Ex-treasurer threatens suit over 'injuries'

By M.B. Dillon Ward and Diane Frea
staff writers

Former Canton Treasurer Maria Sterlini is threatening to sue the township for "injuries she sustained in and around the township offices," according to her attorney, Albert Lopatin.

Sterlini, whose tumultuous four-year term ended in November, claims she suffers respiratory problems stemming from township hall's ventilation system, Lopatin said, adding that his client probably will seek more than $10,000 in damages.

Sterlini's physician advised "she should not be exposed" to the environment any longer, which is why she could not run for a second term, he added. Lopatin heads the Detroit firm of Lopatin, Miller, Freeman, Bluestone, Erlich, Rosen & Bartnick.

Three former part-time Sterlini employees are the only others ever to have complained about air quality in the building, according to Canton Personnel Director Daniel Durack. In March 1983, the staffers reported smelling some sort of fumes in their office, Durack said.

Canton Supervisor James Poole knows of no ventilation problems at township hall and said, "I don't even know what (Sterlini's) charges are."

To date, the township has received only a vague three-paragraph letter announcing that Lopatin was retained by Sterlini. No petition or complaint has been filed in the case.

SEVERAL AIR-quality inspections have been made at township hall, presumably at Sterlini's request, by the state health department's occupational health division. Results of a September 1984, inspection are due next month, a health department consultant told Durack Tuesday.

Assessments differ on previous reports. Lopatin claims the inspections revealed "there was something wrong with the township's ventilation system, causing not only injuries to Sterlini, but to three others in the same office. I think she has a good case based on what she tells me and on medical records."

Occupational Health Division Chief Irving Davis, however, says Sterlini's complaints are unfounded.

"We've received complaints and have gone out two or three times, but have been unable to find anything. We don't see a potential source or any contaminants that would coincide with ill-effects suffered by any employees," Davis said.

Davis added he is "confident" he'll have nothing new to report once the paperwork on the September inspection is complete.

PRESENTLY, each side is in a holding pattern. Lopatin says he's waiting for medical reports from Sterlini's doctors, and to hear from Canton. Township Attorney Owen Cummings and Walt Felts, Canton's insurance claims supervisor, say there's nothing to do until a workers' compensation claim or a complaint is filed.

It's unclear, according to attorneys, what's at issue. Lopatin contends that because Sterlini was an elected official, she's ineligible for workers' comp and must sue for personal inju-

Special ed plan judged costly

By M.B. Dillon Ward
staff writer

School board members recently took their first look at proposed changes in special education laws — revisions they fear will cost Plymouth-Canton Community Schools thousands of dollars.

District officials expect that after holding statewide public hearings, the Michigan Board of Education will make sweeping changes — without giving the money to hire personnel or implement new rules.

Board members also dread the draining of dollars out of classrooms and into the state Department of Education. (The changes would give the education department added responsibilities, which trustees translate into more state manpower and money.)

State officials dismiss the fears as groundless, calling the rule revisions "a pro-child package that creates additional opportunities for students and . . . that may well save money."

About 10 percent of the students (1,563) would be affected in the Plymouth-Canton district — the special education population is up from last year's 1,396 pupils. (Speech- and language-impaired students who numbered 598 in 1983-84 now total 761).

Nearly $4 million is budgeted this year for the district's special ed program, which serves about 3 percent more students than the average for districts statewide and nationwide.

BEHIND THE state's plan — under which more than half the current 124 special education rules would be changed (see highlights accompanying this story) — is the intent to "Deal with the changing tenor of the times and make sure we establish a full continuum of services and range of alternatives appropriate for students," said Dr. Ed Page, district executive director of special programs and vice chairman of the state's Special Education Advisory Committee.

Also, he said, the rules are an outgrowth of the refusal of some districts to provide services and the many requests of others to deviate from state law.

"On one hand, the state has removed the authority at the local level to receive and mediate parent complaints. On the other, it has allowed for serious sanctions to be administered to local districts without state board action," said Page, who will testify at a Wayne County public hearing in February.

"The cost of hearings would easily double at a minimum. The hearing officer has been given broad authority within local school districts under the plan.

"The hearing officer cannot only direct the local district on what kind of program should be provided but in which building the program will be administrered."

"THIS IS not any grasp for power and, as far as I'm concerned, it will save money," countered Dr. Richard Baldwin, special education consultant with the state department of education's special eduction services division.

"This will allow us to determine a complaint's validity at a central source, review it, and give it to the intermediate district to investigate."

Other snags Page sees: "Because of changing program rules, established teachers will need to return to the university to be approved as possessing certain on-the-job skills such as

Key changes in special ed law:

- The state Department of Education, not local school districts, would handle complaints from parents. After a review, the state would direct the intermediate (county) school district to investigate. The intermediate school district would implement or oversee corrective action. The state department could send parties of a complaint to arbitration or mediation.
- The state board could withhold state funding when a district failed to correct known violations of the law.
- Local districts would assume responsibility for due process hearings. (Hearings, conducted by state-approved outside arbiters are held when parents take grievances beyond district administration.) Districts would be required to provide full transcripts of such hearings.
- The maximum number of special education students per classroom would be reduced to 15 from 18.
- Teacher consultants, who evaluate "mainstreamed" special ed students, would be replaced by educators working in the newly-created role of "educational consultant," requiring a return to graduate school.
- Colleges and universities would institute and require more courses for prospective special ed teachers.
- Special ed instructors will no longer be able to move between the elementary and secondary levels unless they are certified in both. Presently, teachers certified at the elementary level may teach in secondary schools and vice versa.

School board trustee vote tabled

By Sandra Armbruster
staff writer

Unable to agree Monday on selection of a new trustee for the Wayne-Westland school board, members will meet at 7 p.m. Friday to try again. The special meeting in the board room of the Dyer Center, on Marquette east of Newburgh, is open to the public.

Board members have until midnight Thursday, Dec. 20, to reach a decision before the process of filling a vacancy is taken over by the Wayne County Intermediate School District. The vacancy occurred after the departure of the Rev. W. James LeDuc for Texas.

"Between now and the 20th, hopefully we'll have some reflections on this and the future," said board Secretary Mathew McCusker, in moving to table the issue. It was approved unanimously by the six board members.

FINALISTS CULLED from a field of 10 candidates are Kenneth Barnhill of Canton Township and Sylvia Kozorosky, deputy director of the department on aging and a Westland resident.

Interviews of the 10 were conducted Saturday and Sunday by board members. An 11th candidate, Rose Mary Miller of Wayne withdrew after receiving a job promotion. The first five ballots were cast on Sunday.

The field of candidates was narrowed in a balloting process devised by a committee of three board members. Trustees voted for their top choices in a series of five ballots, listing them in alphabetical order with no indication of

P-C board calls for special election

Non-renewal of 8 mills would mean 'major loss'

The school board has called for a special election to be held in February to seek voter approval of a millage renewal proposal.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Monday night approved asking for the special election to be held Tuesday, Feb. 5.

At stake is eight mills or $8 per $1,000 state equalized valuation (SEV) currently being levied.

As in any millage renewal, approval would not result in a tax increase while defeat would result in a tax cut.

But, as school officials stress, defeat also would result in a major loss in school operating income.

RAY HOEDEL, associate superintendent for finance, said that the eight mills represents 17 percent of the district's total revenue.

"If it doesn't pass we would lose some $8 million which represents about 250 positions.

"If the renewal were defeated, we would try again because the money involved is so vital for maintaining needed programs and services."

The importance of the renewal was echoed by E.J. McClendon, school board treasurer. "We worked so hard just a while back to get voter approval of a relatively small increase. So I think you can see that defeat of these eight mills we are now collecting would literally blow our budget away."

In October voters approved a request for an additional 1.74 mills ($1.74 per $1,000 SEV). Because of the Truth in Taxation law, however, the additional mills levied actually will be 1.71.

The district's current operating budget for 1984-85 represents expenditures totaling some $45.6 million with revenues of $46.8 million for a projected balance of $1.2 million.

Next year (1985-85), however, expenses are expected to exceed revenues by $540,000 and the following year the income shortfall is projected to be $485,000.

The school district's total taxbase (SEV) currently is almost $960 million, a decline of about $25 million from the previous year.

THE EIGHT MILLS, if approved, would be levied for a period of six years from 1985 through 1990.

The deadline to register to vote in the special election will be 5 p.m. Monday, Jan. 7. The polls on Feb. 5 will open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. at the district's 14 voting precincts. The language of the ballot proposal is expected to read:

"Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, Wayne and Washtenaw Counties, Michigan, be increased by 8 mills ($8.00 on each $1,000.00) on state equalized valuation for a period of 6 years, 1985 to 1990 inclusive, for the purpose of providing additional funds for operating purposes (this being a renewal of 8 mills for operating purposes which expired with the 1984 tax levy).

Of the school district's total revenues of almost $47 million, $37 million is generated from local property taxes, $7 million from state aid, $1.2 million in federal grants, and $1.2 million from interest on investments.

The district's tax levy this year is 37 mills ($37 per $1,000 SEV) or about $1,480 a year on a home valued at $80,000.

Westland man shot

A Westland man reported being shot at and injured by someone in a gray vehicle Monday while he was putting golf balls at a sod farm south of Koppernick Road east of I-275.

Marino Nunzio, 19, said someone in a gray vehicle approached him, fired two shots at him with a rifle at 12:25 p.m. and then left. Police said Nunzio sustained a superficial wound when one of the shots hit him in the left upper arm.

Police are investigating the incident.

Ski cross country for fitness, serenity

By Lem Mesee
staff writer

Far from the maddening downhill ski slopes is another skiing activity that compliments winter's solitude. It's cross-country skiing, and if you think it's too tame for you, consider that cross-country skiing is one of the best all-around forms of exercise.

The Presidential Sports Award Fitness Manual rates cross-country skiing as high for muscular endurance, heart and lung endurance and weight control; and of medium benefit for flexibility and muscular strength.

Downhillers can expect only medium benefit in muscular endurance and flexibility and low benefit in muscular strength, lung and heart endurance and weight control. Only swimming gets slightly higher marks than cross-country skiing.

NOT ONLY can you expect to build up your body, you can also expect to clear your mind of the stressful baggage we tend to carry around.

There's hardly a prettier sight than the rolling hills of a southern Michigan woods filled with snow. If the lift lines, crowded slopes and the fashion-consciousness of downhill skiing have soured you, consider making the switch. You owe it to yourself to experience the serenity of cross-country skiing.

While diehards start adjusting their bindings at the sight of the first flake, it's best to wait until about four inches of snow have fallen before you head for the trails.

Between state, county and metroparks, there are hundreds of acres to explore only a short drive away. Our favorites are Maybury State Park in Northville Township, with nine miles of groomed trails, and Proud Lake and Highland State Recreation Areas near Milford for more strenuous trips. Rentals are available at all three sites.

Another close-to-home site is Independence Oaks County Park near Clarkston, with 16 kilometers of groomed trails, warming shelter with fireplaces, restrooms and concessions.

Huron-Clinton Metroparks have the largest network of trails in the tricounty area. Here's a list of Metropark facilities.

- STONY CREEK near Rochester has 15 miles of groomed trails from 1.7 miles and longer, ski rental and touring center. The center, at Eastwood Beach, is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Friday and 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends. It has heated restrooms and coin lockers. Vending machines are at the nearby boat-launch building with snack bar service on weekends. Weekend lessons. For information, call 781-4242.

- KENSINGTON near Milford operates a ski center at the golf starter building, which is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays and 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays. Fifteen miles of groomed trails from one to 4½ miles. Night lighting at the golf site during touring hours. Expanded weekday hours during Christmas holiday. Ski lessons on weekends. Rentals with group rates available. Heated restrooms and food service. 685-1561.

- HURON MEADOWS, west of US-23 and south of Brighton, has six miles of trails. Four groomed trails. Ski-touring center at golf starter building with rentals, weekend lessons and food service. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. (9 a.m. during Christmas) weekdays and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends. Same phone number as Kensington.

All Metropark sites are closed Christmas Day. Rentals are about $5 per half-day for a complete set or $2 for boots or skis only. $1 for poles only. Toll-free number for information on all metroparks is 1-800-552-6772.

All Metroparks, state and Oakland County parks have vehicle entry charges. Daily or yearly passes are available.

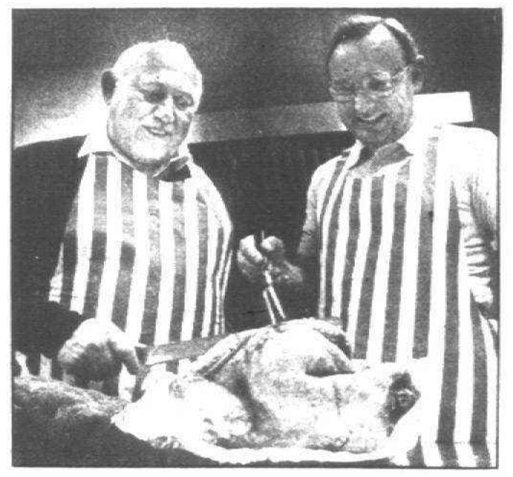
A special Christmas evening



Frank Palmer and Gene Overholt had the honors once the birds were done.

SOME 135 senior citizens from Canton, Plymouth and Northville gathered together for a festive holiday dinner Monday night at the Salvation Army Community Center in Plymouth.

The occasion was the annual Christmas Dinner put on by the Salvation Army for senior citizens in the community. And this year a large number of seniors turned out.

The corps transported a large number of residents from Tonquish Manor apartments in the City of Plymouth and from St. David's Gate in Plymouth Township. "We had about four to five van-loads from those two locations," said Lt. Larry Manzella, corps commander.

Entertainment was provided by the youth group of the Salvation Army who dressed up as angels and sang songs of the season in the chapel after dinner.

Community leaders who serve as members of the corps' Advisory Board prepared the food and cleaned up afterwards. The meal was served by cheerleaders from the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park.

Throughout the metropolitan Detroit area the Salvation Army served meals to nearly 2,000 senior citizens who were the invited guests at Christmas luncheon and dinner parties at 11 centers.

The dinner here was served in the community center on Main Street just south of Ann Arbor Road. It was the first dinner hosted by Lt. Manzella who arrived earlier this year as the new corps commander.

Everyone was invited to take part in singing some of their favorite Christmas carols before the Christmas

Injury lawsuit threatened

ry. Cummings cites the Blair Moody case, saying elected officials do qualify for workers' compensation. The family of the late Supreme Court Justice Moody recently collected thousands of dollars after filing a workers' comp case charging that Moody's heart trouble and death were directly related to job stress.

Lopatin says "if within 60 days I haven't heard acknowledgement from anyone interested in doing something, I will file a complaint and they'll have a lawsuit."

Cummings doesn't share Lopatin's optimism about Sterlini's chances of recovering damages.

"(To) us it's rather strange. Actual ventilation stems from a single source — either a furnace or an air conditioner," he said. It doesn't make sense for a circulating air system to affect only one of many offices in the building. Every air quality test that's been taken has come up negative, and there've been no other complaints, added Cummings.

Sterlini said she has no comment on the case.

Of the former staffers who reported smelling fumes, neither Jacqueline Osborn or Norma Heheman was available for comment. Barbara Precour declined to discuss the matter.

None has filed a workers' comp claim, Durack said.

Cookie sale to benefit research

To Canton Firefighter Frank Chakrabarty, Christmas means more than mall hopping, tree trimming and card writing. Along with other Children's Leukemia Foundation volunteers, 'tis the season to sell Stouffer cookies packaged in seven-ounce "Currier and Ives" tins.

Proceeds, which Chakrabarty is hopeful will exceed $3,500, will go toward the research of leukemia and other blood-related diseases.

Available through the end of December for $7 at the Canton Fire Station at Canton Center and Cherry Hill, in the assessor's and clerk's offices at Township Hall, 1150 S. Canton Center Road — the cookies are being sold by chapters statewide. Chakrabarty and a group of Rainbow Girls already have sold cookies at Meijer Thrifty Acres and Kroger stores.

"These are a very deluxe type of cookie available only through the Children's Leukemia Foundation," said Chakrabarty. "They aren't available in stores. They make excellent Christmas presents and are tax deductible."

'interpersonal relations' and 'consultation skills.'

"Unfortunately, the state Board of Education will not provide final approval for these rules until August 1985, a few weeks before they are to be implemented and about six months after the 1985 budget and staffing considerations have been completed by most local school districts."

TRUSTEE DAVID Artley is wary of the way rule changes are drafted and enforced.

Accountability is lost because of the state board adopts them as law without any legislative comment, he said.

Disgruntled constituents cannot lobby their legislators, as they are bypassed in the process, Artley said.

The district's Special Education Parent Advisory Committee (SEPAC) echoes local officials' concerns.

Harvey Plas of SEPAC said his group is drafting a position paper decrying what he sees as the impending swelling of state bureaucracy.

Grievance post filled

Canton Township Trustee Loren Bennett was selected to succeed personnel director Dan Durack as the township representative to answer employee grievances at Tuesday night's board meeting by a 6-1 vote.

Clerk Linda Chuhran, who had nominated Trustee Gerald Brown for the spot, cast the only dissenting vote.

The township grievance representative holds a hearing with the department head and union representative and "hears both sides of the story," Durack said. It is the final step before arbitration. Durack had been serving as a temporary replacement for the late Clerk John Flodin.

Although trustees expressed confidence that Durack was "impartial and not predisposed to take a particular action," as Trustee Robert Padget said, they expressed concern that the employees might perceive him as being involved from the management side. "That perception is what counts," Padget said.

Chuhran submitted Brown's name, because he serves as a paid full-time township administrator. The township grievance representative serves without pay or compensation and spends approximately one hour on each grievance, averaging about 30 a year, Durack said.

Bennett supported the selection of a trustee over one of the township administrators because of a possibility that "an administrator would be making decisions over his or her employees."

Bennett said "I'm well aware of the commitment and I'm certainly prepared to make this commitment." Bennett said that his schedule is flexible because he is self-employed and that his availability never should be a problem. "If it comes to that, I'll be the first to let you know" so that someone else can be selected, Bennett told the board.

Canton resident vies for school board seat

By Sandra Armbruster
staff writer

Kenneth Barnhill, a Canton Township resident since 1971, started attending Wayne-Westland school board meetings prior to a recall election. Barnhill talked about what he saw from the audience viewpoint during his interview Saturday for a vacancy on the board.

"A lot of what I see at the board level I think is not good for what I see as the objective goals board members have set for themselves," he said. Barnhill added that the division on the board "hurts the perception" of the body.

"It's too bad people can't hold together. They have one common goal — the best education they can afford to provide."

WHILE NOT TAKING sides, Barnhill said that he has disagreed with the intent of or the way, board members have voted. Ideally, he said, given the same information, board members would reach the "correct" conclusions.

"Sometimes people take the same information and don't understand it fully or don't believe the information," resulting from a different philosophical interpretation.

Barnhill praised the quality of the staff, facilities and tools in the district as good, but he added that there are "things that need to be done now before they have to be done."

Wayne-Westland School District

The district serves southeast Canton

A member of the last building utilization committee that studied school closings, Barnhill favors establishing a new committee to evaluate enrollment areas of each elementary school.

COMMUNICATION with residents has improved, according to Barnhill. He has seen the community awareness increase as well as the visibility of administrators in area school buildings.

Asked what the responsibility of a board member is, Barnhill said he was unable to find a legal definition. However, he described it as "setting an example of doing the right things that are best for the district, the citizens and for the community."

If he received a call from a parent, Barnhill said it would be his "responsibility to do something about it.

"It wouldn't necessarily be my initial responsibility or duty to do it myself. The administration is paid to do that."

Acting as a "conduit," Barnhill would follow up with the caller to "make sure they were happy with the process and know that they were treated fairly."

HOW REVENUE should be spent in the district is "difficult to sit out there (in the audience) and decide. I don't have access to the financial reports," Barnhill said.

"Two-thirds of the entire budget gets spent whether you folks want it or not."

If chosen for the vacancy, Barnhill said he would "sit down and go over the budget to play catch-up."

Barnhill would vote according to his convictions "regardless if it was popular opinion or if I was in the minority. If it made a difference with people I disagreed with as to how they viewed me because of one vote or decision, I would question their sincerity."

Saying he was willing to commit the time necessary to be a board member, Barnhill added that he would visit school buildings to find out what's going on."

Barnhill's wife works as a continuing education teacher in the SPARKEY preschool program and his mother is a retired kindergarten teacher from Hoover, he said.

"I know I could look at those issues and make a decision strictly from a board standpoint, but a lot of what the board does is perception," he said. "I would have to evaluate in this instance whether I should abstain. I won't say that I'll abstain on every issue."

Board members to meet Friday to pick trustee preference. Board members were required to sign their ballots.

Barnhill was the only candidate to receive votes from all six trustees during the first four ballots cast. On the fifth ballot, when only Barnhill, Kozorosky and Rex Wilhoite remained in the running, trustee Fred Warmbier dropped his vote for Barnhill, voting for Kozorosky and Wilhoite. Board President Kathleen Chorbagian voted for Barnhill and Wilhoite.

The result left Barnhill and Kozorosky as the top two candidates with five votes each.

HOWEVER, WHEN the trustees cast the sixth and seventh ballots Monday night, the vote was split. Trustees supporting Barnhill were Chorbagian, Sharon Scott and McCusker. Those supporting Kozorosky were David Moranty, Warmbier and Dewey Combs.

No comments about the candidates were made during the balloting, but Chorbagian Monday thanked all 11 who submitted resumes and wished Miller good luck. She said that those not chosen will receive a letter and tally sheet.

"Just by submitting your resume, your concern for the community and the children is evident," she added. "I think I speak for the entire board in commending you."

Other candidates interviewed for the position were Donald E. Bedard, Patricia L. Hartford, James Netter, Dwight N. Patalocco, Linda M. Pratt, T. Cortez Spann Jr. and Ralph Welton.

EARLIER MONDAY night, the board unanimously elected Combs as its vice president, a position that had been filled by LeDuc.

It marked the first time that a member of the board's voting minority of Combs, Moranty and Warmbier had been elected to a board office since a recall and subsequent special election of four board members.

Candidate says job poses no conflict

By Sandra Armbruster
staff writer

Sylvia Kozorosky, a Westland resident, is sure that her position as deputy director of that city's department of aging will help her and not present a conflict of interest if she is chosen as a board trustee.

Kozorosky, who began her career with the school district in 1967, explained her views during a Sunday interview with the Wayne-Westland board of education.

"If appointed to the board, I'm an individual and think for myself," she said. "On each situation I will do research, work with the administration and all board members, and vote for what benefits the children."

Asked if she had time for the job, Korozosky responded that a person who wants to find the time will do so.

DIFFERENCES OF opinion on the board are a "healthy situation," Kozorosky said. However, she pledged to "work closely with each and every one to bring harmony" to the board.

Like the other finalist, Kenneth Barnhill, Kozorosky said it will take time to understand the financial problems of the district.

"I know there are financial problems because of a decrease in adult education," she continued. "Long range planning should look into seeing what we can do about excessive buildings and staff cuts."

There were no issues that Kozorosky identified as areas of disagreement with other board members. She said the role of the board should be to "take recommendations from the administration, study and whatever comes down, come up with the best solution for the school district and the education of children."

AREAS OF CONCERN for Kozorosky are the transition with the Cherry Hill school district, the decreasing student enrollment which she said will create a financial burden and "one of the biggest — negative publicity given to the school district."

ASKED WHETHER she would seek re-election to the board in June if appointed, Kozorosky said she would just be "getting my feet wet. At that time I'll make a decision."

There is no financial connection between the school and city programs for the aging, although some classes are offered at the Friendship Center, according to Kozorosky. She noted that the city department is funded by federal community development block grants.

If required to vote on cutting back senior programs in the district, Kozorosky said she could do so.

"We're talking about kindergarten through 12th-grade education. That's the most important thing at this time," she said.

Robot love

Someone who collects butterflies is a lepidopterist. A coin collector is a numismatist. He who collects stamps is a philatelist.

But what do you call someone who collects robots? Peter Grunbaum owns 1,000 toy robots, and keeps 200 of them in his apartment. Grunbaum says his fascination with the space-age toys is a reflection of their enormous popularity starting in the early 1950s.

Grunbaum, a marketing executive for an American firm in Switzerland, has astronaut robots, warrior robots, robot rockets and flying saucers. Some of the little automatons are worth $150 or more.

CEMS gave life support

To the editor:

Last week my mother suffered a cardiac arrest at her home in Plymouth.

Upon discovery, family members summoned help through the 911 (telephone) system and within a few minutes Plymouth Police officers Tom Zedan and John Shier and Community EMS paramedics Dan Hughes and Mike Cupp were on the scene.

The CEMS crew was very fast and efficient and started vital life support measures immediately. Their outstanding performance at the house and en route to the hospital undoubtedly saved her life. We were very fortunate to have such dedicated, professional paramedics available with Advanced Life Support technology here in Plymouth.

She was transported to St. Mary Hospital and later transferred by Survival Flight helicopter to the University of Michigan Medical Center where she underwent several days of intensive nursing care until her release. She is now home and recovering beautifully.

Our sincere thanks to the two police officers, two paramedics, to Community EMS, and to Plymouth for providing such an outstanding EMS system.

Bird counters sharpen pencils

By Timothy Nowicki
special writer

Now is the time of year when serious watchers take counts of southeastern Michigan's many species of birds.

Forty years ago, the Detroit Audubon Society began taking censuses of birds that came south for the winter and of those which are permanent residents.

On one full day around Christmas, a group of birders organizes its efforts to cover an area 15 miles in diameter. Each group is given a map of its section and data sheets (see sample) to record species and numbers of individuals seen.

In this region, there will be three chances for you to participate this season:

- Dec. 15 — Oakland County Audubon Society Christmas count. Call 531-9221.
- Dec. 16 — Detroit Audubon Society count. Call 527-6851 for information.
- Jan. 5 — Kensington Metropark count. Call naturalist Bob Hotaling at 685-1561.

nature

BIRDING, OR bird watching, is a year-around activity in Michigan.

It's great fun to identify and watch birds in the spring when they return north to breed from their wintering grounds in South America.

In fall and winter, different species move south, just far enough to avoid the harsh winter of their northern breeding grounds.

And then you can watch those species which remain all year in one area, no matter what the weather.

During eight hours in the field, counters drive the roads and walk the fields to count and accurately identify all birds seen. Over a 40-year span, 118 different species of birds have been identified — species like barn owls, warblers, bluebirds, hawks and woodpeckers.

ON AN AVERAGE census day, 50 species and 7,600 individual birds are counted. Information collected from these yearly counts reveals population trends for the species.

Some species — like red crossbills, which actually have crossed mandibles — arrive north every five or six years. Cardinals appear to decline in numbers and then rise again every 10 years. The reasons for these cycles still are not known, but the Christmas count data has helped raise the question.

The yearly count has become a nationwide activity. Christmas counts are conducted from Florida to Alaska. Southern states may count more than 200 different species. An Alaska group braved eight hours of frigid temperatures to see only a dozen or so birds.

If you decide to participate, you will meet fine people, contribute to our knowledge of birtds and, if you dress properly and take along a Thermos of hot cocoa, have a good time.

The writer is a freelancer whose college degrees are in biology.

How to treat the family's computerholic psychology

Dennis Sugrue

EVERY year just before Christmas, "shrinks" are interviewed on radio, television and print about the "holiday blues." When I began writing this column, I promised myself I would never jump on their bandwagon.

Instead, I decided to try something different, so for the next two weeks I'll be writing about two popular holiday gifts — this week the personal computer, the symbol of the '80s; next week, a perennial favorite that has fallen into disfavor — the toy gun.

Everywhere you look there is an onslaught of computer advertisements. Parents listening to advertisers could feel their failure to purchase a home computer could stunt their children's academic futures.

DESPITE THE media hype, personal computers can be a valuable educational tool, both in the classroom and at home. Fortunately, improved technology has resulted in lower prices, so the modest yet powerful computer packages are now affordable for the majority of American households.

Owning a personal computer can bring problems. It appears the computer can lead to greater distance among family members during an age when we are already concerned about fragmentation of the nuclear family.

In a survey published in the September issue of Psychology Today magazine, 20 percent of the families interviewed reported a decrease in shared family leisure time since acquiring a computer. More than 40 percent reported family members spending more time alone.

Once you have owned a personal computer, you can easily appreciate this problem. Working on a computer can be addictive. Hours fly by as you become obsessed with solving a computer problem or winning some game of strategy.

Any interruption during your intense deliberations irritates you. Since we purchased our Apple computer, my wife has often referred to herself as a "computer widow" and our Apple as the "other woman" in her husband's life.

THE SOLUTION: It helps if the computer becomes truly a family affair.

Each family member above age 2 should be encouraged to become comfortable using the computer. Purchasing computer games which allow family members to play together rather than alone also can be helpful.

Most importantly, it becomes the responsibility of the computerholic to acknowledge his or her addiction and consciously to ration computer time so that there is sufficient time to interact with the family.

Families often purchase a computer with the intention of enhancing their children's educations. However, owning a computer in no way guarantees the child will benefit academically.

In a survey conducted by Family Computing magazine, only 23 percent of new computer owners obtained eduational software at the time of purchase. On the other hand, almost 41 percent of owners purchased games with their new computers.

As teachers say, "You don't learn trigonometry from blasting space aliens."

FOR OUR CHILDREN to benefit from the home computer, the selection of good educational software is essential.

There are thousands of eduational programs on the market, but experts suggest that less than 5 percent of these products are quality aids for learning. Santa therefore needs to be a discriminating consumer.

The Educational Products Information Exchange, a nonprofit organization based at Columbia University, recently supplied Psychology Today the names of 19 pieces of educational software considered to be of high quality. They are:

- Early childhood — "The Adventures of Oswald" (ages 3-6), Program Design Inc.; "Learning with Leeper" (ages 4-5), Sierra On-Line Inc.
- Logic and problem solving — "The King's Rule" (age 11-adult), Sunburst Communication Inc.; "Mix and Match" (ages 4-9), Apple; "Odin" (age 10-adult), Odesta Corp.; "Snooper Troops I and II" (age 10-adult), Spinnaker.
- Mathematics — "Addition Magician" (ages 8-10), Learning Co.; "Aliencounter & Face Flash" (ages 4-8), Edufun; "Explorer Metros: A Metric Adventure" (ages 9-14), Sunburst Communication Inc.; "Learning About Numbers" (ages 4-10) C & C Software; "Math Blaster" (ages 6-11), Davidson & Associates.
- Reading and Language Arts — "The Bank Street Writer" (ages 10-14), Broderbund Software; "Play with Language" (ages 6-7), Radio Shack; "Speed Reader II" (age 14-adult), Davidson & Associates; "Whole Brain Spelling" (age 8-adult), Sublogic Corp.
- Art — "Paint" (age 8-adult), Reston Publishing Co.; "Picturewriter" (age 8-adult), Scarborough Inc.
- Music — "Music theory Vol. I" (beginning to advanced music theory students), Minnesota Educational; "Songwriter" (age 5-adult), Scarborough Inc.

Drycleaners fret at new, briefer clothing labels

By Penny Wright
special writer

BUYING A new coat is fun and easy. Keeping your coat looking good isn't so easy. And you'll get little help from a new Federal Trade Commission (FTC) care labeling rule which went into effect this year.

"The new care labeling rule is easier on the manufacturer but not on the drycleaner or the consumer," said Tom Koths, owner of a One-Hour Martinizing outlet in Plymouth.

Koths said the FTC rule allows to manufacturer to list only one method for cleaning a garment. "In some cases, the manufacturer may not have researched the best method for cleaning a garment. He just says it can't be washed," Koth explained.

REQUIRED BY federal law, care labels are those obscure tags permanently attached to a garment which give cleaning instructions.

Before January 1984, labels carried a full set of safe cleaning options. For example, a washable item also carried drycleaning instructions. It was assumed to be drycleanable unless the tag stated otherwise.

That has changed.

FTC no longer requires any mention of an alternative cleaning method. This means a garment with washing instructions may no longer be drycleanable, and your drycleaner could have you sign a release before drycleaning the article.

"Take a shirt with a new-type label that reads 'machine wash, warm water, tumble dry,'" Koths said. "I have no knowledge whether the shirt is drycleanable."

That's important to Koths because, in many instances, drycleaning may be the only method for removing difficult spots or safely handling the shirt. Without specific cleaning instructions, however, he will be reluctant to dryclean it.

"I have to have some guidelines as to what I can do to that garment. I didn't make it, and I didn't put the dyes in it."

THERE ARE great physical and chemical differences between washing and drycleaning a garment, he explained.

In washing, a garment is submerged in water. The fibers swell. Dirt is flushed away as the fabric is agitated in the machine. During drying, the fibers shrink back to the original shape as best they can.

In drycleaning, water is absent, and there are no swelling of the fibers or flushing of dirt. A solvent dissolves the stains without distortion of the fabric. For many types of garments, drycleaning is the only safe method.

Even before the FTC ruling, care labels have troubled drycleaners. Koths described an encountyer with a down jacket that cost him many extra hours of time and labor.

THE JACKET label gave instructions for laundering and drycleaning; Koths chose to dryclean.

A small black plastic snap on the waistcord turned out, however, to be susceptible to solvents and dissolved all over the jacket — as well as other garments in the cleaning machine.

But the story had a happy ending. Koths was able to restore all the garments. "Ten customers didn't even know what happened to their clothes," he said.

Koths tries to avoid cleaning accidents by carefully checking clothing and by putting faith in what the manufacturer says on the label.

Sometimes even his care gets him into trouble. "Then I become the bad guy," he said.

ISABEL JONES, clothing and textile specialist at Michigan State University, said a drycleaner is usually blamed for what really is a manufacturer's shortcoming.

She noted some manufacturers will buy defective materials and make

What new labels mean

The new FTC rule defines "drycleaning" as a process that uses any solvent (petroleum, perchloroethylene of fluorocarbon). The process may include addition of moisture to the solvent up to 75 percent relative humidity, tumble drying at up to 160 degrees F. and using steam press or steam-air finishing.

Here is what other instructions mean:

Dryclean — the garment can be cleaned by the normal drycleaning process.

Dryclean Only — the garment is fully drycleanable but not washable.

Drycleaners fret about new labels

many different articles of clothing. When problems occur, Jones said, "Usually people blame drycleaners."

The MSU specialist, who teaches consumer courses, is concerned that along with reduced care instructions, the new FTC labeling rule no longer requires a listing of the material contents of a garment. "I believe they changed the ruling because they think the consumer is not interested," she said.

Jones advised that better quality retail stores provide tags with content information. She suggested that shoppers who don't know textiles buy brand-name products which have stood the test of time.

DRYCLEANER BOB Karakaskian of Farmington agrees the revised FTC care label will make his job more difficult. The owner of Country Cleaners, he notes the trend toward natural fibers will require more consumers to seek drycleaning services.

Karakaskian already has encountered instances where the trim on a garment is not included in the care label instructions. He has refused to dryclean the item. He urges shoppers to use good judgment when buying clothing and to resist the lure of "pretty" high-fashion garments.

TO AVOID shopping pitfalls, Koths offered these suggestions:

- Buy from retailers you trust.
- Examine the label before buying an item.
- Ask what is the proper way of cleaning a garment.
- Ask if the garment can be returned should a problem occur.

The Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan Detroit offers a free publication entitled "Tips on Drycleaning." Recently revised to reflect the FTC labeling changes, the pamphlet can be obtained by writing the BBB at 150 Michigan, Detroit 48226, or by calling 962-0550.

Drycleaner Tom Koths uses a wide assortment of chemicals to break down and analyze hard-to-remove spots. He must use special care to avoid pulling colors out of the garment or distorting the fabric.

Lucas asks jails to cut 'crime tax'

In an outstate foray, Wayne County Executive William Lucas advocated a cut in what he calls the "crime tax."

Lucas defined "crime tax" as the non-governmental costs people suffer because of crime — high insurance rates, private security systems, loss of property values.

The county executive first used the term in a speech before the Montague-Whitehall Rotary Club in Muskegon County. His outstate trips have fueled speculation that Lucas, a lifelong Democrat in serious trouble with his own party, will jump into the Republican camp to run for state office in 1986.

"IT IS TIME we demand a crime tax cut and ask our state government to go back to the fundamentals, using available resources, to build the prisons necessary to get the criminals off our streets," he said.

Lucas gave these examples of the "crime tax:"

- Consumers must buy car insurance at inflated rates because of massive auto thefts.
- Consumers doing business with a bank find the bank passes on increased security costs.
- Homeowners are forced to buy security systems and put bars on windows and doors.
- Homeowners find their property values go down because of unsafe neighborhoods.
- Illness strikes due to stress and fear.
- Jobs are lost because businesses leave the state or business prospects decide to invest in another state.

LUCAS SAID state officials can give residents a crime tax break by:

- Immediate construction of the needed 4,000 prison beds.
- Supporting a capital spending program for county jails on a 50-50 match.
- Making available 500 additional juvenile detention beds.
- Immediately buying and operating the Detroit House of Correction.

Late last month, Lucas challenged the state Legislature to stay in session until it passed necessary measures which address the prison-needs problem. The county executive was responding to findings contained in a preliminary report released by his Commission to Study Prison Needs.

6-part alcohol series offered

A six-part series on alcohol and alcoholism is being offered by Plymouth Family Services.

The series, which will be from 6:30-8:30 p.m. beginning Monday, Jan. 7, will be presented through diagrams, films, discussion and lecture.

Anyone who is, or has been, concerned or uncomfortable with their own drinking or that of a family member would benefit from this series, said David Breeden, executive director of Plymouth Family Service at Wing and Forest.

The series also may be helpful to anyone who grew up in a home where there was problem alcohol use, he added.

Topics will include: attitudes, physiological effects of alcohol and the symptoms and phases of alcoholism.

There also will be a special emphasis on alcoholism and the family which will look at what happens to family members caught up in an alcoholic family system and how to get help.

Anyone interested in attending the series, or wanting more information, may call Plymouth Family Service at 453-0890. Enrollment is limited.

Plymouth Family Service, which is funded in part by Plymouth Community Fund-United Way, also provides ongoing individual, marital and family counseling.

Court rulings chill your right to know

Nick Sharkey

WHY WOULD 50 journalists gather on a bright Thursday afternoon to listen to a three-hour lecture?

Last week, Observer & Eccentric reporters, photographers and editors attended a conference conducted by an attorney on legal actions against newspapers.

Libel is the most frequent grounds for a suit against newspapers. Libel is a defamatory statement published about an individual or business.

Attorney Darrell Grams said financial stakes are high. The average libel award is now $1.5 million. This compares to a $750,000 average for product liability awards and $700,000 for medical malpractice awards.

In 80 percent of trials, juries rule against newspapers. But 80 percent of those verdicts are overturned on appeals to higher courts.

Although most libel suits are eventually dismissed, legal costs are enormous for newspapers.

LAST WEEK, I also attended a meeting of police officials and journalists in Canton Township. A police officer said newspapers are immune from law suits if they report what the police say in a crime story.

Not so. In crime stories, newspapers can publish only what they are told by normally reliable sources. For example, the publication of an off-hand comment by a police officer could result in a libel verdict.

After a Michigan Court of Appeals decision in September, more restrictions are being put on the republication of information obtained from the police.

In that case, David Rouch of Battle Creek was arrested for an alleged attack on a baby-sitter, which included rape. The Battle Creek newspaper published a short article about the arrest and details of the alleged crime.

After investigation, Rouch was released and a second man was arrested. A year later, Rouch filed a libel suit against the newspaper. The circuit court dismissed the suit without taking it to trial but was reversed by the Michigan Court of Appeals in September.

Newspapers have been immune from law suits in matters of public interest, such as an arrest for murder or rape. But the Rouch case may change that. The Court of Appeals ruled that details "of the alleged crime were merely matters that the public would find generally interesting and not matters 'deserving robust public debate.'"

According to the court, the newspaper should have waited until the suspect was either named in a warrant or arraigned. It sent the case back to circuit court for possible trial.

SO WHAT does this mean to you?

Journalists talk of the "chilling effect" of law suits. Constant worry about possible $1.5-million verdicts can affect news reporting. Thus, you are less well informed about your community.

Neighbors become panicky if they think a rapist or murderer is on the loose. They have doubts about police protection. Isn't it better if they know details when a suspect has been arrested for a crime?

If there are too many restrictions on the press, you lose your knowledge of what goes on in the world around you. It's not a matter of newspapers right to publish.

Newspapers are not accepting the Rouch verdict. They have joined to get it overturned by the state Supreme Court.

This newspaper is also trying to make sure its staff knows press law and doesn't fear the "chilling effect." We want to continue to report what's happening in this community. That's why we went back to "school" last week.

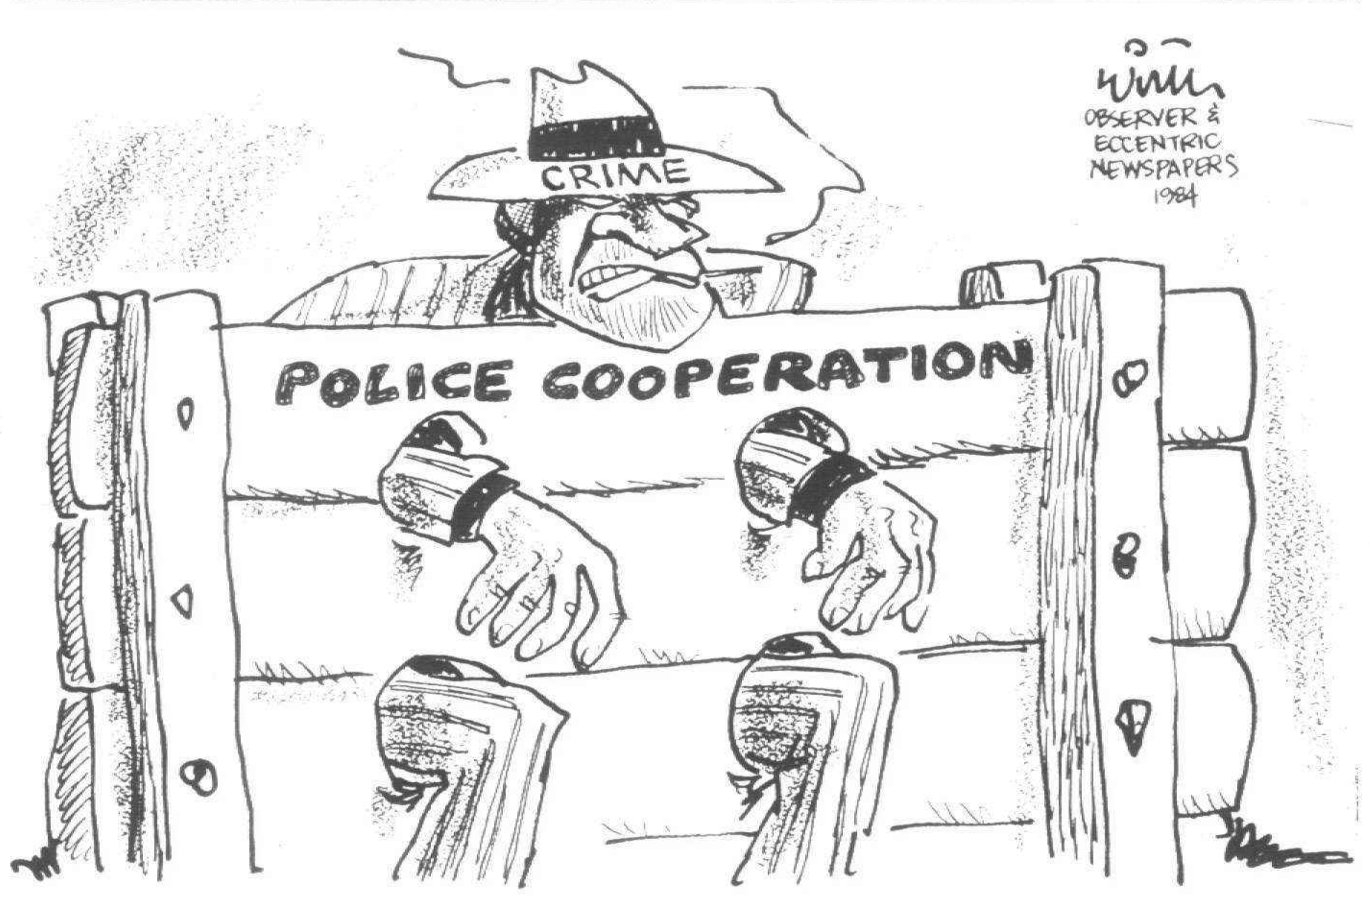
THE STATE CONSTITUTION, adopted in 1963, specifically makes truth a defense against charges of libel. In Section 19 of the Declaration of Rights, the Constitution says: "In all prosecutions for libels the truth may be given in evidence to the jury and, if it appears to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true and was published with good motive and for justifiable ends, the accused shall be acquited.

Article I also guarantees freedom of speech and of the press. In Sec. 5, the Constitution says: "Every person may freely speak, write, express and publish his views on all subjects being responsible for the abuse of such right; and no law shall be enacted to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.



DeHoCo farms fed many

the stroller
W.W. Edgar

THE DEBATE now going on regarding the future of Detroit House of Correction — whether it should become a full-time prison or a workshop again — recalls the days when Bill Bannon was its superintendent.

Bill was a former head of Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson when he was hired at DeHoCo, and he had his own ideas of how the place could be run and show a surplus.

Bill was a friendly sort of fellow, and the one thing he didn't want was a clubhouse where the inmates sat around all day and seemed to enjoy themselves.

So he put them to work in a big way. Under his watchful eye, they raised cattle, grew large vegetable gardens and raised chickens.

So successful was this plan, a few decades back, that the cattle sales drew large gatherings. The day of the sale was like a county fair. People came from miles to bid on the cattle, and no one enjoyed it more than Bill.

Floyd Kehrl, the well-known Plymouth banker, made his reputation at these cattle sales. He always was on hand to arrange loans to the winning bidders. And it wasn't long until he became the leading banker in western Wayne County.

IT WAS MUCH the same with the orchards. And herein lies one of the best stories about Bill Bannon's regime at DeHoCo.

One evening over a weekend, one of Detroit's leading bowlers was involved in an auto crash that cost a man's life. The bowler was arrested by police and eventually sent to prison at Jackson.

That didn't sit well with the bowling fraternity. They didn't want one of their own in Jackson. So a move was started to get the bowler released.

This seemed to be asking too much. But when Bill Bannon heard about it, he took action in a rather unusual way.

He called attention to the powers-that-be that the fruit in the orchard at DeHoCo was ripe, and he needed some tall men to pick it.

Well, the imprisoned bowler was a tall fellow. And it wasn't long until the hands that controlled a bowling ball were picking the choice fruit from the trees. It was one of the best bowling stories at the time.

NOW ANOTHER has come to the front in the present debate. This time Bannon isn't around, for he went to his final resting place several years ago.

The argument now being advanced is that chickens could be raised in quantities that would help in a great way to feed the hungry in these trying economic times.

When Bannon was at DeHoCo, he was a pleasant fellow to visit. A great storyteller, he always saw the odd side of cases and was good for a laugh, come rain or snow.

Too bad he isn't around today. He could sell the officials on a plan where DeHoCo wouldn't be known as a jail but as a workshop that showed a surplus and helped to feed the poor.

It would pay the present debaters to look up his record and copy enough of it to make the area an asset again.

Police rivalry wastes effort

Sandra Armbruster

NOT ALL THE salvos being fired across city boundaries are the work of criminals. Police officials themselves do some of the shooting.

Southfield's public safety director Jerry Tobin suggested that Franklin, which contracts police service to Bingham Farms, and Beverly Hills buy services from his department. Critical of the staff size and equipment in the villages, Tobin labeled as "baby-sitting" the service provided their residents.

John Verdon, president of Franklin, retorted police there provide "more personalized service" than Southfield.

"I think the thing that bothered people the most was the method used by Tobin to open the issue up," Verdon said. "He talked to us in 1980-81. To all of a sudden read we need to buy without a call or comment is the wrong approach."

Communication — or lack of it — also could blast apart a shared police contract between the city and township of Plymouth. A police consultant who studied the contract cited problems including "ongoing city/township political issues adversely affecting the police department."

ARE THESE cases of empire building by career professionals? Or are they small-town chiefs protecting their shiny badges while stroking the egos of residents?

Probably both, and these guys are getting away with it. Taxpayers allow themselves to be lulled by officials touting services that fail to make the best use of tax dollars.

Tobin grouses that Franklin isn't even on the same radio frequency as Southfield. No problem, Verdon said, because Franklin buys its dispatching service from Farmington Hills.

On the other hand, Verdon claims "people in Franklin and Bingham know how many cars are on patrol and have known for many years."

But he becomes quarrelsome when questions are raised about how low patrol coverage actually may drop at times. Verdon says he's worried that the bad guys in Detroit may find out. Well, it may be a good idea for Franklin and Bingham residents to learn just what they're paying for.

The verbal barrage is just plain silly. Any reasonable suggestion that furthers the fight against crime ought to be considered.

EXPERIENCE shows sharing services works.

- Money was a motivator in getting such Wayne County communities as Livonia, Inkster, Garden City and Westland cooperating, according to William Rechlin, police chief in Westland. A federal grant paid a percentage of the costs for a crime-prevention unit.
- Many communities join the state in mass purchases of police vehicles.
- Redford Township buys a computerized record file system from Livonia, according to Livonia Chief William Crayk, and soon will be using a computer-aided dispatch operation.
- Livonia cooperates in joint training programs and a shared traffic grant hosted by Garden City.

CRIMINALS DON'T recognize city boundaries. Growing suburban commercial centers entice them. Freeways ensure their mobility.

Tobin, who has worked in Detroit and Birmingham during his 30-year career, makes another point. "Detroit let other communities become established based on the use of its services," he said. Tobin worries the same thing will happen to Southfield.

Why should the villages worry about police and fire equipment when they have "tacit insurance" from Southfield? Tobin asks.

Communities with small staffs have at least a moral obligation to support the cost of such efforts that benefit them.

People Mover: good investment

Tim Richard

WITHOUT QUESTION, SEMTA's People Mover can boost downtown Detroit as a convention and shopping area. The People Mover — automated electric cars on an elevated guideway — would have no rival in North America as an innovation.

But SEMTA is in deep financial trouble over it, and the trouble is not all SEMTA's fault. After being budgeted at $137 million, the People Mover had to be redesigned.

One reason was that the proposed Cadillac Center project, where a station was to be located, fell through. Then the Millender Center project came along. Then the mayor of Detroit decided Cobo Hall needed expanding, so its station had to be changed and a maintenance garage moved elsewhere.

Then the David Whitney Building was given a station. Then some riverfront land turned out to be too spongy to hold the guideway, and reinforcements had to be built.

SEMTA made the changes after the general contract was let. The changes were responsive to a changing downtown, but SEMTA had no assured method of paying for them. Altogether, the changes will add $55 million to the price tag.

IF JIMMY Carter were still president, perhaps SEMTA could run to Washington and ask for a federal bailout. If Bill Milliken were still governor and this were the mid-1970s, perhaps SEMTA could run to Lansing and get a state bailout.

But if the federal Urban Mass Transit Administration under Ronald Reagan's presidency had its way, the Downtown People Mover would never have been funded, and the money would be going for western water or a Tennessee canal.

At most, according to U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, UMTA might find $22 million to help the SEMTA project. As a member of the House Appropriations Committee, Pursell got the People Mover funded, and he ought to know.

By anyone's calculations, SEMTA still needs to find $33 million to complete the project, which is half built.

The logical money source, according to Pursell and state Sen. Richard Fessler, R-West Bloomfield, is business.

BUSINESS, BY its own testimony, would benefit hugely from the People Mover. But how does one go about setting up the financing? There are three possibilities:

1. Voluntary contributions. The method is probably unworkable. How do you determine one's benefit and fair share? How do you get from the stick-in-the-muds?

2. Special assessment. Pursell proposes this method, UMTA chief Ralph Stanley likes it, and Sen. Fessler is studying it. The question is whether the special assessment district should be set up by the city of Detroit or by SEMTA, which would have to be given such authority by enabling legislation.

3. A stock sale. This is my own idea. Instead of using government's taxation powers, why not ask businesspeople to invest in the People Mover? It is, after all, supposed to be at least a self-supporting project, not requiring the heavy subsidies that buses and dial-a-ride services need.

There is precedent for such a mix of public and private money. Alexander Hamilton, the whiz kid Treasury secretary in the Washington Administration, set up the First Bank of the United States that way, with the federal government owning one-fifth of the stock.

The People Mover is a golden opportunity. It shouldn't be abandoned. It requires a bailout — a business bailout of a governmental agency as opposed to the government rescue of Chrysler Corp. There simply must be a way to do it.

Regional economic outlook — level in '85, up in '86

The experts agree: Southeast Michigan will see a leveling in economic growth in 1985 but another takeoff in 1986.

High interest rates will make 1985 "not brilliant but rather bright" for auto sales and cause a slight drop in housing starts, five speakers told the Economic Club of Detroit last week.

"A continuation of the current recovery at a more normal and sustainable growth rate" was predicted by Dr. Barbara B. Murray, professor of business in the school of management at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. She predicted a 3.5 percent real growth rate in '85 compared to 6.5 percent in '84.

BUT MURRAY was less fearful than automotive and construction industrialists about federal deficits pushing up the cost of credit. The U.S. has been able to tap "the increasing source of an international savings pool to finance our credit demands," she said, pointing to this as a major structural change in the American economy.

A second, positive structural change, Murray said, has been the replacement of obsolete plant and equipment, resulting in productivity increases.

Commodity, petroleum and health care costs will be held in check, translating into an inflation rate of 4.2 percent, the economist predicted.

Murray predicted federal domestic and defense spending cuts and a tax increase on consumer goods.

Here is what four business leaders for their segments of the regional economy:

CONSTRUCTION — After a good 1983-84 recovery, residential starts will drop a little in 1985, said William Fordon, board chairman of the Fordon Co., Birmingham.

"That's primarily because interest rates rose from 12 to 15 percent this year and stayed there. Higher interest rates will deter home starts more than they will adversely affect non-residential work," he said.

But commercial-industrial construction will continue to help construction, Fordon said. He cited the Downtown People Mover, Millender Center, Stroh Riverfront project, Burroughs headquarters, Ford Casting plant in Flat Rock and the Chrysler expansion in Sterling Heights.

"If you've drive up Northwestern Highway in Southfield and West Bloomfield recently, you can almost feel the vibrancy of the economic recovery," Fordon added.

Public works projects have increased from a 1982 level of $150 million to a current level of $400 million, he said, thanks to transportation taxes at the state and federal levels. Meanwhile, wage rates have stabilized, and the construction industry's unemployment rate has dropped from 55 percent in 1983 to 29 percent currently, with more drops due in 1985, Fordon predicted.

AUTOMOTIVE — A slight decline in total auto sales will be felt mostly by American manufacturers, according to Thomas F. Russell, board chairman and chief executive of Federal-Mogul Corp., Southfield-based manufacturer of automotive and industrial parts.

Domestic auto makers will see sales dip from the current eight million to 7.7 million next year, while foreign producers will seek their sales rise from 2.5 million to 2.6 million units. Total sales will drop from the current 10.4 million to 10.3 million next year.

Most of the pent-up demand due to the recession has been satisfied, he explained.

But the last half of '85 and '86 will see improvement, "depending on the direction of interest rates, which in turn will depend on what happens in our struggle with the deficit, Russell said.

On the other hand, 1985 will see real improvements in the automotive "aftermarket" — repairs of existing cars — because of slower growth in incomes and the aging of the car fleet, he said.

RETAIL — Retail sales in Michigan will rise 8 percent, better than the 7.5 percent national increase, according to Robert B. Carlson, president and chief executive of Crowley, Milner Co., which has department stores in Birmingham, Livonia and Farmington.

While calling metropolitan Detroit "a tremendous retail market," Carlson said it is marked by intense price competition and profit deterioration from the retailer's point of view.

FINANCE — "Rather than seeing a recession ahead, I think the economy has paused," said Dean E. Richardson, chairman of Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit.

Richardson saw a "high plateau" developing in the last quarter of 1984 and extending into the first quarter of 198[illegible], followed by "a steady rise in the topography thereafter."

Nativity dispute shouldn't be

PRAISE BE that American government does so much to protect our freedom of religion. It seems odd that some among us want government actually to promote one religion or another as well.

But the sad fact is that each Christmas season, one unit of government or another finds itself in a needless controversy over attempts to use tax money to favor one group over another.

CONSIDER WHAT government already does for religion:

- Churches are tax-exempt.
- Our contributions to churches reduce our taxable incomes.
- Local governments will fight taking of taxable property for such tax-exempt use as state prisons and mental institutions, but you almost never hear of a local government trying to zone out a church. Local governments generally welcome churches.
- In America, churches are free to set up schools — and have done so quite successfully. Locally, one sectarian college, Madonna, has been successful in competing for federal grants to teach certain programs. On the other hand, many so-called "developing" nations have a total state monopoly over education. There are only government schools.
- Do you ever read of movie stars in European nations going through two wedding ceremonies — one in church, the other in city hall? The government doesn't recognize the religious ceremony. But in America, government recognizes and honors wedding ceremonies performed by the clergy.
- Many nations have constitutional freedom of religion — on paper. But try to get rationed building materials for a church edifice; try to get access to a press to print tracts or Bibles; try to set up a non-governmental TV station; try to get radio time to broadcast your religious service to shut-ins or the curious.
- The Michigan Constitution contains a positive protection of our freedom to practice our religions: "Nor shall any person be denied the enjoyment of his civil or political rights or be discriminated against in the exercise thereof because of religion, race, color or national origin. The legislature shall implement this section by appropriate legislation." (Art. I, sec. 2)

YOU HEAR a lot about "separation of church and state." That isn't public policy in the U.S. Again let us refer to that wonderful Michigan Constitution:

"Every person shall be at liberty to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. No person shall be compelled to attend, or, against his consent, to contribute to the erection or support of any place of religious worship, or to pay tithes, taxes or any other rates for the support of any minister of the gospel or teacher of religion.

"No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological or religious seminary; nor shall property belonging to the state be appropriated for any such purpose.

"The civil and political rights, privileges and capacities of no person shall be diminished or enlarged on account of his religious belief." (Art. I, sec. 2)

WOW! THAT'S strong language. And it's right on page one.

Boiled down, it means government must protect our religious freedom but may not use the power of the purse to promote one sect.

But to some politicians, the Constitution doesn't count; votes do. And there are more votes in using tax money to set up Nativity scenes or St. Nicholas displays than in paying attention to a law that the people voted on but sometimes forget about.

Myself, I would feel funny asking Jews, Muslims, Unitarians, Buddhists and just plain non-believers to pay taxes to support a governmental Nativity scene. And I would certainly squawk at the government's spending money on a dreydl (spinning top that symbolizes the Jewish festival of Hanukkah), a Buddhist shrine or any non-Christian display.

Those of us who enjoy the Nativity scene can view it at local churches or in private displays.

MAYFLOWER Lt. Gamble Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was well- represented Sunday evening at St. Mary Church in Milford. The event was part of a nationwide ceremony, a commemorative candlelight ceremony arranged by the Prisoner of War Committee of Michigan.

Family members, Vietnam veterans and others gathered to honor and pray for the 2,483 men who remain unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

As part of the ceremony, 77 Vietnam veterans lighted individual candles to honor their missing comrades.

Local members of the VFW Post and auxiliary who attended the services were Leona Schomberger, Edna Statezni, Mildred Drake, Eileen Williams, Caroline Van Gorder, Alice and Ken Fisher, and Juliette and Les Gosch. Leona Schomberger's nephew, Gerald A. Holman of Northville, is one of Michigan's MIAs. His family received word that he was killed in action but his body has not been returned.

Eileen said the service was impressive, with relatives of MIAs taking part in the program.

KIM ANDERSON of Plymouth has been elected to the Detroit Glass Dealers Association Board of Directors. She is the daughter of Dick and Florence Anderson of Plymouth Glass Co. on Main Street.

The association, composed of auto and architectural glass dealers in the metropolitan Detroit area, is in its 52nd year. It is one of the nation s oldest trade associations. Kim will be serving with the new president, Jerry Minder, owner of Alert Glass Co. in Romulus.

MEMBERS OF the Plymouth Lions Club will be selling their candy canes Friday and Saturday at Northville Downs. One of the topics to be discussed at tonight's meeting is: Should Lions International open its membership to women?

PETE ZACK, with 5,880 points, was the winner at last Thursday's party bridge games in the Plymouth Cultural Center. Phil Wyles' 5,410 made him a close second.

THE KLAZZ AKT Breakers (pronounced "class act") will perform at 1 p.m. Friday, Jan. 4, for the Pioneer Senior Citizens Club in Canton Township. The six dancers all of them Canton residents, will put on their show at the Canton Recreation Center. They've been performing as a group for three months. Dan Burkholder, a junior at Plymouth Salem High School, is founder of the Klazz Akt. He started dancing when he was in third grade, taking tap and ballet at the Masters of Dance Studio. He competes nationally in dance competitions and recently won a second in Chicago and a first in Southfield. He has competed as a member of a group in New York on two occasions.

When he started to organize the break dancers, he chose some of the people he knew from dance class. Kevin McKenna, Brian Macek, Don Harwood and Wendy Kulzycki are students at the Centennial Educational Park. Craig Spaven attends West middle School.

They rehearse their routines for three hours at a stretch, three or four times a week at the dance studio. And they now are open for engagements.The group has performed at a Little League football banquet and a Halloween party. They have a date at an elementary school pizza party in January.

Dan says their rates are $100 for a 25-minute show; $50 for a 15-minute performance by three dancers. For an extra $25, they will teach their audience the basics of break dancing.Anyone wishing more information may call Dan evenings at 453-6410.

Under the spell of the wicked fairy, Princess Aurora pricks her finger on the spindle of the spinning wheel in Sunday's production of "Sleeping Beauty."

'Sleeping Beauty' ballet on Sunday

The Sleeping Beauty Ballet will be presented at 2 and 4 p.m. Sunday in Plymouth Salem High School auditorium. The special Christmas program will feature the Pickwick Puppet Theatre, directed by Ken Moses, and the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra with Johann van der Merwe, conductor.

The Pickwick Puppet Theatre's elegant staging of the beloved Tschaikovsky ballet was commissioned originally by Thomas Sherman's Little Orchestra and performed in Lincoln Center's Philharmonic Hall. The production has been performed at schools, colleges, museums, theaters and concert halls all over the country, to high critical acclaim.

The effect of a Pickwick performance with a symphony orchestra is very similar to that of a ballet performance. The puppets, however, are not subject to the limitations of human performers. The fairies really fly and the evil fairy actually turns into a fire-breathing dragon.

ALL OF THE story's fairy-tale magic fantasy is right there on stage.

The puppets used in this production are operated from below with rods, a technique developed from centuries-old far Eastern puppetry. More than 65 puppets, four to five feet tall, perform in a 22-foot wide setting, suggessting an old French castle.

At the conclusion of the program, the puppeteers demonstrate how the puppets are manipulated.

The Pickwick Puppet Theatre was founded in 1951 by Larry Berthelson. Present director of the company, Ken Moses, is a graduate of Carnegie-Mellon School of Drama. He was theater director at Syracuse University. He has been active in puppetry since his late Aunt Fanny gave him a puppet for Christmas. He was 4 years old and he still has the puppet.

His background includes radio, television, summer stock and regional repertory theater.

PETER ILICH Tschaikovsky (1840-1893), the famous Russian composer, was commissioned by the director of the Imperial Theater to compose the Sleeping Beauty Ballet music in 1888. It was performed in January 1890 in St. Petersburg before the Cazr and his court.

The audience was not enthusuastic and the Czar said only, "very nice." The ballet has become one of the best loved of his works all over the world.

Sunday's concert is made possible, in part, by the city of Plymouth, the Plymouth Symphony League and by a grant from the State of Michigan through the Michigan Council for the Arts.

Single concert tickets for the ballet are $6 for adults and $3 for senior citizens, all children and students. No one will be admitted without a ticket. Tickets for both performances may be purchased at the box office on Sunday. Advance sale tickets are available at Beitner Jewelry, Ann Arbor Trail, Plymout; Hammell Music, Livonia; and Arnholdt Williams Music, Canton Center Road just north of Ford, Canton Township.

Free transportation for senior citizens is provided from Tonquish Creek Manor before each presentation of the ballet.

There will be free baby-sitting for pre-schoolers during the concerts at the school on Joy Road west of Canton Center.

Heide's in Old Village features brass bears and bells, lace and satin bows in a deep shade of rose on its tree.

Staff photos by Bill Bresler

Baskets of holly, baby's breath, red and white checked gingham decorate the Heide's Flowers and Gifts tree.

The five Christmas trees in the lobby of the Plymouth Historical Museum were decorated by Heide's Old Village (left), Ribar's Flowers, the Stattice Shop, Heide's on Harvey and Ann Arbor Trail, and museum volunteers.

Merry old Christmas at museum

Christmas has come to the Plymouth Historical Museum. Main Street shops, the lobby, the Victorian rooms and displays on the building's lower level are aglow with the trappings of an old-fashioned Christmas.

The special exhibit in the lobby was a gift from a local donor. Over the years, the collection of buildings, people, animals, birds, trees and vehicles grew until it filled the owner's living room. Visitors to the museum spend a long time looking at the winter scene. And when they look again, they see somthing they have missed.

Five Christmas trees form a backdrop for the snowy panorama. Each of the trees has a different decorating theme planned by local florists and museum volunteers.

THE MUSEUM gift shop is stocked with unusual little items for Christmas giving as well as handmade tinware and beautiful Shaker boxes by local craftsmen.

Hand-crafted cookie cutters come in all shapes and sizes and the tin match box holders are duplicates of the ones great-grandmother used to have.

Museum volunteers are especially pleased with the clothing on the "people" in the Victorian rooms this Christmas.

Museum hours are 1-4 p.m. Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays and many tour groups have been scheduled for the holiday season.

Museum volunteers turn out an old-fashioned cookie tree with hearts, bears, churches, gingerbread men and strings of cranberries.

Winter landscape has hundreds of small figures in interesting groupings.

Betty Porter of the Stattice Shop uses grapevines, red cardinals in nests and bright red apples on her Williamsburg tree.

Dinner dance grand finale of sesquicentennial

Oh how I love to tell you about parties.

I don't care if they are on their way or long gone. I love to tell you about them. Maybe it's just because they are a sign that somewhere, someone is having fun. If I'm down, sometimes just hearing about somebody else's fun, cheers me up. So, for all those who are down, get with it. It's party time in Canton!

Not only party time, but this is the last SESQUICENTENNIAL ANYTHING! That's right, folks, this is the very last "sesqui" anything.

For some of you, it's a sigh of relief because you worked so hard all year. And for some, it's because you really weren't into the sesqui-thing and are tired of hearing about it.

Which ever you may be, now is the time to celebrate.

As a matter of fact, Saturday is the time to celebrate. Here is something to think about. Perhaps you are the type who really doesn't party a great deal. Chances are you'll be home New Year's Eve. After all, only the real partyers have the energy on New Year's Eve to have a party. Then on the other hand, there are those who feel that New Years Eve partyers are the amateurs — the ones who never get out and this is the biggie for them.

WELL, NO MATTER, which ever you are — a party doll or a stay-at-homer — I recommend this last party.

The cost is mild as parties go. The company is good and interesting, not to mention varied. You can stay home by the fireplace on New Year's Eve with your kids and welcome the new year together!

Let me tell you a bit about the party. It's Sunday, Dec. 15, at the brand new Bali Hall on Geddes Road, just down the block from our police station.

I had a chance this past week to visit the new hall and, Canton, we have a brand new, wonderful asset. The hall will handle meetings, parties, showers, and, naturally, large birthday parties and weddings. Capacity is 280 and they have all kinds of deals for catering and such. It features round tables, instead of those long rectangular ones, a neat 22-foot bar, a kitchen and just everything.

BALI HALL has been donated, free of charge, for our Sesqui-celebration. The gracious offer is due, I am sure, to the fact that the owners are staunch Cantonites and boosters of same. This party is a great chance to see the place that will no doubt be a part of Canton from now on.

Canton chatter

Sandy Preblich 981-6354

Admission to this Christmas dinner dance is only $25 per couple, or $15 each. The evening begins at 6:30 p.m. with none other than our own Canton Senior Kitchen Band leading us in a sing-along. We can sit back enjoying cocktails with hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, join in and sing, or just relax and listen.

And this, folks, is only the beginning. An hour later, at 7:30 p.m., it's time to feast on a delectable buffet provided by the able hands of Peggy Finelli.

The menu will feature roast beef, ham, chicken, potatoes, vegetables, salads and luscious apple pie. Now that's a meal!

OKAY, YOU HAVE wined and dined, you've had time to chat and meet new friends, and now it's time to get down and boogie. At 9 p.m., we will start our feet to tappin' with the music of "Hy-Tymes" and they'll continue to entertain us for four hours.

But that's not all, folks! Somewhere in between the dancing and the resting we will be giving away prizes. Each guest also will receive a handmade Christmas favor provided by a real Canton gem, Tillie Schultz and her committee of Canton Seniors.

Now there is a group always doing for Canton and the overall support of Canton events. And they never get credit for it. They just go about their business, quietly getting things done. I guess that's part of how they got to where they are in life now. Instead of grumbling about what life throws at them, they see what has to be done and get up and do it.

But back to the party. We're not done eating. Later in the evening, we'll snack on some delicious "sesqui-cake," made by the magic touch of Shirley Winkel, wife of our fire marshal, Art Winkel. Don't misunderstand the sesqui-cake. This doesn't mean it's 150 years old, but rather it was worth the 150-year wait. (Really puts the pressure on, eh Shirley?)

Now, did you think that just had to be all? No way. This is our last party, it must be a humdinger. So some lucky winner will walk away with the artificial tree which holds the commemorative decorations each guest will receive.

Let's see if we have everything: 6:30 p.m., the sing-along with Kitchen Band, cocktails, hors d'oeuvres; 7:30 p.m., fantastic dinner; on to 9 p.m. and dancing the night away. And don't forget door prizes, souvenirs, evening snack and a chance to say good-bye to a busy but eye-opening year of meeting people and learning all about Canton.

Now, tell me that's not a lot for only $25 per couple.

Dress is — whatever. You can have one last evening in your 'Sesqui-outfit," or whatever you may choose that would be appropriate. No need to buy a formal, rent a tux or make a costume, but all of the above are welcome.

I forgot to mention that space is limited (nobody's perfect). You can call Mary Dingeldey, chair of the Sesquicentennial Committee, or two of her able assistants, Peggy, 397-3151, or Bart Berg, 495-0811.

ONE LAST thought: Everyone is busy and this should be the happiest busy time of the year. Sometimes, we get so involved in what we are doing, we forget why we are doing it.

This is especially true at this holiday season of Hanukkah (Dec. 19) and Christmas (Dec. 25). Both of these holidays represent a deep commitment and carry with them strong family traditions. Perhaps some of you might take a moment (or more) from your busy holiday preparations to call me and share some of the family traditions this holiday brings with it each year.

I needn't mention you by name if you wish, but I would like to share some of the better parts of these holidays with others. Maybe a small reminder of why and how we celebrate might get some of us back on track. It may help ease some of the tension that commercialism forces on us, by reminding us what really should be done, what must be done, what could be done. Blend them all together for a more relaxed meaningful holiday.

Don't forget the last Sesqui' celebration and have a wonderful week!

Check out better idea

Over a hundred years ago, a former high school principal with a good idea devised a product that's saving millions of people untold amounts of money today.

The inventor was named George La Monte and he was a paper salesman. He considered the need for a safe, dependable way of transferring funds without transporting large unprotected amounts of cash.

What he came up with was the idea of checks printed on a special kind of paper treated with dyes and chemicals to make erasure and alteration of checks difficult and exact duplication virtually impossible. The dyes are sensitive to the same solutions that remove writing inks from paper, so any attempt at alteration removes the paper's color and design or produces a stain.

The paper must pass a variety of tests to determine its suitability. Color uniformity is an important control feature.

Duo celebration

New prelate attends festivities

Saturday will bring the high point of a month-long observance by members of Sacred Heart Catholic Church (Byzantine Rite) in Livonia honoring their patron saint, St. Nicholas.

The church, at 29125 Six Mile Road, will host a deanery St. Nicholas celebration highlighted with the visit by Bishop Andrew Pataki, D. D., the new head of the Diocese of Parma, Ohio, of which the Livonia church is a member.

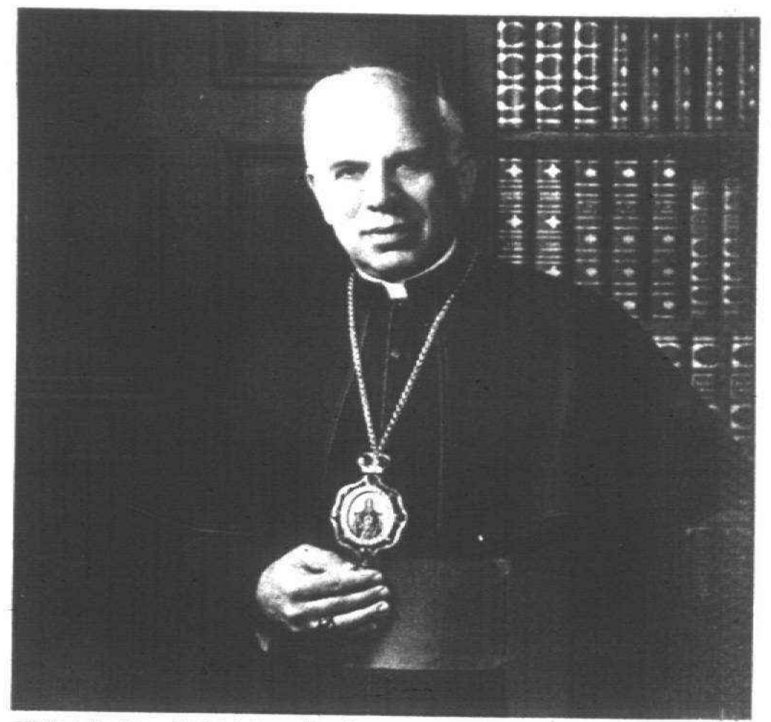
This will be the bishop's first visit to the area since his appointment last August following the death of the former prelate, Bishop Emil J. Mihalik, last January.

The Saturday celebration will begin with liturgy at 5 p.m. Following the concelebrated service, there will be a dinner/dance.

The actual date of the Feast of St. Nicholas is Dec. 6. The feast has great significance for Catholics of the Byzantine Rite, explained Rev. Thomas R. Chelena, Sacred Heart pastor.

"HE IS THE patron saint for all Byzantine Catholics in the U. S. and each church holds a special observance sometime during the month in honor of the saint we refer to as the 'wonderworker,' "Chelena continued.

Sacred Heart's observance was Dec. 1. The celebration began in church with the children of the Sunday school program decorating a Jesse Tree, named after the family of Jesse, Jesus' forebearers. The children made the ornaments that were representations of the sun, the tablets of the law, the key and Star of David, a flower for the root of Jesse, Jacob's ladder and the city of Bethlehem.



Bishop Andrew Pataki here for deanery clebration

"The symbols help the people understand all that has gone before the birth of Christ," Chelena said.

After the liturgy in the church and the tree trimming, there was a meatless potluck dinner and a visit from St. Nicholas.

This year, Matthew Pisko of Westland played the role of St. Nicholas. To perpetuate the spirit of St. Nicholas as gift giver, parishioners brought gifts which will be distributed to the needy on Christmas.

"So often, we expect to receive gifts from St. Nicholas," Chelena said. "But the spirit of St. Nicholas has more of a command for us to do as he did for others — to give from the bottom of his heart."

Not only does each parish have a St. Nicholas celebration, but each deanery likewise has a celebration with Sacred Heart hosting the observance which will include eight Byzantine Catholic churches in the metropolitan Detroit area that are part of the diocese of Parma.

Courtney and Amanda Samborsky of West Bloomfield show the Rev. Chelena an ornament they are going to place on the Jesse Tree as part of the church's St. Nicholas celebration.

Class traces state's Christian heritage

Cadillac brought Catholicism to Michigan. He brought his own priest who conducted Mass the day after he and his party landed on the banks of the Detroit River in 1701.

The history of Christianity in Michigan, including a discussion of this event, will be traced in a class offered at Madonna College, Livonia, during the winter term beginning in January. It is open for public enrollment.

"The old French Catholic influence — we know there had been Catholics in the territory as early as 1650 — will be part of the class discussions, as well as much emphasis on both Father Jacques Marquette and Fr. Gabriel Richard," said instructor Paul Larose. Larose will also cover the growth of Protestant faiths, from the first German settlers near Mt. Clemens in 1796, to the present.

"It was the Reverend John Monteith, an influential and far-sighted Protestant, who, with Father Richard founded the school which has become the University of Michigan," Larose said.

THE CLASS WILL meet in five sessions on Friday evenings at 6:30 beginning Jan. 11. The fee is $75.

Registration for the above classes can be completed any weekdaqy until 5 p.m. (until 7 p.m. on Dec. 19) through Dec. 21 or Jan 2 through 4. Information may be obtained by calling 591-5053.

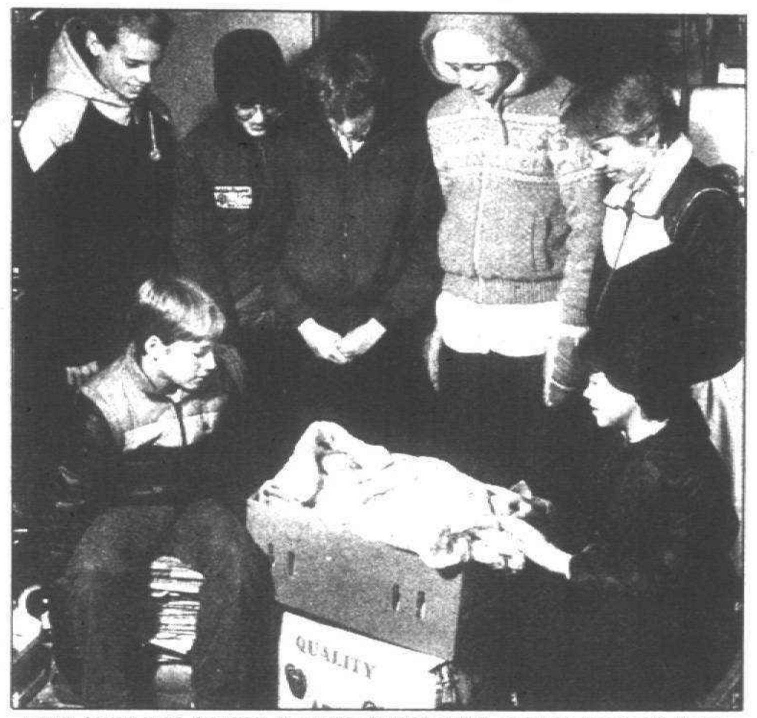
Angel Nicole Zurcher makes the big announcement.



With Mary and Joseph and the Christ child are the workers Brian Manor (top, from left), Chris Danga, Kristi Schauwecker, Carol Kowalski and Megan Milleville.

Inn-ovation

Christ child's story told in contemporary setting

A DOZEN Plymouth area seventh graders spent most of a recent Saturday in front of a TV camera. They were actors in an original drama to be shown on the "Youth View" cable show the week before Christmas.

"A Very Special Baby" is an interpretation of the Christmas story in a contemporary setting.

Joseph (Eric Borich), Mary (Wendy Shiek) and baby Jesus (Kelly Schilling) in a cluttered garage.

Scenes were taped in Plymouth's Kellogg Park, Oakwood Hospital's clinic, a home in Canton, and at the Comfort Inn in Ann Arbor.

Instead of shepherds, the angelic announcement came to "factory workers" eating their lunch in the park. In this play, rather than using a manger in a stable, the holy infant is placed in a cardboard box in a cluttered garage.

The young actors are members of a Sunday School class at the Lutheran Church of the Risen Christ on Ann Abor Road in Plymouth.

THEY SPENT SEVERAL weeks in prepration for their performance which will be shown on cable Channel 15 at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 18 and again at 5 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 20.

"Youth View" is produced weekly by Christeens Video, a group of teenagers from local churches. Their public access programming is made possible through the use of the facilities offered by local cable companies.

Christeens will also host a live call-in show on Channel 15 at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 18. This show will include music videos and holiday greetings from Christian recording artists and give viewers a chance to give their own Christmas thoughts.

It is the 10th live show in the "Christeens Cable Talk" series which is quite popular, judging by the number of calls during the program, according to Ron Priggee, executive producer.

Is the holiday religious or not?

moral perspectives

Rev. David Strong

I stepped up to the post office counter and asked for a sheet of stamps. "Do you want Christmas stamps?" the clerk asked. "Religious or non-religious?" she added. I was taken aback. Would a Christian clergyman purchase non-religious stamps at Christmas? Would they portray Santa or a Walt Disney Christmas? Who knows. I asked for the religious ones.

It was an incident which set me thingking for several days. How many of the customs of this season are non-religious? The longer I think about this question, the more I believe that the majority of our Christmas customs are non-religious.

Christmas manager scenes on the city hall lawn are a form of non-religious practice. Gift buying, Santa, Christmas trees, city docorations are all part of the non-religious holiday.

WE MIGHT assume that going to church Christmas eve is a religious ovservence. Yet some people who normaly attend church say that they don't like to attend that evening because they find themselves in the midst of a crowd of strangers.

I pondered the question. What makes the difference between a religious and a non-religious holiday? There could be many ways to answer this question.

Two lines from a Gerald Manley Hopkins poem come to mind. "The world is charged with the grandeur of God. It will flame out, like shining from shook foil."

I believe a religious observance happens through the eye of the beholder. No quantity of manger scenes, or singing of carols makes a holiday holy. When a custom helps us to see "the grandeur of God", we may call its observance religious.

ANYTHING can trigger a sense of this holy grandeur in life. I read a column which described the author's attempts to save a small cedar waxwing bird which had been stunned by striking her window.

The experience, well writ, gave me a sense of the preciousness of life. More, it reminded me of the grandeur of God's creation.

My hunch is that the most outwardly religious holidays may be the most non-religious in actual meaning. I am reminded of the minister who prayed long, complicated and beautiful prayers. Yet he sounded like he was talking about God, rather than to God.

Likewise, religious holidays can be about practicing the religious holiday, rather than seeing "the grandeur of God." We can all gather together and be glad in the holiday, and not bother with God.

The test might be whether we really pray to God at mealtimes. The test might be whether any gratitude to God is aroused. The test might be whether we spend private moments in meditation with God.

I have nothing against non-religious people or non -religious "religious holiday". Yet it is best that we now what we are doing when we celebrate these occasions.

ALL IRAs ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL.

SO WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

The difference is the yield at Security Bank and Trust.

Because at Security Bank & Trust we don't just add interest to your IRA account at the end of the year the way many other banks and financial institutions do. With compounding, we add earned interest to your principal every month or every quarter depending on the certificate maturity you choose. That means your retirement fund builds up faster and actually yields more than other funds paying the same rate at simple interest.

In addition, Security Bank & Trust provides a wide range of retirement accounts with maturities from 3-120 months and also the flexibility of a fixed or variable rate account permitting regular deposits for as little as $25.

Security Bank & Trust's IRA provides you with a tax-deferred retirement program to supplement your Social Security benefits, while providing a tax deduction in the current year.

If you qualify, Security Bank & Trust can also provide a loan to help you fund your IRA in full, now. But remember, when investing in any IRA, federal law requires substantial forfeitures of interest when withdrawing funds before maturity or before you reach age 59½. There may be substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

A Christmas wish: end winning's appeal

CHRISTMAS BRINGS with it a quality peculiar to humans:

Greed.

I'm as guilty as the next guy, maybe more so. Given a choice between more or less, I'll opt for more, more often than not.

I can sit through two hours of "A Christmas Carol," remarking what a greedy guy that Scrooge was, then in the same breath say, "C'mon, there's a two-for-one sale at K mart."

Doesn't matter what twos are on sale. Doesn't matter if I need them or not. Two toilet brushes, two left shoes, cripe, even two bowling balls (ahem).

MORE, MORE, MORE. Sports are no different. I can never get enough. I spend my working hours writing about it. I spend my leisure hours watching it. I spend my sleeping hours wondering why I spend so much time dwelling on it.

Still, I'm no fanatic. At least I don't consider myself one.

I indulge in sports, but I'm no hog. While I enjoy playing, I don't necessarily have to win all the time, like certain folks I know.

Those are the people that get me steamed. The type that practice one or two sports a year until they can whip the tar out of you without breaking a sweat.

You think you're doing a pal a favor when he calls you and says he needs someone to hit against. Sure, you answer, believing that your buddy means tennis. Then, after an hour of stopping balls with your chest, legs, arms — everything but your racket — you just watch as your so-called friend saunters off court, saying, "Well, thanks anyway."

They call it competition. I call it greed.

MORE, MORE, MORE. A win here or there is never enough for these people. All the time they insist on improving. Win, win, win — that's all they think about.

Winning's like a drug. It's addictive. Once you start, people figure you should do it all the time. "How could you lose to those bums?" they'll demand. If you insist on being a winner, you'd better understand you'll never again be human.

Because winners are like robots. Program them and they'll just keep winning, with monotonous regularity. How droll.

Really, don't you ever get bored reading about Ed Kavanaugh's Livonia Ladywood basketball teams? Or Mike Lane's Bloomfield Hills Andover girl swimmers?

Then there's John Herrington — always smiling after another championship for his Farmington Harrison football team. And Tim Storch, beaming after Troy Athens claims the state soccer title — again.

Geez, how greedy can you get?

THEY ALL say the same things after winning by 40 points or four touchdowns or 14 goals, too. "They're having a down year," they mercifully bestow upon their foes.

How do they know? Did they ever stop to think that, maybe, these people choose to be mediocre?

Is that so terrible? I don't think so. In this age of specialization, with athletes concentrating all their efforts into becoming powerful in one sport, I have chosen to be mediocre — I prefer to call it "adequate" — in lots of sports.

While others concern themselves with winning in one or two sports a year, I might, in a given week, run or row, shoot baskets or shoot golf.

To the modern athlete, this is heresy. The day of the four-sport letterwinner is past.

Not that my day ever arrived.

THE POINT IS, I'm willing to be generous with my mediocrity. I'm not greedy. I'll share my defeats with the more fortunate.

That's what this country needs: people who have the drive to be mediocre, whose ultimate goal is to be .500. They won't accept anything more.

This is a rare breed, difficult to find. So many are blinded by greed, all they envision is winning, despite their lack of talent.

Not me. Talent never stood between me and losing.

Winning's overrated, anyway. The same people who expect you to win all the time can never understand how you can be a poor loser. But if you never lose, how are you supposed to learn?

MEDIOCRITY IS like walking a tightrope, it's true. One slip and you're addicted to winning, or you plunge into losing.

The key is not to care too much, but don't stop caring, either. Apathy is for losers. You have to really want to be mediocre.

A winning team looks good when it wins. A losing team looks lousy when it loses. A mediocre team looks good, no matter what.

I know it won't do much good, but I hope those coaches — Kavanaugh, Lane, Herrington, Storch and the others like them — read this. Not that they'll understand it.

To help them, I've amended my annual Christmas letter to Santa. No more wishes for another Emily Wagner or John Miller to help them stockpile victories.

I thought about asking Santa to saddle these coaches with mediocre talent, but I've seen what they can do. They brainwash the best of the average into believing they can win and — presto! — these former middle-of-the-packers are transformed into greedy win-hoarders.

No, that kind of challenge just makes devout winners even greedier. Instead, I'll ask Mr. Claus to give them a calm, peaceful, serene new year, void of turbulance.

Let's see them try to win with that monkey riding on their back!

Salem guard Reggie Rojeski drives on Mercy's Bev White in Wednesday night's thrilling state quarterfinal game. Mercy held off a feisty challenge from Salem, 49-45 in overtime.

Valiant Rocks tumble in OT

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

Wonder what kind of reception Annette Ruggiero received when she got back to her Plymouth home Wednesday night?

The senior point guard led her Farmington Hills Mercy basketball team to a suspenseful, if not electrifying, 49-45 overtime victory against Plymouth Salem in the state Class A quarterfinals at Southfield.

The large crowd had spilled out of the stands and had encircled the court by the time the overtime period commenced. Yet Ruggiero, forever in control, confidently sank six straight free throws to bury a very game Salem team.

"We had a girl walk up to the line with ice in her veins and win the game," said Mercy coach Larry Baker. "She was wearing a Mercy uniform."

Baker was trying to make a point. Plymouth Salem, a team less gifted in terms of size, strength and speed, gave the Marlins all they wanted and then some. Baker acknowledged their effort, but he wanted to make sure everyone realized who the eventual winner was.

"I KNEW in my heart that if we could not create some distance in the second and third quarters, we'd be in for a nailbiter," Baker said. "In a tight game, in the state quarterfinals, it gets increasingly harder to shoot.

"I am not surprised it was close. But I'm not about to apologize for winning a quarterfinal game. Salem plays great defense, but look, we played it a little better tonight. The scoreboard says we won by 4 points."

Indeed, but there was no overlooking the tremendous effort displayed by Salem.

"I told the (Mercy) kids this," Baker said. "I have seen the other six teams that are left (in the state tournament). None will play better defense than Salem did tonight."

Fred Thomann's finely tuned Salem club had an answer to everything Mercy threw at them. The Rocks knew Mercy's out-of-bounds plays by rote. They knew Mercy's patterns on offense well enough to consistently shut off passing lanes and beat the Marlins to the basket. The Rocks prevented Mercy from running its vaunted fastbreak.

"Our team defense was just fantastic," said an emotionally drained, yet immensely proud Thomann. "The key was Kendra Hostynski. She just did a superb job on (Mercy center Mary) Rosowski."

DESPITE GIVING up five inches in height to Rosowski, Hostynski limited the potential all-stater to 10 points (only 2 in the second half) and managed to score 8 key points herself.

The free throw line ultimately led to Salem's death. Salem hit five of 12 free throws, Mercy 21 of 31. Salem was called for 20 fouls to Mercy's 10.

Salem, which trailed throughout the game, took a 35-34 lead on Reggie Rojeski's hoop with 5:25 left to play.

Trailing 42-40, Salem fouled Bev White (who scored 5 crucial points in the final quarter) with 1:12 left and she hit one of two. Rojeski matched her free throw at the other end, and with 58 seconds left, Mercy led 43-41.

Salem's Mary Beth Weast forced a turnover at midcourt and then, with 15 seconds left, drained a 17-footer to tie the game.

MERCY CALLED a timeout to set up its final play — their "quickie play." It was the play Mercy used last Friday to beat Murray-Wright at the buzzer. Salem, though, had all the exits guarded and Mercy never fired its final shot.

Ruggiero, though, born and raised in Plymouth, made sure the Marlins were going to Kalamazoo. Her six free throws were more than the Rocks could overcome.

On the night, Ruggiero scored 21 points (13 of 14 from the free throw line), and dished out four assists.

Head scored 13 for Salem. Weast added 11.

The Rocks finish at 21-5 and with the undying respect of their head coach.

"I have been coaching for 20 years," Thomann said. "I have never been as proud of a team as I am of these kids. They accepted the challenge of playing one of the best teams in the state and did everything they could possibly do to win."

Jays explode by Rocks in opener

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

Plymouth Salem coach Bob Brode described the Southfield boys basketball team as a time bomb waiting to explode.

But, for nearly three quarters Tuesday night at Salem, the Rocks' sturdy man-to-man defense had the Blue Jay time bomb all but defused.

The explosion, coupled with a huge sigh of relief from Southfield head coach Gregg Sliwka, came with just under 3 minutes left in the third quarter.

The Jays ran off a 12-3 spurt in just a minute and 40 seconds, then a 16-6 spurt to start the final quarter and walked off with a 75-66 win, spoiling Brode's coaching debut at Salem.

Yet, to Brode, the opener was a success.

"This was a big test for us," Brode said. "We were real anxious to play. We needed to use this to evaluate what we did this summer. We think we're ready now to step into our league. That's why we schedule teams like Southfield. They are a fine team and they help get us ready to play our league schedule."

SLIWKA WASN'T all too pleased with the performance of his "fine team", however.

"You know, a game like this, we're playing in strange surroundings, we've never played here before. The kids think that Plymouth Salem is going to be down this year and they come in too cocky. Plymouth Salem really played well," Sliwka said.

Especially 6-foot-5 center LeSean Haygood. Haygood completely dominated the glass for Salem, pulling down 20 rebounds on the night. He also did a good job controlling Southfield's Ron Austin. Haygood also chipped in 14 points.

But, Haygood picked up his third foul early in the second half and Southfield went to work.

"As soon as he got his third, we immediately went to our 6-2 'giants'," Sliwka said.

But, those 6-2 guys, Austin and Tyrone Green (who is actually 6-4), turned the tide. Green rattled off 9 points to trigger the third quarter explosion and Austin scored 6 in the fourth quarter.

All told, Green scored 15 to tie teammate Vince Baldwin for game-high honors. Austin added 12.

SALEM'S MIKE WHITE was also a pivotal figure in the game. In the first half, the senior was able to control the tempo of the Salem attack and was effective in helping bring the ball up court against the Blue Jay pressure.

"Salem was so patient offensively that it made us work extra hard on defense," Sliwka said. "That effected our offense because once we got the ball, we just ran down and threw it up."

That was as much White's doing as any and Salem led 33-25 at the half.

Salem built its lead to 10 points, 48-38, with 2:50 left in the third quarter.

But, Haygood and then White got into foul trouble. With those two sitting alongside Brode on the Salem bench, Southfield kicked into gear.

"We went into our zone press and that seemed to bother them. They started to throw the ball away and we finally started converting," Sliwka said.

YET, TO the Rocks' credit, they didn't fold. Austin's 6 straight points gave the Jays a 66-58 lead with 3:52 to play. Sophomore Mike Hale's basket made it 66-60, then Haygood fouled out.

Undaunted, the Rocks pulled to within 4 on Paul Makara's hoop with 2:20 left.

Senior Eric Sovine, who played a very solid game for the Rocks scoring 12 points and dishing out 6 assists, made a steal at center court and White converted at the other end. With 2 minutes left, Southfield led 66-64.

Salem wrestlers garner a 5th at Bedford tourney

The Plymouth Salem wrestling team took a huge stride toward regaining its stature among the state's elite last Saturday placing fifth in the 18-team Temperance-Bedford Season Opener Tournament.

Bedford won the meet, ousting Hazel Park, Eaton Rapids and Davison — all of whom are highly ranked across the state.

Salem's fifth-place finish was a major achievement according to coach Ron Krueger.

"I'm very pleased," he said. "We only took 11 kids. Our heavyweight, Marc Cygan, had to take his ACT tests. So, we may have even done better than we did."

Dave Dameron earned Salem's highest place, with his second at 126 pounds. After winning his first three matches, Dameron took on Warren Lincoln's Sam Amine, the state runner-up last year, in the finale. With 10 seconds left in the match, Dameron led 9-7. But, Amine took the Salem junior down to earn a 12-9 win.

"WE WERE disappointed in the championship because we felt Dave let down just briefly there and it cost him. But, on the whole, we're encouraged because Dave wrestled very, very well," Krueger said.

At 145, Andy Ward placed third losing only to two-time state champ Mike Murdoch from Bedford.

Kevin Freeman earned a fourth for the Rocks at 119. Brian Johnson, who moved up to heavyweight from his normal weight of 198 (leaving 198 void), placed fourth.

Ken Freeman (132) and Denis Dameron (98) each gained sixth-place points for the Rocks. Dameron, a sophomore, won two of his four matches despite being plagued with an illness.

"Some of our good kids really didn't know how good they were," Krueger said. "But, we've got to keep getting better and keep working."

Salem won its first dual meet of the season last Thursday, 35-18 against Walled Lake Central.

Late run by Ypsi stops Chiefs

Plymouth Canton boys basketball coach Dave Van Wagoner would just as well take the first 22 minutes and forget the final 9 minutes of Tuesday night's game with Ypsilanti.

The visiting Braves, using a full-court press, broke open a close game in the final quarter and went on to defeat Canton in a non-league tussle, 63-42.

Both teams are 1-1 overall. (Ypsi lost its opener Friday to highly-ranked Lansing Eastern).

"We were really playing well until 2 minutes to go in the third quarter," explained Van Wagoner, "then their three-quarter court press started to bother us.

"We didn't make good adjustments. They deflected some passes and got some easy baskets. We just broke down."

Dave Parker was the main pirate, scoring 20 points for Ypsi.

Kevin Hawkins led Canton with 12 and Brent Stack chipped in with 9.

"I'm real proud of the kids," said Van Wagoner. "For 22 minutes we were right in there. But they had superior quickness."

On Friday, Canton plays at Walled Lake Western.

"We're looking forward to the challenge of defending our league title," said the Canton coach.

Forward Jim Schlicker, out the first 2 games with an injury, is expected to play for the Chiefs.

SOUTHFIELD CHRISTIAN 80, PLYMOUTH 70: Cat-quick Chris Cobb notched 36 points and hauled down 20 rebounds Tuesday to lift host Southfield Christian to a season-opening win against winless Plymouth Christian (0-2).

Pat McCarthy scored 23 in a losing cause. Three other Eagles also scored in double figures — Rod Windle (16), Jim Stephens (12) and Rob Cannon (10).

Rocks sharp in loss

Then came the backbreaker. Southfield missed 2 shots, the second going out of bounds off a Salem player. Sliwka called time out to set up a play. The Jays botched the play, but Green followed the third miss of the series with a clutch hoop.

The Jays then ran off 9 straight points to wrap up their second straight win of the season.

Rod Hurst scored 14 points and Ken Hollie 11 to cap off a very balanced Jay scoring attack.

"We really respect what Salem did tonight, especially what they did on offense," Sliwka said. "I hope our kids learned something."

Ocelot men on roll

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

If Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team has one consistency, it's inconsistency.

So far, anyway. The Ocelots opened the season with six straight losses, but now have turned it around with four wins in their last five games.

The most recent came last Saturday, when Schoolcraft subdued visiting Ivy Tech (of Gary, Ind.) 67-59.

The team's only loss in their recent surge came Wednesday at Glen Oaks CC by a 93-79 margin.

"We're finding out what kind of team we are," said Schoolcraft coach Rocky Watkins. "We're a much better team playing under control. Some teams we can run against, some we can't.

"We've been inconsistent. We're not always executing the same way. It's coming, though."

WHAT'S HELPED turn the season around for the Ocelots is the addition of Harold Martin and James Orr, both of whom were granted another year of elgibility after transferring from other schools. Their becoming elgible coincides with Schoolcraft's recent streak.

In the win over Ivy Tech, Martin pumped in 22 points and grabbed 8 rebounds.

"We've gotten some solid play from Martin," acknowledged Watkins. "He's only 6-foot-2, but he's rugged around the basket and poised under pressure."

The Ocelots led all the way against Ivy, although they never quite iced it. Clarence Jones chipped in 13 points and 6 assists and Bradley Turner added 10 points and 9 rebounds.

FOUR OCELOTS reached double figures against Glen Oaks, but the team's inability to convert free throws proved costly. Schoolcraft hit just 9 of 22, while Glen Oaks connected on 22 of 34.

The loss halted a three-game win streak for the Ocelots, the last of which earned them the Roadrunner Classic championship.

Turner's 22 points and 13 rebounds was best for Schoolcraft. Martin contributed 15 points and 7 rebounds, Orr had 14 points and 9 rebounds and Jones bagged 11 points and dished out 8 assists.

The Ocelots had the week off but will return to action Monday at home against Jordan College. Game time is 8 p.m.

Following that game, Schoolcraft will host Northwestern Business College at 8 p.m. Tuesday, then travel to Ivy Tech for a rematch Saturday, Dec. 22. The Ray Stites Invitational Tournament is the following weekend at Highland Park CC.

Watkins will be looking for consistency from his squad during these contests, because the Eastern Conference season begins Jan. 5 at Mott CC.

Orchard Lake St. Mary 5 finally snaps losing streak

Maybe the Wabash Tournament was a turning point for Orchard Lake St. Mary's college cagers.

Tim Domke hopes so. The Eagles finally broke out of a six-game losing streak Saturday, downing Kalamazoo College 71-69.

The victory came after OLSM lost to Defiance (Ohio) 99-79 in the tourney's opening roundFriday.

"We finally started hitting the perimeter shot," said a somewhat relieved Domke. "I said we'd have a rocky first half (of the season), but we'll have a great second half.

"We'll be there."

AFTER FRIDAY'S loss dropped St. Mary's to 1-6, it seemed there was no where to go but up. In Saturday's win, some strong man-to-man defense in the second half and balanced scoring from Keith Brooks (14 points), Erich Hartnett and Rob Scharboneau (10 each) sparked the victory.

Still, it didn't come easy. The Eagles led 35-22 at the break and had to repulse a Kalamazoo rally in the second half to insure the win.

Lance Davis popped in 8 points and passed out 9 assists, while Steve Kopicki contributed 9 points and 14 rebounds.

Against Defiance, OLSM was simply never in the game. The Eagles trailed 45-35 at the half, due mainly to their 11-for-31 shooting (.355 percent). They improved in the second half, finishing the game with 34 baskets in 80 shots (.420 percent), but that didn't change the outcome.

Brooks again paced St. Mary's with 13 points. Hartnett had 11, Kopicki and Bobby Wade scored 10 apiece, and Davis added 9.

"We're getting balanced scoring," said Domke. "But we've got to play a lot better defense. And nobody is consistently dominating on offense."

St. Mary's travels to Northwood Institute for a 3 p.m. game Saturday.

Meet the John Mulroy many don't know

Chris McCosky

I WOULD LIKE to introduce you to someone.

His name is John Mulroy and he coached a little basketball at Plymouth Canton this fall.

Oh, you know him, you say. Well, I don't think you do.

You think John Mulroy is this guy who stepped in for his pregnant wife and made a fool of himself coaching the Canton girls this year.

You think he's some poor sport/bad loser who blames the referees for his team's inability to win.

You think he's a guy who says nasty things about those nice Canton girls — things like they're bored with basketball and it's hard to motivate them to play.

Well, you don't know John Mulroy at all.

JOHN MULROY made some serious mistakes this season, and he knows it. But he also did a wondrous job teaching a bunch of high school kids to play winning basketball.

Mulroy's coaching background comes from the collegiate ranks. He was an assistant under Don Sicko at the University of Detroit for two years. Therein, I believe, lies the root of Mulroy's "mistakes" this season.

It is a very difficult adjustment to make for someone to step into a high school gym and coach 15 young girls after learning the ropes coaching 18- to 22-year-old college men.

It's a major adjustment in terms of what and how much you can teach. It's an adjustment in terms of what you can and cannot say to the players. And, on the court, it's an adjustment in terms of the quality and consistency of play and of the officiating.

The Canton players, too, had to make some adjustments. It certainly wasn't easy for them to understand what this new coach was trying to get them to do. It wasn't easy for them to put up with his lecturing in the huddles and his screaming from the bench. John Mulroy's courtside manner was far more emphatic and expressive and audible than was Phyllis Mulroy's, his wife and Canton's coach prior to her pregnancy.

You can easily see that Canton's Phase III gym was a fairly combustable place at the beginning of this season. A number of tragic things could have, and almost did, happen.

THE CANTON players, unable to put up with Mulroy, could have quit en masse. The team could have been so frought with tension and dissension that it could not have performed up to par on the court. Mulroy, frustrated and disappointed by his inability to make his players understand his system of play, could have left and let junior varsity coach Jan McKenzie run the team.

Those were the realities facing the Chiefs this season. But, to Mulroy's credit, most of the above crises were avoided.

Sure, there was tension. There were times when Mulroy so enraged his players that they felt like quitting. But on the whole the Chiefs took well to Mulroy's system and became a better basketball team as a result.

The Chiefs were inconsistent at the start. They played .500 basketball through the first 10 games, losing some in that stretch that Mulroy felt his team should have won.

Then, suddenly, the Chiefs stopped playing mediocre basketball and began playing the game the way Mulroy had wanted them to play. The things Mulroy had been preaching — things like "serious man-to-man defense" and "intelligent, patient offense" — began to make sense to the Chiefs.

IRONICALLY, the turning point came in a tough, 41-35 overtime loss to rival Plymouth Salem. It was in that game that the Chiefs began to believe in Mulroy. They saw that by playing the game his way, they could compete with Plymouth Salem, Livonia Bentley and Livonia Stevenson.

The Chiefs soon ran off consecutive victories over Redford Union, Bentley and Farmington Harrison before bowing out to Bentley in the league tournament 49-44.

Here's where the John Mulroy you all know and dislike comes in. Prior to the district tournament, Mulroy made some comments to me concerning his team's apparent apathy in preparing for the district opener against Northville.

Mulroy is honest, almost to a fault. To me, his honesty is refreshing. You get a little tired of stock quotes. But to others, namely parents, his honesty was upsetting.

Then came the 43-41 loss to Salem in the district championship — the night that Mulroy lost his composure, the night Mulroy unfortunately alienated most everyone in the community with an interest in girls basketball.

HE DID SOMETHING that violated every high school coach's code of conduct ever written or discussed — he publically blamed the officiating for his team's loss.

I personally wish Mulroy hadn't done that, although I deeply sympathize with the frustration he felt after the game.

I have publically criticized the officiating in girls basketball numerous times. I still don't think the level of officiating in the girls game has developed consistently with the level of talent. The good officials either won't work girls basketball or they work it only to get in shape for the boys season.

Mulroy felt his team was done an injustice by two local officials and he simply could not disguise his true feelings. I don't condone his actions, nor does he. He, in fact, is quite sorry he said what he said publically — though he firmly believes his accusations were based on truth.

John Mulroy will never again chastise a referee in public.

But, really, the bottom line is this: John Mulory is a very good basketball coach, the kind of coach that is in limited supply these days. He made some mistakes and for that he's sorry.

Were I a parent of a Canton basketball player, I would just have this to say to John Mulory: "Thank you for making my girl a better basketball player and I hope you will coach again next year."

Attention juniors! Tourney sign-up on

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Entries are expected to surpass the 200 mark for the third annual Open Junior Bowling Tournament, Dec. 27-28, at Wonderland Lanes in Livonia.

Tournament chairman Ernie Jones is optimistic that last year's total of 146 will be shattered.

"It's coming up fast, but it's safe to say that we'll pass 200," said Jones, a member of Livonia Post 3941 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, one of the tournament sponsors. "Last year we doubled our total from the year before."

It was only three years ago that Jones, seeking a holiday-related service project for the VFW, came up with the idea for a junior bowling tournament.

With the help of Wonderland Lanes, the Observer Newspapers and Ken Kossick of Pro Am Bowling and Trophy Sales of Livonia, the tournament has become one of the top junior bowling events in western Wayne County.

COMPETITION is broken down into four age divisions for boys and girls: A, 15-17 years; B, 13-14; C, 11-12; and D, 8-10.

The entry fee is $3 per bowler (deadline Saturday, Dec. 22). The fee covers three games of bowling, shoes and a complimentary gift.

Squad times (preference is final) are available at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 27, or Friday, Dec. 28.

Checks should be made payable to: Livonia Post 3941 V.F.W., 29155 W. Seven Mile Road, Livonia, Mi. 48152. (See application form).

Wonderland Lanes, located at 28455 Plymouth Road in Livonia, will provide automatic scoring for the second straight year.

Mohacsi cited by Olympic group

Mary Mohacsi, the former Livonia school teacher who has served as the Detroit Bowling Queen for seven years, is now in line for the highest of the many honors she has received in her story book career.

She has been nominated for the American Olympic Committee's Sports Woman of the Year Award. Her selection was based on her outstanding performance of winning the singles title in the recent International Amateur Bowling tournament where she competed against bowlers from 15 different countries. She will be featured in the forthcoming issue of the Olympian, official publication of the U.S. Olympic committee.

PLYMOUTH BOWL Jim Mitchell, who drives from his home in Farmington Hills each week to bowl in Plymouth, hit the high point of his career last week when he posted a 299 game in a 730 series in the twi-night league. It was his second 700 series of the year as he rolled a 725 in November.

WONDERLAND A new high was reached in the classic this week when six new members were admitted to the 700 club. This brings the year's total thus far to more than 60 members.

Ron Puhl showed the way with a 747 that included a 265 middle game. The others in line were Tony Clafton with 729, Robert Wilcox with 720, Larry Brandt with 719, Bill Funke with 718 and Nick Colucci with 713.

MERRI-BOWL For the first time this season there was a tie for high scoring honors in the Friendship Mixed League. When the final pin fell John Hurley and Bob Rose were deadlocked at 279. Kathy Wick was high in the ladies classic with a 278 in a 574 series.

WOODLAND High scores were the order this past week with the result that two more members were admitted to the 700 club. Bill Pietrzyk showed the way with 715 and Ric Evenson had a 246 opener in a 708. Betty Kiski was high among the ladies with a 225 single game.

BEL-AIRE Jeff Naboznya had the most satisfying night of his bowling career when he inserted a perfect game in a 698 series in the plumbers league. The only thing that would have pleased him more was to get the 700 series that he missed by two pins. In the Our Lady of Sorrows league, Tim Tuokey had the high game of 278.

GARDEN LANES Gerald Bizys left the No. 3 pin that robbed him of a perfect game. His 299 helped him post a high 640 series. In the St. Linus league, Ed Kropurnick showed the way with a 367 game in a 640 series.

SUPER BOWL Bob Wooley paced the senior citizens league with an opening game of 223 in a 618 series.

OU sets sight on national ranking

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

A year ago, Oakland University's women's swimmers started the season with a new coach, with their best swimmer missing because of academic problems, and, in all, with just 11 swimmers.

The Pioneers also started the season with five straight dual meet losses, which, all things considered, shouldn't be too surprising. What was surprising was how they finished.

OU won its final six meets and took eight team members to the NCAA Division II championship meet, where it managed a fourth-place finish.

"That was really exciting for me," said coach Mary Ellen Wydan. "I was very proud of them all."

BUT THAT was last year. This season presents a new challenge for Wydan and OU.

First, replacements must be found for some very capable performers. Graduated are Karen Enneking, who started last season academically ineligible because she did not have enough credits but returned in January to place second nationally in both the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststrokes; Mary Vincent, the diver from Rochester who was first at nationals on the 1-meter and second on the 3-meter; and Patty Doherty, a key member to the freestyle relay teams.

Wydan has signed some capable talent, which should allow OU to remain among the top-five Division II teams nationally.

"We've set our team goal at fourth at nationals or above," said the second-year coach. "We had 11 girls on the team last year and now we have 14. And our depth is stronger, our depth people are improved."

WYDAN FIGURES defending champion Clarion College to be a heavy favorite to repeat, but "it's a real tossup for second through sixth."

Despite the loss of three key members, Wydan is optimistic because of freshmen swimmers Nancy Schermer, from Zeeland; Kim Brace, from Dearborn; Allison Klump, from Saginaw; Paula Censoni, from Rochester; and divers Michelle Derdaele of Pleasant Ridge and Lee Ann O'Neil of Holt.

Schermer has been particularly impressive. "She's an easy person to work with," said Wydan. "She's got a lot of talent, and the right mental attitude.

"She should do well at nationals."

Schermer is one of three OU women to already make qualifying standards for nationals. Schermer has made it for the 100, 200, 500 and 1,650 freestyles.

Brace will swim the butterfly and individual medleys, Klump is a breaststroker, and Censoni will swim the IMs and some breast and fly.

Also returning for OU after a year's absence is Sarah Stanwood, a senior from Plymouth who holds the school records in the 200 and 400 IMs. Despite the layoff, Stanwood is close to her all-time best in the 400 IM and has qualified for nationals in the event.

THE NEWCOMERS will supplement a strong group of returnees, led by senior Kathy VanValkenburg, from East Grand Rapids; juniors Kim Pogue, from Farmington, and Linda Scott, from Rochester; and sophomore Bonnie Gleffe, from Saginaw.

Pogue has been impressive in the early going for OU, qualifying in the 200, 500 and 1,650 freestyles. At nationals last year, Pogue was eighth in the 1,650 and ninth in the 500 and, while those placings earned her All-American status, she might have done better.

"She's more motivated than last year," said Wydan. "She has Nancy to train with, which she likes. They really push each other. It's the same with Linda (Scott)."

Scott was ill at nationals last year. She's expected to contribute heavily in the 100 and 200 freestyles and the 100 fly.

VANVALKENBURG, TOO, should enjoy a stellar season. She was third at nationals last season in the 100 backstroke and seventh in the 200 back. The two swimmers that finished ahead of her in the 100 have both graduated.

Wydan will need all her swimmers for the upcoming dual meet season. OU is currently 1-1, with a loss to Bowling Green and a win over Cleveland State. There are four other Division I schools on the schedule, plus Division II champ Clarion and Division III winner Kenyon State.

"It's a very tough schedule," admitted Wydan. "But our object is to make the (national) cut times. That's why we swim the competition we do."

Already they're getting primed for that mid-March date in Orlando: the Division II championships.

Gymnastics hurt by coaching void?

By Jim Hughes
staff writer

OLYMPIC IDOLS Mary Lou Retton and Bart Connor may have inspired youngsters to begin athletic careers in gymnastics, but the American gold medalists' accomplishments have done little to generate interest in coaching.

High school athletic directors in Oakland County have been hard-pressed to fill the void left by a high turnover rate in prep gymnastics. And the solution is not simple.

Once an athletic director finds a coach, only half the battle is won. The other half is keeping the coach on staff. It seems spotting gymnasts while they perform tricks in routines takes a physical toll on the coaches, and that may be the reason for the turnovers.

Oakland County has some strong high school gymnastics programs, especially at Troy and North Farmington. Although North Farmington's program is stable with coach Mary (Johnesee) Glitz in charge, things aren't the same in Troy.

THIS SEASON, Troy will have its third coach in as many years. The position was open two years ago when Sandy Smith retired after 13 seasons. Smith's replacement, Pat Rasmussen, moved to Utah after one year when her husband had a job transfer. Dennis Mitchell will coach Troy this season.

"Gymnastics is a special area and coaches are hard to find," said Troy schools athletic director Joe Francis, who faces the possibility of finding a coach at Athens if Lori Boes lands a job out-of-state.

"I have a suspicion — and it's just a guess — that there may be some disappointment on the part of the high school coaches because club kids can compete against non-club kids on the varsity level. I really don't know."

Smith, who retired because she was "getting stale," said that could be a fraction of the problem.

"That's part of it," she said, then added, "Coaching gymnastics, you need great knowledge, you have to know how to spot and you need to know the techniques. It's a difficult sport to coach.

"I would hope by now the kids who have gone through the programs would put time into coaching. But, that's not happening."

JULIE TISCHLER, the head coach at Rochester Adams, is a former high school gymnast who returns to her alma mater to coach. This is her first year at Adams as head coach, after serving one year as an assistant and two years at Reuther Junior High.

"I plan on staying," Tischler said, adding the only thing that would make her resign is an out-of-state job. "I'm a teacher, and I plan on looking for a job in Rochester as soon as I graduate (from Oakland University in April).

Tischler is one of two gymnastics coaches Rochester schools athletic director Dick Ulrich hired this year. The other is Gale Renkiewicz, another Adams graduate and a former high school teammate of Tischler.

"There's even been a high turnover right after I've hired coaches," Ulrich said. "(Coaching) gymnastics takes a lot of energy and time. The coach has to be on their toes at all times. A lot of them are young people, and they have busy schedules which tie them up."

"It's hard to find coaches," Tischler said. "I had to get my sister (Janie) to help me."

Renkiewicz, who recently sustained a broken nose while spotting a gymnast, agrees with Smith in regard to the demands coaching takes on an individual.

"FOR A WOMAN, it's a hard sport," she said. "It's very aggressive and you have to do a lot of spotting. It takes a lot of muscle, and a lot of women aren't willing to do it when they get older. They can't."

Boes, who begins her third year at Athens, was an all-state performer at Troy High. She says the shortage could be cause by the difficulty in the physical and mental aspects of coaching.

"People burn out way too fast," she said. "It's just too hard of a sport to coach. Another thing is the kids are improving so much, talent-wise, it's hard for a coach to keep up. Taking on a program is not as easy as it used to be. You really have to be up on things."

Glitz is the exception to the problem. She begins her ninth year at North — where she performed in high school — and hasn't experienced the burn-out syndrome.

"I would say the shortage of coaches is mainly because of the strain on a woman to spot," she said. "That's why a lot of coaches do it for a few years, then stop."

ACCORDING TO Francis, the problem isn't only in Oakland County, but state-wide. There's even a shortage at the college level. In his quest for a coach at Troy, he called the state colleges with gymnastics programs, only to learn there's a shortage there, too.

Garden City cagers stun Spartans, 49-47

Using a double screen, Garden City's Steve Freier connected on a 10-foot jumper with just 5 seconds remaining to give the Cougars a 49-47 boys basketball victory Tuesday over visiting Livonia Stevenson.

Both teams are 1-1 on the year.

"We got beat by a hoop two years ago (by Stevenson) and anytime you can beat George's (Van Wagoner) team it's a good feather in your bonnet," said GC coach Bob Dropp.

Garden City led throughout, but Stevenson rallied to tie the game 47-all on Bob Sluka's basket, his fifth of the period, with 24 seconds remaining.

Sluka, a 6-foot-6 senior, was saddled with 4 fouls early, but returned for the final period of play. He led Stevenson with 14 points and 10 rebounds. Teammate Ed Gilbert added 13 points.

Steve Dunning of Garden City led all scorers with 21 and Freier added 11.

"We did not play well, but we still had a chance to win," said Van Wagoner. "Give credit where credit is due."

REDFORD UNION 71, CHURCHILL 57: Junior guard Dennis Bushart enjoyed his finest night as a prep, pouring in 36 points Tuesday as host Redford Union turned back visiting Churchill.

Bushart made 13 field goals and hit 10 of 11 free throws. He tossed in 28 second half points. As a team, RU made 23 of 38 free throws.

Senior forward Pat Lowney added 10 points for the victorious Panthers, while frontliners John Copley and Alex McKay combined for 33 rebounds.

State task force rejects longer school year

Public reaction against adding 10 days to year

By Kathy Parrish
staff writer

A plan to add 10 days to the students' school year has been dropped from recommendations of the Governor's Educational Summit Task Force.

In addition to dropping the extended school year plan, the task force did not recommend two other controversial proposals — early childhood schooling for all Michigan 4-year-olds and new teacher certification, with educators allowed to teach only in their major and minor areas.

Instead, the group Wednesday morning recommended to Gov. James Blanchard a commission on early childhood education to create a preschool program. It asked that teachers "have adequate academic preparation relating to the particular level of their assignment."

THE 15 PROPOSALS the task force recommended included $500 college scholarships for high school graduates with top grades, more student testing at higher levels, and a major study to determine how technology can serve students.

"There are not a lot of real tough, original ideas in here — just things that can be implemented next year," said task force chairman Donald Bemis, superintendent of Utica Community Schools and a trustee of Oakland University.

"We have some tough problems in Michigan education, and I think we've got to be about them," Bemis said. "This is not the definitive long-range plan — just a series of things to make our schools better and more responsible."

SET UP BY Blanchard to design a short-term legislative plan for education, the six-member task force based its final report on comments from 3,100 Michigan residents who attended five regional summits in November. Those attending reacted to proposals drawn up by the volunteers.

Among area members were Louis D. Beer, Birmingham attorney; William P. Vititoe, president of Michigan Bell Telephone Co.; and Francile Anderson of Pontiac, vice president of the state Parent-Teacher Association.

The proposals were to meet three criteria: They must be set up at little or no cost; They could be used in schools in the near future; They can be applied statewide.

THE PUBLIC reacted most against the extended school year proposal, which would have added 10 days of class time for students. School districts must offer classes to students for 180 days each year to be elgible for state aid.

Rather than requiring 190 days each year, the task force suggested setting up 10 state-financed pilot projects that would add 10 days for teachers. The extra time would be spent in training, which now takes them out of classrooms.

"It came through loud and clear that the extended school year was the lowest-priority item," Bemis said. "There was greater emphasis on utilizing time in the classroom."

Top priorities were professional de-

Theater groups keep lots of costumes on hand

JIM JAGDFELD

By Victoria Diaz
special writer

IT'S NOT LIKE most banks.

Brightly colored, shiny-buttoned military uniforms line the walls, along with dozens of gauzy formals, glittery dance costumes, spangled tights and even a wedding gown or two. There's also a mind-boggling array of shirts, hats, men's suits, neckties and shoes. Add some baubles, bangles, beads, belts, swashbucklers' boots and feather boas — and you begin to get some idea of what the costume bank, acquired and maintained over the last 30 years by the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford, is like.

Similar "banks" are the property of the Spotlight Players of Wayne-Westland, the Garden City Civic Theatre and the Plymouth Theatre Guild. Amassed over several years' time, the banks are considered invaluable by budget-conscious community theater groups, when it comes to outfitting an entire cast for the season's new production.

"If we tried to make most of our costumes, the cost of new material alone wouldn't be economically justifiable," explained Jane Brevik, a costumer who has done some 20 plays with the TGLR. "Also, in addition to saving us money, the collection saves us lots of time, too. We don't have to go out and hunt all those costumes down.

"Sometimes, we'll use our costumes as is," said Brevik. "And sometimes, we'll revise or re-style them. Often, we paint or dye women's shoes we have on hand, or men's boots. We might even make costumes from old drapery or bedspreads. Not too long ago, we used an old green taffeta dress from the collection that was literally falling apart at the seams. I had to practically sew it back together again after each performance."

"WE HAVE SOME genuine antique dresses donated to us which, I think, really should be in a historical museum," she said. "We aren't able to use a lot of them because, apparently, everbody's grandmother was a size four."

Brevik added that the guild, which stores its collection at its theater in Redford, also occasionally rents out costumes.

Especially prized pieces in the collection include those from a 1972 production of "Lion in Winter," which won a best costuming award at the Community Theater Association of Michigan competition that year. Other favorites include a chicken suit, complete with multi-colored ostrich-tailfeathers, built for the group's production of "Tribute" in 1981, and several costumes from "Aladdin," a children's theater production done in the late '50s.

Although the banks usually consist of literally hundreds of costumes, an exception is the collection belonging to the 38-year-old Plymouth Theatre Guild. Ten years ago, almost all of the guild's costumes — at the time, stored in a home basement — were destroyed when the basement was flooded. Included in the loss were a large number of especially valuable pieces, which the group had designed and built for a bicentennial production of "Pursuit of Happiness."

"I had made many of the costumes myself, and we hadn't skimped on any of them," said longtime PTG costumer Clemie Cyburt. "They were all American Revolutionary period costumes — military uniforms, lots of beautiful gowns. We were just sick when we lost them."

THE GROUP NOW stores most of its collection, which Cyburt estimates to be about 40 costumes, in a recently purchased semi-truck trailer in Plymouth. Guild Vice-President Robin Galick said the collection, though relatively small, is still used for more than half the group's shows. "We use it mainly to find (contemporary-style) men's suits," she said. "It seems like no actors have suits of their own these days."

"Sometimes we rent or borrow costumes from other theater groups for shows," Galick said. "Or we'll design and sew the costumes, or get them from cast members. But we always go to the collection first."

For a recent production of "Bus Stop," waitress' uniforms and a nightclub singer's costume from the collection were supplemented by shirts, jackets, jeans and hats from personal wardrobes, Galick said. What couldn't be found in either of these ways cost the guild approximately $100, she said, adding that, for costumes, the group "usually doesn't spend that much."

Garden City Civic Theatre costume chairwoman Diane Kremser estimates her group's collection to number approximately 500 pieces, even though the GCCT is only in its seventh season. According to Kremser, the costumes in the relatively large collection have been acquired through various sources.

"If we have a need for certain kinds of costumes, we'll advertise that need through our group's newsletter," she explained. "Many of our costumes are donated by group members or people who happen to read the newsletter. We also buy quite often from resale shops like Value Village in Wayne. We could never afford to buy from ordinary retail stores. And, of course, we sometimes build our own costumes. That's what we did recently when we produced 'Guys and Dolls' and we needed several dance outfits."

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

Spend Christmas with us. It'll be just like old times.

The Christmas spirit is alive and well and nipping at your nose at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village throughout December. Get that special holiday feeling while a vintage phonograph plays at the Wright Brothers' home and the aroma of baked goods fills the streets. In the museum, St. Nick will give out free mementos, and visitors are invited to make their own gifts of yesteryear. See antique toys and ornaments, hear carolers and get a feel for Christmas the way it used to be. This year, your Christmas present could be Christmas past. December 1st through the 31st except Christmas Day. Dial 271-1620.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village.
The great American museum that's also great fun.

Citizens group promotes better climate for arts

By Ruth Zaromp
special writer

The annual meeting of the Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Michigan (CCAM) was preceded with a short concert of the Renaissance City Chamber Players. This latter is one out of the two resident chamber groups in the whole of the United States.

The CCAM is a group of people who have an interest in all of the art forms as they are developing in Michigan — be it in the areas of music, painting, poetry, dance, theater, etc. This group came into being last year. It had its first meeting in Lansing with 300 members present, among them, Kitty Carlisle and Gov. James Blanchard.

Peter Stroh (Stroh's Brewery) is chairman of CCAM and Lee Hanson (WQRS) is president. Publicity is being handled by Warren Shwayder (Touche & Ross).

This is a statewide organization. There are four annual meetings, which are held at different places throughout the state. To facilitate statewide coverage, a division into 10 regions with a vice president presiding over each of them has been performed.

MICHIGAN has about 20 major art organizations. In music, Michigan has the fourth strongest industry in the nation. A strong effort is being made to facilitate the arts in Michigan in whatever location they might be situated, and therefore, a strong effort is being made to attract people who are involved in the arts (either as participants or audience) to this organization. Membership dues at this time are $5 per year, although this might change in the relatively near future.

The CCAM has received a status of 501 (c) (3) in respect to the Internal Revenue Service. With this particular status, 20 percent of the funds of the organization can be utilized toward active lobbying, and all funds contributed to the organization receive the status of being tax deductible.

The firm of Dunn and Roth is providing the CCAM with accounting services. For the past year, operating expenses exceeded $28,000, which was provided partly by donations, membership fees, and other sources ($22,481), and partly by an interest free loan of $5,000.

A STUDY has begun to clarify the contribution of the arts to the economy of our state. The study is surveying some of the basic cash flows of the arts organizations, in particular investigating the amount of cash flow that they might receive from the state (in the form of grants, etc.) in comparison to the amount that they pay back (in the form of taxes, salaries, etc.).

This study hopes to involve about 2,000 arts organizations and even though not all of the questions will be answered by all involved, a 40 percent answer rate is expected.

CCAM has established close ties with similar organizations in other states, in particular New York State and Missouri. Through these close connections and interests, mutual goals can be accomplished.

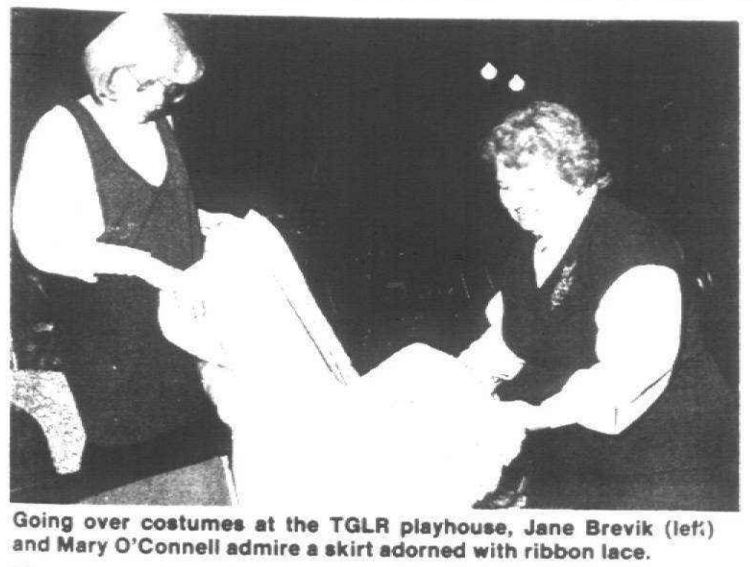
Clothes find new life on stage



Going over costumes at the TGLR playhouse, Jane Brevik (left) and Mary O'Connell admire a skirt adorned with ribbon lace.

Garden City Civic Theatre Costume Chairman Diane Kremser estimates her group's collection to number approximately 500 pieces, even though the GCCT is only in its seventh season.

(The dance costumes are now part of the group's collection.)

EMPHASIZING THAT costuming expenses have a potential to skyrocket (a cast of 30, for instance, can mean more than 100 costume changes), Kremser said the bulk of GCCT costumes always comes from the bank.

According to Spotlight Players President Debra Polich-Swain, something from its collection is used for every show the group does.

"It's definitely economical, and more than pays for itself, because there's not a lot of upkeep involved — just storage and cleaning," she said.

Costumes from the Spotlight Players bank are usually used as is, she said, with very little restyling, adding that older costumes, which may look "tired" up close, often lose their wilted appearance onstage.

The players (now in its 26th season) builds relatively few new costumes, because of its limited budget and a shortage of seamstresses, according to Polich-Swain. One recent exception was "Godspell," produced by the group in 1982, for which Polich-Swain designed and made many of the costumes herself.

"We have about 500-600 pieces in our collection," she said. "We keep what we sew, and costumes are donated to us now and then. Two years ago, we were especially fortunate when a Birmingham second-hand store went out of business and gave us what they had. We had a garage sale, sold a lot of what they'd given us and kept the rest for the collection."

Tradition of Christmas music continues

Marius Fossenkemper, will once again present a concert of traditional Christmas music at 3 p.m. Sunday in Old Christ Church, 960 E. Jefferson, Detroit.

Fossenkemper, former principal clarinet with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the string orchestra and play a clarinet solo.

Other soloists include Ginka Ortega, flute; KellyYousoufian, harp; Daniel Jencha and Martin Burwell, harpsichord; Susan Nye, cello; Annette Marie Henrion, soprano; and Glenn Schneemann, baritone.

The 24-voice, Ad Hoc Chamber Singers, conducted by Thomas Cirtin, will perform Christmas motets by Johann Sebastian Bach and Johann Christoph Bach.

The concert, co-sponsored by the Music Trust Fund of The American Federation of Musicians, Local No. 5 and Christ Church Detroit, is open to the public free of charge.

auditions

The Huntington Woods Players will hold auditions for its March production of "The Desk Set," a 1950s romantic comedy by William Marchant, at 7 p.m. Wedneday-Thursday, Dec. 19-20, at the Huntington Woods Recreation Center, 26325 Scotia, south of 11 Mile Road.

Casting will be for seven men and seven women. Technical personnel also will be signed up. Reheasals begin in January.

Cancer is often curable.
The fear of cancer is often fatal.
If you're afraid of cancer... you're not alone. But some people are so afraid that they won't go to the doctor when they suspect something's wrong.
They're afraid the doctor might "find something." This kind of fear can prevent them from discovering cancer in the early stages when it is most often curable.
These people run the risk of letting cancer scare them to death.

"Pennies from Heaven" (1981), 8 p.m. today on Ch. 50. Originally 107 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes. (Also at 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 22, on Ch. 50.)

You've seen "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" with Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra, and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" with Burt Reynolds and Dolly Parton. And you noticed that Frank knew all the steps but he couldn't duplicate Gene's dazzling footwork, and you realized that Burt learned all the words but he couldn't warble with Dolly. So it is with Steve Martin, who's engaging in "Pennies from Heaven" and as out of place as a Nativity scene on government land. Why has Hollywood forever and a day miscast "personalities" in song-and-dance films?

Be that as it may, "Pennies from Heaven" deserves some credit. It's a daring, must-see picture that makes greater use of cinematic hocus-pocus than any film in a long, long time. Credit cinematographer Gordon Willis and designer Ken Adam for that. Too often we overlook film designers, who, generally speaking, are more responsible than anyone for the "look" of a film. Adam's credits include "Dr. Strangelove," several James Bond films, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Sleuth" and "Barry Lyndon." Picture those films in your mind, and you realize what a contribution Adam has made to motion pictures. Now consider that "Pennies from Heaven" is his best work. Overall, the film is badly flawed, but very much worth seeing. Christopher Walken adds an exceptional performance, and Bernadette Peters and Jessica Harper co-star.

"The Petrified Forest" (1936), 1 Saturday night on Ch. 50. Originally 83 minutes. TV time slot: 90 minutes.

"Petrified Forest" isn't a great film. It's stagey and often banal. But where else are you going to see Leslie Howard at his disaffected best, Humphrey Bogart at his gruffest, and a vulnerable, 27-year-old Bette Davis at her purist? The limitations of Robert Sherwood's play may be overlooked in light of brilliant, vintage performances.

Rating: $3.05.

"Private Benjamin" (1980), 9 p.m. Wednesday on Ch. 2. Originally 100 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

It's a pity "Private Benjamin" doesn't quite have the courage of its convictions. Producer star Goldie Hawn seems to set out to make a film about the coming of age of a spoiled, rich American princess. She accomplishes that in witty and precise fashion over the first 60 minutes. The film's last 40 minutes, however, leap all over the map, as the once-believable, sympathetic heroine begins to resemble Laverne and/or Shirley. Bill Murray in "Stripes" one year late would take the same premise and see it through to a more savory conclusion. Eileen Brennan, Mary Kay Place, Armand Assante, Harry Dean Stanton and Robert Webber co-star.

Rating: $2.85

Show spotlights Gershwins

"Fascinating Rhythm: the Gershwins in Song" continues through New Year's Eve, Monday, Dec. 31, at the True Grist professional dinner theater in Homer.

Theater performances are Wednesdays-Sundays year-round. For further information, call 517-568-4151 or Michigan tollfree 800-828-6161.

George and Ira Gershwin both began musical carers at an early age, but wrote their first songs together in 1924 with the production of "Lady Be Good." They continued their collaboration with a dozen major stage scores, culminting in their last joint effort, the American folk opera, "Porgy and Bess.

The True Grist's New Year's Eve gala will include a full buffet featuring roast round of beef and seafood, a performance of "Fascinating Rhythm," party favors, a split of champagne and a dance with a live band after the performance. The price is $50 per couple or $30 for a single admission.

Attic Theatre has new offices

The Attic Theatre has opened a temporary office in the New Center One building, at Second Avenue and W. Grand Boulevard in Detroit. The new location, on the ground floor next to Waldenbooks, serves as a combination sales and administrative office.

Until mid-November the Attic staff was working out of a makeshift office space in a downtown warehouse after a fire July 29 caused extensive damage to the Greektown theater.

Office hours at New Center One are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays-Fridays. Tickets may be purchased there for Attic Theatre productions. The phone number remains the same, 963-7789.

Program has power

By Avigdor Zaromp

review

Following a few weeks of light-weight programming, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra came back with some heavy artillery. The resumption was marked by the return of the Maestro Gunther Herbig, music director.

The latest program consisted of two works — the Cello Concerto in E Minor by Elgar and the Symphony No. 7 by Bruckner. Guest soloist was the renowned cellist, Lynn Harrell.

This program was also marked by quality performance. Both Herbig and Harrell presented a convincing sample of their high musical standards. The only event that interrupted this flow of quality occurred following the second movement of the Elgar concerto, when Herbig was visibly irritated at the endless stream of latecomers during that interval between movements.

The Elgar concerto is one of the most significant works in the cello repertoire, and its Romantic style doesn't betray the fact that it was written in this century (1919).

Harrell presented this composition in all its colorful glory. His bowing in the fast passages of the allegro molto movement was astounding in terms of precision and accuracy, without losing control of tone quality.

His expressive phrases in the two adagio movements couldn't fail to move even the most casual listener. In the final movement, there was a natural balance between its contrasting aspects — the fast, shiney main theme and the slow, restrained passages.

Following the vigorous applause, Harrell obliged by playing the Bach Sarabande from the Suite No. 6 for unaccompanied cello. This is emerging as a welcome tradition. A few weeks earlier cellist David Geringas played another piece from these masterful suites as an encore.

Luxembourg — 40 years after the 'Bulge'

Iris Jones
contributing travel editor

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg will celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge this week.

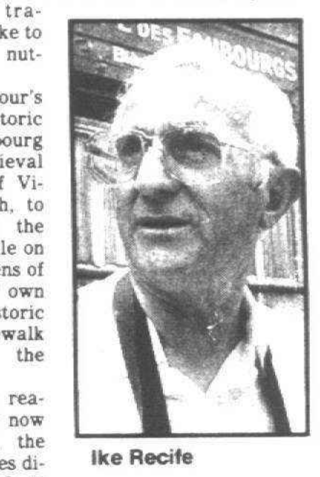
Loving hands will lay fresh flowers at the foot of the American infantryman who stands in bronze above the ancient plaza at Clervaux and around Eisenhower Square in Wiltz, where they raise the American flag in gratitude 365 days of the year.

In the American Military Cemetery at Hamm, Albert Wagner has been clipping the grass all week around the white marble crosses, getting within a few centimeters of George Patton's grave and trimming around the war memorial.

Wagner has been clipping the grass around the graves for 15 years, so that the setting will always be "exactement" for Sunday, but he gave it special care this week because a representative of the Grand Duke Jean will be present to commemorate the 40th anniversary.

Luxembourg is a tiny but important country, once one of the most powerful forces in Europe, and only slightly bigger than the tri-county area of metropolitan Detroit. Its 30 by 50 miles of mountains and river valleys are bordered by Germany, France and Belgium in the heart of western Europe.

THIS CENTRAL location makes it an ideal base for anyone who wants to do the grand tour of Europe without sitting on a tour bus. It is also a good destination for travelers who would like to see Europe "in a nutshell."



Ike Recife

It is only an hour's drive from the historic walls of Luxembourg City to the medieval mountain castle of Vianden in the north, to the vineyards of the Luxembourg Moselle on the west, or to dozens of villages with their own town squares, historic churches and sidewalk cafes throughout the country.

Prices are very reasonable, especially now that Iceland Air, the only airline that flies directly from the U.S. to Luxembourg, flies weekly non-stop flights from Detroit to Luxembourg City, with free or low-cost bus and rail connections to several other European countries.

Car rentals are less expensive in Luxembourg than in most of Europe so many people fly into the Grand Duchy, tour the country by car, visit several neighboring countries and return their car to the airport in Luxembourg.

All of those are perfectly sensible reasons for visiting the Grand Duchy, but there are other more sentimental reasons represented by the 40th anniversary celebrations being held there this week.

The people in Luxembourg really love and honor Americans. They have built monuments in what seems like every corner of the road to commemorate the servicemen who freed them. A little history shows why this is true, in spite of the fact that the Battle of the Bulge decimated several parts of the country.

LUXEMBOURG didn't have an army when the Germans annexed the country in May, 1940. Not "occupied," but annexed as part of Germany. Most of the country was intact even after the Allied forces liberated it from Nazi occupation in September, 1944.

Luxembourgers thought the war was over, and were preparing for Christmas, when the Germans began a counter-offensive across the Moselle River on the night of Dec. 16, 1945. Within days they had punched a huge bulge in the Allied line that extended across northern Luxembourg into Belgium.

Patton and the Third Army literally rode to the rescue in the forested mountains of the Ardennes, but the north of Luxembourg was severely damaged and tens of thousands died before the Germans were driven out again several weeks later.

I TOURED MANY of the memorials to men of the Third Army when I visited Luxembourg last summer with a group of American journalists and a cheerful Pennsylvania veteran called Ike. "Not to be confused with the other Ike," he said, referring of course to Dwight "Ike" Eisenhower.

Ike Recife went into Omaha Beach a few days after the Normandy landing and was a seasoned staff sargeant when he drove with the 80th Division into Luxembourg during the Battle of the Bulge.

"It was so foggy we thought the Germans couldn't see us, so we drove with our lights on," he laughed.

We teased Ike a lot, and he answered most of our questions with jokes, but most of my memories of that trip have Ike in them. Ike pointing at a photo in the museum at Clervaux, where special memorial services will be held this Sunday.

"That's my gang, the 80th division."

Ike in the graveyard of a tiny church in the village of Oberwampach reading a plaque to an American infantryman called Hassel C. Whitehead, who died trying to save a child during heavy shelling. Or in the church at Eschweiller where U.S. Private George O. Mergenthaler is memorialized in marble and as one of the figures in a stained-glass window.

I REMEMBER Ike at the annual Remembrance Day ceremonies held every summer in Ettelbruk, where Patton Square overlooks John F. Kennedy Ave. Ike was wearing his blue 80th-division cap so I could spot him easily as he moved with his camera from the U.S. Army tank, to the 10-foot statue of Patton to the wall where he could photograph the American Ambassador laying wreaths on the cenotaph.

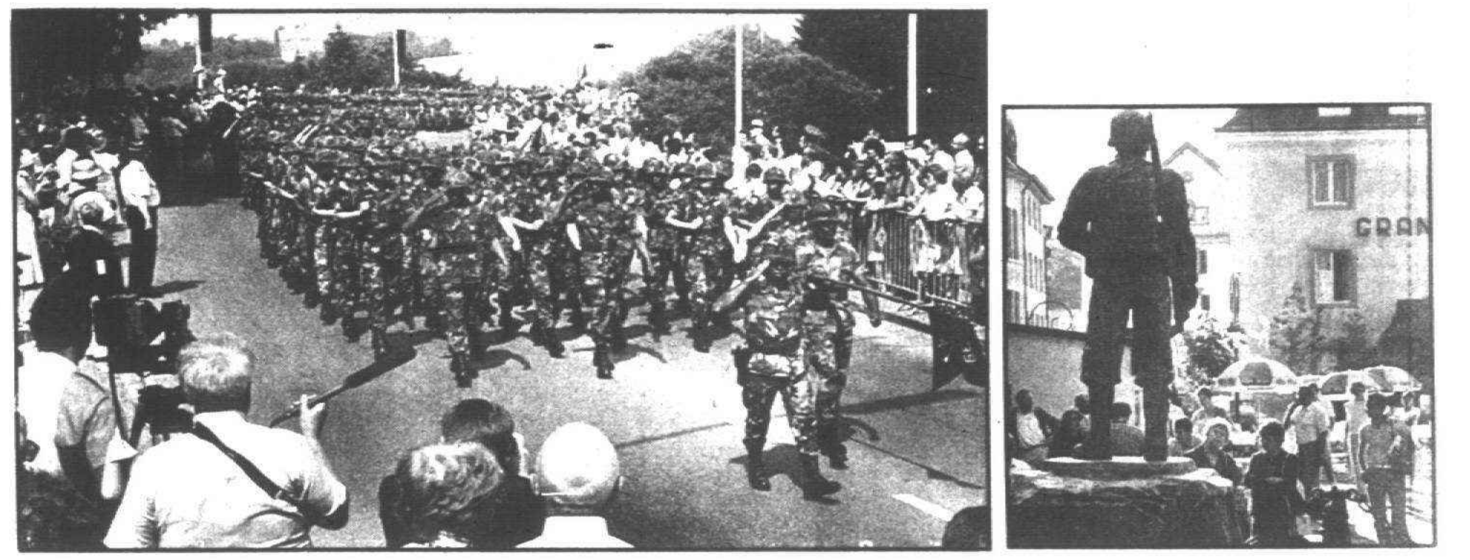
Most of all I remember him in Hamm cemetery the day I met Albert Wagner. Ike was looking for the grave of his friend, Medal of Honor winner Sgt. Day Turner.

The sprinklers made wet white arcs against the sky, greening the circle of grass around the monument and the green blanket that hosts the 5,076 white marble crosses. There were many more dead, but most of the bodies were taken home by families.

TWO WORKMEN were sanding a cross at the back of the cemetery, so that it would always be clean and sparkle in the Luxembourg sun.

Gardener Albert Wagner was hand-clipping the grass around one of the crosses, keeping every centimeter neat. He told me that on Wednesday he runs the "grand machine" between the rows, within 30 centimeters of the crosses. On Thursdays he cuts around General Patton's grave. On Friday, he makes everything neat and green around the chapel.

He was telling me all this in French, of course, repeating over and over again "exactement par Dimanche." What he was trying to say was that he did these things every week on the same day so that every Sunday, 52 weeks a year, the whole cemetery would be perfectly groomed for those who came to see it and for those whose crosses they came to see.



Luxembourg has many memorials to the country's liberation by Allied soldiers during World War. Scenes include: The annual parade in Ettelbruk to commemorate the American War dead. A bronze statue of an American soldier in Clervaux. A worker polishes an American grave stone. A display in the war museum in Clarvaux.

Next week contributing travel editor Iris Jones will discuss what it is like being a tourist in Luxembourg.

Special shows to be at Disneyland

During the Dec. 22 to Jan. 6 holiday season, Disneyland will become a Christmas-time wonderland with seasonal decorations and musical entertainment added to the normal festivities.

Fantasy on Parade will be showcased daily, featuring marching toy soldiers, prancing reindeer, snowmen and snowwomen, and scenes from favorite Disney motion pictures.

During the Christmas season the Magic Kingdom will display its holiday centerpiece — a 60-foot-tall tree in Town Square embellished with 3,000 sparkling lights and 2,800 ornaments.

A turn-of-the-century Christmas will be re-created along Main Street, U.S.A., with strands of garland arched over the street and with lampposts, doors and windows trimmed with wreaths. Strolling Dickens carolers will entertain visitors.

Disneyland's annual New Year's Eve Party will be held on Dec. 31 from 8:30 p.m. to 3 a.m. Helping to ring-out-the-old and ring-in-the-new will be special entertainment, complimentary hats and noisemakers distributed to partygoers and a spectacular fireworks extravaganza presented at the stroke of midnight.

Depreciation period also altered by '84 tax act

By Sid Mittra and Dean Calvert
special writers

Part V

The change in the Tax Reform Act of 1984 that has received the widest publicity is the provision that alters depreciation periods. Income-producing properties, whether or not they are packaged as a tax shelter, must be depreciated or written off over 18 years rather than the 15 year provided by the 1981 Tax Act.

The write-offs produce deductions that reduce the owner's current tax liability. Specifically, available depreciation under the new law is decreased by 1 percent for each of the first four years of ownership.

SINCE THE availability of bigger deductions in the early years of ownership is the key advantage of accelerated depreciation, the new law represents a slight cutback in such benefits.

Incidentally, one exception to this rule is the 15-year recovery for low-income housing.

The new tax law has repealed OID rules, thereby affecting the seller-financing transactions. The OID (Original Issue Discount) rules permitted the seller of a real estate property to lend the money to the borrower, postpone receipt of interest to a later date and defer paying taxes on that interest.

UNDER THE new law, if interest is credited to the lender, it can be taxed even if it is not paid. This means that sellers of property who take back a loco-rate mortgage will be required to report and pay taxes on accrued but unpaid interest income.

The holding period for long-term gains treatment has been cut from one year to six months. This provision should not have a significant effect on real estate, since people generally hold onto property for longer periods anyway.

However, shortening the holding period appears paradoxical, since another provision of the new tax law discourages frequent turnover of property. A property owner often takes depreciation on an accelerated basis. But if the property is sold before the stated "life" expires, the accelerated portion of the depreciation is subject to the recapture rules.

finances and you

Sid Mittra

TAXES MUST be paid on the income sheltered by the deduction.

Popular leasing transactions involving total payments in excess of $250,000 a year also have been affected.

No longer can a lower initial rent schedule be offset by a higher future rent schedule to achieve a "back-loading" of income with a corresponding reduction of taxable income.

The effect on investors: Initial-year deductions are reduced, thereby increasing the effective investment and lowering the rate return.

ANOTHER POPULAR scheme that is practically eliminated by the new law is the "disguised sale" of property. Generally, when a property is sold to a partnership, taxes must be paid on the profit realized on that sale.

However, no taxes will be due if such a sale is "disguised" as a contribution, since the contribution of property to a partnership is generally a tax-free transaction. Under the new rules, the disguised sale of property will be disqualified, and the so-called contributions will be treated as a sale and taxed accordingly.

While the current tax laws are enormously complex, real estate continues to provide excellent investment opportunities. However, real estate investment decision-making is not for the lighthearted.

What's the hardest job in the world?

Minister shares impressions

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

If an elaborate prize were offered to name the most difficult and trying job in the world what would you answer?

Chances are you might name deep sea diving, working with molten metal in the steel mills, driving racing automobiles, washing the windows of a tall skyscraper or digging for coal in the bowels of the earth.

But, in any case, you likely wouldn't name the choice of the Rev. Leonard Koeninger, pastor of St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church on Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth, who firmly believes that preaching sermons is the toughest of all jobs to fill.

Sitting at the luncheon table the other afternoon when the subject of tough jobs came up, he quickly mentioned preparing for a sermon each week.

His choice seemed strange, but then he emphasized his choice by asking. "How would you like to be asked to write a story on the same subject day after day and week after week? You, no doubt, would be bored to death."

WHEN HE allowed that case to surprise his listeners he thought for a minute and said: "I must preach each week on a story that is thousands of years old. It has been written in all languages, and in all sorts of religious books.

"So in preparing for a sermon I must study a story that is ages old and try to find a line or two that will give me the idea I need for Sunday."

To strengthen his choice of jobs, Rev. Koeninger looked around the table and commenting on the advent of the Christmas season asked. "How would you like to be asked to prepare a sermon on a story that has been told countless times and even the children know it."

While his listeners were surprised at his choice of the toughest job they soon agreed that if they faced the same task on the same subject week after week, it would be not only difficult but boring.

ASKED WHAT he did to prepare his sermons each week, Rev. Koeninger smiled and softly answered: "I read a lot. I read the Bible. I study it. Then I walk about thinking, and watching for something that will give me an idea. Once I get the idea, the sermon comes naturally."

While he didn't mention it, many pastors are keeping thier sermons very short. Some speak only five minutes and fill the rest of the time with anthems or special numbers by the choir.

In these cases it was thought that the pastor didn't want long sermons and he could keep in the spirit of the church by having others take part.

By the time the luncheon was ended the diners agreed that preparing for a sermon on a story that has been told for thousands of years could be the most demanding job in the land.

How can train waits be shortened?

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

Although it won't arrive by Christmas, Chessie System Railroad officials are planning a gift for the Plymouth area to relieve the long delays at the rail crossings.

"We have been discussing this for some time," said Jim Ward, assistant superintendent for the C&O here, "and we just haven't come to the solution. But we are working on it."

While Ward wouldn't discuss all of the details he did say the problems must be solved through "power."

"Making the trains shorter, by dropping a few cars, won't help. Besides that, those cars mean money.

"So we have to keep the trains as lengthy as they are now. Therefore, we must find some other solution.

"THAT COULD come with power," added Ward. "And because that seems to be the answer the day may come shortly, when to reduce the delay we will use extra locomotives. Where there is one today, there may be two."

With the longer trains three locomotives now are used and that may be a more common sight in the future. A train of 90 cars, for instance, now is likely to be powered by three locomotives.

By increasing the number of locomotives supplying power, said Ward, the elapsed time would be shortened and the long delays could be history.

One of the more burdensome delays occurs with lengthy trains which block both Main Street and Starkweather. On these odd occasions a train could delay two auto crossings at the same time. Chessie also has expressed concerns about delays at the Sheldon crossing.

"We are studying," Ward emphasized, "and we should have an answer before long and when it comes it will most likely be our use of power."

Parents reject proposal for longer school day velopment, ways to improve schools, early childhood and discipline.

It was not reaction to controversial issues such as early childhood education and teacher certification changes that caused the task force to not recommend the proposals, Bemis said.

"It was because of the specific problems pointed out by people around the state," he said.

A PROPOSAL to change teacher certification originally called for certificates to be issued for 1) kindergaretn through fourth grade, 2) grades 5-8 and 3) grades 9-12. Educators would have been allowed to teach only in their major and minor fields of college study.

The plan would have harmed self-contained classrooms, parochial schools and small districts, as well as on the teaching of electives, Bemis said.

"That's practically impossible throughout the state of Michigan," Bemis said.

The task force suggested the top graduates of every Michigan high school be guaranteed a $500 annual scholarship for their higher education plans. The proposal would help less-well-off families, the committee insisted, "which are encountering difficulty in meeting college expenses, even though the student may have achieved an outstanding academic record."

The program will cost $10 million a year once it is fully operational, in four years.

WHILE THE 12-page report did not recommend state requirements for early child education, it did urge incentives to school districts to encourage an early childhood education program for 4-year-olds.

More than one-third of the state's districts already offer such programs. "The long-term benefits and cost effectiveness . . . are conclusively positive, particularly for children from poor and minority group populations," the task force reported.

While the task force said it would leave the amount of state financial support for the preschool program up to a commission on early childhood education, it suggested that the classes not compete with kindergarten, and that private school programs be supported where public school programs are not available.

Museum trivia

- The first public museum in America was the Museum of Charleston, S.C. It was organized in 1773.
- The first museum built for that purpose and as an art gallery was Peale's Baltimore Museum and Gallery of the Fine Arts, operated by Rembrandt Peale. It opened in 1814 and was sold in 1830 to the city of Baltimore and used as its first city hall.
- Today musuems in the U.S. boast an all-time high attendance of more than 500 million visitors per year. But this popularity has created demands that jeopardize museums' ability to carry on their roles as educators, communicators and guardians of America's cultural and natural treasures, according to a book published by the American Association of Museums.

A Philip Morris study says that although conservation is one of museums' major concerns, budget proportions assigned for conservation range from 0 to 4.5 percent.

- According to the National Institute for the Conservation of Cultural Property, the U.S. is "virtually the only major nation in the world without

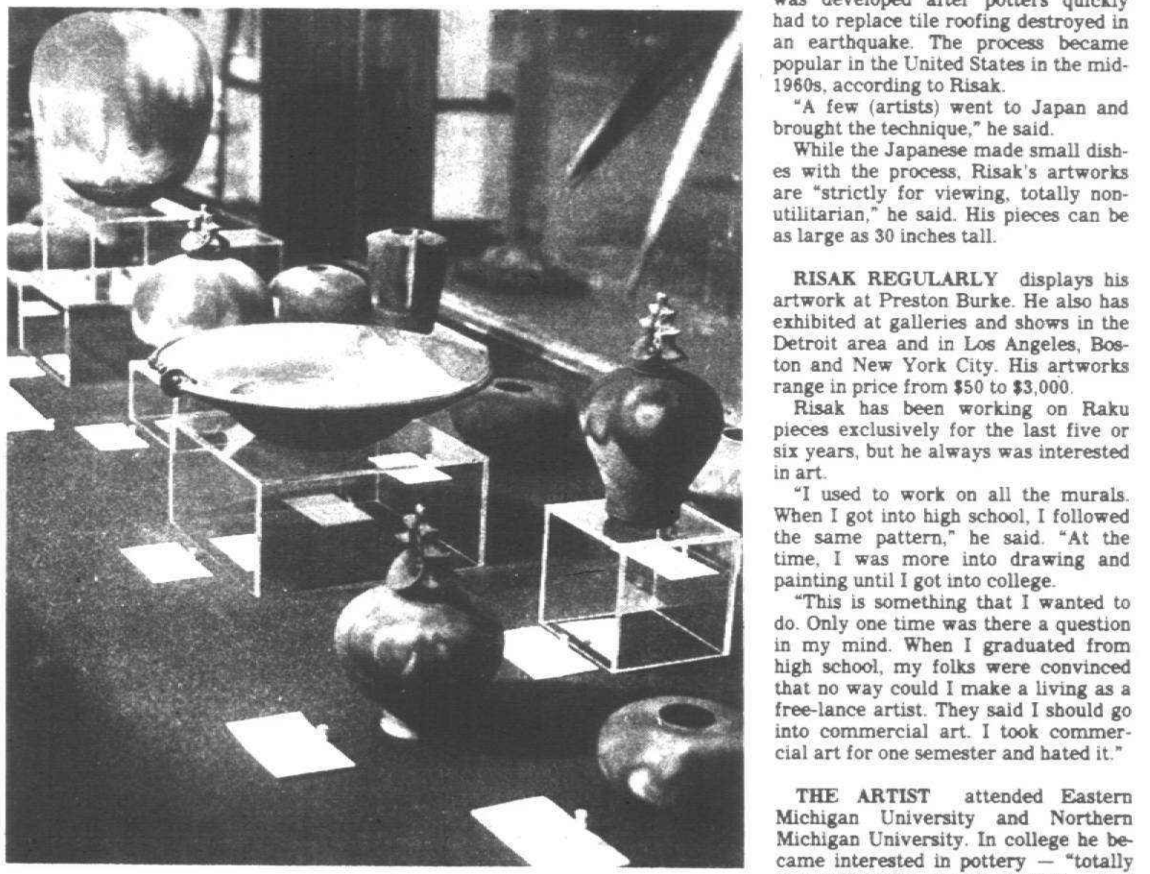
Artist's Raku pottery glows with an inner fire

By Mary Klemic
staff writer

A technique from Japan has brought some artistic success to a former Birmingham resident.

Ed Risak, who attended Groves High School in Birmingham, has displayed his Raku sculpture and pottery around the world. An exhibition of his works is now at Preston Burke Inc., 430 W. Larned, Detroit, through January.

Raku sculpture involves a Japanese technique of quick firing and quick cooling. The results are brightly colored works that seem to glow with heat.



A selection of Ed Risak's pottery is displayed at the Preston Burke Gallery in Detroit.

RISAK'S ART pieces are made of clay. They are heated, one at a time, in a kiln with a temperature of 1,860 degrees Fahrenheit for one hour. Removed with metal tongs, they are placed in a container with straw and sawdust. The red hot pieces ignite the straw and sawdust but soon cool.

The Japanese used the technique for centuries without changing it. It first was developed after potters quickly had to replace tile roofing destroyed in an earthquake. The process became popular in the United States in the mid-1960s, according to Risak.

"A few (artists) went to Japan and brought the technique," he said.

While the Japanese made small dishes with the process, Risak's artworks are "strictly for viewing, totally non-utilitarian," he said. His pieces can be as large as 30 inches tall.

RISAK REGULARLY displays his artwork at Preston Burke. He also has exhibited at galleries and shows in the Detroit area and in Los Angeles, Boston and New York City. His artworks range in price from $50 to $3,000.

Risak has been working on Raku pieces exclusively for the last five or six years, but he always was interested in art.

"I used to work on all the murals. When I got into high school, I followed the same pattern," he said. "At the time, I was more into drawing and painting until I got into college.

"This is something that I wanted to do. Only one time was there a question in my mind. When I graduated from high school, my folks were convinced that no way could I make a living as a free-lance artist. They said I should go into commercial art. I took commercial art for one semester and hated it."

THE ARTIST attended Eastern Michigan University and Northern Michigan University. In college he became interested in pottery — "totally amazed" at the process, he said — and that art form never lost its attraction.

"It's constantly opening new doors for me," Risak said. "I never feel I can learn everything about it. I just got fascinated."

Risak works in a studio two blocks from his house in Marquette, which in turn is situated three blocks from Lake Superior.

"It's very inspirational," Risak said. "It gives you the time to think about your concepts."

The artist makes it clear he is his own boss. He will keep his client informed, through drawings or models, as to how a commissioned piece is progressing.

"I never let my clients use me as their hands," he said. "I work in steps to make sure they're going to like what they're getting."

This is an example of Ed Risak's Raku pottery, a process invented in Japan that give special color to the work.

The pictures of the winning Christmas cards did not make it to the newspaper by deadline last week. So they are printed here with apologies to first-place winner Gail Yuraseck Nymshack, second-place winner Margie Guyot and third-place winner Jim Oxford.

Just a week ago, it seems, Scott was starting school. Choking and gasping, my wife and I watched as he hesitantly walked toward the kindergarten door. Then again it seems like just a couple of days ago little Kevin started school. When I recall his early days of school I think of his stocking cap. As Kevin scurried toward his kindergarten class the tassel on his cap bounced from one side to the other. I was standing deep in snow and got a little "misty" because that was the first day Kevin didn't need my wife or I to walk him all the way to the door. I felt proud . . . but a little left out. Still staring at the corner of the building he just rounded, I thought to myself "how quick are these little guys growing up."

Then to my surprise I saw a little mitten, than a tassel and then a round face peek around the corner. There was at that moment, with words unspoken, an "I love you, Daddy" and an "I love you, too" message exchanged between us. A moment ago I watched as Adam ran up to greet Mrs. Routenburg, his kindergarten teacher. How could it be that "the week" and "the couple of days" encompass nine years. "The moment," however with Adam was just today. I hold onto the moments with Adam, fully aware that some day they too will be a distant recollection. Thank goodness, the moments never really end.

AS EACH of us reach a new stage, level or age, our lives will always be rich with moments worth recalling. Now every moment that we recall is not the most pleasant. With three boys, there is rarely a boring night around our house. My favorite saying when I have a few days off is "I will try to find boredom and possess it for a while." I never have succeeded. The other night, I rolled out of bed to see what the dog was barking at. My first step into the dark hallway was squarely into a lego block. With the dog panting in my face I sat mumbling on the stairway prying the small plastic cube out of my heel. Somebody used my expensive watercolor brush on their plastic model and which one of you guys is wearing my good blue socks. The list goes on and on.

Why is there a plunger gun on the dining room table next to the brass vase with flowers. Whose frozen baseball glove is that outside in the snow and when is somebody gonna break down and clean their room? Of course my griping is tempered with the knowledge that one day soon there will be no plunger gun on the dining room table and their rooms will be all too clean. I am sure that some of these so called frustrations will be moments I will some day treasure, when recalled.

So what's all this talk about recollection? Well it's the end of the year. 1985 is fast approaching. I love to look back at last year and plan ahead for next year. Of course art is a big part of my life and it can be in yours. I like to ask myself if my art ability grew this year.

HOW ABOUT yours? Did you try any new media this year? Did you pencil people try pen and ink? You oil folks, did you try water color? If you are versatile and used most the media this year did you ever think of trying silkscreen or sculpture? Don't

Monte Nagler

Photographs don't always need a central subject. Because we encounter so many patterns in our everyday lives, they become an important part of our photography. Pattern can make order out of chaos and lend harmony to seemingly meaningless design.

There is a world of pattern, and you, as a photographer, have the opportunity to draw attention to the frequently unnoticed wealth of detail around you.

The best way to begin to see pattern is to make a simple device to help you to "see." Cut a rectangle out of a piece of cardboard in the approximate proportions of your negative size. For 35mm users, a 2-by-3 opening works fine.

USE YOUR cardboard "window" as a viewing mark to isolate patterns from distracting surroundings. Its function in helping you to compose your shots will surprise you. You'll find yourself zeroing in on subjects you never knew were there.

Around the house, look closely for patterns in brickwork or shadows on steps. A row of books or designs in floor tiles will offer picture possibilities. Details in your car will make interesting photos, too. Even a trip to the supermarket will give you an abundance of patterns to shoot.

Next time you're there, notice the arrangements of fruits and vegetables in the bins or cans and bottles on the shelf.

Don't overlook the multitude of patterns in nature. Look closely at a scattering of leaves, bark on a tree or patterns in sand. Move in close on an individual leaf to capture the intimate and delicate patterns of nature.

Flat, two-dimensional subjects should have evenly distributed frontal lighting while patterns with a three-dimensional quality will be enhanced by side lighting.

Remember, the aim of creative photography is to make a visual interpretation of an experience, not just to record an image.

Try to convey in your photographs something that excites and interests you, something you wish to share. With pattern shots, you can do just this.

Art collectors organize

Members of the University of Michigan-Dearborn faculty and staff, along with community art collectors, have organized the Fine Art Associates, a group dedicated to promoting and collecting art at the campus.

The organizing committee is comprised of Cynthia Vincent of Dearborn Heights (chairman), Marion Saxton of Dearborn Heights, Pat Dauost of Dearborn and Jane Phellrath of Dearborn.

Sitting on the committee from U of M-D are Eugene Arden, vice chancellor of academic affairs; Electra Stamelos, adjunct lecturer of art; Joseph Marks, art curator; Greg Palka, administrative associate of sponsored research and development; and Chris Dahl, associate professor of English.

The Art Associates held its first activity in October, the Dearborns Collect, an exhibition of famous artworks owned by Dearborn and Dearborn Heights residents. The group plans to hold other exhibitions in the coming year and to develop further the U of M-D art collection, emphasizing Michigan artists, major works of sculpture and contemporary glass.

To help finance its program of lecturers, art purchases and exhibits, the Art Associates is soliciting charter members. The cost of a one-year membership is $25, individual; $35, family; $100, patron; and $5, student.

Plan for the new year

forget there is linoleum block and a host of printing techniques. Speaking of printing have you ever thought of calligraphy? I have 300 art students and about 299 could use a little calligraphy . . . come to think of it, me too. Not only is it important to try new media but it is just as important to try new subjects. Come on you flower people did you try animals this year. You wildlife artists, did you know that there is more to still life than you think. Now to the few brave ones that tried portraits and failed, don't give up just look closer. Isn't it exciting!

It would take more than a life time to rightly investigate all the possible media and subjects. So why do the same art year after year? You know that where there is moving water, life is abundant. But when the movement stops, then stagnation is evident. So whether it's a pen or pencil, brush or spatula, knife or gouge, pick it up and get movin!

Well I'm not finished yet, because there is still a group of you that I haven't mentioned. That group is the non-artist. I know there are many of you because you've stopped in the store just to tell me you read my article but you are not an artist. That interest may be the spark that never got ignited. Let 1985 be the year you try art. If that sounds impossible then at least try some form of craft. Many of my students found that they were very good at crafts and later felt the urge to give art a try.

So whether you grow from non-art to craft, craft to art, media to media or subject to subject, it is important that you move and grow. Imagine a year from today; maybe you will have enrolled in an art class, sold a painting, won a prize or perhaps you'll know the simple pleasure of just doing a pencil sketch that turns out to look like whatever you were drawing. Perhaps this will be the "moment" that you will one day recall as the day you decided to try art or determine in your heart to improve your art.

Group presents Cummings poetry

A group of Flint area artists will present "Christmas With Cummings," a dramatization of various works by the late e.e. cummings, beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The performance will include a play, a poetry reading and a fairy tale set to dance, and will take place at Buckham Fine Arts Project, 134¼ W. Second in Flint. Call 762-5735 for information.

Cummings is known for his grammatical and syntactical experiments in poetry. Poetry is his most popularized art form, but he also wrote plays, novels and fairy tales, and he painted and drew as much as he wrote.

His play, "Santa Claus: A Morality," will be performed by the University of Michigan-Flint Theater, under the direction of Chris Coddington. A member of Buckham Fine Arts Project will give the poetry reading. Cummings' fairy tale, "The Old Man Who Said Why," will be seen as a ballet, with music by local composer John Johnson.

Cummings was born in Cambridge, Mass. in 1894. His father taught at Harvard, and the writer graduated from Harvard in 1916 with a master's degree.

Guess Who's Living Next Door

Should an elephant come calling
Invite him in for tea
Be very very careful though
He'll love your townhouse so
He may not want to leave
He'll wander through the living room
He'll lumber down the hall
In the basement he'll do circus tricks with no restraint at all
So if he should come calling Offer him some peanuts & firmly send him on his way
For once he's seen your spacious townhouse home he's bound to want to stay
