And just when you thought the Easter bunny was a myth . . . .
(Staff photos by Gary Caskey)

Eat your heart out, Harvey

How fur can they go?

By TERI BANAS

John Kiernan and Ken Nielsen are two young men who aren't likely to turn down a dare.

If you need personal testimony to that fact — just ask their U.S. history teacher, Charles Westrin.

Last week Westrin dared them to do something different during the Easter holiday.

So on Friday the pair went off on a personal crusade.

"Save the Easter Bunny" was their battle cry.

Donning fluffy white suits — "the last two bunny suits in the Detroit area, we were informed" — the juniors paraded through the hallways of Centennial Educational Park and then hopped down to Pioneer Middle School and Smith Elementary.

"We just feel the Easter Bunny is a neglected part of American history," they reasoned. "The bunny needs attention. You never hear of him anymore."

Beginning 6 a.m. Thursday, they started their work by dying some five dozen genuine Easter eggs.

The night before they rented two bunny suits using $84 that was collected in the "Save the Easter Bunny Fund."

Those who contributed $1 received a personal Easter egg and a visit in their classrooms Friday by not one — but two near 6-foot tall rabbits.

"It was a spur of the moment kind of thing," said Kiernan. "We've been known to do things like this before."

By mid-day the genuine Easter eggs were gone. However, fear not, the Easter holiday celebration was carried out with store-bought chocolate eggs.

If you wonder what genuine Easter bunnies are doing wearing tennis shoes, there's a reason for that too.

"We're basketball bunnies. We figured we'd get around faster on these."

One of the more pleasant moments during the day, for these 16-year-olds was a visit to Smith Elementary.

"It was well worth it," said Nielsen.

"The look on their faces. . ." added Kiernan.

And what did their teachers say about the masquerade?

"They didn't seem to mind," said one long-eared costumed cottontail. "They just told us to do something constructive."

Both young men may be remembered for another escapade.

One day they attended classes at Plymouth Salem High in Confederate uniforms.

The occasion?

National History Day, of course.

"This was the first annual Easter Bunny Day but keep an eye out for us next year," said Nielsen at the end of the day.

"You can also look forward to us on Halloween. That will be Save the Great Pumpkin Day."

Designated farmland tagged for tax break

Most land in Canton's new agricultural-industrial zoning district (AGI) has been tagged for a minimum 13 percent reduction in property assessments.

The reduction, recommended by the Canton Tax Board of Review, reflects the market value of the land for farming purposes as opposed to its potential value if developed.

Planner Jim Kosteva said the owners of non-conforming 10-acre homesites are the only AGI property owners who will not receive a tax break under the recommendation.

He added, however, that all agricultural parcels in western Canton will be reassessed by Dec. 31. The township board has said it will hire, as recommended by the Wayne County Bureau of Taxation, an assessor specializing in agricultural land values.

Kosteva said the county bureau has assured township officials that decreasing AGI property assessments by a total $1 million will not affect assessments in other areas of the township.

The township's tax board has reduced AGI assessments by $1 million through an across-the-board 13 percent cut and a pledge to renew the one-year reductions which were granted to some AGI property owners last year.

Kosteva called the tax board's recommendation "a good faith action" which complies with the intent of Canton's new zoning ordinance to preserve farmland.

The 6,200 acres placed in the AGI district by the ordinance cannot be split into parcels smaller than 40 acres. Use is limited to agricultural purposes.

Kosteva said the reductions were made to encourage farming. The tax board exempted non-conforming homesites of 10-acres or less from its recommendation on the ground that those property owners are not actively engaged in farming.

However, the zoning ordinance approved by the township board March 25 is expected to lower property values of much of the agriculturally zoned land because of its ban on development.

Assessments, the basis for property tax computations, approximate 50 percent of true market value.

MUCH OF THE land west of Canton Center was zoned for farming before passage of the new zoning document. However, Kosteva said tax officials viewed the previous agricultural zoning as a "holding classification" which would change with the arrival of developers in the area.

The reductions granted by the township tax board of review are only good for one year. Kosteva said an evaluation by a professional assessor is needed in order to reduce assessments on a more permanent basis.

The re-evaluation will include parcels in the agricultural-residential zoning district (AGR). The 3,000 acres zoned AGR in western Canton are intended for five-acre homesites and a buffer district for the AGI zoning.

"The board of review was really used for a purpose that really isn't it's purpose," Kosteva said of the reductions prompted by the zoning change.

The board of review is empowered to temporarily reduce assessments after reviewing petitions of landowners. Assessments are normally reduced because of an individual's financial hardship or inequity in the original assessment.

However, the Wayne County Bureau of Taxation has indicated that it will accept the board's recommendation for the AGI district, Kosteva said.

The township has proposed the purchase of development rights in the AGI district to reimburse landowners for the diminished market value of their land.

Kosteva said the Headlee Amendment will eliminate the impact of the AGI assessment reductions on lthe total tax receipts collected from township property owners. Headlee will require the township to roll back its millage this year so tax revenues will not increase by more than 12 percent in light of a 17½ percent assessment hike for most property owners.

Preservation headaches hit county project

By DARLENE STINSON

A New York farmland preservation program which has lent Canton ideas for its own agricultural plans is teetering in uncertainty because of local political factors, says a land-use specialist.

Suffolk County, a rural area at the extreme eastern tip of Long Island, implemented a development rights program four years ago which is practically identical to the plan proposed by Canton officials.

In 1977, two township representatives toured the county to learn firsthand how the public purchase of development rights worked.

The county's plan has been heralded as the first of its kind in the nation and tagged by Canton officials as a shining example of how farmland can be saved.

The major difference between Canton's proposal and the working program in New York involves the type of jurisdiction responsible for development rights purchases. In New York, the county purchases development rights. In Canton, the township would hold that responsibility.

A VARIETY of economic and political factors unrelated to Canton Township is now threatening to throw the development rights program into a "state of limbo," according to David Newton, a land-use specialist with the Suffolk County Cooperative Extension Service.

Newton said the program was implemented with the idea of saving about 15,000 of the county's 45,000 acres of farmland through the purchase of development rights. The cost of the program was estimated at $60 million.

To date, approximately 3,300 acres have been enrolled in the program through an $11 million bond sale.

But Newton says that County Executive John Klein has proposed recently to slash the program's budget in half.

Stop a crime? Get a medal

Heroism and good deeds will not go unnoticed under a new Canton Police Department program.

Citizens who nab a burglar stealing the silverware next door will receive a written commendation from police.

Officers who are paid to investigate crimes and apprehend suspects will receive medals for their uniforms to tell of their performance beyond the line of duty.

Police Lt. Larry Stewart said few departments, except large, urban forces, sponsor the type of program recommended for Canton by Police Chief Jerry Cox.

The International Association of Chiefs of Police has formulated criteria for the awarding of medals and commendations.

"These won't be easily won," Stewart said of the awards. "The criteria is quite strict and requires performance out of the ordinary."

UNDER THE PROGRAM approved by the township board last month, citizens may receive recognition in a variety of ways, including:

- A plaque for valor. Citizens will receive this award if they risk their lives assisting police officers or another citizen in a situation involving criminal activity.
- A civilian citation. The commendation will be awarded to citizens who prevent a serious crime or save the life of another.
- Certification of appreciation. This will be given to citizens for deeds worthy of recognition.

RECOGNITION FOR police officers centers around the awarding of medals. Medals include:

- The blue and white police medal of honor. The highest medal will be awarded to officers who demonstate heroism and knowingly risk their lives in the investigation of a crime. The medal may be awarded posthumously.
- The black police cross. This medal will be awarded posthumously to any officer who loses his life in the line of duty.
- The red and white distinguished service medal. This award will be given to officers who risk bodily harm during the investigation of a crime.
- A purple and white medal for officers who sustain serious injury in the line of duty.
- The green and white safe-driving medal. This is given to police officers who drive for five years without an automobile accident.

The main purpose of the program is to make "people feel good and give them recognition," Stewart said.

Short Takes

Object: Matrimony

Remember a short time ago we dropped a few hints about the approaching nuptuals of a certain person? That person (are you ready?) is none other than flamboyant Canton Township Board Trustee Robert Greenstein. Greenstein married Tish Reese, a psychologist for the Plymouth-Canton school district, over the weekend and is supposed to be honeymooning at Jackson Hole, Wyoming. The wedding was scheduled Saturday at the Mayflower in Plymouth, with 35th District Court Judge Dunbar Davis doing the honors. So if you wonder where the trustee is instead of at this Tuesday's township board meeting, remember, you read it first in Short Takes.

A mailbox is missing

Santa's mail box, which disappeared from in front of the Kroger store sometime during the Christmas season, has not yet been found. The box was provided by the Canton Chamber of Commerce's Santa Workshop Committee. "Many hours of hard work and expense was put into building this mailbox," says Jason Mall, chairman of the committee. He says the chamber would like donations for materials and construction of a new mailbox if the old one can't be found. That's a hint, all you civic groups and organizations out there. In fact, Short Takes will donate the paint if someone else will pitch in with the rest. Deal?

You can't keep a bad road good

You may remember Short Take's Worst Road in Canton contest held about this time last year. We had so many nominations that we decided it's only fair to give the runner-up worst roads another chance. Therefore, all you happy people out there with missing hub caps and overworked suspension systems are asked once again to cast your vote for the worst, most disgusting excuse for a road now existing in Canton. Please send your nominations to the attention of: Worst Road, Canton Observer, 461 South Main, Plymouth, MI 48170. We will close nominations April 15 and will announce the winner shortly thereafter.

Veterans protest office closing at S'craft

By TOM LONERGAN

The veterans counseling office at Schoolcraft College will close later this month over the protests of the office coordinator and many ex-GIs.

About 50 veterans packed last week's Board of Trustees meeting to protest the layoff of veterans' counselor John Borenski.

Effective April 25, veterans' counseling will become part of the larger student counseling department. Borenski, full-time veterans counselor for three years, will be out of a job.

COLLEGE OFFICIALS say fewer veterans attending Schoolcraft led to a reduction in federal funding for a separate full-time counselor. This increased the college's obligation for the $21,000 office to nearly 50 percent.

There are 381 full-time student veterans currently enrolled at Schoolcraft, down some 90 students from a year ago. Fifty dependents of veterans also use the counseling service.

"We do not feel there is sufficient need to justify a full-time person to do this," said college President C. Nelson Grote. "There is no intention at all to diminish the service to you vets."

Trustee Mark McQuesten of Plymouth added: "I don't think you really have to worry about the board being responsible. The delivery system is going to be changed."

But the veterans, who said the counseling office won't be as responsive as a sole veterans' counselor, demanded the school keep Borenski for another year.

A flyer they distributed said it would cost the college $7,000 to maintain veterans' counseling at its current level for another year.

Grote said it would cost $14,000 to keep the separate office open for the remainder of the current academic year and for 1980-81.

"WHEN WE hear that $1 million will be used to add on a Culinary Arts Center, which will bring in 60 new students, there seems to be a contradiction when we also learn of a reluctance by the administration to contribute a mere $7,000 for 400 vets," states the veterans' flyer.

"I think this needs to be looked at," said Trustee Rosina Raymond of Livonia. "Actually, this board has not studied this at all."

The decision to close the office was made in June when the board passed the 1979-80 budget.

"I knew when we made a decision, it would not be a popular one," said Grote. "But popular decisions are not always responsible decisions."

BUT THE VETERANS, who extended the audience comment time the board had sloted on its agenda from three minutes to nearly an hour, were not satisified with Grote's answers.

"Unemployment is rising," said Tim Corden, a Schoolcraft student from Livonia. "The vet getting laid off will go back to school. I think you're closing it too soon."

"We only knew about this for two weeks," said Ken Smith, a student from Detroit. "No matter what Grote said, he did not make an announcement."

Although the decision to discontinue the full-time veterans counselor was made last summer, the veterans said they were first notified of the change in a March 19 letter.

THE NUMBER of veterans attending Schoolcraft has dropped steadily since reaching a peak of 1,008 full-time students in 1976-77, Grote said.

Funding from the federal Veterans' Administration for the counseling is based on enrollment.

Robert Kaiser shows off some of the rugs he has hooked in honor of Christmas. He's made a different design every year. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Greenfield Village retiree turns career into a hobby

By CAROLINE PRICE

When Robert Kaiser was a young man, he went to work in a place where the first Henry Ford was frequently seen and preserving the past was the main order of the day. Now, retired after 42 years of working for Greenfield Village, Kaiser and his wife Brucella live in a mobile home filled with his hooked rugs and her paintings and sculpted animals.

Kaiser spent 11 years hooking rugs and another seven teaching the art in adult education classes for the popular Dearborn institution.

But he hasn't tired of making the rugs and now produces them more for his own pleasure than any other reason.

The ones scattered about his Canton home come in various sizes, but are all fashioned in the same manner as rugs produced by America's early settlers.

The rugs are strips of cloth punched into a burlap backing with a crochet hook. The result is a rug of dense loops which is practically indestructable.

Designs range from traditional patterns in wool flannel to more modern versions made of synthetic material. Most of the designs were made by Mrs. Kaiser.

Rug-hooking isn't the only craft learned by Kaiser at what he refers to as "the village."

"I ENJOYED THIS craft the most, though," he says. Kaiser, 65, takes the rugs to shows throughout the area. He says he prefers to sell kits containing the design and material rather than the finished product. He also gives lectures on the craft.

Rug-hooking is not a difficult thing to do. There are small machines that will cut fabric into strips, or they can be cut with scissors. Designs can be shaded or given unique colorations with strips cut of plaid or floral cloth.

For most people, however, rug-hooking is a hobby, not a career.

And a career making rugs and other crafts, even in so idyllic a setting as Greenfield Village, has its drawbacks.

Kaiser says things have changed at the village since he started there as a guide.

"You just can't work with the public and have to worry about producing too," Kaiser says. He says he felt he had to produce a certain amount of the rug kits that are sold to the public even if it cut into the time he spent talking and explaining the craft to tourists.

"When Mr. Ford was alive, no way was it like that."

According to Kaiser, the village is subject to the same competitiveness, jealousy and pettiness that is found in many a private corporation.

All that is over now, which doesn't seem to bother Kaiser in the least.

He spends part of the day comfortably settled in a chair by a window, where he sets a rug hooking board he designed on his lap and punches loops in the burlap backing.

He feels his pastime would be perfect for elderly people in nursing home since it is not demanding on eyesight or the hands.

And for each rug he completes, there's another design waiting on the horizon.

Trustee predicts economy will fail; urges readiness

By CAROLINE PRICE

If you think things are bad now, just wait.

That's the message Canton Township Trustee Robert Greenstein has been promoting for more than a year.

The trustee's predictions of imminent economic collapse were shrugged off by most at first. But as industries struggle for survival, inflation continues and jobs disappear, Greenstein's prediction seems more fact than fantasy. He says he's getting prepared and urges others to do the same.

He has yet to convince the township board that Canton's first priority should be to get prepared as well.

Prepared for what?

According to Greenstein, the nation is on the brink of either "hyper-inflation or depression."

Hyper-inflation is similar to the situation in Germany before World War II, when a bushel basket of money was needed to buy a loaf of bread.

Depression, of course, is already familiar to the United States, which survived a massive one in the 1930s.

But Greenstein claims people couldn't survive through a modern depression as well as their parents did. "In those days, people were hardy and self-sufficient. Today, we've become a dependant, 'gimmee' society either unwilling or unable to do for ourselves."

THE TRUSTEE, a lawyer who has attended many conferences on the economy, says the country has a choice of which option will occur, but no control over the eventuality of one of them occuring.

Greenstein paints a frightening picture of what would happen in the area in the advent of economic downfall.

"There's only about a week's supply of food in the Detroit area. If the doors to the supermarkets closed, either because they wouldn't take dollars anymore or because they couldn't get stock, think about what would happen.

"FDIC insurance (in banks) is a sham. The most they could do is save one or two minor banks, maybe. We're insured by a bankrupt government."

Greenstein thinks Canton should already be training several hundred reserve officers to protect the township if disaster strikes. "We can't feed the people, they'll have to feed themselves, but we can protect them.

"All the police and firefighters should be guaranteed that their families will be fed and protected in a crisis. They'd have to be insane to go out and protect someone elses' family and leave their own unprotected," he says.

The trustee says the township should drill wells with hand pumps at various points in the subdivisions so that people would be able to get fresh water if the public system fails.

FAMILIES, Greenstein says, should make plans to gather in a crisis at some designated spot. They should have at least a six-month supply of food to see them through until they can get a garden going.

"I think everyone in this community should spend $10 on seeds so at least they could look forward to a garden."

The trustee says a civil disruption caused by a suddenly valueless dollar — which could occur if "OPEC ever demanded gold for its oil" — would result in hordes of people with no food or protection who would flee to the suburbs.

That, says Greenstein, is when the township would need to protect itself and its residents. "I would not like it to be said of Canton that we were unable to do something good for our people.

"Maybe we would have to go in and take over Meijers and Kroger's. We should be storing food and supplies at township hall now," he says.

"Instead, we're building parks and spending money."

The trustee's vision of economic collapse is derived from a number of factors. He says the continued printing of money with nothing behind it, the increasing welfare rolls and the massive number of people working for the government are all factors causing a toppling economy.

"Our bureaucrats are the biggest danger today. There shouldn't be more than 5 percent of the population working for the government."

Perhaps Canton alone can't solve the problems, Greenstein says, but its residents can get together to ease the effects.

"We are so capable in this community of getting 500 people together to fight low-income housing, don't tell me it's impossible to get people together if their way of life is threatened.

"I don't intend to be the clamor of doom, but it doesn't do any good for me to say 'I told you so.' "

County charter vote goes on ballot Aug. 5

By TOM LONERGAN

"Shall the County of Wayne elect a charter commission for the purpose of framing and submitting to the electorate of the county a county home rule charter under the constitution and laws of Michigan?"

For the past year, Wayne County residents have heard all about proposed county government reform.

On Aug. 5, those same residents will vote on the above language to set the reform process in motion. If a majority votes yes, a charter commission will be elected in November. If the vote is no, county government remains as is.

THE COUNTY BOARD of Commissioners last week voted 20-3 to place the reform issue before voters at the Aug. 5 primary election. Primary races for U.S. Congress, state representative, county commissioner seats and countywide offices will also be decided.

In recent weeks, how much reform a charter commission could propose has been as much at issue among some commissioners as placing the question on the ballot.

Referring to the recently amended state law which gives the charter commission it's authority, Commissioner Mary Dumas, R-Livonia, said: "I'm sorry to have seen it written."

She said the law does not give a charter commission any "strength or flexibility."

And Mrs. Dumas had an unlikely ally in Commissioner Rosemary Robinson, D-Detroit.

"There is no real change going to be made," said Ms. Robinson, who represents an inner-city district. "To say such a historical event is going to occur is ludicrous."

If approved, the charter commission would eventually propose a restructured county government headed by either an elected county executive or county board-appointed manager.

The commission has no authority to eliminate or alter the county circuit court or the offices of clerk, treasurer, sheriff and prosecutor. It could, however, give an elected executive or appointed manager some budgetary control and authority to negotiate contracts, now handled by a labor board appointed by the 27 commissioners.

GOV. WILLIAM Milliken had long demanded the county board put the reform issue before voters. He has said the fragmented county government, whose power is widely dispersed, must be reorganized to operate more efficiently.

The governor has withheld millions in state aid for the deficit-plagued county, saying he wouldn't release the money until the board moved on the reform issue. The largest expenditure held by the governor is some $3 million for state takeover of county court probation services.

The state last fall rejected the county's attempts to borrow $22 million to complete its budget year. The county ended the year $18 million in debt and missed two payrolls affecting some 5,000 employees. The employees were eventually paid.

Because of the state's insistence on county reorganization, Commissioner Thomas Presnell, D-Westland, proposed the reform issue not be put on the ballot until the state approves funding of a charter commission. His attempt, however, failed by a 14-8 vote.

"As a board of commissioners, we're about to obligate ourselves to a lot of money we don't have," said Presnell, "just because the governor put a gun to our heads a year and a half ago."

A county committee estimates the cost of a charter commission, which could have up to 35 members, will be between $1.2 million and $2.7 million, depending on when elections were scheduled. All the charter commission's proposals would be subject to voter approval.

Suburban officials lobby to stop reapportionment

Wayne County voters will get their say on county government reform Aug. 5.

Between now and that date, however, a suburban group of local government officials hopes its lobbying will prevent Detroit representatives from having any advantage in the reorganization process.

The county Board of Commissioners last week voted 20-3 to ask voters if a charter commission should be seated to propose reorganization of the deficit-plagued county.

If the charter group is approved, it would eventually come back to voters with two proposals — a restructured government led by either an elected county executive, as favored by suburban western Wayne and downriver officials, or a county board-appointed manager, as favored by Detroit officials and those in neighboring communities like Highland Park and Hamtramck.

BEFORE THE Aug. 5 vote, a county apportionment commission will propose charter commission districts, which may be based on 1970 census figures.

If a charter commission is approved, it would not be seated until after the Nov. 4 general election, when charter commissioners (one from each charter district) would be selected.

Suburban officials fear Detroit could maintain the same 16-11 voting majority it now has on the county board, should charter commission districts be based on the 10-year-old census figures. They want 1980 census figures used.

Citing population shifts from Detroit, they maintain suburban communities will not be represented equally if the charter districts are based on the '70 census.

A GROUP called the Wayne County Communities for Equal Representation has hired a law firm to prepare a suit over the apportionment issue.

But one of the group's officers said last week a lawsuit would be "the last resort."

"The whole thrust is to get the apportionment commission to recognize inequities of what could happen if it uses the 1970 census," said Orville Tungate. Tungate of Plymouth Township is a district chairman in the Democratic Party and chief deputy county clerk.

His boss, County Clerk James Killeen, will be a member of the apportionment commission, along with the county treasurer, prosecutor and chairmen of the county Democratic and Republican parties.

The apportionment commission has 30 days to propose charter commission districts and must give 30 days for any county resident to appeal.

State law also allows appeals of the proposed charter districts to the Michigan Court of Appeals, an option under consideration by the suburban group.

Before the apportionment gets started, however, reconsideration of last week's county board decision is expected. An appeal for reconsideration, expected from a suburban commissioner this week, won't lead to a change in the board decision, but would only stall when the apportionment commission gets started.

Tungate is not convinced the Aug. 5 referendum on the charter commission is a sure thing.

Asked if the county was locked into that date, he replied: "It's too early to make a comment. The only way its going to be locked in is everyone is going to have to move damn fast."

County's program wrought with woes

He wants to use the money to purchase parks and wetlands which cannot be used for agricultural purposes, Newton said.

A drive of five townships at the eastern-most end of Long Island to secede from Suffolk and form a county of their own is further complicating the development rights program, Newton said.

He said the Suffolk County Legislature has threatened to cut off funds for the purchase of any more development rights in that area as a retaliatory move. He said the legislature is comprised overwhelmingly of representatives from Western Suffolk.

According to Newton, 90 per cent of the county's farmland is located in three of the townships which are pushing for a separate county.

"Its future is uncertain," he said of the program. "I think it will go forward, but I don't know what shape it will take."

LIKE CANTON, Suffolk County proposed its program at a time of mounting development pressures.

But Newton says that development in the county has almost ground to a halt.

Potential home buyers are now finding the county unattractive because of the high price of gasoline and the long commuting distance to New York City. Mortgage companies in the area are requiring 30 to 50 per cent down payments on homes, Newton said. He labeled property taxes in the county as among the highest in the nation.

Newton said numerous farmers are becoming increasingly disgruntled with the development rights program. But he attributed part of their anger to other factors, such as depressed potato prices and a ban on their favorite pesticide because of its threat to drinking-water wells.

A lengthy slide presentation of Suffolk County farms and the mechanics of its development rights program was presented to Canton board members in 1977.

Finance director Mike Gorman, who visited the county along with then-planner George Peek, said the manner in which Suffolk farmland is evaluated will probably be incorporated into Canton's development rights program.

Implementation of Canton's program hinges on funding, which was estimated at $16 million in 1978. The township's program would involve approximately 6,000 acres west of Canton Center Road.

Trustee Robert Greenstein, who initiated the idea of preserving Canton's farmland when he served as township supervisor, said Canton officials were unaware of the Suffolk plan when the development rights idea was first proposed.

"It's just that they implemented theirs first," Greenstein said of the New York county.

Ambulance service seeks accounts

By TERI BANAS

Plymouth Township residents won't have to worry about paying for private ambulance service — at least while contract disputes with township firefighters remain unsettled.

Township officials will not make a decision about contracting with a private ambulance firm while arbitration continues with the firefighters, said Clerk Esther Hulsing, following a meeting last week with a private ambulance company. Firefighters currently are responsible for rescue runs that are free to township residents.

Novi Ambulance Co., a private ambulance and rescue firm operating in Northville and Northville Township, was recently contacted by township officials who have been studying ways to cut operating costs in the municipal fire department.

The private firm also is seeking contracts with the city of Plymouth and Canton Township.

"We did meet and decided not to decide," Mrs. Hulsing said after the meeting.

"I really don't think we're going to do anything at all. There's some question of serious consideration that we can't make a decision on it because of present negotiations with the union."

STATE LAW does not allow changes in "wages, hours or working conditions," during arbitration, according to Dennis DuBay, township labor attorney.

The township and its firefighters are now in arbitration after bargaining broke down early last month after more than a year of negotiations.

The major dispute, according to firefighters, is the township's demands over professional qualifications. Those demands call for regular updating of state licensing as emergency medical technicians (EMTs).

Firefighters want EMT licensing to be voluntary.

State law mandates that at least one licensed EMT must be included in each rescue run.

Emergency rescue work accounts for about 90 percent of the firefighters' workload in a department with an annual budget of $540,000. The township has logged an average of 600 rescue runs annually.

"The firefighters presently do perform some ambulance service work, and I've advised the township that this matter first must be handled at the bargaining table." DuBay said.

Hulsing contends that if a private firm was contracted for emergency work, it would reduce the department's overtime budget. A cost estimate is unknown at this time.

Firefighters have already publicly denounced the private service.

"I think it would relieve the overtime, but it wasn't my intent to let some of our people go," she added in reference to lay-offs of firefighters.

One benefit she sees in the private service is the qualifications of those employed by a private firm. These workers are trained as paramedics and can perform advanced life support measures.

"They can give drugs, perform blood transfusions, and other things that our present EMTs aren't qualified to do. It's a more sophisticated service."

Trustee Barbara Lynch agreed.

"Because they are paramedics and their service is tied into Providence Hospital, the chances of survival are better," she said. "It's a definite plus. Our EMTs can't provide IVs and medication."

She said the next step in the township study is to compile a cost break-down of the township's service to compare it with the proposal from the private company. Northville pays about $2,800 for an annual retainer fee.

The cost of running a private ambulance, equipped with paramedics and a life support system, is about $130,000 a year, she said.

Township officials also are looking into different options that would couple the work of a private and municipal department, she said.

In Livonia, for example, a private firm does transport work while the municipal department is responsible for medical-related runs.

The benefit of combining services, Lynch said, is the reduction in time firefighters are away from their stations. Presently, a rescue run keeps a uniton the road for about an hour. That leads to high overtime expenses when off-duty firefighters are called into the station to fill in for those on the road, she said.

However, Lynch did say the study of such a service has political ramifications.

"It (municipal rescue runs) is the only service that people really see for the tax dollars they pay. So, needless to say, the residents of the township might get upset if we told them they'd get a different rescue service.

"But I think we have the obligation to at least study it."

According to John Early, the owner of Novi Ambulance Co., the average charge for those needing such a service is between $165-$265.

The flat transport charge (to a hospital) is $85; for those residents requiring emergency care and pick up, the flat fee is $140.

Charges vary depending on the type of medicine and care needed.

As yet, Canton has not responded to the private ambulance proposal. In the city of Plymouth, officials say they're not interested in such a contract at this time.

Joyner won't take the lot

Finding a parking space downtown will no longer be a problem for the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

The board last week voted 14-8 to provide county-paid parking for those commissioners who want it. The county is expected to lease parking spaces in the City of Detroit-owned Ford Auditorium Underground Garage. The current monthly fee at the garage is $55 but is expected to increase $10.

VOTING FOR the free parking privileges were Commissioners Richard Manning, D-Redford Township, Thomas Presnell, D-Westland, Mary Dumas, R-Livonia, and Kay Beard, D-Inkster.

Commissioner R. William Joyner, D-Plymouth voted no. An amendment he proposed that the number of spaces the county leases be reduced if a commissioner decides not to accept the parking passed by a voice vote.

The part-time commissioners are allowed a $100 monthly expense allowance in addition to their $16,190 annual salaries. Board chairman Samuel Turner, D-Detroit, who makes $22,690, abstained from the parking vote. Four commissioners were absent.

Prior to last week's action, most commissioners paid for parking out of their expense allowances. The board chairman, vice-chairman and chairs of county board committees are provided free parking in the City-County Building lot. The commissioners are paid 15 cents a mile for travel.

"IT'S COMMON practice for elected officials to be given parking spaces," said Mrs. Beard. "With the tremendous increase in cars (expenses), employees get more than we do. I don't think this is out of line."

Commissioner Rose Mary Robinson, D-Detroit, maintained the free parking was an increase in the commissioners' fringe benefits.

"No, it's a cost reimbursement," said the county's chief attorney, George Cross. "You're not increasing any benefit. You're providing a parking space."

State law prevents the commissioners from increasing their salaries while in office. The county board hasn't voted itself a raise since January 1977.

WSU grants top million

Nearly $1.5 million in gifts, grants and contracts was reported this month to Wayne State University's Board of Governors.

Among the awards is a $35,000 contract between the state Department of Transportation and WSU's civil engineering department, chaired by Professor Tapan K. Datta of Troy, to develop an energy contingency plan for the state.

The project calls for development and testing of a bus reallocation procedure to handle sudden changes in transit demand caused by fuel shortages.

Child neglect and child abuse training programs will be continue by the School of Social Work, under Dean Sidney Dillick of Birmingham, with a $155,095 contract renewal from the state Department of Social Services.

Possible effects of diesel exhaust will be studied further in a coordinated research program involving WSU pharmacologists and physiologists with a $164,378 contract amendment from the General Motors Corp.

The program is composed of eight projects, all intended to increase the knowledge of diesel exhaust effects.

Another GM contract amendment for $100,000 will enable the mechanical engineering department to continue a research project to increase the knowledge of human muscular response to impacts encountered in collisions. Professor Albert I. King of Southfield heads this study.

For years the Detroit area has been recognized as the bowling capital of the world and all because of the strength of its all-star leagues. No other city ever has been able to match it.

This season is no exception. In the latest average sheets is ample evidence of the right to the title. For instance, the Tuesday night All-Star, the original of the top flight loops, has 68 of its 80 bowlers averaging more than 200. the top man is Rocky Graziani with an average of 219 for 79 games at Thunderbowl in Allen Park.

The Thursday league that bowls at Orchard Lanes on Detroit's east side boasts that 60 of its 80 bowlers carry averages above the double century mark. In this circuit Bob Jawor, who does some of his bowling at Westland Bowl, is at the top of the list with 222

JOHN HURLEY, who came close to setting an ABC record for consecutive 600 series, is now suffering from shoulder trouble and may possibly give up bowling for the summer months.

In his last effort in the Wednesday league at Westland Bowl he fired a 687 and then announced that he might spend the rest of the summer fishing.

THE PINS were flying again in the Wonderland Classic and three more members were inducted in to the 700 club.

Bill Walker started it when he laced games of 226, 244 and 258 for 728. Then came Joe Foster who finished with a 279 game for a 711 series.

The third member inducted to the club was Jerry Lindley, who had a middle game of 267 in a 718 series.

The ladies also did some fine shooting. Barbara Marelich showed the way in the ladies house league with a 680 made possible by an opening 255. Janet Jenks followed her with a 640 while Polly Cole had a 628 and Dorothy Pashenell posted a 601. And in the St. Monico league Lea Weber started with a 246 and rolled her way to a 625 series.

THE 700 CLUB got another new member when Steve Stell, bowling in the Loon Lake league at Country Lanes, came through with games of 256, 217 and 244 for a 717.

Meanwhile, Barnell Krause, who posted a 299 a week ago, got away to another fine start with a 280 opener. Then he slipped to 189 and 199 for a 660.

The Kops Klassic, a league of police officers, set a new high for the season with a 2557 for four men teams. Norm Drusseau was high with a 231 in 653.

TOM CAREY did the unusual in the Vinco League at Garden Lanes when he turned in a 148 triplicate. While he was turning this trick Jack Hines set the league pace with 277 in 646 and Doug Zybrands followed with a 635.

SPEAKING OF UNUSUAL events here's one that may be hard to beat.

In the Saturday youth league at Plymouth bowl, four boys on the same team turned in identical 121 scores.They were Eric Catner, Tony Catner, Dan Woerner and John Belser.

In the adult league Babe Wilder, of the Chevy loop, had a middle game of 245 to set the pace with 692.

IN OTHER GOOD PERFORMANCES Terry Smith showed the way in the Canton Classic at Super Bowl with 676 and was followed by Tom Briceland with 646, Tom Gredell with 632 and Wally Evans with 642.

In the Tri-City men's league at Westland, Bob Schmidt was top man with a 258 middle game in 689 Judy Janis had a 658 in the Wednesday ladies league.

Kathy Crawford, a 95 average bowler at Woodland Lanes, hit a new high with a 212 game, and Sally Carrow, using a new ball, went 70 pins over her average with a 205 single game.

IN THE Spares and Strikes league at Bel-Aire, Mrs. Kevin Landacre still is going strong. Two weeks ago she posted a 278 in 655 and last week she came back with a 251 in 645.

In the Bel-Aire classic Cory Messer was top man with 289 in 697. His closest rivals were Larry Brandt with 255 in 672 and Ed Lewiston with 256 in 663.

Hearings focus on provisions for handicapped

How fast is southeast Michigan moving to make its buses and commuter trains accessible to the handicapped?

The Southeast Michigan Council of Governments will hold two public hearings in the coming weeks to get comments on the "transition plan" it must file with the federal government by July 1.

The plan sets timetables for making dial-a-ride buses, large buses, commuter trains and rapid transit facilities accessible to persons in wheelchairs.

Public hearings are scheduled at 7:30 p.m. on:

- Thursday, April 10 in the 13th floor commissioners auditorium, City-County Building, 2 Woodward, Detroit.
- Monday, April 14 in the Oakland County commissioners auditorium, 1200 N. Telegraph, Pontiac.

SEMCOG EXECUTIVE Director Michael M. Glusac said federal rules require that "public transit buses for which funding requests are issued after July 2, 1979 must be wheelchair accessible.

"The rule requires that the fixed route bus system must be accessible by July 1, 1982. Fixed route accessibility is achieved when at least one-half of the peak hour service is accessible to handicapped persons.

"The paratransit system must also be accessible by July 1, 1982. Accessibility, as it relates to the paratransit system, is achieved when essentially the same service is provided to handicapped persons as is provided to others.

"Commuter rail systems must be made accessible. All key stations must be made accessible within three years with an extension to 30 years if station accessibility involves extraordinary costs," said Glusac.

THE RULES were made under the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

That law prohibits discrimination on the basis of handicap in any program receiving federal assistance. Public transportation receives about 80 percent federal assistance for capital outlay and 50 percent for operating deficits.

"SEMCOG, as the metropolitan planning organization for southeast Michigan, has the principal responsibility for preparing and submitting the transition plan," said Glusac.

Neighborhoods

One razed, another gets stronger

There was something in the paper a couple days back about a neighborhood group in Detroit fighting to keep the city from laying asphalt over the 67-year-old bricks paving their street.

In a strange, convoluted way, it put me in mind of a guy who works at The Observer and lives on a dirt street in Westland. He and his neighbors successfully fought the city when it wanted to pave over the primeval dirt on their street with asphalt. They were also going to be billed about $1,600 each for it.

Stick with me for a while and I'll explain the connection.

As it happens, I grew up near the brick street. It's a two-block stretch a half-mile north or so of the Detroit River, one of the few streets of the city still paved with brick. It would look perfectly normal with a Model T rolling along it.

Only a crazy person would talk about paving it over, but I wouldn't bet on the outcome of the fight over it. That neighborhood has not had much luck in fighting government.

It's a big, backwater kind of neighborhood called Jefferson-Chalmers. I'd guess 10,000 or 15,000 people lived there 15 years ago, people who woke up to a quart of Half-and-Half left on the kitchen table by milkmen who still walked through unlocked back doors.

The house I grew up in is dead and buried. The contractor who tore it down saved himself a few hundred dollars by dumping the rubble in the basement instead of towing it away. Nobody stopped him.

DURING THE RIOT in 1967, people woke up to platoons of the 82d Airborne marching down those streets, the heavy-weapons specialists toting 81mm mortars and chanting "Sound off, one, two." All that was missing was the sound of jackboots on the brick street, but the soldiers were Vietnam-era and their rubber-soled jungle boots were silent.

A lot of the neighbors never recovered from the experience.

In the summers 15 years ago, that brick street was a cool tunnel of huge, overhanging Dutch Elm trees. On every neighborhood street at dusk in the summer men fresh off work sat in the shade on their broad front porches, watering their lawns. Most of them knew their neighbors' names, since you were considered a newcomer until you'd lived there 20 years or more. There were few newcomers.

That neighborhood was decimated by some crooked real estate speculators who managed to squeeze a few million dollars in personal profit through loopholes in HUD rules and regulations.

The neighbors were already gunshy after the riots and the speculators block-busted, stirring racial fears and panicking people into turning over their homes for a few thousand dollars.

Government housing inspectors were bought off. The houses were then sold on federally-guaranteed mortgages, a lot of them on $300 monthly payments to people with monthly incomes of $200.

When the buyers failed to make the payments, the mortgage-holders foreclosed, the government insurance paid the loan to the speculators, and the houses were torn down. When you live next a vacant lot, you're suddenly a lot more willing to take any kind of offer. The pattern was repeated hundreds of times.

THE RESULT is a kind of ghost town. Only two or three houses still stand on some entire blocks. Almost every street is missing a few houses, like a grubby slum kid missing teeth in a "Bowery Boys" movie. Most of the elms are gone, and gingko trees and wild shrubs have sprouted on the vacant lots. In the winter the dried out shrubs blow down the empty, gusty streets like tumbleweeds.

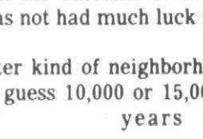

The house I grew up in is dead and buried. About 10 inches of greasy clay is sitting on top of the basement, which is filled with crushed bricks, flattened heating ducts and big sheets of rotting plaster. The contractor who tore it down saved himself a few hundred dollars by dumping the rubble in the basement instead of towing it away. Nobody stopped him.

The reason why the fellow in Westland reminded me of all this is because of the contradictions — the place where he lives hasn't even been around for 20 years, and by the standards of Jefferson-Chalmers, everybody who lives there would be a newcomer. The only trees there are the ones which managed to stay out of the bulldozer's path.

His street was one of a whole passle of dirt streets the city of Westland gave some recent paving thought. Presented with petitions from everybody who lived on the street, the city decided not to push the point and they dropped the paving plans.

You see what I mean. Everything is different.

Hopefully the neighbors can keep it that way.

Conventional boredom

Only a mother of the younger set can appreciate the terror that ravishes your nervous system when you hear your husband mutter those dreaded words, "I'll be out of town for a few days." For him that means work all day and then usually an evening out on the town. Standard procedure.

For wifey, it's 14-hour days with the Romper Room set topped off by evenings of listening to the house settle.

Recently my husband had to leave town on business for four days. This meant that I was left virtually alone for four nerve- wracking days and three spine-tingling nights to fend for myself against a raving 5-year-old and a ranting 3-year-old. Lately they seem to be giving new dimensions to the word, "wild."

As soon as the proclamation was made, I got on the phone and called everyone and anyone I knew. I begged, pleaded cajoled: "Please, please come over and visit me. I'll bring my kids and visit you. Maybe we could meet in a park somewhere. I don't care if it is 5 degrees outside!!"

Unfortunately, it turned out that everyone I knew either had the flu, or their kids had the flu or they thought they might be getting the flu by tomorrow.

So instead, I decided I would attempt to make an intolerable situation as easy as possible on myself as I could: I made the unheard of decision not to clean the house for four days. My line of logic was simply that since no one would be seeing it, there just didn't seem to be any reason to clean it. It seemed like a good idea at the time.

About the middle of day three as I was wading through the shredded newspapers that were knee-deep in the family room, I started to get a little depressed. The kids were being good as they were busily putting tinker toys down the heating duct, but for some strange reason I was getting irritable. It occurred to me that perhaps it would be easier to clean up the mess than to keep having to take "giant steps" over piles of toys in order to get from one room to another. But sadly, I realized that it would take more than a good purging of the household litter to rejuvenate my morose mental state. I was suffering from severe sensory deprivation.

It gets lonely when hubby leaves you stranded in the dead of winter with only Bob Barker and the soaps for company. It's at times like this when you find yourself trying to strike up an intellectual discussion with the paperboy or discussing your angst with the gas man.

In the midst of all this hilarity, hubby calls from his suite at some exotic hotel to tell you how well his business deal is going and what a fantastic feeling of accomplishment he is experiencing. Then comes that inevitable question, "What's new?"

"Well," you reply, "I was wondering if I should take out the garbage today or wait until tomorrow since yesterday was a holiday and I'm not sure when they're coming." And that's the highlight of your side of the conversation.

Wouldn't it be lovely if there was such a thing as a "Housewives Convention." Since housewives are usually well versed in a great variety of topics, we could have open forums on everything from Nietzsche to nursing. San Francisco, or perhaps Hawaii would be nice.

Imagine the thrill of saying, "I'll be out of town for a few days, honey. Have a good time while I'm gone. If you survive."

Death in the afternoon

Alcohol, accidents, illness, war . . . Most of us have lost pals we grew up with.

The shock of a friend's death interrupts our schedule rudely, but the pain passes eventually. Back to the land of the living.

So I believed, anyway, until one day last week, when I read that a friend of more than 15 years was missing — presumed dead.

Murdered.

A calculated and expertly executed hit, according to police.

My friend's body is thought to be lying at the bottom of the ocean, thanks to some animal who figured $20,000 was worth shooting someone for.

I wept when a fellow teammate on the school track team died of stomach cancer; I'm too angry for tears now. Revenge would soothe me.

Since I received the news, I've flipped through an old school yearbook several times. I haven't done that for years; there seemed no reason to before.

Each time I come across my friend's snapshot, I feel cold and sick. I try to imagine the terror he felt when he realized he was about to die. What did he think about? His wife? His kids? The pain? Did he even have the time for thoughts?

Or did he try to escape? He was big and took unarmed combat lessons while in the school cadet army corps. I remember him in uniform. But I suppose you freeze up when a gun is pointed at your skull and you know death is close.

I hope whoever killed my friend did it fast. I hope he was drilled clean and didn't suffer. Quick, I hope it was quick.

Then I think maybe he's alive, kidnapped but well. Maybe he just arranged his disappearance because of financial or marital problems. I wish . . .

. . . I will be wishing for a long time.

Answering kids' food questions

If you want to participate in a "happening" in the world of diet, this information is for you.

• U.S. Rep. William D. Ford invites you to send for the free publication called "What's to Eat? And Other Questions Kids Ask about Food."

The 142-page paperback is a publication of the Department of Agriculture and is intended for children. It contains topics such as "Did Prehistoric Kids Really Eat Bugs?" and "Will Cows Give Chocolate Milk in the Future?

The material is serious but easy-to-read articles on food, its history and its future.

To send for a copy, write to U.S. Rep. William Ford, 2368 House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. There is no charge.

• Macomb College Continuum Education center offers a one-day workshop in stress management, including the way stress leads to overeating. Alice Belfie, the instructor, is co-director of Creative Dynamics, a program that combines cardiovasuclar fitness with relaxation.

The workshop will be held 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. March 22 on the Macomb College south campus. The fee is $15 per person.

"By understanding stress, we come to understand the difference between stress and distress," Ms. Belfie said. "Stress is a normal part of life. Distress is what triggers overeating as a psychological mechanism because of anxiety, anger, or overwork.

"The stress workshop will examine the symptoms (overeating) that causes it and will develop an action plan to help us cope with what we cannot change and choose what we can do to change ourselves in the situation."

• If you are interested in fitness camps, here are two to consider:

Mercy Center, in Farmington Hills, offers a Women's Fitness Retreat from June 16-20. The week will include fitness of mind and body, nutrition, beauty, massage, body contouring, dance, tennis, swimming and special evening programs. The meals are low calorie. For information on cost and to register call the center at 478-8010.

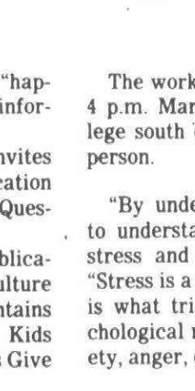

The YMCA offers a five-day vacation to be held June 22-27 at Camp Ohiyesa in Oakland County.

Activities during the week will include fitness class, dance exercise, swimming, voleyball, body toning, horseback riding, fitness profile, stress management for women, fashions financial planning for women and a "Think Thin" clinic with tips on dieting.

For information on cost and to register call Jeff Sadowsky, 261-2161, or Shirley Eyler, 644-9036.

• Weight Watchers has created recipes and menus to help you through the Passover or Easter season. They are "soup to nuts" complete. If interested you may send for them by calling the WW office at 557-5454.

Correction: The phone number for Nutrition Unlimited, a counseling clinic conducted by Mary Grant, registered dietician, was ommitted from a previous column. The number in Oak Park is 548-8092.

Price of government isn't only shocker

Ever since President Carter announced the extra tax of 10 cents per gallon on gasoline, the high cost of the fuel has been the main topic of conversation among automobile owners.

The spiraling cost was given even more emphasis during the past week when it was hinted that there may be additional taxes added in the hope of reducing the use of the autos and thus save the dwindling sources of the fuel.

How high will the price go?

It has been pointed out that the cost of "petrol" the name given the fuel in the British Isles, has risen to approximately $2.50 per gallon.

As he sat at home the other evening pondering some of the expressions of doom and gloom he had heard during the day, The Stroller couldn't help wondering why all of the emphasis was on the rising cost of gasoline.

What about some of the other items that have become part of every day life for many of us.

FOR INSTANCE, have you noticed the price of Coca Cola, one of America's favorite soft drinks?

If you haven't, it might interest you to know that the price now has reached the peak of $2.75 for an eight-pack, plus the additional 10 cents per bottle deposit.

That breaks down to more than 30 cents per bottle for an item that used to cost 10 cents at most when gasoline was 20 cents per gallon.

Despite this terrific rise in price, there seems to be no let up in the popularity of the thirst quencher. A visit to any of our supermarkets will show you long lines of all kinds of soft drinks, where there were only a few kinds not too long ago.

Why aren't the people squawking about the steep rise and the additional task of returning the bottles?

This is only one of the things that have been bothering The Stroller.

Much the same is true with the other thirst quenchers.

While The Stroller never has been troubled with the rising cost of liquor because he doesn't imbibe, he has noticed that the price of a high-ball mixed drink has jumped from 50 cents to $2 in most high class eating establishments. More than that, the beer that was 10 cents a "shuper" when gasoline was 20 cents per gallon now is $1.25 in the popular restaurants.

Yet there is no complaining. Why?

The Stroller had another experience the other noon when he spotted a piece of coconut custard pie in one of our lunch rooms. Ordinarily pie and custard do not attract him. But this did. So he broke down and ordered it without looking at the price list.

You can imagine his surprise when the check arrived and it listed that piece of custard at $1.25? When gasoline was 20 cents a gallon that piece of custard would have been not more than $.15.

• And food and drink is a shocker, consider the present price of footwear.

In one of our local shoe stores there is a display of men's footwear with this tag, "sale price $66.50." Just imagine that and you can see that the rise in the price of gasoline is not the most shocking item in today's spiraling economy.

And, according to the analysts, the end is not in sight. So, as they say, "Whither are we drifting?"

Lynch is elected to Chamber office

John T. Lynch of Charnwood Dr., Plymouth, has been elected first vice president of the Ypsilanti Area Chamber of Commerce.

Lynch, who joined the Hydra-Matic Division of General Motors in 1953 as a junior sales engineer, has been director of sales and public relations at the division since September 1979.

He earned a bachelor's degree in economics and business administration from the University of Detroit in 1950 and served in the U.S. Air Force from 1951-52.

Lynch served in various capacities in sales engineering for Hydra-Matic until being named manager of sales promotion in 1966. He became supervisor of public relations and employee communications in March 1967 and in August 1969 was named director of public relations.

Lynch is a member of the board of directors of Junior Achievement of Southeastern Michigan, a member of the board of directors of the Plymouth Community Fund and Michigan United Way, and a member of the capital advisory committee for the Wolverine Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

He was the recipient of the distinguished service award of the Ypsilanti Chamber in 1976. Before being elected as vice president of the Chamber's commerce division, Lynch served continuously as chairman of the visitors and convention bureau. He will be formally installed at the Chamber's annual meeting May 8.

Balconi encouraged by early track showing

Rocks blast Allen Park

By BRAD EMONS

It was only the first meet, but Plymouth Salem coach Gary Balconi had reason to smile.

His track team was impressive Wednesday afternoon in defeating Allen Park in a Suburban Eight League meet, 92-35.

It marked the return of Allen Park to league competition. Because of a millage defeat, fall and winter sports schedules had been canceled.

Balconi was encouraged by the team's early showing, especially in the field events where junior Bob Pittaway, who won the regional last year, threw a personal best of 160 feet in the discus.

"He's throwing very well," said Balconi. "He's legit. Bob did circle work all winter in his basement. He's done at least 5,000 repetitions."

Pittaway's throw was noteworthy because Livonia Bentley's Mike Hammond won the state crown last year with a toss of 161-5. The Salem junior just missed the school record by eight inches held by Bob Dasher.

Another good showing in the field events were turned in by high jumpers Rob Neu and Scott Fuller, a sophomore. Both cleared 6-2 with Neu, a senior, taking first place on fewer misses. Fuller beat his personal best by three inches.

NEU WON the long jump, too, leaping 18-7. Teammate Young-Hyo Cho took third (17-5¼).

Senior tri-captain John Froozan won the shot put and took second in the discus (134-5). Salem's Chris Karl took third in the shot.

Salem swept the pole vault with junior David Skone clearing 12-0. Mike Perkowski (11-6) and Len Czupski took second and third respectively.

"I thought the highlights of the meet were the field events," said Balconi. "It was definitely a positive performance all the way around. It was a start and we'll know where we're at."

Tri-captain Greg Lipka won the 100-yard dash for Salem with a respectable 10.7. Junior Leigh Langkabel took the 220-yard dash in 24.0, despite being saddled with a sore ankle.

The Rocks won two of three relays.

In the final race, Chris Kopeck, a transfer from Southfield who won the 880-yard run (2:13.1), teamed up with Mark Ross, Jeff Haertel and Steve Schafer to win the mile relay with a time of 3:53.0.

Lipka, Craig Stack, Pittaway and Neu combined to take with 440-yard relay with a time of 46.8.

Salem also swept the two mile with Frank Brosnan, a freshman, finishing first (11:28.0). Teammates Tom Pettroff and John Bevelheimer, both sophomores, placed second and third respectively.

Schafer, a junior, and Mike Sharp finished one-two in the 330-yard low hurdles. Senior Phil Anderson won the 120-yard highs with ease (16.9) with Fuller grabbing second.

In the 440-yard run, Pat Tortorra was first (55.9) for Salem, with teammate Mike McBride second (56.6).

The Rocks return to action at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 15, at Redford Union.

Chief track coach looks for Western 6 improvement

Bolstered by a solid group of distance runners, coach Mike Spitz predicts better days are ahead for Plymouth Canton boys' track.

More than 50 candidates turned out this spring for track, the most ever in the school's history.

"We should be stronger," he said. "There are more people involved. There is always room for improvement, but the guys have worked hard on their own.

"We're not real deep, but we have a decent guy in every event. Our distance group is the team's strength."

Although Canton won just one dual meet last season, Spitz is optimistic because the Chiefs performed well last fall in cross country.

Leading the distance running corps are veterans Dan Inloes, Steve West, Scott Hand, Jack Pacente and Barron Smith — all juniors. Another junior, Mike Talaga, is questionable this season because of an injury.

Other distance runners include Dan Henry, Kevin McFarland and Joe Kacic. George Kacic, a freshman, is another distance threat.

The team's top individual point producer last season, senior Dan McGlinn, returns. His best event is the 330-yard low hurdles, where he went undefeated in dual meets and placed second in the Western Six League and Class A regional, qualifying him for the state meet.

"DANNY WILL run just about everything for us," said Spitz. "He'll go where we need him."

McGlinn, who will also see action as a sprinter, joined by senior vet John Tarr, who is also a long jumper. Other sprinters include juniors Mark Kowalczyk, Mike Knierim, Dan Malin, Scott Brookhowse and Rob Fleischer. Brian Rogers, a sophomore, also figures into the sprint plans.

Canton will be strong in the 120-yard high and 330-yard low hurdles with senior Mike Swisher returning to give support. Tom Fornier and Rob Reed, both seniors, will see plenty of action, as will freshman Butch Steele.

Senior Phil Simon, Rogers, Fleischer, and juniors Dan Simmons and Jerry Miles will man the 440-yard event.

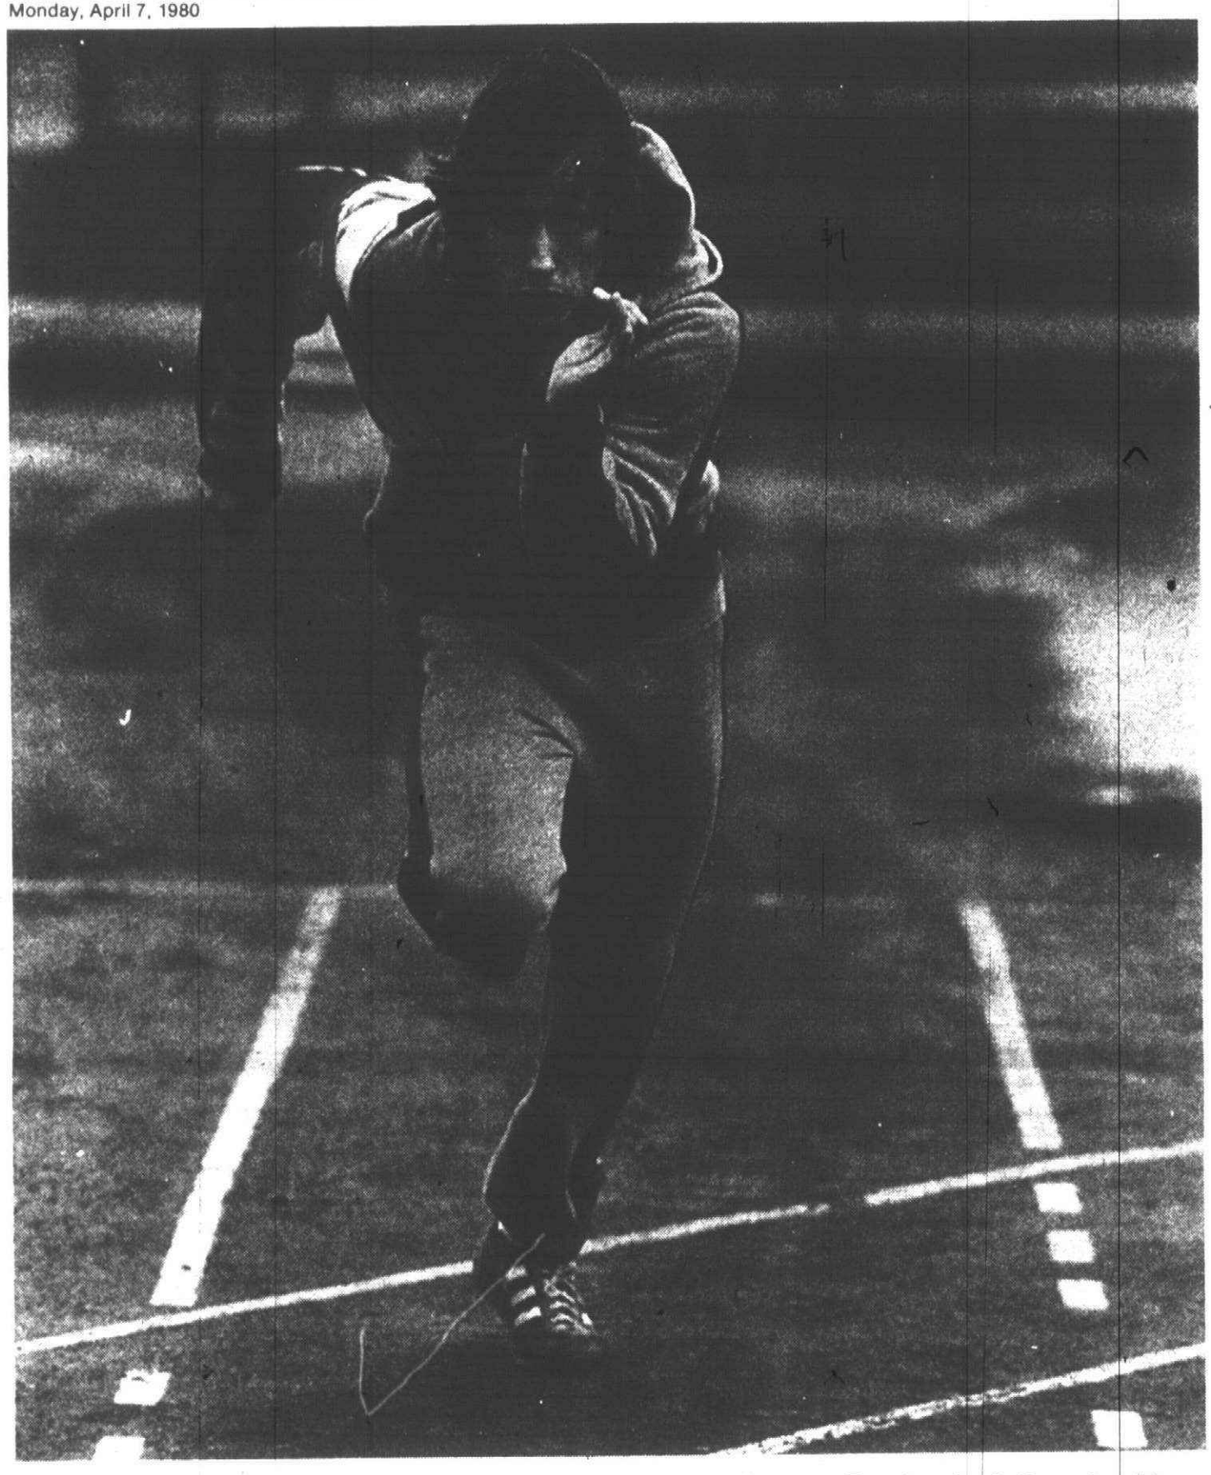

The biggest question mark facing the Chiefs is in the field events.

Senior Ted Toll, a top veteran, has been slowed by a ankle injury which kept him sidelined most of the winter. He will also throw the discus along with senior Greg Mallare and juniors Keith Vetorotis and Brookhowse.

McGlinn will perform in the high jump regularly, according to Spitz, along with the Malin brothers, Jay and Dan.

Fore! Area golf courses offer variety of challenges

By DOUG FUNKE

Even though spring has arrived, area golf courses were slow to open this season. Cool, cloudy days punctuated with rain left most links too wet to open until last weekend.

If you're ready to have another go-around after the winter respite, be prepared to pay more for greens fees this season.

Following is a roundup of courses in the area:

Hawthorne Valley Country Club, 31002 Warren, Westland, 422-3440. Nine holes only. 2,881 yards, par 35.

Chances are if you sit at a desk all day, by evening you wonder why your pep has pooped. To relax and get the circulation moving again, try this easy move — stretch arms out to the side and sway them back and forth at least 20 times.

Chiefs favored to win league softball race

Experienced club ready to go

By BRAD EMONS

Plymouth Canton softball coach Max Sommerville is banking on a wealth of experience to bring home a Western Six League crown.

The Chief girls appear to be the team to beat this season. Canton finished in second place last year with a 7-3 mark behind Farmington Harrison, which lost virtually its whole team to graduation.

Although his team has been cast as the favorite, Sommerville remains low key about the upcoming season.

"We have a good nucleus," he said. "If our pitchers keep it down to four walks or less a game, we can beat anybody."

Pitching is the key to Canton's hopes. With seven regulars returning, Canton is sound defensively and has overall good team speed.

"It's one of the keys," Sommerville said. "Our pitchers have to keep the ball in play."

Mound chores may well be divided between junior Marianne Pink, who started a few games last year, and sophomore Cindy Sovine, a tall right-hander whose "delivery is effective."

Sommerville said his two hurlers are not strikeout pitchers.

"That's why we have to keep it down to four walks or less."

Pink and Sovine have ample support from their teammates.

FIRST BASEMAN Cindy Stevens, who hit .500 last year and led the team in RBI's and extra base hits, returns as the team's cleanup hitter. She was a first team All-Observer and All-Western Six League choice last season.

Senior Pam Schipani will handle the pitching staff behind the plate. She hit .484 last spring and was an All-Western Six League pick and made second team All-Observer.

"Pam has improved 80 percent," said Sommerville. "Her throws are getting more accurate to the bases. She's really getting consistent."

Canton's double play combination remains intact with the return of senior Vicky Cavallaro and junior Joni Sommerville. The two veterans will interchange this year at the shortstop and second base positions.

Cavallaro hit .344 last year after a slow start. She is one of the team's best base stealers, and was a first team All-Observer pick. Sommerville led Canton in batting as a sophomore (.513) and is solid with the glove.

Senior Marlene McKinley did not start last year but appears to have the inside track on the third base spot. Blessed with a strong arm, McKinley will be pushed by junior Barb Rupprecht.

Returning to left field will be senior Jean Krashovetz, who gives Canton a lift defensively with a cannon-like arm. Center field is in good hands with senior Cathy Campbell and sophomore Vicki Skeen.

RIGHT FIELD will be contested this spring between junior righthander Julie Stratton, senior Janet Nostrant and junior Sandy Shaw.

Pam Schipani

"We have added experience because we played as a team together in the Livonia League," said Sommerville. "Overall we have excellent team speed and are capable of bunting.

"We'd like to bunt. In a tight game, we could do anything."

Canton's league opponents better be prepared.

Salem runs by Jaguars

The Plymouth Salem girls' track team equaled what they had done all last season in one meet Wednesday afternoon.

Salem, 1-7 in dual meets a year ago, opened its 1980 dual schedule with a convincing 97-26 Suburban Eight League win over Allen Park.

Coach Scott Kurtz may have his best team in four years. The Rock girls were impressive in all events.

"For the first meet I thought it was fantastic," he said. "I'm really proud because they all went out and gave good performances. This is the best effort I've seen."

Sophomore Ruth Sample showed her prowess for Salem by winning the 880-yard (2:41.0) and mile (5:52.0) runs.

A week ago Saturday she scored all four Salem points in the Ferris State Relays with a fourth-place finish in the two-mile (12:15).

"That was an excellent time for Ruth," remarked Kurtz. "It was very good for indoors."

Ann Meixner, a senior, won the 110 and 220-yard hurdles events and was a member of the winning 880-yard relay team that posted a time of 1:59.7. She was joined by Carol Lindsay, Judy Davis and Janene Gray.

Salem also captured the 440 and mile relays.

Beth Delbeke, Liz Carlson, Kara Lewis and Davis combined to win the 440-yard event with a time of 57.0.

MEIXNER, Lori Grissom, Lindsay and sophomore Linda Lybarger teamed up to captured the mile relay with a clocking of 4:30.

"This is the first time we've won all three relays," Kurtz said. "That was a real good time in the mile relay."

Salem swept the high jump with Diane Perpich leaping 5-0 to claim first place. Cindy McSurely and Gray tied for second at 4-8 each.

Lybarger won both the 220-yard dash (29.0) and 440-yard run (1:04.8). She also took third in the long jump with a leap of 13-5½.

Other Salem individual firsts were recorded by Carin Ford, shot put, 32-5; and Pam Hodge, two mile run, 14:17.

Second-place Rock finishes were recorded by Lewis, 100-yard dash, 13.0; Grissom, 440, 1:09.0; Liza Miyazaki, shot put, 25-3; Lindsay, 220-yard lows, 34.9.

Taking third-place spots were Marcie Granger, mile, 6:42.0; Rita Vitale, 100, 14.1; McSurely, 220-yard lows, 35.3; Grissom, 880, 2:48.2; Lewis, 220, 29.5; Cheri Muneo, two mile, 15:58.

Cruisers set 4 league tank marks

Chelsea came away with first-place honors recently in the Super Six League youth swim championships held at Plymouth Salem's pool.

The league champs totaled 1,865½ points. The Plymouth-Canton Cruisers, who hosted the meet, finished fourth with 1,117. Milan and Ypsilanti grabbed second and third, respectively, with 1,502½ and 1,143 points.

Plymouth-Canton broke four league marks.

In the girls' 8 and under 100-yard medley relay, Jennifer Anderson, Erin Olson, Maria Wordhouse and Katie Vesnaugh combined to set a new standard with a time of 1:19.53.

Scott Swartzwelter, competing in the boys 8 and under 50-yard freestyle, broke the league mark with a clocking of 34.08.

Competing in the girls 9-10 age category, Debbie Kelley of Plymouth-Canton set a league mark in the 50-yard backstroke with a time of 39.2. Olson set another mark with a time of 19.67 in the 25-yard backstroke. She also won the 25-yard butterfly.

The boys 8 and under 100-yard medley relay squad of Swartzwelter, Robbie Shimmel, Chris Elliott and Jimmy Gallagher placed first with a clocking of 1:19.17. Swartzwelter came back to grab second place in the 25-yard freestyle (15.82) with Gallagher taking third (16.99).

Elliott came through with a first-place finish in the boys 8 and under 25-yard backstroke (20.28). Shimmel took third (21.4). Elliott also won the 25-yard breaststroke (22.1).

PLYMOUTH-CANTON'S Bob Bowling, competing in the boys 13-14 age division, captured the 50-yard freestyle in 25.3.

Teammate Tim Collins, competing in the same age group, garnered first in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 1:07.1.

The team of Kara Stella, Kim Vesnaugh, Kathy Kennedy and Cindy Elliott combined to win the 200-yard freestyle relay for girls 11-12. The foursome posted a time of 2:14.3.

Individual second-place finishers for the Cruisers included Anderson, 25-yard backstroke, girls eight and under, 21.91; Jim Casler, 50-yard backstroke, boys 11-12, 35.3; Beth Scheafbauer, 50-yard backstroke, girls 11-12, 37.5; Vesnaugh, 25-yard freestyle, girls eight and under, 17.92; Casler, 25-yard freestyle, boys 11-12, 28.72; Kennedy, 50-yard freestyle, girls 11-12, 29.94.

Individual third-place finishers for Plymouth-Canton included Cindy Elliott, 100-yard individual medley, 1:18.7; Julie Riemenschnieder, 100-yard backstroke, 1:18.0.

Gaining fourth-place spots were Paul Swartzinski, 100-yard IM, boys 11-12, 1:21.7; Vesnaugh, 50-yard freestyle, girls eight and under, 39.77; Sue Bonnett, 50-yard freestyle, girls 9-10, 45.92; Steve Swartzinski, 100-yard freestyle, boys 13-14, 1:22.9; Kim Elliott, 100-yard freestyle, girls 13-14, 1:22.9; Michelle Stackpoole, 50-yard butterfly, girls 9-10, 39.3.

CHUCK EUDY, Bowling, Swartzinski and Collins claimed second spot in the 200-yard freestyle relay for boys 13-14 (2:12.4).

Plymouth-Canton's Kellie Adamczak, Shimmel, Julie Lockwood and Maria Wordhouse also placed second in the 100-yard freestyle relay (1:28.4) for girls eight and under.

Sue Schendel, Tracy Meszaros, Kelley and Stackpoole gained second place in the 200-yard freestyle relay for girls 9-10 (2:22.4).

Visit the Capp Homes Open House this weekend...
And discover how your finishing touch can give you more home for the money!
Since 1946, CAPP has made quality, custom-built housing affordable for more than 60,000 families. And the reason is our unique, "Finish-It-Yourself House" concept.
CAPP Homes are not pre-fab or modular. We build our homes the traditional beam-by-beam way, with the finest materials, on the lot and foundation you provide. When our carpenters leave, your custom-designed home is fully enclosed and ready for you to finish. Or, you can act as your own general contractor, hiring local help, and still come out money ahead. Either way, you'll get a home that is uniquely yours—one that will be worth far more than you paid for it the day you move in.
But don't take our word for it. Come on out this weekend and see for yourself. Look at the quality of the construction material. Feel the wood . . . knock on the doors . . . slide open the windows.
Most of all, talk to the buyers of this home. They'll be here to answer any questions . . . while they work. You'll see them actually finishing their home. Folks just like yourself. We think you'll discover how you, too, can save money on a CAPP Home by "finishing-it-yourself".
CAPP Homes. Your finishing touch means quality . . . and savings . . . for you.
Come on out. We'll be there rain or shine.

The valve shall be operable without the use of tools and shall be located adjacent to, and outside of each appliance upstream of a union or connector. The shut off valve shall be in addition to any shut off valve that may be located on the appliance.
M-601.2.6. Concealed piping.
M-601.2.6.1. Piping in partitions:
Concealed gas piping shall be located in hollow rather than solid partitions. Tubing shall not be run inside walls or partitions unless protected against physical damage.
M-601.2.6.2. Piping in floors:
(a) Except as provided in Section M-601.2.6.2(b), gas piping in solid floors, such as concrete, shall be laid in channels in the floor suitably covered to permit access to the piping with a minimum of damage to the building. When piping in floor channels may be exposed to excessive moisture or corrosive substances, it shall be suitably protected.
(b) When approved by the department and acceptable to the serving gas supplier, gas piping may be embedded in concrete floor slabs constructed with portland cement. Piping shall be surrounded with a minimum of one and half inches of concrete and shall not be in physical contact with other metallic structures, such as reinforcing rods or electrically neutral conductors. When piping may be subject to corrosion at the point of entry into the concrete slab, it shall be suitably protected from corrosion. Piping shall not be embedded in concrete slabs containing quick-set additives or cinder aggregate.

L. R408.30957. Minimum size of gas piping.
Rule 957. Section M-604.2 of the code is amended to read as follows:
M-604.2. Remodelling:
In remodeling or extending existing house gas piping, connections shall be made only when sizes can be maintained in accordance with Section M-603.0

M. R408.30958. Leak test method for gas piping systems.
Rule 958. Section M-605.3 of the code is amended to read as follows:
M-605.3. Method:
Leaks in gas piping shall be located by applying soapy water or an approved leak detecting agent to the exterior of the piping, or by the use of a combustible gas detector. Open flames or acid shall not be used to locate leaks, nor shall water be introduced into the gas piping.

N. R408.30980. Miscellaneous gas burning appliances.
Rule 980. Sections M-625.1, M-625.3, M-625.5.3, and M-625.9 of the code areamended to read as follows:
M-625.1. Outdoor gas appliances:
All outdoor type appliances shall be installed in accordance with their listing or approval and the manufacturer's instructions.
M-625.3. Venting of outdoor appliances:
The venting requirements of Section M-715.0 need not apply to outdoor appliances unless required by the terms of listing or approval.
M-625.5.3. A gas fired infra-red heater installed as a patio heater shall be installed with clearance to combustibles in accordance with its listing. Provisions shall be made for adequate air supply for ventilation and combustion. See Section M-312.04 for other applications.
M-625.9. Gas grills, portable:
Approved gas hose may be used for connecting a portable outdoor grill. The gas hose shall not exceed 15 feet in length and shall have a gas pressure drop not exceeding 0.5 inch water column. The gas hose shall be permanently equipped with an approved quick disconnect coupling of the automatic shut off type. An excessible approved shut off valve shall be installed adjacent to the quick disconnect coupling. The gas hose and the quick disconnect coupling shall be installed between the shut off valve and grill.

Part VI. Animal doctor speaks up

Editor:

I would like to comment on a letter to the editor in the March 31 issue of your paper written by Bear of Plymouth.

First let me say that I have no argument with Bear's premise that decompression chambers should not be used for the euthanasia of animals. I agree with his suggestion that we contact the legislature and indicate our support for this legislation.

There is, I believe, a misconception in his letter that I would like to correct. I know of no veterinarian using a decompression chamber for the euthanasia of animals. I have been in practice for 24 years and I have used sodium pentobarbital or a like injectable agent for the euthanasia of animals for all of those years. No veterinarian that I know or with whom I have been associated has used this device.

Smith's Fair was a success

Editor:

Once again the Smith School has had a successful Mardi Gras. Through the concerted efforts of the parents and the PFO, this annual event was a great success. The proceeds of the Smith School Mardi Gras are put directly back into the school in the form of equipment and materials.

The generosity of our local business firms is greatly appreciated. On behalf of the Smith School parents, faculty and children, I am taking this opportunity to thank the following business firms: John Vos III, Robert Bake, William Decker, Tim Joy, Christensens, Randy Cooper, Don Massey Cadillac, Little Caesars, Hardees, Burger Chef, McDonald's, Fox Photo, Claudette's.

Laurel Furniture, Pease Paint, Audette's, Colonial Care Shop, Jerry's Bicycle Shop, Beyer Drug Store, Penniman Market, Trading Post, Green Thumb, Plymouth Book World, Cheese & Wine Barn, Emma's Restaurant, Armbruster Bootery.

Schoolcraft, OCC student papers cited

Four Schoolcraft College journalism students and three from Oakland Community College received awards at the Michigan Community College Press Association's second annual press day.

The Highland Voice, student paper at OCC's Highland Lakes campus, was voted best overall newspaper at the March 22 conference in Saginaw.

Brian Appel, of Livonia, a photographer with the Schoolcraft student paper, the Campus Globe, won first place for best news photo.

Other award winners from the Schoolcraft Campus Globe included Rick Asher of Canton, second place for best editorial and second place for best sports story; Darlene Pierson of Westland, second place for best feature story; and Tom Bonner of Garden City, second place for best feature column.

AMONG OCC students cited were Kevin Redding of the Auburn Hills campus newspaper for best editorial cartoon; Terry Pike of the Highland Lakes paper, third place for best news story, and Mark Sesvold of Highland Lakes, third place for best photo essay.

Editorial judges were Barbara Doerr and Jeffrey Hadden, both reporters for The Detroit News. Photo judges were William Gustafson and Clifford James of the Saginaw News.

stJOE'S
third annual RADIO-THON AUCTION
APRIL 11, 12, and 13, 1980
FOR THE BENEFIT OF
ST. JOSEPH MERCY HOSPITAL

(A unit of Catherine McCauley Health Center)
This year, St. Joe's will use the proceeds from the Radio-Thon Auction to launch a new program for elderly patients called the "Continuity of Care Service."

Compared to the younger population, those over 65 spend three times as much on health care and use hospitals like St. Joe's five times as often.

But forget statistics for a moment. If you have watched a close friend or relative cope with problems that aging inevitably brings, or experienced such problems yourself, you can appreciate the help and understanding which the elderly require.

The later years can be as happy and active as any other time of life. However, when an elderly person arrives at St. Joe's and faces what may well be a threatening and confusing experience, the Continuity of Care Service will be ready to help.

stJOE'S CARES

THE AUCTION...
A Community Project for a Community Hospital

Because the people of this community believe in the basic mission of St. Joe's, providing compassionate, first-rate health care, well over one hundred local residents volunteer their time, talent, and energy to make the Auction work. Volunteers solicit merchants who donate items which the community purchases on air time donated by WAAM (1600 AM). And people representing all walks of life arrange exciting and unusual service gifts, such as a ride in the Amtrak engine as the engineer's guest.

This tremendous effort, which culminates in three busy fun-filled days in April, will launch the Continuity of Care Service for elderly persons at St. Joe's, a program iniated by the Catherine McAuley Health Center (Catherine McAuley founded the Sisters of Mercy in Ireland in 1831).

Founded last July, the Center consolidates the management of St. Joe's and Mercywood Neuro--Psychiatric Hospital, and thus enhances their delivery of acute health care. More than that, however, it will lead these hospitals and its newest unit, the Maple Medical Center, into the future. CMHC is a creative attempt to break away from the "crisis-to--crisis" health planning typical of the recent past in this country.

What is Continuity of Care?
Help from Hospital to Home

Specifically, this service will be provided by new nursing and social service staff trained in the field of elderly care. They will assess a patient's needs with the medical staff; counsel both the patient and family; effect a smooth transition from hospital to private home, nursing home, or other setting; and assist the patient in finding and using other community resources for the elderly. A member of the Continuity of Care Service will also follow up to assure that the elderly person is making a satisfactory adjustment.

FARAWAY PLACES INSPIRE BUDGET MEALS

Faraway places and exotic dishes conjure visions of expensive ingredients and complicated preparations. Many so-called exotic recipes are prepared with rice and use economical, everyday meats, fish and poultry, making them actually budget-wise meals.

In fact, rice is one of the few truly international foods — a food which harmonizes with the flavors of cuisines from around the world. Some of today's recipes call for a rice product that has undergone the "parboiling" or "converting" process. The rice cooks up with a superior texture and taste and never becomes sticky or lumpy, even when preheated. One cup produces almost four cups of cooked rice whereas a cup of uncooked ordinary long grain rice makes only three cups of the cooked product.

Your "cook's tour" of food can take you to glamorous islands and back. And although they may seem like company fare, their economy makes them practical for family dining.

The Warming Oven

by Emily Watson

Richard II loved to eat. Circa 1390, the English king, who squelched the Peasants' Revolt, requested that a cook book be written to preserve some of his favorite recipes.

The recipe for "Daryols" included the following advice: "Take creme of cow mylke, (or) almandes. Do there to add eggs with sugar, safron and salt. Medle it. Do it in a coffyn of two ynche depe; Bake it well."

Transcribing such old English recipes to modern terms and quantities was the task required to produce "Dining with Caesars and Kings," a series of two illustrated lectures planned this weekend at the Matthaei Botanical Gardens.

A modern version of the Daryols will be one of the many old English dishes prepared for the second lecture. "A Gastronomic Tour of Richard II's Kitchen and Great Hall" will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, April 12 in the auditorium of the Botanical Gardens, 1800 North Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor.

"Dining in Imperial Rome," at 8 p.m. Friday, April 11, has recipes which required even more research. They had to be translated from the Latin. Lecturer will be Dr. Lorna J. Sass, a well-known historical cookery consultant and author. The lectures are sponsored by Sandy Hicks and her herb study group at the gardens. In fact, members of the club are preparing the foods which can be sampled after the lectures.

Proceeds from the benefit will go to the new herb garden at the University of Michigan Botanical Gardens. Admission is $10 to both lectures or $6 for one. For ticket information call the Gardens, 764-1168, or Sandy Hicks, 769-9414.

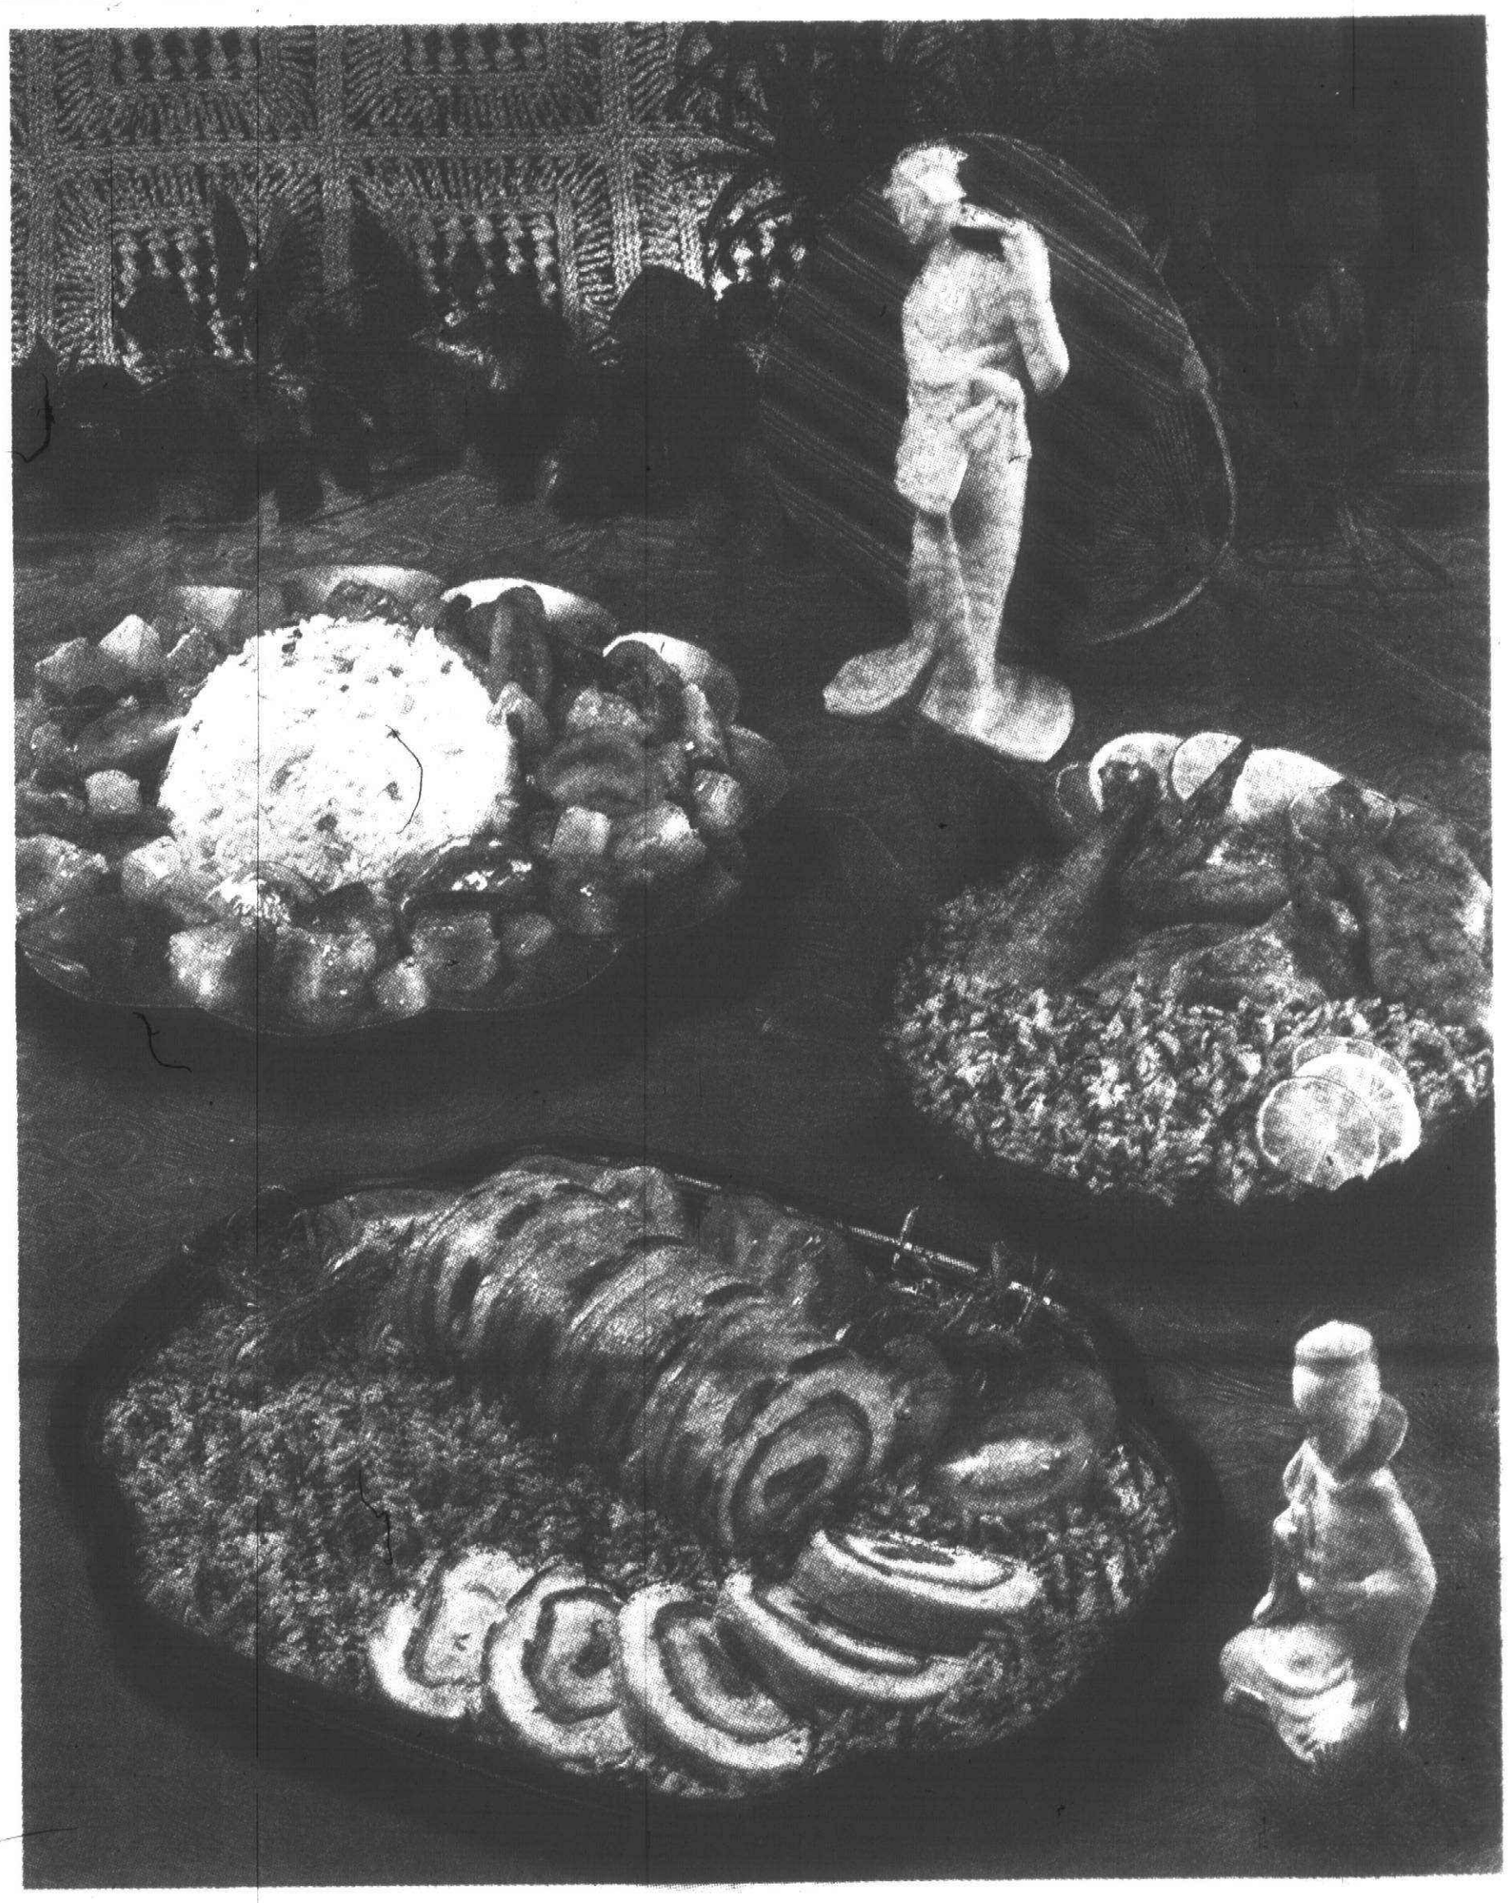

The Daryols were the medieval predecessors of Richmond Maids of Honor, a delicious custard tart. The following is the recipe followed by the Herb Study Group women who prepared the Roman and medieval feasts:

RICHMOND MAIDS OF HONOR

Puff or pie pastry
¼ pound cream cheese
5 tbsp. light cream
3 eggs
½ cup sugar
½ cup hot milk
1 tsp. gelatin
½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup heavy cream, whipped
⅛ tsp. saffron

Make sufficient puff or pie pastry for 12 fluted tart pans or use muffin tins. Roll out to ⅛-inch thickness and cut into rounds to fit the pans. Pierce with a fork to prevent air bubbles, and bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes or until delicately browned.

Filling: Blend the cream cheese with the light cream to a fluffy consistency. Set aside. In the top of a double boiler over simmering water, beat the sugar and the eggs together until creamy. Quickly add the hot milk, and stir until the mixture begins to thicken. Remove from heat. Dissolve gelatin in one tablespoon cold water and add to the hot custard. Add vanilla. Stir well. When custard is cool, add it to the cream cheese mixture. Last, fold in the whipped cream. Fill the baked tart shells (no further baking is necessary). Garnish with slivered almonds.

The Sicilian Chicken Roll and Spinach Rice, Island Lime Chicken and the Tahitian Fish Fry are exotic but low-cost meals.

TAHITIAN FISH FRY

2 packages (1 pound each) frozen fish fillets
2-1/2 cups water
1 cup Rice
7 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
3/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 teaspoons paprika
2 eggs, beaten
1/4 to 1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/4 cup toasted slivered almonds
1/4 cup sliced green onions including tops
1-1/4 cups sugar
1 can (8 ounces) pineapple chunks in natural juice
3/4 cup vinegar
1/3 cup ketchup
2 teaspoons molasses or brown sugar
1 green pepper, cut into short, thin strips
1 tomato, cut into wedges

Let fish stand at room temperature until slightly defrosted, 15 to 20 minutes. Bring water to a boil in medium saucepan. Stir in rice, 1 teaspoon of the salt and the butter. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 20 minutes.

While rice is cooking, prepare fish. Cut slightly defrosted fish into 1-inch squares. Pat dry with paper toweling. Combine 3/4 cup of the cornstarch, 2 teaspoons of the salt and the paprika in small bowl. Lightly coat fish squares with egg, then dip in cornstarch mixture. Fry in 1/4 cup hot oil (375°F.) in 10-inch skillet until brown on all sides, adding more oil if necessary. Drain on paper toweling; keep warm. Remove rice from heat. Stir in almonds and green onions. Let stand covered until all water is absorbed, about 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, drain oil from skillet; wipe with paper toweling. Combine sugar, the remaining 4 teaspoons salt and 1 tablespoon cornstarch in skillet. Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Add pineapple juice, vinegar, ketchup and molasses to mixture in skillet. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Add green pepper and pineapple chunks; reduce heat. Simmer until green pepper is crisp tender, 2 to 3 minutes. Gently stir in tomato.

Pack rice into 4-cup bowl; unmold in center of serving platter. Arrange fish around rice. Spoon green pepper, pineapple and tomato over fish; drizzle with about 1/2 cup sauce. Pass remaining sauce. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

BRAZILIAN RICE RAGOUT

1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 pound mild Italian sausage, cut into 2-inch pieces
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
6 pork chops
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 can (28 ounces) tomatoes
1/2 cup red wine
2-3/4 cups water
1 cup Rice
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 can (about 16 ounces) kidney or black beans, drained and rinsed
1 can (4 ounces) chopped, mild green chilies
2 teaspoons cornstarch

Brown onion, garlic and sausage in oil in 12-inch skillet over medium heat. Season pork chops with 1 teaspoon of the salt and the pepper; add chops to skillet and brown on both sides. Drain fat. Drain tomatoes, reserving 3/4 cup liquid. Add tomatoes, 3/4 cup tomato liquid and wine to skillet. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer until pork chops are tender, about 1 hour.

While meat is cooking, prepare rice. Bring 2-1/2 cups water to a boil in medium saucepan. Stir in rice, butter and the remaining 1 teaspoon salt. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Stir in beans and chilies. Remove from heat. Let stand covered until all liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Spoon rice onto large serving platter. Remove pork chops and sausage from skillet and arrange on rice. Dissolve cornstarch in remaining 1/4 cup water; stir into pan drippings. Cook and stir over medium heat until slightly thickened; pour over meat. Makes 6 servings.

JAMAICAN HAM AND WILD RICE

2-1/2 cups water
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 package (6 ounces) Long Grain & Wild Rice
1-1/2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 teaspoons cornstarch
1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
1/4 cup light rum
1 can (8 ounces) pineapple chunks in natural juice
1 green pepper, cut into 3/4-inch squares
2 cups 3/4-inch cubes of cooked (or canned) ham
1/3 cup sliced green onions with tops

Measure water and butter into medium saucepan. Stir in contents of rice and seasoning packets. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until all water is absorbed, about 25 minutes.

While rice is cooking, combine sugar, cornstarch and cloves in medium saucepan; stir in rum. Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Add enough water to juice to measure 3/4 cup; add pineapple liquid to rum mixture, stirring until smooth. Add pineapple chunks, green pepper and ham to rum mixture; let stand 10 to 15 minutes. Place over low heat. Cook, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened. Stir onions into cooked rice; spoon ham mixture over rice. Makes 6 servings.

SICILIAN CHICKEN ROLL AND SPINACH RICE

4 whole chicken breasts, boned and skinned
1/4 pound salami, thinly sliced
1/2 pound cooked ham, thinly sliced
5 slices bacon
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon olive or vegetable oil
2-1/2 cups water
1 cup Rice
1 teaspoon salt
1 package (10 ounces) frozen creamed spinach, thawed

Arrange chicken, slightly overlapping pieces, to form a rectangle about 12 x 10 inches. Pound overlapping edges to seal chicken pieces together. Arrange salami and ham over chicken. Roll up jelly roll-fashion, beginning along shorter side of rectangle. Wrap bacon around roll. Wrap securely in large sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil. Pierce foil in several places with fork. Place in small roasting pan. Add water to pan to come 3/4 of the way up the side of the roll. Place over medium heat and bring liquid to a boil; reduce heat. Simmer uncovered 1-1/2 hours.

During last half hour chicken roll is cooking, prepare rice. Saute garlic in oil in medium saucepan. Add water and bring to a boil. Stir in rice and salt. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Stir in creamed spinach. Remove from heat. Let stand covered until ready to serve.

Remove chicken roll from water; remove foil. Broil 4 inches from heat until bacon on top browns, about 10 minutes. Place chicken roll on platter; surround with rice. Makes 6 servings.

ISLAND LIME CHICKEN AND RICE

1 frying chicken, cut up
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon grated lime peel
2 tablespoons lime juice
2 tablespoons light rum
2-1/2 cups chicken broth
1 package (6 ounces) Long Grain & Wild Rice
1/2 cup coarsely chopped, salted cashews

Brown chicken well in oil in 12-inch skillet over medium heat; season with salt and pepper. Combine corn syrup, lime peel, lime juice and rum; pour over chicken. Reduce heat, cover and cook over low heat until chicken is tender, 20 to 25 minutes. While chicken is cooking, bring chicken broth to a boil in medium saucepan. Stir in contents of rice and seasoning packets. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until all liquid is absorbed, about 25 minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in cashews.

Remove chicken from skillet; keep warm. Remove excess fat from pan drippings with paper toweling. Bring pan drippings to a boil. Cook, stirring constantly, until reduced to glaze consistency. Arrange rice and chicken on serving platter. Spoon glaze over chicken. Makes 6 servings.

A Question of Taste

By Hilary Keating Callaghan

Those Easter eggs are a bonus

Did you say you have a few hard-boiled eggs lying around?

Why is that, faced with a surfeit of any food, the imagination fails? It must be a sign of fallen human nature that the appeal of any item is in inverse proportion to its supply.

Easter Monday brings visions of a stretch of lunches consisting of that dieter's staple, the naked, unadorned hard-boiled egg.

Perhaps if the cook is a trifle more innovative and can afford the extra calories, this can become a series of egg salad sandwiches. If a party or a picnic is in the offing, the surplus can even turn up as a platter of deviled eggs.

Although all of these uses have something to recommend them, you might save at least a few of the extra eggs to use as a part of more interesting constructions. The following three recipes feature the egg in a variety of interesting combinations.

THE SPINACH Ring shares the visual interest common to all molded foods, an interest heightened by the contrast between the dark green of the spinach and the white and gold of the creamed eggs which fill the ring.

This delicately-flavored dish is attractive enough to serve as a special luncheon dish — perhaps for a spring shower, garnished with cherry tomatoes for an extra spark of color and accompanied by hot, buttered rolls.

The Indian Egg and Vegetable Stew is for those times when you have a craving for something spicier and more exotic. A hot dish like this is especially appealing on a cold, blustery spring day. You might also try it again this summer, however.

Hot, spicy foods are staples in the diets of those who live in hot climates. The sensation of heat created by eating these foods is actually supposed to be a release of heat from the body, cooling it.

ANOTHER EGG dish that can be enjoyed now and included later in your summer menus is Eggs in a Basket. This colorful dish features egg salad served in a hot bread basket spread with cheese. Although, ideally, the bread should be homemade, a good bakery loaf would also work well. A purchased loaf, coupled with the convenience of the cheese spread, would make this a quick meal, easy on the cook without sacrificing nutrition or taste.

Incidentally, although Easter eggs pose no problem, undecorated hard-boiled eggs occasionally become mixed in with raw eggs. Some cooks circumvent this by marking the shells of the cooked eggs with a pen.

If a mix-up does occur, however, a simple test should help distinguish raw from cooked eggs. Place each egg on a flat surface and spin gently. A raw egg will spin in approximately one spot. A cooked egg will spin in a more haphazard style.

BAKED SPINACH RING WITH CREAMED EGGS

2 pkg. (10 oz. each) frozen spinach
3 eggs, beaten
½ cup milk
¼ cup margarine, melted
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. pepper
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
Creamed eggs (recipe follows)

Cook spinach, drain well. Chop finely or puree in blender. Combine all ingredients except the Creamed Eggs. Pour into a well-greased 6-cup ring mold. Set the mold into another pan and place in pre-heated 350 degree oven. Pour hot water into the pan to a depth of about 1 inch. Bake for 50 minutes. Unmold onto hot platter. Fill the center with Creamed Eggs. Makes 6 servings. Good with toasted corn bread.

CREAMED EGGS

3 tbsp. margarine
3 tbsp. flour
1¾ cups milk
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Dash of hot pepper sauce
1 pimento, chopped
6 hard-boiled eggs, diced
Salt to taste

Melt the margarine in a saucepan, blend in the flour and cook, stirring, 1 minute. Gradually add the milk, stirring constantly, and cook until thickened and smooth. Stir in the remaining ingredients and heat through.

INDIAN EGG AND VEGETABLE STEW

3 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 large onion, chopped
1 tsp. ground coriander
½ tsp. chili powder
Pinch of tumeric
1 tsp. chopped chives
1 tsp. chopped parsley
1 large carrot, sliced
½ cup green beans, diced
1 cup shredded cabbage
1 medium potato, diced
2 tbsp. tomato paste
1 tsp. salt
1 cup boiling water
4 hard-boiled eggs, halved

Sautee onion in the hot oil for 5 minutes. Add the coriander, chili powder, tumeric, chives and parsley; continue cooking for 1 minute. Add the vegetables, tomato paste, salt and boiling water. Cover and cook gently until the vegetables are tender, about 30 minutes. Add the eggs and simmer 5 minutes more. Makes 4 servings.

EGGS IN A BASKET

6 hard-boiled eggs, coarsely chopped
1 cup cherry tomatoes, halved
1 small green pepper, cut into large pieces

1. Blend first 6 ingredients in a small bowl; chill 30 minutes to blend flavors.

2. Cut a circle around the bread, 1 inch from the edge. Lift off the top and scoop out the bread, leaving a 1-inch shell. Place on a cookie sheet.

3. Blend cheese and butter until smooth. Spread evenly over the inside of the loaf.

4. Bake in a preheated 400 degree oven 10 minutes.

5. Combine eggs, tomatoes and green pepper; fold in the dressing. Spoon into the bread basket. Cut into thick wedges to serve. Makes 4 servings.

Crusty loaves of parsley bread will be served after "A Gastronomic Tour of Richard II's Kitchen and Great Hall."

Avis Waldecker tapped a loaf of parsley bread to test for doneness as Grace Van Dyke removed a round loaf from the oven. The Plymouth women are members of the Herb Study Group which is sponsoring the "Dining with Caesar and Kings" series. (Staff photos by Gary Caskey)

Gastronomical journeys back to Roman times go

"Dining with Caesar and Kings," a two-part gastronomic tour and lecture, will be presented by the Herb Study Group at the Matthaei Botanical Gardens, 1800 N. Dixboro Road in Ann Arbor. The first, "Dining in Imperial Rome," will be at 8 p.m. Friday, April 11. "A Gastronomic Tour of Richard II's Kitchen and Great Hall" will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, April 12.

Lorna J. Sass, Ph.D., historical cookery consultant and lecturer for the presentations, says, "It would appear that the goal of Roman cooks was to keep the diner puzzled about what he was eating." Translating the old Roman recipes revealed much about the Roman's tastes and cooking habits.

The Roman banquet table will feature foods enjoyed by the Romans from the first through fourth centuries A.D. As appropriate background music is provided by a harpist in period costume, persons attending the lectures will sample an array of taste treats. Recipes for all foods served will be available at a nominal cost.

The Romans loved their sauces. Every dish was accompanied by a sauce or sauces, some of which contained a dozen or more herbs and spices. Pepper, because of its high cost, became a mark of status and was used lavishly on almost everything, including their delicious cheesecakes, according to Sandy Hicks, herb consultant at the botanical gardens.

"BREAD, BAKED in flattish, round loaves, was indispensible at Roman meals as it was used for mopping up sauces and other foods off the plates," she added.

"Roman enthusiasm for vegetables is reflected in the number of vegetable recipes and from the fact that Roman families even took their names from vegetables."

They also had an enormous craving for fish and seafood. Having one's own fish pond was another necessity for the very wealthy. Granular salt was not used. It was replaced by liquamen, a sauce based on salted, sun-dried fish which was mass produced and bottled for sale.

Of the many types of good wines served at Roman meals, research revealed the favorite was Mulsun,. Mulsum was made by combining their best wine with their best honey.

"It was the mandatory beverage that was served with the light or appetizer course of a meal and it is for these reasons that we have chosen to serve a mulsum punch with rose petals at our event," said Mrs. Hicks. "The Romans, of course, were great lovers and users of roses."

She said many traditional customs such as the serving of olives prepared with herbs at the end of their banquets seemed to be for the purpose of encouraging thirst and drinking.

"In keeping with the Roman belief that mint aroused appetites, we shall strew mint on the floor and rub down the banquet table with it - both customs of Roman times.

AMONG THE ROMAN dishes prepared for the lecture and for tasting will be: coptoplacenta, melitoutta, panis alexandrinus, or, translated from the Latin - sesame bread, honey bread, cumin bread and traditional fruitcake.

Others are squash Alexandrian style, mashed bulbs or parsnips, mushrooms in mint sauce, pureed lima beans, beans with ground meat, tuna salad, peppered radishes, rustic salad, liver loaf in fish mold and honey cheese cake and wine cakes.

A group of medieval musicians in period costumes will provide background music for Saturday's lecture and tour of Richard II's kitchen and great hall.

The medieval feast table will have the traditional elaborate vessel containing salt, which in those days, was placed in the center of the table. The salt determined the seating arrangement of the guests. The honored sat above the salt while the lesser feasters sat "below the salt."

BEAUTIFUL AND delicious loaves of parsley bread which served as platters (known as trenchers) also will highlight the table. The bread was always sliced in half horizontally, with the upper crusts going to the most important and honored guests and host.

"Hence our term 'upper crust' of today, meaning privileged," explained Mrs. Hicks. Food for the series is being prepared by members of her Herb Study Group.

Irene Truesdell, Avis Waldecker and Olive Conant, Plymouth members of the study group, are baking bread for the medieval feast.

Offered for tasting will be Hippocras, wafers, and coriander comfits, which were taken at the beginning of the meal to sharpen appetites and stimulate the flow of gastric juices. Hippocras is a spiced red wine named for the Greek physician Hippocrates and his garment's sleeve. Ginger, cinnamon, pepper, grains of paradise, galingale and other spicery were mixed with the red wine and strained through a sleeve-shaped bag.

Comfits, said Mrs. Hicks, are herb seeds which most often were candied and were regarded as digestives.

Other delicacies on the medieval feast table will be elderflower cheesecake, darioles (medieval predecessor of Richmond Maids of Honor, a delicious custard tart) and Crustade Lombarde.

Grace Van Dyke, also from Plymouth and a member of the Herb Study Group, is helping bake the Elderflower Cheesecakes.

PROCEEDS FROM the lectures will benefit the new herb garden at the botanical gardens. Donation of $10 is requested for admission to both lectures. A single lecture is $6. For more information or to obtain tickets, call the gardens, 764-1168 or, Sandy Hicks, 769-9414.

Mrs. Hicks shared an example of an original recipe for Elderflower Cheesecake as compared to an updated recipe:

Elderflower cheesecake - Take and make a pie crust in a pie plate and take curds and wring out the wheys and draw them through a strainer. And put crusts in the strainer (i.e. make them into bread crumbs). Add sugar, one-third the amount of the curds, and some egg whites, and shake in blossoms of elderflower and bake it with care and send it forth in portions.

Here is the modern recipe:

ELDERFLOWER CHEESECAKE

The name "sambocade" is derived from the Latin word for elderflowers: "sambucus. The flowers add a pleasant aroma and taste, both of which are difficult to describe. Use a butter-based pie crust and serve this sweet cheesecake warm for optimum flavor and texture. If you wish to substitute fresh elderflowers, double the amount indicated. Be sure you do not collect them from roadsides as they may contain gasoline fumes.

9-inch uncooked pie pastry
4-5 tablespoons dried elderflowers
4 tbsp. heavy cream
⅓ cup sugar
½ pound farmers cheese or cottage cheese
½ pound ricotta cheese
2 tsp. dry bread crumbs
6 egg whites beaten until stiff but not dry

Bake pie shell at 425 degrees for 10 minutes. Let cool. Soak elderflowers in heavy cream for about 10 minutes. Add sugar and stir until dissolved. Push cheeses through strainer with the back of a tablespoon (or blend in blender).

Combine cheeses with elderflower-cream mixture. Add bread crumbs. Blend thoroughly. Fold in stiff egg whites. Pour into pastry crust.

Bake at 375 degrees for 50 minutes or until firm but not dry. Turn off heat and allow to cool in oven with the door open, about 15 minutes.

Sandy Hicks gathered the elderflowers and dried them last summer. All the herbs used in the Roman and medieval dishes are from her gardens.

Guild art auction

Chris Swift (left), president of the St. Neumann Church Women's Guild, and Gail Plate, chairwoman of the guild's art auction, display the grand prize. It is a print of "Winter" painted in 1976 by H. Parselle. The auction will be Friday, April 18, at the church on Warren Road at Sheldon. There will be a champagne and hors d'oeuvre preview at 8 p.m. with the auction beginning at 9. Tickets can be purchased in advance for $2.50 by calling 459-0362 or 459-1875. They will be $3 at the door. Dessert and coffee will be served after the auction. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Dear Friends:

One of the most inspiring recent disclosures of astronomers indicates that there is a great empty space in the north in the nebula of the constellation of Orion - a heavenly cavern so gigantic that the mind of man cannot comprehend it and so brilliantly beautiful that words cannot adequately describe it.

The revelations were made possible by gigantic lenses, plus long exposures of photographic plates which in turn can be further magnified. This increases the vision of man so that he is able to peer into the depths of intersteller space and get a glimpse of the vastness of infinity itself. What has been found, correlates the words of Job ... "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place" (Job 26:7). All astronomers agree that there is a huge opening in Orion which is perhaps more than 16,740,000,000,000 miles in diameter - 90,000 times as wide as the diameter of the earth's obit.

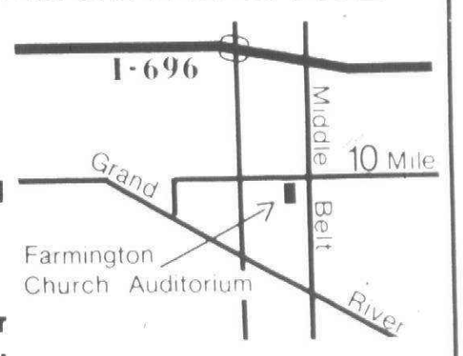

Professor Larkin of Mt. Lowe Observatory describes the magnificent photographs revealing beauty that cannot be described and luminous colors that are unlike anything on earth. The appearance is like that of light shining and glowing behind clear clean walls of ivory and pearl, studded with millions of diamonds like shining stars. The colors have a hue peculiar to the Orion and studded around the opening so that they appear as a pavement of starry sand. No wonder that astronomers say they feel as if they were in some almighty presence while scanning this part of the heavens.

Why is all this grandeur lavished upon one spot in the heavens? Read Revelation chapter 21 beginning at verse 10" and He carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the Holy Jerusalem, descending out of Heaven from God." The chapter continues to describe the beauty and glory of that eternal city. Hebrews 13:14 says, "For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come." The immense beauty...and this is the exciting part...appears to be coming closer, and even astronomers who are not religious sense something spiritual in what they see. Oh, that we might be sensitive to the signs around us impelling us to keep our lamps trimmed and burning, for the Bridegroom Cometh!!!

Paula Prentiss stars as a tough, hard-headed detective who is assigned to investigate the kidnapping of a show dog in Joseph Wambaugh's "The Black Marble."

Light romance fills screen in 'Black Marble'

After the tough, go-for-broke gut punches of previous films authored by ex-L.A. cop Joseph Wambaugh, "The Black Marble" (PG) is a surprising and largely successful change of pace.

The film is directed by Harold Becker who also directed "The Onion Field."

The main characters once again are police officers, but this time Wambaugh has opted for light comedy and an offbeat romance.

Both are present in the ill-matched pairing of sergeants Natalie Zimmerman (Paula Prentiss) and A.M. Valnikov (Robert Foxworth).

Zimmerman is a realistic, no-nonsense lady cop who can gun you down with words. She is outspoken, practical-minded and abrasive. To her dismay, she is partnered with Valnikov, a drunk and a real loser, the one who always gets "the black marble."

VALNIKOV IS an old world romantic, a moody Slav who loves gypsy music, tea from glasses and tradition. He and Zimmerman create a contrapuntal interplay of personality and physical type. She's lean, dark and tense; he's cuddly, light and loose. Together they spark an energy-producing combo that keeps things humming.

The case they are working on it itself offbeat - a dognapping. The mythic forces of good and evil that powered Wambaugh's earlier work are less potent here, kept in check and in balance in situations that contain both the ordinary and the ridiculous.

Harry Dean Stanton takes honors for his characterization of the repulsive yet comical dognapper, Philo Skinner. Skinner is a chain-smoking dog trainer, "the terrier king," who steals a prize schnauzer to pay off a gambling debt. Poor Skinner bungles as often as he succeeds.

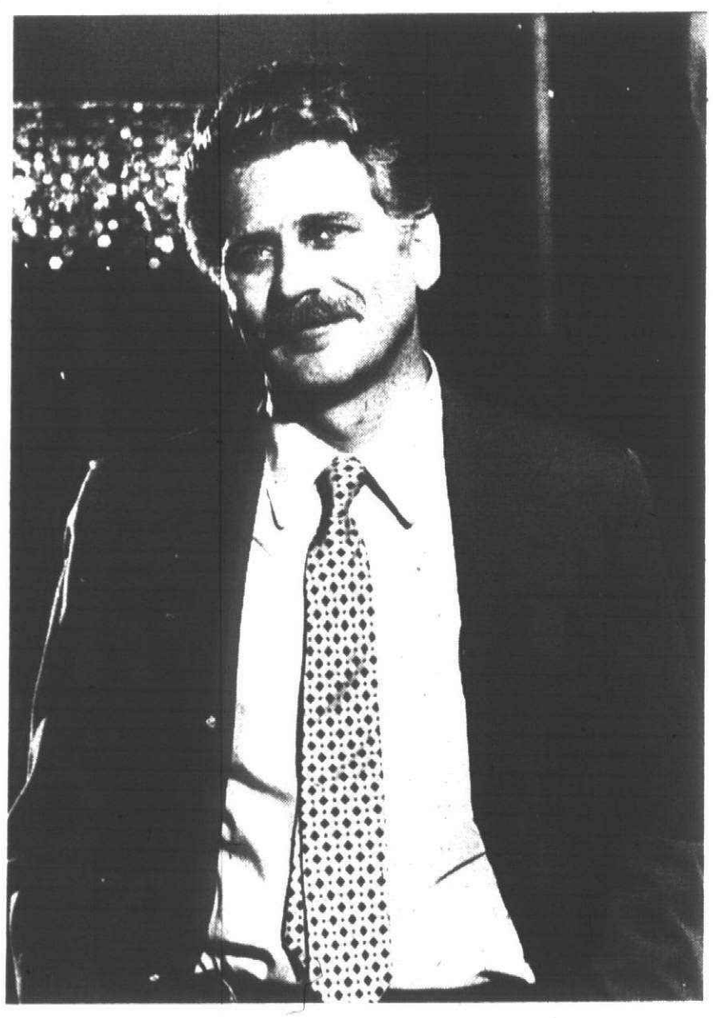

Even when he uses a pay phone to make his ransom call, he has to deal with the wrath of a motel owner who teaches him a lesson for spitting on her property.

Unusual episodes like this, an original chase sequence through a kennel and individual little scenes that focus on human qualities take "The Black Marble" out of the ordinary cops and robbers genre.

ANOTHER FACTOR that contributes to the fresh look of the film is the choice of cast. From Foxworth, Prentiss and Stanton to John Hancock, a smooth-talking detective who manages the excitable captain (Raleigh Bond) and all his men, we get fine acting and faces that are not boringly familiar.

Moreover, there is an enjoyable feeling about the film, as if the actors are having a good time in their roles.

A plot with a little more weight, a little more tension, would have been appreciated; still, "The Black Marble" is an entertaining movie of unconventional charm.

Robert Foxworth is another detective assigned to the case in "The Black Marble," a comic, offbeat love story.

NEW RELEASES

ALL THAT JAZZ (R). Tour de force by writer-director Bob Fosse. Roy Scheider plays hard-driving, fast-living choreographer (Fosse) in "behind the scenes" story of unusual imagination and energy.

AMERICAN GIGOLO (R). Seamy tale about rich widows, dirty politics and a stud who gets framed for murder.

AND JUSTICE FOR ALL (R). Al Pacino is a young trial lawyer dedicated to his profession and profoundly troubled by the legal system.

BEING THERE (PG). Peter Sellers is a TV-educated economist in satire that pokes fun at our political and social conceits.

BLACK HOLE (PG). Disney's expensive entry into sci-fi, space adventure with strong cast and action story.

THE BLACK MARBLE (PG). Paula Prentiss and Robert Foxworth in offbeat, romantic comedy about two ill-matched L.A. cops.

BLACK STALLION (G). Story about a boy and a horse told in rich visual images. Terrific performance by Mickey Rooney as an ex-jockey who befriends the boy.

CHAPTER TWO (PG). Autobiographical Neil Simon story about a man starting over after death of his wife.

COAL MINER'S DAUGHTER (PG). Sissy Spacek is outstanding as Loretta Lynn in movie bio of country singer's grueling early years and troubled success.

CRUISING (R). Heavy leather story of police undercover agent (Al Pacino) looking for psychotic killer in homosexual community.

ELECTRIC HORSEMAN (PG). Jane Fonda is a reporter and Robert Redford an ex-rodeo champion in satirical romance.

FATSO (PG). Anne Bancroft debuts as writer-director and co-stars opposite Dom DeLuise in comedy about fat man's efforts to get thin.

THE FOG (R). Horror film from John Carpenter, who directed "Halloween." Supernatural fog, associated with legend of mariners rising from their graves and seeking vengeance, creates havoc in coastal village.

FOXES (R). Four teen-aged girls in California coping with the adult world and parental neglect.

GOING IN STYLE (PG). Offbeat comedy about three pensioners who decide to "go in style."

HERO AT LARGE (PG). A struggling actor (John Ritter) tries to live up to image of his role as Captain Avenger.

HIDE IN PLAIN SIGHT (PG). James Caan attempts to find his children who have disappeared with stepfather given a new identity by the government.

THE IN-LAWS (PG). Hilarious comedy with Peter Falk and Alan Arkin as near-relatives who not only plan a wedding but rip off the U.S. Mint.

We interrupt your hometown newspaper to bring you a bit of excitement, delight and joyful color. We could have used this picture in many ways; we could have told you all about ballooning; we could have printed the photographer's autobiography; we could have fiddled around with the word "inflation" and told you to fight it by selling or buying with one of our classified ads. But the more we looked at the balloon the more we realized that we would be complicating a beautiful, free thing. Too many things are complicated these days and not much is free anymore. So, if this picture has made you smile, lifted your spirits, or made you just a tiny bit happier, it's served its purpose.

200 miles through to Guadalajara nets tourists Mexico's lake country

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES
Contributing Travel Editor

PATZCUARO, Mich. — We are in lake country, up a cactus-fringed highway from Morelia and down a steep mountain road from Santa Clara del Cobre. If you wonder where we are in Michigan, you will wonder even more when the scenes flash by.

Indian women wrapped in shawls hide their faces from the camera in the town market. An artisan transforms a solid lump of copper into a classic pitcher. Fishermen spread colorful butterfly nets across the lake.

The license plates say Mich., but move your eyes a little and you will see the full legend, "Mich.-Mex." We are in the state of Michoacan in Mexico. You may not have heard of it, but most local shopkeepers know that Mich. also is the abbreviation for Michigan.

Patzcuaro is the ancient home of the Tarascan Indians, who still live their lives here in many of the ancient ways. They farm. They create the old crafts. And they catch and sell the tiny, sweet white fish known as Pescado blanco or white fish.

This is the lake country of Mexico, which begins 200 miles west of Mexico City at Morelia and runs for 200 miles to Guadalajara.

The largest lake west of Mexico City, south of Guadalajara, is Lake Chapala, the largest inland body of water in Mexico. The blue patch to the east is Lake Cuitzeo, and the small blue curl in the mountains between them is Lake Patzcuaro.

The town of Patzcuaro was founded in the early 16th century by Biship Vasco de Quiroga on the site of an Indian village that was already 200 years old.

Times change and most fishermen of Patzcuaro use more modern methods of hauling in their fish. These men, however, readily lift their butterfly nets for touring photographers, keeping alive somewhat the old way of catching the pescado blanco.

THERE ARE THREE main tourist attractions in Patzcuaro. The fishermen with their nets on the lake near the island of Janitzio, the copper craftsmen 30 minutes up the mountain in Santa Clara del Cobre and the everyday market and the special Friday market in the downtown area.

On Friday, people from nearby towns paddle into Patzcuaro in their dugout canoes and spread their crafts and market wares out on the main plaza, one of the most magnificent treed plazas in Mexico.

The regular market can be seen any day a few blocks away on Plaza Chica, where Indian women sit on the arcaded sidewalks, each among a small spread of wares: straw hats, bread, or clothing.

Tables of copper ware give way to market avenues of shawls and serapes, and these in turn to a food market fringed on both sides by fish sellers.

The women who sell the fish are lined up in rows between the buildings each with her skirt spread out to cover her legs and with small lines of fish in her hand for sale.

It is a colorful sight, but one you won't easily catch with a camera unless you hide behind a doorway with a telephoto lens. The Indian women of Patzcuaro, like many people in Mexico, believe that the camera steals their souls. Those who don't will certainly expect money for the privilege of posing for a picture.

The cobblestone streets of the town are lined with shops, many of them offering the work of individual craftsmen. To see many first-class crafts in one place, visit Casa de los Once Patios, the house of 11 patios. It is a former convent half a block from the main plaza. You will do little if any bargaining and the quality of the crafts is excellent.

At sunset, drive 3.5 kilometers uphill to Stirrup Peak, officially known as El Estribo.

FROM HERE YOU can see the mountains and the patchwork farms running down to the lake, with the mountain island of Janitzio rising like a centerpiece in the middle of the lake. The setting sun sends the shadow of the mountain darkly across the verdant slope,and gives shades of spring green and sand brown to the farmlands and to the stucco villages below.

When the sun comes up agan, you should be preparing to cross that lake to where the fishermen make colorful photographic scenes off the island of Janitzio.

The island rises in a house-stuccoed dome above the lake, a huge statue of Morelos, a Mexican revolutionary hero, rising from the top like the Statue of Liberty.

The village is extremly picturesque, although it has a reputation for being one of the less desirable places in Mexico to actually prowl around. The streets are dirty, pigs squeal underfoot, and the children claw and beg.

Whether or not you visit the island, you should definitely take one of the open-sided ferries that carry about 50 people at a time to the edge of the island.

Most fishermen use modern modern methods for catching the Pescado blanco, but a fleet of boats is always ready for those who want to photograph the fishermen with the ancient butterfly nets and the lollipop paddles.

Your ferry guide will tell you how to pay them the few pesos they expect for the display.

The show is best seen in the morning, wich gives you a nice part of the day left for uphill climb to Villa Escalante, still known to most people by its old name of Santa Clara del Cobre — Santa Clara of the Copper.

There is a reputable shop on the way into town, run by a group of master copper artisans. There are also many other shops in town, as well as factories that can be visited. Any boy on the treed main square will guide you to a private coppersmith's studio, such as that of Etelberto Ramirez.

As you drive back to town, or on to Mexico City, you will see the campesinos coming home with their horses and bullock carts across the fields and along the roads.

Men and boys in their country hats are silhouetted briefly against the sky as they top a hill. A boy rides with grass piled high on his bicycle. A man rides a burro, while a woman and child walk beside. A horseman makes a high Don Quixote silhouette against the evening sky and women walk wrapped in colorful shawls.

It doesn't look a bit like Michigan.

Indian women daily set up their stands of breads, crafts and wares in the Plaza Chica at Patzcuaro. (Photos by Iris Sanderson Jones)

Looking for copper, finding a goldmine

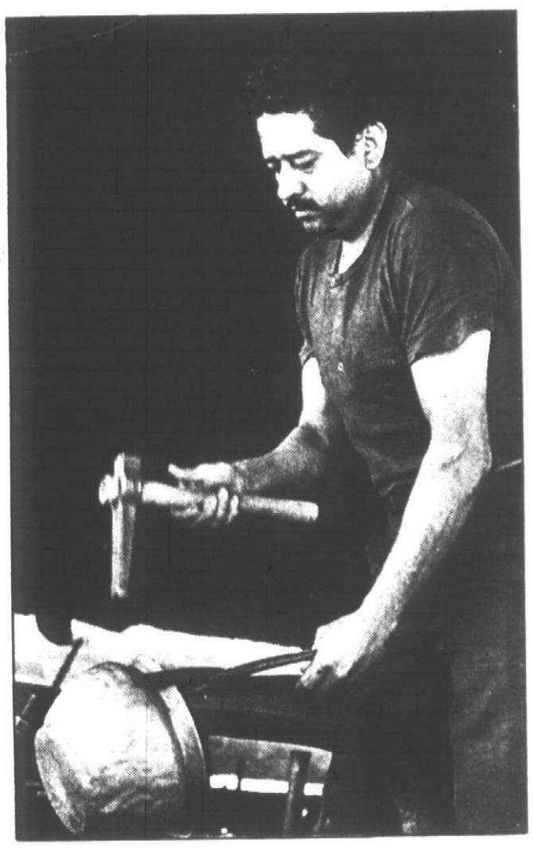

SANTA CLARA del COBRE, Mexico — Four great mountain trees soar out of the plaza at Santa Clara del Cobre, high above the lake country of Mexico.

There is a riot of birds, the rev of a bus engine and the quiet footfalls of people moving back and forth along the village streets. We are looking for a copper craftsman and 15-year-old Isidro has promised to take us to the home of his godfather, Etelberto Ramirez.

Officially, this village is now known as Villa Escalante, but it is known throughout Mexico as Santa Clara del Cobre — Santa Clara of the Copper — because this is the home of the best-known copper artists in the country.

We follow Isidro down the cobblestone streets and through a gate to the Ramirez house, where we can hear the heavy tap of a hammer against copper.

It is a neat red-and-white house with a child playing on the sidewalk and a bicycle leaning against the white stucco wall. In an open-sided shed, where a car might be parked in America, Etelberto and his wife are working on a copper jug.

ETELBERTO RAMIREZ
Master coppersmith

WE HAVE TAKEN a chance by following Isidro to this house, but we are lucky. Ramirez is a master craftsman, the head of the copper makers union and the winner of a president's medal for his work.

We ask him to show us the whole process. He starts with a chunk of smelted copper the size of a cantaloupe, scrapes it clean with a chisel and puts it into the fire. After it has been hammered into a malleable shape, it goes back to the fire to be made into a bowl.

His wife stands behind the double bellows and we watch the fire flare as she heats the copper bowl into a red hot shape. It is rushed on long tongs to the metal arm where Ramirez hammers it — still hot — into its final rough form.

The rest of the process is delicate finishing work, accompanied by the patient tap-tap of the hammer.

Etleberto is the son and the grandson of copper craftsmen. He started to work when he was 5, learning to pump the bellows and carry loads for older craftsmen. By age 6 he was carrying hot metal and by 8 he was forming his first vessels.

He was 12 when he won his first prize in a recognized competition. Nowadays he is the owner of many prizes, including a medal from the President of Mexico.

THE GUILD HE helped to form keeps prices at a reasonable level. It prevents the jobbers from buying large lots of copper work at an unfairly low price. The guild has started a craft school, so that young aspirants can apprentice into the coppersmith trade.

You must live in Santa Clara to be admitted to the school, the art of the copper craftsman is a male trade; girls are not invited to attend.

This may be the last generation of copper artists in the Ramirez family. Etelberto wants his son to go to school and become a doctor or a lawyer.

Someday, perhaps, there will be no more copper craftsmen left in this high mountain town. In the meantime, tourists can buy hand-hammered plates and bowls and jugs at shops here, or for twice the price at the Indian market in Mexico City.

TO PARIS IN the spring or to Tecumseh in April, that is the dilemma. But one easily resolved because those masters at the Louvre — Picasso, Matisse and Chagall — will be represented in Tecumseh April 16-21 on the Michigan Artrain.

The city will polish the rails, roll out the carpet and celebrate Artrain's visit with a community arts festival held at several sites around town. The festival will display the work of Lenawee County artists, public school artists, and include a model railroad exhibit, dance workshop, 8mm filmmaking workshop, organ concert and student photography show. Craftspeople include a miniaturist, stained glass designer, printer, woodcarver, potter, spinner and portraitist.

Artrain will stop at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 313 N. Evans St. with hours of 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5-8 p.m. weekdays and noon to 8 p.m. on the weekend. For a schedule of activities or more information, write the Tecumseh Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 265, 49286; or call 1-517-423-3740.

Tecumseh is northeast of Adrian and southeast of Manchester and the events are free. Paris is northeast of Detroit and a round-trip flight from New York booked 21 days in advance is about $550, or about $700 on the spur-of-the-moment, n'est pas.

THE END OF the rainbow is nothing more than a storage room in a sub basement at the Swiss Bank Corp. in Zurich, Switzerland. Travel film maker Philip Walker discovered it recently when filming "Beautiful Switzerland — The Beautiful Swiss Machine," which he narrates at the German-American Cultural Center at 8 p.m. Friday, April 18.

As film props for some of the scenes, Walker used ingots, bags of gold coins, bars of gold in different weights, and platinum — weighing in at a ton total — plus the currencies of the world, which were his for a signature. There was one stipulation: When filming the front of the bank, please, no face-forward shots.

The cultural center is at 5251 E. Outer Dr. in Detroit. Admission to the film is $4. For more information, call 371-5720.

"HISTORIC HOMES IN VIRGINIA" is the title of a guide to Virginia's historic properties. The 16-page illustrated directory lists 100 homes, plantations and estates which are open to the public. Included is a description of a property's historical claim and where to write for more information.

For a copy, which is free, write: Virginia State Travel Service, 6 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va. 23219; or call 1-804-786-4484.

RUNNERS, 10- and five-kilometer runs are scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday, April 26, beginning and ending at Novi City Hall at 45225 W. 10 Mile.

The 10-km run has five classifications for men and three for women. The five-km run has a single classification. The entry fee is $5 per and will include a T-shirt and refreshments. Plaques will be awarded to the top three finishers in each category.

Registrations should be mailed to Novi Parks and Recreation Department, 25870 Novi Road, P.O. Box 335, Novi, 48050; 349-1976. Include name, address, phone number, age and shirt size. If you miss the April 25 registration deadline, you're running on empty.

Information for Tripping can be mailed to Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Clogging causes sputter

Many a car has had an unneeded tune-up because the engine constantly sputtered and stalled. It's doubly frustrating when the condition continues after the time, effort and money have been spent on a tune-up to correct the condition. In many cases, the culprit is a clogged fuel filter.

It's amazing how many times this simple problem is overlooked, even by the experts. Fuel filters come in both in-line and sediment bowl types.

The in-line fuel filter is usually in the fuel line near the fuel pump housing. It's not easily cleaned and should be replaced. The cost is nominal.

The sediment bowl type is found on older cars and can be cleaned and returned to duty.

One clue that you have a fuel filter problem is if you ran very low on your last tank or two of gasoline. If you ran the gasoline gauge past "E," and now you engine is suddenly sputtering, you may have sucked accumulated gunk from the bottom of the gasoline tank into the fuel line.

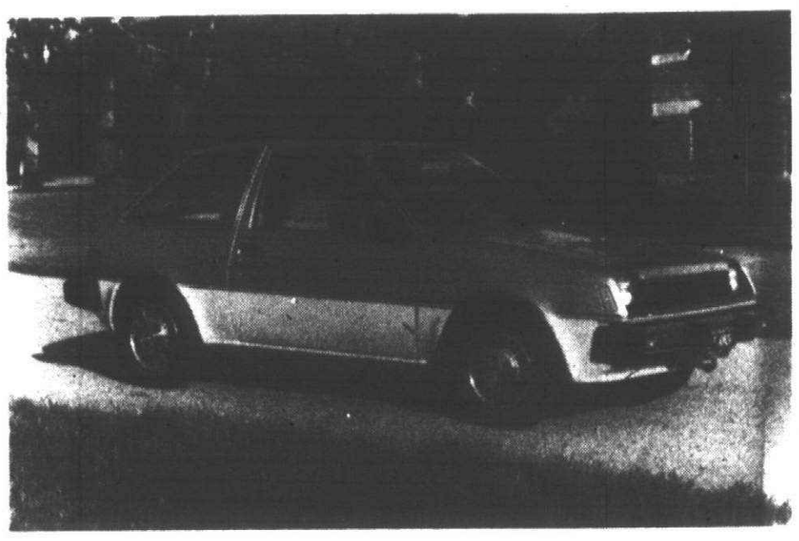

As it is designed to do, the fuel filter prevented that gunk from entering the engine. But, like any other filter, the fuel filter can become clogged. The best solution on newer cars is replacement of the filter.

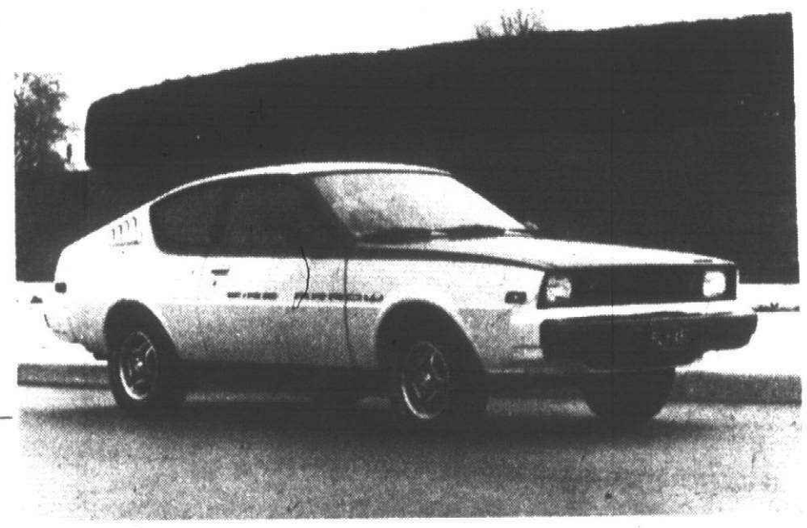

You may want to cut a heavy-duty filter into the fuel line ahead of the standard fuel filter. Heavy-duty filters will handle a lot more gunk before they become clogged. The heavy-duty filter is larger than the standard fuel filter and so contains a larger filter element.

Still another solution to the puttering and stalling problem might be the simple lubrication of the butterfly valve in the top of the carburetor air horn. If this is the cause of your engine problem, you'll usually see dark smoke coming from the exhaust pipe at low speeds or when the car is idling.

Place a little light oil at the ends of the cross shaft, and it should free up and operate properly.

Less sells well

Sales of the fuel efficient 1980 Plymouth Champ (top) and the Plymouth Arrow are up 126 percent for the calendar year through March 29, compared to last year's sales for the same period.
