Roads make residents rumble, rattle and roll

By Arlene Funke
staff writer

South Canton residents fight teeth-rattling chuckholes on gravel roads leading in and out of their subdivisions.

Ruts fill with rainwater and cars become mired in mud and mess. Mufflers and tailpipes are jarred loose.

The Township Board is looking at ways to improve unpaved portions of Lilley, Warren, Haggerty, Morton-Taylor, Palmer and Sheldon, which belong to Wayne County.

About 100 residents took their gripes to the board Tuesday. Most live in subdivisions south of Cherry Hill.

Some argued for paving. Others said, "No way — make the Wayne County Road Commission do a better job of grading those gravel roads."

TOWNSHIP OFFICIALS plan to obtain suggestions from homeowners' groups. Financing plans will be researched.

"We're going to meet with homeowners' groups to set priorities (for which roads would be done first)," said Dave Nicholson, assistant planner for the township.

"Setting priorities is going to be a hot issue — more than was realized," he added.

A chart prepared by Nicholson indicates most of the proposed paving jobs are south of Cherry Hill. The only northern roads are Warren between Canton Center and Haggerty, and Morton-Taylor north of Warren. Priorities will depend on population density and traffic patterns, said Nicholson.

TOTAL COST estimates range from $8 million to $9.9 million, excluding drainage costs. The more expensive figure is based on the Wayne County Road Commission doing the work, said Finance Director Mike Gorman.

Gorman said the township probably would have to obtain permission from the county to pave. The road commission might want to do some of the work, he added.

"Keep in mind that we're talking about roads we don't have any control over," said Poole. "We're talking about somebody else's property."

One funding option would be to levy a special assessment against the property owners along those roads. Clerk John Flodin speculated those few wouldn't be able to afford it.

Fifty-one percent of the affected property owners would have to sign a petition approving the plan.

The report prepared by Nicholson recommends that the township finance the cost by selling general obligation bonds. The debt would be paid off through a millage levied against township residents. That would require voter approval.

Homes, not schools, affect student conduct

Last in a series

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

The key to solving student discipline problems starts at home, not at the public or non-public schools, according to parents and educators.

Some parents, after sending their children to non-public schools, have found some of the complaints about Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are unfounded.

The realizations have been in regards to discipline and academic resources.

Non-public schools pride themselves with the rigid enforcement of acceptable behaviors, while receiving the help (in many cases required) of the parents.

Public schools, on the other hand, must operate regardless of parental support, and without the readily accessible option of expulsion.

"We are finding that the home lifestyle of the younger students has a large affect on their behavior," says Carol Davis, Plymouth-Canton school board president.

"There is an increasing number of students coming from single-parent homes, homes where both parents work or homes where children are left on their own. Some of the children are responsible and some aren't, which causes some of the discipline problems," Ms. Davis says.

"In a lot of cases, the school has become the parent, which isn't a healthy situation. The schools should be responsible for educating. The parents should have the responsibility of clothing, feeding, disciplining and teaching the children basic values, not the schools."

The Plymouth-Canton district has sponsored clothing, food and discipline programs, among others, to help provide for the needs of the students.

DAVIS' IDEAS about the need for parent involvement are echoed by parents, some of whom have recently returned their children to the public schools.

'In a lot of cases, the school has become the parent, which isn't a healthy situation. The schools should be responsible for educating. The parents should have the responsibility of clothing, feeding, disciplining and teaching the children basic values, not the schools.'

— Carol Davis,
board president

"You'll find a lot of the time, the people who have discipline problems with their children in school have discipline problems at home," says Jean Sullivan, a Plymouth Township mother whose children have returned to the public schools from Plymouth Christian Academy (PCA).

"There probably is a lack of discipline in the public schools, but it is due to a lack of discipline in the homes," says Sandra Dawbarn, a Canton mother who has moved back to the public schools from a parochial school.

"The thing is, many of the people are taking their kids to the private schools because they are already having problems with their children," says Mrs. Dawbarn.

Ms. Davis says placing a student in a private school to avoid discipline problems can backfire.

"Sometimes students who are not problems are placed in private schools. Because of the strict rules, they start rebelling and then become discipline problems," she says.

PCA administrator Harry Guess says the reverse discipline problem would depend on the school and the individual student.

"I haven't seen that happen in our school. I'm sure there are schools which are so rigid that it might happen," he says.

"I don't think that would happen at PCA because if the student doesn't want to come here, we don't take them," says Guess.

Hulsing Elementary School principal Kathryn Otto says the public schools have their hands tied in areas where non-public schools have free movement.

"PRIVATE OR parochial schools can screen out the problem children. The public schools must take everyone. The non-public schools can put responsibilities on the parents, which we can't do," she says.

"Parents have a view that a parochial school has higher expectations for the students, but I just haven't found that to be true," says Ms. Otto.

"The open classroom design of our building actually shows a higher expectation for student behavior."

Ms. Otto says the parent's fear of the lack of discipline in the public schools is unwarranted.

"The public reads the media and applies everything to the Plymouth-Canton schools," she explains.

"If they would go and visit the schools to see what they are really like, I'm sure they would change their minds."

"The parents that have a real successful experience in a private school would find if they put the same time in public schools, they would have just as successful an experience."

Jim Dyer, principal of the Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic School, attributes his school's success in handling discipline problems to the help of the parents.

"When it comes to discipline, we have good communication with the parents, and good cooperation from them."

Dyer says the public schools can't depend on the same cooperation he gets from the parents.

Joyce Wheeler's husband, John, has been an inspiration to his handicapped spouse. Here, they work together on refinishing an old chair.

Handicapped citizen feels luckier than most

By Sandra Armbruster
staff writer

Joyce Wheeler thinks that she's luckier than some handicapped persons.

"Some handicaps you don't see, but mine is simple. People look at me and realize I'm handicapped," said Mrs. Wheeler, a former Westland resident who now lives in Plymouth Township. She has worn a leg brace since a bout with polio 28 years ago.

"But there are others who wear a prosthesis, walk good and you can't tell that they're handicapped," she added. "If they walk slow, people will say, 'Come on, get out of the way.'"

Mrs. Wheeler, who is executive secretary of the Westland Chamber of Commerce and is on the Easter Seals Society board of directors, became a polio victim at the age of 18.

"It (the timing of her illness) was good in a way. I had graduated from high school and was working at Ford Motor Co.," she said. "I had a totally normal childhood and my body was fully grown. I was able to skate, participate in sports and wear high heels."

"Sometimes people say that must have made it tougher, but that isn't so. I could relate to my kids. I could say to them, 'Yeah, I remember that.' (Her two children, a son and a daughter, have now married and moved away from home.)"

BUT IT TOOK a long time for Mrs. Wheeler, now 47, to accept her disability.

"It took me 15 years to be able to sit in a wheel chair," she explained. "I sat in one for seven months, and I thought I'd never get in another one. I thought it was OK for a period, but not for life."

Then one day while walking on an outing with her family, Mrs. Wheeler got severe blisters from the rubbing of her brace.

"Now when I'm at a shopping cen-

Learning to cope

The United Nations has designated 1981 as the International Year of Disabled Persons. An estimated 12 to 20 percent of the population is disabled in some way. The term disabled applies to people with a wide variety of handicaps.

Gov. Milliken has declared Nov. 8-14 as Vocational Rehabilitation Week in Michigan, honoring more than 6,000 mentally impaired and physically disabled people who work in rehabilitation facilities.

In this issue, the Observer takes a look at handicapped people in western Wayne County and at the sometimes ingenious ways they've learned to cope with their disabilities.

ter, I get a wheelchair and just tool around in it because it's a whole lot easier," she said.

Mrs. Wheeler credits her husband, John, whom she calls her "biggest supporter," with being a driving force behind her success in coping with her handicap. "John doesn't think I have a handicap," she explained. "He got me involved in more things, like that ski lift in Vermont."

"We went to the Seattle World Fair. There was a moving sidewalk we wanted to take. I could get one foot on, but it takes awhile for the other foot to get through. John just gave me a shove and I was on," she continued.

"There's a lot you can do when there is someone who is supportive."

Other hobbies the couple enjoys include refinishing furniture and camping.

SHE ALSO enjoys her work with the Easter Seals Society.

"The staff does more than anyone. The board (on which she serves) guides and sets policy. It tries to come up with fund raisers," she said. "The summer camp program operated by the society gives a child a chance to learn and have a camp experience with other children who aren't different."

"It gives families a respite, too," she added.

Mrs. Wheeler said that the Easter Seals Society has made the public more aware of disabilities. That's important, she said, because people sometimes use terms which can be quite cruel to a handicapped person.

"Kids use them only because they hear their parents use them," she said. "I went into a fast food restaurant once and heard someone remark, 'what do I have to do, turn up your hearing aid,' when an order wasn't clear. If I was wearing a hearing aid, I would have been offended."

Another casual remark that Mrs. Wheeler abhors is, "Now, don't have an epileptic fit."

"People don't mean anything by it, but they hurt," she said.

Handicapped people do, however, have a sense of humor, she added.

"We may say that someone is funnier than a rubber crutch. If we didn't make fun (of ourselves), we'd cry a lot," she said.

"People think of the handicapped as being different. They are — they do things differently. But they aren't any different on the inside," Mrs. Wheeler said. "My feelings are the same as yours."

Mrs. Wheeler believes the key to accepting one's handicap is attitude and activity. "Helping others is where it's all at," she said. "You heal best by helping others. Grieving is a waste of time."

School cuts continue

Instructional staff reductions are continuing in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools as administrators react to declining enrollment and try to keep budget costs down.

The school board has established as a goal a ratio of 24.75 students per certified staff member at each individual school building. Principals of schools with ratios lower than 24.75 to 1 are being asked to reduce their instructional staff by part-time or by full-time positions.

The latest school ordered to reduce its staff has been Fiegel Elementary School. Fiegel, through its PTA, appealed Monday night to the school board to overturn the reduction.

Two weeks earlier PTO leaders, parents and staff members from Starkweather protested unsuccessfully to the school board about its instructions to layoff a part-time kindergarten teacher.

Monday night the school board also voted to have the administration continue with its plans to reduce the instructional staff at Fiegel in a way which would be least disruptive to students.

The motion passed with trustees Flossie Tonda and Tom Yack dissenting. Yack argued that the layoff of any teacher 12 weeks into the school year was too disruptive for students.

Norman Kee, assistant superintendent for personnel, reported that eight elementary schools already have had their instructional staffs reduced to reach the 24.75 ratio.

Kee argued that the layoff at Fiegel was necessary to keep faith with the other eight elementaries which already

New building permits continued their downward slide during the first half of 1981 as the southeast Michigan economy dragged bottom.

Canton Township, once a leader, was practically out of sight.

Plymouth Township was one of only three Wayne County communities among the top 10 in the seven-county region in issuing new building permits from January through June. Plymouth Township was seventh.

Altogether only 3,473 permits were issued, down 4.4 percent from the 3,914 permits in the first half of 1980, according to the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

And that was well below the 11,428 issued in the first half of 1979.

Thus, the number of permits in early '81 was the lowest since SEMCOG began collecting data in 1968.

DETROIT was the leader for the second year in a row, issuing 1,096 unit permits. Actually, however, Detroit lost housing because it also issued 3,175 demolition permits, for a net loss of 2,079.

Sterling Heights in Macomb County ranked second with 313 new permits; Southfield, Oakland County, third with 175 units; Avon Township, Oakland, fourth with 128 permits; and Clinton Township, Macomb County, fifth with 115.

Northville Township in Wayne County was sixth with 100. Bloomfield Township, Oakland, seventh with 91; and West Bloomfield Township, Oakland, eighth with 80 permits.

Plymouth Township had 67 permits — seven for single-family houses and 60 multiples, along with two demolitions.

Farmington Hills, which had led the entire region in 1979 and was fifth in 1980, dropped to 10th with 67 new units.

OTHER WAYNE communities were far below the leaders.

Canton Township, second in the entire region in 1979, added a net of only six housing units — six houses and two duplexes, minus three demolitions.

Garden City added one house and lost two through demolitions.

Livonia issued permits for 45 new houses and demolition permits for five.

The city of Plymouth was up a net of nine units — two houses, four duplex units, four multiples and one demolition.

Redford Township added 21 units — seven houses and 14 duplex units with no demolitions.

Westland added 24 houses and two duplex units followed by 18 demolitions for a net increase of eight housing units.

SEMCOG said the Federal Home Administration mortgage rate rose steadily from 14.95 to 16.4 percent in the first six months of 1981, while the prime rate (for the strongest corporations) averaged 19 percent.

Tony, wearing a special vest to prevent him from rolling over, is in a homemade trough. His food lies ahead of him as a reward for crawling.

Tony keeps battling

Staff photos by Gary Caskey

Alicia Coscia is definite about which was the darkest day of her life.

The words—"Tony probably will never be able to sit, walk or talk. He probably is mentally retarded."—were devastating.

Tony is Alicia and Charles Coscia's fifth child. He was born 2½ months prematurely in June 1980. He was undersized and underweight. But he gained two pounds and grew two inches in his first month. He was up to 10 pounds when he was 3 months old.

His mother suspected there was something wrong with Tony about Thanksgiving time.

"It was diagnosed in February," said Mrs. Coscia. "He weighed 12 pounds. When placed in a sitting position, he couldn't move his arms or his legs. When tested, his fine motor skills were those of a 3-5-month-old baby; his gross motor skills were at the 2-3-month level."

THEY BEGAN weekly therapy sessions in Ann Arbor. In June, Tony was retested "and he hadn't improved at all."

He had severe cerebral palsy, damaged brain cells, and the degree of injury was not known.

"When you leave your 1-year-old in the living room you know he'll be in the same spot every time you look at him. When he couldn't care less when you showed him a rattle or played music..." Mrs. Coscia faltered.

"Now he is responsive and alert," she added. "They said he would never crawl, but now he can crawl from point A to point B. He can tell five dots from seven dots, 12 dots from 13 dots. He knows the shapes of five states and the difference between a circle, a square and a triangle."

Tony is a super intelligent 17-month-old.

MRS. COSCIA said their hopes were at rock-bottom the day she went to the mailbox and found a letter from her sister. Inside was a clipping from a magazine with an article about patterning.

It was the first she had heard of the Institute for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia and the Doman-Delacato Method of patterning. She read the book, "What to Do with the Brain-Injured Child" by Glenn Doman, head of the institute.

"At first I started working on my own without the institute. I heard of a family in Novi who had used the method with success. When I tried to contact them, I was told that their telephone number and name could not be given out. I asked to give them my name and number and, please, have them call me."

"They did. They said that because of patterning, their 5-year-old now runs three or four miles a day. I heard of a couple in Flint who had gone to the institute and used the method 10 years ago. We went to see them and discovered that after two years with the institute, their child functioned normally."

SHE EXPLAIN patterning as a method of programming undamaged brain cells to take over the duties of the damaged cells.

She credited Tony's amazing progress to 100 volunteers, whom she described as "the cream of the crop."

The daily program, seven days a week, involves 30 one-minute sessions of reading, 42 maskings, and 15 patterning or exercising sessions.

Tony naps from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. so his waking hours are busy.

"We started out with five volunteers — five catechism teachers," said Mrs. Coscia. "The volunteers have been wonderful but some get jobs and the high-school students graduate or get involved in other activities. Some come in and prepare a meal while I work with Tony. Some bring in pictures they have cut out and pasted on bristol board.

"Volunteers and money are our big problems. The institute is not cheap. We have to go four times a year for two years and two times a year after that. The cost of getting to the institute and back is a problem."

Tony correctly points to a map of California. Tony's mother, Alicia, says "That's right."

Tony's exercise is for his arms, legs and neck.

Efforts may lead to cable network for the deaf

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

A national cable television network for deaf persons may become a reality if a Canton man's efforts meet with success.

Mark Velasques has been drumming up support for his American Eagle Cable Network idea during the past seven months.

Trying to sell the idea of the network, Velasques' efforts included meeting with various legislators in Washington, D.C., and meetings in Atlanta with cable television tycoon Ted Turner.

Velasques, 28, seeks the financial backing which would make the network a reality. He has applied for grants from the federal government and has asked others for financial assistance.

THE IDEA of the American Eagle Network is to provide the deaf community with timely coverage of news and presentation of current movies. There are approximately 27 million deaf persons in the U.S., he says.

"Deaf persons can't always depend on others to keep them informed," says Velasques, who picked the symbol of the American Eagle to show the freedom his network would bring.

Most of the news programs for the deaf are on at late hours, or else are very short segments of regular news shows, he explains.

"Who wants to get up at 4:30 in the morning to watch the news?" says George R. Niedson, assistant manager of Studio 13. Studio 13, a channel on the Omnicom Cable, has been helping

COPING

Velasques in his attempt to set up the network.

Almost 85 percent of this state's deaf viewers of ABC's captioned news are not happy with the presentation of the program, according to a report from Michigan's Division of Deaf and Deafening.

THE CLOSED-CAPTIONED television programming currently offered isn't the best alternative, says Velasques, who can talk with some limitations. He lost his hearing when he was 4 years old after being struck by a car.

The captioned programs are limited in number and the deaf persons many times have a hard time understanding the dialogs, he says. Also there is the added costs of buying the caption decoder.

"You and I can each go out and buy a color television set. You can take yours home and start watching it, I have to go and buy a decoder for another $300," he says.

Velasques' network would have captioned programming, without needing decoders, since the captions would be part of the broadcast. This would allow deaf persons to watch any cable television without special equipment.

The only difference in Velasques' captions would be the color coding of the words.

"THE WORDS would be different colors for different emotions. Love could be red, anger could be green. This way the deaf person can better understand the programs," says Velasques.

The network would also benefit persons who are losing their hearing, he says.

"There are lots of older people who are losing their hearing or hard of hearing and they would benefit from having the network. This would give them something to watch and learn from," he says.

Watching shows which also write the words on the screen would help children to learn how to spell and help their reading, says Niedson.

The network, which will cost well over $20 million, would also provide jobs for both the deaf and hearing.

Velasques estimates some 300 persons could be employed by the network. He is excited about the possibilities of providing work for deaf persons.

MANY TIMES deaf persons are fired from jobs because it is too hard to communicate with them, he says. Velasques has worked for several employers in the past, while trying to pay for his trips on behalf of the network.

"Deaf people want to work. They don't want to sit at home. Just because they can't hear, doesn't mean they aren't smart," he says.

Velasques says he will continue to seek the funding for his network until it becomes a reality.

"There's no stopping this guy. If he doesn't get the grant from the government, I'm sure he will try again," says Niedson.

Discipline starts at home?

"I have the utmost respect for the public schools. They are doing a great job with the task in front of them."

While some parents and educators are saying student discipline problems aren't the product of the particular school, they are also denouncing the academic superiority of the non-public schools.

"After sending our children to both public and private schools, we felt they were far better off in the public schools," says Mrs. Sullivan.

"At first, we thought the private system was better, but we later found the academics were limited."

NOT ONLY were the academics limited, she says, the philosophy being taught was limited.

"The values being taught at the PCA were mostly conservative. That's because the leadership is 100 percent conservative.

"It's not just PCA which is that way. I researched other schools like Southfield Christian, Intercity Baptist and Temple Baptist. They all had the same platform," she says.

Guess says he would agree the leadership and approach of PCA is conservative, if conservative means they take a traditional approach to education and values.

"We feel we have to reinforce home values and scriptural values, thus we might be narrow in our approach," says Guess.

"I felt my children need more than just conservative values taught to them," says Mrs. Sullivan, explaining why she left PCA.

Sullivan says she believes her children weren't learning any more by being at the parochial school.

"They would come home with massive amounts of homework, but they aren't learning any more. It was a higher quantity but not a higher quality."

While her children would appear to know a lot, they weren't truly learning the concepts being taught, she says.

"The kids were required to do lots of memorization. Parents see this as learning, but it really isn't. In the public schools, they don't rely on the memorization so much," says Mrs. Sullivan.

Guess doesn't agree with Mrs. Sullivan's idea about the learning at PCA.

"The test data does not show a lack of learning. Today, most of our top leadership has been through the private schools and it hasn't seemed to hurt them," says Guess.

"I feel that socially and academically the public schools have more to offer," says Mrs. Sullivan.

Little use is made of special learning resources at non-public schools, she says.

"There seems to be a lack of information on additional services at the private schools."

Unpaved roads irk residents

"That would give us immediate access to funds, as soon as we sell bonds," said Nicholson. The township could set up a savings account to cover a long-range paving plan, added Nicholson.

Most of the residents who attended Tuesday's board meeting complained about the condition of Palmer Road.

Many complained that the road isn't graded often enough. One resident presented a petition with more than 300 signatures of persons who are opposed to current maintenance by the county.

A man brought a bag of parts which he said had broken off his car because of potholes in the roadway.

BUT OTHERS stopped short of endorsing a paving project.

"I like the (unpaved) roads," said Pam Potter. "I moved out here for the country roads."

"How are we going to pay for paving when we don't have jobs?" said a man. "No way. We want the existing roads maintained."

"Why do we have to take a big jump?" said another man. "Let's start with trying to get the roads graded."

A spokesman for the Wayne County Road Commission couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday. County offices were closed for Veterans Day.

North Central report S'craft wins full accreditation

By Marie Chestney
staff writer

It must feel great to win the last battle.

Just days before swinging into retirement, Edward McNally, Schoolcraft College's vice president for administration, got the good news: a full 10-year accreditation for the college instead of the previously awarded seven.

"We felt we deserved the 10," said McNally who, with former Schoolcraft President C. Nelson Grote, made a special presentation to the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary School's review committee last month to appeal Schoolcraft's seven-year accreditation.

"THEY DIDN'T justify the cut from 10 to seven," McNally said. "If it had been cut back, people (the public) would have thought something was wrong."

The college had received the maximum 10-year accreditation in 1971. Accreditation means that Schoolcraft's students can transfer their college credits to other schools.

McNally's last day of work is Nov. 6. He came to Schoolcraft in 1963 when the future campus on Haggerty Road between Six and Seven Mile roads was still a wheat field. He had the chance, he said, to see "what emerged from out of the woods."

McNally spent most of his 18 years at Schoolcraft in student affairs, first as an assistant dean, then as dean and finally as vice president.

Last July, after Grote left to administer a community college system in Spokane, Wash., McNally was named interim president.

In was from his latest role as administrative vice president that McNally, along with Grote, spoke before the association's review committee.

IT WAS NOT "concerns" but rather "suggestions for improvement" in non-academic areas, McNally said, which had led North Central's six-member examining team last spring to give Schoolcraft the seven-year accreditation.

The review committee which last week overruled this team also ruled that Schoolcraft must give a progress report three years from now on the suggestions cited.

Richard McDowell, Schoolcraft president since Sept. 14, said the college plans to use the team's report and recommendations "to assess where we are and make plans where we think we need to improve."

"We agree with all the suggestions," McDowell said. "It's just a matter of degree."

McDowell also said the college expects to have one of the suggestions — computerized registration — in operation by the fall 1982 registration period.

While the team suggested setting up a senior citizens' center, McNally said, most seniors on campus don't want to be separated from the main student body.

THE EXAMINING team, McNally said, was also concerned about the college's financial resources due to Michigan's economic climate and the Tisch tax-cutting proposals.

Two recent cuts in state funds have chipped $267,402 out of Schoolcraft's $14 million 1981-82 budget.

So far, McDowell said, the cuts haven't hurt that much. But a third, if there is one, would hurt significantly, he said.

OTHER SUGGESTIONS from the North Central team were:

- Better administration of programs aimed at helping students do college-level work. The administration of these programs was called "fragmented."

- More general studies' courses for non-transfer (e.g., vocational-technical) students.

- Review of the self-advisement program which allows students to register without a counselor's approval.

- Coordination of transcripts of students both in Continuing Education/Community Services and in the regular college curriculum.

Fiegel hit with staff reduction

had reduced their staffs.

THERE ARE changes to be made yet at the high school and middle school levels, added Kee. Those layoffs will come at semester break.

In a normal school year, added Kee, about 30 teachers leave the district after the year begins for maternity leave or other reasons, and those departures also are disruptive to students. Kee said the aim is to cause the least amount of disruption.

Kee said there now are three middle schools over ratio and the administration will make adjustments at the end of the semester.

Yack noted he voted in favor of the staff reduction at Starkweather two weeks ago but would vote "no" if he had the chance to vote again.

"Delaying it may mean a greater staff reduction or greater cuts in supplies next fall," said Yack, "but I don't think we should layoff a teacher 12 weeks into the school year at the elementary level when we haven't done the same at the middle and high school levels."

Kee said it is difficult for principals to maintain the ratio desired by the board when the district is undergoing a total enrollment/decline of some 400 students — something the administration is not used to reacting to.

NEXT YEAR, Kee added, the administration probably will begin with less full time staff at each school and use substitutes until a decision is made on whether teachers should be hired to lower the ratio towards the desired goal.

Trustee Glenn Schroeder argued in favor of the Fiegel staff reduction for reasons of equity. It would be unfair to schools which have had cuts to allow Fiegel not to have any, he added. There is no difference from having a teacher leave mid-year because of a layoff than if the teacher left for a maternity leave, he said.

Also voting against reducing the Fiegel staff was trustee Tonda who said it would be better to eliminate a position of string instructor than a classroom teacher.

French music concert is Sunday

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Johan van der Merwe has a lot of confidence in his Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. The conductor tosses tough works at the part-professional, part-amateur group of 75 musicians and is generally more than happy with the results.

Pianist Frances Renzi, a Juilliard graduate, will be soloist Sunday with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra in Ravel's Piano Concerto in G minor.

"This is a difficult one for the orchestra," he said of the Ravel Piano Concerto in G major, which the symphony will perform at 4 p.m. Sunday with Frances Renzi as soloist.

"It's very exposed. It requires a lot of rehearsal time. It's often played by bigger orchestras, but it's off the track for community orchestra concerts," he said.

MOREOVER, THE scores for the piano concerto were delivered late by the rental agency. There seems to be a run on Ravel.

"The librarian (Louise Roth) opened the music score and found many blank pages, so she sent them back," said van der Merwe. It was two weeks later before a full complement arrived. It was scary.

"Tonight," he said in an interview Monday, "we will rehearse it with the pianist for the first time."

The orchestra rehearses Monday evenings in the old Central School on Main Street and has a rehearsal the Saturday prior to each concert in the far different surroundings of Plymouth Salem High School, where concerts take place.

Van der Merwe confessed that earlier this season, a Saturday rehearsal went badly, and he feared for the Sunday performance. But whether it was the musicians' adrenalin, the presence of an audience or just overnight practice, the Sunday concert went beautifully.

SUNDAY'S offerings will be by composers who resided in France. (Caesar Franck, whose Symphony in D minor will close the program, was actually Belgian.)

"I do more German music on the whole, so I tried for balance," said van der Merwe, in his second full year at the Plymouth Symphony helm. "French music is lighter in nature compared to German."

"I don't think there is any such thing as a French school, as you will hear from the concert. One work is (Berlioz's 'Beatrice and Benedict' overture) is mid-romantic, one (Franck) is later romantic, and one (Ravel) post-romantic. All three are very different."

He is particularly enthusiastic about the slow (middle) movement of the Ravel concerto. Pianist Renzi is on the University of Toledo music faculty and has performed in many American cities.

THE WORKS have many small solo parts, in addition to the piano solo of the concerto, and van der Merwe is pleased with individual performances.

"Although something may seem a little beyond them, I test them," van der Merwe said. "If you want to keep the interest of all sections, you must do that. They really want to master something."

The woodwinds stand out. Bassoonist Jennifer Kelley rates a "wonderful." In the Franck symphony, he advised, listen for an English horn solo by Kristy Meretta. John Mohler, first chair clarinetist, continues to be a source of orchestral strength as well as a soloist.

The featured artist at Sunday's concert will be Jeffie Hudson of Plymouth, a retired art teacher from Plymouth Salem High School.

Because the concert theme is French music, Mrs. Hudson will exhibit water colors painted in the south of France.

New to Plymouth this year is principal cellist Douglas Marsh, a former Detroit Symphony member. He replaces Sarah Roth Cleveland, who has a new baby and other duties in the Toledo orchestra.

The first and second violin sections also have new leaders in the first two chairs. Van der Merwe and symphony watchers in general agree the string sections are all strong this season.

2 young violinists admitted to class

Two second graders were given permission Monday night to enroll in a strings class for fifth and sixth graders at Isibster Elementary School.

The two boys both learned to play violin by the Suzuki method — a system of teaching very young children how to play the violin by ear.

Their parents want their sons to learn how to play the violin by reading the notes and asked for permission to enter the boys in the fifth and sixth grade string programs.

School officials agreed the boys' playing abilities were superior and that both were academically gifted. The administration, however, had ruled that the program was designed for fifth and sixth graders and should not be opened for pupils in other grades.

BY A 4-3 VOTE Monday night the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education allowed the two boys to enroll in the strings class.

Voting in favor of authorizing the exception were trustees William Decker, Carol Davis, Tom Yack and Sylvia Stetz. Voting against were Elaine Kirchgatter, Glenn Schroeder and Flossie Tonda.

Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction, said the boys could be enrolled in the program without any disruption to strings instruction at Isibster. He said he was unsure if there would be any ripple effect throughout the district.

Homes reminded the board it had taken the position that ninth graders could not participate in high school programs, but he said that could be seen as a different issue than allowing second graders to participate in a fifth/sixth grade program in the same school building.

HOMES SAID that the central administration is reviewing the entire strings instructional program on the basis of cost-effectiveness basis and added it was possible the program could be dropped entirely. That decision, he added, is part of the budgeting process for fiscal 1982-83.

Yack argued that the exception should be allowed because the space and program were available and criteria could be established to make sure the board was not "opening Pandora's box."

"When we have special students with special needs and have a program in place to meet those needs, let's go ahead and do it," commented Davis.

Homes said that there presently are about 150 to 175 fifth and sixth graders in the strings program at 13 school buildings.

Schroeder said he was against allowing second graders to enter a program designed for fifth and sixth grade students.

Tony keeps on battling

SHE DESCRIBED the Doman-Delacato Method.

Pictures, words and dots on flashcards are used in the reading sessions. When Tony is shown pictures of a lion and a tiger, he can point to the right picture when asked.

"He can identify 30 to 40 picture cards," said his mother. "He can point out a koala bear, a monkey. It does take a little time because he is physically limited in pointing to a picture."

She said that at his recent visit to the institute he missed only the word white when tested.

The 42 maskings each day are designed to enlarge Tony's chest cavity. "Children with cerebral palsy do not breathe properly," Mrs. Coscia explained.

Tony is placed in a plastic bag with a tube opening at one end. As he breathes in exhaled carbon dioxide, his lungs are forced to expand and work harder to get oxygen. Tony's chest size has expanded in response to the maskings.

The exercise program is accomplished with the aid of three persons. One turns his head, another moves his right arm and leg, and the third moves his left arm and leg. They work together, coordinating the movements of crawling.

"IT'S JUST LIKE programming a computer. The undamaged brain cells are being programmed and by turning his head, he can see where his arms and legs should be," said Mrs. Coscia.

Since their last visit to the institute, Tony has been sleeping on the floor. They were told that babies crawl more at night, when they are asleep, than by day. Persons or organizations wishing more information about Tony's program can call Grey Wolcott, 455-0494.

Nursery to seek building

Plymouth Children's Nursery apparently will seek another building from which it can offer programs for preschoolers.

The school was closed down yesterday by the Wayne County Board of Health because the nursery's septic system had failed and was discharging human waste.

The nursery has been operating for several years from the former Hough School at Haggerty and Warren roads in Canton.

On Monday night, Janet Ryan, secretary to the nursery board, appeared before the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Monday night to ask for a loan to finance a hook-up to a nearby sanitary sewer but was unsuccessful.

Plymouth Children's Nursery, which has a membership of 106, has been renting the Hough School for the past 18 years. For the past five years, the nursery has been paying the school district $1 a year rent in return for an agreement to maintain the property.

The county board of health has ruled that the septic field is in such bad shape that it will not issue a permit for it to be repaired.

Ms. Ryan said the sewer tap-in fee would be about $7,000 with construction cost being an additional $8,000 for a total cost of some $15,000. The nursery board has about $7,000 in savings and could connect to the sanitary sewer if the school district would loan some $8,000, she added.

The nursery board would commit itself to paying $2,000 a year for four years and would repay that loan either with a fund-raiser or by raising tuition from $200 per child to $220.

The nursery board asked Canton Township if it would waive the tap-in fee, said Ms. Ryan, but Supervisor James Poole said the best the township could do would be to lower it from $8,800 to $7,175.

Superintendent John M. Hoben said he felt it would be illegal for the district to loan the money to the nursery. The district could legally connect to the sanitary sewer as it still owned the land, Hoben added, but the budget was in such bad shape that the superintendent recommended against the expenditure.

Trustee Flossie Tonda noted there were construction problems with Geer School and parents of Geer students agreed to finance the repairs themselves. It would be wrong for the board to pay for the Hough School sewer when Geer parents were not given financial help, Mrs. Tonda said.

With Canton not waiving the tap-in fee, and the school board declining to approve the loan, Ms. Ryan said the nursery board would begin looking for another building for the nursery school program.

Joining to build readers

More than 200 persons attended the parent-educator reading conference held Saturday morning at Pioneer Middle School.

The conference, aimed at discussing ways parents and educators can be partners in promoting the teaching of reading, was sponsored by Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Those attending heard Dr. Mary Bigler, associate professor of education at Eastern Michigan University, address the conference by saying "books are a lifetime gift and a lifetime friend."

Dr. Bigler also outlined ways in which parents and educators can work together and individually to help children in learning to read.

She said children should learn to "welcome failures, learn from them and from other people who make them."

BIGLER MENTIONED Charles Kettering's comment that in research, failure happens thousands of times but one success is all that is needed.

Among the ideas Dr. Bigler put forth were suggestions to parents to encourage the use of the library, give magazine subscriptions as gifts, read to the child and have the child read to the parent, and to get together with teachers when concerned about a child's reading.

After the keynote address, sessions on specific topics were held with volunteer leaders from the school district. These sessions included:

Learning and self-concept, Rosemary Alexander, teacher at Isbister Elementary; Parents are Teachers, Mary Fritz, director of PLUS and Cindy Gresens, Mary Lou Boyd and Mary Ebmeyer, PLUS teachers; Choosing and Using Books to Enhance Language Development, Nancy Faber, Miller School speech pathologist;

Thinking Skills for Kids, Judy Mayle, curriculum resource consultant with the Model Resource Room project; Make-it, Take-it Workshop, Cathy Sibert, teacher from Miller School; Reading for the Gifted, Mary Griffard and Marlyn Finch, resource teachers for the talented and gifted program;

TV AND Reading, Beverly Winkelmann, Isbister teacher; How to Choose the Appropriate Book, Dorothy Eden, Fiegel library/media specialist; Parent's Role in the Teaching of Reading, Ernest Bevins, learning specialist at Pioneer Middle School; Let's Read, Tina Powell, learning specialist at Smith School;

Reading — Ready or Not, Vada Starr, Ann Neiswander, and Terry Secord, learning specialists; Commercial Games to Spark Reading, Kio Phillippi, learning specialist at Starkweather and Karen Tripp-Oppe, teacher consultant at Plymouth Canton High.

Working: Changes and Choices

What's your career? Well, what are your skills?

This is the seventh of 15 articles exploring "Working: Changes and Choices." It was written for Courses by Newspaper, an extension program of the University of California, San Diego, with money from the National Endowment of the Humanities. © 1981 by the Regents of the University of California.

Last week, Jane bumped into her old friend, Alice. The last time she had seen Alice, ages ago, the latter was working her way up the executive ladder into middle management.

Now, however, Alice had the healthy look of one who spends much time outdoors. "How on earth did you find so much time to be outdoors?" asked Jane.

"Oh," Alice replied, "since I saw you last I made a career change."

Tom was in his favorite restaurant yesterday when he spied his old acquaintance, Dick. Dick looked glum. After usual greetings, Tom broached the subject of his friend's mood: "What's wrong?" he asked.

"Oh, I don't know," Dick replied, "I think I must be in mid-career crisis."

YES, IN THESE episodes and in countless others, the word "career" is mentioned in many different ways.

Yet, for all the frequency with which we are exposed to the word, many of us have only the loosest definition of it floating around in our heads. So, it is that we examined the changing notion of a career.

In The Olde Days — you know, when dinosaurs were roaming the earth — a person's career was the sum total of all the days he or she spent in the world of work. If they started at 16 and worked until they were 68, that was their career — 52 years in length.

Thus, in a sense, the word "career"

Richard N. Bolles is director of the National Career Development Project, a program of the United Ministries of Education. Trained in both science and theological studies, he is the author of the best-selling book, "What Color Is Your Parachute? A Practical Manual for Job-Hunters and Career-Changeers."

was used to identify the constant thread that ran throughout a man's or woman's life in the world of work.

The issue was: What was it that comprised that common thread?

Well, in The Olde Days, it was possible that an individual worked most of his or her life in the same organization. So, it was the organization that comprised the common thread.

A man would be a lifetime soldier, let us say, rising in the ranks from private to general. Or a man would work all his life for Sears, Roebuck, and rise from clerk to company president. That was the cultural expectation.

In the case of a woman, the cultural expectation was that she would begin as a secretary, and rise to . . . secretary. All, of course, within the same organization.

People came, in time, to speak of "a career ladder" within that organization to designate an individual's rise.

THIS CONCEPT of a career ladder began, in time, to be discarded. People began to notice that individuals did not stay within the same organization all their working lives.

Workers moved around, from one organization to another. If the word "career" were still to have any meaning, it was obvious that some new idea of what constituted "the constant thread" would have to be found.

If a worker's organization didn't stay constant, what did? The answer was obvious. His or her field of specialization: art, physics, medicine, law, the clergy, carpentry, or whatever.

A physicist might work for many different organizations in a lifetime, but he or she remained: a physicist. The field was the constant thread.

THE WORD "career" subsequently began to be identified with the word "field" or "major." A lifelong career was a lifetime spent in one field.

But in the time this concept of what constituted the constant thread also proved inadequate. People who worked not only did not work for just one organization during their "career," but they did not even stay in the same field.

Today's doctor might be tomorrow's jazz musician. Yesterday's clergyman might be today's businessman. That is where we are today.

The language of careers, however, still depends upon yesterday's history; our notion of "career" still equates it with "field."

• Example: when someone, today, changes fields, we say he or she has changed careers.

• Example: when people, today, say they want to make a career change, our society normally expects them to go (or go back) to college. Why? Because "fields" are taught in schools (as majors), and if you are going to change careers (read: "fields"), you obviously need to be retrained.

Of course, if a carpenter is going to become a doctor, we would hope he or she would go back to school. But the common mythology holds that everyone contemplating a career change needs reschooling, despite ample evidence from thousands of people's lives that such reschooling is often simply not necessary.

WHAT WE NEED, in our day, is to re-examine the question: What is the constant thread that runs throughout a working person's life, in spite of the fact that he or she changes organizations or even changes fields?

The answer, in a nutshell, is: his or her functional-transferable skills, and his or her preferred people-environments.

The two are one, for they are but different sides of the same coin, as career theorist John Holland has clearly demonstrated in his classic book, "Making Vocational Choices: A Theory of Careers."

This, then, is the constant that remains, though all else in a worker's life changes. Were you a problem-solver at age 4? When your mother told you it was time for bed, were you able to think 10 ways of delaying bed-time?

Then, in your adult life you are probably using the very same problem-solving skill. All the school, time and experience were able to do was to sharpen that skill. It may be exquisitely more sophisticated in its present form, but at its root it is still the same skill.

And if you are in a job that gives you fulfillment, the odds are great that the job permits you, even encourages you, to use that skill. On the other hand, if you are in a job that makes you feel like a square peg in a round hole, the odds are great that you are denied the opportunity to use that skill and this is the source of your stress and dissatisfaction.

BUT WHETHER the job fits you or not, you remain constant.

Your functional skills remain constant. And so do the people-environments that you prefer to work in. Artists, for example, commonly like to be with other artists — kindred souls, as they say — rather than with data processors, a diametrically opposite people-environment.

From all of the foregoing, we can see just how the notion of a career has changed, and why. It has all depended upon what was the constant thread in a worker's life.

It is a thread, however, and only a thread. A career is not the total person. Some day, when our vocabulary has caught up with our understanding, we may speak of "the career part of a man" or "the career part of a woman," held in balance — one would hope — with "the play part" of a man or woman, and "the learning part" as well.

BUT FOR NOW, we must ask: What is the practical implication of this changing notion of a career? Ah, that is easy: in The Olde Days, if you wanted to advance your career, you studied the organization (and its career ladder). In more recent times, you studied your field (or a new field).

Now, to advance your career, you must learn what you do best with people, data or things (your functional, transferable skills, that is) and what kinds of people you prefer to work with, as described in "What Color Is Your Parachute?" To paraphrase Alexander Pope (violently):

"Know then thyself, if you would change careers; a proper study of thy skills will banish fears."

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the author. Next Week: Barbara B. Lazarus, director of the office for careers at Wellesley College, discusses "Women and Work in the 1980s."

Visually-impaired resident learning to be a mechanic

Bradley Harvey of Canton Township is one of eight visually-impaired students now learning how to repair automatic transmissions.

Bradley and the other students are participating in a 50-week program conducted by Chrysler Learning Inc., the training subsidiary of Chrysler Corp., at its MoTech operations on Lyndon Avenue in northwest Detroit.

The program is sponsored by the Michigan Department of Labor Commission for the Blind.

"The major stumbling block for these students is that potential employers are hesitant to hire visually-impaired mechanics," said Derome Defoe, the program instructor who himself is blind.

"In terms of safety, they are the best employees because they're conscious of their limitations, so they can't take safety for granted."

"That's why we haven't had a major injury since the program started almost four years ago."

"The sighted world judges all blind people by one person's performance," added Defoe. "Therefore, I make sure all my students are excellent mechanics before I graduate them."

Defoe, who graduated from the transmission specialist training program in 1978, uses instructional tapes and hands-on training on vehicles in teaching students how to repair manual, in-line automatic, and trans-axle (front-wheel drive) transmissions.

Before entering the transmission program last March, five of the eight students had graduated from Chrysler's industrial skills training program conducted by the company's special services department which has become Michigan's largest producer of industrial employment and training for physically-impaired individuals.

Special Olympics training, fund raising begin early

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

This is a special year for Carol Mikkelsen.

Not only does the Redford Union High School senior have graduation to look forward to. She's also hoping for a third victorious showing as a participant in the Michigan Special Olympics Winter Games next February.

Created by a grant from the Kennedy Foundation, Special Olympics is a national program that attempts to offer mentally-impaired persons the types of rewards that come from athletic competition.

Matched according to ability and age, mentally impaired athletes compete in a variety of sports for medals and trophies.

Fewer than 1,000 participants, ages 10 to 30, took part in the first Special Olympics games in Chicago in 1968.

COPING

Today, more than 500,000 are involved. For Miss Mikkelsen and several other students in Roger Handy's special education class at Redford Union, the Special Olympics represent a whole year of training and preparation.

"WE PRACTICE in hours when there's not many students in class," said Miss Mikkelsen, an athletic looking blond who was recently named, 'Student of the Week' for her achievements in the classroom.

"Carol is educably mentally impaired," explained her teacher, Handy. "She's considered above trainable in ability and could marry and be independent."

"She just started working at a Big Boy's restaurant as a bus girl and she's doing very well there," he added.

Her high school English, history and math classes place a heavy emphasis on practical work, like language and survival skills and filling out job applications.

As soon as snow covers the ground, Miss Mikkelsen and her classmates will trek out to Lola Valley park in Redford to practice cross country skiing and snow shoeing — two events for which the 18-year-old earned medals last year at Sugar Loaf Resort, the site of the winter games, located just north of Traverse City. Miss Mikkelsen also took a first place trophy in downhill derby.

Because it will cost $106 a person to attend the state games, special education students at Redford Union already have begun raising money by selling popcorn at school and Christmas ornaments.

"The games are still subsidized by the Kennedy Foundation and local

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer
Carol Mikkelsen proudly displays one of the trophies she's won for her participation in the Special Olympics.

sources, like Michigan Bell Telephone, the Redford Suburban League, Redford Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions Club," said Handy.

REDFORD UNION has participated in the Special Olympics for the past four years, sending students to winter and summer games, which are held at Central Michigan University.

"I like the summer games better because it's not cold," Miss Mikkelsen said.

This past June at CMU, she came in first place in softball and bowling and took a third place spot in frisbee throwing.

The successful young athlete says she has always enjoyed sports, especially baseball and bowling. She also faithfully attends all Redford Union football games.

"Carol is very people-oriented," says her teacher, Handy.

Although this is the last year she can participate in the Special Olympics as an RU student, Miss Mikkelsen plans to participate through the sponsorship of other organizations for the mentally impaired after graduation.

Aim of program

Changing attitudes about disabled

By Sandra Armbruster
staff writer

The Tri-City Therapeutic Recreation Program had a game plan when it began serving residents of Westland, Garden City and Wayne more than five years ago. The strategy was not only to get the handicapped into the community but also to get the general public used to having them there.

The plan worked, according to Mike Mushett, director of the program which is headquartered in Westland's Bailey Recreation Center.

Improving the "attitude of the general public in treatment of the handicapped" was one big objective of the program, Mushett said. "We wanted to make the public aware that there is a large handicapped population that's not different from anyone else."

Mushett explained that estimates place the number of handicapped in any community at from 12 to 20 percent of the population. That percentage could be higher in areas served by school districts like Wayne-Westland and Plymouth-Canton, which have special programs for the handicapped.

Wayne-Westland has a respite center in which handicapped children may spend up to two weeks while parents or guardians get some extra rest, go on vacation or spend time with their other children.

In Plymouth-Canton, several programs exist. "Kids on the block" educates the non-handicapped about the needs of the disabled, and "Child find activities" searches out children with special needs in the district.

RESPONSE TO social and recreational programs offered by Tri-City has been more awareness and accommodation by the general public, Mushett added.

"The main fear was apprehension — a coverup for not knowing how to react to the handicapped," he said.

"The rule of thumb to follow is that the handicapped are no different than anyone else. Their handicaps are just more apparent.

"We're all handicapped in some way. They have the same interests, needs and capabilities that we do. People have to keep that in mind.

"People like to categorize, putting others in pigeon holes. They need to take a look at the positive things the handicapped can do instead of looking at the negative."

So successful has the Tri-City Therapeutic Program been that it won the Charles T. Mitchell award recently from the Michigan Association for Retarded Citizens and was one of four finalists for a national recognition award.

When Tri-City began, the only other similar program was in Wyandotte. Mushett said that programs now are beginning in Southfield and Sterling Heights. And Oakland County is beginning one county-wide.

TRI-CITY OPERATES with $62,000 funding from the three cities, split according to each city's share of the population. Westland pays 58 percent followed by Garden City with 28 percent and Wayne with 14 percent of the costs.

Twenty-nine-year-old Mushett is the only full-time person in the program.

There are six to 18 part time staffers who help, depending on the season. Summer is busiest.

The budget is supplemented by fund raising led by a core group of 35 to 40 volunteers. Last year $30,000 was raised in non-budgetary program support through grants and donations.

"Times are tough. We're working twice as hard for the dollars we get," said Mushett. "We have the same thing hanging over our heads that everyone else does."

Volunteers are a key part of the program, Mushett said, and more are needed. They help with programs that serve the mentally impaired and the physically disabled.

THE AGE RANGE of participants has been from six months through 80 years old. Mushett estimates the program serves 600-700 people. Dances sometimes draw 400, and the swimming program attracts 90 to 100 each week.

While the main emphasis is on people from the three cities, Mushett said that calls are received from throughout the area asking for help with things like housing and transportation.

"We do a lot of referrals and act as a clearing house for information," Mushett said. "We sit down and talk with the handicapped about their problems to find out where we can refer them to, but we don't do in-depth counseling."

Mushett also gets calls from across the country requesting help in developing similar programs. He recently returned from a national recreation conference at Western Illinois University where he discussed Tri-City's unique concept of having three cities work together.

"It makes sense, especially these days, in providing any type of service to the handicapped," he said.

THE TYPE OF program offered by Tri-City has changed over the years.

"At first we offered only the basic things, like arts and crafts," Mushett said. "In the past year, we went to Toronto for a weekend trip."

Other trips have included football games, Cedar Point and Pine Knob. The program also sponsors a drop-in center, the Westland Sparks Basketball Team, Tri-City Seals for cerebral palsy affected athletes and the Tri-City Suns, a softball team for the mentally impaired.

The biggest problem still affecting the handicapped is transportation, according to Mushett. Others are accessible housing, architectural barriers, people parking in handicapped-only spots and persons who make "smart remarks" or feign a limp.

Mushett added that the handicapped are "fighting hard not to take steps back from what they've gained" because of budget cuts and changes in the federal laws governing such things as equal opportunity, transportation, education, accessibility and Social Security.

ALTHOUGH MUSHETT planned to be a teacher, he decided to get a master's degree in therapeutic recreation after working with special education students while doing student teaching.

Mushett said his grandfather, who owned a junk yard, originally introduced him to work with the handicapped. They took scrap motors for the disabled to work on in a sheltered workshop setting.

Is lady justice still blindfolded?

To the editor:

We've all seen the blindfolded lady holding balance scales — America's symbol of the justice system.

I've suspected for years that "Lady Justice" in this country is fast becoming deaf and dumb, prejudiced and stupid.

The ugly truth of my suspicions came home to me recently when I was personally involved in a B&E at our home. The incident was covered factually in the Oct. 28 edition of the Northville Record and space will allow me to add little to the details of the event.

The escapee was — in my mind at least — not a thief. He'd taken nothing of value. However, he not only was wearing my sweater, he had brought a towel and golf glove into our bedroom and what went on in our room would give you the creeps.

I threw several of my personal clothes right in the garbage. I shudder to think what would've happened had the township building inspector happened by, or had I been home showering, or had my 14-year-old daughter happened upon him. And what was he going to do with the glove and towel? And the mind reels with "what ifs."

Thursday, Nov. 5, 1981, accompanied by my husband, family and supportive neighbors, I testified in the 35th District Court at the man's examination. I was quite apprehensive as I took the stand (I saw no "fondness" in the man's eyes as I testified).

However my nervousness rapidly turned into anger and distrust as I realized the questions were aimed at tripping me up or trying to poke holes in the truth — in order to establish "reasonable doubt" I supposed. Who's on trial, I thought, victim or victimizer?

Anger and disgust soon were replaced by shock and disbelief as I heard the judge remit him, with his list of prior criminal convictions, back to the care of Northville State Hospital from whence he had escaped. Question:

How soon before he's given another "grounds pass" and will he come to see me and mine? A pre-trial conference was set for Dec. 4, 1981.

My purpose in writing is not to give the gory details or to gain sympathy. Neither is it to instill fear. Rather, my purpose is support. Support for a fence around Northville State Hospital and, possibly later, support to force our legislators to look into the mental health code and the operation of our mental health facilities in order to tip the scales of justice back to protect the law-abiding, tax-paying citizens and their families as well as the truly mentally ill of this state.

Questions: Why are repeated walk-arounds continued to be given "grounds passes"? Why does it take 24 — soon to be increased — security guards to take care of the 1,000-plus housed, "mentally ill" people while eight township police care for 14,000-plus residents scattered around some 18 square miles? Where's our fence? Why not fence state mental facilities — especially where a growing number of the patients, I know personally of one at least in this hospital, have criminal records? Give us a sound reason why we can't have it.

The township, knowing the severity and apparent hopelessness of the situation, has opened up the township hall to us for a meeting to address these and other pertinent questions and begin an action plan — to get it fenced and fixed.

We'll meet in township hall on 6 Mile road on Saturday, Nov. 21, at 11 a.m. Senator Robert Geake, the hospital administrator, and other interested public officials and interested citizens are invited to attend.

My faith in the system has been severely shaken, but not my faith in the basic goodness of my fellow man nor in our ability to effect and obtain our civil rights, too! Join us, please!

Many helped school return

To the editor:

The parents, children and staff of New Morning School wish to thank the many people who have helped us accomplish our return to Plymouth.

In particular, we wish to thank Stanley Tkacz of Tkacz and Associates for his professional work done in completing the New Morning School site on Haggerty Road in Plymouth Township. Too often, work done in a manner of high professional standards goes unrecognized. Praise is certainly due Mr. Tkacz for planning and coordinating the project.

Jim McKeon of Schweitzer Realty and David Smith, attorney, also are to be commended for their professional work.

Special thanks also are due to Maurice Breen, township supervisor, the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees; Joseph Attard, building inspector; Plymouth Township Planning Commission; Jim Anulewicz, township planner; and to the Lakepointe Homeowners Association.

The following contractors completed work on the building and grounds with high standards of workmanship and are to be commended: Kevin Wright, K.T. Construction; John Cumming, plumbing contractor; Gary VanBuren, VanBuren Electric Co.; Richard Perlongo, Perlongo Excavating; Chuck Prochazka, Advance Excavating; and Frank Palmer, Palmer Paving.

Thanks also to Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., Plymouth; Fingerie Lumber, Ann Arbor; and Floorcraft of Roseville for their generous discounts given to the school.

We also wish to give special recognition to our new neighbor, Helen Eckles, who has been so supportive during the entire construction process.

Many community members and our dedicated parents have worked long hours to bring the New Morning building to completion. The encouragement and publicity from Teri Banas, Ellie Graham and the entire Observer staff have been greatly appreciated. Thank you.

Farm issue should be dropped

PRESERVING FARMLAND in western Canton Township should now become a dead issue.

It's time for the township to concentrate on other land-use goals.

Canton residents last week rejected a preservation program by nearly 500 votes. It was the second time in three years voters have turned down a preservation proposal.

Although we supported the farmland issue in concept, Canton voters made it clear that preserving farms is not a top priority for their pocket books.

The farmland issue has been a long, drawn-out issue — with two voter rejections. We said last week's election should decide the issue — once and for all.

Certainly, the master land-use plan for the western portion of the township must be rezoned — in preparation for future development.

There are no immediate signs of development in western Canton because of the poor economy. There will be farms in western Canton for some time because of development slowdowns.

VOTER REJECTION on the farm issue means officials should set aside land-use plans in western Canton and begin concentrating on other community goals.

One important township objective is to begin a sincere effort to attract industry to Canton — especially along I-275 (east) and Michigan Avenue (south).

Canton offers easy access off the I-275 freeway and a busy location between Detroit and Ann Arbor.

It isn't going to be easy attracting industry to Canton during these hard times.

That's why the effort must be sincere — and strong.

The township has moved in the right direction by initiating a plan to pave Haggerty between Joy and Ford. Haggerty, the first main road west of the freeway, would offer an attractive sight for industrial plants — if the road were paved.

Canton officials must do everything in their power to attract industry to the township — as quickly as possible. If industry comes to the township, then it will increase Canton's tax base — relieving some of the financial burden of Canton taxpayers.

We think voters truly wanted to keep farmland in western Canton, but they turned down the proposal to voice their concern for high taxes and the thought of increasing millage rates.

Many municipalities are experiencing financial problems — especially the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

The thought of increased millage rates grinds Canton taxpayers.

It's time for the township to concentrate on slowing down the need for tax increases by attracting industry.

It's a top priority item.

Men keep tight reins at SEMTA

An unfunny thing has happened since 1976 when Gov. William G. Milliken formed an unholy alliance with Detroit Mayor Coleman Young to "reconstitute" the board of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

From 1968-76, SEMTA directors were selected by the governor and the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG). The Milliken-Young plan gave appointment authority to Young, county boards of commissioners and (in Oakland's case) a caucus of local officials who make a recommendation to SEMCOG.

Then an odd pattern developed. See if you can detect what it is.

ONCE UPON a time, a woman named Beverly McAninch of Plymouth served on the SEMTA board, representing suburban Wayne County. She had a SEMCOG appointment. After the law was changed, the Wayne County Board of Commissioners bounced her and replaced her with a male. All three suburban Wayne board members are now males.

Once upon a time, a woman named Julie Evans represented Oakland County on the SEMTA board. She had the misfortune to be a Democrat. After the law was changed, the Oakland County Board of Commissioners replaced her with a Republican — male. All three Oakland SEMTA members are males from the Birmingham-Bloomfield area.

Once upon a time, the outer counties were represented on SEMTA by a woman named Marilyn Thayer of Ann Arbor. She died. SEMCOG replaced her with a male, also from Ann Arbor. Now both representatives from out-counties are males.

Macomb County's two SEMTA board members have always been males.

Do you see the pattern?

Only Coleman Young, whom I often have kicked around in print, has appointed any women to SEMTA. I give him credit.

I SUBMIT that women have a vital role to play on the SEMTA board.

Women look at social problems a little differently than do men of business. I've witnessed it. I've seen SEMTA professionals make elaborate presentations on rapid transit hardware and then get caught in their tracks when a woman board member asked, "But how can someone get to the hospital in that area?" For many reasons a woman's point of view is needed.

Even if women didn't have different views of the world, we would be wasting the talents of half the population if we didn't have women on the SEMTA board. After considering the thoroughness and objectivity with which members of the League of Women Voters study public transportation problems, I also submit that some women could do a superior job.

(Speaking of women in office, did you ever watch County Commissioner Mary Dumas at work? She drives those nuts at 2 Woodward Avenue up the wall. In part, it's her tight skin. But it's also because she does her homework very, very thoroughly and doesn't stoop to good-ol'-boy personal politics. (Ditto with Lillian Moffit in Oakland County.)

THE TIME is coming for interested women to flex some political muscle.

Wayne County gains one SEMTA seat Jan. 1 due to reapportionment after the census. Livonia Mayor Ed McNamara is giving up his seat. Thus, at least two new SEMTA board members must be appointed from Wayne County suburbs.

Anyone who thinks I'm pro-equal opportunity, or that my wife is holding the fish-frying skillet over my head, is misperceiving.

My goal is good public transportation.

Through the years

A long-haired look at styles

An interesting thing a fellow finds as he travels along in life any length of time is the change in customs and styles.

The Stroller was reminded of this at dinner the other evening when the young, attractive waitress swished her hair across her forehead as she placed the food on the table.

This caused a look of horror from the other guests at the table, for it wasn't too long ago that waitresses were required, by law, to wear hair nets to avoid having hair fall into food.

Now it is common to have waitresses wearing long curls. Even the young male cooks in the kitchen have their locks down over their shoulders. They sometimes have beards and mustaches, too.

THIS LITTLE incident at dinner started recollections of other style and custom changes — all the way back to the days when men wore rubber collars that were cleaned with soap and water.

And in those days, men's shirts didn't come with collars. They wore collar buttons. And when they wanted to show real class they'd wear starched collars which had to be cleaned and pressed by a dry cleaner.

It was the same with cuffs on men's shirts. They came separate and were cleaned and pressed by the dry cleaner and were worn with fancy cufflinks. Some class.

Men's wearing apparel also was far different in those days. The Stroller well remembers how proud he was to be wearing the first "pinch back" suitcoat and bell-bottom trousers in our home town.

But it is hair styling which has brought about one of the biggest changes. Folks used to dwell on clean-shaven faces and neatly trimmed hair. No more. Now young men proudly wear mustaches and the stroller

long hair, and it seems that the longer the hair, the more stylish it becomes.

All of which causes The Stroller to chuckle — and not with envy. He has been a member of the bald-headed row for some years and enjoys it.

BUT DID YOU ever notice that few men running for public office sport mustaches? And fewer still have their hair curled down the backs of their necks.

It sounds funny in this day and age to be told that many believe Tom Dewey, the attorney from Owosso, may have lost his bid for the U.S. Presidency because he had a mustache, even though it was always neatly trimmed.

That was in the 1948 race, when Harry Truman was returned to office. His "give 'em hell" campaign was given credit for the victory, but many believe Dewey's mustache worked in Truman's favor.

Come to think of it, we haven't had a mustached president since William Howard Taft way back in 1912.

And there hasn't been a long-bearded baseball team since the House of David squad came out of Benton Harbor and played independent schedules a half-century ago.

So hair is proof that times and styles sure have changed.

Please help handicapped

Coping is something we all do, but with varying degrees of success. How successfully we cope is a measure of how well we manage our lives.

For most of us, that means paying the bills on time, getting dinner on the table and maneuvering our cars through rush-hour traffic.

There are other ways in which we cope, doing things that we've become so proficient at or that are so commonplace they've become automatic. Those are things like carrying groceries to the car, walking up stairs, watching for the traffic signal to turn green and closing windows when we hear thunderclaps.

FOR 12 TO 20 percent of the population, however, those automatic acts are daily challenges in coping. Those are the handicapped people who live in our communities. They are helped by the Tri-city Therapeutic Recreation Program.

That program serves residents in Garden City, Wayne and Westland. The only program of its kind in western Wayne County, the Tri-City office receives calls for help from throughout the area, said Mike Mushett, who runs Tri-City.

For the handicapped, successful coping comes from focusing on what they can do, not on what they can't.

Consider, for example, Livonia athlete Ken Anderson, who may be among the young people considered for international competition next summer. Anderson is a junior at Central Michigan University.

The only difference between Anderson and other juniors at other universities is that he has cerebral palsy.

Carol Mikkelsen, also an athlete, has a different handicap. The senior at Redford Union High is looking forward to graduation and recently began working at a Big Boy restaurant. While doing all that, Miss Mikkelsen also is training for the Special Olympics Winter Games in February.

Miss Mikkelsen, you see, is educably mentally impaired.

There are other success stories, like Bradley Harvey of Canton Township, who, despite being visually impaired, is learning a trade — how to repair automatic transmissions.

BUT COPING always presents a special challenge for the handicapped who must live among people who, through ignorance or embarrassment, sometime make life a little more difficult than it need be.

In this issue, we've examined the sometimes ingenious ways in which the handicapped have been coping with their disabilities. From them come a few suggestions on how we can help.

- Volunteer to help out with Tri-City Therapeutic programs. Currently, there are 35 to 40 volunteers, but Mushett says more are always needed, especially with money for programs being cut at all levels of government.

- Show a little courtesy. That can take the form of steering away from handicapped-only parking spaces or avoiding expressions like "Now don't have a fit." That hurts, say disabled people.

- Look at the positive abilities of the handicapped and remember that they have the same needs as the rest of us.

- Where possible, support transportation facilities, housing and other architectural designs that allow access by the handicapped.

- Remember that we're all vulnerable to disease, accidents and birth defects. Think about that next time you cross a street or otherwise avoid contact with a disabled person.

These suggestions point to acceptance as the best way to help the handicapped cope with their lives. Give it a try.

Heart needs it Cool down after exercise

Question: Why is it important to "cool down" and continue moving immediately after vigorous exercise?

T.M., Southfield.

During exercise your heart pumps faster than normal. Blood vessels in the active muscles expand.

An increased blood flow to the muscles supplies the oxygen and nutrients needed to satisfy metabolic needs.

While the blood is pumped from the heart by forceful contractions, there is no such force to push blood from the muscles back to the heart. Thus, the potential for accumulation of blood in these vessels is countered by a "milking action" of the muscles on the easily compressed veins pushing blood back to the heart.

To assist with this process, the veins have one-way valves which force the blood in travel in an upward direction only (see picture).

IF YOU STOP moving immediately after exercise, there is no muscle pump action to send blood back to the heart. As a result, blood may become trapped or pool in those muscles which have stopped moving — particularly the legs.

The sudden decrease in returning blood to the brain, heart or intestines may result in dizziness, irregular heart rhythm or nausea.

The best way to prevent pooling of blood after vigorous exercise is to maintain the massaging action of the muscles through continued movement. Keeping your legs moving through walking or low intensity calisthenics permits a better return of blood to your heart.

This is why it is often stated that the leg muscles serve as a second heart or pump of your body.

Barry Franklin, PhD, is co-director of cardiac rehabilitation at Sinai Hospital and on the medical faculty of Wayne State University. Send questions to him in care of this newspaper.

Contraction of skeletal muscle squeezes the veins, forcing blood toward the heart. One-way valves, however, prevent the blood from flowing backward.

Save taxes, obtain a high yield with our new insured "All Savers" Account.

What is it?

It's a new way to save that offers "once-in-a-lifetime" tax benefits as well as high interest. What's more, you can open an account for just $500 minimum deposit and make additional deposits of $500 or more anytime.

The new "All Savers" Account will be offered by all of our banks between October 1, 1981, and December 31, 1982. Deposits are federally insured and have a maturity of one year.

How much interest does it pay?

Every four weeks the United States Treasury sells its 52-week (one-year) Treasury bills (T-Bills) at auction. "All Savers" Accounts pay a fixed rate equal to 70% of the average investment yield obtained at each auction. Thus the rate changes every four weeks. However, the rate in effect when you make each deposit is guaranteed for one year from the date of your deposit, and this same rate must be paid by all financial institutions. (For example, the annual interest rate through November 28 is 10.77%.)

Is all the interest tax exempt?

As an individual, up to $1,000 of your "All Savers" interest is exempt from federal income tax. And up to $2,000 if you file a joint return. These are "once-in-a-lifetime" exemptions, regardless of how much you invest or how much interest you earn. The tax benefit is available in any one year, or parts of it in different years through 1983 as interest is received.

Will an "All Savers" Account benefit me?

The tax exemption and the modest minimum deposit make the "All Savers" Account a profitable new way to save. However, the benefits are not the same for everyone. It's a matter of choice and an "All Savers" Account gives you another savings choice. We'll be glad to help you decide if it's the right choice for you.

There is a substantial penalty and loss of tax-exempt status for early withdrawals from any "All Savers" Account.

What if I already have a Money Market Certificate?

If you bank with us, you can convert the Money Market Certificate you have with us into an "All Savers" Account without any interest penalty anytime after October 1. Just bring in your certificate, and we'll handle everything for you. And remember, "All Savers" deposits are federally insured up to $100,000 and the "All Savers" interest rate is guaranteed for one year from the date each deposit is made.

Is it better than a Money Market Fund?

An "All Savers" Account offers many advantages no "investment fund" can match. The rate is guaranteed, your deposits are insured, and depending on your tax bracket, the after-tax yield could be better than any fund pays.

HANDICOPING

Sr. Francilene, Madonna president, operates a tele-typewriter, one of the school's means of communicating with its hearing-impaired students.

Their wheelchairs don't show, but they are part of daily living for both Janice Higgins (left), a pre-med freshman, and Margaret Chmielewski, instructor and guidance counselor at Madonna.

They find accessibility to understanding

By Margaret Miller
Staff writer

Madonna College is accessible to the handicapped.

You'll hear that from the student in a wheelchair moving through its corridors and along its ramps. You'll hear it also from the hearing-impaired student provided with telephone boosters, tele-typewriters and closed circuit television.

You can read it also in a survey published by the National Center for Educational Statistics. That study defines a barrier-free structure as one with 75 percent of its facilities accessible to the mobility-impaired. The study notes that the national average is 40 percent. Madonna's score is 90 percent.

You can see it in the workings of a most unusual group, the Task Force on Handicapped Persons which was organized in 1978. The task force regularly reviews campus facilities, welcomes suggestions and suggests modifications to keep accessibility ever improving.

But beyond these conditions, you can't miss at this small college what its president Sister Mary Francilene Van de Vyver calls "attitudinal accessibility."

"There is a readiness to accept all handicaps that keeps growing here," she said. "We seek out the handicapped as students." Madonna also makes increasing awareness of problems of the handicapped part of its daily routine and it has instituted specific programs to help.

SR. FRANCILENE is quick to point out her school had an advantage in this respect.

"Our buildings went up between 1963 and 1965," she said. "The attention to accessibility was beginning, so from the beginning we were about 75 percent barrier free.

"We don't have the problems of the older campuses."

But that wasn't enough. If the school was to offer special programs — many of which had the advantage of federal funding — there was the need to aim for 100 percent accessibility.

And that was the president's commitment. In 1978 she instituted the task force, which includes administrators, faculty, counselors, students and the college architect, Kamp-DiComo Associates of Northville. This group annually reviews the mobility of campus facilities and suggests improvements.

Margaret Chmielewski, who teaches psychology and does guidance counseling from a wheelchair at Madonna, has been a member of the task force from the beginning.

"We hear from the students what may be lacking," she said. "Recently it was pointed out that the deaf students couldn't hear their doorbells in the dormitory."

The task force took the problem to the architect, and recently a solution has been completed. "Our maintenance department," said Sr. Francilene, came up with a doorbell that has flashing lights and cost just $18 per dormitory room.

BUT PHYSICAL accessibility isn't the only kind the task force notes. Ms. Chmielewski talked about offerings like note taking. Note takers are A or B students, she said, who are paid out of the $100,000 budgeted annually for Educational Support Services.

"They provide copies of their notes for the hearing-impaired student who can't always follow the lecture even though he can read lips. In fact, we have note takers for any student who for whatever reason cannot do it for himself."

Often the students providing the service spend extra time reviewing with the instructor and the student receiving the service. That's another example of attitudinal accessibility, said Sr. Francilene.

So is the increased awareness on the part of instructors that lip readers' frustration when the back is turned can be avoided if an overhead projector is used instead of a blackboard.

And also part of the picture is Madonna's offering of sign language classes to all students regardless of curriculum, and the fact that many instructors also take the time to get a little learning in this area.

"It's not that they can carry on a fast conversation in signing," said Sr. Francilene, who has a fair amount of expertise and keeps it up by having at least one meal a week with some who are hearing-impaired. "But they are able to give directions, or communicate a bit, and they show their care."

"THE MATTER of awareness is a two-way street," said the college president. "The non-handicapped become more sensitive, and the handicapped are able to give more. Everyone benefits."

Madonna also has made another move toward understanding, emphasizing community service and community communication as a way to insure continued funding for its programs concerning the handicapped.

The Livonia Lions Club has donated closed-captioned television and the West Lake Lions the teletypewriter telephones for deaf students.

From mine field to Madonna

Angel Cruz doesn't have to spend his nights studying inch-thick college textbooks. He doesn't have to fret over complicated math problems or spend his afternoons in a library researching term papers.

As a disabled Vietnam veteran with 25 operations behind him, an amputated left leg and a 95 percent hearing loss, Cruz has what he called a "free ride" from the U.S. government.

But three days each week Cruz makes the trek from his home in Plymouth to Livonia's Madonna College, and goes through all the rigors of being a handicapped student at college.

Why? The answers are Matthew, 5, and Michele, 3.

"I didn't want my kids to see me sitting back waiting for a check," Cruz said. "I didn't want my kids to see me not involved with anything."

Two years ago Cruz told his worries to his Plymouth neighbor, Louis Brohl, director of admissions at Madonna, a four-year liberal arts college for men and women.

Brohl knew one sure way to help. He guided Cruz to Madonna's admission office, handled his paperwork, helped him choose his classes and filled out his schedule.

That was five semesters ago. Cruz, 32, is now a sophomore in business administration. And Brohl is still helping out, but this time it's with Cruz' homework.

CRUZ READILY ADMITS that math has been his biggest headache.

"Math is a killer," he said. "I didn't prepare myself for college with my high school courses because I always had a problem with math."

But if understanding the complexities of math has baffled him, Cruz said he has had plenty of help from the college. He ticked off the special help of Brohl, math instructor Paulette Zizzo and management instructor Dr. Charles Roman.

Through the Center for Personalized Instruction at Madonna, Cruz sees a tutor without charge. A free notetaker in all his classes is provided by the Educational Support Services (ESS). ESS also provides interpreters for hearing-impaired students like Cruz as well as counselors and tutors.

Cruz said that just hearing lectures has been one of his biggest problems at college.

On a recent sunny day on the Madonna campus, Cruz talked about the day in 1970 when, on a search-and-destroy mission with his U.S. Army unit, he walked into a radio-controlled mine field.

"Walking into that mine field may have been one of the best things that ever happened to me," Cruz said. "I look at everything differently now. I don't take anything for granted. People take walking for granted, but I view life from a different perspective."

Angel Cruz stows his wheelchair in his car after a day of classes at Madonna College.

Learning and socializing go on at Easter Seal

By Sherry Kahan
Staff writer

From all over central and western Wayne County they come to the Easter Seal Society workshop, tucked away on a short street in Inkster.

The link between them is disability.

Some of the 65 adult workshop clients were born with handicaps. Others acquired them through strokes or accidents.

Some visit the workshop from nursing homes. Others live independently or with their families.

Some have college degrees, some no schooling whatsoever.

They work and talk together in a free program run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily. The Inkster school district pays the salary of the program's special education teacher, Alexis Kornichuk of Westland. Anyone interested in participating may call the society at 722-3055.

"In many cases a handicapped person living with Mom and Dad might not be allowed in the kitchen," said Sheila Dunn, program director. "So we try to improve their skills so they can learn to help at home and eventually be more independent."

The participants are taught how to use adapted tools, such as forks and spoons, which have large handles so they can be handled easily, without the need of much strength. They also make use of a board held on the table by suction cups. The board may have a nail up the middle where a potato or tomato can be placed for cutting. Also on the market for the use of the handicapped is a plate with a two-inch lip. Food doesn't slide off that plate very often.

THEY ATTEND the workshop one day a week during the school year. There is a summer camp in the summer. They can keep coming to the workshop and camp year after year.

The main function of the program is to keep the participants' hands and minds busy. There is a monthly theme on which the talks and activities are based. An expert talks on canning, and when she is finished, class members begin chopping and cutting produce for their own canning project. Or the talk might be on stress, after which they discuss its effect on them.

"I feel stress hits a person with a disability even harder than other people," Ms. Dunn said. "Those with disabilities have more time to worry and more time to use up. An able-bodied person can use time better. The average day of a handicapped person is spent in front of a TV. What we're trying to do by teaching handicraft and housekeeping skills is to give them something active to do to fill space."

On a recent day at the center the participants sat around a big table and worked on clay pieces that would eventually become ceramic artwork. Their muscles were being called upon as they rolled and tugged at their lumps of clay. But it didn't require a keen eye to see another ingredient in play here.

"I like the sociability," said Jerry McInnis of Dearborn. He is there because he has multiple sclerosis. "I like keeping busy for the day. It keeps your mind off your disease. You learn compassion. You find out you're not so bad off, when you see others."

"THEY ARE learning so many more independent-living skills that they become willing to try new things on their own," Ms. Kornichuk said. She added that because many of these adults had no access to schooling before the days of mandated special ed, some had no formal education at all.

"Last week we cut apples, and some were cutting apples for the first time," she said. "So this class opens a new realm for them."

Whenever 60-year-old Larry Barron of Detroit is picked up by the society bus his face lights up, said recreation therapist Teresa Beck. "He lives in a nursing home," she said, "and the only time he gets out is when he comes here. If he came and did nothing more than sit and talk he'd be happy because it provides more sociability than a nursing home."

"THERE IS a big need for handicapped people over 26 to get out," Ms. Kornichuk said, "and this is a great place for them to come to and be involved in an ongoing program."

Ms. Dunn said low self-esteem is sometimes a problem for those attending the workshop. "One person with a learning disability was in a shell and scared to be around new people," she said. "But she made strides and became more open. She cracks jokes now, is observant, and if someone needs help, she goes over."

"After a while quite a few of the class members realize they have enough skills to be an extension of our staff."

She pointed out that the staff emphasizes participants doing as much as they can by themselves, but they get help when it's needed.

"They get their own coffee and start their projects," she said. "If there is inappropriate behavior, the other members won't put up with it."

Evidently, they also are responsible for tidying up after themselves.

Car seat meals come to end clubs in action

It is the end of the season for football and soccer. We are all excited about having our dinner hour around the table instead of in the front seat of the family car because it is our turn in the car pool.

We have to thank the boys and girls for striving so hard to be the best they can be and also thank the coaches for their determination and dedication to the team. We often neglect to consider the women behind the scenes who rarely are seen and seldom heard from year after year.

In the game of soccer there are 12 games in the spring and 12 games in the fall.

Cindy Kuzusko, Jean LaJoy, Irene Murray, Mary Grady, Jo Ann Kuchmay, Joyce Liuzzo, and Nancy Page never know that the season is ended because soccer is on their agendas every month of the year. They are constantly taking phone calls for their active husbands who are either at board meetings, attending clinics, learning to deal with the calls of the referees or building new goal posts.

Dinner and the children have to be a part of a routine day when there is no such thing. The game is just as important to these women as it is to their husbands because it is where they often meet each other for an evening chat.

THE CUP championship games this year included women for the first time. There were many close games but the boys triumphed over all. The players of the Ed Liuzzo Cup were the Cowboys led by Steve Boyd. They battled the Cougars, coached by Brian Murray.

The two teams that qualified for the Dave Monk Cup were the Torpedoes, with coach Ted Dimopoulos, against the Chargers directed by Joe Kuchmay. Gerry Gibbons was the force behind the Golden Streakers while Mike Barretta encouraged the Kickers all the way through the Ken Johnson Cup.

At the last board meeting a suggestion was presented by a few of the coaches and, as a result, a new process will be put in to effect for all 8-year-olds starting this spring. As the children graduate from the pee wee fields after seven years of age, the drastic change to the regulation fields often are too much for the children. In the past they automatically advanced to a travel league which includes children under 10. In the future the 8-year-olds will play with an in-house league as an adjustment time to the larger playing fields.

The Canton Soccer League constantly is striving to improve the spirit of competition and the quality of enjoyment for all involved.

The Plymouth-Canton Junior Football Association is undertaking full responsibility of the training and organization for all of the middle school children since football has been cut from the curriculum.

Last Sunday the Lions and Steelers concluded their 1981 season on a most successful note.

THE PARENTS and board of directors played an active role, along with the local municipalities and the school board, forming a working organization.

The program undertook a major fund raiser because the association depends on considerable monies to sustain the high standard the people of Plymouth and Canton demand. The players and cheerleaders sold 18,000 candy bars in 10 days. They were able to retain 50 percent of the profits which will go toward new equipment for future years.

Alex Mezaros, unit director for the new senior varsity Warriors, worked with the schools and fielded a most successful team on its way to high school competition.

Vicki Daubresse, Barb Gustafson, Sandy Miller, Carol Pata, Lenore Pilot, Carol Reed, Sue Richard, Karen Wellington, Sandy Rummel, Barb Timmerman and Carol Mezaros are the women in football who kept the spirit high all season.

The first invitational game will be played by the varsity team against a team from across the border. The players from London, Ontario will have their work cut out this Saturday at Central Middle School.

Hats off to all of you for your contribution to the boys and girls of our communities.

The Plymouth branch is presenting this diverse program as part of the observance of the International Year for Disabled Persons.

There will be time for refreshments and conversation.

Regional TV channels switching churches

By Margaret Miller
staff writer

Ward Presbyterian Church of Livonia will begin televising its Sunday services over Channel 62 in a half-hour program to begin at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 15.

The move, involving a pilot series of telecasts that will continue through Jan. 3, comes shortly after an announcement from Temple Baptist Church of Redford on the end of its 25 years of telecasting.

The Baptist church, said its media director Doug Symons, aired 1,300 television programs over WXYZ-TV, CKLW-TV, WJBK-TV and WKBD-TV before seeing its television come to an end Sept. 5.

Symons noted that the television time rate was tripled and "we elected not to go competitive." He added that his church is exploring radio broadcasting and some seasonal programs in the future.

WARD'S EXECUTIVE pastor, the Rev. Edward Davis, called his church's new venture "a means of expanding our exposure in the community without creating parking lot problems."

He added that the television series, titled "Cornerstone for Living," is starting after 25 years of broadcasting on FM radio and will consist of excerpts from the earliest of the three morning services held each Sunday in the 3,800-member church at Farmington Road and Six Mile.

Each week's program will include a sermon by Dr. Bartlett L. Hess, senior pastor just back from a two-week trip to India, and an anthem by about 100 voices, part of the church's chancel choir directed by Dr. Jerry Smith.

In the pilot series, two hour-long specials are planned. A Thanksgiving program scheduled at 7 p.m. Thanksgiving evening will have a patriotic theme and will include music by full orchestra and a rendition of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." The other will be telecast at 7 p.m. Dec. 25 and will be a rebroadcast of the church's Christmas Eve service.

TCI Productions, a firm that specializes in religious broadcasting, will tape the 8:30 a.m. service each Sunday and prepare the broadcast from the tape. Working with the firm from the Ward congregation will be Vern Seibert, who will serve as producer, and Richard Halme-Kangas, associate producer.

"WE DON'T WANT to create the impression that we're trying to get members," said Halme-Kangas. "We see this series as a giving gesture on Ward's part."

"We want to provide an upbeat message, not one that creates fear. Dr. Hess' approach is an uplifting one."

He added that the pilot series is being aired as the holidays approach because this is a time when many are low in spirit and "they need to hear something positive."

"Basically, we are targeting two groups of people," Davis added. "One is those who are unchurched and the other is those who are confined. We want to offer something to those unable to get out to go to their own church or any other."

The telecasts have been in the planning stages for about two years, the Ward representatives said. They added that decisions on the future would be made after the pilot series is completed.

THE REPRESENTATIVES of the two churches both indicated airing of religious programs is not in great favor in the broadcasting and video business in this area at this time.

"We did a lot of checking," said Halme-Kangas. "We mailed letters to all local stations, AM, FM and TV. Most responses have been to turn a deaf ear to religious programs, and the prices seem to be beyond the church budgets."

Davis noted that Channel 62 is about the only outlet for the religious program now and added that his church was pleased with its arrangement and looking forward to its association with the station.

At Temple Baptist, Dr. A.V. Henderson, senior pastor, commented after the television series left Channel 50 that "we are grateful to the station for making time available at a reduced rate."

Symons agreed that Channel 50 was "very loyal to us for a great many years."

However, viewing the religious broadcasting situation, he noted that "the bigger a station gets, the less important the role of religious broadcasting becomes."

"When a station is struggling," he added, "it can go to the local churches and have a steady income from them. Later it can charge more and the church programs go."

HE SAID the program produced by the Detroit area's largest Baptist congregation had attracted more than 60,000 viewers each week.

Like the projected Ward telecasting, the Temple Baptist series did not seek to solicit funds or members but was considered a local mission to shut-ins and the unchurched. It was funded completely by the local church.

"We aimed for an inspirational program," said Symons, "with music by members and staff and a devotional message of eight or 10 minutes." This was delivered for 20 years by the late Dr. George Vick, he said, and for the past five years by Dr. Henderson.

moral perspectives

Rev. Robert Schaden

AWAC decision shows money talks

As an elementary school student, I learned that food was one of the major exports of our nation. If there were political ramifications, we were not told of them. AWACs did not exist then and Cancun was a place unknown to most people.

But things have changed since then. Military hardware under the banner of "defense systems" has become our major export, and the ramifications of such trade are as political as they are economic.

Mechanical technology, even when applied to killing machines, has become synonymous with progress.

The family farm is quickly giving way to agri-business or real estate to build bigger and better factories. In fact, some of the very land which once was used to produce food for life is now occupied by corporations devoted to building weapons which threaten life.

ALL OF THIS together explains why the outcome of an AWAC sale claims greater priority than the goals of a conference on poverty at Cancun. Money talks, and building AWACs and other such hardware brings more money to those who already have it than do programs and policies designed to diminish poverty.

Whether we should or should not sell military might to other nations is a question with its own moral implications.

However, the process by which such a decision is made is every bit as crucial to our moral preservation. The name of the game is profit, and money speaks with a much louder voice than that available to the have-nots.

The list of lobbyists for the AWAC sale reads like a who's who of major industry. On the other hand, those who lobby for changes in priorities which perpetuate poverty must not only fight against a financial powerhouse, but they themselves also must rely on meager donations.

Their budgets simply do not match those of corporate America, and so the military-industrial complex which some insist is a myth continues to fly while the issues of Cancun are successfully grounded.

THIS TRANSLATES into living with a system which operates on the premise that people with money are more important than those without it, despite our rhetoric to the contrary.

None of us likes to think in such terms, but until the truth of the matter bothers our moral sense as much as the acceptance of such truth bothers our pride, the haves will continue to rule the have-nots.

An arrogant America will want it to remain that way. An apathetic America will not care one way or the other. A truly proud America will not stand for it.

One wonders what would happen if our moral sensitivities were as offended by such institutionalized selfishness as they are by X-rated bookstores. What would happen if we who vote at the cash registers of our land were to make our statements where they really count?

It might just happen that tomorrow's elementary school children would be raised on a different set of priorities than those of today, who will remember that military hardware is our major export because it is good for the economy.

Singer makes 'a difference'

By Nick Charles
special writer

ASKED HOW she would begin a story about herself, Liz Lachman said, "Something new and different is happening right under your noses."

The young singer is making a big splash, not only locally but nationally. "I want everyone to know that I'm here and that my music will make a difference to them."

Lachman has lived in Birmingham all her life. She graduated from Seaholm High School in 1975. After high school, she attended University of Michigan's Music School. After a year of college she decided it was time to try her hand in the big time, as "Go West Young Woman" and "California Here I Come" rang in her head.

It was then that she realized just how vicious a game rock and roll really is.

"IT WAS AN excellent experience," Lachman said. "I learned that music was a business just like anything else, and I decided that I still wanted to do it."

When L.A. fails, there's only one place left. You got it, New York, New York. There was little time for big apple dreamin'. Before she knew it, Lachman was amid the subways and smog of the big city. While in New York, she studied voice with David Sorin Collyer. He also trained Liza Minelli, Bette Midler, Paul Simon and Melissa Manchester.

When Lachman believed she was ready, she went into a New York studio and recorded a demonstration tape. The three songs on the tape were to impress record company people, producers and anyone who could do an aspiring artist any good.

A new artist can almost drown in either big city so Lachman came back home, not with disappointment but with plan B.

The band played June 26-27 this year at the opening of Detroit's newest rock club, Traxx. After that, it was Cantox's Center Stage and then over to the Main Act in Roseville.

"What we were thinking at the time, was to do a local scene. We thought we'd put together a band and try to attract some attention."

THE OUTCOME was the Liz Lachman Band, which consisted of Lachman and four Detroit-area musicians. The band played June 26-27 this year at the opening of Detroit's newest rock club, Traxx. After that it was Cantox's Center Stage and then over to the Main Act in Roseville.

The audiences loved Lachman, and she enjoyed playing live. The problem was that there's plenty of bands who live that scene day in, day out and never get "discovered." The other problem was money.

"We realized that you can't make money unless you stay in the same place for at least five nights. By the time you pay the roadies, the light crew, the sound crew and everybody else, there's no profit."

If Lachman were your average girl, by now she would have given up, but instead we are now in the midst of plan C.

"What we're planning on doing right now is going back into the studio for some more taping. I want to get a good representation of my style and my music as it is today. We made the first tape in New York a year and a half ago, and I've done a lot of changing."

"I think I'm writing my best stuff

STEPHEN CANTRELL/staff photographer

Singer Liz Lachman is rocking to the top.

right now. There are some people in L.A. who are interested in hearing it.

"I'D ALSO like to produce my next tape because the sound that I'm after and that I hear in my head never comes out on tape. After we do that, my goal is to get signed to a major label."

Lachman's style is catchy, punchy rock that reaches out and gives you your money's worth. The best artists are the ones who take time to nurture their talents until they're ready to unleash them.

Tight-laced rock 'n' roll is the new wave of music that makes '80s music different from that of any other decade. Rock that has a melody so powerful you'll hear it in your sleep.

Lachman creates the musical image of a modern woman on her own in a world that moves so fast that it sometimes becomes a blur — the image of a New York female who turns heads on Broadway because she has control of her world. And it's evident with every step she takes.

Short, simple lyrics hit home. The rock is so it's scary. It is synthesized sounds, driving beats and the hard-to-capture mixture of innocence and evil in a voice that pleads.

Songs like "Love Me Again," "Pretend" and the powerful "I Know You" will make the world stop, look and listen to Liz Lachman.

Mystery leaves you breathless

Performances of the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Wait Until Dark," a mystery by Frederick Knott, continue at 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday at Central Middle School, Church and Main Streets, Plymouth. Tickets are $4 for adults, $3 for persons under 18 and over 65. For ticket information call Karen Groves at 420-2161.

By Joseph C. Guest
special writer

Fine acting and a plot as tricky as Houdini in a strait jacket combine to create a show of mystery and suspense guaranteed to keep you on the edge of your seat.

The show, "Wait Until Dark," directed by Janen Lisa Booth for the Plymouth Theatre Guild, is a slow-starter, but the audience is soon caught up in the happenings as the suspense builds and the plot throws up many a curve. I quickly gave up trying to predict the order of events for the more enjoyable pastime of being a spectator.

The plot, in as much of a nutshell as possible, concerns the efforts of three thugs as they try to locate a doll containing a small fortune in drugs. Their main problem? The young woman supposedly in possession of the doll is blind.

The action is fast and furious as she desperately tries to convince one of the mugs who has befriended her that she doesn't have it. The situation is further complicated when the doll finally does turn up. To state more would spoil a tightly wound story.

TREMENDOUS performances are turned in by all, most notably that of Lisa Andres as the young blind woman, Susy Hendrix. Ms. Andres does a magnificent job in making us fear for her in her helplessness, yet admire her for her resourcefulness. Her performance is most heart-warming in its sincerity.

A strong performance is turned in by Tobin A. Hissong who, in his role as one of the baddies, tries to convince Susy that he is an old buddy of her husband's from the Marines. Hissong adds a nice touch to his role by showing genuine fondness toward Susy.

Vestus J. Spindler III is terrific as Harry Roat, Jr., a role that, because of its many facets, could make any ordinary actor look foolish. But Spindler's versatility makes it look easy, and he shines.

Jerry Billingsley provides the comic relief as the street-wise toughie who masquerades as Sgt. Carlino in his efforts to aid his accomplices in locating the missing doll. His white socks and Bronx dialect make Jerry a delightful addition to the cast.

A fine performance is given by Tani Secunda as Gloria, the adolescent who delights in letting herself into the Hendrix household to rearrange the furniture, which results in Susy bruising more than just her self-sufficiency in moving freely around the apartment. Ms. Secunda does an excellent job in showing us the softer side of Gloria.

Dave Ide plays Susy's husband, Sam. Ide comes across very well as the typical, hard-working family man who loves his wife dearly.

Credit also must be given to those who designed and built the set, which is that of a one-bedroom apartment in Greenwich Village.

Komedy Dinner Theatre issues casting call for 2nd production

Jan and Bill Salisbury, the Farmington Hills couple who opened Komedy Players Dinner Theatre in Allen Park early in October, have issued a casting call for the players' second production.

"Things are going far better than our wildest expectations," Salisbury said of the play now running in Bambi's Welcome Mat.

The spot was chosen by the couple, long-time veterans of community theater, because no other dinner-theater was offered in that area. "But we're drawing crowds from throughout the metropolitan area now," Salisbury said.

The current production is "My Heart Reminds Me," starring Jan Salisbury and Bill Moore, and is the first time the comedy has been produced for Detroit audiences.

The casting call for Komedy Players next production is Monday, Nov. 23 when the players get ready to produce Neil Simon's "Chapter Two."

Those interested in trying out must call the Salisburys for an appointment at 661-1383. They are asked to be prepared with a two-minute monologue of suitable material, bring a picture of themselves and a resume.

"Chapter Two" will open Jan. 29 and run through April 3, with Friday and Saturday evening productions and some Sunday matinees.

LOCAL PLAY-GOERS will recall Jan Salisbury's versatility in the variety of roles she portrayed, mostly for Farmington Community Players.

That versatility is put to the test in "My Heart Reminds Me," as she takes on three roles matched by three roles taken by her co-star.

"It's just fun to watch their change in character and costume as they go from married couple to naive secretary and Swiss sexologist to Hollywood actress and Bulgarian actor," Salisbury said of the two players.

The story revolves around a married couple of 25 years. He decides he wants an affair with his secretary, and she decides to bring a sexologist in to help. The six-member cast includes a sexy actress and actor, but all are played by Mrs. Salisbury and Moore.

"They're loving it," Mrs. Salisbury said of the play written by Tom Sharkey.

"Bambi's offers flower-bedecked tables, dim lights, Broadway music, an endless salad bar and a delicious buffet. The coffee and dessert are a prelude to one of the funniest plays to come this way in years."

Komedy Players Dinner Theatre is one block off Southfield Road, on Allen Road. Reservations are taken by calling the theater, 661-1383.

Tom Panzenhagen

"The Uninvited" (1944), 12:25 to-night on Ch. 50. Originally 98 minutes.

Ray Milland and Gail Russell are star-crossed lovers bedeviled by the ghost of Gail's mother. Story is chillingly told with a minimal number of special effects and bumps in the night.

Director Lewis Allen relies more on light and shade, striking (though realistic) visuals and fine performances to create a mood of dread and trepidation. Ruth Hussey and Donald Crisp also star. Rating: $3.

"The Legend of Hell House" (1973), 1 Saturday night on Ch. 4. Originally 95 minutes.

No special effects are spared in this frightening remake of an awful Robert Wise film, "The Haunting" (1963). Roddy McDowall and Pamela Franklin lead a team of psychic scientists as they unearth the darkest secrets of the haunted Hell House. Director John Hough doesn't pull any punches — this is evil that must be reckoned with, not some friendly spirit. Wonderful sound effects, too. Rating: $3.

"High Anxiety" (1977), 9 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2. Originally 94 minutes.

At least Mel Brooks acknowledges that this would-be comedy is a spoof of Hitchcock, which is more than can be said for Hitch imitator Brian D. Palma. De Palma — yearly, it seems — comes out with another Hitchcock-lookalike film and claims that any resemblance to the master is purely coincidental. Brooks attempts to have fun with Hitchcockian plot twists and camera angles, but ultimately falls short of his goal. Brooks' "The Birds" sequence is painfully bad — almost anti-funny. Rating: $1.

"Close Encounters of the Third Kind" (1977), 8 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 7. Originally 135 minutes.

Wunderkind Steven Spielberg's "Encounter" got better reviews than it deserved when it was new. The first half of the film is magic, owing largely to the photography of Vilmos Zsigmond and special effects of Douglas Trumbull. Large segments of the film, however, which rely upon Spielberg directing Richard Dreyfuss through episodes of seeming insanity, are funnier than portions of "High Anxiety." In fact, eventual criticism led Spielberg to re-edit the film, tightening the Dreyfuss sequences and elongating the spectacular, extraterrestrial finale. John Williams' music also lends weight to a film which, in the long run, is beautiful but vapid — kind of like space itself. Rating: $2.85.

Players stage comic delight

Performances of the Farmington Players production of Jack Sharkey's "Kiss or Make Up" continue Friday-Sunday and Nov. 19-21 at the players barn theater, 32332 W. 12 Mile, Farmington Hills. For further information, call the box office at 535-8822.

By Barbara Michals
special writer

Warning: the Farmington Players' hilarious production of Jack Sharkey's "Kiss or Make Up" can be hazardous to one's health — you'll leave the theater weak from laughing.

Like all good farce, "Kiss or Make Up" relies heavily on mistaken identities and improbable plot mix-ups. As stylishly performed by the Farmington Players, the show is a comic delight.

Morgiana Kendrick (Sandra Sutherland) is a middle-aged version of television's Rhoda, wise-cracking and self-deprecating. For years she has maintained an imaginary husband and children to camouflage her embarrassment at remaining single.

review

When an eligible man finally drifts into her life, "Mrs." Kendrick decides she must "kill off" her imaginary spouse and claim widowhood. Problems arise when someone mysteriously tips off the authorities that Mr. Kendrick's supposed death is suspicious, and the IRS discovers that the elusive Mr. Kendrick has never filed an income tax return.

THE TREASURY Department sends its most inept investigator, Barney Benson (Dan Hicks). Both Miss Kendrick and Benson seek help from Miss Kendrick's neighbor, Casey (Linda Finder). Casey's fiancé, Morgiana's suitor and a very confused policeman are soon stumbling over intricate deceptions.

The cast is uniformly excellent. Sutherland brings great warmth and naturalness to Miss Kendrick. Her delivery is smooth and seemingly effortless, her characterization totally winning.

Hicks masterfully portrays Benson as a well-intentioned bungler, sincere but not too bright. In trenchcoat and dark glasses, he begins as an outrageous parody before evolving into a more interesting character. Hicks has great comic timing.

Finder admirably succeeds as the ingenious Casey. Though she tries to remain calm while events swirl about her in a headlong tumble, Casey is quickly caught up in the comic antics. Finder's expressive face registers her distress.

As Hanley Swope, Miss Kendrick's nondescript suitor, Dick Coe is perfect as the kind of fellow who "can get lost in a crowd of two." Played with appropriate understatement, Coe's Swope is a little more than the milquetoast everyone takes him for.

son, Swope casually scratches at his neck. Before long, all six principal characters are writhing in paroxysms of itching because Swope works with parasite-infested crocodiles at the Central Park Zoo. This absurd development is indescribably funny, the kind of humor that gets under one's skin.

Tom Szymke is very appealing, as Franklin McHugh, Casey's fiancé. Szymke is particularly adept at registering double takes and wide-eyed bewilderment at the strange goings-on in Casey's apartment.

Ira Purchis' befuddled cop is effective, especially when he tries to maintain the dignity of the law while wearing only a bedsheet toga and his badge.

As Mrs. McHugh, Casey's future mother-in-law, Joyce Moore radiates Bostonian propriety mixed with good-natured adaptability to the madcap situation. Her arrival on the scene helps set identities straight.

Under director Sharlan Douglas and her assistant Deborah Kembell, "Kiss or Make Up" is well-paced, well-acted and thoroughly funny.

Jim and Judy Sladky, five-time U.S. National Ice Dance Champions, head a list of world-class figure skaters appearing in "Disney's World on Ice" Tuesday through Nov. 22 at the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

● TRAP PLAY — MATCH PLAY

In this example, white has a 5-4 to play and is trailing 10-7 in an 11-point match. Since this is the Crawford Rule game, the doubling cube is neutral and cannot be used until the next game.

How would you move the 5-4 roll if you were white? I'm assuming everyone sees the obvious — moving the 6 and 5 point checkers to the 1 point. Before agreeing or disagreeing, ask yourself why this cannot be correct.

Aside from white leaving a double-six horror roll, sewing up the 1 point is not necessary. It is critical that white try for a gammon no matter how slim the odds.

With the score 10-7 in an 11-point match, white must win three consecutive games to win the match, or two if he can gammon black. Winning one point this game could put the score 10-8. Of course, in the next game white should double on his very first roll; if he wins, the score would be 10-10. One more game would decide who wins the match. However, if white succeeds with a gammon in either game, he will win the match.

So, having this position and understanding the philosophy of what it takes to win the match, white must plan his moves a bit differently.

By moving the 8-point checker to the 4 and by slotting the 6-point checker to the 1 point, white has, in effect, protected himself from leaving a shot with a double 6 roll on his next turn and has created a unique opportunity to possibly win a gammon, if things go according to plan.

Although this move may appear suicidal to many viewers, it is nonetheless perfectly harmless for white. White is hoping black will immediately roll a one and hit. Now black cannot escape. So, with the other number rolled, 1-3, 1-4 and 1-5, black will be forced to leave a shot, which white is prepared to hit. Even a 1-2 plays well, since it keeps black from opening a point until next roll. Then a 6 and anything will leave a shot for white.

Either way, this is a no-lose situation for white. It's either a single win or an if-come gammon.

The important criteria here is that white has black blocked by a six-point prime, and with spare checkers on the 4 and 5 points white can certainly try this same approach again until it succeeds or fails completely.

White is a winner here either way, but a gammon would put him a doubling cube away from match victory.

Southfield woman does choreography for show

Sheryl Sulek, Southfield resident and past president of the Dance Masters, has choreographed all the numbers performed by the Super Troupers in "The Super Trouper Circus Revue" now playing at a luncheon matinee Saturdays at Roberto's Family Restaurant in Berkley.

The producers describe the show as the Detroit area's first matinee theater for children. Performing in the show are Rebecca and Renee Manciewicz of Livonia; Michelle Burdick, Sonya Cox and Troy Greenfield of Detroit; Sharon Lowrey and Julie Sulek of Southfield; Carolyn Kemp, Ann Stadler and Kim Galasso of Redford; Karen Oberholtz of Farmington Hills and Greta Schnurstein of Plymouth.

These young dancers range in age from 10 to 14 years old and perform three numbers in the show.

Martha Keller of Birmingham is producer of the show, in association with TAP, Ltd. Keller and Paul C. Glaros, Chrissie the clown and director of the show, have spent two months putting this entertainment together.

Also featured are 11-year-old song and dance artist Stevie Van Meter of Keego Harbor; Jeff Hobson, magician from Detroit; Gilda Batwings, a witch; and mime Michael Brody.

Reservations can be made by calling the TAP reservation service at 961-0533. Ticket price of $5 includes the show and Super Circus sundae.

Magazine, and No. 3 by the Golden Gloves Association.

"Payne's fight was more or less just a workout," said Soucey. "He should be in the AAU and Golden Gloves. He certainly has the potential to go all the way this year." (For more results, please turn to page 4C).

Chief cagers rip Wayne Memorial in non-leaguer

Sue Gerke, a junior guard, pumped in a career-high 20 points to carry Plymouth Canton to a lopsided, 78-37 girls' basketball victory Tuesday over Wayne Memorial.

It was the Chiefs' 15th straight victory of the year. Canton is 17-1 overall. Wayne Memorial, which will compete in the Class A district playoffs at Canton, slipped to 6-11.

Another junior, Polly Roberts, also produced her best scoring effort of the season with 12 points. Senior forward Cindy Sovine also had 12 and guard Pearly Cunningham chipped in with 10.

Canton took a 15-9 first-quarter advantage and upped that lead to 10 at intermission, 33-23.

THE CHIEFS, behind Gerke's hot shooting, blasted the Zebras in the third quarter with a 24-8 scoring outburst.

"We didn't move the feet fast enough on defense in the first half," said Canton coach Mike McCauley. "We did a better job of that in the third quarter."

Canton continued the rout with a 21-6 fourth quarter.

The Chiefs went after their 51st straight Western Six League victory last night at Livonia Churchill. Complete results will appear in Monday's Observer.

Mercy cagers to invade Bentley

District girls' basketball action kicks off a "new" season next Thursday, but before then there's plenty of unfinished business left.

Highly-ranked Livonia Bentley closes its season facing two big obstacles.

The Bulldogs, sporting a 17-2 record and ranked No. 4 in Class A, will try to claim its third straight Suburban Eight League basketball title against Plymouth Salem, 16-2 overall and ranked No. 6. Game time is 7:30 tonight at the Salem gym.

Both teams come into the game with 10-1 league records. Salem stunned Bentley in an earlier meeting, 45-38. That dropped the Bulldogs from the No. 1 spot.

Bentley sought and found a worthy non-league opponent to fill out its allowable 20-game schedule.

Farmington Hills Our Lady of Mercy will invade the Bulldogs' gym at 7:30 p.m. Monday in a non-league matchup. The Marlins come into the game with a 16-1 mark. Dearborn Divine Child shocked the No. 1-ranked Marlins Saturday in the first round of the Catholic League playoffs, 42-40, costing Mercy a No. 1 ranking it held for almost three weeks.

MERCY'S LOSS wiped out a possible Catholic League playoff showdown with the state's No. 1 ranked Class B team, Livonia Ladywood (17-0), which owns two victories this season over Divine Child.

Redford St. Agatha, rated No. 1 in is temporarily adopted by Greene and the team. Believe it or not, this is based on an award-winning TV com-
