds of priviledge with "Serenade." He cut part of Tchaikovsky's music, but the choreography is fantastic. He can build dances in such a way that the dancers actually become instruments for the score."

Barber shop singers at Westland Tuesday

The Wayne chapter of SPEBSQSA, the barber shop quartet society, will sing at Westland Shopping Center (Warren at Wayne Road) at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 28, in the center mall.

The concert will be followed by a reception in the auditorium on the first level, and is part of an audition program where men who have heard the "barber shoppers" can meet members of the Wayne chapter's Wonderland Chorus, who have been district champions four times.

The Wayne chapter represents over 25 communities in Western Wayne County, and Oakland and Washtenaw and Livingston counties. Social meetings are held in Livonia every third Friday, and the Wonderland Chorus rehearses in Plymouth every Tuesday.

Men do not have to be opera singers, nor are they required to be able to sight read. If they can carry a tune—or can harmonize—they could become members of the singing society.

Men who are interested but who cannot be at Westland on Tuesday can call the Wayne chapter evenings at 525-0370.

And the moral of the story

In a land of cotton, polyester is best forgotten

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

When asked to name the highlight of a trip, I often remember later some memorable incident not listed in the travel brochures. Like cows.

In two Hindu countries like India and Nepal, cows are more than a religious and philosophical conversational topic.

Sometimes they are a problem. If you have ever seen a parade horse leave a pile of manure on the street, you'll understand my point.

It is one thing to know in your head that Hindus harbor sacred cows. It is, however, another thing to find them walking around parking lots, holding up rush hour traffic or eating the corn spread out by a frustrated farmer.

Every traveler to this part of the world has at least one cow story.

Sheila Holden of Farmington remembers a day in Calcutta when a bank was closed because a cow chose a revolving door in which to settle its frame.

I have seen an Indian market man, with a basket of lettuce over his shoulder, jump into action when a cow started chomping at the lettuce.

When you ask local people about their sacred cows, you get interesting answers. Many Indians eat meat, but beef sells for half the price of goat's meat because beef is not in demand.

It is illegal to slaughter cows in Nepal, but you will find beef on the menu.

There are cows in single-file and in herds along every farm road, and they would seem to be good milk providers.

At least one restauranteur in Nepal told me disgustedly that he serves the milk of water buffalo because the cows don't give enough. They are not bred selectively and they're scrawny.

IT IS EXHAUSTING to travel in countries like India and Nepal because you are constantly bombarded with information and impressions of many different aspects of a foreign culture. Cows are only one of them.

TRAVEL LOG of Iris Jones

By the time we had traveled for three weeks in the Indian subcontinent and were winding up our trip to Nepal, we were spent.

It's a kind of sensory indigestion, a circuit overload, that comes from absorbing too many things in too short a time.

It was in this mood, our weariness compounded by dysentery, that we walked one day down the street of the ancient city of Bhadgaon, also known as Bhaktapur, in the Katmandu Valley of Nepal.

We toured the royal palaces, walked the tiered temples, photographed the people in their doorways and the drying corn and red peppers in the square.

We wandered down a narrow stone street, between open-fronted shops, where women squatted, children slept and men smoked pipes and chatted. The shopkeepers watched us go by.

Rounding a corner, we were confronted by a large white bull standing aimlessly by the road. Micky, my husband and photographer, couldn't resist that picture. When the shutter had snapped, the bull decided to walk along with us a way.

A few steps down the street the bull decided to pull his horse-on-parade act, depositing his diarrhea on the street. Apparently, he, too, had dysentery.

Micky leaped. And then cursed as the grime found its mark on the back of his brown polyester slacks. I could imagine how all this would look from a flying saucer.

Here were two weary travelers with too little sleep and too much sensory overload, walking down an ancient stone street in the Himalayas being spattered with manure by a sacred white bull. It was too much and I started to laugh.

"Don't laugh too loud until you look at the back of your new pink skirt," Micky said indignantly. I laughed harder.

We became the sightseer and the sight. They don't really see too many people in brown slacks and pink polyester skirts in Bhadgoaon, Nepal.

I'm sure they had a story to tell while they squatted by the road that night, about two tourists seen stumbling down the street laughing hysterically.

BITS AND PIECES — Farmington Hills Parks and Recreation has designed exactly the kind of trip needed by confirmed travelers who can't take time to get out of town this time of year.

A Christmas Shopping Spree included as a guided tour of the Rennaisance Center, a shopping trip downtown and lunch at the Plaza Hotel Thursday, Dec. 7.

The bus leaves Farmington Hills City Hall at 9:30 a.m. and returns at 3:30 p.m. For information, call 474-6115.

The three big tour destinations among Wayne and Oakland County travelers, who are swamping tour offices for Christmas travel, are Mexico, the Carribean and Hawaii. That's according to Jack Thomas of Elliot Tours, who is convinced this week that "everybody in the state is going away for Christmas."

If you are a traveler or a travel agent, we'd like to hear where you or your clients are going for Christmas. Call me at 356-3366, or write 22170 W. Nine Mile, Southfield 48075.

Katmandu

Palaces to poverty, a land of contrast

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

In Katmandu, thousands of years of civilization cross in the main square of the old city.

There is the Courtyard of the Living Goddess, where a divinely appointed child lives until puberty. To the right is Freak Street, home of the blue-jeaned flower children of the world, and to the left, ancient temples rise against blue Himalayan sky.

The square is an unbelievable pageantry of daily life. Occasional cars push through men carrying sacks of wood, piles of grass and other things atop their shoulders. Four small girls in English school dress, and a group of women in saris, mingle near shops which sell puppets, yak skin coats and masks for dancing.

Two boys both carry a long pipe to a construction site and other boys hassle tourists, trying to sell the visitors silver prayer wheels, beads, and wooden flutes. A surge of people moves through and around bicycle-driven rickshaws, known to insiders as Nepali helicopters.

Down narrow streets in every direction there are Buddhist and Hindu temples, roadside tables where merchants sell wool, food, hardware, clothes, and numerous carvings. Winding through it all, oblivious to time, are single sacred cows and pairs of wandering goats.

This is the land of James Hilton's mythical "Lost Horizon" city. Nepal was off-limits to foreigners until the mid-1950s, when the government began to encourage tourism.

The government is eager for tourists. The adventurous will find the year 1979 (2035 in Nepal) an ideal time to discover this country. It is westernized enough to provide tourist facilities in key places, but the country and its people still follow the ancient civilization travelers journey to see.

ROYAL NEPAL airlines has daily flights from the Indian capital of Delhi to the Nepalese capital of Katmandu. Mountaintops rise above the clouds like icebergs as you approach the Himalayas. The lush green Katmandu Valley is in the south of a country, sandwiched between Tibet and India.

At the airport, it is easy for a person to believe that he is in Wenatchee Valley of Washington State or the Okanagan Valley of Canada, where green mountains also rise from a narrow valley floor.

Inside the terminal, Nepalese men in tight white leggings, suit jackets and Nepali caps drape visitors with garlands of fresh flowers. On the terminal veranda, young men in denim lounge against the railing, and, in the parking lot, cows wander among the cars. The Rockies, it's not.

The Nepalese helicopter is a primary form of transportation.

In quick glimpses from the road, Katmandu is a Hollywood movie come to life. A Gold temple tops above two-story brick buildings beside the paved road. Monkeys roam freely, cars move amid bicycle carts; people move in and out of darkened narrow wooden doorways.

This and other cities in Katmandu Valley are much as they have been for centuries, but two-lane highways and some modern buildings have been added.

SEVERAL HOTELS are available in the city and on the outskirts. The Soaltee Oberei, part of the world-wide Oberei chain, is a multi-story hotel with swimming pools, gambling casino and western restaurants. Menus are international.

Local tour companies will take you to the Monkey Temple, set in a golden glitter of rooftops above the city; the old city streets with their royal palace and adjoining temples; the neighboring cities of Patan, and Bhaktapur—local places of interest.

They will also arrange tours along the terraced rice fields to Pokhara, at the foot of Annapurna; mountain window seats on the daily flight to circle Mount Everest; trekking; or to Jungle Tops, where you can camp in relative style among the animals of the mountains.

There also is smaller English-style accommodations like at Dwarika's Katmandu Village Hotel, a small brick inn set among English gardens and grapefruit trees.

Here the Shrestra family is trying to preserve and restore the carved windows and doorways which are visibly falling down all over Nepal, and replaced by simpler modern frames.

Tourists may hunger for the old world of this Hindu kingdom, but the local people value contemporary goods. Nepalese boys will ignore a golden temple to point out a modern hotel, and the young want nothing more than a pair of American blue jeans.

The government is determined to encourage tourism while preserving tradition. A first-class presentation of authentic costumed dances from around the country is presented weekends by the Nepalese Culture Society, followed by an authentic Nepalese dinner.

These are facts that tourists must know, but the real experience of Katmandu and Nepal is on the streets and on the mountainsides. Often a bus is stalled for one of the colorful festivals, held every few weeks, which help the poor to survive their otherwise dismal lives.

In a huge soccer field, people buy goats to sacrifice in the temple. But they are practical people, for after the sacrifice, they eat the goats. Foreigners cannot enter the sacred inner temples where sacrifices occur.

Outside an ancient royal palace, a carved figure of a king sits high above the street. He faces the golden doorway of the living goddess of his realm, a young girl always chosen from the same family to symbolize the divine gods.

She remains a living goddess until she bleeds at puberty, or from some inadvertent wound. Until then, she lives in her quarters high above the street, appearing only for holy days. She cannot come down to play, but the street children can go up to her quarters to play.

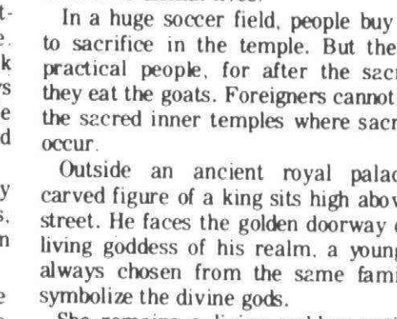

On the highway, built by the Chinese towards Pokhara, an educated guide with an English accent talks about cows. He says, "If this bus hits and kills a cow, the driver will go to jail for five years and I will go to jail for three years. If I must choose between hitting a cow and a man I will hit the man. If I thought the driver would hit a cow, I would grab the wheel and drive us off the road." Just one of many reported, but unconfirmed penalties for such an act.

From a bevy of open-air markets to one of the last colonies of flower children in the world, Katmandu offers an interesting array of both old and new. (Photos by Micky Jones)

The Stroller:

By W. W. EDGAR

Stroller ponders crusade

For the first time in his life, The Stroller has developed an urge to launch a crusade.

Born and raised a "Blue Stocking" Presbyterian who was taught that if you live to drown you'll never be hanged, he always has taken things as they come—one day at a time—and has never raised a fuss.

But events of the last few days have caused him to weaken a bit and it all came about because of the outlandishly lengthy ballots that will confront the voters on election day.

For one reason or another the Stroller and his helpmate are granted the courtesy of using "absentee" ballots. They save us a trip to the polls and the possibility of standing for long stretches in the line waiting to get a chance to go behind the curtain and pull the levers for our choices.

Election after election came and we used to sit at the kitchen table and smile at the ease with which we performed our duties as good citizens.

This year, however, when the ballots reached our home, there was a great change. Instead of a single sheet containing the ballot three sheets fell from the envelope for each of us. It seemed that the kitchen table was filled with them.

Then, for the greater part of an hour, we studied the proposals. We not only studied them, but we discussed them, and then voted.

"This is an outrage," we said to each other. "Three ballots for each of us and the better part of an hour in study before we can vote."

For a time we laughed it off, thinking that maybe we were getting a bit touchy as the years rolled on. But The Stroller soon found out that we were not alone in our thinking.

An elderly gent in the adjoining booth at lunch the next day let the other diners know that he was mad about the same thing—the lengthy ballot.

"Worked at it for almost an hour" he said. "So how do they expect the voters who go behind the curtains to read all those amendments in three minutes? They just won't be able to do it. Then what happens? They'll either be told to hurry up or the lines will be voting for hours after the polls close."

After taking a breath he continued, "Don't forget, the law says that anybody in line at closing time must be given the right to vote. If the voters take the time to study behind the curtain the polls may not close for hours. There should be a limit to those amendments."

To quiet the old gent, The Stroller pointed out that these amendments are giving the voters the right to select which laws they want, to which the complaining senior citizen broke in, "What are those fellows in Lansing getting paid for? They're supposed to make the laws."

It didn't help when The Stroller pointed out it was Abraham Lincoln who, in his Gettysburg address, said, "This nation, of the people, by the people and for the people shall long endure."

"Okay," the old gent said, "But let them cut down on the amendments and those long ballots. Better yet, why not have all the elections with absentee ballots. Then we could study them and take time to vote. And think of all the money that would be saved. We wouldn't have to have those costly voting machines and all that help. Mailing us the ballots wouldn't cost near as much."

It was a convincing argument. The Stroller had to agree right there; and birth was given to the crusade for the overhauling of our election policies. Let's cut out the voting booths and have everyone do his voting at home after studying the ballot around the kitchen table—with no three minute time limit. What do you think?

Save-a-Life Day planned

In an effort to boost traditionally low donor turnout during the holiday season, the Southeastern Michigan chapter of the Red Cross is sponsoring its annual Save-a-Life Sunday on Dec. 31.

The Livonia Blood Center will be open that day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The center is located at 15457 Middlebelt.

"Industry is shut down during the week between Christams and New Year's Day, cutting off one important source of blood," said A.W. Shafer, M.D., director, Southeastern Michigan Red Cross blood center.

The holiday season also means there are fewer actual collection days and fewer people who are thinking about donating blood during this period, he said.

This year's goal is to collect 1,000 units of blood for patients in approximately 75 hospitals in the five county area which includes Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, St. Clair and Washtenaw counties.

The VIEW from 461 SOUTH MAIN

by ELLIE GRAHAM

THANKSGIVING 1978 is history, but along with the turkey soup, some warm thoughts remain about some very special people.

There's John Ruehl, who lives on Roselawn in Walled Lake. John works for Thomson Sand and Gravel, Inc. in Northville.

He was driving his truck north on Sheldon Road last week when he saw a young woman dashing down the road. He saw something fall out of her purse. The wind picked it up and blew it to the side of the road.

The young lady was late for work. When she finally got her car started, it stalled out a couple of miles from home.

She had pushed it to the side of the road and was heading for Gallimore Elementary School to make a telephone call to her office. She was completely unaware that her paycheck had blown away in the morning breeze.

She found out later that afternoon when she received a telephone call. John Ruehl was making another run into Canton and was heading south on Sheldon when he decided to stop and look for the windblown paper.

It was a check, already endorsed and ready to cash. After making the phone call, he put it in an envelope and mailed it to the owner, Bridget Lucas, the receptionist at our Plymouth office.

And if it hadn't been our Bridget, we never would have known about the incident and had the opportunity to put John Ruehl at the top of our special people list.

GOOD GUYS don't always wear white hats. If they did, the Plymouth Civitans would be eligible many times over.

Their latest project is going to involve a lot of hard work, but they have the promise of manpower to follow through.

It all has to do with the meals on wheels program for senior citizens and shutins. Hot meals are served each day to area senior citizens in Tonquish Creek Manor.

The Plymouth-Canton-Northville YMCA delivers the meals to persons who cannot get to the manor. Y volunteers make the deliveries in the Y van.

During the winter months, delivery to persons in the more remote rural areas is almost impossible. Some of the elderly people are unable to get to their mail boxes even in good weather. But after a heavy snowfall, they are completely isolated.

At their last meeting, the Civitans approved the purchase of two snowblowers. They have decided that the meals-on-wheels will get through this winter—whatever the weather.

Working from a list provided by the YMCA, club members will be out with their snowblowers, keeping the seniors' driveways open for the volunteers and the hot noon meal deliveries.

THEN THERE WAS a call from Mickey Walker of Redford Township.

He was handing out bouquets to everyone involved in welcoming the Sault Ste. Marie World War I bandsmen to Plymouth.

"I've never seen anything like those people out there," said Mickey. "They're a fantastic group. In less then 24 hours they had arranged a reception that was out of this world."

He has plaudits for Carl Lampton, president of the Plymouth Rotary Club; Arnie Williams, another Rotarian; the Fife and Drum Corps; the Veterans of Foreign Wars; the American Legion; the Mayflower Hotel; and the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

"You know it's a good thing we arranged for an escort from the Sheriff's Department. They had a new bus driver and he didn't have the vaguest idea about how to get to Plymouth. The escort led them right into town," said Walker.

SPECIAL PEOPLE at yesterday's sesquicentennial services at First United Methodist Church of Plymouth were those who had been members for 50 years or more.

They were not all able to be there, but their names were read by Sanford Burr with Pearl Wilson heading the list. She joined the church in 1899.

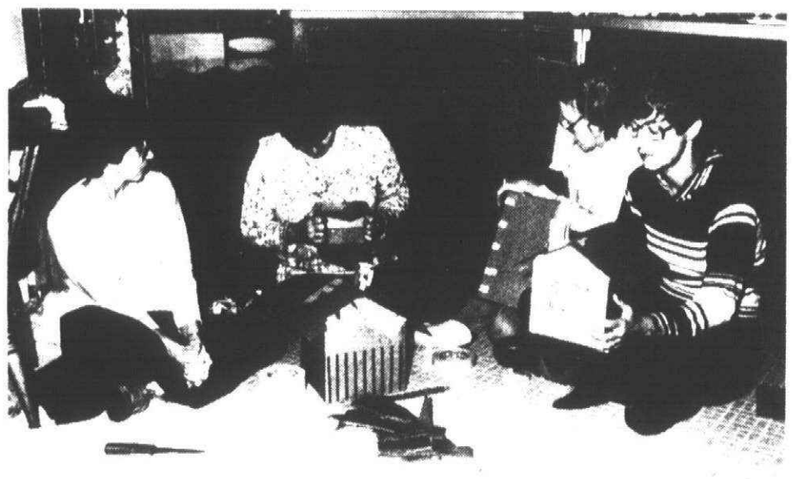

The others are: 1911, Edna Blunk; 1916, Ruth Thomas; 1917, Nellie Bird, Perry Richwine and Donald Sutherland; 1918, Irene Shaw, Roy Stanley and Earl Wellman; 1920, Cora Blunk, Alonzo Brockelhurst and Minnie Hill; 1922, Ernest Allison, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Coverdill, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Fillmore and Edna Taylor.

In 1923, Mrs. George Fischer; 1924, Bernard Curtis, Ada Daggett and Mrs. George Schmidt; 1926, Angie Blunk and Mable Blunk; 1927, Carletiends.

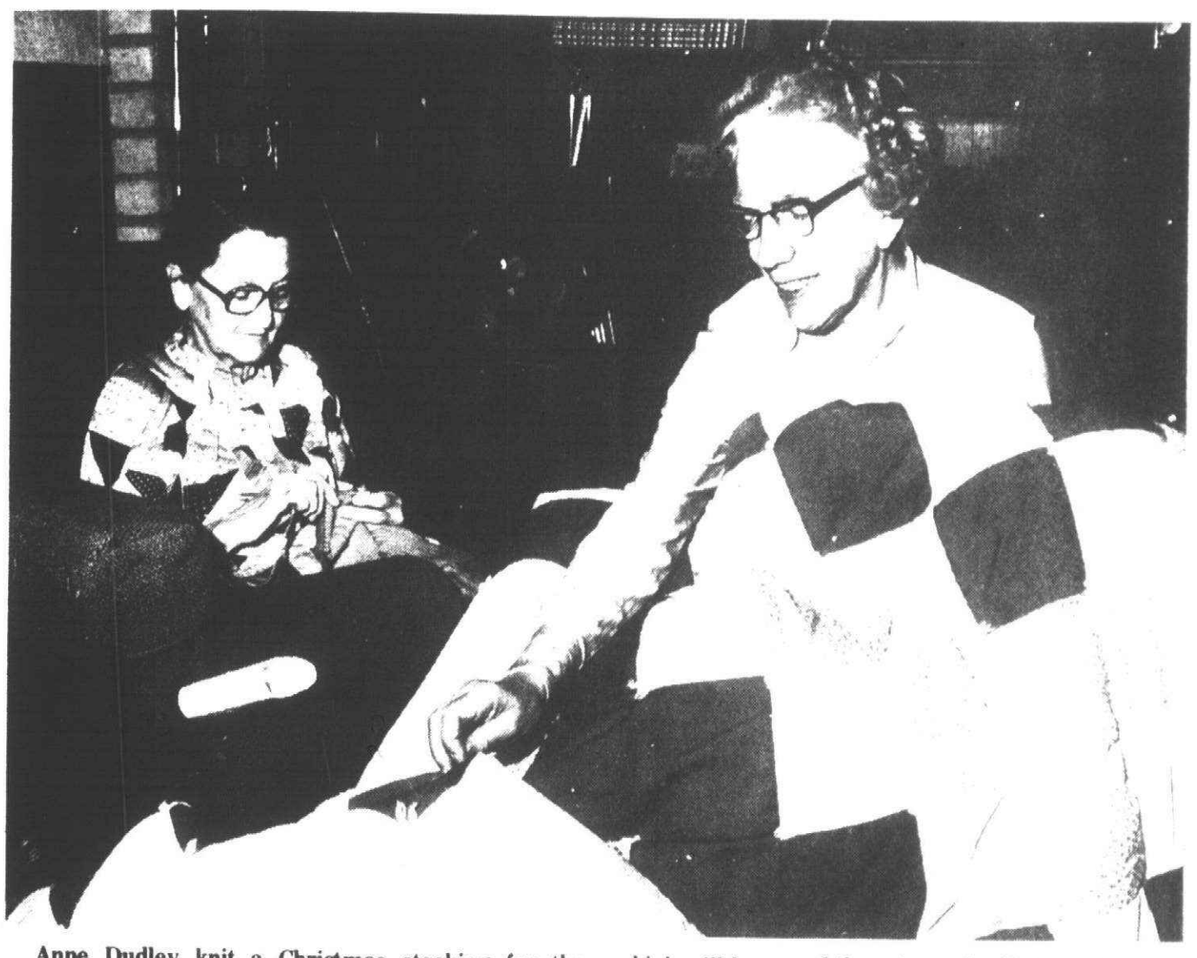

The list reads like an honor roll for distinguished community service.

Christmas mart inspires enthusiasm for holidays

Visitors to St. John's annual Christmas Mart will have no excuse for a lack of enthusiasm during the holiday season.

The women of the church at 574 S. Sheldon have been working for months creating a host of gifts to add sparkle to Christmas 1978.

Carolyn Jacobs is chairing the mart, to be held from 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Dec. 8.

Shoppers can pause for a soup and sandwich lunch and return with their families for dinner at 6 p.m.

Sue Hone and Nan Cooper are planning the luncheon. The Rev. Robert Shank is in charge of dinner arrangements.

And those who wait until after the dinner hour will discover who won the 20-inch Jacobsen snowblower. Winners of the patchwork (handmade) quilt and the 19-piece ceramic nativity set also will be announced.

THE GREENS booth will feature fresh wreaths and holly, custom made ribbon bows made on the spot, fresh centerpieces and pine cone centerpieces.

Carolyn Kleiber is chairperson of the greens booth.

Members of St. John's League are in charge of the extensive baked goods booth. There will be handmade chocolates, pies, cakes, cookies, breads and candies.

Aprons, key chains, perpetual tallies, ski hats, slippers, kitchen towels, pillows, placemats, patchwork purses and embroidered shirts will be found in the crafts and Christmas gifts center chaired by Cindy Zajac.

There will be gingham centerpieces, hostess aprons, tree decorations, table cloths, runners and napkins, kissing balls and quilted tree skirts.

BETTY UTTER and Helen Merrill have been collecting wares for their sacrifice booth.

They have been cajoling members into parting with really fine family possessions. These are not white elephants, but, as the word sacrifice suggests, pieces that are not easily given up.

There will be antiques, china, silver and other family heirlooms.

The candy houses made by Harriet Randall and her group are appealing to all ages—and they will taste as good as they look.

For the very young there will be toys, bibs, baby quilts, hobby horses, finger puppets and toy aprons.

Joyce Kelly and Jean Sigmon have been handling the sale of tickets for the three grand prizes—the snowblower, the quilt and the nativity set.

Starkweather hosts seniors at dinner

Starkweather Elementary School on Holbrook played host to its second Thanksgiving dinner for the Crediteers, a senior citizens group sponsored by the Plymouth Community Credit Union and the Plymouth-Canton-Northvile YMCA.

More than 100 members and guests dined on roast turkey, mashed potatoes with gravy, cranberry sauce, homemade rolls, relishes, vegetables and cookies. The meal was cooked in the Starkweather kitchen by Ernestine Reddemon, with the help of Helen Bennett.

John Howe, principal, welcomed the seniors and guests. Among those persons, other than crediteers who attended, were Florence Beier, representing the Plymouth Canton Community Schools, Helen Richardson of Plymouth Township, John Behman of the City of Plymouth, Daisy Proctor, Sharon Thomas and Fred Gorospe.

The first graders in Helen Kelly's class made Thanksgiving placemats. The turkey centerpieces were the work of Karen Myers' students. Richard Johnson's fifth graders set the tables, served the food and later square danced for the group.

A BUSINESS meeting followed the $1 dinner.

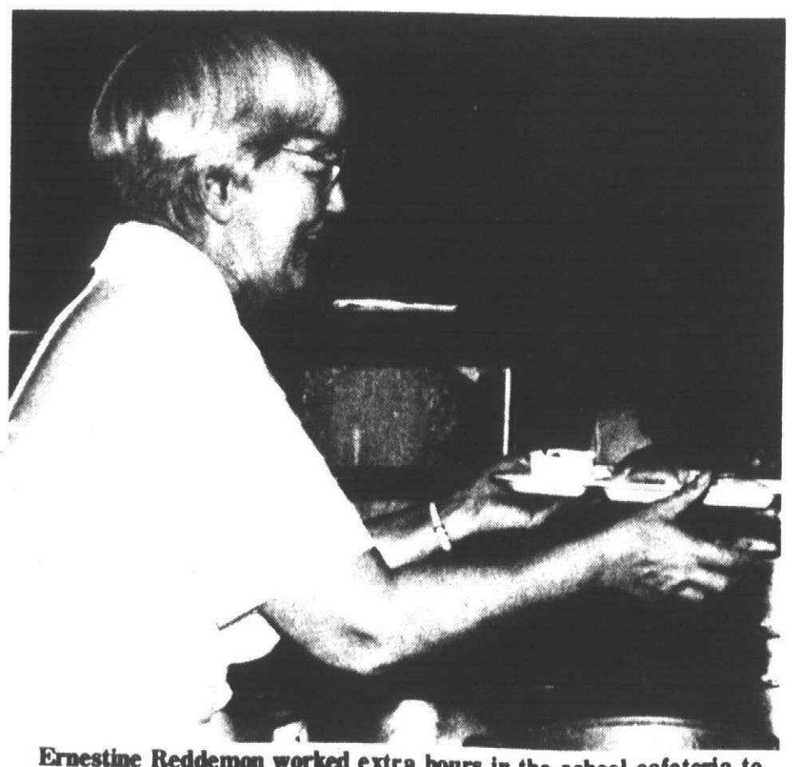

Many of the members are looking forward to the Nov. 30 mystery trip, the Dec. 13 Westgate dinner-theater party, and the Jan. 20 trip to the Fisher Theatre to see "Annie."

There also will be a Christmas party at the Elks Club.

Crediteers who had recently returned from five days on Bermuda were extolling the joys of life on the island.

Officers of the club, which usually meets Tuesdays in the Credit Union on Harvey at Maple are: Glenn Fraleigh, chairperson; Ed Grosjean, vice-chairperson; Winnifred Downing, treasurer; Marie karl, secretary; Helen Wickens, sunshine; and Gladys Grosjean, membership.

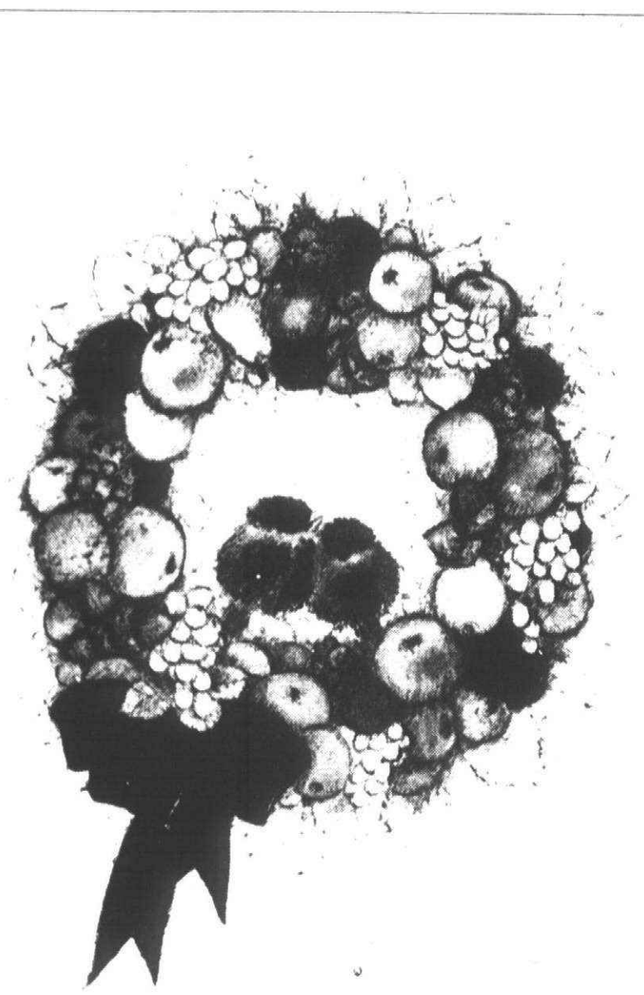

Ernestine Reddemon worked extra hours in the school cafeteria to prepare the turkey dinner.

Guests at the Thanksgiving dinner were Fred Gorospe of the Council for the Aging in Detroit, (from left) Janet Luce, director of the Y, and Margaret Merritt, a Y volunteer worker. (Staff photos)

These cards sent by persons who care

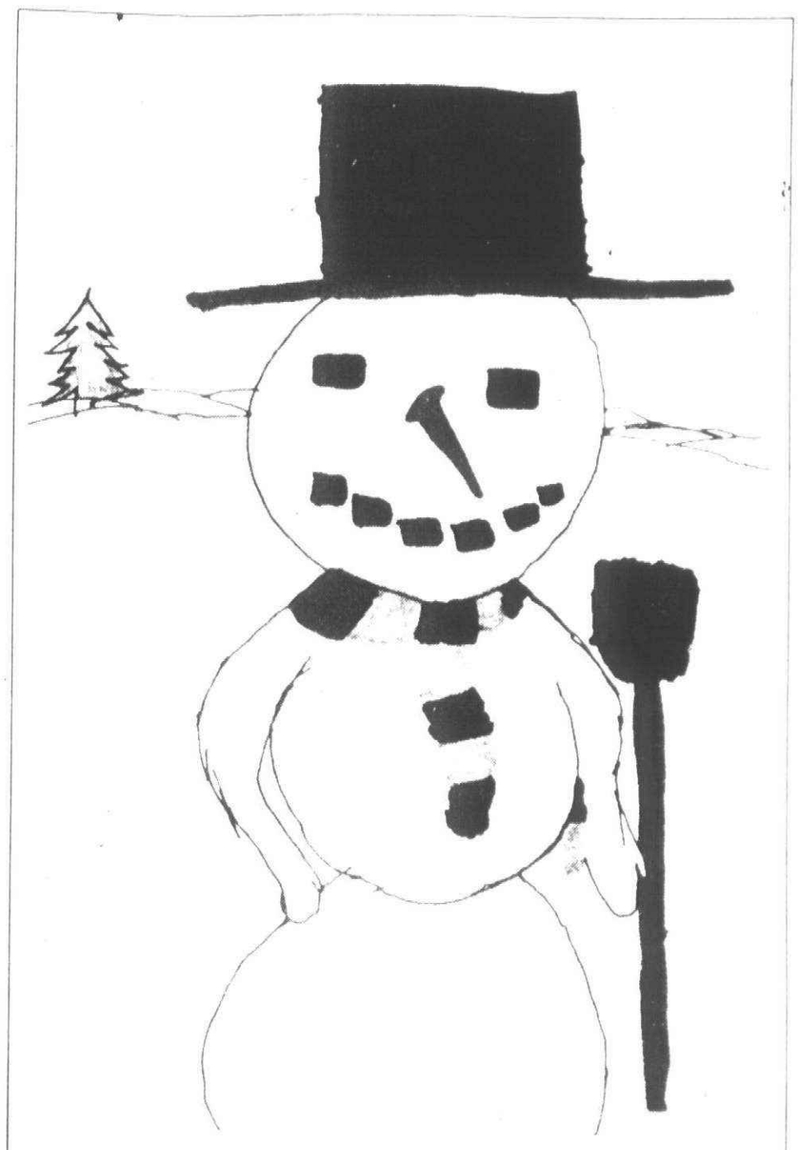

Christmas birds

Robins nestled in a wreath brighten one of six cards offered for holiday greetings this year by the Kidney Foundation of Michigan. These cost $5 for a box of 25, and the money earned goes toward patient services, education and research for all forms of kidney disease. Imprinting is available if orders are placed by Nov. 24. Send orders to the Kidney Foundation of Michigan, 3378 Washtenaw, Ann Arbor, 971-2800.

Holiday dress

A young girl dressed up for Christmas carries a greeting on cards offered by the Detroit League for the National Asthma Center. Order them at a cost of $5.75 plain or $9 imprinted for a box of 25, through the Detroit League offices, 535-5247.

Snowman at Christmas

A young student at Fairlawn Clinton Valley Center, a facility supported by the Foundation for Mentally Ill Children, designed this Christmas card that helps provide services to the center. Boxes of 25 sell for $3 and may be ordered from Mrs. Dale O. Miller Jr., 6015 Snowshoe Circle, Birmingham, 644-7714.

BBB offers tips on how to select charities

"Christmas is coming and the geese are getting fat; please put a penny in the old man's hat."

Each year many Americans take this old nursery rhyme to heart by giving generously to one cause or another. During this season, shoppers frequently are solicited by mail, by telephone, door-to-door, in stores and on street corners. The Better Business Bureau has a few tips for evaluating some of these appeals.

If an appeal for charity is received through the mail, be sure to check the following:

- Does the appeal make a clear statement of purpose and need?
- Is it easily understood and not disguised as a bill or invoice?
- Does it make clear that there is no obligation to pay for or to return any enclosed unordered items, such as stamps, key rings, etc.?
- Does it include an address to write for further information?
- Does it indicate whether donations are tax-deductible for federal income tax purposes?

MANY CHARITABLE organizations use the telephone as a means to solicit funds. At Christmas time, especially, callers request donations for merchandise made by the handicapped, magazine subscriptions with proceeds benefiting a charity, and many other causes. Before promising to give money, prospective donors should ask the following questions:

- Does the caller immediately, or on request, provide identification including the name of the sponsoring organization and purpose of the call?
- Will the solicitor give information on how to obtain more details on the charitable organization?
- Is the solicitor sufficiently well-informed and willing to answer reasonable questions?
- Is the solicitor willing to put the request in writing?

AT THIS TIME of year, too, a knock at the door may mean a visit fromsomeone asking for money for some charitable cause or another. Before giving, consider asking these questions:

- Does the solicitor have identification including a name and address of the benefiting organization?
- Is the solicitor a volunteer, employee of the benefiting group or working for a promoter?
- If the solicitor is selling such merchandise as candy or magazines, is it made clear how much goes to the sponsoring organization instead of to an individual?
- Will the solicitor accept a check made out to the organization instead of to an individual?
- Finally, will the solicitor provide a source for obtaining further information?

Seasonal swindlers are as much a part of the holiday scene as street-corner Santas. Be on the alert for schemers who try to capitalize on the Christmas rush and shoppers' tendency to be more trusting at this time of year.

Americans are a generous people. Last year, approximately $60 billion in time and dollars was given to charity. The Better Business Bureau urges donors to learn amore about the organizations soliciting money and time before contributing. Those wishing to give should make out a check payable to the organization, never to the individual.

Zuk-Rybski

Rachel Yvette Rybski of Canton Township and John Nicholas Zuk of Wayne were married Nov. 3 in St. Alexis Catholic Church, Ypsilanti.

The bride's parents are Mrs. Marion Rybski of Canton and Stephan Rybski of Carleton. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Zuk of Wayne.

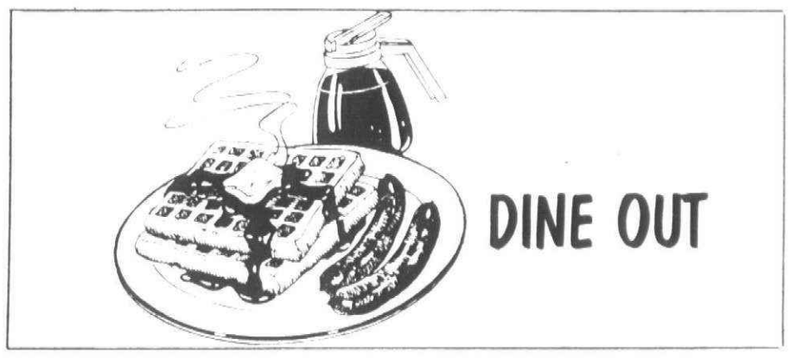

Given in marriage by her father, the bride a wore chiffon gown with chantilly lace ruffles. Her six-tier veil was made by her mother. It was held in place by her first communion tiara of pearls and rhinestones.

She carried a cascade bouquet of silk flowers. Maid of honor, Lori Rybski, wore a cranberry red gown and carried a basket of silk flowers. Bridesmaids Becky Rybski, Gloria Gorny and Venus Roberts wore dusty rose gowns. They carried baskets of silk flowers and wore baby's breath in their hair.

Merle Bumstead was best man and Mickey Hanchett, Terry Irving and Ron Cobb were ushers.

The couple honeymooned at Niagara Falls and the eastern states following a reception for 150 guests at the UAW Ford Hall in Wayne. They are living in Wayne.

The bride is employed at Jac Products, Ann Arbor. Her husband, a well-known auto racer known as "Nick the Greek," graduated from Wayne High School in 1968 and works for Ford Motor Company in Wayne.

SCUFF and crayon marks on tile or asphalt flooring can be removed quickly by applying self-polishing wax. Try an Observer & Eccentric classified ad when you want to remove non-usable items from your home.

Cult members hit suburbia for funds

By SHERRY KAHAN

The recent bloodbath in Guyana has fastened the attention of the world on the darkest and most extreme side of cultism. Unfortunately, that event makes it easy for people to believe that cult members live only way down there in South America or way out there in California.

Yet in the next few weeks a cult member may turn up on your own doorstep, or solicit your attention in an area shopping center. For during the holiday season, cultists are out in force bending every effort to separate you from your money.

In recent years members of the controversial Unification Church, whose leader is Korean evangelist Sun Myung Moon, have been seen selling gum in the Livonia Mall, soliciting money in the parking lot of the Meijer's Thrift Acres in Canton and collecting money for candles in the Rosedale Gardens section of Livonia.

Rarely do they give their true names.

"He says he wants to take over the world as the second Messiah," reported Kathy Buttery of Plymouth to the Observer newspaper exactly three years ago. Her reference was to Moon, who has been quoted in the press as saying, "The whole world is in my hands, and I will conquer and subjugate the world."

THEN, IN WORDS that seem prophetic in view of the Guyana killings, she added: "What might he tell these people to do sometime, and who's going to protect them when they do it?"

While the Unification Church has not been mentioned in connection with the recent violence in South America, Ms. Buttery's ideas were gained through a close study of the Moon organization, and are a reminder that cults can be anywhere.

Three years ago she was working to free a young man from the Unification Church. So interested did she become in protecting others from envelopment by the group that she became a de-programmer, trying to break the mental hold it has on its members.

Another area woman learned about cults in an even harder way.

Like many others drawn into cults, Denelle, who lives in Westland, was inveigled into becoming a Moonie when she was living on her own. Assigned to selling flowers, candy or candles, she worked weekdays until 1 a.m., and until after the bars closed on weekends.

The money went to the Unification Church, which according to the New York Times gathers in more than $10 million a year in donations and sales, thus enabling its political arm to lobby for continued military and economic aid to Korea.

Recently in a Birmingham temple, Naomi Eden of West Bloomfield told the story of her daughter, Eve, a student at the University of Michigan. "Love-bombed" by Moonies, she spent a weekend with them and joined the group.

Eve's mother said her daughter gave them all her money, was deprived of protein foods and worked about 18 hours a day. The last two actions are regarded as typical methods by which cults sap the energy of their members and maintain a hold on their minds.

The group she joined called itself the International Re-education Foundation, one of the many different names adopted by the Unification Church. It took her a year and a half to discover she was a Moonie.

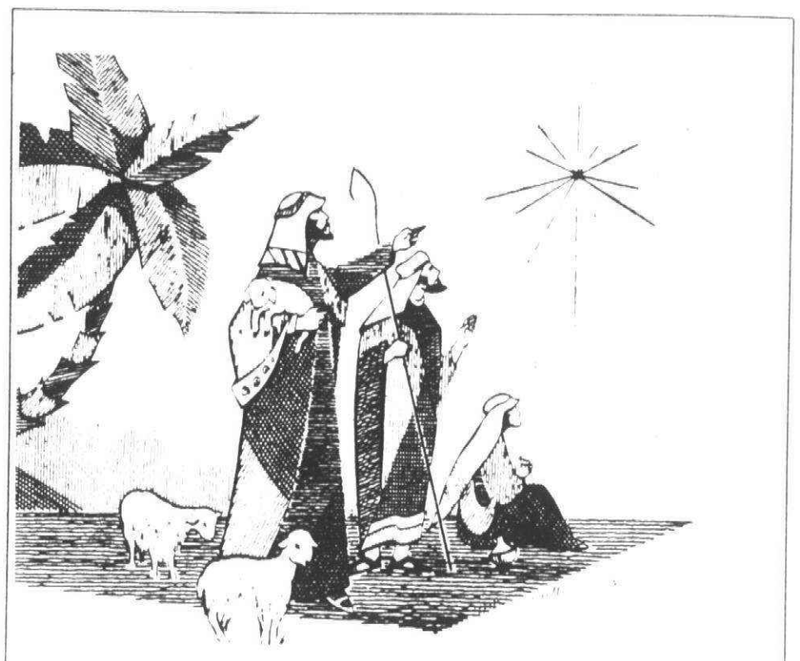

THOSE ON THE RECEIVING end of a request for money from a member of the Unification Church will find that he, too, will disguise the cause to which the money is going.

When the young woman sold gum in the Livonia Mall, she said it was for the God Bless America Festival in Washington. The words sounded good to most people. So they contributed, not knowing that the festival was a Unification Church event.

Moonie salesmen in the Rosedale Garden subdivision said two years ago that the money would be going to children all over the world. Only when hard pressed did one Moonie admit he represented the Unification Church. The following year another salesman assured householders that the solicitation was to benefit missions all over the world. It was like pulling teeth to narrow him down to the real organization reaping the harvest, again the Unification Church.

The man at Meijer's was equally shifty, admitting his church membership to an investigative customer, but avoiding mention as he moved on to another. He told her his cause was "missions." The woman gave him money without questioning him further.

The Moonies are not the only cultists out on street corners, airports and shopping centers this season. It, therefore, becomes essential for the buyer to beware, and to find out where his money is really going.

Two metallic print designs on heavy stock may be purchased to send Christmas greetings and help the work of the greater Detroit area chapter of National Council on Alcoholism. This Magi scene and a dove bearing the legend "Peace on Earth" both cost $6 for 25 cards. They may be purchased at the council office, 15800 W. McNichols or ordered by telephoning the office, 273-5600.

Freiman-Schneider

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Freiman of Haggerty Road, Plymouth, announce the engagement of their daughter, Therese Marie, to John R. Schneider, son of Mrs. Marion Schneider of Northville and the late David Schneider. The bride-elect is a 1976 graduate of Plymouth Canton High School and she is employed as a dental assistant. Her fiance is a 1973 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School. He attended Schoolcraft College and is an accountant at Pants Galore.

They plan a June wedding.

LWV plans Christmas tea Dec. 6

Education will be the topic when the Northville-Plymouth-Canton-Novi branch League of Women Voters meets at 12:30 p.m. Dec. 6 in Northville City Hall, 215 W. Main Street.

The occasion will be the league's annual Christmas tea. Three superintendents of schools have been invited to speak. Their talks will deal with problems facing their school districts in future years.

Gerald Kratz of Novi, John M. Hoben of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, and Larry Nichols from the Northville Schools each will address members and guests for 10 minutes. A question and answer period will follow.

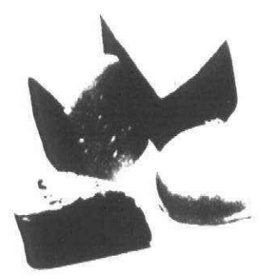

The tea will be open to the public. Those interested in child care can call Mary Ellen McKircher at 455-4537.

"A HELPFUL GUIDE TO FUNERAL PLANNING"

That's the title of a free booklet which may answer a lot of questions you may have.

Many residents of our communityhave used this guide in deciding NOW (when there is no stress or emergency) about making arrangements for funerals IN ADVANCE OF NEED.

Why pre-plan a funeral? First, you can makedecisions and choices, yourself, with full composure instead of under the unfortunate circumstances of grieving and emotional stress. Second, you need not "overspend." You should select only that service and that casket, and those touches which you feel are important.

That beloved and meaningfully significant Scripture passage, that special hymn, the minister whose understanding and compassion you so admire—all can be part of your service?, if you make your wishes known and arranged for in advance.

The "Planning Guide" covers a great deal more. Call or write for a free copy.

Give Santa a Hand!

His elves seem to be getting Santa into his boots, coat and hat alright, but we think the dear old gent could use some help in the gift selection and delivery department. That's why we're publishing our Christmas Gift Spotter on the classified pages of your hometown newspaper again this year.

Look for it beginning Wednesday, November 22 and check the wondrous array of gifts. Something for Aunt Minnie, the kids—all the people on your list. (Christmas list)

Oh yes - if you have merchandise that you want all of the "Santas" who never miss reading their hometown newspaper to see - just call one of our friendly Ad Takers and tell her you want to place a Gift Spotter Ad - she'll do the rest and wish you a Happy Holiday!

Audi 5000

When the Audi 5000 was introduced last year, it was equipped with the first mass-produced five cylinder gasoline engine. Added this year are standard five-speed transmission and a larger fuel tank.

Auto tips

More ways to save gas

By PATRICK KELLY

Are you an energy-conscious consumer?

Most people are these days, and why not. Conserving energy, standing for the national anthem and eating mom's apple pie are all synonymous parts of the American way of life.

So why not seriously consider a manual transmission when buying your next car? A stick shift-equipped car can produce up to eight per cent better gas mileage than an automatic transmission-equipped car in city driving, according to the Automotive Information Council.

The key to achieving this kind of fuel performance, however, is know-how. With a manual, you must shift from low to high as quickly as possible.

First gear uses 30 per cent more gas than second gear, and second uses 15 per cent more than third.

The council offers other suggestions to the driver who wants to get more miles to the gallon of gas:

• Learn to use your car more efficiently. If you can, ride a bike, take a bus or walk to school, church or on errands. When you must drive, plan multi-stop local trips. Car and van pools are more energy efficient than one car with one driver.

• When you're driving, observe the 55 miles per hour speed limit. For every five miles per hour over 50, there is a loss of one mile to the gallon. Avoid sudden starts and screeching stops.

• A steady foot on the accelerator improves mileage considerably. This will mean your car will slow slightly going uphill and speed up going downhill, so figure your downhill speed to avoid a speeding ticket.

• Take care of your car. Regular tune-ups can save up to 20 per cent in gasoline on a car that is badly out of tune. Check spark plugs, the carburetor, the air cleaner, the thermostat and the tires.

If you can avoid peak traffic periods, do so. If not, try to find routes so you don't waste gasoline sitting in bumper-to-bumper, stop-and-go traffic.

While you can help conserve fuel, the automotive manufacturers also are making a major effort to make cars more energy efficient. This in addition to meeting federal safety standards and federal exhaust emission standards.

Cars are losing pounds. Lighter materials are being used. The industry also is offereing a larger variety of six- and four-cylinder engines.

Diesel engines are being tested and introduced. A V-8 engine that can run on two, four or six cylinders to reduce gas consumption is being developed, as are electronic devices to monitor and control fuel usage in the engine.

A free brochure listing more that 30 tips on how drivers can get more miles from a gallon of gas is available.

Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope (business size) to the Automotive Information Council, 28333 Telegraph, Southfield 48034.

Christmas

seems tied to the old-fashioned days . . .
To the peaceful,
the calm,
to the simplicity ways

1978

Christmas is for. . .

. . . kids of all ages is the theme of this year's Christmas decorations at the the Plymouth Historical Museum. Jason McDonald admired the old-fashioned tree with its handmade decorations—popcorn garlands, cookies, knitted bells and crocheted stars. The museum will be open to the public, in full Christmas dress, from 1-4 p.m. Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays. (Staff photo)

Getting to know you

When making out your Christmas shopping lists, consider including games to make family life more fun.

Beating mom and dad at their own game is something dear to the heart of most any child — and it should be!

Learning how to win and how to lose, how to compete and how to cooperate are vital lessons for children.

Games are an ideal vehicle for these lessons. But family games are more than lessons — they give family members a chance to share excitement and laughter with each other.

There probably are thousands of games on the market that children enjoy, but there aren't so many that kids and their parents all enjoy together.

Strategy and action games, though, often fit the bill. A real challenge is 9-Way Tic Tac Toe, for instance, where every move you make is a move for your opponent. Yahtzee is another parlor game which can be played and enjoyed by all ages.

Combining action and skill, Kenner's Slot Shot is a fast rolling game enjoyed by young and old alike. Slot Shot shooters speed a rolling disc under the scoring bridge to add points to a fast fun game.

Wacky fun and balancing skill are seen in Kenner's zany new Flying Finnegan Action Game where the object is to flip Finnegan into his fish tank. With all the balancing objects properly placed (and a little bit of luck) . . . Plunk! He's in, and you win!

A simple deck of playing cards also can bring parents and children together, and help teach the very young number and matching concepts with such easy games as war, fish, and slapjack.

In choosing games for the family to play together, choose those which balance luck and skill. If you have younger children, look for games which rely more on luck; for older children, choose those which require more physical coordination or strategy.

The key thing to keep in mind is that the game will only be fun if every player stands a chance of winning.

Life-like dolls

These life-like dolls will receive a lot of love and attention after they are opened Christmas morning. These dolls can be found at Muriel's Dollhouse in downtown Plymouth. Dolls of similar quality also may be found at Lorraine's Dolls shop in Old Village. (Staff photo)

Nativity story told since ancient times

"And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said to one another, let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger." — Luke 2:15-16.

Thus, in the New Testament, Luke tells the story of humble shepherds watching in the fields — shepherds to whom the herald angels brought "good tidings of great joy," that they might seek and find the Infant Savior. In still another Biblical account of the Nativity, Matthew writes of the Wise Men, who followed a star of Bethlehem.

"And when they were come into the house, they saw the young Child with Mary, His Mother, and fell down and worshipped Him. And . . . they presented unto Him gifts, gold, and frankincense, and myrrh." — Matthew 2:11.

At Christmas, as Christians everwhere celebrate the birth of Christ in church and home devotions, the story of the Nativity is told and retold — but it never grows old.

Always, the well-remembered words of two of his disciples, Matthew and Luke, seem to resound with renewed meaning and inspiration, bringing to all some measure of that awe and wonder experienced by the shepherds and the wise men, long ago.

And now, as then, the supreme, the all-absorbing moment in the sacred story is that moment at the manger when first "they saw the young Child with Mary, His Mother."

In the miracle of the manger, in the Madonna and the Child, mankind sees an ever-present reminder of the love of God, the glory and promise of Christmas. Each year, as Christians return in heart and spirit to Bethlehem and the manger, the joyous message lives anew. In cities, churches and homes, manger scenes symbolize once again the birth of a holy Child.

The treasured tradition of recreating the manger has a long and notable history. The first creche or crib, scholars say, was erected by St. Francis of Assisi and his brethren in the tiny village of Grecchio in 1223.

As the people of the town gathered about the manger, the first Christmas carols were sung — joyous songs in honor of the Saviour's birth. St. Francis felt that, through the manger scene and the cheery Christmas songs, even the humblest member of the congregation could participate more fully in the observance at Christmas.

Through the years, the meaning of the manger has been enriched by hundreds of thousands of reverent re-creations.

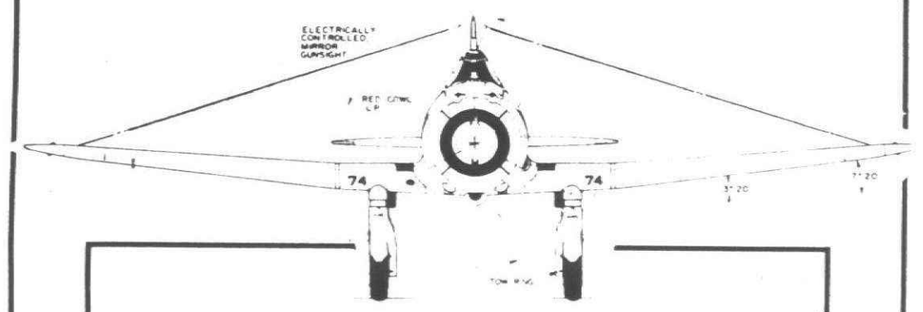

Both craftsmen and artists have been inspired by the manger, and have shared their inspiration with many. The Madonna and Child appear again and again in countless famous paintings, and the Christmas creche in miniature, created by the loving hands of skilled craftsmen, is a precious tradition in many lands, in many homes.

In song, too, "the young Child with Mary, His Mother" lives anew. Gathering around the manger scene, glad voices joyfully carol, "Silent Night, Holy Night! All is calm, all is bright, 'round yon Virgin Mother and Child . . . ."

Savonyards return with HMS Pinafore

The Plymouth Symphony Society has arranged a Christmas gift for the whole Plymouth-Canton community —a gift to be shared, cherished, and recalled with pleasure.

The society is importing the New York Savonyards. Equipped with marvelous costumes, sets and superior talent, the troupe will perform, with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, a production that has been a favorite for 100 years.

"H.M.S. Pinafore," Gilbert and Sullivan's famous operetta with all its humor and tongue-in-cheek pomposity, will be presented at 4 p.m., Sunday Dec. 10 in Plymouth Salem High School auditorium, Joy Road west of Canton Center Road.

Concert-goers will be humming the catchy melodies all through their Christmas shopping ("my sisters and my cousins and my aunts") and cleaning ("I cleaned the windows and I swept the floor and polished up the handle on the big front door").

There will be more fringe benefits. Members of the audience will be able to stock up on baked goods and Christmas cookies at the Symphony League's bake sale following the concert. The league also will serve free coffee at intermission. And — for that thoughtful little gift for someone special — the league will be selling its new shipment of scarves.

Tickets for the concert will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for students and senior citizens. Persons with family memberships will be admitted with their seasons tickets. Watch for a listing of stores that will sell advance tickets. It could be a sellout.

Plymouth loves parade

With last Saturday's Christmas Parade in downtown Plymouth, the holiday season is officially here.

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce sponsored the parade, enjoyed by spectators lined up on Main Street from city hall to Ann Arbor Trail.

The day before Christmas officially arrived at Kellogg Park with the tree lighting ceremony and the merchants' Christmas Cordial throughout the business area.

The gala holiday weekend ended yesterday with the annual Old Village Christmas Walk and the Brunch with Santa at the Plymouth Hilton Inn.

With Santa's arrival in town, the merchants now are keeping their shops open during special hours for the holidays: from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Fridays; from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays; and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Santa himself will be on hand in Santa House at Kellogg Park, Ann Arbor Trail at S. Main, from 5-7 weekdays and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. Children's visits to Santa also is sponsored by the Plymouth Chamber and its retail committee.

Daniels Den

By EMORY DANIELS

Broken promises, broken hearts are the problems facing parents

(The following column, a favorite for many readers when it was first published six years ago, is being reprinted for those who may have missed it then.)

There is nothing worse that can be done than to break a child's heart. Nobody does it deliberately, but it probably happens at least once to all parents.

This father broke his daughter's heart a couple Sundays ago, and the incident served as another reminder against making promises lightly.

The promise to Bridgette was that she could watch "The Little Drummer Boy" on television. There has been some very good holiday programs for kids on TV, and it has become a habit for her to look forward each night for that "special" program.

THAT PARTICULAR Sunday, we had traveled north to visit her grandmother and aunt in Saginaw.

The schedule called for us to leave for home about 5 p.m., arriving home with time to spare for the 8 p.m. telecast.

That schedule was made two days before and, foolishly, we announced to Bridgette that she could see "The Little Drummer Boy" Sunday night.

Sunday morning arrived with snow on the ground and dropping temperatures. The trip took an hour longer because the expressways were slippery and sideroads treacherous.

AFTER MAKING the rounds, we ended up at mother's who insisted on putting on a pot of coffee and getting out the fruitcake.

There's just no easy way to shorten the time it takes to drink coffee and eat cake with mom. It soon became obvious that we'd have to stay and watch "Drummer Boy" on grandma's TV or miss it.

Watching at grandma's would have meant leaving for home after 9 p.m., and a three-hour grip on slippery roads at a time when I'd be prone to fatigue.

Well, dad decided a safe trip home was more important than Bridgette watching "Drummer Boy," so we left about 6:30 p.m. arriving home at 9 p.m.

UPON ARRIVING home, Bridgette, age four, turned on the TV and asked daddy to switch the channels to "Drummer Boy."

After this futile effort was made, she burst into the kind of tears that can only be generated by a broken heart. "You promised, daddy, I could watch 'Little Drummer Boy' . . . I'll never get to watch it . . . I'm so mad . . . I wanted to . . . ."

There were only two things to do. First, to hold her on my lap, tell her daddy made a bad mistake and was very sorry.

A child has to learn parents are human and susceptible to error. This was a chance for that lesson to be perfect. "Daddy did a bad thing, Bridgette, I'm sorry."

You can't explain to a child about slippery roads and safe driving. That left only one other thing to do, remain sitting and cry along with her. Tears, also, should be shared.

Eating-out economies

margarine, milk (for potatoes and coating), rolls, cabbage slaw dressing, frying oil and dishwashing soap, the low-priced home prepared chicken dinner came to $3.72 for a family of four. The high-priced fried chicken came to $6.02. This compared to $6.70 including tax for the fast food chicken.

However, when Kruel added labor and energy costs to the totals, the low-priced home prepared meal came to $4.76 and the high-priced meal was $7.25 — eight per cent more than the restaurant meal.

KRUEL ALSO COMPARED similar costs for the same dinner for three, two and one adult.

For the single adult, the raw food cost was 31 per cent less for the low-priced meal and two per cent less for the high-priced dinner.

But when energy and labor costs were added in, the home prepared meals were 12 per cent and 42 per cent higher than the restaurant meal.

All indicators are pointing to a continued trend in dining out, Kruel said, noting that the food service industry sales are expected to grow at a rate of 3-4 per cent annually, at least through 1985.

He added there is a "tug-of-war" over the consumer dollar going on between restaurants and supermarkets. A number of ad campaigns are directed at luring patrons away from restaurants, Kruel said, recalling an ad which states: "The ins eat in and the outs eat out."

The home kitchen equipment industry also is encouraging people to eat at home, Kruel added.

A favorite Christmas Carol

One of the Observer's favorite holiday pictures used over the years in special Christmas sections and for Goodfellow editions is this young girls saying her prayers near the tree on which a note to Santa rests. The photograph was taken in 1973 for the Observer by freelance photographer Joseph F. Benyo. Unfortunately we no longer know the identity of our favorite Christmas Carol. Anyone knowing this young lady is encouraged to call the Observer at 459-2700.

The Holiday Touch

At LeGault's, we have the largest selection of silk flowers in the area, with a tremendous assortment of ribbons, baskets, pottery, and beautifully brass containers. We have supplies for the do-it-yourselfers and a talented staff who can make the floral arrangements for you.

The Stroller:

By W. W. EDGAR

It was the day before Christmas some years ago when The Stroller was a member of the sports staff at the Detroit Free Press. Long-time friend Tommy Emmett leaned across the desk and asked, "How would you like to share the spirit of Christmas?"

At first The Stroller thought he was kidding or had some sort of trick he was about to play, which was a habit with him.

You see, Tommy was a New England Irishman and a shoe salesman who had come to Detroit to take over the shoe account at J.L. Hudson, one of the best accounts in the midwest. To make it more attractive, the account called for providing shoes for the unfortunate in the Goodfellows Christmas baskets.

"If you want to see and feel the real spirit of Christmas and what it means," he repeated, "come with me in the morning when we visit the poor, the downtrodden and the people to whom Christmas could be just another day."

WITH THE INVITATION and the knowledge that there was no trickery in mind, The Stroller accepted and it was a Christmas morning he shall never forget.

On this Christmas morning we left the downtown headquarters of the Goodfellows loaded down with all kinds of gifts and baskets that included turkeys and all the trimmings for a holiday dinner.

For years The Stroller had heard many stories of these visits but now he was to get the real feel of Christmas.

At the very first stop, in a rundown area of the city, The Stroller felt a huge lump in his throat. When the door was opened and Tommy and The Stroller were invited in, no artist could have painted the picture we saw.

There, playing on the floor, were four children, and on the kitchen table were only a few scraps of bread. It was evident that the family had just had a breakfast of sorts.

When we placed the basket on the table and uncovered the turkey and the fixings, the mother broke down. With tears running down her cheeks she threw her arms around The Stroller and, sobbing, said, "The Good Lord will remember you for this. We were not going to have Christmas dinner because we had so little to eat. Now look at this — what a Christmas."

THIS WAS A Christmas morning during the depression when most people were being paid in scrip and actual money was a rarity. So it was plain to see that Christmas would have meant little in this home.

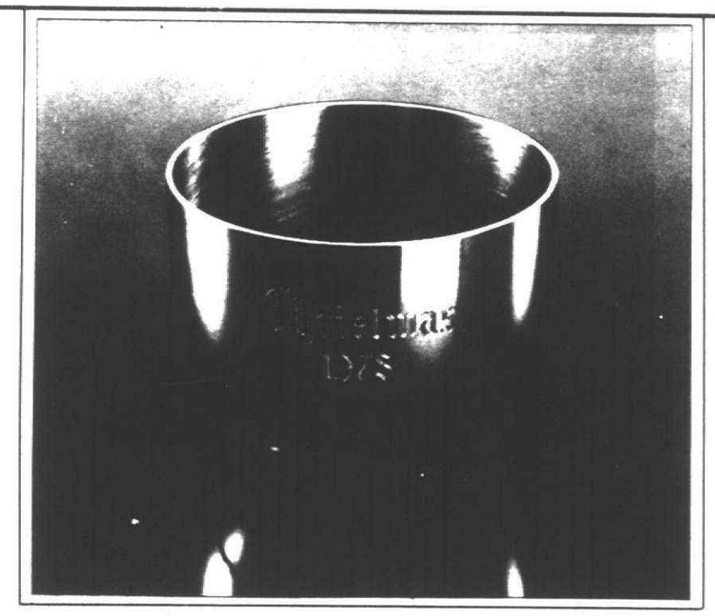

The scene of the gracious mother was as nothing compared to the father's reaction. He was too choked up to talk, so he got down on the floor and tried the new shoes on the four children. It possibly was the first time they ever had new shoes.

"Just don't know what to say," he managed to utter as his voice cracked and there was a trace of tears in his eyes. "But this will be one of the grandest Christmases we ever had."

Tommy and I just stood there. The scene was a tear-jerker and we were left speechless. We just looked at each other and somehow a warm feeling came upon us. It was a feeling that could come only after the doing of a good deed.

There was no need for this now happy family to thank us, but as we left the mother's words echoed, "The Good Lord will remember you for this."

It was a Christmas morning that never can be forgotten.

My kind of Christmas

Specifically, your layback kind.

A dose of the flu six years ago, requiring my first introduction to pencillin, cured me of any superwoman intentions for the holidays forever.

With final exams of my final college semester winding up on the 22nd, I was determined to have a "good" Christmas. That, of course, meant cookies of various shapes and sizes, a gourmet meal to impress my family, presents artfully wrapped and perfect in choice, an immaculate house replete with tasteful decorations. Christmas cards posted by the 15th — the whole shebang.

I managed most of it, then collapsed on the 26th with a terrible case of the flu. But stalwart me, the show must go on and there was a New Year's Eve party to host.

I began 1973 with a death wish, only managing to hustle myself to the doctor who made me feel slightly better by announcing that this was a bad bug and required antibiotics.

This pronouncement absolved me of guilt for having taken to my bed on the first of the year.

With a built-in distaste for medication, however, I took the injection and discovered that it did help and I didn't have an allergic reaction.

BUT I learned a lot more than that from the experience.

Willingly racing in the Christmas rat race, I had focused on the wrong angle — not an uncommon thing for a reporter to do, I've since discovered.

No, this isn't going to be a treatise on the inner peace of Christmas. Holidays are strictly that in my house — a time for celebration, getting together with friends and remembering those I care about.

But trying to live up to "Family Circle's" image of Mother Christmas taught me a lesson.

Since then, I've scrapped a lot of nonsense and concentrated on the things I like about the holidays. I enjoy making some cookies, I hate writing cards — scrap the cards. I enjoy buying presents, but I no longer investigate every shelf searching for the perfect gift at the perfect price.

I wrap presents simply — no fancy decorations. The tree goes up with an abundence of mis-matched ornaments collected over the years — no blue lights and silver balls.

FOOD IS THE toughest job to tackle. With one day off, I don't have time to work kitchen miracles. I plan for those time limits. Last year I enhanced a rather mundane ham with an easy-to-make Grenadine sauce. Surprisingly, no one seemed to miss the roast turkey with stuffing.

The whole meal took a little longer to prepare than a Sunday dinner. And I invited guests to pitch in by preparing salad, egg nog, whatever. Again, no one minded cooking in the kitchen with me rather than sitting around the tree.

Surprise, surprise.

Doing special things for Christmas is fun. But I wouldn't want the holiday to transpire without notice.

But like Scrooge's ghosts, those Christmas images stalk without trepidation unless we shake them loose.

Have a happy holiday — and relax.

Eating out cheaper?

Dining out is one of the nice things to do during the hustle and bustle of the holiday season.

And dining out can be more enjoyable and done more frequently with a better understanding of the economics involved.

Eating out is more or less expensive than eating at home, depending on how you look at it, according to recent food service research.

If you compare the only raw food costs to menu prices, the home prepared meal is less expensive, a Purdue University researcher told participants at a conference on Food Service Research held this month at Michigan State University.

BUT IF YOU consider the homemaker's labor, at $1 per hour, and the cost of energy required to prepare the meal, the restaurant meal often is less expensive, said Dr. Lee Kruel, assistant professor in the department of hotel, restaurant and institutional management at MSU.

Kruel added, however, that many at-home costs are impossible to quantify. Nevertheless, he compared the cost of two fast food type meals — fried chicken and roast beef sandwich — and the cost of fixing the same meals at home.

Home prepared costs for the fried chicken were broken down in terms of low-priced (baked chicken using a coating mix) and high-priced (using a deep fryer).

Totaling the cost of potatoes, gravy,

Tradition of bells: 1 idea benefits many

As Christmas draws near one of the familiar sounds locally will be the bell-ringing of volunteers collecting donations for the Salvation Army.

On a weekend in December, volunteers from various service clubs and organizations in the community will take their posts on the sidewalks with bells and the Army's "Christmas kettles" to raise funds to provide Christmas dinners for needy families in Plymouth-Canton and to meet other needs throughout the year.

THE SAME SCENE IS repeated in cities throughout the country, and has been since the late 1800s.

In December 1891 a Salvation Army captain in San Francisco had resolved to provide a free Christmas dinner to some 1,000 needy persons.

While trying to decide how to pay for the 1,000 meals, Captain Joseph McFee recalled his days as a sailor in Liverpool, England. On the Stage Landing he had seen a large pot, called "Simpson's pot" into which charitable donations were tossed in by passers-by.

He obtained permission from authorities to place a similar pot at the Oakland ferry landing, at the foot of Market Street—in a strategic location to be seen by all those going to and from the ferry boats. A brass urn also was placed on a stand in the waiting room for the same purpose.

With that, Captain McFee launched a tradition which has spread throughout the United States and the world.

BY CHRISTMAS, 1895, the kettle was used by 30 Salvation Army Corps in various sections of the West Coast area.

The Sacramento Bee in that year carried a report of the Army's Christmas activities and mentioned the contributions to the street corner kettles.

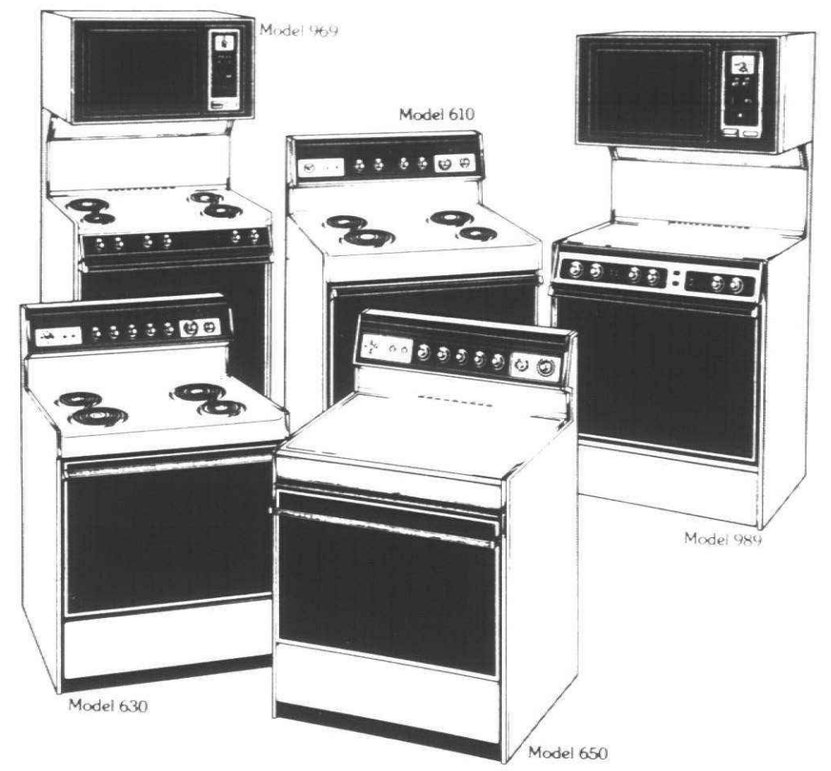

Shortly afterward two young Salvation Army officers who had been instrumental in the original use of the kettle—William A. McIntrye and N.B. Lewis—were transferred to the East, taking with them the idea of the Christmas kettle.

In 1897 McIntyre prepared his Christmas plans for Boston around the kettle, setting up three kettles in the heart of the city. That year the kettles provided Christmas dinners for some 150,000 needy Bostonians.

In 1901 kettle contributions in New York City provided funds for the first mammoth sit-down dinner in Madison Square Garden, a custom which has continued for many years.

Kettles now are used in such distant lands as Korea, Japan, Chile and in many European countries.

A Christmas lament

NANCY WALLS SMITH

"Santa Craws gonna bring me a Cwrismas twee and some presents. Right, mom?"

Oh, dear. It seems like Santa Craws was just here. Why is it the days sometimes go so slow, and still the years always go by so fast? This year two-year-old Jimmy is already old enough to have a few opinions about the holidays.

"Santa's gonna bring me a drum, a white present, a automatic and two police cars."

"What's a white present, Jim?"

"I dunno. Santa's gonna bring it."

Well, I hope Santa can figure it out. I can't. The kids were much easier to shop for when they were too young to express a preference. Now each lavishly staged commercial that passes before their eager little eyes brings forth a chorus of "I want that, Mom! Will you buy it for me? Huh, mom? Huh?"

I've long ago figured out that it's much easier to just say, "Yes," than to attempt any long explanations as to why we just can't seem to squeeze one more Tumblin' Weebel into our budget.

So far, I've probably said yes to about $4,563 worth of toys. It's fortunate for me that the boys seem to forget these affirmative answers as soon as their muttered. I'm gonna be in big trouble when they catch on.

ONE THING I DON'T think they'll ever get wise to, though, is the fact that commercials are more than slightly misleading.

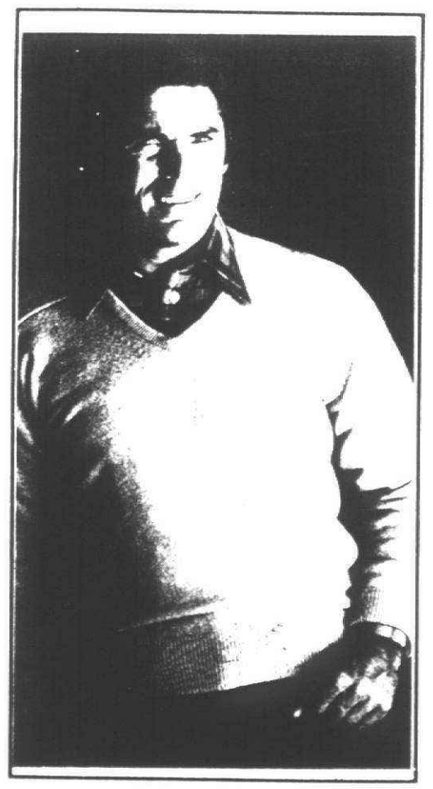

I just figured it out myself yesterday when I bought two Digger the Dogs. Digger doesn't walk with you like the commercials show. Digger kinda lurches for about nine inches when you pull on his string.

You know that commercial where the mom says, "Whatcha doing, Tony?" and the most beautiful little boy says, "Walkin' Digger, Mom." That's the one that got me. I think Madison Avenue managed to trick me into believing that if I bought each of my boys a Digger the Dog they would become as adorable as Tony. Instead they're, no doubt, going to become a little surly when they find that Digger doesn't exactly live up to their expectations.

I suspect they'll also be surprised when they discover that each toy doesn't come with it's own cheerful background music and a gang of laughing, giggling little kids.

December is more than Christmas day

December is much more than the month during which Christmas happens to be observed.

Sometimes it may seem like December is nothing more than a drawn-out celebration of Christmas, what with all the gift shopping, wraping, partying, cooking and baking there is to do in preparation for the holidays.

But December also is the month when winter officially begins. It is a month when more than 30,000 birdwatchers take their annual official bird count.

It is a time to observe ratification of the Bill of Rights and to mark importance of human rights. And December also is a month when observance is made of Pearl Harbor Day and Community Service Day.

For those who feel December isn't much more than a rush towards the holidays, the following list of notable events might prove to be good medicine.

Dec. 2—Mohammedan Era New Year. Year 1399 of the era of the Hegira begins at sunset.

Dec. 3—French Conversation Week (3-9).

Dec. 5—The eighth president of the United States, Martin Van Buren, was born this day in 1782.

Dec. 6—St. Nicholas Day. Children receive gifts in Belgium and other European nations.

Dec. 7—The anniversary of the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, in 1941.

Dec. 10—Human Rights Day and the beginning of Human Rights Week (10-17). The Nobel prizes are awarded in ceremonies by Stockholm, Sweden. The Nobel Peace Prize presentation, also this day, occurs in Oslo, Norway.

Dec. 12—National Ding-A-Ling Day.

Dec. 15—Anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution, in 1791. Beginning of the Halcyon Days (15-29), traditionally the seven days before and the seven days after the winter solstice, when calm and tranquility supposedly prevail. This day also is Underdog Day.

Dec. 16—The Christmas Bird Count of the National Audubon Society begins. The count of winter birds on the North American continent is taken by more than 1,200 groups and 30,000 birdwatchers. It ends on Jan. 1.

Dec. 21—Community Service Day.

Dec. 22—Winter begins. The winter solstice occurs at 12:21 a.m. EST.

Dec. 24— Christmas Even.

Dec. 25—Christmas Day. The first day of Chanukah (Dec. 25-Jan. 1).

Dec. 28—Woodrow Wilson, the nation's 28th president, was born this day in 1856.

Dec. 29—Andrew Johnson, the 17th president, was born this day in 1856.

Dec. 31—New Year's Eve. Relax, it's all over.

'Santa Craws' is back

Even Mickey Mouse can be boring without his chorus of kids singing, "Here comes marchin' Mickey!"

But I just don't have the heart to explain these harsh realities to my two- and four-year-olds. That would be like telling them that, their source, Captain Kangaroo, is a fraud. That man can do no wrong at our house! It's just his commercials that I would like to sabotage.

"What do you think we should do on Christmas Day, Jimmy?"

"Have cake and ice cream and chips."

"A fitting meal for any occasion," I reply. "And who should we buy some presents for?"

"Me and Jason and me."

"Anybody else?"

"Jason and Grandma and Bobby and Jason and me and Daddy and me."

WELL, THAT TAKES CARE of our shopping list. Now for the really hard part. What to buy?

Each year I try a different approach to solving this eternal problem. I've tried asking everyone exactly what they want and gotten answers that range from "Oh, I dunno," to "I'd like the 9x11 Corning Ware baking dish with the dutch oven design." Answers like the second one make me feel like I'm running a mail order house.

I've also tried forgetting about what people may want, and just buying them what I want to give them. That's pretty risky. Especially when it comes to relatives, because they usually aren't shy about telling you what they think of your selections.

"Nancy, you know I can't wear brown."

"No, I guess I didn't know that I knew." Oh, darn.

"Jimmy, what do you think we should buy for grandma?"

"How 'bout some suckers."

"Now, why didn't I think of that!"

My dear mother-in-law is very discreet about expressing her disapproval of the presents I select for her. She always says, "Thank you, dear. It's lovely." Six months later she gives it to me. This year I bought her a nightgown that I know will look really great on me.

Of course Christmas is really a day for children. They love it and appreciate it in ways that we've forgotten how.

"What does Santa look like, Jason?" I asked innocently enough the other day.

"He's a man with white hair and a green shirt."

"Where does he live?" I wondered.

"The North Pole."

"Then how does he get here?"

"Just walks," he answered. "Or I think he drives a truck."

"Doesn't he have any reindeer?" I asked.

"Yeah. They sit in the back seat."

"How does he get the toys into our house?"

He very confidently answered, "He just drives the truck in the driveway and wraps them up and brings them in one at a time."

Well, he may have his story a little mixed up, but he's got the general idea down fairly well. Christmas is presents for "Me and Jason and me."

How about your old mom, boys? Don't I get anything?

Yuletide music blends-- joy with reverence

Across the centuries, man has looked to music to express his happy feelings at Christmas time.

From the medieval "Hayl, Mary, ful of grace" and "Mervele noght, Josep" to the more modern "White Christmas" and "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," songs have been a favorite part of the Christmas celebration.

In the tradition of Christmas music, there are simple carols, blending reverent wonder with quiet joy — Martin Luther's "Away in a Manger," for instance, or the mid-19th century hymns, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear," "We Three Kings of Orient Are" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

There are merry songs, celebrating the jolly mood of the Yuletide, such as the time-honored "Deck the Halls," or the modern "Rudolph" and "Frosty the Snowman."

First Christmas carol composed in the United States was the work of an 18th century leather worker named William Billings, reports The Book of Knowledge. A tanner by trade, but a tunesmith by inclination, Billings composed the carol, "A Virgin Unspotted."

The song isn't one that is still sung, and few hymnals now include it, but carol singers today owe William Billings a considerable debt of gratitude.

During Puritan times in England, the singing of carols and, indeed, the whole celebration of Christmas was banned. Today, without carols, would there be a Christmas?

I will honor Christmas in my heart and try to keep it all the year. I will live in the Past, the Present and the Future

The spirit of all three shall strive within me. I will not shut out the lessons that they teach.

Charles Dickens
