Clerk's overruns spark a budget inquiry

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Overruns on line items in the Canton Township clerk's budget have sparked a request from the township board that administrators report on expenditures for the first six months of 1985.

At Tuesday's board meeting Trustee Loren Bennett asked Clerk Linda Chuhran, Supervisor James Poole and Treasurer Gerald Brown to give a "mini state of the township report" on their departments' budgets at the July 23 meeting. Poole also is to review budgets for all other departments at that time.

"This is a mid-year assessment to see if everything is in order, and to see if any adjustments should be made before it's too late at the end of the year when we usually do it," Bennett said. "I think a mid-year evaluation and assessment should be made as a yearly practice.

"Certainly I believe there are topics that need discussion in the clerk's budget, and that led me to think we need a yearly mid-year assessment for all the budgets," Bennett said. "Let's publicly look at the budget before the year is over at a time where we can make a change."

WEDNESDAY MORNING Chuhran said: "I don't feel there is anything here to justify. I have a job to do, and I'm going to do it. As far as I'm concerned the former clerk (John Flodin) didn't."

However township records show that Flodin stayed within his budget during each of the 28 years he served as clerk.

From Jan. 1 through June 30, the clerk's office had already exceeded the entire year's budget on three line items. The department spent $1,095.79 for conferences and seminars, which is 547.9 percent above the $200 budgeted for the year; $1,119.75 was spent on office supplies, which is 186.6 percent of the budgeted $600; and $10,403 was spent on membership dues — 130 percent of the $8,000 budgeted.

The membership dues allocation was boosted largely because the board recently voted to join the Michigan Municipal League at about a $5,000 cost. It was billed to the membership fees line item in the clerk's budget.

Also, the $200 budgeted for conferences and seminars in the clerks office is a relatively low figure. The supervisor's office has $1,000 budgeted for conferences and seminars, while $500 is allocated for the personnel department and $500 for the finance department.

Commenting on expenses for office supplies, Chuhran said: "When my people don't even have paper punches, that

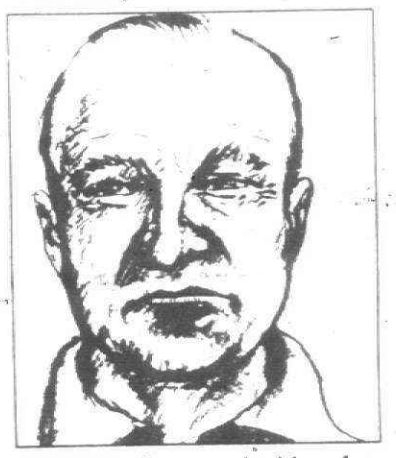
Police search for abductor

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Police continue to search for a man who abducted a 4-year-old Plymouth girl from Canton's Meijer Thrifty Acres Sunday.



Canton police are looking for the man pictured in this composite, sketched by the Michigan State Police in Jackson.

Leila Warner was told by her mother, Sonia, to wait for her in the aisle near the Barbie doll clothes for "just a minute," a Canton police report said. When the 24-year-old mother returned, Leila, who was wearing a white dress and her hair braided at the time, was gone.

A massive police search through the store and surrounding area began. Leila was found about three hours later at 8:15 p.m. wandering on the side of a road in a community near Jackson.

A Meijer bagger told the reporting Canton officer, Karen Paulun, she saw a girl matching the description "following an Indian or Arabic male" who looked to be about 40, with dark hair, "dark complexion" and a big stomach wearing a brown plaid shirt and brown pants. The bagger said she saw this man and little girl enter a two-tone 1977-78 Mercury Marquis.

The man also has been described as being 5 feet 8 inches, weighing between 190-200 pounds, clean shaven but with a 5 o'clock shadow, a neat dresser and about 50 years old.

The car also has been described as being a burgundy, almost brown 1977-1981 large Ford or Mercury, possibly an LTD or Marquis.

PAULUN RELAYED the bagger's description to the Canton police department where Detective William Keppen entered it into the LEIN (Law Enforcement Information Network) computer, which is a data network system for police departments. In the meantime a crew of about 15 Canton officers continued to comb the areas around Meijer in search of Leila.

Canton police Lt. Alex Wilson said police have witnesses who say they saw a man and child with the same descriptions.

"We have a couple of leads that we are checking out," he said.

Paulun contacted the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, as well as the Detroit and Northville police departments to locate a helicopter for the search. None of the departments were able to provide a helicopter.

About three hours after Leila was reported missing, a Jackson couple, Randy and Jane Hixson, found her on Race Road north of I-94 in Leoni Township. They notified state police.

Leila, who is 2 feet 6 inches tall with blue eyes and light brown hair, told police the man took her into the woods near Race Road and I-94, laid out a blanket and had her sit on it. Then she said he left the area.

"We don't have anything to lead us to believe that the child was assaulted," Wilson said. "But we're going on the assumption that she may have been."

Leila was taken to Oakwood Hospital Canton Center to be examined. Results were sent to the state police crime lab.

Canton police are requesting anyone with information to contact the department at 397-3000.

Clues sought in fatal accident

By Diane Gale

A number of questions remain unanswered in the hit-and-run killing of a 30-year-old woman in Canton Township Saturday.

Charlene Norris, 30, of Ypsilanti Township was struck from behind as she was walking along the north side of westbound Michigan Avenue about 3 a.m. Her car was parked at Entertainment World, a night spot in Ypsilanti Township, about four miles away from where she was hit. The car was in running order Saturday, according to police.

Funeral services for Norris were held Wednesday at Wagner-Stark Memorial Chapel Inc. in Ypsilanti. Norris is survived by her 9-year-old son, Terry Michael; her parents, Wessie Branham of Ypsilanti and Norma Fawcett of Plymouth; brothers, Kenneth of Saline and Dale Kevin of Plymouth; and several aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews.

POLICE SAY they have little to go on. They have collected "some evidence (including paint chips) from the scene, on what we believe may have come from the vehicle that struck her," said Canton police Detective William Keppen.

"We had a couple of calls from anonymous citizens . . . . (We received) one report that said a woman was screaming and another who said that there was a woman lying on the side of the road," Keppen said.

However, police say they are without witnesses. Norris was without vital signs when Canton firefighters re-

Balloon festival in Canton goes off with flying colors

By Lisa Simon

Based on reactions from community leaders a correct decision was made to hold the Mayflower Hot Air Balloon Festival at the high school site.

"I've been told by many people, it's the biggest and the best balloon festival they've ever had," James Poole, Canton Township supervisor, said. "From my perspective, it was a helluva success."

More than 60 balloons and some 30,000-50,000 onlookers attended the three-day Hot Air Balloon Festival in spite of disappointing weather Friday night and part of Saturday.

Earlier there had been some concern expressed about moving the location from Plymouth Township Park to the Centenial Educational Park (CEP).

"I don't believe the CEP site was far enough away to have a negative impact on the amount of people coming into the downtown area," Henry Graper, Plymouth City Manager said.

Graper said however that it was hard to determine whether moving the site from Plymouth Township Park to the CEP hurt the business volume downtown.

CARL BERRY, Plymouth Township Police Chief, said the township didn't check on crowds or business volume, but noted that the fast food establishments did an exceptional business.

"The CEP site was excellent," said Scott Lorenz, general manager of the Mayflower Hotel, the festival's co-sponsor. "It was the best spot we've used, and we have a lot of room to grow."

Lorenz commended Canton Township for getting the festival going after it had fallen through with Plymouth Township.

Community Service Officers (CSO), Plymouth Area Citizens Team (PACT), the Civil Air Patrol, Canton Soccer Club, band boosters, athletic boosters and others provided hundreds of volunteers. Lorenz said their help was necessary and greatly appreciated.

"There's always room for improvement, and there's always going to be some fuss but, all things considered, it

Police and fire union contracts expire

Negotiations called 'friendlier'

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Union contracts for Canton police officers, concerned about salaries and benefits, and firefighters, targeting staffing and promotional policies, expired June 30. Negotiations are ongoing.

Talks on three-year contracts for the Police Officers Association of Canton (POAC), representing about 30 persons, and the Firefighters Local 2289, representing about 27 persons, will continue indefinitely. Initial proposals have been submitted by the unions and township, and it "usually takes several months" to settle a contract, said Dan Durack, Canton personnel director.

"We've met with the firefighters two or three times . . . and they're moving along," Durack said. "The POAC have met once, and they've given us their initial proposal, so they've just basically begun."

SINCE NEGOTIATORS were unable to settle the last POAC contract, an arbitrator, provided via Public Act 312, was called in. The firefigthers' union has never used an arbitrator to settle contracts, said Canton firefighter Jim Davison, union president.

Negotiations have been called "friendlier" than in the past.

"I think this will be a contract that will get settled without it going to arbitration," said Canton officer Ernie Sayre, POAC president. "It seems like things are a lot friendlier."

Davison said: "I have good feelings toward it (this year's negotiations)."

Durack also displayed a positive attitude.

"We're meeting on a regular basis, and we continue to make progress," Durack said. "As long as we continue to (progress) I'm optimistic."

Durack, Davison and Sayre declined to detail key negotiating issues. However, Sayre mentioned salary increases and benefits as major points. He implied a request has been made for salary increases "comparable to what other township employees recently received, which is about 6 percent."

DAVISON NOTED the township's promotional system and minimal staffing are top issues from the firefighters' standpoint. He said these topics continue to be focal points and have been stressed during the last couple of contract negotiations.

"There have been different things that have been mentioned that could be hot spots, but they haven't been discussed yet," Davison said. "Right now we've had three meetings and in negotiations you always start out slow, so really we're in the beginning stages, so to speak."

Until the contracts are settled, the agreements that were to expire June 30 remain in effect, Durack said.

New students sign up now

New residents to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are being urged to register for school as soon as possible.

This registration will help establish class enrollments, speed up pupil accounting and avoid lines for new students waiting to be registered the first day of school.

Elementary and middle school students can register directly at the building where they will be attending classes. Usually someone will be in buildings to register students on any weekday. A registration appointment may be made by calling the school building.

New students in grades 10-12 are assigned to Plymouth Canton or Plymouth Salem High School by a random drawing at the Board of Education office, 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth.

For an appointment for high school assignment, parents can call Ginnie Murdoch, coordinator of pupil accounting, at 451-6421.

After assignment, high school students must contact the high school counseling department at Canton High at 451-6322 or Salem High at 451-6219 for an appointment to register and schedule courses.

New residents who are unsure about which school their children will attend may call Mrs. Murdoch at 451-6421.

Partial Hospitalization ...

An Idea Whose Time Has Come

A NEW KIND OF MENTAL HEALTH TREATMENT

There is a new program for persons with mental or emotional difficulties who do not need 24-hour hospitalization but who do need more intensive and varied care than outpatient therapy can provide. The Mercywood Partial Hospitalization Program of Catherine McAuley Health Center allows patients to live at home while participating in structured, day-long sessions.

A VARIED AND EFFECTIVE PROGRAM

Staff includes psychiatrists, social workers, nurses and other therapists. The emphasis is on group and individual therapy, creative arts therapy, physical health and mental health education. Physical fitness, leisure activities and effective coping skills for daily home and work life are also stressed.

REAL LIFE ORIENTATION

The goals of partial hospitalization are to promote growth through real life situations and to provide family and community support for individuals. The treatment program emphasizes activities that improve physical and emotional health and develops the skills needed in handling the stresses of everyday life.

The Mercywood Partial Hospitalization Program is open 5 days a week. Many insurance plans will cover part or all of program costs.

The unusual design has short wings (canard) in the front, which makes it almost impossible for the plane to stall. If a pilot tries to climb too fast the front wings stall first, the nose drops and the plane regains air speed. The plane was built and is owned by Roger LaCasse of Wixom.

Some pilots won't quit flying

By Lisa Simon
staff writer

THE MAYFLOWER Hotel Hot Air Balloon Festival provided an occasion for experienced pilots to compete for trips to faraway places on airplanes instead of up and down balloon jaunts, the weekend's main attraction.

Several competitions were held while thousands of enthusiastic spectators cheered and waved.

A Hare and Hound race sponsored by American Airlines was rescheduled from Friday evening to Saturday morning due to bad weather. Scott Lorenz, co-sponsor and general manager of the Mayflower Hotel, piloted the lead balloon or hare. After Lorenz's head start, competing pilots or hounds took off to find him and drop their markers closest to where he had landed.

Lorenz landed in the Canton industrial park area behind the Skatin' Station roller rink.

PONTIAC MOTORS pilot Phillip Glebe of Brighton won the event by dropping a marker 1 foot 9 inches from where Lorenz landed.

Glebe and his sponsors each won two airline tickets to fly anywhere American Airlines flies.

Another Hare and Hound event sponsored by Eastern Airlines was held Sunday morning. First of America pilot Ron Centers was the winner.

This time Lorenz landed near Ford Road, three quarters of a mile from Lilley in Canton. Glebe dropped his marker 4 feet 3½ inches from where Lorenz landed. Glebe and his sponsor won two tickets to the Eastern Airline destination of their choice.

As the festival came to a close Sunday evening, two more competitions were held. There was a pick-em-up key contest and a British Airways event with competing pilots given the choice of which one to enter.

Due to strong winds, no one entered the key contest where pilots swoop down to snatch a key attached to a pole. The prize for this event, a new car, went unclaimed.

THE BRITISH Airways contest had competing pilots dropping a marker as close as possible to an X marked on the ground. Ameritech Michigan Bell Yellow Pages pilot Joe Derosa was the winner. Derosa dropped his marker 31 feet 1 inch from the X. He and his sponsor both won two round-trip tickets to England on British Airways.

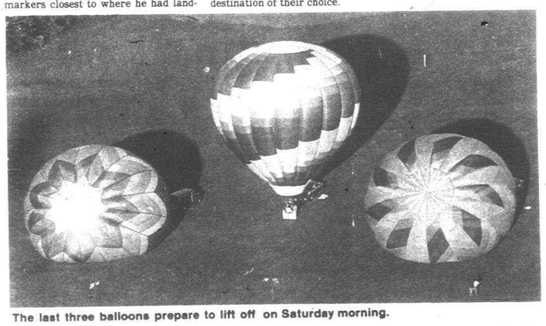
Pilots weren't the only ones to enjoy prizes. The Canton Chamber of Commerce gave away prizes early Monday morning.

Mary Horsley of Inkster won first prize, a trip to the Bahamas for two, donated by the Canton Eagle.

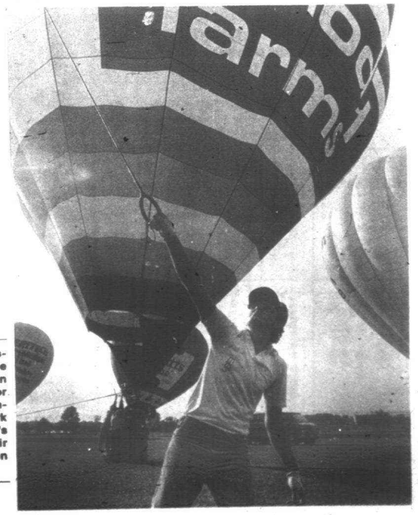
Second prize, a $350 brass and crystal chandelier donated by Master Lighting, went to Herbert Patterson of Canton.

Hannan Neal, also of Canton, won third prize which was a hot air balloon ride for two donated by the Canton Chamber of Commerce.

After a safe landing at Mettetal Airport, pilot Ken Zawisa packs his balloon, Visions Too.



The last three balloons prepare to lift off on Saturday morning.



Gary Cooper of Lansing hangs on to the Oldsmobile balloon while preparing for lift-off at the Centennial Educational Park during the weekend's Mayflower Hot Air Balloon Festival in Canton.

Hot air balloon festival earns lofty praise from officials went real smoothly," Lorenz stressed.

Gordon Boring, co-sponsor and owner the of Wicket Basket Balloon Center in Walled Lake, agreed with Lorenz. "In the past, we couldn't put up all the balloons at one time so we went up in waves. This year all balloons were able to go up together and there was enough ground space for a sponsor tent.

"I DIDN'T find any damage of any consequence at the site," reported Dr. John H. Hoben, superintendent of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. After checking the site the Monday after the festival, Hoben "was very pleased with the work done by Canton Township maintenance crews.

"Overall I'm very pleased with how things went," Hoben said. "The site is in very good shape, and there was absolutely no expense to the school district or to our taxpayers."

Parking operations were handled by CEP band and athletic boosters as a fund-raising effort. Combined, the two booster clubs raised approximately $10,000.

The school district leased buses to Canton Township to provide a shuttle service from Township Hall to the CEP.

This shuttle service was the least successful operation conducted during the festival. Poole said, "Someone was to have picked up the costs of the drivers, mileage and propane."

"At the last minute, no one was handling the busing," Poole said. The township board agreed to pay the cost on an emergency basis. Poole would not say who was supposed to pick up the costs. "It was my understanding someone else would handle it."

ACCORDING to Poole, the township board's decision cost taxpayers $1,200. "I don't think Canton taxpayers should be paying, but it's better than coming up with negative response after the advertising was out and signs were put all over the place.

"I have heard nothing but good, positive response," added Poole. "I didn't get one complaint from anyone."

The balloon festival was not held at the Plymouth Township Park site partly because of a dispute between the township and Mayflower Hotel over who had agreed to pay for the shuttle bus service.

Hoben said this week it was his understanding Canton had agreed to pay up to a maximum of $3,500 for the drivers' salaries and bus mileage.

There will be a meeting of all persons involved in the festival soon and a decision will be made whether the school district will agree to host the festival at CEP next year.

Principal appointed

Richard Bearup, area coordinator at Centennial Educational Park (CEP), was named East Middle School principal by a 7-0 vote at Monday's Plymouth-Canton Board of Education meeting. The motion was made by Trustee David Artley and seconded by Trustee Elaine Kirchgatter.

Chosen from a field of 44 internal and external candidates, Bearup will earn $44,929-$47,772. (The exact salary is yet to be negotiated.)

East, staffed by 43 employees, is attended by 800 students.

No formal board discussion preceded Bearup's appointment.

School Board President Roland Thomas congratulated the new principal, saying, "Mr. Cummings and Mr. Bearup were among the first people I met when I arrived in this area 24 years ago. It's nice to see them move up in the world." Just before naming Bearup, trustees selected Paul Cummings as director of health, physical education and athletics. (See today's sports section for story.)

SURROUNDED BY well-wishers as he left the board office, Bearup said he viewed the promotion as a challenge.

"I'm really looking forward to it. I'm excited," he said. The advancement is less the fulfillment of a longtime goal than a career move at an opportune time.

"I've been considering it more lately than before," said Bearup, who since joining the district 27 years ago has coached varsity basketball and taught business and co-operative training. "I think I've learned a great deal about administration and buildings in the recent years."

In a memo to Norman Kee, assistant superintendent/employee relations, Bearup said, "Although I have sincerely enjoyed my 12-year tenure as an area coordinator, I want to be involved with more instructional responsibilities. I am confident that given the opportunity, I would be able to provide the type of leadership necessary for both staff and students to create an atmosphere conducive to quality education."

As area coordinator at Plymouth Salem High, Bearup was responsible for the disciplining of 450 students, supervised business education and the co-operative training department, shared supervision of guidance and counseling, media and skills for living departments, and other duties.

In the last three years, Bearup has taken "an active role at CEP in promoting and implementing the instructional skills program."

A 1955 graduate of Owosso High School, Bearup earned his bachelor's degree in business education and a master's degree in business administration from Eastern Michigan University. He is a Canton resident.

Firefighters deliver baby

Delivering a healthy baby boy to a couple unable to make it to the hospital in time was all in a day's work for two Canton Township firefighters Sunday.

Firefighters Tom Battistone and Don Oelke were dispatched to Lauri and Barry Baranowski's house on Fredricksburg at 9:45 a.m.

Less than 15 minutes later Lauri delivered. The mother and the newborn child, who appeared to be healthy to the firefighters, were rushed to Ann Arbor's University of Michigan hospital as a precautionary measure.

"It's a good feeling to bring somebody into the world," Battistone said.

Oelke said the experience was exciting, but doesn't think it was anything out of the ordinary.

"It's pretty basic," Oelke said. "We got the call that the mother was about to deliver, and we went over there and helped her deliver it."

Battistone and Oelke are no novices. For Jordan this marks the sixth delivery while Battistone has assisted and the second for Oelke.

"If you've done one, they're pretty easy," Oelke said. "It's hard not to be excited about something like that."

The couple had made it as far as the car when Lauri realized she would deliver before making it to the hospital. They called the fire department not a minute too soon.

Death investigated

sponded to the scene and was bleeding from a large gash on her forehead. Norris, who was 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighed about 145 pounds and had reddish hair. She was wearing a pink sweater and blue jeans.

The Wayne County medical examiner has listed the cause of death as "multiple injuries." She had a broken spine and head trauma, according to Dr. Haresh Mirchandani, medical examiner.

"The injuries were commonly seen on pedestrians struck by vehicles," Mirchandani said.

Employees at Entertainment World declined to comment about the incident saying "the information should come from the family."

Norris was employed in Ypsilanti in Ford Motor Co.'s food service department.

Overruns stir concern

tells me things weren't as they should have been. My people didn't even have the bare essentials."

LINE ITEM overruns were caused because Chuhran didn't submit her own budget, the clerk said. The 1985 budget was submitted last year by Flodin, who died during his term in office.

"John Flodin never went anywhere, and he submitted the budget," said Tim McCurley, township deputy finance director. "He was a clerk for 30 years and he didn't need to go, and she's just coming in."

Chuhran said the only way she can learn about "cost effective" practices and other tasks associated with the office is by meeting with other clerks during seminars and conferences.

Bennett said, "I'm not saying she was wrong to spend these amounts, but it would be prudent for me to find out why. Maybe we mis-budgeted."

It's unusual to have line items overspent by that amount, McCurley said. "But, she wasn't involved with the budget, because it was submitted by John Flodin," McCurley said.

Supervisor James Poole has the authority to make budget amendments — as long as the change is within the total budgeted amount for the department — after consulting with the department head and the finance director.

"I feel what she did was not right, but I don't know where to lay the blame," McCurley said. "It's a lot her fault for not knowing some of these facts."

Chuhran said she submitted a revised budget — changing some of the line items in her budget last month — but she hasn't received a response.

Chuhran has cited a lack of communication between herself and Poole, which she said sparked a lawsuit against Poole. Chuhran is charging Poole with undermining her responsibilities as clerk. Poole has maintained that he has met with Chuhran at least twice a week since she took office.

School board extends Supt. Hoben's contract 1 year

Dr. John M. Hoben, superintendent of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, was given a one-year contract extension effective through the 1986-87 school year at Monday's school board meeting.

Newly appointed Trustee Marilyn Schwinn abstained from voting on the measure which passed 6-0.

Hoben will complete the last half of a two-year contract extension during the coming school year. Before 1984-85, the board had granted the superintendent one-year extensions.

Dr. E.J. McClendon, trustee, headed a three-member evaluation committee that reported to the board Monday.

Rated on a scale of one to five in 15 performance areas by seven board members, Hoben received an overall score of 4.41. Five indicates outstanding; four, satisfactory; three, average; two, needs improvement, and one, unsatisfactory.

The superintendent is recognized as being one of the more able superintendents in the state," said the committee, comprised of McClendon and trustees David Artley and Lester Walker. "If results such as these can be summarized in a single statement, it would have to be that the board is well satisfied with the performance of the superintendent."

HOBEN RECEIVED the highest marks in "fiscal responsibility."

"All members rated this as an outstanding performance area with comments by all that this is the superintendent's greatest strength and greatest asset," the report said.

Hoben also was rated "outstanding" for his diligence in keeping the board apprised of legislation affecting education and legal affairs.

His lowest rating, 3.86, came in "student performance," an area Trustee Dean Swartzwelter commented on.

"I'd like to say I'm well-satisfied with the superintendent, but one area that concerns me and a lot of other people a lot is student performance. It's always disappointing to me, given all the programs we have — and it may be no one person's fault — but that comes through as having the lowest number of points. It seems to be bigger than all of us. We need to be creative, to think of new things we can do and do better, and to restructure."

Here are the superintendents ratings in other areas:

• Community relations — 4.14. "There were many comments indicating that improvement had occurred in this area," reported the committee. "It was said to be good and getting better. It was also identified as an area on which attention needs to continue to be focused to promote further improvement."

• Personnel Affairs — 4.43. "Comments from all raters were positive, highly commending the improvement in the bargaining process and the streamlining of procedures," the committee wrote.

• Physical facilities — 4.14. "Some comments indicated the entire physical plant is a real plus for the district and endorsed the genuine efforts directed toward long-range maintenance planning. Others raised concerns about the need to devote stronger efforts toward building/grounds cleanliness and neatness, as well as a need to insure more uniform maintenance standards between schools," said the committee.

• Curriculum and instruction — 4.43. "The comments were very positive, often stating that this is a strong area but one in which continued emphasis will be needed. Several projects, such as writing and TAG, were mentioned as strengths. Consistency in block grant usage was cited as a need related to instruction," the report said.

• Long-range and short-term planning — 4.0. "Several raters cited improvement, and some said planning for housing improvement was the greatest need," the committee reported.

• Leadership and management — 4.58. Dr. Hoben "is seen as an able leader and a competent manager. His statewide recognition as an educational leader was frequently cited, as was his leadership role in the community. Delegation of authority was seen as a well-handled function, but one comment observed that those receiving the delegation sometimes needed to follow through better," they said.

• Special education — 4.29. "The comments on the program were all commendatory, ranging from 'one of the best' to 'outstanding.'"

• Non-instructional services — 4.58. Comments on transportation, school lunches and health services "showed strong board support."

• Staff relations — 4.0. "All of those who commented said this is an area in which marked improvement has been made compared with past performance."

• Goals and objectives — 4.58. "This is an activity where the superintendent is well-recognized for his organization and systematic approach to goal setting and measuring achievement," the report said.

School Board President Roland Thomas mentioned that it was upon Dr. Hoben's request that the evaluation was conducted in open session.

Barber yearns for bygone days

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

Jim Bowers, the barber who has been plying his trade for 27 years, would like to go back to the days when a shave, hair cut and a massage was the real treatment given customers.

"I don't like the present system where we have to compete with hair stylists, and we never have to give a customer a shave or or massage his face with a towel. And no longer do we provide shoe shines to a customer while he is sitting in the barber chair.

"Things have changed so much and I don't really like it."

Bowers admits that he likes the old days because he can judge the style a customer needs and that he is working with dry hair.

"Your hair will look the same after I cut it than it did when I cut it the day before. That's because I work with dry hair. When it is wet and then dries, somehow it loses its shape and a person doesn't look the same."

Bowers, who talks as well as he cuts hair, likes to tell the story of how he became a barber and why he still holds a license to work in Florida.

"MY WIFE had nine brothers and their father used to cut their hair. Then, as he grew older, he passed the job along to me. That's when I learned to cut hair and I have been cutting it the same way ever since."

He smiles when he tells you about the shoe shine chair in the shop and what happened to it.

"It used to be a favor to the customer when his shoes were shined as he was being shaved. But I finally got a shoe shine chair. It is now up in the Historical Museum. I had no further use for it down here."

As he recalled the chair Bowers said, "We now have a real barber shop in the museum, thanks to the late Clarence Moore's idea to install an entire shop in the museum.

"I went with him to Detroit and we found a chair and it was brought to Plymouth. It is an official chair and we even had the cut hair on the floor, just as it was in the old days."

Bowers likes to take a vacation in Florida, just as other folks, but he likes to barber down there, too.

"I KEEP my Florida license and there still are a few men I have been serving for quite a while. That's why I like the old methods. I can now please the elderly just as I pleased them years ago."

Bowers still gets a chance to shave and cut hair just as he did when he started his trade.

"When traveling men come to Plymouth and forget their electric razor they come down here before going to meetings. And what a treat it is to cater to them."

Bowers has another reason for longing to go back to the shave and hair cut days.

"In these days of long hair you oftimes can't tell a boy from a girl when you see them walking down the street. You think you see a nice girl and when you get up close you find you are looking at a blond boy with long hair. It never was that way when I started in the business."

He closed his view by saying that if any of the men customers had a facial massage and a hot towel with a shave today, they'd like the soothing feeling and would be back again.

And that's one of the reasons Bowers would like to go back to the old days when you didn't have to compete with stylists.

Rudd chairs Bike-a-Thon

Frances Rudd of Plymouth will be the chairperson for the 1985 St. Jude Children's Research Hospital Bike-a-Thon in Plymouth.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, founded by entertainer Danny Thomas, opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases which afflict children.

This year's Bike-a-Thon program is dedicated to Jamie, a youngster from Ohio who was diagnosed with leukemia in May 1983 and began treatment at St. Jude's. Today her cancer is in remission and she is doing quite well.

The Bike-a-Thon will be held this fall.

Civil rights may weaken

To the editor:

The League of Women Voters urges your readers to contact their representative and senators now and tell them to vote for the Civil Rights Restoration Act without substantive or weakening amendments.

Soon they will vote on a very vital piece of legislation — the Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985 (H.R. 700 in the House and S. 431 in the Senate). The League of Women Voters views the passage of this bill as a top legislative priority.

Civil rights laws are based on the premise that no federal funds should be used to support discrimination. This is only simple justice and it began with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Simple justice was again the issue when Title IX of the Education Amendments was passed by Congress in 1972 prohibiting discrimination in education based on sex.

This was followed in 1973 by the Rehabilitation Act prohibiting discrimination based on disability and then the Age Discrimination Act of 1975.

The Supreme Court's 1984 Grove City College vs. Bell decision significantly weakened these several key civil rights statutes. In Grove City, the Supreme Court ruled that the scope of Title IX is much narrower — that it covers only those programs or activities specifically earmarked to receive federal funds.

The Supreme Court applied Grove City reasoning in a Sec. 504 case (Rehabilitation Act), and the Reagan Administration has announced its position that the narrow decision applies to Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Age Discrimination Act.

The Civil Rights Restoration Act would counter the Grove City decision by making it clear that the intent of Congress is to prohibit any form of federally subsidized discrimination. The Civil Rights Restoration Act would not expand any of these laws, but as its title says would restore them to their original aim and purpose to assure that no taxpayer's money is used to fund discriminatory activities.

Discrimination financed by taxpayers must be stopped in this country. It is crucial that all congressional members be notified of your support of the Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985 without substantive amendments. The League of Women Voters encourages citizens to act now.

Taxes will pay for resolution of officials' spat

CANTON taxpayers have again been stung with an unexpected jab to the wallet, this time because their township clerk has elected to sue the supervisor.

Legal fees up to $5,000 — to come from tax revenues — recently were authorized for Supervisor James Poole by township trustees. If needed, there's no reason they won't approve more.

In seeking an injunction, Clerk Linda Chuhran (not an attorney) wrote her own complaint, accusing Poole of "exercising authority wrongfully delegated by moving records of the clerk's office to finance and other areas and taking authority over these records; refusing to adhere to policy set for agenda, and by discharging employees deemed necessary to do the clerk's job by the plaintiff."

Chuhran, formerly a General Motors clerical employee, does not specify which documents were taken. She is not seeking any monetary damages.

POOLE SAYS the charges are untrue, and furthermore that he is being slandered. He claims he's never removed any documents from Chuhran's office. He says that complete background on every agenda item is impossible to include in board meeting packets, and that he did approve for temporary work the clerk Chuhran wanted to hire.

With good reason, trustees and some residents are upset that Chuhran deemed it necessary to file a lawsuit against a fellow official without ever bringing the issue before the township board. Board members are elected to oversee the smooth, cost-effective operation of the township.

Bypassing them is an irresponsible act that flies in the face of what our system is designed to accomplish. What perhaps is saddest of all is that Canton has voted into office representatives who are unable to discuss problems and hammer out solutions.

Some time ago, Chuhran did go to the board requesting a study to outline duties of the clerk, treasurer and supervisor. The board wisely instructed Chuhran to list her questions and submit them to Michigan Townships Association for a free legal opinion.

As far as board members know, she never did so.

WHILE THE CLERK legally is responsible for specific tasks, the supervisor as the township's chief executive officer has access — as does any citizen — to all township records. Even if Poole has removed documents, an act he denies, he'd have been within his legal rights in doing so.

Granted, our township clerk is new to the office and lacks experience. No one can expect any new official not to make mistakes. There are conferences and seminars periodically held that would be of help to Chuhran, and so far they haven't escaped her notice. (Our clerk since January has overspent by 547 percent the amount budgeted for career education. Overall, her department is 58 percent over budget.)

Chuhran is fond of voicing her commitment and responsibility to voters, even when it entails spending hundreds of dollars in postage. Ironically, Canton residents are being shortchanged by a person who's had a taste of power and is grabbing for everything else on the table.

What's scary is that it's doubtful whether her actions or voting record ever will reflect motivations befitting a competent governmental official.

Canton's 58,000 residents would do well to question and monitor the actions of the clerk they elected to a four-year term. And maybe it's time they reconsidered appointing skilled managers to head township government.

Lansing needs profit motive

Tim Richard

"DICK AGINIAN, president of our parent company, Suburban Communications Corp., opens each of our Observer & Eccentric management meetings with the same words: "Newspapers are a business. We must operate at a profit."

Besides doing a lot of newswriting and editorial pontificating, I am a manager in a company trying to turn a profit. That idea colors my attitude each time I think about the part-time legislature (PTL) issue.

Rep. Tom Power of Traverse City started it. Oakland Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson has picked it up. The issue of — whether Michigan should quit the ranks of six states with full-time legislatures and rejoin the ranks of the 44 with part-time legislatures is picking up steam.

TO ME IT makes little difference. Most of my neighbors and I are managerial-professional types, living on a salary, working for companies trying to be profitable.

Numerically we weren't represented well in 1953 when the legislature met part of the year; we aren't represented well today.

Which economic groups have gained and which have lost ground with the change? A year ago reporter Margaret Neubacher, with a little assist from yours truly, did a probing study of the legislatures of 1953 and 1983.

- Losers are lawyers (from 24 down to 13), real estate agents (9 to 4), auto dealers (4 to 0), insurance agents (9 to 0) and factory workers (5 to 2).
- Winners are educators (10 to 23) and career governmental-political professionals (one to 42).

THE '53 legislature had 110 of its 132 members (83 percent) from the private economy — farmers, lawyers, industry, retail and service businesses. The rest were teachers, union representatives, ministers, housewives and government employees.

The '83 legislature had 58 of 148 members (39 percent) from the private sector. A whopping 61 percent came from education, government-politics, unions, churches and non-profit social agencies. They had to live within budgets, but they didn't have to pay dividends to their stockholders.

If you figure that 70 percent or so of us Michiganians make our livings in the private sector, you can see that we're sadly under-represented in Lansing.

Factory workers, believe it or not, fare as badly as us managerial-professional types. There are plenty of present and former union officials in the legislative halls. But in my experience, union officials represent unions, not factory workers.

TO A GREAT degree, the argument over full- vs. part-time legislatures is a matter of hard, partisan politics more than one of designing a good system.

When the legislature is part-time, the governor can call special sessions on his pet topics. The governor controls the agenda. House Speaker Bill Ryan, a Democrat, figured that out when Republican Bill Milliken was governor.

It was Ryan who was chiefly responsible for making Michigan's legislature full time. With a full-time legislature, Ryan and the Senate majority leader took control of the agenda away from the governor.

In time, if Tom Power's PTL proposal gets on the ballot, I will have to decide whether to vote "yes" or "no."

But on behalf of my neighbors and those of us working for salaries in companies trying to make a profit, I can't get excited about it.

Collars and cuffs were all the rage

the stroller
W.W. Edgar

It was no surprise that most of them recalled the days when men wore spats. They were woolen covers we wore as our shoe tops in the winter months. They kept the cold out and were very stylish.

Along with the spats came a change of shoes. During the warm days of summer, we wore "low shoes," or what were called Oxfords. When the snow came we put them away and brought high lace shoes much as we wear today.

IT WAS MUCH the same with derby hats. You don't see many of them today. But there was a time when they were stylish, especially in different colors. In those days, a brown derby was the peak of style and back in the 20s when Al Smith of New York ran for president, he made the most of his brown derby.

We were getting along well discussing the old styles and some of the other things of yesteryear — such as the first moving picture, the first color movies and the invention of radio — when one member of the group asked: "Do you remember rubber collars and cuffs?"

Nothing was said for a moment or two until some of us got our thoughts together.

They were household pieces that never had to be laundered. When they got a bit dirty, you simply took a cloth, soap and water and washed them. These handy collars came in only one color, but they were most useful.

They could be sent to the laundry or cleaned right at the kitchen sink. They came in three styles. You could get a high collar, a low one or one that had points for full dress. They were as stylish as one would want.

AND WITH them came the white rubber cuffs.

These brought out some styles. One wore cuff links with them that were really what was termed "classy." You got them with fancy cuff links that had all sorts of jewelry. Some of the links had long stems with rich stones.

Others had name studs. Still others had just the plain links. They, too, were washed and cleaned at home. And for birthdays, the popular gift was a set of collars and cuffs.

It was the same at Christmas. A fellow often got enough of them to last an entire year.

You mention these articles of wearing apparel today and folks laugh. And rightly so. But there was a time when the rubber collars and cuffs were quite the thing, as the saying goes.

They came before the present day soft shirt with collar attached. But they bring back many fond memories. The only place you might see them now is on some old photograph of your grandparents and friends of long standing.

But the rubber collars and cuffs were prized items before the turn of the 20th Century.

What role do prisons play?

Bob Wisler

A NEW ALARM has been rung. State prisoners are serving less time than they did in the past, according to a study by the Justice Department.

The study declares that the median time served for all crimes is 16 months, the lowest figure ever. Half of the murderers (first, second and third degree as well as involuntary manslaughter) are walking out of prison in less than six years. Half of the alleged rapists are leaving in less than three years.

The new figures, gleaned from studying the '82 prison figures, have some people in governments and the criminal justice systems alarmed, and there is a new call for more severe and longer sentencing.

In fact, one of the reasons for shorter prison stays appears to be that judges generally are sentencing more people. This follows a general demand by the public to do something about crime. Judges note the mood of the public and take action.

PRISONS EVERYWHERE are overcrowded. They have been crowded beyond capacity in Michigan for years. Finally an effort is being made to build new prisons.

But, in the meantime, the state has had to try to get people out of prison to handle those most recently convicted. The early release programs have put a variety of habitual criminals on the streets, and whenever one of them does something wrong, there is a wave of publicity and more hand-wringing.

One of the big problems here, as well as throughout the country, is that there is no consensus of agreement as to what purposes the prison system should strive to serve. As a consequence, there are differing opinions among lawmakers, administrators and prison officials.

At one time, there was some notion that those who were sentenced to prison could be rehabilitated by the experience. But locking people up in cells and trying to teach them such trades as laundry worker has not proved to be rehabilitating.

PRISON OFFICALS don't even talk about rehabilitation anymore. Prisons are places where unhardened convicts get harder and perhaps learn more about the profession of crime. Yet, the public expects that those released after the "proper" number of months or years will somehow avoid committing other crimes.

The experience is thought to be chastising enough so that those convicted will not want to go back again. Experience shows that this is not the case.

The crime category in which the recidivism rate is the lowest — murder — is the one that people want longer and more severe sentences for. It is paradoxical that there is a demand for more severe sentencing for those who show the most ability to be changed by the experience they undergo.

IF REHABILITATION is not feasible, what purpose does prison serve? Well, it at least takes those who commit crimes out of circulation and keeps them from preying on the public for a certain period of time. In most cases, the sentences aren't long enough to ensure that they will be kept out of the way long enough and there results a sort of time-delayed revolving door effect of keeping dangerous people locked up for certain periods of time while other dangerous people are still roaming around.

The experts say that most criminals who commit the crimes that are so distressing and dangerous to the public — burglary, armed robbery, assault — are in their teens and 20s. Some are still in their 30s. Usually, by the time they get to be in their 40s, they do not want to be involved in crime anymore. Yet, it is impossible, even under the most severe sentencing to keep those most capable of leading a criminal life locked up until they are 40.

Severe sentencing is supposed to deter other would-be criminals. There is little evidence that it does simply because those who generally commit crimes don't think like normal people. They don't think they will get caught and give little thought to possible consequences of their action.

In addition to more prisons, we need a formulation of a prison policy that will make some kind of sense. More and more prisons and longer terms isn't enough.

Dems claim Reagan's checked on Nicaragua

Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes in the days before the Fourth of July recess.

rollcall report

NICARAGUA — By a vote of 312 for and 111 against, the House adopted on amendment requiring a president to obtain congressional approval before sending combat troops into Nicaragua, except when certain emergency conditions are present.

Although Democratic sponsors termed the ban an important check on President Reagan, the president's supporters said they had neutralized the amendment by adding key exceptions during floor debate.

Because of the exceptions, the measure drew support from many of Reagan's allies.

The vote occurred during debate on the fiscal 1986 defense authorization bill (H.R. 1872), which was passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

Supporter Barney Frank, D-Mass., said the amendment deserves support from "those of us who are afraid that the president will abusively for political or ideological reasons" order an invasion of Nicaragua.

Opponent Dan Burton, R-Ind., said Reagan "has the ability and the wisdom to deal with the problems in our hemisphere, and throughout the world, and we should have more trust and confidence in him."

Members voting yes favored the amendment.

Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

HONDURAS — By a vote of 172 for and 217 against, the House rejected an amendment to the 1986 defense bill to require that Congress be notified whenever U.S. troops in Honduras become active near the Nicaraguan border.

Supporter Edward Markey, D-Mass., said he was concerned that American troops in Honduras might "cross a trip wire which would engage us in a broader conflict in that region inadvertently."

Opponent Thomas Hartnett, R-S.C., said it was wrong for the House to be "sending signals of weakness" at a time when America is "under siege by terrorists all across the world.

Members voting yes wanted Congress to be notified in the event of U.S. military activity near the Honduras-Nicaragua border.

Voting yes: Hertel, William Ford, Levin.

Voting no: Pursell, Broomfield.

GUAM — By a vote of 139 for and 272 against, the House rejected an amendment enabling aremed services personnel to once again buy Japanese cars in Guam for shipment to the U.S. at taxpayers' expense.

Congress last year moved to prohibit this, saying the 1,200 Japanese vehicles that servicemen were bringing annually into the U.S. from Guam presented unfair competition with American autos.

The shipments were made under a government policy that allows civilian and military personnel overseas to ship one new vehicle from a foreign port to the U.S.

The vote came during debate on HR 1872 (above).

Sponsor Ben Blaz, Republican, the delegate from Guam, said it was unfair to ban taxpayer-subsidized, new auto shipments from Guam while permitting them from countries such as West Germany.

Opponent John Dingell, D-Mich., said, "This amendment is opposed by the AFL-CIO, the UAW (and) by every member who comes from an auto-producing area."

Members voting yes wanted to restore the military's Guam-to-America auto pipeline.

Voting no: Pursell, Hertel, William Ford, Levin, Broomfield.

PAY — The House rejected, 122 for and 281 against, a "comparable pay" amendment that sought to give federal civilian employes the same three percent raise that military personnel are scheduled to receive in fiscal 1986.

This occurred during debate on H.R. 1872 (above), which provides a military pay hike in order to attract and keep competent armed services personnel.

Sponsor Bruce Morrison, D-Conn., said, "If there is to be a pay increase, it ought to be equally shared."

Opponent Les Aspin, D-Wis., called the amendment "one of the all-time dumb ideas" because filling military jobs presents different challenges than attracting and keeping civilian workers.

Members voting yes wanted civilian and military pay hikes to be linked by law.

Voting yes: Pursell, William Ford.

Voting no: Hertel, Levin, Broomfield.

O blood shortage called acute

An acute shortage of type O blood has the local Red Cross Blood Services worried.

Unless collections increase significantly over the next week, the Red Cross will have to ask hospitals to postpone elective surgery until the blood supply improves, the agency said.

Asking hospitals to postpone elective surgery is the last option the local Blood Services will use in an effort to meet blood needs for emergency use, a spokeswoman said.

The Red Cross has sent thousands of mailgrams to regular donors urging them to give blood this week. The Blood Services has also stepped up telephone recruitment in an effort to recruit additional donations.

The Red Cross reports cancellations of many small blood drives in the past several weeks have worsened the normal summer-time slump in donations.

Collections started to decline the latter part of June. No blood was collected on the July 4 holiday, and only 466 units of blood were donated on the 5th. In order to meet the daily blood needs, between 950 and 1,000 units of blood must be collected each day, the spokeswoman said.

Red Cross blood regions across the country are experiencing similar collection problems, according to the local Red Cross.

Blood can be donated by anyone in good general health between the ages of 17 through 65 years old who weighs a minimum of 110 pounds. Donor centers dare located in Bloomfield, Dearborn, Detroit, Livonia, Oak Park and other places. All centers have evening and Saturday hours for donor's convenience.

For an appointment to donate blood, call the nearest donor center or 833—4440. While appointments are appreciated, walk-ins are welcome, officials said.

French canoes circle 3,000 miles of Ohio Valley

Helen Gilbert

Early in the misty morning of June 15, 1749, we find the Beaubiens and some other Detroiters on board the big canoes of Captain Pierre Joseph de Celoron de Bienville.

They pushed out from the old dock at LaChine, near Montreal, and headed for the Ohio Valley where they will plant lead plates and other signposts which they trust will define the boundaries of New France in America.

France is destined to turn back the British traders — the Pennsylvanians and the Virginians who are making great inroads in territory France has long regarded as her private preserve. Furthermore, these traders are seducing France's old Indian allies and stirring them up against her.

We have confidence in our captain who, although a man of several titles, is simply called Celoron. He is a Chevalier of the ancient Order of St. Louis, and he was a successful commandant at Mackinac, and at Fort Ponchartrain d'Etroit. He is a full-fledged captain in the Royal Navy.

And Celoron is a close friend and official agent of the distinguished Marquis de Galissoniere, Governor General of Canada. And we travel with the blessing and the good will of the King of all France and his royal majesty, Louis XV.

SO HERE WE ARE at 5 a.m. in a foggy mist as thick as pois potage (pea soup).

What strange sounds animate this fog. We can hear the babble of many accents — Parisian speech mingling with the softer tones of Brittany, and the strident notes of Ponchartrain d'Etroit contrasting with the old-style French of Quebec. The sensitive ear detects a medley of difference between the old chateau French of Paris and the frontier accents of d'Etroit.

What a co-mingling within our own country — a kind of anvil chorus of dialectal differences. There is great diversity among our French. They live in different milieu and it is reflected in their lives as well as in their speech.

There is another strange sound along the water which commands our attention. Our arrival has disturbed a flock of feeding ducks who quietly gather their young within a protective circle and hurry toward the shore.

In the distance we hear the plaintive voice of a loon as it disappears into the western sky, while a fish-hawk, pursuing his prey, greets us with a staccato bark of protest. Hundreds of sea birds scudding over the water continue to pursue their breakfast. They seem undisturbed by our arrival.

Over all there hangs the sweet aroma of flowers which grow down to the river's edge. We glimpse at many fish swimming in the clear, clean waters of the St. Lawrence. Oh, Lord, what a beautiful morning!

Enough! The time has arrived when we must face the reality of our mission. Let us stop dreaming and take inventory of what we have here.

ON BOARD our 23 large birch-bark canoes are 14 officers and cadets, 20 soldiers, 180 Canadians and a small band of Indians. We are carrying six leaden marker plates.

Every night we camped in the beautiful, primitive forest along the way. It took us 10 days of hard paddling to reach Oswegatchie and Abbe Piquet's place. (Today that town is called Ogdensburg, N.Y.)

There Celoron left the head canoe to visit with the Sulpitian priest, Abbe Piquet. Their conversation seemed to be very private, but I think I knew what it was all about. It was privately known to me, and certainly Celoron must have been fully aware of it, that the good Abbe was a paid, political agent.

He was operating under the direction of the Marquis de Galissoniere to whom he regularly reported regarding the river traffic and the state of mind of the Iroquois and other Indians in the area.

Meanwhile, Piquet was building a small fort and a lodging place which would serve as a missionary post. So far he had met with much success. He had two Iroquois who helped him build the little fort and these young Indians he lent to Celoron.

Piquet was doing his best to try to "Christianize" the pagen Iroquois but they did not respond with any enthusiasm. We had more faith in the Indian band who were with us. Most of them were Abenaki from Maine.

Two were captive Cherokee who somehow had found their way to Quebec after being captured by some British and taken to Albany. Excellent paddlers, they were in a hurry to get to Louisville where they probably would desert and return to their own people in the south.

IN A FEW DAYS, we reached Lake Ontario where we stopped at the fort we called Frontenac.

We were careful to avoid the southern shore which was the home of the heavily fortified English post of Oswego. We hated that place because that is where the English conducted a large trade in beaver and other furs. It was disastrous to our interests in d'Etroit and elsewhere in the Ohio Valley.

On July 6, we finally reached Niagara. This was the most dangerous and the most important pass in all of the western wilderness. Here we had a small fort of palisades where the river joins the lake.

The problem was to carry 23 canoes, loaded with goods, lead plates, guns and ammunition over the difficult portage road past the roaring cataract that was at the falls at Niagara. It took several days to safely get around this hazard but we did, and not a man nor a gun was lost.

After a prayer of thanksgiving by the good priest, Father Bonnecamp, we launched our little birch-bark flotilla upon the broad waters of Lake Erie.

On July 15 we reached the hamlet of Portland on the southern shore of Erie, and for the next week, shouldered canoes and baggage up and down steep hills and dense forests to reach the waters of lovely Chatauqua Lake.

After the lake, we camp upon a shallow stony river. Father Bonnecamp wrote in his journal: "In some places — and they too frequent — the water was only two or three inches deep; and we were reduced to the sad necessity of dragging our canoes over the sharp pebbles, which stripped off large slivers of the bark. At last, tired and worn, and almost in despair of ever seeing LaBelle Riviere, we entered it at noon of the 29th."

At last we had reached the grand Ohio, our water roadway to the great west. (Today this river is called the Allegheny.) This LaBelle Riviere would lead us into the vast hinterland of this marvelous country, a wild and wonderful land of great fertility and promise.

(The next edition of Tonquish Tales will follow Celoron and his company to their meeting with some Miami Indians at Pickawillany (Piqua), and a meeting with La Demoiselle, a famous chief of the Miami tribe.)

The case for hormone-replacement therapy

By Carol Popp
special writer

SHOULD WOMEN have to endure the discomfort of hot flashes long associated with menopause? Should they expect to break bones because of osteoporosis or have to become prematurely wrinkled? Should they accept a decreased sexual drive, an insidious and frequent companion of menopause? Should they become yet another generation to endure these problems when treatment is available?

Menopause occurs when there is a drastic reduction in the amount of estrogen produced in the female body. The word simply means cessation of menstruation.

But menopause connotes wrinkled women, the bloom of youth forever gone, the fullness of womanhood past. For many this is the awful reality of menopause. But should it be accepted as the norm?

MANY PHYSICIANS resoundingly respond "no" to that question.

Among them is Dr. Jerry Nosanchuk, director of the Michigan Osteoporosis Institute in Livonia.

Nosanchuk and a growing number of other physicians across the country recognize menopause as an estrogen-deficient condition and advocate hormone-replacement therapy to halt the progress of some conditions and to reverse others. Patients who have benefited from this therapy agree.

Recent information about the use of hormones to diminish the chance of postmenopausal heart attack and osteoporosis has influenced Nosanchuk and others toward prescribing this therapy.

The reduced incidence of cancer — once a major concern related to treatment with estrogen alone — under the current therapeutic approach is also encouraging.

HORMONAL TREATMENT of postmenopausal conditions has long been controversial. There is substantial evidence, that the use of estrogen combined with progesterone may be the treatment of choice for women who suffer the debilitating effects of estrogen deficiency.

Nosanchuk enthusiastically endorses the hormone-replacement therapy because he has had some dramatic experiences with it.

"Osteoporosis, which is the 12th leading cause of death in the U.S.," said Nosanchuk, "is only one of a set of symptoms that indicate estrogen deficiency." He believes that the disease can be prevented if women receive the proper treatment, which often includes supplementary estrogen and progesterone. "When indicated, hormonal treatment should be started soon after the onset of menopause."

NOSANCHUK CITED the stories of three women who are receiving the hormone-replacement therapy for various conditions. Their circumstances are different, but the results are the same, and each of these women attributes her new-found well-being to estrogen-progesterone treatment.

The most dramatic is that of Judy Tyler. For her, hormone-replacement therapy "has changed my life."

Tyler is 38 years old, but she had a hysterectomy 11 years ago because cancer cells were discovered in her cervix when she had her annual Pap smear. Her surgeon left one ovary in place to prevent the possible extreme reaction of the body to "surgical menopause," but a year later that ovary was removed because a cyst developed.

Tyler said, "I became a different person after surgery. I was nervous all the time. I'd wake up at night sweating, I shook inside all the time. I would yell at my husband and daughter constantly. I was just a different person."

SHE DIDN'T LIKE the person she had become, and she asked her gynecologist for estrogen to help her deal with the aftermath of her surgical menopause, but he seemed unwilling to prescribe the hormone.

Tyler said that he "didn't want to give me estrogen unless he had to. He said I should just try to cope."

But she was unable to cope. Her marriage ended. She went to three psychiatrists, none of whom suggested treatment with hormones. Finally, Tyler returned to her family physician, Nosanchuk.

"Dr. Nosanchuk asked what I was taking to correct the problems I was having. When I told him 'nothing,' he was surprised." He did a lot of tests, Tyler said, "and then he put me on hormone-replacement therapy and turned my life around."

Like many women to whom hormone-replacement therapy is suggested, Tyler was scared at first. But she was also desperate. "I had even thought of suicide; I was in such a state." Nosanchuk discussed the results of the most current research and Tyler became convinced that the "good things about hormone-replacement therapy outweighed the bad things."

SHE STARTED TAKING hormones 2½ years ago, and she won't stop under any circumstances. "Even if I developed cancer, I'd keep taking hormones. I feel so much better now that I couldn't go back."

Another story is that of Dorothy Richards, a woman who had to exclude dairy products from her diet because she suffered from allergies when she was in her early 30s.

When she was 40 years old, she had a hysterectomy, and for the following 18 months, Richards took estrogen. But at that time the incidence of cancer was dramatically linked to estrogen therapy, and fear caused Richards to stop taking the hormone.

"MY MOTHER DIED of breast cancer when she was 57," she said, and she did not want to share that fate. "I felt fairly well and decided the drug was not necessary. I didn't have hot flashes or any other symptoms, so I quit taking it."

Hormonal treatment of postmenopausal conditions has long been controversial. There is substantial evidence, however, that the use of estrogen combined with progesterone may be the treatment of choice for women who suffer the debilitating effects of estrogen deficiency, including osteoporosis and a decreased sexual drive.

Her story may not be the stuff of high-tension drama, but Dorothy Richards is grateful for the hormone therapy suggested by Dr. Jerry Nosanchuk. "Last summer I looked like death warmed over," she said.

Over the next several years, Richards read articles that appeared with increasing frequency in newspapers and magazines warning about the development of postmenopausal osteoporosis. Her 70-year-old sister-in-law suffered from spinal deterioration, and Richards was concerned that she too would ultimately experience the debilitating effects of the disease.

When dairy products are removed from the diet, so is most calcium. Richards tried to supplement her diet with calcium products but found they also often provoked an allergic reaction.

During the spring and summer of 1984, she lost 30 pounds. "I didn't know if it was because my diet was so limited," she said, "or if there was some other problem, but I didn't feel well and I was concerned." Osteoporosis headed her list of concerns.

LAST MARCH, Richards' husband read an article in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers about osteoporosis. Aware that his wife was not feeling well, that she was worried about her health, and that she probably was not getting enough calcium, he made an appointment for her to see Nosanchuk.

Nosanchuk performed several laboratory tests and discovered that Richards had a bone-mineral concentration. He intended to suggest hormone-replacement therapy to halt the deterioration of bone, but first he had to rule out the possibility of breast or endometrial cancer.

Richards underwent mammography and had a Pap smear. The test results indicated that she had no cancer, and Nosanchuk advised her to begin taking estrogen and progesterone in combination. He and Richards discussed the current research findings concerning postmenopausal conditions and hormone therapy, allaying her concerns about cancer.

TODAY, RICHARDS feels and looks better. She believes that hormone-replacement therapy is responsible. "Last summer I looked like death warmed over. I managed to go to work, but I couldn't do much else. Now I feel like I did when I was younger."

The third story concerns a woman named Dorothy Keedle.

Two years ago she underwent an osteotomy operation on her knee. As part of her postsurgical therapy, she was required to do exercises. While she doing ankle-lifts, she broke a bone in her toe. Keedle didn't think too much about it at the time, but later when she broke a rib just leaning on a table, she became concerned.

Keedle returned to the orthopedic surgeon who had done the procedure on her knee and told him that she needed some medication, "something more than just having broken bones set."

HE RECOMMENDED that she see Nosanchuk. Last August Keedle went to the Michigan Osteoporosis Institute for the first time.

She limped into the office because she had sustained still another (hairline) break in a leg bone. Nosanchuk immediately began to treat the osteoporosis with calcium. He also required Keedle to use crutches rather than risk further broken bones.

During the next several weeks, Nosanchuk put Keedle through a rigorous testing program. Her bone-mineral content was determined, she underwent mammography and a Pap smear, ultrasound of the uterus and an endometrial biopsy. All the findings pointed to her need for hormone-replacement therapy. Her bone-mineral count was greatly diminished.

IN JANUARY, Keedle began to take estrogen and progesterone, and "it's doing wonders. I haven't had a broken bone since I started seeing Dr. Nosanchuk and taking medication for osteoporosis." Her orthopedic surgeons are amazed at the progress she has made on hormone-replacement therapy.

Repeated testing of her bone density indicates that demineralization has ceased, and the most recent tests showed that there is an actual improvement in the calcium content of her bones.

"I was kind of leery of taking hormones," Keedle said, "because I had taken estrogen when I was 30 years old and I developed cysts in my breasts." But Nosanchuk explained that if she had no prior history of cancer, and if the mammographic examination he ordered was negative, she would have no problem taking hormones now for the osteoporosis.

Hormone-replacement therapy has "really been a miracle for me," said Keedle. Besides halting the bone breakage, she notices a difference in her skin, which had begun to look wrinkled and old. The hormones have helped to restore the smoothness of youth to her skin.

NOSANCHUK believes that "there is a need for more physicians to handle the menopause as an entity, to develop a multidisciplinary approach to menopause that considers all the needs of women during this phase of their lives."

It is not enough, according to Nosanchuk, to have physicians who treat only the gynecological problems associated with menopause or those who treat only the bone-related disease that affects so many postmenopausal women.

Neither is it enough for physicians to approach the problems of menopause with a wait-and-see attitude. Too many physicians believe that hormonal therapy should not be given unless a woman exhibits a need, and too often that need is realized only after she has broken her wrist or her marriage has ended in divorce because of her diminished interest in sex.

Nosanchuk insists that physicians not wait for these extremes before they perform the appropriate tests and prescribe hormones for women in need. "While physicians are waiting for this kind of evidence, the clock is ticking. A woman's bone mass may be decreasing and her marriage may suffer," he said.

BECAUSE THE changes associated with menopause often occur without symptoms, once menopause has begun many doctors believe that no woman should wait to experience problems before evaluation of her estrogen status is determined. They believe all women should undergo testing and have hormone-replacement therapy explained to them so that they may accept or reject such therapy for themselves armed with the most up-to-date information.

'Even if I developed cancer, I'd keep taking hormones. I feel so much better now that I couldn't go back.'

Dorothy Keedle is convinced that hormone-replacement therapy has saved her from the doom of osteoporosis. "It's doing wonders. I haven't had a broken bone since I started taking it," the Livonia resident said.

What are the risks involved?

WHAT ARE THE risks involved in hormone-replacement therapy? What about cancer? These, of course, are the concerns of both physicians and patients.

Several years ago, in his book "Feminine Forever," Robert A. Wilson advocated estrogen treatment for women who were suffering the common symptoms of menopause.

There was some enthusiasm from members of the medical profession, and physicians began to prescribe estrogens for patients who had hot flashes, irregular menstrual periods and diminished interest in sex.

Within a period of time, however, it became apparent that women who received estrogen therapy were at greater risk for the development of endometrial cancer, and the use of estrogen fell into disfavor among physicians and patients alike.

Reading the package insert that accompanies estrogen drugs may invoke in physicians who are not aware of the results of the most current research a hesitation to prescribe the hormone and an equal reluctance in patients to take it.

Because pharmaceutical companies are required by federal law to list all hazards associated with taking their drugs, the risks of cancer are enumerated in the information provided with estrogen. Cancer is possibly the most feared word in our language, even more foreboding than "death." Informative material, therefore, that is replete with warnings about cancer cannot help but generate a certain degree of fear in the reader, and a reluctance to prescribe or take the drug is easily understood.

THERE IS, HOWEVER, an important difference in the hormone-replacement therapy advocated by Dr. Jerry Nosanchuk and others.

In the past, when women received unopposed estrogen — that is, without progesterone to counteract the negative effects of estrogen — treatment resulted in a three- to eight-fold increase in the incidence of endometrial cancer (depending on the study cited).

Today, however, estrogen-replacement therapy must be accompanied by the administration of progesterone (the companion hormone that, with estrogen, regulates the menstrual cycle) and the risk of fatal endometrial cancer is substantially less than in untreated women.

The currently accepted medical textbook, "Clinical Gynecologic Endocrinology and Infertility," by Leon Speross, indicates that recent research dictates the "mandatory addition of a progestational agent to an estrogen-replacement program."

When endometrial cancer does develop during hormone therapy, it is usually not fatal and there is a greater mortality among women who are not taking estrogens and who suffer from endometrial cancer.

We all had front-row seats for balloon festival

Canton chatter

Sandy Preblich 981-6354

It couldn't stop our Country Festival and, by golly, it couldn't stop our Balloon Festival.

It's none other than old man weather of whom I speak. He has found Canton a formidable opponent and quite like the old-time mailman, "neither rain, nor sleet, nor cold of night" or whatever, shall keep us from our party. In our case, it includes too much or too little wind.

Talk about over compensating. The whole township and surrounding areas must have been praying from 9 p.m. on Saturday until 6 p.m. Sunday for the wind to die down because that's all we had Saturday. By lift-off time Sunday night, there wasn't enough wind for a feather to get a decent ride. But upward and onward was the word of the day and so they began.

The Mayflower, with local businessman and balloon enthusiast Scott Lorenz piloting, led the parade on the last flight of the last day. What had been too windy for words was now calm — for calamity. So the balloons rose, only to stand perfectly still, perched above the crowd, looking so colorful and providing everyone with a beautiful i-o-n-g look at each of them.

NOW THE ONLY problem was how to turn them around and try to accomplish the feat of the day, catch a key perched atop a tall pole, or throw a small bag and hit a big white X on the ground.

As luck would have it, there seemed to be an air lock of some sort — a protective shield if you will — around the field in which all these marvelous tasks were to take place. No matter how desperately each balloonist tried, they were carefully, strategically guided around each pole, the white X, and the whole area.

For example, two balloons began their ascent just south of the area, A further west than B. A began to drift north, thus missing the field. We assumed B, directly south of the field, also would drift north and arrive directly over the keys and the X.

But, one must not jump to hasty conclusions. For it was the fate of that balloon to be picked up by the same wind and carried east. The evening was plagued with similar incidents. Thus, each balloonist let his balloon rise, get as close to the area as possible and drop his marker, hoping to win the trip on British Airways.

No one even attempted to grab the ring to win the car since it was impossible to get over the area at a decent height.

But we cheered and applauded their efforts anyway, remembering that the majority of us couldn't get the balloons off the ground, much less over the target.

As I said earlier, nothing could spoil this event for us.

The merchants had a wonderful turnout for their sale. Even my mom and sister managed to wriggle out of their safe beds to catch the early bargains and marvel at the turnout. They thought they would be shopping in peace and ended up in what could best be described as a Christmas-in-July sale! I did exactly as promised and ordered my favorite broasted chicken. But something went wrong, the balloons never drifted by. This was due to the over-enthusiastic breeze we had Saturday.

AS PROMISED, one of our resident radio celebrities, Tom Dean of WCLS, hosted the evening festivities.

He kept everyone informed of the progress of each balloon and tried to explain each of the problems as they occurred. In the morning, John Love from Entertainment Consultants of America (based in Plymouth), handled the balloon-by-balloon broadcast.

We can't thank them enough for their time and talent. Tom Dean has been doing this for years and never lets us down when called on. He has a real interest in the balloons and a comfortable knowledge of their operation. He is able to recognize and inform us as to either problems or progress.

Gordon Boring, aeronaut from Wicker Basket Balloon Center, served as organizer and co-chairman of the balloon festival. He was on hand, and Tom encouraged him to add his expertise the loud speaker announcements.

THE ENTIRE event was no less than exciting, and every bit as busy and filled with fun as anticipated.

My only regret was that schedules of activites were not provided early enough to encourage the average citizen to join the many activities planned for the weekend. But for those die-hard, deeply active residents, the rewards were fantastic. Literally thousands of people packed in, spread out their blankets, unpacked their picnic baskets and sat back for a front-row seat. The balloons travel overhead, so everyone has a front-row seat.

Well, enough about the festival. I loved it. I hope you had a chance to enjoy it. If not, perhaps I have encouraged you to do so next year.

I hope they have the fly-in pancake breakfast at Metteta1 Airport, the sunrise inflation sales, the Art in the Park, and the Balloon Brunch at the Mayflower, and all the special things that make this festival so much fun.

Which reminds me. We always seem to forget those special people who make things go so smoothly — the RE-ACT teams, the Civil Air Patrol, the DPW workers, the police and fire departments. And never forget, most of this excitement can be seen soon on Omnicom cable.

SPEAKING of Omnicom, I want to send a warm get-well wish to our local J.P. McCarthy, the one who brings us Single Touch on Omnicom.

He is hospitalized right now and we miss him and want him well — NOW! You hear that J.P.? Take it easy and take care.

J.P. has co-hosted with me on many Omnicom specials, telethons, auctions and such, most recently the Canton Country Festival Parade. You can send him well wishes through me or Omnicom, P.O. Box 87068, Canton, MI 48187.

NOW, LAST but not least, a follow-up report on Rose Smith, winner of the Canton's Best Mom Ever contest.

She was nominated by her daughter Marjorie White, a longtime Canton resident herself. Until recently, Marge and husband, Norris, owned and operated Whites Sales and Service on Sheldon Road.

As winner, Mrs. Smith and Marjorie were guests for Sunday brunch at Jim Mather's Mr. Steak on Ford Road, Canton. Almost all her family joined them, bringing a beautiful basket of carnations and roses for the table. Mrs. Smith was thrilled as Supervisor Jim Poole stopped by to congratulate her on winning the title.

Afterward, Marge and Norris hosted a reception at their home on Sheldon Road. Here the excitement and fun continued as the family showered her with gifts and cards in appreciation of everything she has done through the years to earn this honor. Celebrating with her were Robert and Delores Smith, Rodger and Marjorie Smith, Marvin and Marianne Smith, Robert and Lana Olson with brand new daughter Theresa, David White, and Rick and Andrea Smith.

Unfortunately, this happened June 9 and on that particular weekend, Ohio was in the midst of a terrible hailstorm. Daughter Marvella and her husband, Warren Schaffer, had their suitcases packed and ready to go when warnings of the approaching storm stopped them cold. The family missed them and said if they had been able to come, the day would have been perfect. However, there were no complaints from anyone. They had a marvelous time. They thanked everyone involved for a day Mrs. Rose Smith — a wonderful and very loved mother — will not forget.

Cavanaugh-Gasparovich

Cheryl Deann Gasparovich and Patrick Michael Cavanaugh exchanged marriage vows in Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church, Plymouth, with the Rev. Kenneth MacKinnon officiating.

Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gasparovich of Romulus and Mr. and Mrs. John Cavanaugh of Ridge Road, Canton Township.

The bride's white satin gown had puffed juliet sleeves, a basque waistline and a cathedral train. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, lavender roses, baby's breath and fern.

Laura Scaturro, matron of honor, and attendants Susan Gasparovich, Gayle Grabowski, Deanna Cavanaugh and Sharon Cavanaugh wore lavender tafetta gowns and each carried a single long-stemmed lavender rose with baby's breath.

Best man was Chris Lock and groomsmen were Brian Gasparovich, Tim Charnock, Timm Mooney and Russ Baltazar.

The couple traveled to the Hawaiian Islands after their wedding reception at Karas House of Redford. They will live in Webster Township.

The bridegroom is a 1978 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School. He is employed as a sales representative at Dick Scott Buick. His wife graduated from Taylor John F. Kennedy High School in 1977. She is employed by General Motors Warehouse Distribution Division.

1st Presbyterian marks 150 years

The Rev. Philip Rodgers Magee has entitled his Sunday sermon, "1835 — It Was a Very Good Year."

First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth will mark its 150th anniversary Sunday, July 14, with a 10 a.m. worship service followed by a festive celebration on the west lawn of the church.

Members of the church have been celebrating since January with special anniversary events. But Sunday is the culmination — the high point of theyear's activities. It was in July 1835, 150 years ago, that the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth was officially organized.

Its first resident minister, the Rev. Alexander McJunkin, was called at a salary of $200 a year. During the same year, the congregation built its first church on the site of the present building, 701 Church St., when a frame building was erected at a cost of $386.

It was replaced by a brick building in 1847. Remodeled in 1877, the brick church was destroyed by fire in 1936. In 1937, the Rev. Walter Nichol dedicated the new church which has been expanded to the present building.

THE REV. PHILIP Rodgers Magee has selected "1835 — It Was a Very Good Year," as the title of his anniversary sermon.

Judy Morgan, who is chairing the 150th Anniversary Steering Committee, said the service will include messages from civic dignitaries. And because the congregation is expected to overflow the sanctuary, Omnicom Cablevision will provide closed circuit television. The service will be shown, in color, in Nichol/Walch Fellowship Hall.

Music will be provided by all the church choirs, the Brass Ensemble and the Jubilate Bell Choir.

Church members of 40 or more years will be recognized and a congratulatory letter from the president of the United States will be read.

THE LAWN party and ice cream social will begin after the service.

Joseph Uhl, who is in charge of this event, says a huge tent will be erected on the lawn across from the church parking lot.

Letters of congratulations will be displayed. The 150th anniversary scrapbook will be on view. It will rest on the podium that escaped the fire of 1936.

The deacons will serve hot dogs, ice cream, cupcakes, lemonade and coffee.

A carousel band wagon will be playing and there will be clowns and balloons.

During these festivities, the 40-years and more members will be assembled to have their picture taken for the scrapbook.

Calls for revenge are best resisted

moral perspectives
Rev. David Strong

IT IS TEMPTING to become what we condemn. Some call for reprisals against those who hijack airplanes and shoot down American servicemen who are off-duty. We call it terrorism. They call it retribution or revolution. It is in fact a time of moral and religious testing.

Picasso painted one of the most famous paintings in the world, "Guernica," when Fascists bombed innocent civilians. Then in the early years of World War II, German planes bombed London. It was not a military target. Nor was Dresden, or Hiroshima or Nagasaki. It is easy to be drawn into doing the worst that our enemies have done.

However it is rationalized, the mass killing of innocent people in war, as barbarian as it is, has become a fact. Carried out in Vietnam, Afghanistan, and envisioned as the essence of World War III, some still believe that it accomplishes the goals that lead to victory.

JUST THE OPPOSITE is true. Attempt to terrorize the people and they become even more dedicated to opposing the enemy. If America attacks Shiite strongholds, they will be even more dedicated to carry out terrorism in response.

The allied bombings in Germany were designed to destroy the will of the people to support their war effort. The bombing accomplished exactly the opposite. The German people worked even harder, for they now were defending themselves against attack.

There is a temptation which always faces civilized peoples to "fight as dirty as they fight." If we do so, we destroy the moral, just principles of our own selves.

Restoring a death penalty in Michigan would lower us to the level of the enemy, those who take a life. A current slogan of those who oppose the death penalty is, "Why do we kill people who kill to show that killing people is wrong?"

BY REINSTATING the death penalty, the citizens of Michigan would become the victims. We would simply be lowering ourselves to the moral and unjust level of the very persons we condemn. By voting for execution, we would all become the executioners.

An eye for an eye is the lowest moral position which can exist among humans. Vengeance is a never-ending cycle that requires no moral or religious justification.

Individually and corporately, we are tested by what we do when we have been assaulted by the meanest means. We can hope and pray that our community, our state and our nation will come through such times with our morality and our integrity strenthened, not destroyed.

There will continue to be cries of "kill them," "pay them back." We will be judged by how we reply.

PASS concept: narrowcasting

IN THE BEGINNING there was television. And the masses rejoiced in a singular cry of ecstasy.

"More Lucy!!" they shouted. "More Honeymooners!! More Ed Sullivan!!"

Their needs were simple. TV producers filled them thusly, turning out more of the same types of shows.

Then came sports, and TV was transformed. Instead of just an occasional local baseball or football game, weekly shows presented a variety of sports. National heroes were created. Texans cheered lustily for John Unitas as he guided the Baltimore Colts past the New York Giants in the 1958 NFL championship game.

Again the people rejoiced, although it wasn't the unanimous mass of television's earlier years. Specialization had been introduced. There were now shows targeting a certain segment of the audience.

NEXT CAME cable TV. Further specialization, the audience narrowed to a greater degree. The choices facing the viewer multiplied; the audience was segmented even more.

Now television has reached the regional cable stage: certain programs for certain members of a certain audience.

This latest evolutionary development birthed PASS — Pro Am Sports Systems, the Troy-based firm that, in the 15 months since it's creation, has spread to 86 cable affiliates throughout Michigan and Toledo, including every system in suburban Detroit.

Which means that enough people are interested in PASS to pay the subscription price, which is sometimes twice that of 24-hour pay television stations like HBO or Showtime. PASS broadcasts between four and five hours a day, with rates ranging from $8 to $15.

BUT PASS presents purely sports. And its programming emphasizes live and local, with 88 Detroit Tiger games, 42 Piston contests and several of the state's college events.

"I'm in the entertainment business," says Bill Wischman, vice-president and general manager of PASS. "If people can't go out to the stadium, they can watch it on PASS."

Wischman must have a bit of carnival roustabout in him, too, considering the variety of his duties. In varying degrees, he handles finances, administration, negotiations, marketing and programming.

He also must adeptly balance the PASS concept, which has a built-in contradiction, on a very narrow perch if it is to work. He must sell a sport first, then convince his audience he can put that sport in their living room.

And he must do it while not taking any fans out of stadium seats.

"If people don't want to go down to the stadium," Wischman explains, "they won't watch it at home."

AND IF TOO many people stay home to watch, teams like the Tigers and Pistons aren't likely to allow PASS to keep televising home games.

That would be a huge chunk of PASS. The Tigers are the system's backbone, while the Pistons are the main attraction in the winter months. Collegiate sports, such as Michigan State and University of Michigan football, basketball and hockey, are also key ingredients, but without the Tigers and Pistons the system would never last.

So far, Wischman has been able to keep his act balanced. "No sport that we cover has dropped in attendance," he points out. "We promote attendance."

His philosophy is simple: "To deliver local sports to local fans — to bring local games to them."

His method is just as plain: Interest people in the sport, get them out to the stadium, create a following strong enough that, when they can't go, they'll turn on PASS and watch.

DEVELOPING AN audience for a regional (PASS is restricted to areas of Detroit sports teams) cable system that, according to Wischman, offers "70 percent of the time, live broadcasts of local sporting events," is no easy task. Financial pitfalls abound, as other regional systems will attest.

"I won't get into a bidding war," says Wischman, who started his professional career as an accountant before joining ON-TV, the over-the-air pay TV station that operated in Detroit from 1979 to 1983. "I guess that's the unfortunate thing about being an accountant — I understand the realities of the business."

Several of his cable cohorts didn't, like Sport View of Nashville, the system that paid an enormous sum to televise Big Ten football games last year. Sport View went belly-up, and the conference was out $3 million.

"(The Big Ten) would have been better off going with me for a smaller sum because at least they would have been paid," Wischman points out. The bankruptcy of Sport View and four other regional systems has benefitted PASS, which will feature 40 football games this fall after televising a dozen last year.

THE TIGER contract helped PASS avoid the necessity of indulging in a bidding war for football games. It was also one of the easiest to negotiate, since John Fetzer is a co-owner of

Cummings picked for AD job

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

Ten years ago John Sandmann convinced a Plymouth High School assistant football coach to shelve his plans of becomming the first head football coach at Plymouth Canton High School.

Sandmann convinced Paul Cummings that he'd be happier in the role of assistant athletic director. Cummings decided Sandmann was right.

Last Monday, the Plymouth-Canton Cummunity Schools board of education made Cummings' decision pay off by unanimously selecting him as the new athletic director of Plymouth-Canton schools.

He replaces Sandmann who retired in June after 37 years of service to the district.

"Obviously, I'm very excited about this," Cummings said. "I've waited a long time for this. I've paid my dues."

Indeed. Cummings came to the district in 1959 as the assistant director of community education. From 1964 to 1973, he coached swimming, football and baseball. Since 1969 he has been the director of swimming in the community education department.

He decided to give up coaching in 1974 to become assistant director of athletics.

ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT Norman Kee was given the task of heading up a committee to help select the new AD. Along with Kent Buikema, Bill Brown, Shirley Spaniel and Dr. Michael Homes, Kee screened 32 applicants for the job.

In a letter to the board of education, Kee wrote: "The top internal and external candidates were interviewed extensively. The results were unanimous that the person who can provide the comprehensive leadership as a director and deal most quickly and effectively with the issues and requirements of the job description is Paul Cummings."

Superintendent Dr. John Hoben, according to Kee, "support(ed) this recommedation without hesitation."

The board accepted it without hesitation, as well.

The role Cummings will fill will be different than the one Sandmann vacated. On top of his AD chores, Cummings will also be the coordinating director of both physical education K-12 and health education K-12.

"AS FAR AS how I'm going to handle this job," Cummings said, "it's going to take a while before I can instill my ideas. Let's face it, John Sandmann was here a long time, and things were done his way a long time. And that's good. He took a tiny little school here and built a dynasty. The biggest thing for me is to keep that going. I want that to continue.

"I will want to instill a few changes, but that will come in time. Right now, I just want to make sure we open on time."

Cummings is both aware of and unafraid of perhaps the biggest headache his new job could cause: satisfying both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem factions.

"I can live with the situation," he said. "I can direct it and make it work. Ninety-nine percent of the coaching staff are workable, dynamic people. They handle themselves in a professional manner."

Cummings said the attitude of the students, in terms of the Canton-Salem friction, is the best it's ever been.

"They may not talk to each other much during the week they play each other, but they get along very well the rest of the time. I'm very pleased with the students. The parents sometimes get nervous when they think we have purchased something for the other school. But, whatever we buy for one program, we make sure we buy for the other," he said.

ANOTHER ISSUE consistently barking at the AD's door is what priority the district administration puts on its athletic program.

"You have to remember that athletics is a part of the total education process," Cummings said. "It's our job to be teaching youngsters, not using them."

But, Cummings is committed to keeping the Plymouth-Canton athletic teams competitive on the state level.

"I feel you will be competitive if you have the right foundation," he said. "Number one, you have to work with the Canton and Salem students. They are your top priority. Number two, you must win your conference. If you can attain those two things, you have to be pleased. Everything that comes after that is gravy. And the other things will come. I've seen it happen.

"I will never deny Plymouth-Canton teams the chance to compete on the state level. We want to be there. You just can't skip a step to get there."

Cummings is adamant about keeping the middle school and freshman athletic programs alive.

"We have kind of turned that problem around in recent years," he said. "I hope to keep it that way."

What Cummings brings to the post, aside from his quick wit and pleasant demeanor, is a familiarity with both the job and people he'll be associating with — a familiarity that should help smooth out the transition from assistant to head man.

'You have to remember that athletics are a part of the total education process. It's our job to be teaching youngsters, not using them.'

— Paul Cummings
CEP athletic director

High schools to get own assistant

The filling of the athletic director vacancy has created two more vacancies in the Centennial Educational Park athletic program.

Assistant Superintendent of the Plymouth-Canton Community School District Norman Kee, along with newly hired AD Paul Cummings, Salem principal Bill Brown and Canton principal Tom Pattan, is in the process of hiring someone in each building to act as assistants to Cummings.

"We're trying to find someone to place in each high school that would act in a similar capacity as Paul did before taking the athletic directorship," Kee said. "With Paul taking on more health and phys. ed. responsibilities, it would be impossible for him to do it all alone."

Kee said the assistants would act as activities supervisors in each high school building, handling such chores as bus schedules, scheduling gym time for practice sessions and other in-house duties.

"Having someone in each building would also help ease some of the blue (Salem) vs. red (Canton) concerns that have gone on. Each school now has someone inside to arrange various activities," Kee said.

Kee hopes to have the assistants chosen before school opens in the fall. He said the committee is seeking individuals already on staff at CEP.

More than 230 soccer teams gathered at Schoolcraft College for the Wolverine VI tourney last weekend. Along with the spirited play, the tourney attracted more than $1 million to the area.

13 champions crowned at Wolverine VI tourney

By Brad Emons

The event generated $1 million for the local business community.

It also produced 13 youth soccer champions among the 234 teams from throughout the midwest and Canada, which competed last weekend in the sixth annual Wolverine tournament at Schoolcraft College.

Some of Sunday's finals were moved to Livonia's Bicentennial Park because rain played havoc with scheduling and the condition of the fields.

"We had three rain delays Friday and that created problems with rescheduling," said Marv Gans, Schoolcraft College Athletic Director. "But other than that, I felt we were well received by soccer teams in other areas.

"We'll pretty much have the same format next year. It takes a lot of people working and helping to make it go."

It took 4,000 soccer players to make it go as well.

SEVERAL TEAMS from the Observer-Eccentric coverage area came away with titles.

The most impressive performance was turned in by the Livonia Florist Hawks, a Girls Under-16 team which outscored its opponents 34-3 in six victories.

The defense was led by fullbacks Becky Dimitriou, Rosemary Hally, Staci Hendershott, Kris Schultz and Shannon Stacherski. Goalie Lynn Shelly posted shutouts in quarterfinal, semifinal and final round action (a 4-0 win over the Cincinnati Celtics).

Center striker Shari Acitelli paced the offense with eight goals.

"Acitelli was the key to our offense," said Hawks coach Paul Dugan. "She is an outstanding worker who always gives 110 percent.

Ice skaters compete in Detroit exhibition

Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard, a world-class figure skating team, will headline the "Pops on Ice" exhibition skating program scheduled for 8 p.m. July 12 at the Detroit Skating Club in Bloomfield Hills.

Watson and Oppegard took first place at the United States National competition in Kansas City last January and also placed fourth in the World Championships in Tokyo.

They will be among a large contingent of local skaters at the skating exhibition, which is open free of charge to the public. Donations will be presented to the United States Figure Skating Association's Memorial Fund, which assists competitive skaters.

Jason and Susan Dungjen of Troy, who placed fourth in the 1985 United States seniors pairs competition, and Deveny Deck of Plymouth and Luke Hohmann of Buffalo, N.Y., who were first nationally in the junior pair division, also will be on hand.

Pros shine in MSHL opener

It didn't take long for the professional hockey players to establish themselves in the Midwest Summer Hockey League.

Sunday night, the first night of competition for the third-year league housed in the Plymouth Cultural Center, brought together two of the league's three NHL players.

The Bulldogs, featuring Mark Hamway of the New York Islanders, defeated the Broncos, featuring Red Wing Ted Speers, 7-4. Hamway scored four goals and dished out an assist while Speers, the MVP of the Wings' farm team at Adirondack last year, scored three goals.

"They really put on a show," said MSHL commissioner A.J. Baker.

Scott Jagod scored a goal and added three assists for the Bulldogs.

IN OTHER action Sunday, the Falcons bumped off the Wolverines 5-2. Rick Osburn scored twice and notched an assist. Tim Osburn added a goal and Joel Breazeale scored a goal with three assists. Mike Tardish played a half of shutout goal for the Falcons.

Scott Robins and Livonia Stevenson's Matt Willanen scored for the Wolves.

The Wildcats unleashed a 10-goal attack on the Spartans Sunday winning 10-4.

Tom Dolan scored three goals, Michigan State's Mike Donnelly two and Mike Helber, the first Bantam player selected to play in the MSHL, scored twice to pace the attack.

Livonia Churchill grad Eddie Shepler scored two goals and added an assist for the Spartans.

ON MONDAY, Bob Moise, Troy Thrun and J.F. Carter scored to lead the Lakers past the Huskies, 3-2.

Jeff Dobek and Doak Klasko scored for the Huskies.

Ladbroke seeks big gate for Mile

By Brad Emons
staff writer

It hasn't been an easy year for the new owners of the Detroit Race Course.

The British-based Ladbroke group implemented numerous changes at the Livonia track, but the process has been slow.

Michigan's biggest thoroughbred event, the $150,000-added Michigan Mile, is Saturday. Track oficials are hoping the event, which also includes the $40,000-added Michigan Oaks Handicap for 3-year-old fillies, will help boost sagging attendance.

Last month jockey Willie Shoemaker, one of the all-time greats, pulled out of the Mile because of another racing commitment, much to the chagrin of DRC President Donald Drew.

Ladbroke DRC officials suffered another mild setback recently when they found out defending champ Michigan Mile champ Timeless Native (trained by Bud Delp), will not return after running last week in the $250,000 Suburban Handicap in Chicago.

But the Mile field is not bone dry.

PAT DAY, the nation's leading jockey the past two years, will ride Big Pistol, which boasts career earnings of $460,000.

Also included in the field is Badwagon Harry, third in last year's Mile and winner of the $42,800 Michigan Breeders Handicap (July 4) for 3-year-old colts and geldings.

Norwick, with career earnings of $537,000 and winner of the National Jockey Club Handicap May 4 in Chicago, must be considered a favorite along with Big Pistol.

Silent King, which ran in the 1984 Kentucky Derby (trained by Delp) is also entered along with Havagreatdate, which won the Motor City Handicap on May 25.

Let's Go Blue, a Canadian horse with $388,000 in career earnings, is also a threat after winning the Breeder's Derby Handicap in its native land.

Looking for an outside shot?

A darkhorse could be the locally-bred DeJeau, which has won its last four races by a total of 38 lengths combined. The 3-year-old sped to a fast time of 1:42.8 at a mile-and-16th in the Southfield Stakes. (The Michigan Mile is a mile-and-eighth)./L

DESIGNATED a Grade II race, the Mile is offering a total purse of $202,000, including an extra $52,000 to horses eligible for the Breeders Cup.

PASS concept: narrowcasting

PASS and was the team's owner when it was signed. PASS is in the second of a seven-year contract and holds an option for seven more years.

But televising the Tigers doesn't guarantee success, another reality of which Wischman is aware. He hopes to expand his programming to Red Wing games, high school football playoffs and Mid-American Conference football and basketball.

"We've been fortunate because we have good teams," Wischman acknowledges. The Tigers currently have the largest local television following of any major league baseball team, the PASS general manager says.

It may not always be that way. Which means that, even in this era of television specialization, there is a need for some diversification — just in case.

Wolverine draws big bucks to area

"Her name is 'Ace' and and she is definitely our ace in the hole."

Equally as impressive was the Plymouth Stingers of the Western Suburban Soccer League, who outscored five opponents by a combined score of 13-2 en route to the Girls Under-14 crown.

"WE DON'T RELY on one person," said Stingers coach Don Smith. "The scoring is really spread out.

"We don't have any big girls, but we like to control the ball. And they like to work together. We don't kick and chase the ball down. We wear teams out, especially in the second half. They're in good condition."

In the final, the Stingers beat the Troy Challengers for the third time this season, 2-0, raising their overall season record to 24-2-2.

Like the Hawks, the Stingers, comprised of eight players from the Plymouth-Canton area, four from Farmington and four from Northville, will compete in the Midwest Regionals July 19-21.

Meanwhile, the Vardar III soccer clubs, comprised primarily of Livonia players, came away with two boys age-group crowns.

The Under-13 Vardar squad blanked the Ann Arbor Flames for the title, 4-0, while the Under-18 team edged the Mount Clemens Carpathia Kickers for the championship, 2-1.

Teams from Troy also fared well.

Troy United took the Boys Under-16 division with a 2-0 triumph over the Westerville (Ohio) Dingos. The Michigan Metros, another Troy-based team, beat the Brighton Strikers, 4-3, for the Boys Under-16 crown.

LCBL seeks respect from Detroit

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

The Detroit Times began the game back in 1945. The now defunct newspaper rounded up the best amateur baseball players from across the state to take on the city team at Briggs Stadium (now Tiger Stadium).

A player from each team was selected to play in a New York sandlot all-star game. The first star of stars chosen was a youngster named Billy Pierce, who went on to distinguish himself in the American League. Others to play in the game were former Tiger greats Bill Freehan and Willie Horton.

The annual sandlot all-star game has changed over the years. The Detroit Free Press picked up the game when the Times folded in 1960. Later, Mike Aday assumed control.

But through 40 years, the game lives. Monday, four groups of all-stars will clash in a pair of games at Tiger Stadium.

At 10 a.m., all-stars from the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League will take on an all-star team from the Detroit Aday League's first-, third-, fifth- and seventh-place teams. At 12:30 p.m. the Lansing-area all-stars will play Detroit Aday stars from the second-, fourth- and sixth-place teams.

A TRIP to New York is no longer at stake. But the game provides the sandlot players a chance to play at Tiger Stadium, a dream come true for most players. It also gives the players a chance to demonstrate their skills before a large audience of major league scouts.

For the Livonia stars, there's even more at stake.

"We want to win," said John Moraitis, Redford Little Caesars coach who will guide the all-star team Monday. "We've always been told that we're the weaker league. I think we can play with them."

Don't blame the LCBL for carrying a bit of a grudge into Monday's contest.

The Detroit Aday League has long been recognized as the premier summer sandlot league. The Detroit League features, for the most part, established college players. Aday Sound, for example, is comprised of players off the University of Michigan baseball team. Aday Photo is comprised of Eastern Michigan players.

In contrast, the LCBL is limited by geographic boundaries. Little Caesars must carry a certain percentage of Redford players. Livonia Aday must carry a certain percentage of Livonia players. Though there are a good number of experienced college players in the LCBL, there are an equal number of high school players and college freshmen.

ACCORDING TO Morris Moorawnick, who has been involved with the all-star game for all 40 years, Detroit carries an edge in the series.

"Scores of all-star games are negligible," Moorawnick said. "Nobody remembers who wins or loses. I think Detroit and Livonia have played maybe seven times and Detroit has won five. Usually Livonia plays Lansing and I think they've only lost once to Lansing in 10 games."

Moraitis, though, doesn't think his league is that far behind the Detroit league in terms of talent.

"You take our team, Livonia Aday and Walter's Appliance; those three teams are as good as the second-, third- and fourth-place teams in Detroit Aday," he said. "Teams like Aday Appliance and maybe Aday Photo, they have outstanding pitching, maybe they'd win in either league. But our top three teams are as good as any team in their league."

Lefty John Rogers will get the start on the mound for Livonia.

DETROIT'S STRENGTH looks to be its pitching staff. U-M standouts Dave Karasinski and Paul Wenson (of Farmington) plus EMU hurler Ron Rightnowar anchor the staff.

The most recent Detroit-Livonia clash was in 1982. Detroit won that one 3-2.

The Livonia all-stars will have another challenge Monday night. They will take on a team of all-stars from the Aday-Stan Musial Class A league at 8:15 p.m. at Livonia's Ford Field. The Class A stars are from Livonia, Westland, Dearborn, Garden City and Redford.

Livonia Aday battles way back into 1st place

The Livonia Collegiate Baseball League (LCBL) has a new leader — barely.

Livonia Aday, last year's playoff champ, moved back into first place over the weekend by whipping Westland Federation in a double-header at Ford Field, 7-0 and 5-1.

Aday (17-4), managed by Ron Hellier, is a half-game up on Redford Little Caesars (17-5) and one game ahead of Walter's Appliance (16-5), which has held the lead most of the season.

In the first game, right-hander Rick Rozman tossed a four-hitter, besting Westland starter Mark Perdue.

Aday broke the game open in the fourth inning, scoring four runs. Mike Johnson keyed the surge with an two-run double.

Dave Austin and Bill Ulle added two hits and one RBI each for the winners.

In the second game, pitcher Todd Krumm picked up his fifth victory of the year, fanning 10 and allowing just four hits.

Austin, Deron White and Doug Kaiser each collected two hits. White also drove in two runs.

ELECTRONIC DATA SYSTEMS■

"Thank you, EDS, for recognizing something we've known for some time: the future of Michigan and the future of advanced manufacturing are one and the same."
James J. Blanchard, Governor.

■ EDS is already a world-renowned leader in business data processing and telecommunications technology. Its investment in Michigan is further proof of our states future in advanced manufacturing. With EDS in Michigan, we're attracting more and more businesses involved with advanced manufacturing technologies. And we're proving we're perfect for the job.

■ EDS has already influenced Michigan's economic growth by creating 8,000 new jobs with several thousand more expected within the year. This means almost $1 billion to our economy.

■ Both EDS and Michigan recognize that in today's economic comeback, a partnership between business and state government is essential. We're already experiencing the benefits of this cooperation.

■ Working in tandem with the University of Michigan to form the Center for Machine Intelligence, EDS is spearheading new manufacturing technologies that will generate an ever increasing number of high-tech firms throughout the entire state.

■ Once again, Michigan's manufacturing expertise is helping us break down the barriers of a new manufacturing frontier. We're proud of the role we're playing.

Welcome to Michigan, EDS.
We're partners well into the future.

Concert was some party

The Rovers, on the second half of the program, presented a varied show that ranged from group renditions of its hit songs to solos and even an individual recitation. The tunes went from favorite "The Unicorn" to its most recent biggie, "Wasn't That a Party." The blast-off version of "Party" was offered as final encore and preceded the fireworks in the sky over Meadow Brook, still celebrating the Fourth of July.

The audience was asked to join in on many of the Rovers' songs. Instead of being a tedious thing where everybody has to learn a lot of lyrics, the participation was kept lively, with just a few key phrases or bits of the chorus required from the crowd.

ONCE CALLED the Irish Rovers, the group sang some of the songs that emphasize its heritage of the Emerald Isle. The Irish spirit is kept alive also in the speaking voice of the Rovers spokesman, Will Millar, who looks like a tall leprechaun and talks with a brogue.

He said this is "our 20th year together with the same group." And he praised the Meadow Brook audience, calling it always one of the group's best.

For those in the pavilion to those up on the hill, whom he urged to share in the singing despite suffering from "soggy arses" after an earlier rainfall, the Rovers made it a successful night.

On the first half of the concert, the Kingston Trio combined interludes of jokes with selections of its popular hits.

"(Hang Down Your Head), Tom Dooley," which sold six million copies for the group back in 1959, and "It Takes a Worried Man (to Sing a Worried Song)" were some of the tunes that brought responses of recognition from the audience.

The Kingston Trio's gray-haired lead singer, Bob Shane, is the only original member of the group. One of the newest members, however, is only the seventh member of the group in 28 years.

Jeffrey Bruce (left) stars in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," opening Wednesday at the Birmingham Theatre. Bob Gibson plays Friday, July 19, at the Raven in Northville.

Tom Panzenhagen

"The Year of Living Dangerously" (1983), 8 p.m. Saturday (and 1 Monday night) on Ch. 50. Originally 115 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

President Reagan recently saw "Rambo: First Blood Part II" and said he now knows how he'll respond to the next hostage crisis. Well, if Reagan's serious, he can pick up a few more foreign policy pointers from movies this week.

"The Year of Living Dangerously," set in 1965 Indonesia, is about the days preceding the fall of President Sukarno. It vividly depicts third-world political passions as perceived from a Western point of view, and it creates a great mood of tension and menace as we follow an Australian reporter who's covering the story. But the film, directed by Peter Weir, is all atmosphere and little action, stopping just where a film like "The Killing Fields" begins. It's never really fair to criticize a movie for what it is not. But if "The Year of Living Dangerously" covered a bit more ground, it would have been a lot more interesting. Mel Gibson, Sigourney Weaver and Linda Hunt star.

Rating: $2.95.

"Mad Max" (1979), 8 p.m. Monday on Ch. 50. Originally 93 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

"Mad Max" is what the planet may be like after Reagan responds to the next hostage crisis a la "Rambo." It's the first of two "Mad Max" cult epics. (A third film in the series, co-starring Tina Turner, is soon to be released.) "Mad Max" — about life after the bomb — has all the plot and character development of a bad rock video and is not nearly so good as its first sequel, "The Road Warrior." In fact, it was only after the success of the "The Road Warrior" that "Mad Max" resurfaced. And by then this heavily Australian-accented film had been dubbed by American-sounding actors. Mel Gibson stars.

Rating: $2.50.

"Nighthawks" (1981), 8 p.m. Monday on Ch. 7. Originally 99 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

If Reagan liked "Rambo," he ought to love "Nighthawks," which stars Rambo himself, Sylvester Stallone. It's even about a hostage crisis and the daring rescue efforts of New York's finest. The action and tension are non-stop and the menace ever-present, thanks to a bravura acting performance by Rutger Hauer, who makes Shiite terrorists look like social directors. The ending is quite implausible and unforgettable. Billy Dee Williams, Nigel Davenport, Lindsay Wagner and Persis Khambatta co-star.

Rating: $3.15.

Symphony programs conclude with a bang

By Avigdor Zaromp
special writer

The attendance at the Meadow Brook Music Festival hit a high last week, following its low point the week before. Part of the reason could be attributed to the July 4 holiday and the fireworks at the end of both programs.

Another factor could be in the guest artists and some of the selections on the program.

Maestro Sixten Ehrling, who was music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra from 1963 to 1973, is considered by many to be a controversial figure. Whatever one's feeling about him may be, he isn't to be ignored.

Pianist Andre Watts has his sizeable share of fans. The major work that he performed on both programs — Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto — is, of course, a pillar of the piano concerto repertoire.

This was the only work the Thursday and Sunday programs had in common, but it overshadowed everything else.

ON THURSDAY'S program, the Beethoven concerto was preceded by a Beethoven overture — the Leonore No. 3. The off-stage trumpet sounded more remote than ever, which could account for the fact that principal trumpet, Raymon Parcells was a little tardy in his second solo entrance.

But he retained his high standard in all other respects. On Sunday's program, the opening overture was Wagner's "Rienzi," which was performed with full-bodied sound.

The major attraction, while it had its rewarding moments, proved to be a letdown in some respects. The first movement was played at a slow tempo, which tended to be sluggish on occasion.

While savoring the flavor of some phrases is desirable, others require drama and tension which are best achieved through some acceleration. Instead, the approach to this movement was mostly passive.

While the middle movement was appropriately expressive, one could sense that Watts tended to feel awkward without the presence of lavish technique. He seemed to come to life with the demands of the final movement.

The second portion of the programs consisted of works that are seldom performed.

THE THURSDAY program featured American composers in its second half — the American Festival Overture by William Schuman and the Symphony No. 2 by Howard Hanson. In the corresponding part on Sunday was the Symphony No. 7 by Prokofiev.

Both the Hanson and Prokofiev symphonies are Romantic in style. In the case of Prokofiev, this last symphony of his is more tonal than some of his previous ones, especially his familiar fifth.

While the winner in the political and international arena has yet to be determined, it seems clear that the Russians have won in the field of music, and this was manifested again in these programs.

While Prokofiev's seventh symphony isn't as powerful as some of the others, possibly due to the Stalinist repression at the time, it is more refined than the Hanson symphony. The performance of the Prokofiev symphony was on the reserved side.

Even if everything else had failed, which was definitely not the case here, there was one item that assured a great interest on the part of the audience — the colorful display of fireworks, to the sound of popular tunes. It is hoped that all the readers had a happy Fourth of July.

Another Kelly's

Mike Kelly's opened to the public at Fairlane in Dearborn. Described as the residential and shopping complex's 26th and largest restaurant, Kelly's is in a wooded section near Parklane Towers. It seats up to 650 diners and offers a menu of lobster, shrimp, clams, oysters, fresh fish and beef. Mike Kelly's Landing, under the same ownership, opened in Livonia in May.

Fresh fish

"A Summer of Fresh Fish" continues at Charley's Crab in Troy, with a different fish featured each week during the height of the fishing season. Through Sunday, it's sauteed dover sole. Other fish to be highlighted are baby silver salmon, July 15-21; Norwegian salmon, July 22-28; swordfish, July 29 to Aug. 4; red snapper, Aug. 5-11; whitefish, Aug. 12-18, and blue marlin, Aug. 19-25.

New touches

Under its new manager, Craig Cassady, the Pike Street Company restaurant in Pontiac is taking on a new look. Plans are to formalize the present service, in keeping with the new menu, which is more gourmet in concept. Linen tablecloths and new uniforms for the staff have been added. Cassady's tavern, with a new tavern menu, is being introduced, and there's also a new second floor banquet facility.

● LUNCHEON MENU

Chef Milos Cihelka, certified master chef, has introduced a new luncheon menu at the Golden Mushroom in Southfield. Main courses range from Grilled Northern Michigan Rainbow Trout at $7.50 to Fresh River Sole Fillet Saute Meuniere at $14.50. Emince of Veal Gypsy Style is $7.75. Medallions of Beef Tenderloin, $9.75. Light courses and sandwiches also are available.

● MEXICAN FIESTA

A dinner featuring La Cocina Mexicana will be held at 7 p.m. Mondays-Tuesdays, July 22-23, at the Lark in West Bloomfield. Chef Brian Plycyn, whose mother is Mexican, promises an authentic Mexican dinner.

Craft store has hand-made quality

By Mary Klemic
staff writer

"Y-Not Country Crafts" may sound like a question, but it's meant to be an answer.

That's the name of a store at 18782 Middlebelt, in the Middlebelt Plaza just south of Seven Mile Road in Livonia. The business, which opened less than three weeks ago, offers handmade, country-style merchandise for people who have wondered where to find that type of personal gift.

"There aren't too many other stores like this, where you could come in and get something that's handmade and quality," said Belleville resident Mindy Reed, the owner.

"Needlepoint and plastic canvas stuff doesn't make it."

WHY COUNTRY crafts? Because that's what people seem to want these days, Reed says.

"It's something that has meaning," she said. "(Customers) come in and say, 'This is what I've been looking for.'"

Around 120 local crafters, from Livonia, Westland, Farmington, Southfield, Romulus and other communities, made the items that are sold in the store. Reed scouts for craftspersons and artisans from craft fairs and through other artists.

"We're concentrating on quality," she said. "We have to jury an item before we take it in the store. Our clientele and guilded crafters decide if it is suitable."

Y-NOT COUNTRY Crafts features primitive art, folk art and reproductions in a variety of textures — cloth, weaving and wood, for example. Reed has the craftspersons make a variety of items, but special orders can be arranged.

"It's nice to get a handmade gift," Reed ~~said.~~ "With a handmade thing, every one is different."

The merchandise ranges in price from 15 cents (for a sticker) to $650 (for a wooden carousel horse).

Among the treasures found in the store are clowns, dolls, jewelry, children's clothes, mugs, napkin holders, kitchen cannister sets, baskets, teddy bears, trunks and sewing chests. Grapevine wreaths are the most popular sellers right now, according to Reed.

Gift cards and wrapping paper also are available.

Reed hopes to have demonstrations in the store, at which the public can question an artist and watch how he makes a particular item.

"People can really see that it is handmade, and maybe appreciate it more," she explained.

Toys, such as this colorful clown, are one of the attractions of Livonia's new Y-Not Country Crafts store.

Miner's Falls in Munising appears misty and dreamlike in this Monte Nagler photograph. The secret — a six-second time exposure on a steady tripod.

Blur may heighten photo's impact

Long shutter speeds can produce striking photographs of things in motion and give you visual effects not obtainable with faster shutter speeds.

Shooting a waterfall, for example, at a fast speed to "freeze" the water in mid air is fine. But imagine the dramatic effect you can achieve by using a very slow shutter speed. The water will appear a blur, with an almost misty, dreamy mood captured on your film.

Pictures using slow shutter speeds are easy to obtain. You'll need a sturdy tripod and cable release to do the job. Compose, focus and adjust to the smallest aperture the lens will allow so that the meter will call for as long a shutter speed as possible.

Water will begin to show the effects of motion at speeds of one-half second, although even slower shutter speeds are more desireable.

If your meter indicates too fast a shutter speed, try a slower ASA film or attach a polarizer or neutral density filter to the front of the lens.

The density of these filters will reduce the amount of light reaching the film, necessitating a much slower speed to attain correct exposure. Most likely, you'll have to set your shutter speed dial on "B" where the shutter remains open as long as you depress the cable release.

BECAUSE your camera's meter may not function in the "B" setting, just determine an exposure combination with a wide aperature and extrapolate to the required shutter speed at the small lens opening.

Add some extra time for reciprocity failure (the inability of film to respond to low levels of light), and a perfect exposure will be yours.

How much extra exposure for reciprocity? Just double the predetermined shutter speed.

Don't forget other exciting picture possibilities that will put motion in your photographs. Automobile headlights and tailights make fascinating patterns at night when your camera is left on "bulb."

Just use a medium lens opening and you'll get proper exposure.

Even try removing your camera from your tripod and hand-hold it during a long exposure to deliberately add motion to your picture. The results will surprise you.

You have probably wondered as I have, "why were June bugs created?" I mean they are so dumb. Mosquitoes . . . now those are smart bugs. They will silently land on your neck, drill a little hole, steal some blood and then as a testimony to their cleverness they'll leave a little red calling card just to remind you of their recent visit. Even is you feel one land on your neck, it will dart and zing safely away leaving you, ~~the victim, slapping at your own neck~~ and head.

Then here comes a dumb June bug. It sounds like a B52 airplane and you better duck cuz the dummy is going to run straight into your face. I always take spiders and bugs carefully out of the house because I hate to kill them, but June bugs, that's another story.

I don't mind telling you I'm so frightened of an airborne June bug, that I run in the other direction. When I was younger, I was taking a date home for the evening and as we walked up to her house a June bug made a kamakazee dive straight at my face. When I ducked to get out of the way, I hit my chin on top of the gate, that I was opening for my date. I'm sure she was impressed as I bit through both sides of my lip and bruised my chin. I am not sure, but I think June bugs were created to run into your screen doors at night and then lay upside down on your porch until you step outside barefoot and accidently crunch them.

IN EVERY creation (except June ~~bugs) I see a beauty or at least a functional~~ beauty. I both wonder and marvel at certain qualities or characteristics in every living creature. As an example there are many creatures of unquestionable beauty. For instance, look how vivid the colors are on the dusty wings of a butterfly, or one is almost hesitant to accurately portray the brilliant colors of some exotic birds.

Who could improve the patterns or colorations on tropical fish? Then there is what I call functional beauty; like the irridescent plate-like armor of a dragon fly, whose pulsating wings allow him to halt stationary as we, perhaps, each pause to consider the other.

The skin of a walrus is a maze of wrinkles and folds, all accenting it's position and it is no less beautiful then the patterns of skin orbiting the nostril of a water buffalo's snout. A horse is purely a study in grace and strength, all functional and likewise beautiful. Certainly any member of the wild cat family almost universally evokes feelings of awesome strength and beauty. But the vulture who cleans up after the lions kill is also a creature of functional beauty. The head and neck of a vulture is just bare skin because often they must place their heads deep into a carcass to retrieve a tender morsal. "Gross" you are thinking? "Ugly," maybe is your first thought? But if you draw, paint or sketch a vulture you too may be converted to the attitude that enthuses me daily, which is: "In all things created there is a certain beauty that challenges me for representation. Whether it is indeed beautiful or beautiful in it's function, I will greatly benefit in the attempt to render it and when rendered I will have learned much from it ~~and perhaps forever appreciate~~ it."

So in rendering we learn to look and in looking we study the subject. Color, texture, shape and inner shapes nothing can be drawn by the hand that is not first seen by the eye and understood by the mind. Here again a definition seems to say it all. To understand; to achieve the grasp of the nature or significance of something."

So as we understand we render and therefore appreciate.

BECAUSE GOOD art requires understanding, it is a particular joy for me to teach anatomy and life drawing to my students. Of all creations nothing is more beautiful than the human body. What a challenge it is to make a two dimensional image capture the spirit, life and physical characteristics of a human being. With the proper understanding there are no "ugly" people just as there are no ugly animals. Thin, fat, tall, short, old, young, male or female all people are fascinating and likewise challenging. It is also refreshing to leave the shallow commercial approach that advertising has towards the human body and enter the mental framework of the artist.

Who looks more at muscle, bone, proportion and the play of light across the body. The artist is fascinated by the structure and balance of the human form. In any position, from any angle the subtle curve and recurve of the spine, the tip of the hips and shoulders, the length and position of the legs, the business of the hands and feet etc. All of which offers an unending challenge for representation.

So accept the challenge that every living creature offers and you too will find yourself mentally booking rendering dates with a flamingo, butterfly or just about anything . . . yes, I guess, maybe even a June bug.

Autoworld needs focus

Hugh Gallagher

Flint's Autoworld has been more of an Edsel than a Mustang. Like the infamous Ford car, Autoworld has had trouble finding its market.

After a recent family trip, I can understand why. Autoworld doesn't make any sense. It doesn't fit any entertainment or educational need.

Autoworld is meant to be an entertainment complex in honor of the automobile. It's a good idea poorly executed.

THE COMPLEX has a car collection that is anemic beside the collection at the Henry Ford Museum. In addition to having many more cars, the Ford Museum also has airplanes, bicycles, trains and streetcars, not to mention a million household gadgets and every major invention from the 1700s to the 1950s. An adult or older child seeking to learn something about the history of the automobile, or American technology, would learn considerably more at the Museum. At the adjacent Greenfield Village, they would also see antique vehicles in operation, something not available at Autoworld.

But the Autoword people insist that their complex is not a museum, but an entertainment complex. A section called "Getting There" travels a circular path, relating the impact of the car on American culture, everything from unionism to drive-ins. Some of this is exceptionally good, especially a kitchen vignette using a projection system that brings the face of a blue-collar autoworker vividly to life. Also good is a mock drive-in presenation of, what else, Steve McQueen in "The Blob."

But the current Detroit Institute of Art "Automobile and Culture — Detroit Style" exhibits are more provocative and illuminating. The first part of that exhibit is a tremendous accumulation of artists' perceptions of the influence of the car on American life, including some true master works. The Edward Hopper paintings alone offer more than all that Autoworld has to tell us. The second part of the exhibit is a very informative examination of auto styling and it is placed appropriately under Diego Rivera's bold and subversive mural.

SO HOW does Autoworld work as an amusement park? The management claims Autoworld is not an amusement park and they are right. The carousel and ferris wheel are similar to those found at any church or community carnival. The centerpieces for Autoworld are three exhibits — an IMAX film "Speed" and two animatronic ride throughs, "The Humorous History of Automobility" and "The Great Race." The film is good, though the IMAX films are becoming repetitive in their use of roller coasters and swooping planes. The two ride throughs are amusing, especially for younger children, but require long waits for short trips.

Autoworld also has video games (how original), auto related video games testing reaction and design ability (better), a giant engine and the kind of street performers and bands that you see at other summer fairs (they were good).

The result is a mildly entertaining experience that is duplicated or surpassed at other places. The ambiance of Autoworld is that of a closed shopping center, complete with potted plants and a fake river. On this particular day, Autoworld was busy and every place had lines, not always well managed.

It's hard to say what the Autoworld management could do to put more zip into the product. Certainly it is possible to devise auto related thrill rides, rides that duplicate the speed but not the danger of auto racing. Stronger exhibits on racing and maybe sponsorship of races would also help. Perhaps an IMAX film devoted exclusively to racing could be produced. Working antique cars in which visitors could ride would be another improvement. More auto-related computer and video games and hands on mechanical exhibits would be fun. Longer rides through the animated environments would be better, as would more animated environments where visitors could walk — such as life size period gas stations, drive-in burger joints etc.

Autoworld is a complex that isn't sure what it wants to be and ends up being less than anyone anticipates.
