More debate scheduled

Sign law rehashed

A proposed sign ordinance that would allow free-standing and taller signs could be voted on by the Canton Board of Trustees as early as March 21.

Chances are, however, the long-debated ordinance will be modified yet again before passage of it is even considered.

The board heard arguments from pro- and anti-sign forces in a special March 15 study session on the issue. At the session, businesspeople in the audience urged the board to vote on the proposed ordinance amendment and said they would settle for almost any eased sign ordinance.

Another meeting was set for 7 p.m. March 21 to further discuss the issue.

Under the current ordinance, businesses are confined to signs on the building and may not put signs on posts in front of the establishment. Some businesses in Canton do have free-standing signs because those signs existed before the strict ordinance was passed and thus fall in the "non-conforming" use category.

The study session featured a presentation by Bill Tesen and Eldon Johnson from the Canton Chamber of Commerce and another slide presentation by Canton ordinance officer Bruce Phillips.

The slides, in both presentations, focused on types and sizes of signs in and around Canton.

Johnson said Canton's present ordinance is a "very restrictive one" and maintained that even large or free-standing signs can be attractive.

Phillips' presentation centered only on showing what signs of certain types and sizes look like.

Residents, businesspeople and board members all took the opportunity to air their feelings about signs.

Chamber president Frank McMurray pointed to a recent survey conducted by his organization, in which 63 percent of the people polled opposed changing the ordinance to allow free-standing signs. On the same poll, 59 percent of those surveyed said they would favor strictly regulated free-standing signs.

McMurray said the Chamber had also surveyed Canton business people to get their responses on issues, and discovered 91 percent of the businesspeople who responded felt signs were necessary for identification. Free-standing signs were favored by 92 percent of the businesspeople who responded.

But, McMurray said, almost half (46 percent) of the businesspeople said they would favor a theme for signs.

"I think, from all the information collected by the Chamber, the majority of businesspeople want 50-foot signs with a 10-20 foot setback," McMurray said.

"That's what's in the document," Trustee Robert Greenstein said.

Treasurer James Donahue questioned whether many businesses in Canton were really desperately in need of signs, since many of their customers are local ones.

Dave McDonald, a Canton resident, was one of the members of the audience who did not favor liberalized sign regulations.

"I can appreciate the businessman wanting to advertise his wares, but I have had no problem locating any kind of commercial product — I look in the telephone book.

"I don't have the gas to drive around looking for signs," he said.

Jerry Cheske, another Canton resident, said the board was "missing the real issues."

"We had a presentation (earlier in the meeting) about zoning. If we have strip zoning on Ford Road, we're also going to have strip signing."

Cheske suggested low profile signs (ones close to the ground) as an alternative, and gave as an example of a "good" sign the one in front of the Canton Animal Hospital.

In response to urging that some sign ordinance be passed soon, Trustee Carol Bodenmiller replied that the board should have the same opportunity to go over the proposed ordinance "sentence by sentence" that the planning commission had.

"I know the businesspeople are impatient," she said. "But this board has to take care of many things that have been left unfinished. We can't — and shouldn't — make a quick judgement."

Teachers to keep own local union

BY EMORY DANIELS

Plymouth-Canton teachers have decided against joining a county union being formed to engage in regional bargaining.

Instead, local teachers will continue to be represented in collective bargaining by the Plymouth-Canton Education Association (PCEA).

And that decision will place the PCEA in a minority position in Wayne County as more than two-thirds of the Michigan Education Association (MEA) unions in the county are expected to select the regional bargaining approach.

LAST WEEK teachers in the 19 MEA school districts in Wayne County were asked to sign authorization cards calling for an election.

The election would be twofold — to decertify local MEA unions and to certify the Wayne County Education Association (WCEA) as sole bargaining agents for the involved districts.

The circulation of cards, and the subsequent elections, are being supervised by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) — which functions for public employees in the same manner as the National Labor Relations Board functions for private sector employees.

To have an election in any single school district, the authorization cards must be signed by at least 30 percent of the teachers in that district.

An election conducted by MERC will be held in every district in which authorization cards are signed by 30 percent or more of the union members.

As of Friday unofficial reports from the teachers union indicated that some 15-17 local units would authorize an election.

But Plymouth-Canton would not be among them.

JOHN RYDER, president of the PCEA, said Friday that the local membership was not authorizing an election for Plymouth-Canton.

As of Friday results were in from all but four schools, and Ryder said it was clear the number of teachers signing cards would not reach 30 percent.

The officers of the PCEA had urged its members not to authorize calling of the election.

"Even though the school board has hired an outside labor attorney to do its negotiating, at this time we feel it is in the best interests of Plymouth-Canton teachers to do their own negotiations locally."

"We still are a growing district with enrollment rising, and have extended

Murder on the menu

A New England vacation is anything but relaxing in Fred Carmichael's "Exit the Body," the latest dinner theater offering at Schoolcraft College.

The mystery farce, complete with stolen jewels, bodies that appear and disappear and colorful characters, runs March 23-24 and 30-31. Dinner starts at 6:30 p.m. and the play at 8 p.m. in the Waterman Campus Center, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

Tickets at $10 are available in advance from the college bookstore.

The fourth dinner theater offering in two years, "Exit the Body" features a cast of 10 rather than the small casts typical of dinner theater. All are students of Lawrence Rudick, who is in the process of persuading college officials to offer a second theater course in fall.

Betty Hancock, the Northville mother who took to acting after her children began to grow up, is mystery writer Crane Hammond, who rents the mysterious New England house. Mrs. Hancock was Miss Marple in last year's Agatha Christie mystery "Murder at the Vicarage."

Others in the cast are: Ellen Clarke of Northville as Lillian, a scenery designer; Michael Corliss of Plymouth as a local hoodlum; Karen Weinberg of Livonia as Helen, the local real estate salesperson.

Also, Marc Harlow of Livonia as newspaper columnist Lyle Rogers; Karin Rathbun of Livonia as Kate, the writer's city-loving secretary; and Edwin Clarke of Northville as Vernon Cookley, the local jack-of-all-trades and constable.

Rudick started rehearsals Jan. 18. He said the play is highlighted by three couples hunting for stolen jewels at 2 a.m.

Main course for the dinner is potted beef steak Provencal, spinach and mushroom salad with Veal off dressing, followed by Bavarian creme pie.

County executive drive pushed

Three suburban Wayne County commissioners are pushing ahead with a petition drive to put a county executive proposal on the next countywide election ballot.

Another organizational meeting will be held at 2 p.m. March 21 in Henry Ford Centennial Library at 16301 Michigan Ave. in Dearborn.

Commissioners William Joyner, D-Plymouth; Mary Dumas, R-Livonia; and Alex Pilch, D-Dearborn, are leading the petition drive. They say they have the support of a variety of community groups including the League of Women Voters and Jaycees.

They are also trying to woo groups, such as the United Auto Workers and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, that have previously opposed the county executive plan.

The three suburban commissioners are pressing ahead with their petition drive even though the full board of commissioners has already twice endorsed the idea of county charter commission to write as county charter and reform the county's multi-layered government.

Joyner, Mrs. Dumas and Pilch say following their plan of putting the county executive question on the next countywide ballot is quicker route to county reform. They say Wayne County could have a county executive after two elections.

Following the road of a charter commission would require four elections and would not guarantee any meaningful changes, they say.

Short takes

YOU CAN TRY out all those disco dances you've learned from 10 p.m. on March 21, at Mr. Mago's in Canton — and help out the Easter Seals campaign at the same time. The entertainment center is sponsoring a dance contest that night and turning all proceeds over to the Easter Seals fund. The contest winner gets to appear on the Easter Seals telenovela. So brush up on the Eeky-Deekey. Fame awaits.

BOOZERS BEWARE: The Canton Police Department has two more officers who are ready and able to administer breathalyzer tests to suspicious types. For those who have never had a brush with the law, a breathalyzer machine measures the percentage of alcohol in the blood through an analysis of a subject's breath. The two officers who just completed the training course at the Michigan State Police Academy are Sgt. Dennis Joker and Ptl. Robin Cripe.

THE CANTON LIBRARY special millage election won't be held May 16 after all, in spite of stories you may have read in this very newspaper. We had the date right, but the election commission has rescheduled the election to request up to one mill ($1 per $1,000 assessed valuation) to begin a Canton library. The new date is May 9. The reason for the change is that state law forbids scheduling elections less than 30 days apart and a Plymouth-Canton School District election is already set for June 11.

TOWNSHIP OFFICIALS and reporters traveled a long way to look at a sludge composting site last week. By-Products Systems Inc. flew them all to Maryland March 15 in order to show them that sludge isn't all as bad as it sounds. The firm has proposed setting up a similar site in Canton. You can read all about the trip and the observations of officials (with the pictures) on 3A of today's Observer.

LWV explores alternatives

Finding best energy source

(The following information on the energy crisis is provided to readers by the League of Women Voters of Northville, Plymouth, Canton, Novi.)

America can increase its production of coal, including strip-mining, but will have to lose some valuable farm land in the process and pollute the air or pay to find cleaner ways of burning coal.

The U.S. can invest in building light water reactor plants but must figure out what to do with the radioactive wastes, how to run the plants safely, and how to find more uranium to fuel them (present known reserves will run out in 25 years).

We can build breeder reactors which produce more fuel than they consume, but these radioactive "leftovers" are a necessary ingredient in nuclear weapons. Who do we want to sell them to? If we don't sell them, where shall we keep them? And where shall we build these plants?

AMERICA ALSO could begin a crash program of research into other sources of energy.

In the last two or three years the federal government has spent more money on solar research and the prices are beginning to come down.

Sunshine has the advantage of being available, free, all over the world.

Sunshine has the disadvantage of not being available at night and on cloudy days. We have to find better ways of storing solar energy and cheaper ways of converting it into electricity.

We also can use windmills and wind power. Wind is free but again there is a problem of storage. It is unlikely that wind power can create enough energy to run a city or large industry.

Energy from the tides, from fusion, from sea water, from the burning of garbage, from geysers and volcanoes — all these are future possibilities.

The key word is future. Their development will take from 15 to 50 years. Meanwhile, back at the ranch, what can we do?

WE CAN STRETCH out our supplies of oil and gas by using them more efficiently through conservation and through appropriate technology.

Using the fuel and process which fits the purpose best is appropriate technology.

If a limited resource like oil can make lifesaving medicines, should it be burned to make electricity to run can openers? This is like using a chain saw to cut butter.

Many persons have already begun to conserve to save money. Many have insulated homes, turned down thermostats and will think twice before driving to the store just to buy a magazine.

What else can we do?

We can join the bandwagon of people insisting on their right to know not only how much an appliance costs, but also how much it costs to run and how long it will last.

We can urge government to set standards of energy efficiency and product efficiency.

We can push for building codes requiring adequate insulation.

We can demand automobiles which guarantee greater mileage per gallon.

THOUGH CONSERVATION and increased efficiency are necessary to any energy plan, they are only a part of the puzzle.

We also must decide if we want to tax people who drive large gas guzzlers or give tax credits to people who insulate their homes.

Do we want to give loan guarantees for investments in new energy sources or tax breaks to companies who convert away from oil and natural gas?

To complicate the jigsaw puzzle further, we must be sure that whatever choices or policies we decide upon are fair and equitable.

Necessities constitute about three-fourths of the expenditures of the lowest income groups as compared to less than half of the expenses of bigger income groups.

It is not so much a sacrifice for an urban commuter to take the bus or pay a tax on his gasoline for a ten mile trip to work, but how about the person in Chippewa County who travels 60 miles to work — who cannot take a bus because there isn't one?

A gasoline tax would seem very unfair to the Chippewa County resident. The government can remove all price controls — letting fuel prices rise so we are all forced to conserve. But what does that do to the poor who already have cut back to the necessities and still have difficulty paying?

SO THAT'S THE energy puzzle — all pieces interlocking and depending on one another to make up the whole.

We've begun to put together some of the parts of the puzzle. As a result of the '73-74 oil boycott we found out how dependent we are, both on oil and on foreign sources of oil and we woke up in time to do something about it.

Many industries and consumers have begun long overdue conservation measures.

We also woke up to find we didn't have an energy policy or energy plan. We need laws, regulations, tax incentives and ways of dealing with the coming changes which will be fair and sensible.

Now is the time to choose an energy plan. If we don't decide now, the choice won't be ours — dwindling supplies and increasing demands will force changes which may not be to our liking.

Choices we make today will affect our options for the future.

Each choice has its own advantages and pitfalls; each involves a trade-off.

We need to talk about what trade-offs we are willing to make, what direction we want our community, state and country to go.

Then we need to let our government officials know what energy choices we've made — what we'd like our future to be.

Joyner didn't sponsor move on Van Buren 5

Wayne County Commissioner William Joyner, D-Plymouth, was mistakenly identified as a sponsor of a resolution involving the "Van Buren 5."

Joyner was reported as a sponsor of a resolution urging state legislation preventing the jailing of public officials by the courts.

The resolution, actually sponsored by commission chairman Richard Manning, asked for a state law to provide that "no court shall issue its order nor shall any sheriff or peace officer enforce any order of any court that seeks to compel any person acting in a legislative capacity to cast his vote either positively or negatively under threat of jail."

A news report issued by the county had listed Joyner as a "co-sponsor" of the Manning resolution. The Observer had understood that to mean Manning and Joyner alone were co-sponsors.

The county, however, has a practice of listing as "co-sponsors" any commissioner who votes in favor of a measure in the ways and means committee or when the commission takes a final vote. Joyner was one of 15 to vote in favor of the Manning resolution in ways and means, and was one of 23 commissioners to favor the action when it was approved last Thursday.

Joyner earlier had introduced a resolution asking the county sheriff to deputize the Van Buren police chief and transfer the trustees to the township hall under the chief's custody. The trustees would have been confined to township hall, under the Joyner's resolution, but would have been free to conduct township business.

That resolution became irrelevant, however, when Circuit Judge Charles Kaufman released the "Van Buren Five" from jail pending full appeal of the court ruling ordering the township to sign sewer permits to allow construction of a mobile home park in the township.

Joyner, whose 27th District includes Plymouth, Canton, Van Buren and parts of Westland, stressed the resolution was written, sponsored and introduced by Manning.

"To set the record straight, I was not a sponsor of the Manning resolution but did vote for it — as did 22 other commissioners, which is a large plurality seldom seen on the board."

Job training spots available

Work is available for young persons interested in on-the-job training.

Young people ages 18-24 may receive such training through the Growth Works On-The-Job Training (OJT) program funded by a grant from the Michigan Department of Labor.

The program will begin April 2.

OJT ENABLES an individual to learn specific skills and qualify for an occupation by working under supervision.

Many local businesses have agreed to take participants for the OJT in areas such as manufacturing, clerical work, retail sales, and computer service.

Employers are subsidized by the state for participants' salaries.

Those in the program will work 30 hours a week at a starting salary of $3 an hour. After one-four weeks of paid pre-employment training, each participant will be placed with an employer for the OJT phase.

This phase may last up to three months.

Employers are strongly encouraged to hire their trainee on a permanent basis after the training period.

To qualify, applicants must be out of work and living on their own. They also must meet Michigan Employment Program (MEP) income guidelines.

There are 42 openings available in the program. Anyone interested in the MEP should call Growth Works at 455-4095 or drop by the center at 271 S. Main, Plymouth.

Canton officials find sludge site a sweet surprise

By DARLENE STINSON

The entourage of Canton Township representatives surrounded Arlene Katz the moment she stepped from her car in a fashionable Maryland suburb.

"Yes, there are times when you can smell it," the Maryland woman said of a nearby sludge composting site that is comparable to a project proposed for a 140-acre parcel near Michigan Avenue and Morton Taylor in Canton Township.

"It stinks when the wind is right."

But Eric Barry, who lives across the street from Ms. Katz, said he has never smelled odors from the composting field that is located a half mile from the development of $80,000 homes.

"I wouldn't even have known it was there if people from Michigan hadn't told me," he said.

ODOR WAS THE biggest concern of four Canton Township representatives who traveled to Beltsville, Md. Thursday to examine a sludge composting site run by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

They were accompanied by representatives of two local newspapers on the trip financed by By-Product Systems Inc. to convince Canton officials that the composting project they are proposing would create no environmental problems.

Representing Canton on the trip were Clerk John Flodin, Trustee Carol Bodenmiller, engineer Robert Wade and resident Pat Milovich. Brenda Peek represented the Detroit Water and Sewage Department on the trip.

THE MICHIGAN group and five representatives of By-Product Systems toured the sludge composting site that is located on a 7,500-acre USDA research facility midway between Baltimore and Washington, D.C.

The process used by the USDA to convert sludge from a Washington waste water treatment plant into fertilizer is identical to the procedure that By-Product Systems would like to establish in Canton Township.

The firm holds a three-year contract with the City of Detroit to establish interim measures for the daily disposal of 600 tons of treated sludge from the Detroit waste water treatment plant.

THE FIRM'S proposal to compost the sludge in Canton Township would help the Detroit Water and Sewage Department carry out a court order to decrease the amount of waste that is being dumped into the Detroit River. The order stems from a lawsuit filed against Detroit by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Under By-Product's proposal, the sludge would be trucked from Detroit to the Canton site, where it would be mixed with woodchips. An aeration process would heat the sludge to 150 degrees for a 21-day period.

At the end of an additional 30-day curing process, the sludge would take the form of an odorless soil additive that By-Product general manager Tom Reed says his firm plans to sell.

ALTHOUGH CANTON officials have expressed a willingness to examine the proposal, they have voiced a fear that the sludge would create offensive odors.

But Flodin, Mrs. Bodenmiller and Mrs. Milovich appeared surprised Thursday when they arrived at the Maryland composting site.

Strong winds pushed the smoke rising from the composting sludge toward the group as they walked toward the site.

All three admitted that they could smell nothing until they stood in front of the composting piles. Barnyards often smell worse, the three said.

A TOUR OF a nearby housing development and interviews with residents followed the compost site inspection. About half of the residents interviewed said they have detected odors from the site on occasion. The other half said they have never smelled anything.

"It didn't smell as bad as I thought it would," Flodin said after the trip. "I still have some reservations, but it's not as undesirable as I thought it could have been."

Mrs. Bodenmiller expressed similar feelings.

"I went with great reservations, but still trying to be objective," she said. "I must admit that the wall that was there now has a crack in it."

MRS. BODENMILLER expressed the fear, however, that the composting site smell may be worse during warm, damp weather. On Thursday, the weather in Maryland was sunny, cold and windy.

George Willson, a USDA agricultural engineer who did much of the research work for the Maryland composting project, said odors have not forced the USDA to use chemical masking agents at the sludge site for the past three years.

He said residents of a nearby subdivision complained about odors when the composting site was first established in 1973.

ACCORDING TO Willson, the complaints prompted a USDA research effort that resulted in a new odor control technique. Under the procedure engineered by the USDA, a blanket of composted material is laid over the sludge to screen odors.

Willson also assured the Canton representatives that the sludge piles do not attract rodents or flies. He said the high temperature of composting sludge would cook any insect eggs that might be laid in the material.

"For some reason, compost is unattractive to flies," he added. "There might be more flies crawling on my head than on a pile of sludge."

By-Product president Arthur Cassling said his firm plans to use a chemical agent that smells like wild cherry if offensive odors are ever emitted from the Canton site.

CASSLING, HEAD of the Pennsylvania-based firm, insisted that the Michigan Health Department, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and other state and county agencies would closely monitor the proposed Canton project.

He said his firm is required to conduct an environmental impact study before establishing the proposed compost site.

The project must be approved by the Canton Township board and several state and county agencies. By-Product officials hope to present site plans for the project to the Canton Planning Commission next month.

CASSLING SAID his firm selected the Canton site for the composting project because of its high clay table, appropriate industrial zoning and easy access to Detroit.

"We're a very scientific company," Cassling said. "There's not a thing we're doing that's guesswork."

By-Product Systems plans to purchase a 100-acre site on the south side of Michigan east of Morton Taylor for the project and lease an additional 40 acres from Canton Township.

Cassling said the composting process would take place on township-owned land that is earmarked for an industrial park. The company would follow township plans for the area in constructing Class A roads and sewer lines.

STORM WATER from the composting site would seep into the sewer lines and be transported to the Detroit treatment plant, he said. Cassling indicated that Wayne County would not count the water from the site in figuring out the amount of purchased sewer capacity that is being utilized by Canton Township.

Cassling added that the 100-acre site his firm plans to purchase would be used as a buffer zone and a storage area for the huge amount of woodchips required by the composting process.

The firm plans to revitalize an abandoned landfill on the 100-acre parcel by planting trees and fertilizing the ground with compost.

"That's the good neighbor part of the thing," Cassling said of the proposal to build roads, sewer lines and revitalize the landfill. "That's how we're trying to sell it."

In the initial state, sludge is heat-treated (thus the steam) to destroy bacteria.

Stolen: '72 Olds Cutlass, white, six feet long

Mel Morris is missing a 1972 Olds Cutlass convertible, white with a removable red top, that's only six feet long.

That's right. Six feet long. Morris, a member of the Shriner Lancer Unit, uses the little car in parades. He still has two other cars of similar dimensions, but wants the third one back.

The cars, which are like the real thing in every detail except size, number only 30 throughout the entire country.

He discovered the car was missing March 13, when he went behind his garage to check on the trailer where the three little autos were stored.

"There was one on top of the trailer and two inside. Someone broke the lock and took one from inside."

Morris said the car is insured for $1,500, but considers it "irreplaceable."

"It was my best car," he said. "I always used it in our annual competition where we would perform maneuvers.

"Communities contribute to the Shriners when we participate in the parades and we use the money to help crippled children," Morris said.

According to Morris, the car would hold one person ("squeezed in with a shoehorn") and is gasoline powered. It has "Moslem Temple" lettered on one side with the Shriner emblem, and his own name painted on the trunk.

He urges anyone who has seen or heard about the car to call him at 981-1877.

"I just don't understand what anyone would want with the car," he said.

District's teachers retain local union

School Year and other things which are unique to Plymouth-Canton. Because of this, we feel it is best to remain out of the WCEA at this point.

"Believe me, it was a tough decision to make," Ryder added. "And we do not look at the results here as a victory or anything like that. But it is reassuring that the membership is supportive of its leadership and that we still have a lot of local unity."

Norman Kee, chief negotiator for the school board, declined comment on the authorization process. "The school board sees this as an internal union issue, and we have decided not to get involved by making our views known, but to let the association decide independently."

THE WCEA began organizing two years ago when it elected a slate of officers.

Last year the WCEA wrote a constitution which was approved by the 19 districts in the county, including the PCEA.

"We had approved it and so we have been bound to operate under the constitution, but now we will be withdrawing."

When questioned, Ryder said he didn't believe difference in wealth among the 19 districts is a major influence in the support for regional bargaining. "Redford Union, for instance, which has a high State Equalized Valuation, is very much behind joining the WCEA."

As of press time the official results in the 19 districts was unknown.

April 9 is deadline for school trustee race

Monday, April 9, is the last day to file nominating petitions for the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

Two four-year terms on the school board will be filled in the annual election on June 11.

Incumbent Tom Yack of Canton, currently president of the school board, intends to seek re-election. The other incumbent, Joe Gray of Plymouth Township, has announced intentions to step down from the board.

ANY RESIDENT of Plymouth or Canton desiring to run for the school board must return petitions no later than 4 p.m. Monday, April 9.

Petitions may be picked up and returned to the elections clerk at the school district's central office at 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth.

The petitions must be signed by a number of the registered electors of the district not less than one percent of the total number of voters received by the school trustee with the greatest number of votes in the last board election.

Based on last June's election, the minimum number of signatures required would be about 55.

Candidates wishing to withdraw from the race must do so in writing no later than 4 p.m. Thursday, April 12.

The deadline to register for the June 11 election is 5 p.m. Monday, May 14.

Mainstreaming: A right sometimes abused

By EMORY DANIELS

(Last in a series)

Two areas of controversy, beyond definition, in the field of learning disabilities are mainstreaming and the use of drugs on Learning Disabled (LD) children.

Mainstreaming is the term given the practice of having a special education child spend part of his time in a regular classroom.

The controversy about drugs, once the topic of federal and state investigations, involves the use of medication to control a child's behavior.

MOST PARENTS of LD students generally support the concept of mainstreaming.

Parents share the hope of educators that their children eventually will be able to function normally in the general classroom.

Parents also share the fears of some educators, however, that the desired goal of mainstreaming will be abused by overzealous administrators concerned with cutting costs.

Ellen Pincus, a member of the special education staff of Southfield Public Schools, assured parents that "mainstreaming is a real life situation all children have a right to" at the annual conference of the Michigan Association for Children with Learning Disabilities (MACLD).

"But mainstreaming requires very careful planning and inservice training for the general classroom teacher with special education teachers."

(A special inservice workshop for general and special education teachers was held this fall here sponsored by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and the Plymouth-Northville-Canton chapter of the MACLD).

"But mainstreaming should not be used," stressed Ms. Pincus, "to make the general classroom an indiscriminate dumping grounds to eliminate the use of special classes or special education teachers.

"Mainstreaming should not result in getting rid of supportive services. In fact, successful mainstreaming demands the continuation of supportive services for those students who are placed in the general classroom."

She adds that mainstreaming is an expressed goal in state law, but the law also provides mainstreaming can occur only to "the maximum extent possible."

Given the fact that some school districts are declassifying LD students, when possible, (or failing to discover) to save money by reducing special education expenditures, parents of LD children continue to be leary of mainstreaming.

Chapters of the MACLD throughout the state, including the Plymouth-Canton chapter, are keeping a watchful eye on mainstreaming activities to make sure the desired goal is not used for financial convenience to the detriment of the students involved.

THE USE OF medication to control behavior was a stirring controversy in the late 1960s and early '70s, but has quieted somewhat as physicians and schools have exercised more care in suggesting use of drugs.

As noted in an earlier report, Dr. Paul Pearsall of Sinai Hospital argues that drugs such as ritalin does not slow down behavior but only makes the nervous system more open to receiving stimuli.

Pearsall argues that the child should not be given medication, as it doesn't change behavior, but should be bombarded with stimuli to satisfy the real needs of the nervous system.

Dr. Harold Levy says he is not opposed to use of stimulant medication if it is administered properly. And Levy stresses that such medication should not be used unless the learning disability is known to be a biochemical disturbance.

Levy, a practicing physician in Shreveport, La., is author of the book "Square Pegs, Round Holes."

Levy stresses, however, that: "You cannot cure a thing with medication, but you can improve concentration. And it's pretty clear that you cannot help a kid whom the teacher is humiliating or kids are making fun of."

"Since 1937 there has not been a single case of addiction from use of stimulant drugs reported in any medical literature."

Levy believes the new medications are not paradoxical as Pearsall maintains. Stimulant medication, he adds, enhances the availability of transmitters in the nervous system to send signals through the nerve cells (neurons).

In response to questions, Levy notes that for any LD child there is an 85 percent chance that a learning disability will occur elsewhere in the same family.

Levy also notes that available figures indicate there are five to eight times as many boys than girls who are LD.

Dr. Jeannie Johns, a psychologist at the University of Michigan, agrees with most experts that the most significant sign of an LD child is a severe gap between potential and classroom performance.

A critical point, Dr. Johns says, is that the LD child often is of average or above average intelligence. He may not be able to write or read, but may have outstanding verbal ability. He may not be able to follow simple directions, but may be able to rebuild a complicated automobile engine with ease.

The major problems, she adds, is an impairment in the way the brain processes information received through the senses. The brain, like a decoding device on the blink, may scramble messages or transcribe them incompletely.

Sometimes symbols, letters or entire words are seen in reversed order. In other cases facts will be stored out of sequence, phrases out of line, or whole chunks of information lost.

The symptoms of the Learning Disabled child were recognized only 16 years old in America (although German neurologists wrote of symptoms very much like those of LD children as early as 1833).

While this series may have stressed areas of disagreement and of controversy, it must be remembered that 16 years is a short span in the life of scientific research. And there are many areas of agreement among professionals in the medical field, parents and educators.

Anyone desiring further information about learning disabilities may contact the Plymouth-Northville-Canton chapter of the MACLD through its president, Jean Bicknell of Maxwell Street, Northville, or Sharon Young of Plymouth.

New students must get shots

Kindergartners or students entering school for the first time will not be admitted to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools unless they have proof of immunization.

State law requires all new school entrants must have written proof of immunization.

To comply with the law, parents must provide the schools with a statement signed by a physician that their child has received four kinds of vaccines.

They must be immunized against measles and rubella; must have received a minimum of three doses plus a booster of oral polio vaccine and DPT (diphtheria, pertussis, and tetanus). Dr. Jane Polkowski of the Wayne County Health Dept. has stated that a physician's diagnosis of rubella is not acceptable in the place of a rubella vaccine, unless documented by antibody titer.

If immunization is against the parents' beliefs, they must sign a waiver form which is available at the child's school. This form must be signed and witnessed in the school.

If a child has not received the necessary immunizations, they can be obtained from a family doctor or by contacting the Wayne County Dept. of Health.

Marcella Dodes and Darlene Huyck, local school district nurses, can answer any additional questions about school immunization policy through the office of Pupil Personnel Services, 455-0470.

Off the Walls

Oblivious to fashion

By NANCY WALLS SMITH

To say that I am oblivious to fashion is an understatement.

I truly suspect that the part of my brain which is supposed to be cataloguing the latest styles and beauty tips lies fallow and dormant. It may even be dead.

But despite my unfamiliarity with the world of chic, the other evening I decided to pamper myself with a beauty work-over. We were scheduled to attend a party at the home of my husband's boss. This meant I was due to be surrounded by his co-workers and their wives, most of whom I have never met. I wanted to make a good impression. Sometimes I really do care.

With this thought in mind, I figured it might be fun to devote an extra couple of hours in preparation for this shindig. I knew there must be more to life than Covergirl and eyeliner. Till now I had just been too lazy to experiment with all those lotions, salves and balms that were cluttering my cabinets. Most of them had been sent to me by merchandisers who, no doubt, felt I was greatly in need of cosmetic aids. Perhaps they knew something I didn't.

I started by washing my hair and using a conditioner. Now I realize that conditioners are not all that controversial, but when you have naturally curly hair like mine, changing the texture of said frizz can be disastrous. It was. I used my husband's hot comb on my newly soft hair. When I was done, I knew I had a problem. My coiffure looked bigger and clumpier than I can ever remember it looking. I always tend to favor the "natural" look, but this was a little more natural than even I care to be. I think I could have adjusted to the bigness if it weren't for those clumps. Especially the bunching at the sides which gave me an uncanny resemblance to Bozo the Clown. I decided to worry about all that later. Next on my agenda was a facial mask.

Now I'm not even sure what a facial mask is for. I haven't earned many wrinkles yet, but I figured if it was going to make any improvement at all, it would be worth the effort. The directions told me to apply this clear thick goo in "liberal amounts" to my face, making sure not to get any on my eyebrows, hairline or eyes. Sounded easy enough. It went on to explain that after five minutes, I was to "peel the mask from top of forehead downward."

After ten minutes I was still sitting there with a lot of sticky goo on my face. Fifteen minutes went by and I was beginning to wonder if perhaps the manufacturer's definition of "peel" was different from my own. I couldn't even wipe the stuff off!

Peeling was an impossibility. I noticed that my face was starting to feel as if it were going to suffocate. Remembering that lady in the movie "Goldfinger" who died when her entire body was painted with gold paint, I decided it was time to rescue my face before it succumbed.

I washed and I scrubbed and I soaked and I scoured. I still had a layer to my epidermis that wasn't there when I started. I also noticed that I had a very distinct line indicating red skin where I had been "masked" showing against my own natural winter-pastey white.

I started having visions of my skin coming off in clumps, but decided not to panic and reached for the Noxzema. Praying that I wouldn't bring about some lethal chemical reaction, I applied Noxzema in very generous doses.

After about a minute-and-a-half, my face began to burn. I considered yelling to my husband that we weren't going anywhere that night (or any other night), but I decided to meet this challenge head on. Besides, he might get mad at me if I told him I had just disfigured myself with Noxzema.

After washing off the Noxzema, I discovered that the damage wasn't as bad as I feared. My face was a tad "sunburned," but all my features were intact. I knew I would survive.

Next I decided to relax and polish my fingernails. I had forgotten that when you're the mother of preschoolers it is impossible to relax and polish your nails at the same time. My two-year-old kept leaning on me. My two-year-old always leans on me, but I've gotten so used to it that I usually don't even notice. Unless, of course, I'm doing something that requires manual dexterity. I'm not all that dexterous without a "leaner." With one, I'm in big trouble.

I didn't want to scream at the little guy, mainly because I was afraid that if I were to yell my face would stiffen into a snarl. I still wasn't certain if I had sufficiently de-masked myself. So, trying to maintain as much composure as possible, I would gently ask, "please don't lean on Mama, Jim. Mama's doing something important, darling. Could you please go sway on daddy's leg?"

Naturally this went all to no avail. My kids aren't used to responding to anything softer than a roar accompanied by the appropriate facial expressions of impending doom. So I went out of the lines a few times. At least my nails were painted, and I was starting to feel classy.

Later when I shaved my underarms and applied my deodorant, the raging sting made me think that perhaps I just wasn't meant to go out into the world and meet people. I think I'm at my best when not seen.

When I finally finished this ordeal of beauty, needless to say, I didn't look any different than I usually do. Presentable, but no threat to Farrah. 'Tis the sad, sad story of my life.

Observer advertising directors re-aligned

A re-alignment and the appointment of a new manager in Observer & Eccentric Newspapers' retail advertising department were announced this week by advertising director George Hagan.

Daniel Chovanec, 33, has joined the group as retail advertising manager for the six Oakland County papers. He will begin work April 1 in the Birmingham office, where he will supervise the sales staff and promote retail advertising sales.

Moving from Oakland County to the six Wayne County papers as retail advertising manager is Bob Kolb, whose headquarters will be the Livonia office.

The realignment was occasioned by the resignation of Robert Delaney, who left to go into business in Lansing.

"I'm expecting Dan Chovanec to be active and visible in community and civic activities in his new post," said Hagan. "That kind of involvement is part of our policy."

A native of Alma, Chovanec graduated from Clarenceville High School in Livonia, earned an associate degree at Schoolcraft College, received a bachelor of business administration degree at Eastern Michigan University and attended Wayne State University graduate school.

Most recently, he had been director of sales and promotion for the Globe and Advertiser in suburban Washington, D.C. From 1975-77 he was at the Macomb Daily, rising to assistant advertising manager. He has also sold advertising at the Dearborn Press and the Daily Record Leader in Alma.

A two-year Army veteran, Chovanec enjoys such outdoor sports as skiing and hunting.

S'craft millage backed

A congressman, seven state legislators and many local officials are among supporters of Schoolcraft College's March 26 tax proposal, campaign leaders announced.

Voters will decide whether to raise the property tax limit by one mill for five years. The estimated $10 million in revenue over those years would be earmarked for capital expenditures. These would include new construction, major maintenance and equipment on the 183-acre campus.

Both the Republican and Democratic organizations in the Wayne County portion of the 2d Congressional District have endorsed the proposal, as have the Livonia Republican Club and the Livonia GOP Women.

Individual endorsements have been

Other backers are Wayne County Commissioners Mary E. Dumas, R-Livonia, and R. William Joyner, D-Plymouth; Livonia Mayor Edward H. McNamara, Plymouth Mayor Thomas A. Turner and Plymouth Township Supervisor Thomas G. Notebaert.

The Northville Board of Education and board president Samuel Prisk of Clarenceville, Mary Jane Schildberg of Garden City and Douglas A. Whitaker of Northville also endorsed it.

AL AND FRAN ADAMS celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary with what their family considered a sentimental journey. They spent nine days in Key West, Fla. When they were first married, Al was stationed at the naval base in Key West.

They were married March 11, 1944 at Grosse Ile. They have been Plymouth residents for 25 years and live on Jener Street. They have four children and one granddaughter who lives in Hartland.

Al is building superintendent for Canton Township. Fran works at Way-side in Plymouth.

Their family surprised them with a dinner party March 4, before they took off for Key West. And the weather was delightful during their vacation with temperatures the warmest in the whole USA.

ELLIE GRAHAM

MR. AND MRS. FRED Smith of Auburn Street, Plymouth will mark their 69th wedding anniversary March 28 with a family party.

The Smiths were married March 28, 1910 in Sault Ste. Marie. They have been residents of Plymouth for more than 30 years.

Before his retirement in 1958, Mr. Smith was an electrician at American Motors Corp. When he started with the company, it was Kelvinator.

The Smiths are members of a local senior citizens club. They are active gardeners and their vegetable and flower gardens provide a great deal of pleasure (and work) during the summer months. They are especially proud of their roses.

Both enjoy watching television and they are Tiger and Red Wings fans.

They have two daughters, Beatrice (Mrs. Clarence Gardner of Plymouth) and Lillian (Mrs. Edward LaLonde of Sault Ste. Marie). They also have seven grandchildren, 29 great-grandchildren, and six great-great-grandchildren.

TICKETS FOR the Kitchen Cabaret sponsored by the Staccato group of the Plymouth Symphony League were a complete sell-out in three days. They were all gone before some of the Staccatos had an opportunity to buy one.

Attendance at the March 28 cabaret is not required to win some of the giveaways. For information call Janet repp, 453-0947, who is chairing the event, or Bobbi Abbott, 453-2603.

The King and Who?

"The King and Who?" contest is kind of a sidebar to the arts council's musical revue, "Way Off Broadway." Ten persons have been nominated for the honor and votes can be cast at 10 cents each. Service clubs are supporting their candidates and money collected will help defray costs of the production. The winner will be announced at the Saturday evening performance.

'Way Off Broadway' opens Friday

Suburban Life

The box office opened this morning. Rehearsals are in full swing. The votes are pouring in for the "King and Who" contest. The countdown has started for "Way Off Broadway," the musical revue which opens Friday night in the auditorium of Plymouth Salem High School.

Rumor has it that Plymouth Rotary Club candidate, the Rev. Robert Keller, received enthusiastic support at Friday's luncheon meeting of the club. The question will be answered at Saturday's performance of the Plymouth Community Arts Council's follies. Then, and only then, will the winner of the "King and Who" campaign be announced. It's a case of whose supporters are willing to invest the most money to elect their candidate.

A good cross-section of the community will be involved in the follies. Director Charlie Crain has discovered talents that even members of the cast were not aware of.

BOB TAYLOR will be master of ceremonies.

Show girls are: Jan MacKenzie, Bert O'Day, Heather Shephard, Martha Schryer, Carole Brandt, Ann Arenson, Pat Mee and Karen Reeber.

Members of the singing chorus are: Joe Uhl, Bob Stone, Dan Flower, Ron Quick, Mike Shay, Frank Belobraidich, Gene Gulbransen, Dick Taylor, Jim O'Day, Cliff McClumpha, Mark Weymeyer, Jim McGettigan, Audrey Crain, Joan Davis, Mercedes Kimling, Eileen Miller, Mary Uhl, Jan Crook, Thyra Strapac, Dolores Roth, Barb Helmer, Sharon Belobraidich, Roberta Limburg and Judy Lewis.

Any resemblance of members of the cast to local dignitaries, veterinarians, club women, businesspersons and industrialists and educators is not purely coincidental.

THE REVUE will include several specialty and surprise numbers and skits. There will be solos and duets.

Dave Shephard as "Tabby the Cat" will perform with the "Kittens," portrayed by Irene Taylor, Judy Slade, Cynthia Betley, Karen Sattler, Nancy Hayes and Marilyn Johnson.

Jan Gattoni will appear as "Hard-Hearted Hannah." Dick Shaw and Vince Currie will appear in a surprise duet.

Sue Diebolt will do a specialty number with the boys and girls of the square dance group.

Mike Diebolt, Chuck Heidt and Ned Stirtton will team up for a surprise specialty.

Jo Hulce and Gene Gulbransen will star in a "Tramp" number with the dancers.

The glamorous Rockettes will include: Carol Carlson, Jackie Henegan, Eileen Agius, Toni Grim, Lynne Kurtz, Janice Seluk, Shirley Peters, Nancy Petrocelli, Nancy Thomas, Linda Watson, Lynn Ott, Lynda Anderson.

They will appear in three dance numbers.

BARBARA LECLAIR and seven "Red Hot Mamas" are Janet Brass, Sudy Shuman, Dorothy McGettigan, Marilyn Carl, Elaine Kouba, Frankie Lamirand and Charlene Fitzpatrick.

Starring in "Frankie and Johnnie" will be bekep Cowan as Johnnie, Cheryl Wilson as Nellie Blye, Kathryn Cowan as Frankie, Frankie Lamirand as Diamond Lil, and Jim Witten as the emcee and solo singer at the Silver Slipper saloon.

Skits will be performed by Nancy Brone, Larry Janes, Diane Janes, Jack Helmer, Elise Murphy and Judge Dunbar Davis.

Tickets for reserved seats can be purchased from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, March 19-23. Orchestra seats are $6 and balcony seats $3. The last PCAC revue was a sellout and the arts council is anticipating a full house both Friday and Saturday nights. The box office is in the Detroit Edison office, Maint Street at Ann Arbor Trail.

Antiques show and sale

The fifth annual Michigan Antiques Show and Sale will be March 30, 31 and April 1 in the University of Michigan Crisler Arena, Ann Arbor. Among the 68 dealers from 16 states, England and France will be Dan Fortin of Lincolnville, Maine who owns two shops and is affiliated with several marine museums and historical societies. From his "Thar She Blows" shop, he will bring a 19th century decorated tea chest, ships rigging blocks, a caulking mallet and a rope-workers fid. Other seafaring items at the show and sale are ships wheels, logbooks, fishing and whaling tools, navigation instruments, marine paintings and sailors' folk art. Admission to the show is $2.50 and a dining area is available.

Urban crisis topic at LWV meeting

Urban Crisis will be the topic under discussion at the League of Women Voters' meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 28 in Meads Mill School, Six Mile at Bradner Roads, Northville Township.

Libby Richards will assist league members in Plymouth, Northville, Canton and Novi in taking consensus on various questions about what and how much government should do to improve the quality of life in the nation's distressed cities. Ms. Richards is a member of the Urban Crisis Committee for the InterLeague Organization of Wayne and Oakland counties.

Members of the LWV recognized the need to apply a national perspective to the well-being of the cities in 1976. They advocated the development of a comprehensive national urban policy. Their explorations revealed that serious fiscal difficulties, due to an eroding tax base, was the common plight of many U.S. cities. This conclusion resulted in the emphasis of the study concentrating on fiscal policies.

QUESTIONS at the March 28 meeting will address aspects of urban fiscal policy that deal with federal aid to cities, the federal government's relationship with state and local governments, revenue sharing and other financial assistance.

Block grants and federal involvement in local borrowing for capital construction to assist municipal governments also will be discussed. Another question will ask what incentives to state and local governments should be used to promote fiscal health in the cities.

Leagues all over the United States are studying these questions and the answers will determine the platform for league action in helping solve the problems of urban crises.

CMS bands rated No. 1

Two Central Middle School bands achieved Division One ratings March 10 at the district band festival.

Central's seventh grade intermediate band and eighth grade advanced band played for four judges who evaluated their performances. The one rating signifies excellence in performance and sight reading.

"This is an exciting band, strong with lots of depth and balance. Keep up the good work and the enthusiasm," said Jim Stark of Midland who was one of the judges.

Central Middle School hosted the all-day festival which attracted 15 bands from the metropolitan area. Michael DiCuirci, director of Central's bands, was host chairman. Bev Stanley was parent chairman and Ted Smith, band director at Redford Thurston High School, was section chairman.

"A one rating is an honor," said DiCuirci, after the festival which attracted a steady flow of visitors throughout the day. He credited the success of the event to "many people who contributed their time and their talent to the project."

High heating bill? Cold weather is just one reason.

As a customer information representative, part of my job is to answer questions about energy bills. Lately there have been lots of calls about why bills are higher.

One reason is cold weather. Customers throughout Michigan are using many more units of gas to heat their homes than they do in the warmer weather. Another reason for increased energy bills is the increased cost of fuel that continues to rise and that we must pass along to our customers. There's no denying the fact that energy costs are becoming more expensive for all of us. I'll try to help you if you call me, but the weather and fuel-cost increases are beyond our control. I think the best advice I can give you is to take all possible steps to conserve — to save both your dollars and your valuable energy.

We at Consumers Power Company are doing our part to keep your energy bills as low as possible. We hope that you are doing your part too, by conserving energy.

Letter stirs new controversy for Center

By SHERRY KAHAN
and MARGARET MILLER

Differing views of the role of a blue-ribbon advisory council has the embattled Plymouth Center for Human Development in the middle of new controversy.

The Plymouth Association for Retarded Citizens said in a letter to Gov. William Milliken that the Citizens Advisory Council is not doing its job in stopping abuse at the center.

Council Chairman Jack Bologna, Plymouth businessman, and Dr. Nelson Grote, Schoolcraft College president and council member disagreed, saying the body does not have authority to stop abuse.

"We're only a sounding board," said Bologna.

"I see the council in the role of a management board," Dr. Grote said.

Eranell McIntosh-Wilson, acting director of the center, called the letter "unbelievable" and charged that it left out important facts.

The letter expressing the views of the PARC board of directors without including individual signatures, dated March 11, stated that the 11-member council apparently was "hand picked by PCHD administrators."

"WE DO NOT think the council has shown awareness nor been responsive to the needs of people who are mentally retarded," the two-page letter stated.

"An example of this is seen in the council's inadequate response toward the serious problems reflected in PCHD recipient rights complaints.

"One of the council's stated purposes is to review the recipient rights protection system, with particular attention to complaints and facility actions pertaining to abuse and neglect.

"Because the council has not explored the continuing abuse and neglect at PCHD, we do not feel it is accomplishing its stated purpose."

RESPONDING, Bologna said that the council's goal has always been to upgrade the quality of care the center residents.

"PARC expects miracles from us. But we have no direct authority. We are a sounding board. The big question is: are things so bad that the council should be exposing its frustration to the media? As far as I know, no one is that frustrated."

Bologna indicated support of PARC's effort to communicate with the governor, saying the council has done the same in an effort to obtain funds and hire more staff to investigate rights complaints.

Grote viewed the advisory council's role as noticing if complaints are being followed up. "I didn't perceive as the principle responsibility of the council to review the complaints. I see the council in the role of a management board.

"Our job is to know how complaints are handled and who is doing what, rather than getting involved in the complaints themselves. We are an advisory committee, not a board of governors. We have no authority to exercise whatsoever.

"I don't see us as volunteers with unlimited time to interview people properly and getting that involved. I don't see that as our role, and I don't have the time.

OTHER MEMBERS of the council are Lorraine Beebe, former state senator and member of the President's Committee on Mental Retardation; Glen Brooks, assistant vice-president of the Federal Reserve Bank; Dr. Royal Synholt of the United Methodist Church of Detroit, and Mary Finn, PARC member.

Also serving on the council are Lee McNally, former board member and past president of the Michigan Association for Retarded Citizens; John Dithmer, general manager of the Plymouth Hilton Inn; James Simpson, director of United Cerebral Palsy of Detroit; and Marian Tucker, former board member of the Michigan and Detroit Associations for Retarded Citizens.

Tom Riordan, executive editor of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers Inc., resigned after serving several months on the council.

Bologna said the council is very concerned about the abuse issue. "I hate for this whole thing to happen," he said. "I am very concerned about residents, and I want to work with the parents group. We have invited PARC members to our meeting. We've provided them with opportunities to make comments."

THE PARC member serving on the advisory board is Mary Finn, who considers fighting abuse and neglect a major reason for forming the council.

"But at meetings these matters have been minimal and passed-over," she said. She addressed herself to several of the issues raised by the PARC letter, which mentioned complaints given to the council.

They involved "physical and sexual abuse, serious injuries and one death, as well as less severe incidents which are violations of civil rights of residents."

"I was saddened by the death reported," said Mrs. Finn. "It was a very tragic thing to have happen. I was concerned that no one on the council was more upset. People accepted the administration explanation."

(According to Julie Ellison of the Office of Recipient Rights, the death of a woman who had a cardiac arrest occurred because there was no cardiac needle in the center's hospital wing. An environmental and treatment rights complaint was filed by a nurse. Mrs. Wilson answered it with a promise of more emergency equipment in the hospital.)

MRS. WILSON agreed with Bologna and Grote that "it is not the responsibility of the advisory council to look into each case, but to look at the system."

"Besides, the council has no access to records without parental permission," she added.

She suggested there was incomplete information, for example, in the PARC charge that unanswered recipient rights complaints totaled 448 in December of 1978 and 530 in January of 1979.

Of the January complaints, she said, only a few were resident-to-resident complaints and only four were staff-to-resident.

"The were handled immediately and employees involved were severely dealt with," she said.

She also branded incomplete a statement in the letter regarding a program director at Sullivan Hall.

TRAVEL LOG of Iris Jones

Bears aren't finicky eaters; Your arm's just fine

The frost is still on the outhouse in our northern cottage, but the tourists will soon be back, feeding their children to the bears.

The bears in Algonquin Park, Ontario, 200 miles north of Toronto, are half-wild and half-tame, as they are in any state or provincial park. They are tame enough to eat out of your hand and wild enough to eat your hand if they are so inclined.

Park personnel continually warn tourists about this, but I don't see much sign that they listen. If you are planning a trip into bear country this year, consider this:

A display in the Algonquin Park Museum shows food cans and other metal objects that bears have torn apart with their nails. The display sign reads: "Bears don't need can openers."

If you saw a bear in the wild, you would be appropriately scared. For some reason, we lose that protective fear when we see a 600-pound bear on the highway or in a garbage dump.

Garbage dumps were their favorite snacking spots at Algonquin Park until the rangers switched to incinerators. Cottagers and other regulars took visitors to the dump to "see the bears."

Imagine this scene. A huge black bear is pawing around in a garbage bag on the slope. Thirty or forty tourists are watching him, as well as other bears who came to dine.

A mother hands a preschool child a candy bar to feed to the bear. The child puts it in front of the bear's nose. He's too busy eating garbage to care, but if he was so inclined he could take the candy bar, the hand and half the arm without even trying.

It doesn't happen too often. But it happens.

College students who work summers in Yoho National Park, in the Canadian Rockies, often wear bells on their ankles when they walk through the woods. They don't want to startle any wild bear into action. They know that wild bears will usually avoid people unless they feel defensive.

Half-tame bears are another matter. Any camper will tell you bear stories, including too-friendly critters who tear up and eat the camp supplies that aren't stored in the trunk of the car. Only greenhorns keep food in the tent.

I remember clearly the day my father got out of the car in Yellowstone National Park to take a picture of a bear. The bear chased him, and I can still see his long curved nails on the top of the car window as my father frantically rolled the window up.

I also remember the day we stopped for a bear that was hammering it up beside the road. There was a car behind us in which a man tried to lure a bear into his car!

I'm not suggesting that you avoid the pleasure of stopping to look at a bear. Just remember, that is a 600-pound mammoth animal out there with a small brain and long nails. The last guy he met might have teased him.

The Yellowstone Park rangers like to tell the story about how you tell the difference between a grizzly and a brown bear. A brown bear can climb trees. A grizzly can't.

"If you see a bear," they jest, "walk up and belt him one across the snout and then run. Climb a tree. If it's a brown bear, he'll climb the tree and eat you. If it's a grizzly, he'll stay at the bottom of the tree, shake the tree down and eat you. Then you'll know whether it's a brown bear or a grizzly."

The best philosophy I know about all this is based on the guest theory. In the wilderness, the bear is at home and you are the guest. Make sure you follow the house rules or he may get mad and send you home to your favorite hospital.

FROM THE MAILBAG: Spring arrives at 12:22 a.m. Wednesday, March 21. All our southern states are already celebrating. The spectacular Water Ski Revue has already started at Cypress Gardens, where they are now constructing an antebellum town with an 800-seat theater as well as eating and shopping areas in the swamp.

Houston is in the midst of its first Main Street Festival, which it hopes will someday rival the Washington Cherry Festival. The Confederate Air Force in Harlingen, Texas, has just finished its second annual mid-winter airshow and is planning another one for Oct. 4-7.

Corpus Christi is getting ready for its Festival of Flowers on April 7 and 8.

We may not be ready for that yet, but Greenfield Village is starting its famous craft classes March 31, for people who are busting to try something new after all those long winter nights.

Accidents often occur when tourists ignore warnings about feeding the friendly bears, such as this fellow in Yellowstone Park. (Photo by Micky Jones)

Dehli Belly?

For medical help overseas, take some precautions

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

In Yugoslavia, my photographer-husband broke a tooth. In India, he had dysentery. In Nepal, I was bitten by a centipede. We handled those situations as we would at home. We called for medical help and got it.

People planning trips abroad often express a disproportionate fear about how they would cope with a health problem overseas. "How would I find a doctor?" they say. "Could I trust the medical service? Could the medical personnel speak English?"

With a little advance preparation you can find your way easily through medical difficulties in another country. Even if you're not prepared, you will find good health facilities available in almost every part of the world.

Abroad, as at home, you'll find more services in cities than in the country.

There are doctors everywhere who speak English. The problems that most normally healthy travelers face are minor — a toothache, the flu, a little dysentery. Many of these problems can be discussed with a pharmacist, who often has more leeway to dispense drugs without a prescription than is true here.

Travelers who worry about a potential health crisis can do three things. Pack a basic medical kit. Join an organization that offers information about medical services abroad. Trust the medical people you find to handle the problem.

WHAT SHOULD YOU pack? Certain things are basic. A supply of medications that you regularly take.

Precaution: Don't just dump them together in one container because some travelers, especially young ones, are hassled by customs officers sensitive to the importation of drugs.

Take an extra pair of glasses, and even a lens prescription, so that broken spectacles don't ruin your vacation. If you may need to buy medicine abroad, ask your doctor for the generic name. The specific brand name may not be known elsewhere.

People who go to tropical countries, where diarrhea is common enough to have names like Montezuma's Revenge and Delhi Belly, should ask their doctor for Lomotil, which controls the problems immediately. Travel writers carry it everywhere.

The Health Insurance Institute suggests that you prepare a short medical history of yourself as part of your travel kit. This should include information about allergies, any hypersensitivities, regular medications as well as blood type, the name and whereabouts of your hometown doctor and your health insurance.

Very few people suffer from air sickness — planes ride more smoothly than cars in most cases — but if that's your problem, ask your doctor for Dramamine or another medication for that problem.

The American Council of Otolaryngology (ACO), specialists in ear, nose and throat medicine, suggest three ways to alleviate the ear popping travelers sometime suffer on planes. Chew gum or swallow frequently to keep ear passages clear; even swallow occasionally while holding your nose.

Don't sleep while the plane is descending, but yawn a lot to equalize the nose, ear and throat pressure with the cabin pressure. Take a mouth full of air and then swallow hard to clear clogged ears.

If this is an ongoing problem for you, write for a pamphlet on "Ears, Altitude and Airplane Travel."

el" from ACO, 1100 17th St. N.W., Suite 602, Washington D.C. 20036.

AN INTERNATIONAL association called IAMAT (International Association for Medical Assistance for Travelers) offers a variety of informational booklets to travelers.

IAMAT is a division of the Foundation for the Support of International Medical Training, Inc., and declares its long-range goals to be the establishment of an international center to study the medical aspects of travel and to facilitate the training of physicians on an international level.

Although it is difficult to evaluate their goals on the basis of their literature, the services they offer to travelers are simple and useful enough.

This is a non-profit organization. There are no membership fees, although IAMAT would love a donation. You can write to them and receive a membership card making you eligible for services abroad, a directory listing IAMAT centers and physicians in 450 cities in 120 countries, a Traveler Clinical Record form on which your physician can list your medical record, a World Immunization and Malaria Risk Chart indicating required and recommended immunizations and countries where malaria is a risk.

(Caution: Most immunization information in print is out of date when you get it. Check your county health officer.)

IAMAT says participating physicians pay no fees to the association, pledge 24-hour service to members and promise to keep doctor fees at the listed rates.

For information on IAMAT, write 350 Fifth Ave., Suite 5620, New York, N.Y. 10001.

All such precautions are wise, but you can survive perfectly well without them. My husband-photographer, Micky Jones, was biting down on his breakfast in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, when he broke a pegged tooth.

He went to the traveler's best friend — the desk clerk. "The clinic opens at 7 a.m. but you'll have to wait in line," the clerk said.

At the clinic, thinking they wouldn't speak English, we asked for help in a pidgin variety of German, French and Spanish before the nurse asked politely: "Do you speak English?"

The dentist didn't, but he could see the problem well enough. He fixed it. It cost $2.50.

In Bombay, when dysentery struck, the desk clerk told us there was a doctor who had regular hours in the hotel every afternoon and was on call when a guest needed him. He was a well-qualified doctor. He spoke English very well.

This was also true in Nepal, where I went camping and came home with a centipede in my slacks. The doctor assured me that it was "only a little centipede" but he prescribed a mild drug — "in case you are allergic to the mild bite you received." But I didn't need it.

The moral to this story is that good medical facilities are almost always available. Take precautions if they make you comfortable, but don't spoil any part of a trip worrying about health care.

You must go to very remote parts of the world, or very rural settings, before you are out of touch with a doctor.

At the clinic, thinking they wouldn't speak English, we asked for help in a pidgin variety of German, French and Spanish before the nurse asked politely: 'Do you speak English?' The dentist didn't but he could see the problem well enough. He fixed it. It cost $2.50.

How much does Farmer's Almanac know?

By SHERRY KAHAN

We can safely predict that spring is on its way. Beyond that, though, we are hesitant, because the science of long-range weather predictions is not an exact one.

Nevertheless, predictions on weather constantly rain on us from many sources and many people take them to heart.

Last fall, you will remember, we were warned of a cold winter. The mystic word came from field and stream where apparently the fish were diving deeper, the rabbits bundling up and outdoor persons wearing thicker-than-usual down jackets.

The Old Farmer's Almanac also promised an exceptionally cold period in the Midwest starting the last week of January and extending through February.

Big deal. It's not too hard to forecast a cold winter for this part of the country. But few are as daring as the Farmer's Almanac to put it down in black and white to be checked later for accuracy.

While many seers broadcast widely their successful prophecy about that big winter storm, few of them announce their failures.

FA also proclaims its successes. But its failures are available to anyone willing to plunk down the money to buy a copy of this 187-year-old publication.

Since this is the year of the Global Weather Experiment involving the countries of the world in a combined effort to improve long-range weather forecasting, it might be in the spirit of the times to see how accurate FA was in its January and February weather estimates.

THERE WERE NOT precise enough to base your life on. Its general predictions are so vague that you wouldn't profit from referring to them about a date for skiing, washing the car or taking a long trip. The day-to-day prophecies for those two months missed more than they hit.

Zeroing in on the the big memorable events of this winter, it is soon evident that FA gave no advance word to Chicagoans about the blizzard that was to dump 20.7 inches of snow on them Jan. 13. Nor did it provide sufficient information to residents of New York, Washington and Baltimore that a big one was on its way Feb. 19.

The magazine was much more successful in its predictions about what was to prove to be the coldest February in the Detroit area in 107 years.

In making its annual prognostications, FA divides the country into regions. The Chicago-Southern Great Lakes area is called Region 9. It includes the bottom half of the Lower Peninsula.

Before it gets into the nitty gritty, day-to-day information, FA offers its readers a weather summary for the area. It was here that it warned of that exceptionally cold period that was to begin the last week of January and continue through February.

It added this puzzling sentence: "Snowfall will be greater than usual, although overall seasonal precipitation will be deficient." One would think that more snow would equal more precipitation rather than less.

DAY-TO-DAY PREDICTIONS are made in terse, farmer-like phrases. For January, "1-4 very cold, light snow; 5-9 seasonal; snow, heavy west. 10-15 intermittent snow. 16-20 light snow, then clearing, milder. 21-24 cloudy; snow. 25-27 near blizzard. 28-31 partly cloudy, turning extremely cold."

Let's look first at that "intermittent snow" estimate for Jan. 10-15. It simply isn't an adequate description for what happened on Jan. 13 to Chicago. No mere fog creeping in on little cat feet that day.

It was snow roaring in like an elephant bringing drifts, winds and more than 20 inches of snow. The governor called northern Illinois a disaster area.

The snow also piled up a much-publicized disaster for Chicago Mayor Bilandic, who was said to have lost a primary election because of poor snow removal skills. It was an important climatic happening for FA to miss.

And not just for its Illinois and Michigan readers. Residents of Region 9 living in northern Indiana and Ohio and southern Wisconsin who waded around in galoshes in 12-16 inches of snow might have appreciated fair warning.

NOR DID THE ALMANAC pick up the cold that followed the big blizzard. Detroit's 11 degrees below zero on Jan. 15 was its coldest day in almost three years. On the same day, Chicago experienced 19 degrees below zero.

The closest FA came to an accurate heavy weather prophecy was a "near blizzard" estimate for Jan. 25-27. What Detroit had was a two-hour wet snow, hardly a near blizzard, on Jan. 25. But because of warm temperature, the snow didn't linger.

Also contrary to FA's expectations, January went out like a pussy cat with highs in the 30s rather than the exceptional cold FA foresaw for that week.

Happily for the almanac, the publication's crystal foresight sharpened, and February's frigid follies were pinpointed more accurately.

Give or take a few degrees, FA was almost right on the button with its promise of a very cold Feb. 1-6. Very cold it was, with a wind chill factor of 23 degrees below zero on Feb. 4.

It was on the money Feb. 10-11 with another "very cold." You'd better believe it.

But fact and forecast parted company Feb. 12-14 when the almanac crystal-balled a "light snow, drifting; some sun." Mother Nature had not finished with her cold kick because Feb. 12 had a low of eight above and a wind chill of 10 below. It was zero on Feb. 13, and the almanac's snow turned up right on schedule Feb. 14.

The magazine was right again for Feb. 15 and 16, as a bone chiller arrived. However, on Feb. 17 when the wind chill factor was 26 below and the mercury at seven below zero, FA had only "moderate snow" listed in its report.

A cold wave was predicted for Feb. 20-24. Not so. True, Feb. 20 had a low of one above, but a high of 31, which turned into a winter "heat wave," lifting the mercury up to 45 above on Feb. 23. But FA quickly caught on to the temperature change and correctly picked "gradual warming" as its end-of-month guess.

THE SNOWFALL THAT smothered the nation's capital and caused a blizzard of looting in Baltimore highlights one of the main problems in the almanac forecasts. It is one of degree. It forecast "snow changing to rain," and that is exactly what happened.

But these words gave its east coast readers no indication that they were due for ferocious winds and 23 inches of snow that ground bureaucratic life to a standstill.

So much for the accuracy of the most quoted weather forecaster on the American folklore scene. Sometimes right and sometimes wrong, it seems to base its predictions on weather history and probabilities more than on scientific methodology or a crystal ball.

From offices in Dublin, N.H., the publication apparently examines what happened on past Jan. 13s and Feb. 19s. Then it makes its guesses on the law of averages, possibly also throwing in a bit of folk wisdom to come up with its well-known predictions.

But as a piece of nostalgia that occasionally pays off, the Farmer's Almanac offers the amateur meteorologist a chance to test weather skills.

Daniel's Den

By Emory Daniels

Next Monday Dennis O'Connor will be sitting behind a desk in Birmingham instead of reporting for work in Plymouth.

Dennis has accepted a position as sports editor of the Birmingham Eccentric.

He still will be with the Suburban Communication Corp. — parent of the Plymouth and Canton Observers, Birmingham Eccentric and others.

Doc has accepted the new assignment as a professional challenge. And I understand his thinking.

He also has accepted the new task as a chance for a change in scenery, and that I especially understand.

FOR THOSE who don't know Doc's background, he graduated from Plymouth Canton High and now is near completing degree requirements at the University of Michigan.

Doc covered the local sports scene as a high school newspaper reporter, for a time as sports editor of the Crier, and for almost three years now as sports editor of the Plymouth and Canton Observers.

That's a long time to cover sports, or any beat, in one community. So the move probably is best.

But we on the news staff here will miss Doc, personally and professionally.

When O'Connor first joined us, he was challenged to provide the most localized sports coverage possible.

That in itself was a lot to bite off. But we gave Doc greater challenges, and he took those on also.

TODAY SPORTS has changed a great deal, and those changes place a heavy burden on journalists reporting on the sports scene.

No longer can a sports editor get by covering only football, basketball, baseball, wrestling, cross country and track. The coverage area, by subject alone, has broadened considerably.

The greatest challenge, then, is balance.

A sports editor must first achieve balance between the two high schools — Salem and Canton. There must be balance between boys and girls sports coverage.

And there must be balance between those sports which draw large number of spectators and those which draw few, if any, spectators.

This last need for balance means making decisions about how to cover activities such as swimming (boys and girls), volleyball, gymnastics, golf, tennis (boys and girls), softball, cross country and track.

Providing "balanced" coverage does not mean offering "equal" coverage. If you lead off the top, left side of the page with a 10-inch story on boys basketball, you are not obligated to have a 10-inch story on girls basketball on the top right side of the page.

But balance does require that at times a girls basketball story will lead off the page, or that a golf or softball story sometimes makes the section front.

Balance means that you do not allow portions of your total beat to overpower or bury other parts of that beat. The news value of each story must be considered, and the sports editor always must pay attention to what readers are looking for in each edition. Within these two constraints, balance can be achieved but it always will be imperfect.

Balance in sports coverage is something like Christian perfection — it's something you strive for always but never quite reach.

That means a sports editor, like any kind of editor, must use judgment. And only editors can exercise judgement — not coaches, players, fans or even readers.

The main reason we all will miss Doc is that he strived hard for balance and came as close to achieving it, given all the variables of the beat, as could be expected.

FANS AND READERS also will miss Doc's Corner, although some won't openly admit it.

Doc's Corner was a statement of opinion about news happening on the Plymouth-Canton sports beat. And the column is very opinionated, as columns of personal expression should be.

In his column, O'Connor had a special talent for stirring controversy — which he seemed to relish because it gave the opportunity to become directly involved with readers and their opinions and gut reactions.

Doc always sought to maintain a dialogue with readers, to challenge their thoughts, force them to think about an issue, and respond strongly — pro or con.

Most of the letters to the editor were readers who disagreed with Doc. And I can't recall anyone cancelling their subscription because they agreed with what Doc wrote in his column. There were a few, though, who cancelled their subscriptions because they disagreed with Doc's opinion. As a matter of fact, they cancel three or four times a year.

But the dissenters always renewed because they didn't want to miss what Doc had to say next. And neither did I. Doc's Corner would stir up my guts once in awhile, too.

The problem Doc probably had to deal with most was the charge that he was biased against Canton High, even though Doc was a graduate of Canton High. Maybe he bent over backward trying to be objective. Maybe Chief fans read too much between the lines. Or maybe Canton supporters expected "equal" coverage even though the teams have not always been equally newsworthy. Maybe some of each.

The problem for any sports editor, including Doc, is that fans and participants may expect only favorable, supportive, rah-rah coverage instead of objective reporting which readers require and the profession demands. And controversy can result when that expectation is not met.

Objectivity, balance, judgment, sensitivity and discretion. Yes, all of these things are demands I place upon my sports editor. And that's a heavy challenge. But I cannot ask less and Doc would never give less. He has been committed to these challenges, and for that reason I will miss him.

And I suspect a lot of readers will miss Doc, too.

When to buy lemons

By JACK BOLOGNA

I learned many lessons later in life by examining how my father, Sam Bologna, conducted his fruit wholesaling business.

One of the important lessons, mentioned in the last column, was that quality products are the only opportunities a retailer or wholesaler has for long-haul profits.

But there were many other lessons learned. Among them were:

- Never let yourself be stamped into buying. Don't follow the crowd. Successful buying means staying calm and occasionally losing a deal that looks good because there is always tomorrow.

- If you buy on a hand-to-mouth basis you can never really take advantage of a true bargain.

- Know your market, your customer's needs, your competition.

- Most fruit deteriorates quickly. Never buy more than a three-day supply no matter how good the price seems or your profit will be hauled away to the dumpster.

- Always buy your summer lemons on a cold day in May, your winter oranges on a hot day in October, and your grapefruit two weeks before Thanksgiving.

I was rather intrigued by the last lesson because I recalled how strange I thought it was as a boy, that each year we bought at least two carloads of lemons in May and placed them in cold storage until the July 4th holiday.

So I asked Dad why he did that. His answer was simple and direct, "Because some years the only profit we made for the whole year was what we made on those lemons. We broke even on everything else."

"Do you mean you speculated on lemons?" I asked.

"Sure," he said. "But it wasn't even speculation. Lemons are always worth more in July than they are in May. When it gets hot, people make lemonade."

I COUNTERED THAT the other merchants must have realized the verity of lemons being worth more in July than May.

But Dad suggested they may have realized it but never did anything about it. They were more concerned about the present than about the future, and for some 20 years he exploited his talent over them with none of them being the wiser.

As he spoke I remembered that in the long hot summer of 1947, our wholesaler competitors were begging us to sell them lemons because so few were arriving daily at the terminal. That year we sold lemons we had bought in May at $2.75 per crate for $10, the going price.

Why didn't our competitors smarten up? They must have known the game plan by then. And yet, year after year, we became the "lemon kings" of Detroit in July.

Now that he's 82, I asked Dad what he would do if he had his life to live over again. He said, "I would buy a lot more of those damned lemons in May." I concluded that the old saw must be right. "When life deals you lemons, learn to make lemonade."

Identifying gays?

There are some who claim the Vietnam war was lost when it moved into American living rooms via TV.

Others claim the media went too far in bringing home the horrors of war.

But reporters are faced with the difficult and perhaps dangerous task of screening the news when asked to withhold information from the public.

Like a backdoor that flaps in stiff spring breezes, the news opens and shuts with each shift of community values.

LAST WEEK a two-count warrant for gross indecency and assault on an officer was issued in 35th District Court.

The warrant charges the suspect engaged in oral sexual relations with another man in a comfort station on Interstate Highway 275 in Canton Township. Wayne County Sheriff's deputies observed the act through ventilation grates in the men's room ceiling. They then climbed out of their post and attempted to arrest the men.

The suspect and the two officers were injured during the arrest.

Polygraph tests were inconclusive in proving the accused's claim that undue force was used in the arrest, according to Robert Sage, head of the out-county prosecutor's office.

After considerable debate, the warrant was issued.

BUT NEWS MEDIA, which had followed the case, were asked to refrain from printing the name of the accused.

Both the man and his wife have threatened suicide, according to his attorney. Public exposure could further endanger the couple's mental stability, it was argued.

More than 70 other persons were arrested in the past six weeks for similar offenses at the freeway comfort station and Hines Park rest areas.

Many of them — married with professional backgrounds — face a maximum five-year prison term if convicted. Yet, unlike other felony suspects, their names remain unpublished.

Because of the nature of the alleged crimes, the media chooses not to identify the accused. In effect, we recognize that publication of the identity of the men leads to public scorn and ridicule.

They would be, in effect, convicted without due process.

Yet a comfort station is a public place. It is not a place for sexual relations of any kind. Most likely the news media would not print the names of a heterosexual couple arrested for the same offense.

Gross indecency, distinguished from criminal sexual activity, becomes a crime only in the public domain. Prosecutors choose to ignore Michigan's Blue Laws unless the offense is committed in public.

WITHHOLDING NAMES of such accused suspects dissociates the acts from the persons who commit them in much the same way the war failed to make an impression before it became a nightly affair.

When the news media screens the news in such a way, we may contribute to the illusion that acts of gross indecency do not occur in polite society.

Yet arrests, prosecutions, and jail terms wallop a harsh reality on those who face such charges, despite the ignorance of the public.

That ignorance and lack of recognition forces those suspects into a heterosexual mold that they choose to break through covert couplings in a yellow-tiled lavatory.

They have no place to fulfill their sexuality in a suburb where community opinion will not permit gay meeting places.

PERHAPS THE SHERIFF could post signs warning of prosecution in the comfort station. Rather than arresting persons via ceiling spy patrols, uniformed officers could patrol the area to curb homosexual traffic.

The Flip Side by craig piechura

Hocus pocus with a focus

I hate it when any story starts out with the line: "When I was a kid . . ."

But bear with me. Besides, if you want to get technical, this column started out with, "I hate it when . . ."

As I was saying, before I rudely interrupted myself, when I was a kid I and a friend took the DSR bus downtown one day to look for a magic shop somebody told us was near Hudson's.

We must've walked a couple miles, all the way down to the Stone Burslesk and back, looking for this elusive magic shop. Finally, somebody told us that the place closed the year before.

I can't remember what item we were looking for, but I'll bet it wasn't a magic trick. That was too much work and too sophisticated for us. I think I wanted to buy one of those bald wigs or a bow tie that glows in the dark. Real high-class merchandise guaranteed to make the girls in the eighth grade giggle.

Not finding any bald wigs during the venture downtown, I later clipped a coupon from a comic book and mailed away for one. It had the flesh tone of a badly-embalmed corpse and my brush cut could be seen underneath the latex.

Now if I had found a place to pursue the merchandise before my purchase, I wouldn't have wasted my paper route earnings on something stupid like a bald wig. I would've wasted my money on something cool like itching powder or X-ray specks. If only the magic store was still around.

TAKE HEART mischievous kids and fledgling magicians. Such a store still exists. And you don't have to prowl through urban streets and climb dingy flights of stairs to get there. The Emporium of Magic is thriving in suburbia, located in the Tel-Ex Shopping Center, on Telegraph, just north of Ten Mile, in Southfield.

A better-equipped magic store is hard to imagine. Under one roof there are thousands of magic tricks and catalogues to order thousands more. Everything from the $3 color silks to the $2,100 Cut-a-Woman-in-Half contraption. Just the thing for the misogynist on your gift list.

For kids and travelling salesman the store carries a complete line of gag items. There's the ugly teeth, the bloody finger gag, the fake snake, plastic boils and plastic scabs, guaranteed to amaze your friends and infuriate your mother.

There are bow ties that light up, the fly-on-a-spoon, the bug-in-an-icecube, rubber eggs, squirting toilet seats, clacking teeth, black soap and three different flavors of gum — garlic gum, hot gum and super sour gum.

Remember cigarette loads? They've got 'em. You must be 18 to buy any practical joke that could inflict bodily harm, such as the bang matches, sparkling matches and the Blue Devil cigarette loads.

WHO'S THE MAN responsible for bringing this resurgence of fun to a suburban setting? It's Max Ettinger, 32, of Ferndale, a professional magician for the past 22 years and a former financial consultant.

Ten years ago Ettinger started the magic shop as a sideline, or a hobby, "to fill the void."

He remembers how his parents would chew him out for going to "filthy, cluttered places" that sold magic and would ask, "what kind of junk did you bring back now?"

Although I always looked forward to finding a seedy magic shop, Ettinger said the stores were a disappointment to anyone remotely interested in real magic.

"Magic companies or magic shops were usually second-rate shops that used to subsist on the second floor and you had to walk up a grimy flight of stairs to get there. They're run by old men who aren't competent and unable to guide young men and women interested in magic."

At Max's store, the salesmen will get up on the stage and perform an illusion if you're thinking of buying it. Classes in magic are taught regularly in the lecture hall in the rear of the store. A magician's club meets there the second Thursday of every month. To join, you must prove your proficiency at prestidigitation (the old sleight-of-hand).

"THIS IS ALL very important to us," Ettinger said. "Magic is a craft, it's not a toy or a game."

Many customers at the store, which opened last July, will never be magicians. They want to learn a trick or two to impress the people at work or entertain at a party. Ettinger said interest in magic peaked about five years ago, but there will always be a steady demand to watch it.

"The public's interest in magic is starting to plateau," he said. "Most people would like to see (magic). Few would like to perform it."

Does that mean that most people secretly want to believe the tricks are magic and not a trick?

"No. Nobody likes to be fooled," Ettinger said. "Nobody wants to be made a fool of. That line in the comic book, 'Be the life of the party, people like to be fooled' is absolute malarkey."

So, if you're looking to unlock the secrets of Svengali and don't want to get grimy in the process, visit The Emporium of Magic.

A word of advice from one who knows: steer clear of the bald wigs.

Ramblings

By Caroline Price
Canton Observer Editor

Always on a Sunday...

They say there is a day in between Saturday and Monday. On said day, people relax, go shopping, maybe even go to church.

I think it's called Sunday.

I don't know about all those things people are supposed to do on Sunday. All I know is that one day each week is over before I've finished reading the newspaper.

Actually, that's the problem — reading the newspaper.

On other days of the week, I can content myself with reading the Free Press in the morning and the News when I get home. In between there are samples of that wonderful Observer (there must be true geniuses writing for that paper).

But on Sundays, the daily newspapers go all out and arrive fat and colorful in time for that first cup of coffee.

I've become trained to stagger out of bed at the sound of The News hitting the doorstep. I even experimented with training my son to retrieve the paper and make a pot of coffee but have thus far been unsuccessful.

There is nothing more beautiful than that first Sunday newspaper of the day. It happens to be the News, since all efforts to get the Free Press delivered have failed.

The thing to do is spread the sections all over the kitchen table and agonize over which one to read first while the coffee makes choking noises as it drips through the filter.

I suppose if one is truly refined, the front, main news selection would be the automatic first choice. I admit that I go through that section first more as a matter of duty than of choice. Then it's on to the comics.

It could be worse. Some people, out of necessity, look at the want ads first.

There is also the lifestyle (once known as women's) section to let all us hopelessly gauche types know how bad our taste is and how out of date our clothes are.

No matter how informative or fat with articles one newspaper is, it can't compare with a combination of two — or three or four — newspapers.

After whetting my appetite on the delivered paper, I rush off to the book store in an attempt to get a Free Press and a New York Times before the other addicts get them.

Of course, once I get to the bookstore, I end up buying some paperback books and magazines.

Now the whole idea of a Sunday newspaper is to read it on Sunday. The stack of printed matter I drag home from the bookstore must therefore be perused at once.

I'm happy to oblige.

But somehow, after three papers, plus an occasional stack of out-of-town Sunday journals, Sunday morning becomes Sunday night.

Millage failure would bake S'craft cooking class

By TIM RICHARD

It was 11:30 a.m., and already students were gathering in the lunch line in Schoolcraft College's Waterman Campus Center.

In the kitchen, chef instructor James Van Buren nodded toward student chefs working shoulder-to-shoulder along a counter. He thinks the conditions are too cramped and that the community college's culinary arts program needs more space.

"Did you know this was designed as a service kitchen?" Van Buren asked. "A caterer was to bring in food, and this kitchen was just to keep it hot for serving."

"Now it serves as a production kitchen and a teaching kitchen, too."

NOT ONLY CHEF instructors but the college administration and board of trustees have placed the highest priority on expanding space for the popular culinary arts program.

If voters on March 26 approve a one-mill property tax increase, Schoolcraft will build a culinary arts addition to the Waterman Center.

There is an effective waiting list of four to five years to get into the culinary arts program, which can take 58 students a year, according to director Robert L. Breithaupt.

Schoolcraft's goal is to double enrollment to 120 with the new space and add conference and banquet space for growing community services programs.

College President C. Nelson Grote said it's important for the college district to come up with the final $800,000 for a total $2 million project. The college already has $536,000 "in the bank" from a 1968 building fund. The Michigan Legislature has appropriated up to $750,000 as the state's share.

If Schoolcraft fails to produce the rest of the local share through the proposed tax hike, Grote said, "we will lose the state share after two years."

FOUNDED IN 1964, Schoolcraft College started the culinary arts program two years later.

"The equipment is 13 years old," said chef Van Buren, pointing around the kitchen. "Most of the establishments these young men and women will work in will have modern equipment. It's difficult to train them in the new equipment because what we have is obsolete."

The man who heads the culinary arts program, Breithaupt, is one of a handful of Americans with the title of "executive master chef" — sort of like being a five-star general. He was the first faculty member ever to receive an honorary degree from the Schoolcraft board of trustees.

He has ideas besides doubling enrollment in the culinary arts program.

"One is a two-year associate degree in hotel-motel restaurant management," he said. "We could use the culinary facilities when the others (culinary students) aren't there."

"We now have a hotel-restaurant transfer program," Breithaupt said, "but this would be a two year, complete associate degree."

"I can foresee us offering gourmet cooking classes in the evenings (through community services). We also have in mind classes for decorative work. And we could be upgrading people already in the industry."

MAJOR HOTELS, country clubs, hospitals and even a Franciscan monastery employ Schoolcraft graduates.

"We've won the grand prize in any show we've entered," said chef Richard Benson, taking a breather at a desk in a storage room. (Benson confesses that the Wayne County Health Department is not happy that there's a desk in a cramped room where canned and boxed foods are stored.)

Schoolcraft will get national recognition April 1 in New York when student Mark Haight represents the Midwest in a student culinary competition sponsored by Kraft Foods. Haight is one of only four students in the country in the final competition, Benson said.

Haight won over 60 other students from 24 institutions in nine states when he took the grand prize in Chicago recently with a wedding cake and decorated salmon.

In the New York finale, the four contestants will each get a box of groceries and have a half-day to prepare and present a plated meal for 12. Prizes range from $1,500 for first place to $300 for fourth. Grand prize winner will be assigned to the American team in the 1980 World Culinary Olympics in Frankfurt, Germany.

PLANNING for a culinary arts addition has been going on for eight years, college officials and faculty said.

If the millage passes, construction on the addition will begin during fiscal 1979-80 and should be completed in 18 months, Grote said.

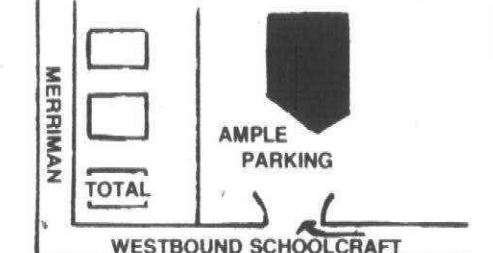

The present kitchen will continue to be used for production. The addition would include a teaching laboratory with space for 60 students, with bakery, kitchen and butcher areas; a demonstration lab set up like a science lab; faculty offices, conference area and library space for 3,000 volumes; and space to seat 200 persons in banquets, buffets and receptions.

The program will be operated out of the present tuition, 1.77 mills and operating aid from the state.

The Stroller

By W.W. EDGAR

Paddy Sexton has been long gone to that Valhalla where all smiling Irishmen go.

But each year when St. Patrick's Day rolls around, The Stroller likes to take a trip down memory lane and visit again with the chubby little fellow to whom life was just one big laugh.

Paddy was the bartender in Lyric Cafe back home in the Dutch Country. While he didn't realize it at the time, it was Paddy who helped steer The Stroller onto the sports writing path.

The Lyric Cafe was an unusual place. It was just off the lobby of the Lyric Theater, the largest legitimate playhouse in the Lehigh Valley, and on the upstairs was the boxing club where fights were held every week.

In those days it was customary to stop into the cafe before going upstairs to the fights. It was on one of these trips that The Stroller met Paddy.

SHORTLY AFTER that meeting, The Stroller got a call and Paddy asked him to hurry to the cafe.

John McCormick, the famed Irish tenor, was there awaiting time for his concert on the other side of the wall. What a great time we had for an hour. It was the first time The Stroller realized that he was now in a position to meet celebrities.

Months went by and Paddy never missed the chance to introduce The Stroller to another celebrity. Then, all of a sudden, he was gone from behind the bar. The place didn't seem the same.

About this time fate took a hand and The Stroller found himself in Detroit as a member of the Free Press sports staff. Paddy seemed to be just a memory.

Then one evening into the office came this chubby little Irishman. The moment he opened his mouth there came memories of the days at the old Lyric Cafe. The relocated Paddy took one look and then embraced the young lad from "back home." It was a well-come embrace because The Stroller was just beginning to find his way on a big time paper.

AND HERE'S WHERE Paddy came to the sportswriter's rescue. Remembering that he had introduced him to celebrities back home, Paddy took it upon himself to see that the newcomer wouldn't be a stranger very long.

Nearly every day Paddy called and drove The Stroller around the city to meet people. And it was on The Stroller's first March 17 in Detroit that he and Paddy went to the St. Patrick's Day Mass at Holy Trinity Church in Corktown.

It was the beginning of long-running friendships with Monsignor Clement Kern, Father Harold Markey. After Mass there was a trip to Tommy Long's Cafe on Fort Street. The Irish gathered to drink green beer and join Jimmy Long in singing the old favorite Irish songs.

Many are the times The Stroller closes his eyes on St. Patrick's Day and hears Jimmy Long, a great Irish tenor, sing "Where the River Shannon Flows" and then bow his head and softly render "Mother Machree."

It was Paddy, a great lover of sport, who introduced The Stroller to Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig and a host of other stars.

Eventually The Stroller would have met the major league ball players and the other sports celebrities. But it was Paddy Sexton who made him comfortable at a time when he had some misgivings as to whether he could make good in bigtime journalism.

That's why each year when St. Patrick's Day rolls around he takes the walk down memory lane to visit again with Paddy Sexton, the smiling little Irishman.

And where ever he was last Saturday, one thing is certain — Paddy was having a great time paying tribute to the patron saint who is credited with chasing all the snakes from Ireland.

Mystery surrounds 11-day absence of Agatha Christie

"Agatha" (PG) is a very classy movie. Based on a book by Kathleen Tynan, it appears as "an imaginary solution to an authentic mystery." The mystery is the 11-day disappearance of English novelist Agatha Christie in December, 1926.

Her disappearance came at a time when, professionally, she was enjoying tremendous literary success and fame upon publication of her controversially plotted best seller, "The Murder of Roger Akroyd."

However, her personal life was in shambles. A painfully shy woman, she was in agony over the pending collapse of her marriage to the World War I flying ace, Col. Archibald Christie.

Colonel Christie, portrayed by Timothy Dalton as a supercilious cad, was having an affair with his secretary and wanted a divorce.

THESE WERE the circumstances of her life when her abandoned car was found in a field and she was missing. Tynan picks up from there, combining research and conjecture in her speculations.

Its unfortunate that publicity about "Agatha" may lead people to expect a thriller and thereby be disappointed, only because their expectations aren't met. For, in other ways, "Agatha" is a smartly done film.

It's an effective vehicle for the acting skills of Vanessa Redgrave, as the mystery writer, and Dustin Hoffman as a shrewd and brash American reporter who tracks and finds her. It's a wonderful period piece showing life at an the lady's restraint is coupled with a vivid imagination and an unusual repressions of a lady with a proper Edwardian upbringing. In this case, the lady's restraint is coupled with a vivid imagination and an unusual interest in murder.

Hoffman excels at an uncommon role for him, as the dapper and urbane newspaperman. He traces Agatha to the Hydro Hotel in Harrogate where she is registered as Mrs. Neele. She uses the same surname as her husband's mistress, who is supposed to be arriving shortly for baths and treatments.

Red herrings seem to spawn in these mineral waters as we notice Agatha's keen interest in the electrical devices in the therapy rooms. Redgrave portrays Agatha with a passionate sort of restraint that always leaves us unsure of what she is up to.

HOFFMAN ALSO is skillful at developing more than the superficial aspects of his character. Perhaps this is shown best in a tender scene outside Agatha's door when the oddly mismatched couple exchange a gentle, lingering kiss.

It's an effective scene because Hoffman and Redgrave turn the awkwardness to an advantage.

Whatever the real events that transpired during the late Mrs. Christie's disappearance, Tynan's conjectures, partly based on fact, make an intriguing story. Shirley Russell's shabbily elegant sets, complemented by Vittorio Storaro's moody photography, play an important part in shaping that intrigue.

Hoffman supposedly has renounced the film because of some quarrel about the final edited version. The pace is slower than some viewers might be accustomed to, but the gradual unfolding and the interesting personalities involved catch one up in the story. Whatever Hoffman objects to, it sure doesn't show on the screen.

The season opens with "The Playboy of the Western World" on Friday, March 23, offering four shows for the price of three and the first reserved seating ever at the Attic.

The reserved seating should avoid long lines at the box office which have become a trademark of the attic. Theatergoers will have a choice of Wednesday-Sunday evenings.

"Playboy of the Western World," John Synge's modern classic which runs through April 9, will be followed by David Rudkin's "Ashes" from May 4-31, and "Gemini" by Albert Innaurato from July 13-Aug. 9.

Completing the series season will be a special mystery show running Sept. 7-Oct. 4, to be announced.

Subscriptions are available by calling 963-7789 or writing the Attic Theater, P. O. Box 1357, Detroit, 48231.

All four shows will be presented in the Attic Theater's new space on E. Lafayette, directly behind its present location in Greektown's Trapper's Alley.

Seats still available

The people promoting the upcoming David Brenner show at the State-Wayne Theater say "he has always proven to be a sure-fire sell-out." They also say seats are still available for his shows, at 8 p.m. Friday and 7 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday. You figure it out. Also on stage will be Ursula Walker. The theater is at 35310 Michigan in Wayne; tickets are available there and at Rocky's Records. For info, call 721-2100.

Flute collector to give program

Four hundred years of music for the flute will highlight a lecture and demonstration by flutist Glennis M. Stout on Monday, March 19 at The University of Michigan-Dearborn's Fair Lane Conference Center.

The free 8 p.m. program, entitled "The Flute: Baroque to Modern," will also feature Ms. Stout's collection of 40 historical flutes which illustrate the development of this instrument. Her collection includes several sterling silver flutes.

All musical selections will be performed on historical instruments. For example, "Sonata V in D Major, op. 2," "Aria I, Le Marc-Antoin" and "Aria II, Les Regrets" all by Michel Blavet, will be played on a one-key boxwood flute made by Clementi of London circa 1810.

Ms. Stout began studying the flute in the ninth grade. She began her collection 20 years ago when a friend gave her a discarded wooden flute. She holds her master's of music in flute from U-M.

She is a member of both the National and Detroit Flute Associations and serves as vice-president of the Flute Guild of Michigan.

Laudenslager hosts Bach

Four major works of Johann Sebastian Bach will be performed in a concert on the master's 294th birthday, at 8 p.m. Wednesday evening, March 21, in Orchestra Hall.

The Laudenslager Music Series Chamber Orchestra will be conducted, as in last year's Bach celebration, by Bach specialist Dr. Paul Steinitz, director of the London Bach Society Choir. The Kenneth Jewell Choral will perform.

Featured soloists will include Ray Ferguson, harpsichordist, James Waring, violinist, and Clement Barone and Marilyn Jones, flutists.

The all-Bach concert will open with the motet "Jesu, meine Freude" (Jesus, my joy), performed by the choral and orchestra. Next will come the Brandenburg Concerto No. 4, with Waring, Barone, and Ms. Jones as soloists with the orchestra.

After an intermission Ferguson will perform the Clavier Concerto No. 5 in F minor, with the orchestra. The concert will close with all forces joining for the Cantata No. 182 "Himmelskoenig, sei willkommen" (Welcome, O King of Heaven).

As always at the end of Laudenslager concerts, the audience is invited to meet informally with the artists in the loge area of the auditorium.

Steinitz is founder-conductor of both the London Bach Society and the Steinitz Bach Players. He has been particularly associated with the performance of Bach's works using chamber-sized choirs and orchestras. Professor of harmony and counterpoint at the Royal Academy of Music, he is the writer of many textbooks and has taught summer schools and courses both in England and abroad.

Founded in 1962, the Kenneth Jewell Choral is an ensemble of 50, most of whom are graduate professional musicians.

Canton gridders pumping iron

The end of the basketball season at the Centennial Park came last week with Plymouth Salem's regional loss to Livonia Bentley. Currently, the spring sports teams are busy preparing for their respective season openers in April.

With all this transition, the football season seems very distant in everyone's mind. Right?

Wrong. At least not for some 43 prospective Plymouth Canton gridders who are presently spending three days a week in the weight room with head coach Dave Schuele.

Most football teams, including Canton, have year-round weight training available for those athletes who choose to lift on a voluntary basis. Usually, however, no formal weight training takes place. The athletes come and go as they please.

Schuele, however, has maintained the voluntary status of the lifting but has chosen to run a formal weight training program this year which includes a number of agility exercises along with pumping the iron.

"I think for the first year running a formal program like this, I'm pleased with the turnout," the Canton coach said. "You always would like more, but I don't imagine there's many much bigger than this."

Schuele works with between 25 to 28 players at Canton's gym, while junior varsity coach Mark LaPointe has 12 to 15 more at Central Middle School. Schuele's group works at night, while LaPointe's crew comes in after school. The difference in times helps the players adjust their schedule around other activities, according to Schuele.

"The thing with this workout is that we make them work," Schuele said. "We have little rest and it's a good workout. It's got to help us out to run faster, get stronger, and jump higher."

The two-hour workout, which includes a quick dip in the Canton pool afterwards, includes a one-half mile run, flex and stretch exercises and two sets of lifts, 10 different lifts in each set. Speed and agility drills are also part of the workout, after the lifting.

The weight lifting group calls itself the "Dirty Double Dozen." To become a member, a player must attend 12 of the first 15 sessions during a five-week period and perform 12 different weight lifting exercises. T-shirts and membership cards are two of the benefits given to a successful member.

More importantly to Schuele, however, is the workout each player gets in preparation for next fall.

"The attitude of the kids is good," Schuele said. "You saw them work. They work. You don't have to crack a whip on any of them."

Schuele also likes the possibility of gaining bigger and stronger players for the season.

"This is where we're been hurting," Schuele said in reference to his squads' small size. "We go against an Edsel Ford and they are bigger and stronger. And they get that way by pumping iron."

Don't be surprised if Canton fields a physically stronger team next fall. It seems that Schuele will make sure of that.

CEP cagers shine again

Ah! The beauty of success

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Successful basketball teams have been a pleasant occurrence at Plymouth's Centennial Park in recent years.

This year's boys' basketball squads are evidence of that.

Actually, all cage seasons end on a sour note except for one team fortunate enough to survive state-tournament play.

While that bitter feeling of defeat struck both Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton cage teams last week, one cannot overlook the many accomplishments these squads fulfilled during the winter season.

PLYMOUTH SALEM bowed out of state tournament play the hard way, biting the dust in the first-round of regional play to league rival Livonia Bentley last Tuesday night.

It was a bitter setback for the Rocks, because they defeated this same Bentley squad twice during the regular season en route to an unprecedented sixth straight Suburban Eight League title.

Still, that ancient problem of not making the key basket when it had to haunted Salem all night long, as the Bulldogs got the last laugh the third time around.

It marked the second-straight year the Rocks have won a district title before losing in the first regional game at Livonia Franklin.

Westland John Glenn beat Salem in a similar situation last year — topping the Rocks after Salem won the regular-season battle.

Oddly enough, Salem's season started on the same Livonia Franklin gym floor with a one-point victory over the Patriots.

No one knew, or ever suspected, the Rocks would go on to win their next 10 straight games, gain state recognition, and finish with an 18-2 regular-season record.

Everyone realized Salem's nucleus was built around all-leaguer Rich Hewlett. The 6-foot-1, 195-pound super athlete lived up to his billing as one of the best players around, running the Rocks' attack both offensively and defensively.

Hewlett led his team as assists, totaling 122 during the regular season before breaking Dan Moore's four-year season record in the district finale against Plymouth Canton. Hewlett was also second in scoring and second in rebounding and first in steals.

But there was a strong supporting cast to Hewlett as some unexpected surprises continued to develop as the season wore on.

FIRST, no one expected seniors Bill Thimm, Kevin Kelliher, Barry Owens and Matt Etienne to perform at the high level they demonstrated most of the season — no one except coach Fred Thomann, that is.

And who would have thought juniors Howard Monk, Rob Neu (both starters) and super-sub Jim Anderson would respond to the varsity level the way they did.

Thomann certainly has a solid core of juniors for next season.

While these seven players were not of the same caliber of a Rich Hewlett, their contributions to the team's successes were evident in the way they adopted to the Rocks' team-oriented passing offense, and a stingy man-to-man defense, which Thomann said his squad "lives and dies by."

Despite Salem's lack of height, it still rebounded with the best teams and held its opponents to only a shade over 53 points per game.

Offensively, the Rocks weren't to shabby, either, scoring more than 72 points per contest.

It had to be a satisfying year for Thomann, whose 21-3 season record brought his seven year overall Plymouth record to a phenomenal 136-24 mark — a winning percentage of 85 percent.

It was Thomann's sixth straight league title, four district crown, and second-best overall record to the 1974-75 state semifinal team which finished 22-3.

SPEAKING OF SATISFYING YEARS, Plymouth Canton cagers, likewise, have a lot to brag about.

First-year head coach Craig Bell, a former assistant to Thomann at Salem, performed admirably in his rookie season.

King, Mandle top Western-6 picks

Plymouth Canton's Butch King and Rusty Mandle head this year's All-Western Six League basketball selections.

The Chiefs' senior co-captains were the heart of the Canton offense — resulting in an undefeated league season and the school's first-ever boys basketball crown.

King, a 6-foot-1 sharpshooter, was the Chiefs' leading scorer this season, while 6-2 guard Mandle, who also received first-team Western-6 honors in football, was the Canton offensive playmaker.

Joining the two Canton guards on the first-team squad are Mike Bryant of Walled Lake Western and Jeff Norton and Joe Schimph of second-place Northville.

Bryant, a 5-11 senior, was the Warriors' leading scorer this season. Norton, 6-0, and Schimph, 6-3, are both seniors who led the Mustangs' charge at the Chiefs.

Northville finished second with a 6-4 conference mark, four games behind the front-running Chiefs.

Heading the second-team was junior Tom Schaefer of Waterford Mott. Four seniors were also chosen for second-team honors. They include Livonia Churchill's 6-3 senior forward Ralph Jarnot, Canton's Mike Leary, Farmington Harrison's Dave Turquist and Waterford Mott's Mike Miller.

Honorable mention players include Harrison seniors Scott Hendries and Brian Burgess; Canton junior Dave Visser and Churchill senior Dave Krick and junior Brian Kersten.

'Y' holds soccer clinics & classes

The Northville, Plymouth, Canton YMCA will hold three different soccer coaches clinics on Saturdays, March 24, March 31 and April 7.

Van Dimitriou, head soccer coach at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, and Larry Christoff, the head man at Schoolcraft Community College, will conduct the three sessions. Both coaches have had professional soccer experience.

The clinic, which is geared particularly for parents who want to work with little league soccer players, runs from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Starkweather Elementary all three Saturdays.

Registration fee for the clinic is $10 per person. Interested persons should wear loose-fitting clothes for the activities. Basic techniques of refereeing and coaching will be taught in the gymnasium.

Soccer skill classes for all children and adults are also being offered at the YMCA. The classes start April 23 and last through May 16.

The classes will also be held by Christoff and Dimitriou at Starkweather from 4-5 p.m. every Monday and Wednesday at Starkweather.

The four-week program will cost $8.50 for members and $11 for non-members.

For more information on all these soccer activities call the YMCA at 453-2904.

Hewlett earns Sub-8 honors

Suburban Eight League basketball champions Plymouth Salem placed one player on the first team of the all-league squad, but it was runner-up Livonia Bentley which dominated the coaches' selections, landing two slots on the first-team selections.

Salem, coached by Fred Thomann, won its sixth straight Sub-8 championship this year, once again dominating the conference action with an 11-1 record.

Livonia Bentley finished one game behind Salem with a 10-2 record, falling twice to the champion Rocks. Dearborn and Belleville tied for third place with identical 6-6 records, Allen Park was fifth at 5-7, Edsel Ford sixth at 4-8 and Trenton in the basement with a winless record of 0-12.

The Bulldogs' top scorer, 6-foot-5-inch senior guard Eric Thorderson, led all cagers in the first-team balloting. Bentley also landed 6-6 senior center Chris Bollin on the first team.

Salem's all-around performer Rich Hewlett, a 6-1 senior guard, followed Thorderson. Hewlett, an All-Sub-8 and All-State selection in football, was the catalyst of the Rocks' cage attack all season long.

Other first-team members included Allen Park's 6-3 senior Gary Wilkie and Belleville's 5-10 sharpshooter, senior Herb Burris.

Bentley's Steve Booth headed the second-team selections. He is a 6-1, 5 senior-playmaking guard. Allen Park's Dave McCormack, Salem's 6-2½ forward Barry Owens, Edsel Ford's Bruce Nabozny and Dearborn's Craig Wolter round out the second-team selections.

Honorable mentions were given to Salem's 6-2 senior forward Kevin Kelliher, Belleville's 6-6 sophomore Earl Watson, and Edsel Ford's Rod Armstrong and Jamie Bedenis.

Courageous Bentley bows to Ypsi at wire

One of the most courageous come-back's in state basketball tournament history fell two points short Friday when Livonia Bentley lost to Ypsilanti, 66-64, in the Class A Franklin Regional final.

The Bulldogs trailed by as many as 15 points midway through the third quarter; by 13 points, 53-40, going into the fourth period and by 10 points with only a minute and a half remaining.

However, spurred by coach Jim Komula, assistant Don Frederick and a frenzy crowd, the never-say-die Bulldogs cut the gap to a mere basket before running out of time.

The Bulldogs scored eight unanswered points during a span of 1:50 at the start of the fourth quarter on a basket by Chris Bollin, two free throws by Bollin, and field goals by Craig Evans and Kurt Thorderson.

That outburst narrowed the deficit to 53-48.

Ypsilanti connected for three field goals in succession within a minute span late in the contest to take what appeared to be a secure 61-52 lead.

After Bollin found the range on one of two foul shots, Ypsi's Scott Robinson made a basket with only 1:29 left to put the Braves up, 63-53.

However, within the next 22 seconds, Eric Thorderson hit a field goal and two free throws, Kurt Thorderson sank a basket and Booth made a free throw to pull the Bulldogs within three points.

Fred Cofield hit two free throws with 50 seconds left for Ypsi and Bollin made a field goal with 39 seconds to make the score 65-62.

Steve Booth arched the ball into the basket with 10 seconds left to pull Bentley within one.

Buddy Powell was fouled with four seconds remaining and converted the front end of a one-and-one situation for the final point of the game.

A desperation throw — it wasn't really a shot — by Steve Booth with one second left missed, putting a cruel end to a determined effort.

Booth and Bollin each finished with 18 points, while Eric Thorderson notched 16. Ypsi's Cofield tied for game scoring honors with 18 points.

"I think we're better than they are. They're good, but we knew we could play with them," said Bentley coach Jim Komula. "At the end of the third quarter, I just said we have to play ball and we went to the press. I felt if we were down by five or less after the third quarter, we would beat them."

"We didn't want to start running with them (earlier). I was trying to use the time on the clock, but also by how many points they were ahead."

"The key to our success this year is that Steve Booth has been able to move the ball inside; Eric Thorderson's passing and scoring threat; Chris Bollin's dominance on the boards and our supportive cast. We've had a very solid bench," Komula continued.

"(Greg) Slusser did a good job all year long playing in the shadows of other people. I think Kurt Thorderson will be all-state next year," said Komula.

Ypsilanti coach Rick Schneider, whose team has lost only once this season in 25 outings, praised the Bulldogs' effort, especially during the fourth quarter.

"They just kept coming back. He (Komula) has done a fine job with that team," said Schneider. "We put them on the stripe (foul line) too much."

Bentley concluded its season with an overall record of 21-4. For Ypsi, its on to the quarterfinals in Jackson.

Sports Editor:

Concerning your March 12th "Doc's Corner," I would like to comment on some of your thoughts concerning the Plymouth Canton varsity basketball coach, Craig Bell.

First, I am a student at Plymouth Salem High School in my senior year. In my sophomore season, I played basketball for Craig Bell when he was coaching with Salem. It was a learning experience for me in such a way that I learned to respect this man and have a very high regard for him.

On and off the court, he is a pleasant man who has contributed a great deal to Fred Thomann's basketball program at Salem.

So, it would be absurd to say that this man does not know what he is doing, and it would be more ridiculous to say that his actions toward you are in an "immature manner."

For a coach to build a winning program, he must first have a winning attitude, second, have a group of talented players and third, to always want to learn more about the game of basketball.

No where in that list does it say he has to deal with people who do not contribute to his program. You have your right as a journalist to print your ideas and thoughts, and he has his rights as a citizen not to reply to you, or to anyone else he cares not to respond to.

I sincerely feel that his actions, or non-actions toward you, was the right thing for him to do. He has no reason to apologize or to settle anything with you. He's pleased with what he has accomplished, which was something to be proud of. And he's not going to let someone like you spoil his and his players' sweet taste of a league title.

To end this letter, I would like to say that your correct in saying that a newspaper's obligation is to write "about the program" but when a journalist starts digging into the character of a man and his team, and saying his manner is immature, I believe that is not an obligation for a newspaper.

Mr. Bell is a super human being whom I admire greatly and who has done a terrific job with his team. He deserves nothing but recognition and praise.

son, leading the Chiefs' to a 16-4 regular-season record and one district victory before bowing to the Rocks in the district finale.

Canton's 17-5 overall mark is the best ever in the school's six-year varsity history. The Chiefs also won their first-ever Western Six League basketball crown, outdistancing second-place Northville by four full games with a perfect 10-0 record.

One had to appreciate the talents of Canton's senior co-captains Butch King and Rusty Mandle, who teamed up to pace the Chiefs' attack all season long. Both cagers recently earned all-league honors for their performances.

Mandle was the heart of the Canton attack, having the uncanny ability to play the playmaking guard or muscle underneath the board at a forward position — despite checking in at only 6-2.

King finished his third year on the varsity as the team's leading scorer — the second straight season King has paced the offensive charges. The 6-1 scorer is known as one of the best pure shooters from outside ranges in the area.

Senior Mike Leary was a pleasant surprise under boards, improving his inside game tremendously over the past year. And 6-foot-5 center Mike Gollnick, a transfer student, aided Canton at the pivot.

Senior sixth-man Jay McKinley was a another asset as a swing player, while juniors Dave Visser, a 6-5 starting forward, and Scott Adler, a 6-1 third guard, got plenty of playing experience to help begin a nucleus for next year.

CRAIG BELL

IN THE POCKET

By W.W. EDGAR

The bowlers at Super Bowl in Canton are taking a page from the policies of the professional teams in other sports and have set up a draft system to form a new classic circuit for the fall.

Under the plan the names of 150 bowlers are going to be placed on the draft list. Then, after the captains of the 16 teams are chosen, the captains will be asked to draft members from the list. Nothing like this ever has been attempted in bowling and the officials of other leagues will pay close attention to see the results.

All sorts of prizes are being worked out and the Classic hopes to take its place alongside the top classics in the western suburbs. Applications for a place in the draft may be made by contacting Super Bowl.

AS USUAL, the 700 barrier was broken again in the Wonderland Classic and this time it was Denny Feloni who accomplished the feat.

He opened his series with a 222, then followed with a 268 and closed with a 239 for 729 to far outdistance his closest rival. Trailing far behind came John Wodarski with a 660, while the Ferris Brothers team, captained by Gerry Boyle, rolled 3223 for high series.

In the women's classic Sue Mc Brayer showed the way with 630 that was made possible by a finishing game of 238. Nancy Gephart took the runner-up role with 610 and Joanne Warner landed third with 604.

MARTHA COOPER joined the 700 barrier breakers Wednesday night at Crown Lanes when she paced the ladies major league with a 721. Starting with 223 she followed with 243 and 255 to gain a place among the elite.

JOHN HURLEY who has been making a habit of rolling 700 series in the morning leagues at Westland Bowl, didn't reach that goal this week but he did extend another high mark. He rolled a 685 and it was his 25th 600 series in as many weeks. His big count came as a result of a 242 middle game.

In the ladies classic Carol Post led the parade with a 636, which was 12 pins better than Cyndi Edwards in second place. Mary Porter also bettered double-century figures with a 606 and Debby Buono had a 237 for high game in a 598 series.

HIGH SCORING marked competition in the Ford league at Woodland Lanes where Jim Healy set the pace with a 249 in 648.

Fred Heppner was right behind with a 256 in 641 and Tony Bolek had a 235 in 634. High game honors went to Tim Hopp with a 263. The Go Blue team also set a new high with an 1120.

In the Keglerettes loop, Colleen DeGrazia, who carries a 117 average, set the pace with a 203. In the GM Deisel loop Coring Walsh, with a 137 average, rolled a 529 and in the Tumblers circuit Vicki Barnes fired a 236 for high game.

FOUR NEW members were inducted into the split-conversion club at Mayflower lanes.

Dorothy Preston knocked over the difficult 4-6-7-10 to gain her membership, while Glen Nelson swept the 3-6-7-8-10, Barb Stewart toppled the 4-10 and Rose Scourts did the same with the 4-7-10. On the competitive side Lois Fegert, a 135 average bowler, fired a 277 and Wanda Carpenter posted a 245.

IN OTHER GOOD performances Toni Smith registered a 235 in 660 in the invitational doubles at Merri-Bowl and Jack Burchard linked counts of 215,236 and 227 for 678 at Super Bowl.

IN A DUEL that went down to the final frame,

Bill Poe rolled a 675 series to beat Jim Bonfiglio by five pins and take over the pacemaking roll in the Bel-Aire Classic. To get his winning count, Poe posted games of 231, 231 and 213.

In the other leagues George Stevens showed the way to the retirees with a 646, Colleen Smith topped the Novi Pin Pointers with a 244 in a 649 series and Mary Schmiede rolled a 611, the first double century series of her career.

Swede plays 2 sports

By BETTY DELANO

Of the seven full-time foreign exchange students at the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park (CEP), only one of them has competed in a varsity sport this year.

Inger Eithun (pronounced "a tune"), 17, an exchange student from Sweden and a senior at Plymouth Salem, competed on the Rocks' varsity volleyball team and is currently participating with the girls' varsity track team as a prospective shot putter.

This is Inger's first trip to the United States. She has been exposed to a more competitive style of athletics than in her home town of Vasteras.

As a basketball coach for fifth and sixth graders, and playing interests in volleyball, basketball and soccer in Sweden, she said, "There are usually not enough people that go out for the teams in school so we end up taking anyone we can get."

Interscholastic competition in Vasteras is limited to what we would consider intramural competition according to Eithun.

Tournaments go on in gym classes and occasionally between different sections within a grade in the schools resembling the intramural program at the middle schools in this community.

Inger's volleyball skills gave her a starting position in the Salem line up and she helped the Rocks take a fourth place finish in the Suburban Eight League.

"Inger was a hard worker and a very coachable player," said Salem varsity volleyball Coach Cathy Himes.

"She has got a lot of talent and a desire always to do better on the court. I wish that she had come here sooner and that she was staying at Salem a few more years."

Eithun added a lot to the Salem defense this season and had an 80 percent serving average. As a rookie to Salem's defensive coverage, she caught on fast to the Salem blocking and defensive positions and was also an aggressive offensive player.

Stamina and strength are two of Eithun's advantages in the shot put. Prior to the start of the volleyball season, Himes said "Inger is one of the strongest athletes on the team."

Any form of a Swedish league is in clubs that meet after school and aren't affiliated with the school.

"In Vasteras we have clubs that practice three times a week and they aren't as hard as the practices here," said Eithun. "It's also not as hard to make a team because there aren't as many people going out for the teams and there aren't as many coaches." One reason she came to the U.S. was her desire to try something new and to have another year to think about what she wanted to do after high school.

Classes are more difficult in Vasteras than at the CEP, according to Eithun. Classes of Eithun's at Salem include Ceramics, Chemistry, International Realizations, Writing Four, German and Racquets.

Inger's high school in Vasteras is on a modular schedule with a five day cycle and classes are picked by choosing a certain study program instead of individual courses.

Rock JV finishes year with 16-4 overall mark

By THOMAS ZAIBEK

It looks like the fortunes of the Plymouth Salem boys basketball program will continue next season — thanks to another successful junior varsity squad.

The Rock JV, coached by first-year mentor Bob Blohm, recently finished the season with a highly successful 16-4 overall record.

Members of this squad include sophomores Mike Sharp, Leigh Langkabel, Paul Horton, Tom Kelliher, Otto Luttman, Mark Kitz, and Kevin Urban. Freshmen players include Scott Bublin, Mike McBride, Jeff Hubert, John McDowell, Bob Heidt, John Gannon, and Ken Vermuelen.

The continuous parade of talent for both Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton basketball programs is do, in part, to the effort and dedication of many volunteers in the Plymouth-Canton Junior Basketball Association who have helped coach and support many of these junior varsity and varsity players.

Silver Concord honors AMC's 25th anniversary

AMC's special edition of its Concord sedan.

On May 1, 1954, Nash-Kelvinator Corp. and Hudson Motor Car Co. merged to form the American Motors Corp.

To commemorate the company's silver anniversary, AMC has introduced a special version of its compact Concord DL.

The Silver Anniversary package includes two-tone silver paint, silver vinyl roof, wire wheel covers, individual reclining seats in either black or russet corduroy trim, and instrument panel and exterior 25th Anniversary identification.

AMC was the first American car maker to produce compact size cars in the late 1950s, and AMC picked a compact for its birthday model for just that reason. "The special anniversary Concord highlights the fact that the company was the pioneer of the modern compact car," said Dale Dawkins, vice president of marketing for the company.

American Motors introduced the Concord line for the 1978 model year. The standard transmission is a floor-mounted four-speed manual. Standard engine is a 232 cubic inch six cylinder, with 121 cubic inch four cylinder, 258 cubic inch six and a 304 cubic inch V-8 available as options.

The anniversary option will cost $100 on Concord with the four-cylinder engine and $200 on sedans with six and eight cylinder engines. It is available on either two- or four-door models.
