The Canton Connection

EXTRA MILER: Ruth MacDonald and Louis Pervine were all smiles at the last Plymouth-Canton Board of Education meeting. The Fiegel Elemegtary School maintenance staffers were honored with the district's Extra Miler award — the first time the honor has gone to two people at the same time.

Their nomination letter was signed by 32 people.

In bestowing the Extra Miler to Pervine, Trustee Roland Thomas said the 20-year employee had been found by co-workers "deep in the long-neglected vents" at Fiegel during a massive spruce-up campaign at the school. Both Pervine and MacDonald, a "knowledgeable, dependable member of the maintenance staff," are "known for their courtesy to the public and have done an outstanding job in helping Fiegel develop a new look," Thomas said.

McDonald has been at Fiegel for 19 years while Pervine has worked at West, Central and Fiegel.

MORE SCUFFLES: A secretary from the clerk's office has been transferred to the supervisor's office for eight hours weekly to work on agenda preparation. The action is part of a continuing battle about which elected official will prepare board agendas and backup material.

The issue will be addressed in a lawsuit filed by Clerk Linda Chuhran charging the trustees with interfering with her "state-mandated responsibilities." Also, two secretaries in the clerk's office signed statements saying Chuhran told them not to discuss the preparation of the agenda with Supervisor James Poole's staff.

VFW LEADERS: Canton Veterans of Foreign War Post 6967 officially was instituted and its officers installed recently. Charter memberships will be available through Feb. 16, and may be obtained by calling Quartermaster John Spencer at 397-1000. The post meets at 8 p.m. the first Monday of each month at Canton Police Station, 1120 S. Canton Center Road between Cherry Hill and Michigan Avenue.

Canton VFW is looking for a qualified veteran for whom to name its post. The veteran must have been a member of the U.S. Armed Forces and must have died in combat or died as a result of injuries received in combat. If you wish to nominate someone for this honor call Spencer at 397-1000.

FEATURED VOICES: Tobin A. Hissong of Canton will be the featured tenor and Don Williams of Canton will appear when the Michigan Lyric Opera returns to the stage for its second season.

Hissong and Williams will be in Gibert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore" when it appears in the Marquis Theatre at 135 E. Main, Northville, at 8 p.m. this Saturday, and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Feb. 13, 14 and 2:30 p.m. on Sundays, Feb. 8, 15. Tickets are $10.

Williams earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan. His most recent musical comedy role was the father in "Bye, Bye Birdie." He is making his debut with the Michgian Lyric Opera as the carpenter's mate. his otehr Gilbert and Sullivan experience includes roles in "Trial by Jury" and "The Mikado."

Hissong has been involved with several community theater groups over the past 10 years, including the Plymouth Theatre Guild and Spotlight Players of Wayne-Westland.

Suspect's statements questioned

By Diane Gale

Tapes describing sexual encounters between two 16-year-old suspects and a 13-year-old Canton girl — who wrote in her diary before her death that she thought she was pregnant — were played in court Wednesday.

Public defender Edward Schwartz asked Washtenaw County Juvenile Judge Judith Wood to rule inadmissible statements given by his client, one of the suspects — most of which were taped by Washtenaw County deputies.

The statements were made while the boy thought he was under arrest, Schwartz maintains. Both youths are charged with open murder and conspiracy.

Schwartz's client told police Mary Anne Hulbert said she wanted to see him and the other suspect because she thought she was pregnant.

"We were yelling at her and said she was dumb because she wanted to take off and get married," he said on tape. A detective asked to whom she wanted to get married and the boy named a third youth.

The suspect said he was Hulbert's boyfriend about six months ago. Initially the girl told the other 16-year-old suspect he was the father, a detective testified. Hulbert's diary said she had sex with that boy Dec. 8.

SCHWARTZ'S CLIENT told police he and the other suspect picked Hulbert up Dec. 30 near her home. After the two suspects and Hulbert talked, she told them the father was the third boy.

The youth told police he and the other suspect dropped Hulbert off Dec. 30 near the third youth's house and that was the last time he'd seen her.

Police found her body — shot seven times in the torso — Jan. 8 in a Washtenaw County field. Medical examiners determined she died sometime between Dec. 30 and New Year's Day.

Hulbert, who was a student at Westland's Adlai Stevenson Junior High School, was not pregnant when she died, according to testimony given by Bernard Naylor, a University of Michigan pathologist who conducted the autopsy.

Schwartz said his client believed he was under arrest when the deputies took his statements. However three deputies testified the boy was initially questioned as a witness who knew Hulbert and could shed light on the case.

They said the boy freely helped in the investigation and could leave at any time during the questioning.

SCHWARTZ MAINTAINS that under the Michigan Juvenile Code when minors are arrested they immediately have to be taken to a juvenile detention center. Furthermore, the boy was under arrest without probable cause, which also made the statements inadmissible, he said. Since the boy believed he was under arrest the rules stand, he argued.

Lloyd Stamper, a deputy who questioned Schwartz's client, was suspended for an "improper action" involving the case. The tapes revealed that while the youth was being questioned, Stamper told him he and the other youth were the "two hottest suspects" in the case.

"Detective Stamper told my client there was no way he could go home before he was cleared," Schwartz said.

The deputies testified the boy was arrested almost seven hours after the questioning began, during which time a polygraph test was administered.

Frank Combs, Washtenaw sheriff's deputy who administered the polygraph test, said: "He appeared he didn't have a care in the world. He told me he wanted to take the test and he wanted to get on with it."

Elizabeth Pollard, assistant prosecuting attorney, admitted documents signed by the youth and his legal guardian (his grandmother) that they understood he did not have to answer questions.

THE HEARING — to determine if there is enough evidence to charge the youths — was held Monday. Wednesday's "Walker hearing" was held to determine the admissibility of Schwartz's client's statements. The hearing will continue Monday.

A similiar hearing will be held for the second youth once the boy's father, currently in an Ohio prison, is reached.

Youth crime impels judge to open court

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Seldom are court proceedings involving juveniles open to the public. However a hearing involving two 16-year-old Ypsilanti Township youths charged in the December death of a Canton teenager is.

The bullet-riddled body of Mary Anne Hulbert, 13, was found Jan. 7 in a rural area near Ford and Berry roads in Superior Township.

The boys are being charged with open murder and conspiracy.

WASHTENAW COUNTY Probate Judge Judith James Wood is admitting to her courtroom reporters who agree not to use the names of the suspects or key witnesses.

Wood — Washtenaw County's youngest, and only, female judge — says probate court proceedings should be open unless doing so would be injurious to the child.

"The reason I opened the courtroom in this case, and why I would like to open it in the future, is that there is a very serious juvenile crime problem that does not get any publicity.

"People should know how serious it is. These kids are not taking candy bars from Meijer's."

They're charged with murder and attempt to commit murder.

Drew Rentz, commander of the Canton VFW Post, selects "volunteers" for various committees.

Veteran volunteer takes command of local VFW

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Drew Rentz was in Vietnam when he was told his orders said he should be in the States.

"It's not every day you get to spend six months in Vietnam and find out you're supposed to be somewhere else," said Rentz, a Canton resident.

Actually, there was a paperwork lag and Rentz's correct orders hadn't caught up with him. Rentz really was supposed to be in Vietnam.

A sergeant, who decided to play the prank, told the young lieutenant he was going to be court martialed. Seeing Rentz's expression, the sergeant had a good laugh.

Rentz smiles under a full beard and adds: "It really was funny."

IT'S BEEN 20 years since the sergeant's prank and Rentz still tells the story with colorful detail in his New York accent.

Since being named commander of the Canton VFW post Rentz, 42, has a lot of chances to recall his Vietnam days.

"Someone volunteered my name for commander, and I didn't decline."

At 8 p.m. the first Monday of each month the group meets at its temporary post in Canton Township Hall on Canton Center Road.

The post was started a few months ago and has 24 members.

The group's goals are to build membership and to name the post — ideally in honor of a Canton resident who died serving in a war. (Anyone who would like to submit a name is asked to call John Spencer, 397-3000, at Canton Township Hall.)

RENTZ REALIZES taking the helm will be a big responsibility but the Ford Motor Co. executive doesn't look at community service and being in charge as a strain.

Then again, he's got more experience in community activity than most of us.

In Vietnam he helped raise money for an orphanage not far from his unit — the 36th Signal Batallion in Long Bien north of Saigon. Rentz ran a mess hall, motor pool and batallion property book. He left the service as a captain.

In civilian life Rentz keeps a similarly busy schedule. He works on religious courses at St. John Neumann Catholic Church in Canton and bowls with Plymouth Elks Ldoge 1780.

Rentz, who has three sons, also is involved in Little League football, wrestling and has served as president of the Canton Jaycees.

"It really doesn't take all that much time," he said.

Rentz tells about watching peoples' expressions when he introduces his wife, Nancy, then himself (Drew) — making a play on words referring to the female literary sleuth. He downplays his own commitments, smiles wide and brags about Nancy's community involvement.

"Some people, like my wife, have a lot of energy and a joy for living. They don't know when to stop."

It must run in the family.

District exists without students

By M.B. Dillon

"Ripley's Believe It or Not" would love this one.

This school district has no schools. It has no administrators, no teachers — and no students for that matter.

It's the Plymouth-Northville School District, and it exists only on paper.

Say what?

This is a true story, honest. The district lies along a crook in Napier Road south of Five Mile and the Brae-Burn Golf Club. It encompasses about six houses.

Its reason for being is bond indebtedness.

FOR YEARS, the district's residents sent their children, illegally, to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. Illegally because these folks actually lived in the Northville Public School District, says John Hoben, superintendent of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Boundaries are such that Napier Road curves outside the Plymouth-Canton district and then back in close to Brae-Burn.

The families, residing on the west side of Napier, were found out in about 1972, Hoben said.

"I'm surprised it was never uncovered before. Obviously, those people never voted.

"What brought it to light was someone sold a home, and when the new resident went to vote at Farrand School, there were no voting

Paul Bradford, 14, died of an apparent cardiac arrest after a scuffle with another student at Central Middle School in Plymouth Tuesday.

"There was a shoving match but nothing unusual," said Richard Myers, Plymouth police chief. "It was the way schoolboy arguments are. It was quickly broken up by one of the teachers. There was nothing to make us believe there were any unusual blows."

Paul, an eighth grader, collapsed shortly after the incident, which took place in a classroom at about 10:45 a.m. Paul was taken to St. Mary Hospital in Livonia about 11:20 a.m. and was pronounced dead "shortly after," a hospital spokeswoman said.

The Canton resident was born with a heart problem and had open heart surgery when he was 8 years old. He had an artificial heart valve and last visited the doctor Jan. 29. Paul seemed to be doing well at that time,

Family site to house condominium project

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Ralph Lorenz, one of the best-known entrepreneurs in the community, plans to build 19 condominiums in Plymouth Township on land where he raised his family.

He also has broken ground for a 2,600-square-foot office annex off Deer Street behind the Mayflower Motor Inn in the city of Plymouth.

Lorenz, 76, who's spent a lifetime here, shows no signs of resting on his laurels.

"What are you going to do?" he said. "I have to have something to do. How do you slow down? You can't. I feel like 36."

Lorenz and his son, Rick, who recently arrived from Colorado with his family, are partners in the condominium venture.

Individual units of up to 2,275 square feet are expected to sell for about $250,000.

"THESE WOULD probably be the most luxurious in the area so far," said David Schaff, architect for the project.

The 10-acre site is on the south side of Ann Arbor Trail between McClumpha and Canton Center roads.

The Lorenzs cleared one big hurdle last week when the township board approved their request for a cluster housing option.

That option allows a developer more leeway in preparing a site plan to take advantage of unique land situations. It doesn't allow for more dense construction than is already permitted.

The parcel has a flood plain of just over 2½ acres at the southern end through which passes a branch of Tonquish Creek.

Without the cluster option, Schaff said, only about 14 lots could be developed due to the topography and the project would become economically infeasible.

Construction is expected to start in late April, Schaff said. Some units could be ready for occupancy this year.

blend in nicely with nearby subdivisions, Schaff said.

"IT WILL be a first-class development," Lorenz said. "We already have quite a few requests. We hope to make it unique. It's a nice piece of property."

Rick Lorenz said he has no special feelings about developing his old stomping grounds.

The office building on Deer will house the state racing commissioner, which currently leases space under the Mayflower Meeting House.

E.F. Hutton, another tenant under the meeting house, will expand and take over space currently leased by the racing commission when the new building is completed.

Construction is expected to begin in May. Lorenz said he doesn't expect parking problems to arise for office workers in the area when the building is finished.

Canton child center to open

Canton will be the site of Gerber Children's Centers Inc. 115th care and learning facility for children ages 12 months to 11 years.

A grand opening celebration will take place at the site, 3101 Lilley south of Ford Road, noon to 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 15.

The celebration will feature clowns, balloons, face painting, refreshments and other special activities for children. Guided tours will be available and prizes given away to adults.

This is Gerber's fifth care and learning center in the metro Detroit area.

The Canton center was constructed according to Gerber's specifications with a capacity of 142 children. It features large well-lit, quiet areas, child-size fixtures and a large central area.

Gerber entered the child care field 15 years ago. In recent years there's been a lot of growth in response to the needs of child care.

Learning programs at Gerber centers are structured to meet the individual developmental needs of children through age 10. Children are grouped into classes based on their ages and developmental level.

Group eyes teen loitering

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A report on how to improve relations this summer among youth, business people, residents and police in the city of Plymouth is expected next month from a committee formed to examine the issue.

The committee, strictly advisory, consists of people from all sides of a controversy centering on young people loitering and trespassing in the downtown area.

"The overall goal is to basically look at the overall situation and recommend possible courses of action in 1987," said Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager.

"We felt it was important we get all concerned groups together, take a look at the situation, and make some kind of report."

"THIS ISN'T a real formalized kind of thing. It's not an officially appointed board from the city commission level. It's an informal meeting of concerned persons," he said.

Sincock said he initiated the committee and invited input from at least a dozen residents and young people who he believed might want to participate.

"The response has been somewhat discouraging but not disheartening, he said. Only a handful have followed through.

"It's encouraging that there are students and young people who want to get involved," he said.

"We can say we looked at the situation. Whether the city takes action or not, that's another whole issue. This is an advisory thing.

"It's kind of the old theory — two heads are better than one," Sincock said.

Young people congregating downtown and a cruise-in, which gridlocked traffic on Main Street, caused ill feelings last summer among some residents, business owners and youth.

DURING THE period May 1 through Sept. 1, directly attributed to the Main Street Program, police issued:

- 694 written warnings for loitering or trespassing.
- 666 civil infractions including 210 for traffic control device violations and 157 for speeding.
- 222 misdemeanor tickets, most for driver license, plate or registration violations.
- 195 appearance tickets, most for disorderly conduct or loitering.

At the direction of the committee, Sincock has met with a couple of hundred students at both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem high schools to discuss the situation.

Students, according to written summaries of those sessions provided by Sincock, cited a lack of things to do and a place to "hang out." Some cited a lack of consistency in law enforcement.

Others suggested that adults were too uptight over perceived threats from young people. Refuse receptacles placed along Main Street might also rectify the litter problem, they said.

The committee has met twice. It is expected to meet at least one more time. A report may be issued in 30 to 45 days, Sincock said.

"We don't have the answer for everything. Hopefully, we'll come up with at least a couple of answers to make things a little better."

Adult education comes under attack

Schools deny charge of inflated figures

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Local educators have labeled charges that school districts are profiting from inflated attendance figures in adult education programs as misleading and irresponsible.

School officials from western Wayne County say they are concerned that recent publicity may result in wrong perceptions by the public and lead to cuts in state aid to school districts.

Budget cuts, they agree, would be disastrous.

Superintendent Dennis O'Neill of Wayne-Westland schools, one local district accused in recent years with profiting said, "We have a tough time making ends meet with current funding."

Kenneth Erickson, superintendent of Redford Union Public Schools, another district singled out for criticism of its adult ed program by state officials, said the district "hustles" now to balance annual budgets.

"We come very close to the break-even point each year, and we have yet to fully reinstate programs cut during the lean years in the 1970s."

These include such programs as music, art appreciation and physical education at the elementary level, and offering five rather than six classes each semester to junior high school students.

ROBERT BOLS, supervisor of the auditors for the state Department of Education, and Robert McKerr, former associate state school superintendent for finance, were quoted recently in a Detroit Free Press article, that charged many school districts with inflating attendance figures in adult ed programs to collect state money.

They also charged that districts then use these profits to finance other educational programs.

In an interview with the Observer, McKerr, now a senior researcher for Citizens Research Council of Michigan, stood by his comments. But, he said, they are based on audits from 1983-84, before new state regulations that are in place now had been implemented.

McKerr said he has not seen audit results since.

Bols, however, said he was misquoted. While he said 80 to 85 percent of all district audits result in altered figures, changes are usually minor and sometimes are in favor of the district.

The differences are usually caused by a difference in interpretation of regulations, he said.

THE PRACTICE of moving state funds from one budget item to another by district administrators is legal. There are no state regulations limiting the practice.

Districts receive state aid based upon FTE's, or the number of full-time equivalent students taking accredited courses. Adults are included in the FTE count, but on a different formula than that used for regular K-12 students.

State aid is paid to individual districts in six annual payments. A portion of the money is earmarked for specific use but that which is not enters the general budget. This money is budgeted according to need.

It costs less to provide courses for adults than it normally does to provide specialized classes for advanced students or other special education programs, and budgets reflect the difference, according to school officials.

The practice of moving funds in the general budget stems from the 1960s, according to Larry Masteller, director of community education for Plymouth-Canton schools.

At that time, he said, the state Department of Education adopted a policy entitling adults to a free education.

Masteller maintains school districts are much more accountable than Bols or McKerr implied. He also said adult ed is vulnerable to attack because it is not mandatory.

ERICKSON RESENTS other implications by Bols and McKerr as well.

According to him, Bols and McKerr imply that school districts with large adult education enrollments are cheaters and dishonest.

Erickson said Redford Union has one of the largest programs in the state for several reasons; it is a partnership program that also services South Redford and Livonia students, the district has devoted an empty school to the program and offers both day and night classes, and there is a large local population particularly suited to classes that increase employment skills.

A similar situation exists in Garden City, according to Superintendent Michael Wilmot. The district cooperates with Dearborn, Dearborn Heights and Northville. Garden City provides courses for adults in all four districts.

'To take one program and say it is profiting is entirely overlooking hte total picture of financing education. Schools are not in a profit-making posture.'
— Larry Masteller, director community education

The arrangement is called a consortium. A district that receives state aid provides adult ed for districts that are out-of-formula and receive no state aid.

The arrangement also guards against duplication of adult ed programs in any one area.

MASTELLER SAID when he prepares an annual budget for the Plymouth-Canton adult education program, he sits down with the district's budget director. Together they define the program for the next school year.

"As long as my program is being treated fairly, I am receiving my budget and am properly staffed and supplied, it is no concern of mine if I get more money than the next program.

"To take one program and say it is profiting is entirely overlooking the total picture of financing education. Schools are not in a profit-making posture," Masteller said.

Wilmot concurred. "It is distorted to isolate a portion of a school budget. Excess funds in one area simply offset costs in mandated programs."

The Clarenceville School District, which includes parts of Livonia, Farmington Hills and Redford Township, has 623 students in its adult ed program, including those from Farmington with whom Clarenceville has formed a consortium.

Clarenceville Superintendent Michael Shibler labeled Bols and McKerr's remarks "irresponsible. While some programs can be criticized, there are many more that are legitimate. Those that are run efficiently, might be hurt (by the criticism)."

Shibler said any extra money left over in the Clarenceville adult ed budget is put back into the program to upgrade it or used elsewhere.

"We unashamedly use the funds where they are needed," he said.

ONE PROGRAM that has been troubled in the past is Wayne-Westland, often enough to prompt O'Neill to ask, "Will this ever go away?"

O'Neill was not superintendent when the district was accused of inflating adult ed enrollment figures in 1983-84.

The district is currently repaying the state $665,000 in overcharges, including that for 150 registrations that district officials agreed were invalid, O'Neill said.

Of an additional 300 registrations challenged in court, O'Neill said, Wayne-Westland was ordered to repay on 150. The remaining 150 were deemed valid.

O'Neill said the overcharging occured because of "sloppy bookkeeping" that has since been corrected, and auditors who arbitrarily imposed state regulations that were not in place at the time of the incident.

At the time, the district offered courses to nursing homes residents, O'Neill said three or four of them died after classes began but records did not reflect the deaths.

As a result of the problems then, O'Neill said the district no longer offers classes in nursing homes without prior approval from the state.

A current investigation of the incident by the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office has been, according to other Wayne-Westland educators who asked not to be named, prompted by certain local citizens who 'want a pound of flesh. They want criminal charges filed against former directors of the program."

O'Neill said the incident "is history." In audits conducted by the Wayne County Intermediate School District since, Wayne-Westland has consistently received high marks, he said.

District lacks students records. It took a good citizen moving in to vote for us to discover it."

The district confessed to the state Department of Education and was told "the onus was on the district that had enrolled the illegal students," Hoben said. The state socked Plymouth-Canton schools with a $177,000 penalty for not charging tuition.

FOR HELP, school officials went to Gerald Dunn, executive director for the Metropolitan Association for Improved School Legislation.

"Jerry got a one-line change in the state aid act that pardoned us for that fine," recalled Hoben.

But that was just the first reel of befuddling red tape. The families didn't want to switch to Northville schools.

"They wanted to stay in Plymouth, so we had to go through the process of having the boundaries changed. That meant having to get approval from Oakland, Wayne and Washtenaw counties because "Northville is in Oakland and Washtenaw, and we're in Wayne and Washtenaw," said Hoben.

"It was a confusing mess at the time."

John Street, director of business and finance for Northville Public Schools, wouldn't disagree.

"When the district was part of Northville, bonds were sold based on the property within the school district. When we transferred to another school district, those taxpayers still remained responsible for the debt incurred up through that point."

To satisfy the bond indebtedness, the Plymouth-Northville paper school district was created in the early 1970s.

As of July 1, 1986, the debt still totalled $10.7 million.

How long will the school district without a school exist? Until the debt is retired in July 2003.

'Typical' teenager dies said his father, Gordon Bradford.

POLICE ARE waiting for a Wayne County Medical Examiner's report before deciding if action should be taken against the 15-year-old youth Paul fought.

But witnesses who saw the fight and were interviewed by police said there was nothing unusual, Meyers said.

"He enjoyed life for as long as he was here," his father said. "He lived a typical teenager's life.

"It's just one of those things that happen. It was his time. When he was born they said take him and enjoy him because there was nothing that they could do.

"And when he was 8 he had the open heart surgery."

Paul especially liked riding his scooter and bicycling, Bradford said.

A St. Mary Hospital spokeswoman said the family requested donations be made to the Ticker Club at Children's Hospital in Detroit.

Bradford is survived by his parents, Gordon and Kathleen, and a younger sister, who is in the first grade. Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Friday at Lambert-Vermeulen Funeral Home with burial at St. John Cemetery, Ypsilanti. Visitation will be 2-9 p.m. today at Lambert's.

Court opened

"IN THIS particular case there is a very serious offense. Also it's the first waiver hearing that has been requested in this county in 10 years.

"I am interested in educating the public as to how it is done." Waivers are filed in an attempt to have juveniles tried as adults.

Wood attributes Washtenaw County's "alarming increase in serious juvenile crime" in part to the availability of guns.

New court rules before the state Legislature would mandate that probate courtrooms be open unless the judge orders them closed, added Wood.

Research site in works

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Office and high tech research complexes — proposed for 94 acres on Haggerty north of Michigan Avenue in Canton — are expected to upgrade future developments in that area.

The project will be developed by Frankel Associates in Troy.

"Plans are still in the formulative stage right now," said Michael Prochaska, Frankel Associates vice-president of development. A site plan "or at least a conceptual plan" is expected to be given to the township within 60 days.

Township officials are excited about the plans because they believe it will be a catalyst for luring higher quality development near Michigan Avenue, which is concentrated with heavy industrial businesses and waste disposal sites.

PROCHASKA DECLINED to estimate the value of the project which will span 32 acres on the east side of Haggerty and 63 acres on the west side of the road. The land is conveniently located near the I-275 expressway.

"We're looking at the point of distribution and it's a very good site in those terms."

The east side of Haggerty is presently zoned office and the west side is zoned single-family. Construction on the site could begin as early as late summer.

Prochaska would not say whether he has talked about the project to potential tenants because "right now it's premature." Other developments Frankel owns include the Somerset Mall, Somerset Place Office complex as well as a number of industrial and research parks in Oakland County.

HE SAID the Canton project would be patterned after the acclaimed Oakland Technology Park, mainly in Auburn Hills with a small portion in Rochester Hills. Oak Tech is roughly 600 acres and will be anchored by the Chrysler Technology Center.

Prochaska said the Canton site won't be nearly as large as Oak Tech but the quality will be similar.

He said the project would include "low-intensity" industrial projects "with a very high quality kind of construction."

Much of Haggerty Road in Canton is unpaved and difficult to drive on. Prochaska said "some joint arrangement would have to be made" among the township, Wayne County and Frankel to pave an unspecified stretch of the road near the proposed project.

State of the State

Blanchard emphasizes youth and winning

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Vague. More detail.

That's how area state senators greeted early versions of Gov. James J. Blanchard's first State of the State message of his second term.

"Competitiveness" and "families" — two favorite Republican terms — stood out in the Democratic governor's outline message.

"WIN" WAS another favorite word of Blanchard, who won 61 percent of the vote last Nov. 6.

Categories in his message were labeled "Winning the Jobs of Tomorrow" (economics), "Preparing Our People to Win" (job training), "Winning the Fight for Safety"(crime) and "Winning by Caring" (welfare proposals) and so on.

Blanchard's top interest appeared to be youth. Major initiatives covered job training, tougher sentencing, a pre-school program, camps for problem juveniles, more school aid and a 20th-state department to deal with child and family problems.

And he saw Michigan's top challenge as "rapid global economic change."

The speech to a joint session of the Legislature Wednesday evening was more a list of promised benefits than a blueprint of how to achieve them. Lawmakers applauded, but their desire for more detail cut across party lines.

"THE WHOLE message has the flavor of what Republicans have been saying for years," said R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, beginning his 12th year in the state Senate.

"It sounds scarcely distinguishable from a moderate Republican philosophy," Geake said, stressing "sounds." "When we look at details, though, we may not see changes like eliminating the waiting week for unemployment compensation."

Geake, who chairs the Senate Appropriation subcommittee on social services, likes:

• Blancard's emphasis on such favorite Republican words as "family" and "competitiveness."

• The governor's willingness to "deal with product liability" and reducing costs of workers comp and unemployment comp.

• Blanchard's effort to reduce the general assistance welfare rolls, for able-bodied men, gradually. "I would cut them off for the six summer months. Now the governor is nudging them off gradually through tightened eligibility standards."

GEAKE DISLIKES:

• Blanchard's rosy optimism on reducing ADC welfare rolls. Blanchard is projecting an ADC caseload of 203,000 while the Senate Fiscal Agency is projecting 212,000. The governor is anticipating a drop of 12,000 general assistance caseloads from 105,000. "I don't think that's realistic." Thus, Geake sees little chance the state can increase welfare benefits by 3 percent due to a declining caseload as Blanchard proposes.

• Creation of a 20th state department to responsible for policies dealing with children and families. The departments of Mental Health, Social Services, Public Health, Education and Corrections already have such responsibilities, and Geake said a new department would be "disruptive" because "in our society there's no clear line between childhood and adulthood, no clear lines of responsibility."

SEN. WILLIAM Faust, D-Westland, was on vacation until Monday and couldn't comment.

Sen. George Hart, D-Dearborn, whose district includes Garden City, was in a Capitol corridor but was not ready to comment.

Speaking for the Black Caucus, state Rep. Alma G. Stallworth, D-Detroit, saw "isolated improvements for the black community" but "accelerated" levels of poverty and joblessness.

"DETAIL ON 'quality education' " will be awaited by Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, an educator in private life. "All the first statements are general," Faxon said, scanning an outline of the text.

2nd pay hike possible

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Department heads and non-union city employees in Plymouth who received a 3 percent pay hike Jan. 1 may get an additional raise later this year with adoption of the 1987-88 budget.

"Now, raises are given to non-union employees on a calendar-year basis because they took an 18-month freeze a few years back," said Carol Stone, purchasing/personnel director for the city.

The city commission has indicated it would consider making another adjustment during coming budget sessions to put all employees — including department heads who also took a freeze — back on a fiscal year basis, she said.

Firefighters, police officers and DPW workers represented by unions will receive negotiated pay increases July 1 at the start of the city's fiscal year.

WITH THE 3 percent pay hike, deputy department directors are now paid $15,894 to $20,639 per year. Secretaries and account clerks draw annual salaries of $13,923 to $17,811.

City manager Henry Graper's yearly base salary rose to $49,500 from $48,960 with the recent raise. Although seemingly less than 3 percent, part of his pay increase was diverted to a deferred compensation plan, Stone said.

The new base salaries of other department heads are:

- Kenneth West, city engineer, to $38,275 from $37,160.
- Ken Vogras, DPW director, to $37,251 from $36,166.
- Chuck Skene, recreation director, to $37,251 from $36,166.
- Gordon Limburg, city clerk/finance director, to $36,902 from $35,827.
- Richard Myers, police chief, to $36,230 from $35,175.
- Al Matthews, fire chief, to $35,477 from $34,444.
- Kenneth Way, city treasurer/assessor, to $33,345 from $32,374.

All department heads and non-union employees also receive annual longevity (bonus) pay of $40 for every year of service up to $600. A minimum of five years service is required.

Non-union employees and department heads are paid off for unused sick time up to six days a year.

DEPARTMENT heads, who must live within the city limits, also are assigned city cars.

The 13 police officers and seven firefighters represented by unions will receive 4 percent pay raises effective July 1.

At that time, police officers at the top of the scale will reap an annual base salary exclusive of overtime of $31,171. The base salary now is $29,972.

The four fire captains will receive $32,886 in July compared to $31,621 now, while the three firefighters will get $29,774 compared to $28,629. Again, overtime is extra.

Police officers and firefighters receive longevity pay up to $800 yearly.

The city is in the process of paying off police officers and firefighters for accumulated sick time. Once accomplished, they won't receive extra pay for unused sick time.

The 16 DPW workers are represented by the Teamsters. Their contract expires June 30.

Most are classified as either Maintenance Worker I or II.

After three years of service, they are paid at hourly rates of $11.49 and $11.18, respectively.

Ring, watch gone

A man's diamond ring and Rolex watch, valued at $4,000 and $1,000 respectively, were reported stolen last weekend from a condominium on Sheldon Road.

The resident told Plymouth city police that the theft occurred between 5 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday.

The resident said he discovered the door ajar upon returning home. Police reports indicate there were no signs of forced entry.

The ring — with six diamonds — and watch had been in a bedroom.

The resident told police that he heard a noise and found his condo door partly ajar during the early morning hours of Jan. 25 but a chain lock apparently prevented entry.

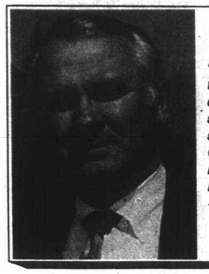
Rec leaders see trouble

Federal cuts fought; DNR shakeup worrisome

By Tim Richard
staff writer



'Recreation should be the 20th (state) department and if it shouldn't, maybe it should be under Commerce, which recognizes its importance.'
— Eric Reickel

Professionals say public recreation is in deep trouble with the federal and state governments.

Not only are Oakland County parks and other suburban projects about to lose federal aid, but the situation in Lansing is deteriorating.

"I was surprised at how tense, how 'down,' this conference is," said Kelly Kendall, attending her first Michigan Recreation and Parks Association conference in Dearborn this week. The Michigan State University student is also part-time recreation director for rural Bath Township, north of the East Lansing campus.

"We as professionals are afraid to speak up," said R. Eric Reickel, Wayne County's parks chief and former Oakland parks director. "Well, I'm not afraid," he said, listing the specific problems.

THE EXCHANGE occurred during a daylong meeting of the Governor's Recreation Advisory Committee, a 17-member panel headed by outspoken Harriet Saperstein of Detroit. It held its quarterly meeting in the MRPA convention hotel to meet with the professionals.

A chief worry, said Saperstein, is that the Reagan Administration wants to rescind federal aid, collected from offshore oil drilling revenues, for recreation projects.

Michigan counties, cities and townships had lined up for $2.4 million of that money this year, planning to match it with local funds.

Examples: Oakland County sought $130,000 for 46 modern campsites at Groveland Oaks Park; Farmington Hills wanted $60,000 for Heritage Park picnic facilities and a basketball court; Pontiac wanted $125,000 for Galloway Lake Park access road, parking aras and child play site; the suburban Wayne cities of Inkster, Taylor and Wyandotte sought money for everything from tot lots to a bandshell.

Congress has 45 days, starting Jan. 5, to concur. The governor's advisory panel agreed to ask the congressional delegation to fight the cut.

OTHER WORRIES listed during the public comments portion of the meeting:

- The state Department of Natural Resources has been reorganized with the previous Recreation Services Division being lumped into a new division with Waterways and Engineering.

"We are positively paranoid about the recreation division," said John Greenslit, executive director of MRPA. "It's going to disappear like the buffalo."

- Recreation services chief Joseph Seavey is retiring this month after 37 years.

"Nobody in the history of the state has had more impact on local recreation," said Wayne County's Reickel, adding he hoped DNR would look outside its own ranks for a successor because no one on the internal horizon is up to it.

- Recreation was excluded from the Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism, Reickel said.
- Kerry Kammer and Thomas J. Anderson, two former legislators serving on the Natural Resources Commission, upset recreation people by saying money from the land trust approved by voters in 1984 would go increasingly for land acquisition and less for development.

"That really bothers cities which don't have any more land," Greenslit said.

- The state Legislature failed to act on, and Gov. James J. Blanchard failed to support, a 1986 bill by Sen. Harry DeMaso, R-Battle Creek, to create a 20th department of state government devoted to Tourism, Recreation and Culture.

"Recreation should be the 20th department," said Reickel, "and if it shouldn't, maybe it should be under Commerce, which recognizes its importance."

Reickel was alluding to a speech MRPA heard the previous evening by commerce director Doug Ross. A key economic strategist in the Blanchard Administration, Ross delighted MRPA by saying that a superior quality of life, enhanced by recreational opportunities, helps business attract brainpower.

SAPERSTEIN prodded the governor's advisory committee to take stands on several issues.

One is to seek a bigger portion of the estimated $40-50 million that Blanchard wants to recover from pop and beer wholesalers under the deposit law.

When consumers pay retailers 5-20 cents for a deposit, the money goes to wholesalers. If the container is broken or discarded, the consumer never redeems it and wholesalers keep the money.

"The guys who opposed the 'bottle bill' got that money," DNR staff member Mike Moore told the panel.

Moore reported that Blanchard is seeking $12 million in program initiatives for DNR, the rest of whose $294 million proposed budget is continuation. All initiatives would be supported by the unredeemed deposit money.

Of the new money, he said, $1.7 million is earmarked for recreation and the rest for research on hazardous substances, acid rain studies and toxic air research.

Coach helps disabled post personal victories

By Mary Klemic
staff writer

When Rikki Gans was a child, other youngsters made fun of her formal name, "Erika." They called her "Eureka."

They may have been teasing but, in a way, they were prophetic. Webster's New World Dictionary defines "eureka" as "an exclamation of triumphant achievement."

Gans, whose smile is as vigorous as the rest of her, could tell you about triumph and achievement. As a teacher at the Northwest Wayne Trainable Center in the Webster School building in Livonia, she has coached many mentally impaired young people to personal victories — some on the order of bouncing a ball and catching it, others winning an event in the Special Olympics.

"I have seen kids' self concept grow tremendously through Special Olympics because they really feel that they can do something," said Gans, who recently was named 1986-87 Wayne County Special Olympics Coach of the Year.

"I've even seen parents think more of their youngsters, that they can do something. They are so proud.

"There's a lot of paybacks."

AT THE center, Gans works with 100 young people a day from the Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, South Redford, Redford Union, Garden City, and Northville districts.

The students are between 3 and 18 years old. They are trainably mentally impaired, with IQs of 30-50. Some may have physical handicaps.

Gans runs year-round training in her gym classes. The year starts with soccer in the fall, and goes on to floor hockey, basketball, gymnastics, track and field and softball. There's also swimming throughout the year at Livonia Stevenson High School.

And tournaments in Warren, East Lansing at Michigan State University, Grand Rapids and in Mt. Pleasant at Central Michigan University, among other sites.

"They look forward from one tournament to the other," Gans said of her athletes. "They know if they get good enough they'll be included. It's like other children who like to be on the varsity team at school."

GANS HELPS train physical education, special education and early childhood development student teachers from Eastern Michigan University and Schoolcraft College.

She developed the Outdoor Education Program at Webster in which she coordinates a week of winter camping for 120-150 students. During this time she gives instructions in cross-country skiing and snowshoeing.

In addition to all this, Gans is active with the Association for Retarded Citizens. She received the ARC Teacher of the Year Award in 1977 and the ARC Volunteer of the Year Award in 1984.

"Your commitment and dedication to your athletes has never diminished," Susie Pidsosny, area director of the Wayne County Special Olympics, wrote to Gans when she was chosen as coach of the year.

"Your comments at our recent State Poly-Hockey Tournament, 'So they didn't win, they played well together and had a good time,' only exemplifies the spirit of Special Olympics coaching, a spirit which you demonstrate in everything you do."

WHAT DOES Gans like best about her work? The children.

"The kids are all happy kids," she said. "They're fun to work with. They're lovable kids. There's a need for them to get involved in physical activities. They enjoy it as much as any normal kid."

Another "payback" comes from families and volunteers.

Families help in many ways. They may give moral support to their youngster. Others may drive children to a certain event or serve as chaperones.

"Some people are afraid to get involved with Special Olympics who don't have any exposure to mentally impaired youngsters," Gans said. "It's the same as coaching any child who is slow in learning. You just have to break the lesson down.

"It's usually hard for them to get over the first hurdle," she said of some volunteers. "But once they do, they're hooked. People just love it."

Eureka!

Smiles are the order of the day at the Northwest Wayne Trainable Center in Livonia when Rikki Gans (center) is the teacher. Here she plays catch with students Danny Houghtby, Andrea Vettraino and Lori Henry.

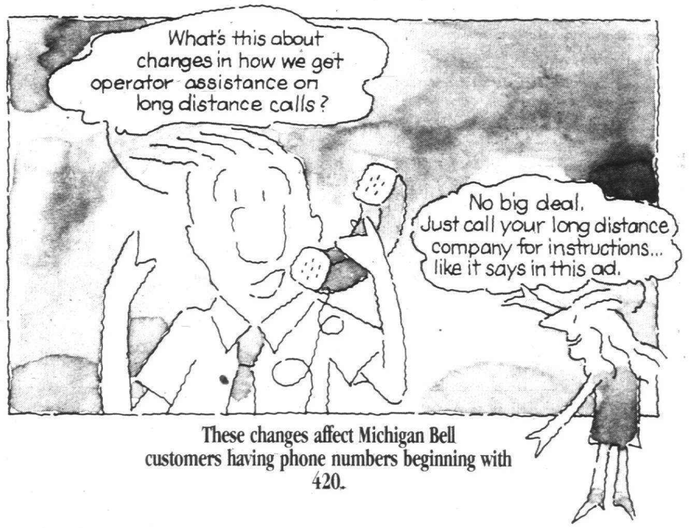
Changes are being made in the way long distance users in your area place some operator-handled calls.



These changes affect Michigan Bell customers having phone numbers beginning with 420.

This is an informational message about your phone service from Marcia Buhl, your Michigan Bell Corporate Affairs Manager.

"These telephone service changes concern only operator-handled long distance calls outside your Michigan Bell long distance calling area. They apply to collect, credit card, person-to-person calls, calls billed to a third number, and requests for assistance. Some customers will need to contact their long distance companies for new instructions on how to place such calls. To find out if and how the service changes may affect your service, we ask you to read the following explanation."

An explanation of the changes in your operator-assistance service for calls outside your Michigan Bell long distance calling area (interLATA calls).

How operator-assisted calls were placed before. If you wanted operator assistance to place a long distance call, you dialed "O," or "O" plus the area code (if required), and the phone number you wanted and an operator put the call through for you.

How these calls are placed now. If the long distance service on the phone you are using is provided by a company that offers operator services and you want operator assistance to place a call, you dial "O," plus the area code (if required), and the phone number and an operator will assist you. To reach the long distance operator for additional assistance, you must dial "00." (Important: If you dial "O" without the phone number, you will get a Michigan Bell operator who can place calls within your Michigan Bell area only.)

If the long distance service on the phone you're using is provided by a long distance company that does not offer operator services, you must contact that long distance company to get instructions on how to place operator-assisted long distance calls.

Please note: If you dial "O," plus the area code, and the number, you may get a recording or no response. Further, if you dial "O" without the number, you will get a Michigan Bell operator who will refer you to your long distance company for further instructions.

If you are calling from a pay phone, continue to use the instructions posted on the phone.

Again, you should contact your long distance company for new instructions on how to place operator-handled long distance calls outside your Michigan Bell calling area. If you have any other questions about the changes, please call Michigan Bell's Let's Talk Center. The toll-free number is 1 800 555-5000.

Please watch your Michigan Bell bill inserts for further information.

Aid for homeless sails through House

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes during the week ending Jan. 30.

HOUSE

HOMELESS AID — By a vote of 296 for and 76 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate legislation (HJ Res 102) to provide an additional $50 million this winter in emergency aid for the homeless.

The money was taken from a disaster relief account within the Federal Emergency Management Agency. It will fund food and shelter programs run by private organizations such as the United Way and American Red Cross.

Supporter Bruce Vento, D-Minn., said, "Literally within blocks of this Capitol building, the homeless are huddled for warmth on heating grates and in doorways. Across the nation emergency shelters are filled beyond capacity."

Opponent Robert Michel, R-Ill., said, "No one can quarrel with the need to assist the homeless," but that state treasuries, which have surpluses, are in a better position to help than the deficit-ridden U.S. Treasury.

Members voting yes supported the legislation.

Roll Call Report

Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

SENATE

COMMITTEE FUNDING — By a vote of 58 for and 36 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to cut its committee spending by 5 percent during the first session of the 100th Congress.

The Senate then approved a budget (S Res 80) of slightly more than $45 million this year for staff payroll, travel, consultants and virtually all other expenses of the 19 Senate committees.

The outlay is about 3 percent higher than last year's $43.6 million figure, with most of the increase allocated to raising staff salaries.

Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said approval of the cut would be "a declaration that the Senate does not believe it should make a 100 percent effort to deal with the serious problems faced by our farmers, miners, small businessmen, war veterans, aging citizens and others."

Steven Symms, R-Idaho, who sponsored the amendment, said that with the Potomac River in danger of being turned red by Washington's red ink, "the Senate is a good place to start on fiscal restraint."

Senators voting yes were opposed to cutting Senate committee budgets by five percent.

Voting yes were Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle.

PAY RAISE — The Senate approved, 88 for and 6 against, a resolution (SJ Res 34) to block hefty pay raises scheduled for early February for members of Congress, Cabinet secretaries, federal judges and top executive branch officials.

Salaries of House members of senators would rise 16 percent from $77,400 to $89,500; the pay of district court judges would rise from $81,100 to $89,500; and Cabinet officers' pay would be increased from $88,800 to $99,500.

The Senate sent the resolution to the House, where it must be passed and sent to President Reagan for his signature by midnight Feb. 3 if the increase is to be blocked.

Because the House had adjourned for the week without addressing the issue, and would not meet again until Feb. 3, it appeared the resolution would fail and the raises would take effect.

Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said American public opinion is against lawmakers' getting 16 percent higher pay.

John Glenn, D-Ohio, said his support for higher federal salaries was politically unpopular, but correct because "I want to see highly talented people in government."

Senators voting yes wanted to block the pay raises for top federal officials.

Voting yes: Levin, Riegle.

SALARY ISSUE — By a vote of 27 for and 66 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to exclude members of Congress from the substantial pay raises proposed for top federal officials (see preceding vote).

Sponsor Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said "It is just wrong" for lawmakers to receive 16 percent raises while they are trying to slash the federal deficit.

Opponent Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the amendment "would relegate Congress to a lower status" than the judicial and executive branches.

Senators voting yes wanted to exclude members of Congress from the proposed pay raises.

Voting no: Levin, Riegle.

GEORGINA ALLEN

Funeral services for Mrs. Allen, 91, of Plymouth Township were held recently in Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church in Plymouth with burial at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, Southfield. Officiating was the Rev. Timothy Hogan with local arrangements made by Schrader Funeral Home. Memorial contributions may be made in the form of Mass offerings.

Mrs. Allen, who died Jan. 28 in Van Buren Township, was born in London, England, and moved to Plymouth 55 years ago from Detroit. Mrs. Allen, who once worked for Daisy Air Rifle in Plymouth, worked as a sales woman for many years for Minerva's-Dunning's.

This can be a pretty tough crowd for anything less than great.

The University of Michigan expects the best.

And they expect the best in any endeavor, whether it's academics, athletics, or health care. Which means they expect the best of us, the new health maintenance organization from the University called M-CARE.

No problem. We've designed this new HMO with plenty of important features.

For example, M-CARE is filled with flexibility. It's flexible for both you and your employer. Your basic M-CARE package covers health benefits such as routine office visits, allergy testing, birth control services and skilled nursing care. And you can select your own personal physicians for each member of your family from the many participating M-CARE physicians in family practice, internal medicine, obstetrics/gynecology, and pediatrics.

And M-CARE is convenient and complete. You have six community health centers throughout the area from which to choose. And its coverage insures access to the world-renowned University of Michigan Medical Center, should you ever need it. Whether that means pediatric services from C. S. Mott Children's Hospital, sophisticated radiation therapy for cancer treatment, or Survival Flight's emergency air transport service, M-CARE offers it all.

So feel free to be tough on us: after all, we're the HMO from The University of Michigan. We're M-CARE.

For more information, please call (313) 747-8700.

M-CARE The HMO Choice

M-CARE community health care centers are located in Ann Arbor, Brighton, Chelsea, Northville and Plymouth.

Will state or local solution be used?

HOW OFTEN do you call the fire department each year?

When was the last time you called the police department to come to your residence?

How many times a year do you call for an ambulance to come to your house?

SOME SERVICES, although critical when you need them, are not required every week.

You don't need a plumber until the pipes burst, a mechanic until the car breaks down, a technician unless something needs fixing. How often you need it doesn't diminish the importance of those services.

But some services are required regularly and must be available when needed. When a toilet needs flushing, there must be a sanitary sewer available to handle the discharge. We cannot wait a week and don't want to seek alternatives.

The same is true of garbage. When you take trash out to the curb, it needs to be picked up. Nobody wants to leave it there for two or three weeks. Neither does anybody want trash bags piling up two or three weeks in the garage, basement or utility room.

THE PROBLEM facing local government is that residents are producing the same volume of garbage — if not more — at a time when the cost of disposal is rising out of sight.

Individuals haven't become excited in the past decade about solid waste disposal. It's not an exciting issue. Yet getting rid of our garbage is one of the most critical services we use. If you recall, the garbage strike in New York was as serious as a blackout or blizzard.

When trash is picked up weekly, we take waste disposal for granted. But as landfills fill up, our choices narrow quickly. We might as well have a massive garbage strike if there's no place for trucks to carry our trash. You can't store trash in garbage trucks — it has to be dumped somewhere.

Within five years, there will be no landfills in Wayne County. At that point, costs which now are doubling will skyrocket even more. As a consumer of trash removal services, you can count on paying the bill.

ONE OPTION is to find new landfill sites. Nobody wants one near his house, but we all need one. Eventually, the state could exercise its power of eminent domain and dictate where landfills will be located because public health, safety and welfare demand it.

Another option is to burn our garbage. An incinerator is expensive, however — far too costly for a single community. The five local units in the Plymouth-Canton-Northville community could form an incinerator authority and share the burden. But consumers still would have to pay to build the incinerator plant.

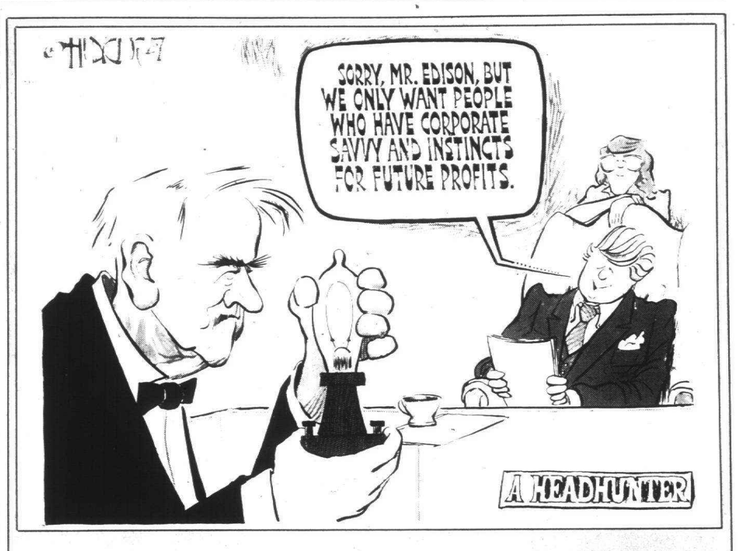
Because local governments have not accepted landfills, the state will make this decision. The best remaining local decision seems to be an incinerator. Plymouth-Canton leaders should look at that choice.

And we do have local expertise to tap. Plymouth City Manager Henry Graper assisted a financial consultant in the construction of an incinerator plant by an authority formed by Garden City, Westland, Inkster and Dearborn Heights. Canton Supervisor James Poole has served for four years on the Wayne County Solid Waste Disposal Committee.

Additional property tax millage very likely will be involved. Homeowners must give serious thought to how important trash removal is to their daily lives. Not an exciting topic but very necessary.

Will we do nothing and wait for the crisis? Or can we plan to shape our future? That cannot be answered entirely by our leaders. As citizens, we have a responsibility for the garbage we create.

Let's talk with our mayors and supervisors, boards and commissions. Let's ask what we should do about this problem.



A hard lesson to learn

Tim Richard

MEMO TO: Personnel director, AXD Laboratories.

FROM: Cora Porate, personnel interviewer.

RE: Research scientist position, Candidate 02/11/1847.

Credentials: Candidate has only three months of formal schooling. We usually require graduate work at a major university for this post unless there are other qualifications. Candidate says he is well read but cannot demonstrate same with verified lists of books borrowed from libraries.

Work habits: He has a "drudge" work style, insisting, "Genius is 2 percent inspiration, 98 percent perspiration." While self/employed in his own laboratory, he performed 4,999 experiments, unsuccessfully seeking viable part for an electric light. He sets no time limits for ending experiments. Candidate would seem to want our firm to fund endless, dull, repetitive experiments with little assurance of a feasible product for the marketplace at the end.

Past accomplishments: Candidate holds patent on electric voting machine, to tally in a minute the votes of Congress and eliminate hour-long roll calls. He failed to do market research, however, and congressional leaders rejected the product — a wasted investment for his lab.

Press relations: He employs no PR firm or staff. The last time he sought media contact, he called newspersons to the office of the Scientific American and told "the boys" his findings. When I informed him that media contacts in our firm are to be made only by the department manager through the public affairs director, he said nothing but assumed a defensive "body language" position in the chair.

Insurance investigation: This candidate is rated "accident prone" by our insurance management division. He has started a baggage car fire on a train, burned down a barn, fallen into a canal in his native Milan, Ohio, almost smothered in wheat while "exploring" a grain elevator and was nearly shot accidentally by police because he is too deaf to hear a warning to stop.

Handicaps: Candidate, as noted above, is nearly deaf. N.B.: We have met our quota this year for handicapped hiring. Other health factors OK.

Appearance: He admits his suits are inexpensive because once, during an experiment, he burned a hole in a new $30 suit. He replaces each suit with one in the same style. During conversation, he revealed he had never read "Dress for Success" because he prefers chemistry, mechanics, mathematics, engineering and biology books.

Market orientation: Candidate 02/11/1847 wants to develop products for the lower segment of the market — talking machines, electric/powered appliances, dynamos for citywide production of electricity, non-flaming lights, an "electric pen," dictating machines. Our market niche is the upscale, stylish professional who isn't price conscious.

Recommendation: Candidate's application be placed on file.

The above parody was concocted after visits to Thomas A. Edison's Menlo Park laboratory now housed in Greenfield Village, and to his winter home in Fort Myers, Fla. The 140th anniversary of Edison's birth is Feb. 11. Government offices are open, however, because it is not a political holiday.

No overspending with taxes, JOA

Rich Perlberg

WHEN YOU SPEND more money than you make, what do you do?

If you are Jim Blanchard or David Lawrence, you do a couple of innovative things. The two — one a governor, the other the publisher of the state's largest failing newspaper — were speakers last week at separate lunches as part of the Michigan Press Association's 118th annual winter convention at the Grand Amway hotel in Grand Rapids.

The convention has met in Grand Rapids for only three years. It used to meet at Kellogg Center on the Michigan State University campus in East Lansing.

Moving from Kellogg to the Amway is not unlike an Associated Press writer being transferred from the livestock desk at Des Moines to the business beat on Wall Street. Both serve essential purposes, but one is more interesting.

IT IS NOT that the Kellogg was inadequate — any hotel can have elevators and ice machines that don't work — it's just that as far as plushness goes, it would have made a great warehouse.

It always seemed that the state's publishers and editors met there so they wouldn't taint their halos when scolding politicians for taking junkets to sunsplashed and exotic locales. But that theory had holes in it. Kellogg couldn't sell booze on the premises so the press association let Blue Cross, Michigan Bell, AAA and others set up hospitality suites, which is what editors call beer gardens when someone else is picking up the tab.

That's mostly history since the move to the Grand where hospitality suites are dwindling because of the fear that tipsy editors will collide in the lobby with star-struck Amway distributors.

But I digress. How is it, you may ask, that Blanchard and Lawrence balance their budgets?

BLANCHARD DID it by making the courageous decision to raise taxes four years before he would have to seek reelection. But he also said that the state, despite hiring 3,000 additional prison guards, now employs 14,000 fewer people than it did in the pre-recession days of 1979. He also said the state now pays nothing for interest payments while the feds pay $562 per person just for interest on the national debt.

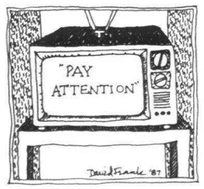
Lawrence, publisher of the Detroit Free Press, said he was tired of people tossing around the word "monopoly" when talking about the proposed Joint Operating Agreement between his paper and the News. Then he said the federal government had better approve the JOA so the Detroit dailies could take steps that would otherwise be called collusion. Otherwise, he said, Detroit would suffer the fate of Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and other cities that fell into the sea when one of their papers folded.

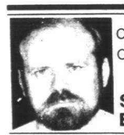
He did not say how much his staff had been reduced in the wake of an annual loss of $17 million. The publishers didn't ask him. It is hard to worry about a JOA when hospitality suites are going extinct before your very mouth.

Michigan
150 years old

THE FIRST Michigan Constitution, in effect 1837-51, was brief and provided for a short ballot — the governor, lieutenant governor and legislators. Many political scientists consider it Michigan's best.

Fight AIDS with ad dollars





crackerbarrel debate

Steve Barnaby

FINALLY, SOMEONE has the courage to stand up and holler, "pay attention."

That's what Southfield-based Channel 7 did last week when general manager Jeanne Findlater gave the station go-ahead to run condom ads. And we all should be thankful that this media general was brave enough to brush aside the meek and to withstand the criticism.

Her pioneering spirit could save the life of someone you love.

Other media outlets along with millions of Americans are slow to realize that AIDS, a sexually transmitted disease, is spreading like wildfire and soon will kill hundreds of thousands of us.

Regular Observer & Eccentric readers will recall that months ago we did several stories on the dangers of AIDS and its potential to reach epidemic proportions.

Since that time other newspapers have tuned in to the dangers of this always-fatal disease.

Unfortunately, the word just isn't getting out fast enough. Every day thousands more become infected. That's right, I said thousands — every day.

AND BECAUSE the public believed it was only a disease which haunted the homosexual community, it turned its back on the disease. But now, the heterosexual community is being struck.

And every scientific authority agrees that a cure, a magic serum, doesn't exist and won't exist for the next five to 10 years. By that time, hundreds of thousands will have died in this country. No telling how many will die around the world.

And although the disease can be transmitted by intravenous blood transfusions or through use of infected needles used primarily by drug addicts, the primary mode of transmission is through sexual contact.

Within five years, 50,000 Detroit-area residents could be dying from AIDS.

But that doesn't have to happen if we are willing to be educated. And the first lesson is that transmission of AIDS can be prevented through use of condoms.

Now many will say this is some kind of moral issue to be debated. But that is shortsighted. AIDS is a life and death issue.

If your child has unprotected sexual relations with someone infected with AIDS, they stand a high risk of contracting this fatal disease. We have to stop being so naive as to believe that abstinence is a way to prevent AIDS from spreading.

Our children must know that no cure is in sight, that heterosexuals can contract the disease and that they can protect themselves from death by using condoms.

But we must first reach them with the message. That's why schools should open their curriculums to AIDS education. That's why newspapers and magazines should join in this effort.

And that's why more television stations should advertise condoms. Young people use television as their primary source of information gathering. They often know more about the advertisments that are broadcast than the shows.

Before you protest the move, think about it. It's a matter of life and death for your children.

Will Gen. Haig succumb to hip, hip, hooray?

through bifocals

Fred DeLano

ONE OF THE most interesting personages on the international stage these past two decades has been Gen. Alexander Meigs Haig Jr., with whom some in our area will rub elbows Saturday.

When I asked one of his disciples whether to salute or genuflect upon introduction, it was suggested that a firm, old-fashioned American handshake might still be acceptable to this native Philadelphian.

The general turned 62 on Dec. 2 and among those close to the Washington scene there seems little doubt but that he hopes to be the Republican candidate for the office of president of the United States in 1988.

Astute columnist and commentator George Will, writing in the Washington Post last week, reported that Haig's political-action committee already "has disbursed $600,000 since July" on behalf of his unannounced candidacy.

Although his most recent governmental role was as secretary of state under President Reagan, Haig cannot be labeled a politician. He has never held elected office. However, he is coming here as guest of a political group, the Republican Committee of Oakland County, to deliver the principal speech Saturday at the 98th anniversary banquet of the Oakland Lincoln Republican Club.

HAIG IS A military man through and through. His face, chiseled from granite, is familiar to television viewers throughout the land. His manner bespeaks the discipline in which he was trained at West Point. It will be fascinating to see whether anyone so serious can deliever the type of hip, hip hooray speech that so often typifies political party pep rallies such as Saturday's.

Oakland County Republican Chairman Larry Dickerson expects the upbeat approach and says he hopes the 800 or more persons who will be dining with the general at Roma's of Bloomfield "go away somewhat energized."

He sees the occasion as one lending itself to good fellowship in Honest Abe's best tradition.

Incidentally, tickets for the banquet are still available by calling 338-1133. They are $20 each and will not be sold at the door. There's sure to be a full complement of state and county GOP leadership in attendance. Mess call will be at 7, preceded by a cash bar at 6 p.m. Haig will be introduced by his longtime friend, U.S. Rep. William S. Broomfield of the 18th District who has served in Congress since 1956 and is now the ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Even if Haig were not a longshot presidential nominee in a field that includes Vice President George Bush, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York State, Sen. Robert Dole, who is Republican leader in the Senate, and even evangelist Pat Robertson, his comments at this moment in history would be eagerly awaited.

Here is a man who literally bled for his country in Vietnam, the Purple Heart being among his carload of lifetime decorations. Few can match a career that has included service at Gen. MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo, the NATO staff, combat in Vietnam, chief of staff under Presidents Nixon and Ford, five years as supreme allied commander in Europe, the office of secretary of state, and, most recently, important roles in the private sector.

THIS IS A SERIOUS, scholarly man with a marvelous command of the English language, not a stand-up comic. I have to believe that he understands the contradictions between secrecy and democracy and that the one place the twain have to meet is in the oval office.

Quoting George Will once more, the columnist has said, "Haig goes further than any prospective Republican presidential candidate in criticizing the president . . . However, he faces among other problems the fact that his expertise is in foreign policy. Elections almost never turn on that, and it is hard to imagine Haig waxing eloquent about soybeans."

This is not going to be one of those situations in which a reporter can say, "General, in 25 words or less, what is our solution in Central America, the Middle East, South Africa, the Philippines, and can the Tigers win without Lance Parrish?"

It will be worth the price of admission to hear what criticisms he makes of past decisions, what he projects as his outline for America's future, and, yes, to discover whether he can laugh.

Don't expand downtown district

To the editor:

I am writing you concerning the proposed expansion of the Downtown Development Authority District. Please rest assured that there are a great many residents concerned about the proposed expansion.

Expanding the authority itself is not the issue. It is the manner in which the city is proposing to expand the authority that we object to. There are a great many established business properties in the downtown area that are not yet in the Downtown Development Authority. If expansion of the authority is necessary, isn't it logical to include already defined business properties in the authority before you consider moving into residential areas?

If the commission were to now include underutilized and undeveloped business properties in the authority and then encourage full utilization of those properties, couldn't that provide the revenues you need?

We, as residents, object to residential areas being included in the authority when there are so many business properties that are not being used or developed that are not yet in the authority.

The natural demarcation of the business community from the residential sector is Harvey Street. We are reluctant to see that natural and definite barrier crossed at this point in time. Please focus on encouraging development in the already defined business community. We in Plymouth pride ourselves on the quality of our residential neighborhoods.

City commissioners are at a crossroad. If the city encourages this type of creeping commercial development it will erode the tenor, the very texture of what makes this community unique. We presently have an admittedly successful balance of commercial and residential in this town. Are we ready to tamper with success?

The fiscal year 1986-1987, city of Plymouth Goals and Priorities states that:

"The city is landlocked. Therefore, it is limited in its growth potential and revenue base."

Please acknowledge our own limitations and work within them.

I am looking forward to the city rethinking this proposal and ultimately the rejection by the commissioners of the proposed ordinance.

American quality now under attack

To the editor:

America's industrial strength is losing its might rapidly. Americans believe we have drastically tampered with our own technological capabilities, and potential.

Twenty years ago, the garment and textile industry left the South for Asia. Other industries are manufacturing cheaply across the Mexican border, and now the northern automobile industry is being invaded by the Japanese competitive sales industry. Their scheming foresight will leave Americans analyzing the economic aftermath with hindsight.

Take the Harley Davidson Co. for example. The Japanese bought that company with the sole intention of using it to belittle American-made products by allowing it to deteriorate for all of America's youth to see. Eventually, the Japanese introduced a higher quality, better performance product to compare. The long-term plan was to instill the belief that quality products solely belong to foreign imports into the minds of our American people.

YEARS AGO, our steel and automobile industry was a strong market. Now? Fellow servants of America, I urge you to name any technology, and it is produced in Japan for our convenient USA "export purchase" at outlandish sales taxes. Under the GATT rules, these taxes are rebated on exports and imposed on imports. This has created a paralyzing "double blow" and havoc to the future of American-made products. The net effect is that the Japanese car sold in the USA is hundreds of dollars less than a USA car sold here. Who bears the total tax burden?

As economic comparision shows the growing strength of the Japan yen against the diminishing strength of the American dollar. International competiveness shows that Japanese dealerships outnumber the Americans 2 to 1. Massive advertising along our highways for Datsun, Honda, Mazda and Toyota show Japanese marketing goals are drawing close to realization. Japanse imports are wiping out American business all the way around.

NOW, JAPAN is "exporting" their own manufacturing plants and labor to our American soil, and they are "considering" an offer of employment as well. Mazda plans to move their own electronic supplier to Flat Rock from Japan. Overseas income tax which is 100 percent deductible is another economic disaster. Are we giving American businesses more incentive by encouraging them to move their companies overseas?

My American friends, let America become strong once more. Instill "American-made is higher quality" in our youth. American people and our government must unite to resolve this disgrace. Take action now.

FACTS:

1. Six years ago, Americans put thier shoulders to the wheel, and quality is back on course again.
2. The Japanese have the largest bank in one of our American cities.
3. If war were to break out, would Japan or any other nation give our technology back to us?

Now I'm asking you America — stop, and think.

What can you do to stop this giveaway program?

The latest article I read from Warren Brown's column in the Washington Post severely criticized the Ford Motor Co. Fault-finding articles such as these only create doubt and misgivings as well as encourage foreign-made car sales.

Maternity leave reaction split

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Several local women legislators remain interested in maternity leave legislation, despite withdrawal of a bill calling for adult "care giver" leaves.

But their male counterparts remain cool to the idea.

State Rep. Judith Miller, R-Birmingham, said Monday she was withdrawing her "care-giver" bill — which would have given state employees time off to care for elderly or disabled relatives — but would submit a resolution urging the Michigan Civil Serivce Commission to enact a similar policy.

"The Civil Service Commission would be asked to do what she proposed," Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia said. "It was something more properly handed that way."

While not dealing directly with maternity leave issues, Miller's bill was seen as a step toward state-legislated leaves of absence.

A bill calling for maternal and paternal leaves was filed by Rep. Mary Brown, D-Kalamazoo, though it hasn't been debated during the new legilative session.

While that bill might represent the best hope for maternity leave supporters, Bankes envisions maternity leaves as part of a larger program that would also involve on-the-job day care sites.

"I THINK we need to go in both directions," she said. "My goal is to create on-site day care and to educate employers as to how terrific it would be."

Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, is another maternity leave supporter.

"The need is there. Most working women do so because of personal economic needs," Barns said. "I don't feel we should destroy their opportunity for any kind of job or career."

Party lines could be obscured when and if the bill comes up for debate, Bankes said.

"I think it's something that may split by gender more than party," she said.

Perhaps proving her correct, local male legislators were more cautious in their assessments.

"I generally support the concept, but we have to carefully balance the rights of the mother with the rights of the employer to expect someone to be there on the job," said Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton.

Kosteva, who became father of twins five months ago, termed his wife's six month leave "wonderful." He warned, however, that employers might not be as willing to give new fathers extended time off from work.

"It may be stereotypical, but I think you will see more resistance to giving time for males," he said.

Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth said he favors a "narrow" statute.

"I am not as concerned about (giving time off to) fathers," Law said. "The mother is the one having the baby."

Numerous side issues need to be discussed, Law said.

"HOW LONG should the absence be — should it be paid — does the worker have to go back to the exact job or to a similar job — these are all concerns that must be addressed," he said. "There is a problem with the cost of doing business in this state. We have to be careful when we start mandating benefits to people."

State Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, questioned whether state government should mandate leaves of absence.

"I believe maternity leave is a desirable benefit, but I don't believe we need a state law," Geake said. "This is the kind of thing that should be negotiated between employer and employee. How could a company with only five employees handle this?"

Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City, also said leaves should be detemined though negotiations, not legislation.

"I don't know if a big company like GM would be unaffected," Keith said. "They're laying people off now and you wouldn't want to do anything that would add to that dilemma."

Not every local legislator has strong feelings on the issue.

"It's worth exploring, but I really don't know too much about it," said state Sen. George Hart, D-Dearborn.

Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford, also said he hadn't spent much time examining the issue.

"I really don't know anything about it," Bennett said. "I couldn't really say anything until I've seen the (Brown) bill."

The U.S. Supreme Court upheld state-mandated maternity leaves in a Jan. 13 ruling. By a 6-3 margin, the high court upheld a California law requiring companies to grant as much as four months' unpaid maternity leave.

Letter carrier Patty Linna delivers mail on Sunset in Plymouth. She believes in layering clothing, wearing five or six layers if necessary.

Canton Township employees Stan Wegienka (left) and Karl Gorham have sort of a cold and sloppy job — videotaping sewer lines to inspect for cracks. The workers do have a truck to warm up in.

Winter

Workers brave the elements

School crossing guard Barb Jettinghoff keeps an eye on traffic at her Lilley Road post. She believes in layering with a down coat. The cold usually isn't too bad, Jettinghoff said, except for early last week when the wind chill index dropped to minus 32. "It was a kicker."

THERE ARE any number of ways to make a living.

That reality is easy to see by leafing through a U.S. Department of Labor/Bureau of Labor Statistics publication, the "Occupational Outlook Handbook." The handbook's index to occupations lists hundreds of job titles, ranging from A for academic librarians to Z for zoologists.

Job duties, level and places of employment, education and training requirements, advancement possibilities, earnings and job outlook are detailed, along with descriptions of other occupations requiring similar aptitudes, interests or training.

Working conditions for those jobs are also described. The publication notes that not all jobs consist of work done in the relative comfort of an indoor setting.

Jobs done outdoors require "a major portion of time to be spent outdoors, frequently without regard to weather conditions," the handbook states. "Roofers, who apply roofing materials to the tops of buildings, work outdoors."

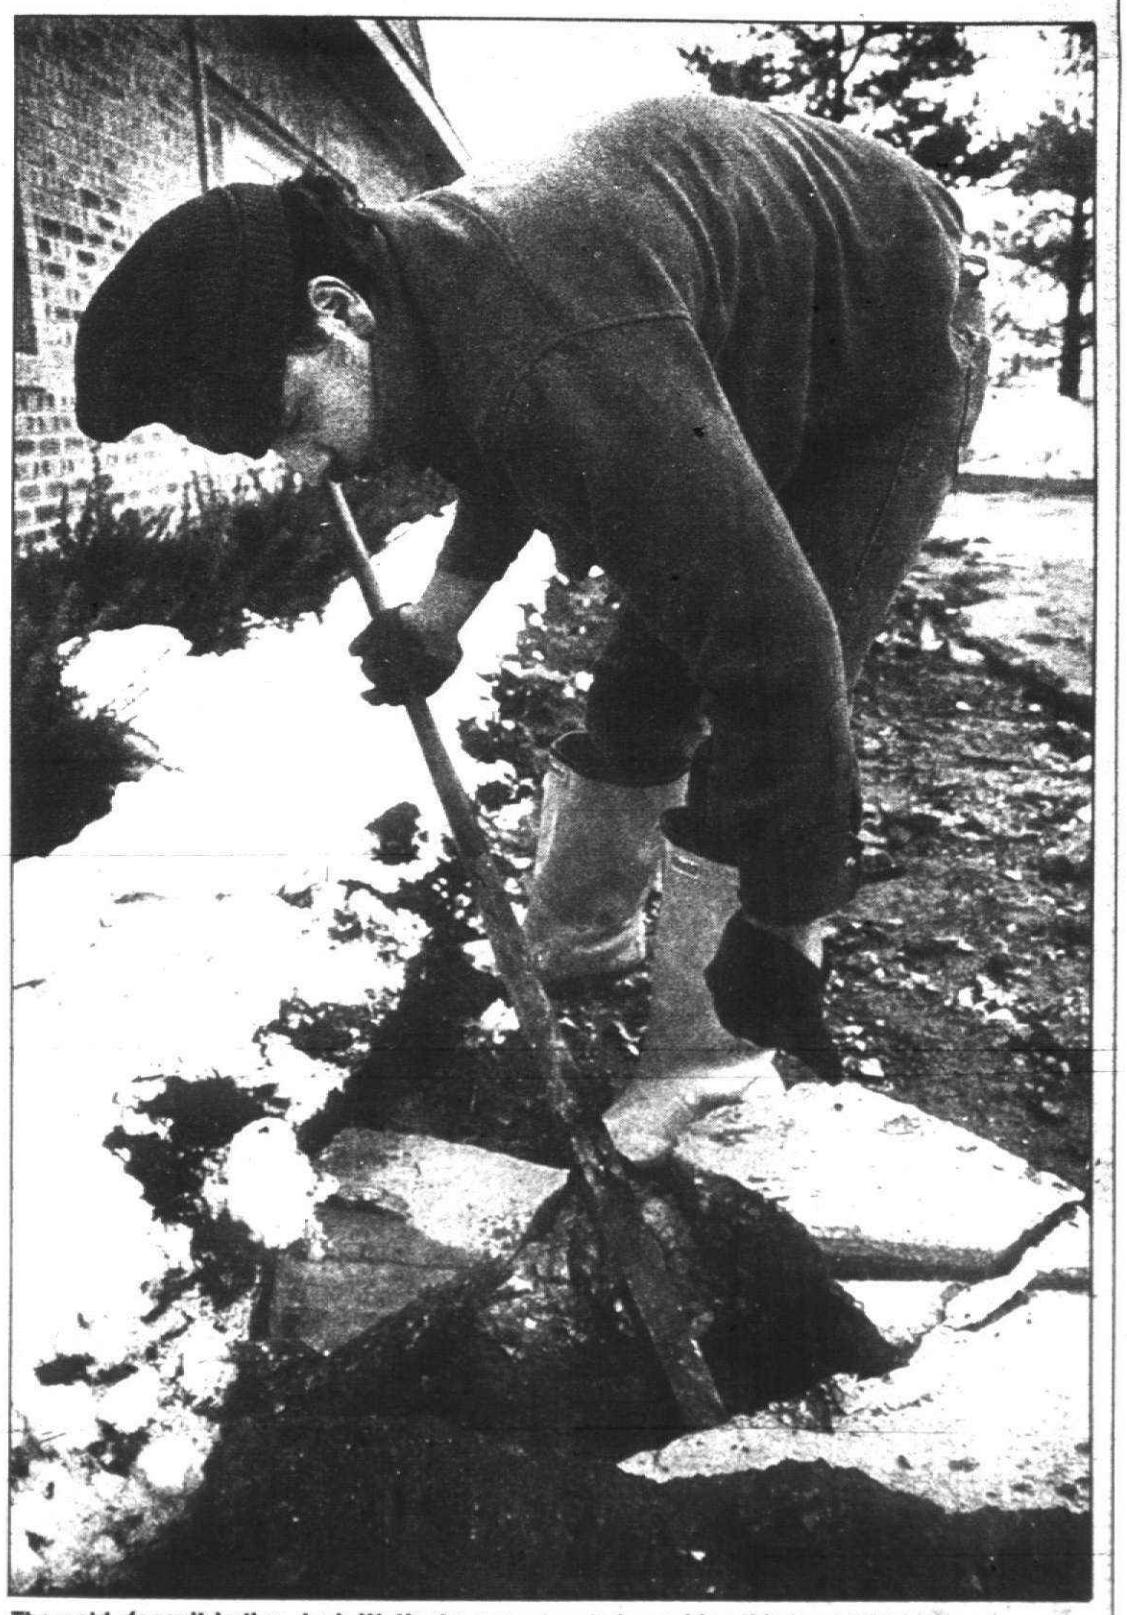
In Michigan, the work must go on during the winter months, generally without — as the U.S. Department of Labor handbook notes — "regard to weather conditions."

Those weather conditions can be harsh ones, even for the hardiest of souls.

According to the National Weather Service, a total of 24 inches of snow fell in January of this year, compared to a normal snowfall of 10 inches for that month. This January thus qualifies as the second snowiest on record in the Detroit area.

Bitter cold and biting winds can also make the day's work difficult. Nevertheless, the work must be completed, whether it's clearing the roadways, delivering the mail, seeing that children get to school safely or doing construction work. These are some of the people who see that the job gets done — no matter what the weather forecast may be.

Jack Wolfenbarger crushes a concrete walk in a Canton office plaza.



The cold doesn't bother Jack Wolfenbarger when he's working this hard. "Right now, I'm working up a sweat," he said.

Karen Massey as Doris and Ryan Slavin as Harry appear in the local production of "Harry and Sylvia." The production took top honors at the District Theatre Festival of the Michigan Interscholastic Forensics Association, held Saturday, Jan. 31, in Southfield.

Congratulations are in order for the Plymouth Park Players.

Their production of "Harry and Sylvia" took top honors at the District Theatre Festival of the Michigan Interscholastic Forensics Association. The festival was held Jan. 31, in Southfield.

The production company for "Harry and Sylvia" is being directed by Gloria Logan. Its members, students at Centennial Educational Park, include: Hope Buchan, Ryan Slavin, Dana Pressede, Shannon Silye, Karen Massey, Meghan Lynch, Cathy Miller, Kate Downes, Scott Kimmins, Jeff Hendry and Joan Zaretti.

The Plymouth-Canton students will now travel to the regional competition, to be held Feb. 14.

During the Jan. 31 competition, Ryan Slavin and Dana Pressede received awards for superior acting. Scott Kimmins and Ryan Slavin received awards for superior set construction.

The total production received an unprecedented score of 100 points.

School offers many classes

A variety of Saturday classes for children are offered by New Morning School in Plymouth Township.

New Morning is a state-certified, non-profit school for preschoolers through eighth graders. The director, Elaine Yagiela of Northville, recently announced a new series of Saturday enrichment classes, scheduled to begin Feb. 21.

"Saturday Discovery Days" will run for five weeks, Feb. 21 through March 21. Classes will meet from 10 a.m. to noon and 12:30-2:30 p.m.

Class offerings are geared to the preschool and elementary school-age child. Price for each class is $32, plus a materials fee.

Morning classes include:

• Cooking and Crafts for 3- to 6-year-olds

Children will prepare nutritious snacks using graphic recipe cards. Craft activities will be included. Students will prepare and serve breakfast for their parents during the last class.

• Computer Applications for 7- to 10-year-olds

Children will learn basic computer knowledge and keyboard skills. They will apply that knowledge to creative problem-solving in math, science and language arts. Student projects may include "Dinosaur Data Bases," holiday poem writing, testing peanut butter brands and others, depending on student level and interest.

• Video Vibrations for 8- to 12-year-olds

Students will create an animated video recording. The project will incorporate story boards, script writing, set design, drawing, painting, clay sculptures and three-dimensional collage as students create characters and props for the video recording.

• Jewelry Design for 7- to 12-year-olds

Students will make jewelry from found items as well as more complex pieces. They will learn to do beadwork ranging from early Indian to modern pieces.

The afternoon classes at New Morning School will include:

• Sticky Fingers for 3- to 6-year-olds

Children will enjoy messy but fun projects. Chocolate pudding, finger painting, peanut butter and spaghetti noodle painting are among the craft and cooking activities planned.

• Cooking Around the World for 5- to 8-year-olds

The class will cover regional foods of the U.S., Canada, Mexico, the United Kingdom, Germany, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. Movies, slides, photos, tapes, records, costumes, dances and artifacts will all be used. The class will be taught by an experienced traveler.

• Ceramics for 7- to 10-year-olds

Students will create rabbits, ducks, Easter projects and more. Students will learn about stains, dry brushing, underglazes, glazes and other techniques.

• Saturday Theater for 7- to 12-year-olds

Pantomime, puppetry, choral reading, dance improvisation and role playing are part of this class. A play will be presented at the last class.

Costume design, set construction and makeup techniques will be taught. Children who attended the last session will also learn about stage production and will be given a chance to direct.

Early registration is recommended for the classes. A class brochure and registration form can be obtained by calling New Morning School, 420-3331, between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Clergy react to papal visit

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

ONE PRIEST remembers meeting him on a sidewalk at Orchard Lake St. Mary when he was an unassuming cardinal from Poland.

Another fondly reminisces about how the cardinal opted for the "real thing" to drink at a personal meeting in London, Ontario.

Others recall seeing him at St. Peter's Square in Vatican City. Some have only seen him on television.

Nonetheless, leaders in the local Roman Catholic church community are excited, and somewhat surprised, by Pope John Paul II's announced visit to Detroit Sept. 18-19.

It was well-known in the Detroit Archdiocese that Archbishop Edmund Szoka had been trying to get the pontiff to visit for some time.

"I guess the ducks were finally all lined up," said the Rev. William Sherzer of St. Valentine Church in Redford Township.

SHERZER, AS with many pastors in the area, believes the visit by the pope will strengthen the bond among the 1.5 million Catholics in the archdiocese.

Some think his two-day stop will take togetherness a step further.

"It will enhance unity of Christians in general," said the Rev. Jerry Cupple of St. Colette Church, who met Pope John Paul II at St. Mary College in Orchard Lake some 10 years ago when the pope was a Polish cardinal.

"(The visit) will thrust the Catholic church into the headlines," said the Rev. Robert Byrne of St. John Provincial Seminary in Plymouth who's seen the pontiff speak in St. Peter's Square in Rome on two occasions.

"It causes attention to be focused on the church, which is good."

ONE REASON it's good, as the Rev. George Charnley of St. Dunstan Church in Garden City points out, is the visit might cause discussion among Catholics about their involvement with the church. Or, perhaps, why they have fallen away from it.

And if one person has the personality and charm to pull the masses together, they feel, it's Pope John Paul II. Those who have seen him in person know why.

The Rev. Andrew Nieckarz of Sts. Simon and Jude Church in Westland met the pontiff, then a cardinal, at a bishop's home in London, Ontario. Nieckarz conversed with him in the cardinal's native Polish language.

"I remember the bishop came up to us and asked us if we would like a brandy or a cognac to drink," said Nieckarz, who's been at Sts. Simon and Jude for 22 years. "He said, 'No. I'll have a Coca-Cola.'"

AS WITH some other area priests, Nieckarz also saw John Paul at one of his Wednesday audiences as pope at St. Peter's Square. They remember most his way with people.

"I was in the audience in Rome on a Wednesday afternoon with 20 to 50,000 people," Charnley said. "I remember the faces of the people waiting for him to come out. It's a look of anticipation and excitement.

"He has the real charisma of being warm. All those feelings come through when he is addressing an audience, touching people — Catholics and non-Catholics alike."

Byrne, who studied in Rome for five years, recalls the same type of excitement on those Wednesday afternoons.

"I remember most of him going around greeting people in what I guess was his 'Popemobile,'" Byrne said. "I was amazed with the way he concentrates on people."

Truth can be used in the wrong way

"IF IT doesn't work right, tell us. If it does, tell others." A once familiar promotional. Not well-written, perhaps, but unmistakably clear. Could anyone doubt what was meant?

Students of religion might find this dictum remarkably similar to the commandment of the Ten that reads "You shall not bear false witness". Evangelical explanations to this commandment emphasize not the restraint of false witness, but rather the necessity to speak well of others and put the best interpretation on all they had done that was extremely difficult.

"Not bearing false witness" or "telling us if it doesn't work right" is not concerned with telling lies. It is concerned with telling the truth in such a manner that the esteem of all will be enriched. This is not an issue of deliberate lying, but rather intentional truth that will build community.

TRUTH CAN be used to destroy just as truth can be used to build and to enrich. A truthful statement can destroy a person as easily as a malicious half-truth or lie.

And even more demonically, a truthful statement can be used not only to destroy the other person, but also to build up one's esteem in the minds of others.

The fabric of our society has been so distorted in recent years by deliberate deception and vested self-interest that the building of community through truth will be difficult. We are more inclined to use truth as a sword to maim and to kill than as an experience of shared hope that builds community.

Seeking out the best in others — putting the best interpretation on everything others do — explaining their actions in the kindest way — are gifts of trust and hope and kindness we offer to others. They are the building blocks of community that dares to move beyond self-defense. The spirit of acceptance and affirmation builds acceptance and affirmation.

WE ARE, of course, free to choose either one. And that is the ultimate issue . . . what we choose to do. What is at stake is the quality of life we would choose. The process of seeking the best in each person can only create a life together that builds on the best each has to share and give.

Choosing only not to bear false witness against those who do otherwise would not offer much life together, because there would be so very little with which to begin.

Women's choices 'unlimited'

By Susan Rosiek
staff writer

"Be all that you can be."

It's the slogan used by the U.S. Army in its television ads and it was the same message that Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths delivered last Saturday to participants at the seminar "Women in Transition: Preparing for Change."

Life is limitless, the choices are there," Griffiths told the 110 women attending the seminar. Held at Schoolcraft College, the seminar was sponsored by District 8 of the Business and Professional Women's Organization.

"Think about what you would like to do and then go after it. Be all that you can be and be the best," said the former congresswoman who sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment.

"EACH THING I've done, I've done because it was there. And I wanted to do each one as well as I could," she added.

During her tenure in Congress, Griffiths commuted from Washington to Detroit. It was a rugged life but interesting and satisfying she said.

"But it wasn't so tough to adjust when I left Congress," said Griffiths, pointing out that her hectic Congressional scheduled proved to be solid training for her stint as a member of the boards of more than a dozen major corporations.

> 'Life is limitless; the choices are there.'
> — Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths

Griffiths stressed that education and career opportunities are wider than ever before and are there for the taking. She urged women to stand up for themselves and take advantage of opportunities.

GRIFFITHS, who was elected last November to a second term as lieutenant governor, has held a variety of careers throughout her life.

During World War II she worked as a purchaser for the U.S. Army. She went on to become an attorney, a Detroit Recorder's Court judge and to serve in the state legislature.

She represented the 17th House District in Congress for 20 years where she sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment.

She also made the argument that added the category of sex to the 1964 Civil Rights Act. She is the affirmative action officer for the state of Michigan and was appointed by Gov. Blanchard as the permanent chair of the Michigan Equal Employment and Business Opportunity Council.

"I had no plans to be a lawyer," Griffiths told her audience. "I planned to be a teacher, but my husband encouraged me to go to law school, then enter politics."

Martha Griffiths speaks at S'craft

Her message was greeted with applause by an audience of women who ranged in age from their mid-20s to late 60s.

"Inspiring," said Joyce Pappas of Garden City.

"It's sounds so motivating to hear that you can accomplish whatever you want to," said Polly Fitzpatrick, co-owner of an appliance store in Garden City and the mother of three young children.

"She had a message for everyone regardless of age and occupation," said Elizabeth Szilagyi of Plymouth. "You can be what you want to — all you have to do is identify what you want and go for it."

"She came from humble beginnings ... and I'm glad to hear her husband was always supportive," said Helen Tomlinson of Wayne.

Karen Gessler, president-elect of the Michigan BPW, said: "She put into perspective all the opportunities that women have. The future is there, but it's determined by you."

BPW is an organization that promotes the interests of all working women.

Saturday's seminar also featured sessions on self-esteem, career planning, retirement, coping with career and family and strategies for singles.

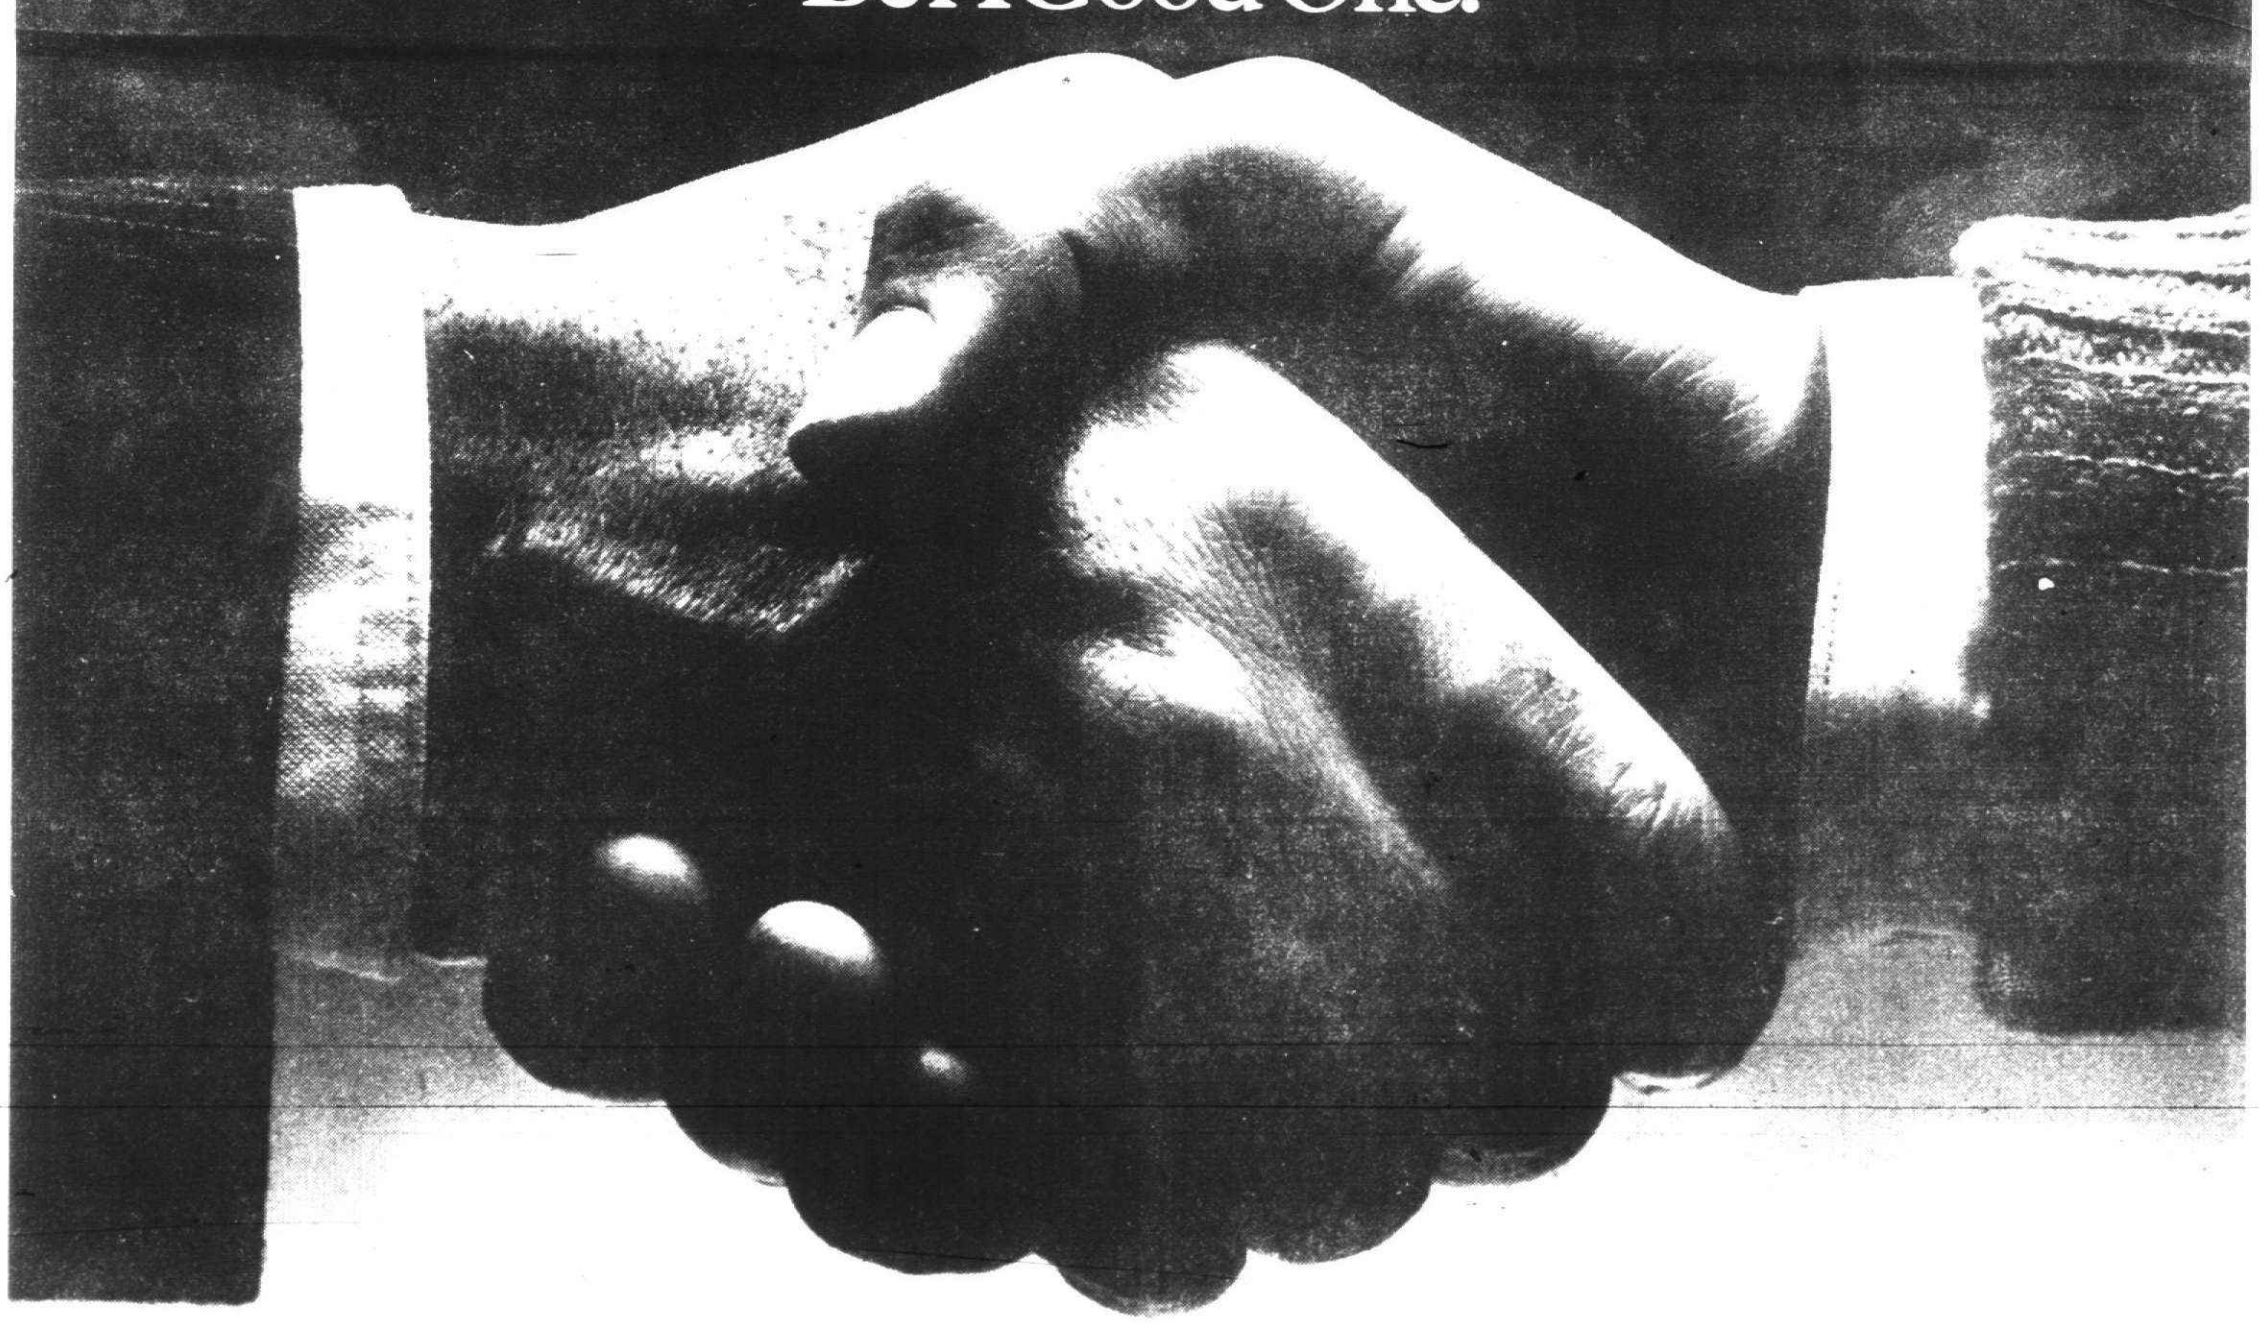
Banking Is One Of Life's Necessities. The Experience Should Be A Good One.



You flip a switch and the lights go on.

Start your car and go your way.

Day in and day out, so long as things work like they should, you never give them a second thought.

It's the same with banking.

You, along with the rest of us, fully expect your bank to work right. The first time. And every time.

From our point of view, that isn't an unfair expectation.

In fact, living up to that is the best explanation of how and why we run First of America Bank the way we run it.

So in nearly 200 communities across the Midwest, our bankers are reminded that, even though they're part of a major bank company, they should play a major role in the community.

They're encouraged to make loan decisions locally. Which has made us one of the nation's biggest lenders.

They're given all the resources of a big bank company to draw on, so they can offer customers a more resourceful bank.

And, since our bankers are asked to handle customer matters on a local level, they're as accountable to you as they are to their bank.

It's made us not only one of the Midwest's biggest bank companies.*

It's made us one of its most independent companies. Something that's as good for you as it is for us.

'Black box' technology foils bids to prevent copying of tapes — for now

By Louise Okrutsky
staff writer

MOVIE INDUSTRY officials are hopping mad over a little black box resting in a gray area of federal law. Although it's illegal to copy videotapes, it's legal to own or sell a black box.

The box enables home video fans to copy rented movies even though those cassettes have been encoded with Macrovision, a process aimed at stymieing duplication. Without the aid of that little black box, copies of tapes with Macrovision technology feature pictures which vary drastically in brightness or are scrambled.

So far the method has been applied exclusively to prerecorded videotapes. CBS/Fox, HBO/Cannon, Warner, Disney and Media Home Entertainment are among the firms using Macrovision to block copying, according to Gary Gwizdala, chief operations officer of Macrovision in Torrence, Calif. More than 15 million titles, 50 percent of the industry's output, has been encoded with the process, he said.

It's an industry offensive against what insiders view as copyright violations and patent infringement. "It's a very serious problem. It costs the industry billions of dollars," said Fred Fehlauer, senior vice president of CBS/Fox Video, Livonia.

"We do know that illegal copying costs the industry an estimated $1 billion, 5 million," Gwizdala said. "More than 20 percent of homes make at least one copy of a prerecorded cassette a year. I'd say the average is more like six or seven copies."

THE ENTERTAINMENT industry is pushing to use a form of Macrovision to prevent consumers from taping cable television programs, copying movies recorded on laser disks and making audio cassette recordings of records and compact disks.

"They have a right to protect their copyright," said Myron Singer of Movieland in Southfield. "People who are real serious about copying seldom watch the movie again, anyway."

"Video retailers lose rentals," said Jim Bouras, vice president of home video for the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA.) "They pay $40-$50 per tape and depend on the rentals to earn it back. People who rent and copy the tapes and loan them to their friends decrease the number of rentals."

Although the video rental industry supports the use of Macrovision in prerecorded videocassettes, some individual owners disagree.

"I think consumers have a right to tape whatever they want to tape," said Fred Syerson, president of The Video Studio, a videocassette rental business with a main office in Farmington and branches in Livonia, Warren and Royal Oak. "My personal position is if they make it uniform across the board, then my position would change. But right now they're penalizing one industry," he said.

Syerson's stores sell stablizers manufactured by Vidicraft for $200 and by Showtime for $279. "We call them Macrobusters. It was a logical decision for us to carry it since we carry the line of Vidicraft products." Vidicraft's line of accessories includes devices which enhance a television picture.

MACROVISION PLANS on filing suit for patent infringement against each of four manufacturers of the boxes. "Our attitude is that we are taking this very seriously," said Gwizdala. "There are about four kinds of these boxes. We have each one of these black boxes. Our engineering evaluation show that they infringe on the patents we've applied for. And when they are issued, we will take the appropriate legal action."

There is a claim on the part of the manufacturers of the boxes that their products eliminate a problem on the original cassette. "Our field problems are so minor that theirs is a very difficult position to defend," he said.

"Some customers maintain there is a problem, that it interferes with simple playback on television," said Gerry Dervish, owner of Troy Video. "They're tending to be people with newer VCRs."

"Most people don't even know there's a difference in the tape (with Macrovision)," said Myron Singer of Movieland of Southfield.

On some television screens, tapes with Macrovision showed pictures with a rainbow effect around them, Gwizdala said. "That was the reflection of the Macrovision on the phospherous caused by the curvature of the tube." On televisions with extremely sensitive vertical holds, Macrovision has been known to aggravate the set's tendency to allow the picture to roll, he said.

"I've talked to 100 different consumers and less than 10 of them had Macrovision-related problems. There's so many things that can go wrong with VCRs. Macrovision has no impact on audio-related problems at all," Gwizdala said. "We've taken great care not to upset the consumer's pleasure in watching the programming."

MEANWHILE, THE MPAA is urging federal legislation to force VCR manufacturers to incorporate a computer chip or other device in their products which would be activated by the Macrovision signal encoded on the cassette. This would prevent overriding of the anti-copy device. The law would ban the manufacture and sale of the override devices.

For the MPAA, copying equals theft. "If I want a Ferrari does that give me the right to go ahead and take it?" asked Jim Bouras, MPAA vice president in charge of home video. The price of prerecorded videocassettes is decreasing; many are available for $19.95. That makes copying less of a bargain, he said.

For many who copy tapes, the results can prove disappointing. "The VHS format was never designed for duplication. The quality's pretty poor," said Bill Lackner, store manager for New York Video World, Royal Oak.

Owners of Beta format VCRs can obtain a good second generation tape, according to Syerson. He adds that taping television programs falls into a different category of discussion.

"The Supreme Court has pretty much established that you can tape off of cable television for your personal use. They did that in Sony vs. Universal Studios," Syerson said. "This (Macrovision) is a way for Hollywood to get around that."

"As a policy matter we won't get involved in free broadcasting," Gwizdala said. "The Supreme Court has upheld the consumer's right to time shift. However, premium programs in the pay-per-view category is another matter."

MANY CABLE companies and premium channels tout the convenience of taping movies from cable. "They're trying to create consumer interest to subscribe. Their growth has gone away," Gwizdala said. "It would be a better business policy for them to try to attract new customers by offering better programming."

Macrovision is working with laser disk manufacturers such as Philips of the Netherlands and Pioneer and Laser Disk, both of Japan, to apply the blocking device to their products. "Between 30-60 days we should have the engineering evaluation complete. Assuming the bugs can be worked out, in another 60 days after that we should begin to manufacture. It should prove advantageous to the consumer because new programming would be released on tapes and laser disks at the same time," Gwizdala said.

Port of Detroit snubbed by local importing firms

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

The port of Detroit is the third busiest in the nation with goods from all over the world flowing through it. But in total revenue generated from duty, the port slips to 10th position. Local businesses importing goods for sale frequently bypass Detroit in favor of trucking goods from either coast.

"Few people realize the port of Detroit is a major port," said U.S. Customs Import Specialist Nick Devine, assistant director in the Service's Class and Value Division.

While annual port revenues have steadily increased here, he added, they have done so at a slower rate than in other parts of the country, notably on the west coast where imported goods from the Orient are increasing in number.

JIM HACHT, owner of Hacht Sales and Marketing in Farmington Hills, has imported exclusively from the Orient since he started his business six years ago — but not through Detroit.

Hacht, who does all his own buying, imports such items as Easter baskets and Halloween costumes, rawhide pet supplies and inexpensive KC (disassembled) furniture from Taiwan, Thailand, Hong Kong, Malasia and Korea.

Hacht never uses Michigan ports. He ships his merchandise from the Orient to the nearest U.S. port on the west coast. His goods enter Michigan by way of rail or truck.

This is a common practice. William Seidel, owner of Delta Import Export in Livonia, imports machinery like coils and grinders from Europe and Japan to American customers located throughout the country.

He ships his merchandise to the port nearest the customer and that, he said, might be Texas or New York. Only occasionally is it Michigan.

PIER ONE Imports, a home furnishings chain based in Texas, has 19 outlets in Michigan. The company obtains merchandise by buying directly from such places as India or Africa, or indirectly from American vendors who do their own importing.

The merchandise is stored in one of eight warehouses in various parts of the country. Outlet managers buy from the warehouse nearest them. For Livonia manager Mary Ellen Ellis, that means Chicago. She buys merchandise there that has been processed through customs in the Chicago port, for resale in her Livonia outlet.

John Jonna also purchases most of the gourmet stock he sells in his Merchant of Vino shops in Birmingham, Troy and Southfield from vendors. He stocks thousands of varieties of imported cheeses, candies, nuts, wines, oils and numerous other items.

But Jonna directly imports one item himself, Evian water straight from France to the Detroit port. Jonna takes pride that he is the largest importer of Evian water into Michigan and possibly the entire country.

REVENUES COLLECTED in duty at the Detroit port in fiscal year 1986 totaled $424 million. Six other Michifan ports, Sault Ste. Marie, Saginaw-Bay City, Grand Rapids, Port Huron, Battle Creek and Muskegon, generated an additional $52 million.

In the first three months of this fiscal year, $133 million has already been collected in Michigan, $118 million coming from the Detroit port alone.

"Fully 99 percent of it," said Devine, is legitimate duty payment. An estimated .22 of the total amount is a "users" fee, levied in January 1986, Devine said, to make the collections unit of U.S. Customs self sufficient, paid for by those who use it.

Businessman must heed changes in market focus: small business

Mary DiPaolo

"Another print shop has moved into town; how am I supposed to compete when one's on every corner?"

"I can't control the economy, and it certainly affects sales at my jewelry shop!"

"I just opened a tanning salon and then find out everyone's afraid of skin cancer!"

As a consultant, I have heard these comments and others like them from small business owners and managers. All readily agree that "control" of a business is limited to what goes on within the firm's own environment; anything external to that environment becomes very difficult, if not impossible to manage.

These "external environments" that potentially affect both the short- and long-term success of any small business venture include the following: (1) the economy, (2) the competition, (3) the political/legal environment, (4) technology, and (5) the cultural/social environment under which the business operates.

WHAT BUSINESS owners must realize is that although they can't "control" or change external environmental activities, the effects of these activities on the business may be controlled — through proper market planning.

Let's take the example of the retail florist industry, which has been significantly affected by changes occurring within the competitive environment over the last 15 years.

Mass marketers (such as supermarkets) began offering green plants to consumers in the early '70s.

Over time, supermarkets expanded their floricultural products to include standard varieties of cut flowers.

Given the general problem supermarkets were experiencing with product quality, florists (by majority) chose not to respond to this competitive activity. As time passed, not only did supermarkets resolve their product quality problems but also began offering more exotic varieties of cut flowers to consumers.

ALONG WITH the fact that buying flowers at supermarkets was convenient for the consumer, sales growth skyrocketed.

At present, many supermarkets have set up "mini-flower shops" on the premises offering fresh and silk floral arrangements to customers, taking special orders and wiring floral products to and from different geographic locations.

As such, the retail florist is no longer the retail florist's major competitor anymore. Unfortunately, not all of the traditional florists in business today recognize this trend and are losing valuable market share as a result. Enough said?

Stop using all credit to climb out of debt

Have you fallen into the debt trap? If so, you're not alone. Many families suffer from out-of-control credit card charges and loans.

Credit counselors say that getting out of debt is one of the toughest money problems and may take two or three years. Extension specialists at Michigan State University offer these tips for cutting debts:

- Go cold turkey. Cut up your credit cards or put them away in your safe deposit box. This may be the only way you can pay off your old debts without adding new ones.
- Channel any "found money" directly to your creditors. Any money you get in addition to your regular income — such as a tax refund, a pay raise, overtime pay or a gift — should go directly to the lenders.
- Cut other expenses ruthlessly and use the excess to pay off old debts or avoid new charges. Redirect cash from the non-essential to the essentials that you would otherwise charge. Deciding just exactly where to cut is an individual or family matter, but some common targets include excessive entertainment, long distance phone calls, eating out and cable television.

To figure out how much you can afford to charge is easy. Total up your monthly payments for creditors — include all but your rent or mortgage. If that total payment figure is more than 20 percent of your monthly take-home pay, don't charge any more.

How can I profit from investments in 1987?

finances and you

fixed income (bonds)	[1]2.5%
small-company growth	+7.4%
Consumer Price Index	+1.2%

While the economy put up a spectacular performance in 1986, the key questions is: What's it going to do for an encore and how you can gain from it?

Here are some helpful suggestions:

- Thanks to the passage of the new tax law, the world out there has become treacherous. Unless you are up to it, don't do it all by yourself. Find a competent financial planner.
- Invest in bond funds. However, since the odds of another big drop in interest rates are relatively small, find a competent timing service with at least five years experience to time your investment in bonds.
- Buy common stocks, especially those with a long consistent dividend record. Since investments won't benefit from long-term capital gains tax rates in 1987, stock funds that reinvest dividends could yield significant gains for you. Here, too, a competent timing service could do wonders, especially if the stock market follows a roller-coaster pattern of 1986.
- Buy foreign bonds. Even better than the S&P were last year's returns on foreign bonds. Several mutual funds buy high-quality foreign bonds issued by foreign governments as well as world bodies like World Bank and United Nations. If the foreign currency (such as Deutsche mark and Japanese yen) strengthen in value, your investments will rise significantly in value as well.
- If you are expecting passive losses in 1987, find limited partnerships that will generate passive income to offset these losses. This is not an easy task and should be handled by your financial planner.
- Out of the dust of tax reform, limited partnerships are making a recovery. The focus is now on income, not tax shelters. Especially hot are master limited partnerships trading on stock exchanges. Because they are liquid, master limited partnerships can compete on a fair footing with stock and bonds. So, this may be the year of limited partnerships for you.
- Investment in insurance-related investment products. Various insurance-related products such as taxtion, auto seven, government securities annuities and MINT emerged from the new tax laws smelling like a rose. But they all have limitations, so look them over carefully before investing in them.

If in the past you have handled your finances yourself, 1987 may be the year you will want to engage a financial planner.

Mother Superior
It's getting to be a habit with her

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

PEGGY CASS WAS relaxing at home in New York last Friday night after a week of rehearsals for "Nunsense," the musical hit opening a four-week run Friday at the Birmingham Theatre.

Her little dog, Kayo — a three-month-old West Highland white terrier — was nipping at her legs, she said, as she spoke over the phone about the upcoming show. Cass was scheduled to arrive in Birmingham Wednesday for a few more days of rehearsal before the show got under way.

Previews will be at 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday and 2 and 7 p.m. Sunday, with opening night Tuesday, Feb. 10. Performances will run through Sunday, March 8.

The actress' familiar, appealing voice has a catch in it (one writer, she said, likened it to the sound of "driving backwards in a freight yard"). Sometimes, she's heard and not seen, doing voice-overs for such clients as Wendy's and Getty Oil.

"Nunsense," about five nuns who put on a show, brings Cass back to the Birmingham Theatre, where she appeared as a nun in "Agnes of God," co-starring Susan Strasberg.

"THE MOTHER Superior, yet again," she said, of her role in both "Nunsense" and "Agnes of God." Of course, "Agnes of God" was heavy drama, and this show is a song and dance entertainment.

The only similarity between her two roles as mother superior is in her dress, a nun's habit. In "Agnes of God," the habit was of silk chiffon, she said. In "Nunsense," "It's regular nun cloth, the real McCoy," she declared.

Cass said she went to Catholic school as a child, and the nuns' garments always looked stiff and scratchy but actually are very soft and comfortable.

"It's very nice," she said of her costume. "I'm never too crazy about the wimples and hats."

Playing the role of a nun has one definite advantage, "There are no quick changes."

Cass appears in 16 numbers in "Nunsense" and wears the same outfit throughout the show.

"It's really a revue," she said. "It's very much ensemble work — dancing. It's not like any show you've every seen before."

In "Nunsense," five nuns from the Little Sisters of Hoboken try to raise money for an offbeat purpose, to bury some dearly departed sisters who have been stored in the freezer. They put on a show, singing, dancing and doing comedy.

Of her four co-stars, Cass said, "They're very talented girls, and two are beautiful."

HER BIG number is "Turn Up the Spotlight," which is about liking the spotlight.

As the Mother Superior, however, "She's trying to keep a firm hold on the situation. I think it's funny, really."

The dance routines are strenuous for Cass. "I haven't hoofed around since I've been a kid. It's like Jane Fonda workouts."

Cass is looking forward to returning to Birmingham.

"Is the Phoenicia still going? It had the best rice pudding I ever ate in my life."

She also mentioned the Midtown Cafe, where she enjoyed baked brie for the first time. "I've done it myself since," she said.

Cass has won fans through her stage, screen and TV appearances. On Broadway, she created the role of Agnes Gooch, the uptight secretary of flamboyant Auntie Mame, in the play "Auntie Mame." When Gooch finally breaks out, watch out!

She received a Tony Award for her portrayal of Gooch and also earned an Oscar nomination when she took the same part in the movie version in 1958.

"People still ask, 'Aren't you Agnes Gooch?' " she said. "It was a wonderful part."

CASS HAS BEEN doing musicals on stage and spent two years with "42nd Street." She likes musicals, although they're hard work, performing every night. Among her other recent shows are "Annie" and "The Front Page."

On television, she appeared for 19 years on "To Tell the Truth." Another quiz show for her was "Password." She played many dramatic roles on "Loveboat" and "Vegas."

Not long ago, Cass took a trip around the world.

"I had a wonderful time," she said. Then she cut a children's record, did "H.M.S. Pinafore" in Florida and took the rest of the summer off.

Cass and her husband, a retired teacher of dyslexic children, live in New York with their two cats and dog.

The Birmingham Theatre production of "Nunsense" is being directed by playwright Dan Goggin, who is from Alma, Mich. Cass said they rehearsed with him every day in New York. The show's success has led to a number of companies, in Florida, New York, San Francisco, Chicago and London.

Cass also played a nun in "Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All to You," a show where the first half is practically a monologue, she said, and is based on that playwright's rather unhappy experiences with Catholicism.

Old movies on cassette are filled with romance

It's a simple premise that's inspired classic films, as well as pictures that simply are awful. The old plot — boy meets girl, they fall in love, are separated, then reunited in a big finish which leaves them marriage-bound — held its appeal for a long time. Like the Western, it's a genre which has declined in the last several decades.

It's hard to find an unabashed love story which wouldn't be painfully bad to watch or equally as embarrassing for us to admit seeing.

On the brink of Valentine's Day, an occasion largely for school children and greeting card companies, let's go back to a simpler time when people took these things seriously. All of the following old movies are available on cassette:

When "Ninotchka" was first released in 1939, the advertisements proclaimed "Garbo laughs." The beautiful stone face does indeed laugh heartily after Melvyn Douglas determinedly pulls out every joke he's heard in an attempt to get Garbo's very dour Russian commissar to smile. His jokes fail. It's the sight of Douglas' dapper character falling off a chair in a Parisian working-class restaurant that breaks Garbo's reserve.

SOME OF THE dialogue is dated but the movie, directed by Ernest Lubitsch, retains its charm. Douglas as the man about town convinces Garbo that life is more than workers' committee meetings and no play.

Bela Lugosi, Sig Ruman and Felix Bressart play the three Russian dignitiaries seduced by the pleasures of wine, women and song in capitalism's hedonistic capital. Their portions of the picture, as they trot around Paris in top hat and tails, is a funny but naive portrait of the Russians as kicks. Ina Claire plays a wonderfully snooty Russian countess yearning to resume her Tsarist glory days.

It remains Garbo's movie — romance without nausea.

It was remade as a musical in 1957 and retitled "Silk Stockings." Fred Astaire plays the man about town who now has a perfectly 1950s-style glamour job, movie director. Cyd Charisse assumes the role of the dowdy Russian commissar sent to discover what has befallen her country's wayward diplomats to France. There's great Cole Porter music. Fred and Cyd show off on the dance floor.

The romance between Astaire and Charisse lacks the spark of the Garbo-Douglas pairing. Although the romance in both versions is infused with overtones of the correct Western doctrine winning over the misguided one, the original carries it off with style while the remake settles on being more strident.

It isn't surprising. In the late 1930s, Russia was on the verge of being our ally in another war against Germany. Twenty years later, Russia was our foe in the cold war.

IN 1952, John Ford received an Oscar for directing John Wayne in "The Quiet Man." Wayne plays an American boxer who killed a man in the ring. Although exonerated, the guilt-racked fighter flees to his native Ireland to forget and begin again. Maureen O'Hara, her red hair looking glorious in Technicolor, plays the stubborn Irish woman who marries him.

This is a period piece. In the finale, Wayne, fed up with O'Hara's scheming to regain her furniture from her equally stubborn family, literally drags her across the Irish landscape. It isn't a scene that's likely to be placed in the forefront of feminism. O'Hara's Colleen manages to be strong and womanly at the same time — not an easy accomplishment in a decade during which woman were usually portrayed as starry-eyed pushovers.

Whodunit has laughs

Performances of "Murder Takes the Stage," presented by the Plymouth Theatre Guild, continue at 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday at Plymouth Central Middle School. For ticket information, call 451-0037.

If you're looking for some laughs and some thrills and a good deal of fun, you'll get a bang out of the Plymouth Theatre Guild's latest production, "Murder Takes the Stage."

Don't look for anything new and different in the play itself. Written by James Reach, it's just another formula whodunit, with a cast of formula characters (the ingenue, the ladies' man, the blonde, the joker), in a formula setting (New England-barn-reconverted-to-summer-stock-theater), and a formula plot (everybody loathes one of the characters, wishes that character were dead and, pretty soon, one of them sees to it that she is dead).

Ultimately, the triteness of Reach's play doesn't really matter a lot. With an able cast and some commendable behind-the-scenes support, director Bob Weibel has put together a smartly paced, close-to-the-audience production that keeps playgoers entertained and involved in the old whodunit guessing-game from start to finish.

Stand-outs in the 13-member cast include Hollis Denham, who seems in his element playing the tall, dark, handsome charmer with the roving eye; Alvin LaCroix, a real scene-maker, in the role of the plodding New England lawman misnamed "Sheriff Wiley"; and Diane Kremser, appropriately effusive and glittery as the fading stage star, Sara Farnham.

Robert Regan is an amusing advance man, reminding of WKRP's Herb Tarlik turned up a notch or two, and Cynthia Lewandowski has her moments as the wide-eyed blonde ingenue who ultimately solves the crime. Henry J. Fusik, sporting white socks with shiny black shoes, strikes the right note as the group jester, Hal Rush.

IN THE ROLE of the hated Hazel Laverne ("You could take all the friends she has and stick them in one eye without blinking"), Patricia Gresock turns in an adequate performance, although at times she's not quite as actively loathsome as you'd like her to be and even seems a bit weary now and then.

Rounding out the cast are Karen Wendt as the enigmatic ax-wielder, Miss Liz; Ann Schaffer as the stage manager of the play-within-a-play; Ron Hutchings as the beleaguered director; Rick Boldman in the role of the playwright; Barbara LaScola as jealous actress Ellen Drake; and Karen Mosti as Hazel Laverne's obsequious secretary, Ann Martin.

Costumer Ann Schaffer and her crew deserve special mention for their contributions. Individually, each costume helps to define character effectively. Overall, they're an additional reason why "Murder Takes the Stage" is a real pleasure to watch.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL FARMINGTON HOME SHOW
February 6, 7, & 8, 1987
At the Mercy Conference Center
Ideas • Products • Services • Sources • Information • Estimates • Prizes AND IT'S FREE!
Here's just a sampling of the many marvelous displays:

IF YOU'RE A DO-IT-YOURSELFER...and renovating, remodeling or even building a new house is in your future, OR if you're a novice when it comes to home improvements, then attending the 6th Annual Farmington Home Show is a definite must.

THIS YEAR'S SHOW INCLUDES over 40 companies displaying their products and services, representing everyone from contractors and manufacturers to installation companies and material wholesalers.

AMONG THOSE PARTICIPATING are; H. A. Smith Lumber and Supply, Bergstrom Plumbing and Heating, Kimball and Russell, who specialize in windows and doors, as well as many other local and nationally known companies.

THE PURPOSE OF THE SHOW, according to Jack Woodworth, coordinator of the show and vice president of H.A. Smith Lumber and Supply, is to introduce consumers to the numerous products and services available in the home improvement market.

NO SELLING...Although there will not be any selling of products at this show, the public is invited to obtain brochures, get estimates, ask and get the answers—to any questions they might have about merchandise on display or services available.

"AN IMPORTANT FEATURE OF THE SHOW is that advice will be given on virtually every aspect of construction (home improvement)," says Woodworth. Consumers will be able to ask questions on everything from insulation and custom shelving to lighting fixtures and jacuzzis.

IN ADDITION to having the opportunity to do all of their comparison shopping at one time, the public will be able to talk to the professionals and receive personal attention, unlike most shows of this sort that promote only glitz and glamour.

"OUR SHOW WILL HAVE A PERSONAL TOUCH...the owners of the companies will be there to answer all of your questions with ease," comments Woodworth.

ANOTHER ATTRACTION at this year's show is a computer, provided by H. A. Smith Lumber and Supply, that will be on hand for those individuals wanting an estimate on the material and cost of building a new deck. The computer will transform information given to it by the consumer, such as size of the desired deck, and create a complete list of the material and prices required to obtain the finished product.

THE MAJORITY of participating companies in the show handle home repair and remodling, there will also be professionals available to answer questions about landscaping and various other outdoor improvements to the home as well.

SINCE THE SHOW'S CREATION, by Bob Van Every, president of H. A. Smith Lumber and Supply, in 1981 (with a mere 12 booths), the exhibit (has expanded rapidly) and now includes over 40 representatives from almost every major home improvement company in the area, as well as, others from around the nation.

DISCOUNTS WILL BE OFFERED by individual companies designed especially for the show, and many other bonuses just for attending the show. In addition, there will be booth prizes awarded by some companies and a special Grand Prize to be given away at the end of the show on Sunday, Feb. 8.

ANTHONY, THE WANDERING MAGICIAN will be on hand to provide the children's entertainment. For those people who wish to attend the show, but hesitate to bring their children along.

THE HOME SHOW this year, (unlike its modest beginning at the Knights of Columbus Hall), will be held at the Mercy Conference Center, in Farmington, (which is located) at 28600 Eleven Mile Rd., one-quarter mile east of Middlebelt Rd. Entrance is through Gate 4. Admission is free (to all who would like to attend.)

Dennis Dameron (top) of Salem will be favored to win the 126-pound weight class Saturday at the Western Lakes Wrestling Tournament at John Glenn.

Rocks will be tested in league title defense

wrestling

If you follow Observerland wrestling, you know it almost goes without saying that Plymouth Salem is favored to defend its crown when the 1987 Western Lakes Activities Association wrestling championships begins at 11 a.m. Saturday at Westland John Glenn High School.

Not only did the Rocks win the championship last year, but they have captured the WLAA title each of the five years the league has been in existence. And on top of that, Salem is undefeated this year in dual meet competition and champion of the Lakes Division.

Despite those facts, Salem coach Ron Krueger isn't claiming the title quite yet.

"Everybody in the league has somebody (capable of winning an individual championship)," said Krueger. "I think everybody will be represented in the finals and that will make it tough for everyone. It won't be so much that you have to beat Salem but you'll have to beat everybody at the meet. I don't think the winners will be the team with the most champions so much as it will be the team that places the most wrestlers.

"JOHN GLENN will be in the thick of things. Walled Lake Central will have something to say, they've finished second the last two years. Plymouth Canton (Western Division champion) has also come a long way. They're a good team. I also see (Livonia) Churchill stirring things up. Each team in the league has a couple strong people. I don't see anybody being shut out."

Tom Buckalew, head coach at Westland John Glenn, has similar feelings about the meet.

"I'd say Krueger is the favorite and after that it's up for grabs. There are three or four teams that could jump out and bite you. A lot of teams have one or two outstanding wrestlers. The league is much more balanced than it was last year."

When the finals begin, around 6 p.m., there should be some great matches lined up.

Salem's Jeff Delbeke and Canton's Tom Flores will both be tough in the 98-pound division. Delbeke pinned Flores in dual meet competition earlier this season but Flores rebounded and earned a 4-2 decision over Delbeke at the North Farmington Invitational.

GLENN'S BRIAN KRAZEL, undefeated in league matches, will be hard to beat at 119 pounds. Livonia Churchill has high hopes riding on the shoulders of Mike Krause, a top contender at 132 or 138. (He has wrestled successfully at both weights this season). Brian Clemens also will be a favorite for the Chargers at 167.

At 155 pounds, look for Canton's Dan Dwyer and Salem's Lem Yeung. These two have squared off twice this year, and Yeung has won both times by a total of two points. North Farmington's Paul Cook also could be a factor here.

In the heavyweight division, John Glenn's Chris Zimmerman has to be the favorite after placing fourth in the state meet last year. But earlier this year, he lost a decision to Salem's Richard Johnson. Look for a heated battle between these two big guys. Don't count Canton's Tony Callaway out of the picture either.

Other favorites to claim WLAA individual honors include Farmington Harrison's Cliff Alcantara (105) and Salem's Dennis Dameron (126).

"I think in order for us to repeat (as champions) we'll have to be at our best, which we aren't right now," said Krueger. "We've got some guys out sick and some injured. Others are just down. It's been a long season. I just hope we'll be able to to put our full team on the mat Saturday. That's our number one priority. Number two, I hope we're ready to go."

Admission is $1.50 for students and $2.50 for adults.

Rocks nip N'ville to stay in Lakes hunt basketball

Northville took the air out of the basketball Tuesday night and nearly deflated Plymouth Salem's hopes of catching Westland John Glenn in the Western Lakes Lakes Division.

Using a deliberate, almost stalling, offensive attack, Northville effectively kept the ball out of Salem's hands and built an 18-13 lead at halftime.

"We played our usual man-to-man defense, but they worked real hard on being patient and taking the real good shot," said Salem coach Bob Brodie. "We did OK when we had the ball. But we didn't have it very often."

But the Rocks rallied in the second half to win the game 46-37.

"At halftime I just said, OK, let's turn up the pressure and let our athletic ability prevail. Let's turn it into a belly-up game. Let's make them play," said Brodie.

The Rocks' non-stop pressure forced Northville to rush its offense in the second half. Instead of walking the ball up the floor, the Mustangs had to fight their way up. As a result, the Rocks were able to get their hands on the ball more often and put forth a 16-9 spurt to overtake the Mustangs.

"Give Northville credit; they held their patience right to the end," Brodie said.

Give Salem's senior guard Bryan Kearis credit, too. He scored 16 of his game-high 22 points in the second half to spur the Rock comeback. Ted Hanosh scored eight points, but six came at crucial moments late in the game.

For Northville (3-8 in the league, 5-8 overall), Steve Grant scored 12. Northville outscored the Rocks 11-2 from the free throw line.

"Northville always plays us tough," Brodie said. "They got us two out of three last year and they got us the year before. I don't know what it is, but they do a nice job against us."

The Rocks are 12-2 on the season, 10-1 in the Western Lakes.

PLYMOUTH CHRISTIAN 58, BETHESDA 56: With time running out Tuesday and the game tied at 56, Plymouth Christian's Steve Windle stole the ball at half court and drove in for a layup to give the Eagles their 12th win in 13 games.

Pat McCarthy led the Eagles with 24 points. Andy Stephens added 20 points and 12 rebounds.

Mike Stoddard led Warren Bethesda with 16.

Chiefs keep pace in the West

The knot remains atop the Western Lakes Western Division basketball standings.

Plymouth Canton, 53-45 winners over Farmington Tuesday, and Farmington Harrison remain tied for the division lead with 7-4 records. The two will square off at Harrison a week from Friday.

Harrison had to battle from a 12-point deficit at home Tuesday to knock off stubborn Livonia Stevenson, 62-57.

"This was a real gutty performance by my people tonight," said Harrison coach Mike Teachman. "Especially from Scott Bissell. He really took charge."

The Hawks were down 30-18 late in the first half. It was 35-31 at the half. Then the Hawks exploded for a 19-6 run in the third quarter.

Bissell scored 10 points in the second quarter and eight in the third. He finished with a game-high 22. Brad Ridgeway also had a big night. The 6-8 center scored 18 points, grabbed 17 rebounds, blocked six shots and threw down a thunderous two-handed dunk.

The Hawks outscored Stevenson 18-1 from the free throw line. The Spartans, who used primarily a perimeter attack against the Hawks, hit 28 of 69 shots from the floor. Harrison was 22 of 52.

Eric Johnson (14), Pete Mazzoni (12) and Bill Gray (10) led the Spartan scorers. Stevenson is 7-6 overall and 6-5 in the Western Lakes.

Harrison, winners of four straight, are 8-5 on the season.

CANTON 53, FARMINGTON 45: Tyrone Reeves scored 12 and Brian Paupore 10 to pace visiting Plymouth Canton Tuesday.

Farmington (1-10 in the league, 1-13 overall) led 13-10 after a quarter. Canton took a 28-27 lead at the half. The difference in the game proved to be Canton's 17-11 surge in the third quarter.

Canton is 8-6 on the season.

N. FARMINGTON 45, FRANKLIN 39: North Farmington used two weapons to defeat visiting Livonia Franklin Tuesday: rebounding and a varied press.

The Raiders outrebounded the Patriots 31-12 and forced numerous turnovers in the backcourt.

football

The highly sought-after Alex Marshall of Redford Bishop Borgess made a verbal commitment Tuesday to play football for the University of Michigan.

He will sign a national letter of intent Wednesday, Feb. 11.

Rated one of the top prospects in the state, the 6-foot-5½, 225-pound tight end/defensive end may wind up playing outside linebacker for the Wolverines, according to his high school coach, Dan Henry.

"I talked to Bo (Schembechler) on Saturday, and he thinks Alex is best suited for outside linebacker because he can run and cover a lot of ground," said the Borgess coach.

Marshall, who carries a 3.1 grade point average, plans to pursue a career in criminal justice. His choice was narrowed down to Michigan and Michigan State although he did make visits to Boston College and Indiana.

"The people were great at both universities (U-M and MSU)," Marshall said. "I liked both very much, but it was just a feeling. I just had a stronger feeling at Michigan."

MARSHALL ALSO indicated that former Westland John Glenn coach Lloyd Carr, now one of Bo Schembechler's top assistants, was instrumental in his recruitment along with another U-M assistant, Gary Moeller.

Ironically, Henry served as an assistant under Carr while he was at Glenn.

"I didn't talk to Alex, but I'm sure he knew how I felt all along," said the Borgess coach. "It was a difficult decision because coach (Norm) Parker at State did a good job recruiting him. But I think Alex's family wanted him to go to Michigan and that was a factor, but I feel he still made up his own mind."

Michigan State did land North Farmington's All-State running back Scott Selzer, who committed early last week to the Spartans.

Several other All-Observer performers made commitments this week including four off a Glenn team that reached the semifinals of the state Class A playoffs last season.

Wide receiver and defensive back Mike Hammontree visited Toledo and Central Michigan but decided on Eastern Michigan because he'll get the opportunity to play both baseball (he's a catcher) and football.

HAMMONTREE'S TEAMMATE, 6-foot-6, 230-pound tight end Harold Loveless, will also be playing in the Mid-American Conference. He's made a verbal commitment to Toledo.

Glenn coach Chuck Gordon also reported Tuesday that All-Area linebacker Doug Strehl, a 6-1, 240-pounder, is headed for Grand Valley State and two-time All-Area kicker Tony Svaluto is going to Ferris State.

Redford Catholic Central coach Tom Mach reported Monday that 6-foot-6, 230-pound tackle Tom Victory, who was hampered this season by shoulder and knee problems, will decide sometime this week between Central Michigan, Toledo or Miami of Ohio.

All-Area linebacker Matt Fras is also considering Miami but reportedly is leaning toward Holy Cross.

Although he was ignored in the All-Area balloting last fall by Observerland coaches, 6-foot-4, 215-pound tackle Kevin Rich of Redford St. Agatha will sign Wednesday with Central Michigan. The All-Catholic League pick and Class C All-Stater also considered Eastern Michigan.

"I liked the idea of getting a little bit farther away from home," said the Livonian. "I just liked the atmosphere."

Rich, who is starring on the Agatha basketball team, is a 2.8 student who plans to major in either business-finance or marketing.

WITH DIVISION I schools forced to cut 10 scholarships under new NCAA guidelines, several area players are still awaiting word on potential offers.

With the Big 10 schools forced to cut back from 95 to 85 scholarships, the MAC and Division II Great Lakes Conference are getting a better pick of the litter this season.

But that is creating hardship for some area players, who have been put in a compromising position with certain recruiters. One area coach reported one of his players visited a MAC school, but was then told he was not wanted. Another area high school coach said his player visited a MAC school, but was told he had to make a decision by Friday (Jan. 30) or the scholarship would be offered to another recruit. Other players are awaiting ACT and SAT test results, which may qualify them to play at the Division I level.

Those All-Area players expected to sign by Wednesday, but who have not verbally committed (as of Tuesday) include Livonia Franklin linebacker Chris Parenti, Borgess defensive back/wide receiver Sean Darkins, Borgess defensive back Zip Holliday and Wayne running back Darren Tatum.

Jouppi gets passed over

Joe Jouppi, the All-Area linebacker from Plymouth Salem, may be a victim of the NCAA's ruling to reduce the number of Division I football scholarships from 95 to 85 per school.

At one point, Miami of Ohio, Eastern Michigan and Central Michigan were eager to sign Jouppi — an aggressive, hard-hitting player much in the mold of former Salem star Scott Jurek, currently a starter at Eastern.

But all three Mid-American Conference schools have given Jouppi the cold shoulder.

"I've been at this a long time," said Salem coach Tom Moshimer. "If he's not at least a MAC-level player then I don't know who is."

With 10 fewer scholarships, major Division I schools like the University of Michigan and Michigan State are being extra selective in their recruiting process. Before, U-M or MSU could afford to gamble on a borderline player. Now many borderline players will end up in a MAC-level program. The effect of the NCAA ruling trickles down to Division II and Division III levels as well.

Jouppi visited Hillsdale last week and is likely to end up at a Division II school.

"What it means is, somebody is going to get a steal. This kid is a player," Moshimer said.

St. Mary's tumbles

Balanced scoring was the good news for St. Mary's College's basketball team in Monday's game at Aquinas College of Grand Rapids. The bad news was Aquinas had six players score in double figures, and they accounted for a lot more points and a 109-84 victory.

The loss ended St. Mary's modest two-game win streak and dropped the Eagles to 10-14. Aquinas, an NAIA District 23 rival, is 10-13.

Five Eagles reached double figures in scoring, led by Theo Pearson's 13 points (and a team-high seven rebounds). Jon Bow, Bob Bringman and Lance Davis all came off the bench to net 12 points apiece. Brad Turber added 10.

Aquinas got 22 points from Corey Branch and 21 from Rich Wilson. The winners' victory margin was accumulated at the free throw line, as they hit 45-of-59 foul shots. St. Mary's was 14-of-21.

ON JAN. 27, the Eagles soared to a 23-point halftime lead (52-29) but had to survive a furious second-half rally to post an 82-80 triumph at Concordia College.

St. Mary's went from hot to cold in the space of a halftime intermission, allowing Concordia to come back and eventually tie the game at 78-78. Davis was the difference for the Eagles. He hit a free throw with 10 seconds left to put his team up by two, then stole the ball from Concordia leading scorer Scott Goodpaster (24 points) as Goodpaster was about to attempt the game-tying shot.

St. Mary's plays at University of Michigan-Dearborn Wednesday, then hosts Flint Jordan Saturday.

Recruit signs

St. Mary's has signed its first major basketball recruit, 6-foot-3 guard Andre Sasser of Detroit Cody.

Sasser is a three-year starter for Cody and averaged 21.6 points, 7.8 rebounds and 4.3 assists through the Comets' first seven games this season. He was also hitting 56.6 percent of his floor shots and 79 percent of his free throws.

Sasser is expected to fill a void for the Eagles as a perimeter shooter. Cody coach Rob Menefee called Sasser "the best shooter I've ever had here, he just gets better and better all the time."

Sasser was being recruited by Division I schools Eastern Michigan, and Western Michigan, and others like Oklahoma State, Tulsa and Colorado were showing considerable interest.

The 3.2 grade-point student plans to major in business administration.

OU fouled out up north

There's no going back, is there, Bob Taylor?

Taylor, remember, left his coaching job at Lake Superior State to accept the same position at Oakland University this season. On Saturday he returned to his former place of employment, but it was hardly a happy homecoming.

His Lady Pioneer team battled back but had too few bodies left by game's end to pull off the upset in a 95-84 overtime loss.

For years, coaches from the lower peninsula Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (GLIAC) teams have talked about the dreaded upper peninsula road trip, where officiating often seems slanted toward the home club.

Slanted would not sufficiently describe Saturday's contest. OU shot 17 free throws, making 10. LSS put up an incredible 53 foul shots, canning 41. Both are GLIAC records. So is Gwen Wilkie's 18 attempts from the stripe; she hit 14 and finished with a game-high 24 points.

NOT SURPRISINGLY, five OU players — starters Sonja Pearson, Celeste Sartor, Sarah Knuth and Kim Klein, and reserve Leah Fenwick — fouled out. The Lady Pioneers were whistled for a GLIAC-record 35 personals; LSS got only 15.

Despite the lopsided foul factor, OU fought its way back from a 43-30 halftime deficit to tie it at 70 with 2:01 left on a Knuth jumper. Vicki Hill's two free throws with 26 seconds remaining pushed the Lady Lakers up by four, 76-72, but the Lady Pioneers stormed back again.

Margaret Boyle scored on a drive to the hoop and, after an OU timeout, Knuth stole the ball and scored with seven seconds left to tie it at 76-76.

The Lady Pioneers were running low on players by this time. Still, they limited LSS to two overtime baskets, but the Lady Lakers shot 16 free throws, making 15, to outscore OU 19-8 in overtime.

Knuth finished with 18 points and seven rebounds. Boyle had 17 points, 10 assists and three steals and defensively limited LSS's Erica Ledy to seven points while forcing five turnovers. Klein pitched in 15 points for OU.

Teresa Watwood scored 22 for LSS (18-2 overall, 8-1 in the GLIAC).

ON THURSDAY, OU pulled away from Michigan Tech with a 19-2 run in the second half to post a 78-59 triumph at Tech.

Klein's eight points — she finished with 15 — sparked the surge, which carried the Lady Pioneers from a 38-37 lead with 17:38 left to a 57-39 advantage with 11:15 to go. Tech (4-13 overall, 0-8 in the GLIAC) never got within 10 afterwards.

Knuth's 17 points paced OU. Boyle added 14 points and 10 assists. Mary Fisher had 11 for Tech, with Janette Lutz contributing 10.

OU, now 14-6 overall and 5-4 in the GLIAC, hosts Grand Valley State Thursday and Saginaw Valley State Saturday.

Pioneer men upended

The opportunity was there. All Oakland University's mens basketball team needed to do was win at Lake Superior State Saturday. Combined with Wayne State's loss at Michigan Tech, the Pioneers would have been within a game of first place in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

The incentive was considerable. A win would give OU a sweep of its two-game upper peninsula road trip (the Pioneers were 73-68 victors at Michigan Tech Thursday), a feat rarely accomplished by the best of teams. It would propel the Pioneers into the final seven-game stretch of GLIAC games — five of which are at home — with momentum.

One problem: OU was never in the game against LSS, pulling to within four late in the game but losing, 90-84. The defeat left the Pioneers at 15-6 overall, 6-3 in the GLIAC. The Lakers are also 6-3 in the GLIAC; they are 11-6 overall.

LSS's first-half shooting (20-of-33, 61 percent) allowed it to take a 47-39 lead at intermission. The Lakers added to that bulge early in the second half and kept it in double figures most of the way. The closest OU got was 86-82 with 28 seconds left.

FOR OU, SCOTT Bittinger turned in another excellent shooting performance, netting 29 points (including five-for-five three-pointers). Johnny Johnson scored 19, Wallace Davis had 13 and 11 rebounds and John Henderson scored 10.

Tony Avant paced LSS with 28 points on 12-of-15 floor shooting. Mike West had 21, Chris Wooley 16 and John Gilbert 14 and 10 rebounds.

In Thursday's win, OU opened up a nine-point lead at halftime (34-25) by scoring the final nine points of the half, but it didn't last. Tech (10-10 overall, 5-4 in the GLIAC) got the first 13 points of the second half, and the battle was on.

With 9:27 to play the game was tied at 48-all. OU scored the next six points, and the Huskies never got closer than five the rest of the way.

OU hosts Grand Valley State Thursday and Saginaw Valley State Saturday.

Canton to host state's top 2

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

If you are going to sponsor a tournament, you might as well bring in the best teams available, right?

That's more or less how Plymouth Canton gymanstics coach John Cunningham approached the inaugural Plymouth Canton Invitational, which will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, at Canton's Phase III facility.

The top two teams in the state will headline the 11-team competition. Troy Athens (ranked No. 1 by the Michigan Gymnastics Coaches Association) and Freeland (No. 2) will meet in a rematch. The two met earlier this season at the Troy Athens Invitational, and Athens won by a slim .15 margin.

"The Troy Athens meet was very exciting," Cunningham said. "We got a chance to sit and watch some great performances. Our meet should be a nice rematch to show what will happen with the rankings. I think there's going to be a change. I couldn't believe Athens beat Freeland the last time."

North Farmington, ranked No. 3 in the state and No. 1 in Observerland, had to pull out of the meet because of a scheduling conflict.

The field for the Canton Invitational can be divided into three groups. Athens, Freeland and state-ranked Ann Arbor Pioneer comprise the elite group. The trio scores consistently in the 130-plus range. Dearborn, Midland Dow, Canton and Plymouth Salem make up the second group. They score in the 125-130 range.

Royal Oak Kimball, Northville, Farmington and Vassar score 115-120 and comprise the third tier.

Cunningham expects the competition to run from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Admission is $1 for students, $1.75 for adults.

ON MONDAY NIGHT, Westland John Glenn, the No. 2-ranked team in Observerland, scored a 130.25-125.95 Western Lakes victory against Plymouth Canton.

Glenn's Debbie Williams and Debbie Tomasko shared first place on vault, each scoring 9.1. Williams won on uneven parallel bars (8.6) and placed second on floor exercise (8.7). Tomasko and Angie Temelko tied for third on floor (8.6). Temelko was second on bars (8.2).

Amy Pastori of Salem helped her team earn a 128.1 team score Monday, but it wasn't enough to beat Observerland's No. 1 team, North Farmington.

For Canton, Mary Jo Charron placed first on both balance beam (8.65) and floor exercise (8.8). Brenda Perry placed third on vault (8.45) and second on beam (8.35).

John Glenn is 6-1 on the season. Canton is 5-2. The Chiefs will host both Ann Arbor Pioneer and Plymouth Salem tonight in a three-way meet.

NORTH FARMINGTON won one and lost one Monday night.

The Raiders beat Plymouth Salem 135.6-128.1 but may have lost the services of all-arounder Lucine Toroyan for an indefinite period of time. Toroyan sustained a foot injury prior to competing on floor exercise.

Before the injury, Toroyan won bars (9.0) and placed second on beam (8.8) and third on vault (8.75).

North's Kim Heller won vault (9.3) and beam (9.0). She was third on both bars (8.35) and floor (9.2). Kara Karhu added a second on vault (9.05).

Jackie Huff and Becky Talbot paced Salem (2-3). Huff won floor with a 9.3 and placed third on beam (8.6). Talbot was second on both bars (8.5) and floor (9.25).

The Raiders are 9-0.

Rocks, Chiefs win non-league meets swimming

Plymouth Salem edged Brighton 95-77 in a non-league swim meet Tuesday night at Salem.

The Rocks won three individual events: Phil Bocketti in the 100-yard butterfly (58.4), Ron Orris in the 500 freestyle (4:52.9) and Geoff Taylor in the 100 breaststroke (1:07.9).

David Miller, Jon Hobgood, Bocketti and John Kim won the 200 medley relay in 1:47.4 and John Irvine, Bocketti, Don Harwood and Orris won the 400 freestyle relay in 3:28.7.

Salem is 7-2 on the season.

PLYMOUTH CANTON got to the .500 mark Tuesday with a 90-82 win at Novi.

The Chiefs (5-5) took seven second place finishes in the meet.

Engineers alive with 3-game run

By Chris McCosky

hockey

Don't bury the Hennessey Engineers just yet.

The Plymouth-based Junior A hockey team showed some resiliency last weekend winning three straight games. The streak comes after the Engineers lost two straight to North American Junior Hockey League leader Compuware the previous weekend.

Friday, the Engineers scored four unanswered goals in the third period to overtake the Fraser Falcons 6-3 at the Plymouth Cultural Center. The team then played a two-game series in Oxford, Ohio, against Miami of Ohio. On Saturday, the Engineers rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win 4-3. On Sunday, the Engineers coasted 10-3.

The Engineers remain in third place in the NAJHL. Compuware (25-5-0) leads the league with 45 points. The Falcons (18-8-5) are four points back. The Engineers (16-12-6) are three points behind the Falcons, seven behind Compuware.

"Nobody on this team is giving up. No way," said Engineers coach A.J. Baker. "I think they really wanted to show something after last week (the Compuware losses)."

The Engineers, who face a two-game series with Fraser, could move into second place this weekend. They host the Falcons Friday (8:20 p.m. at the Cultural Center) and travel to Fraser on Sunday (1:15 p.m.).

TODD TAMBURINO and Leif Gustafson triggered the Engineers' comeback Friday night. Both scored two goals. Gustafson scored the eventual game-winner on a disputed play.

With the game tied 3-3, Fraser goalie Bill Pye (a Canton resident) stopped the puck near the faceoff circle to the side of his goal. Because no Engineer player was in the vacinity, the referee told Pye to play the puck. When Pye released the puck, Gustafson swooped in and put it into the empty net.

The Falcons' ensuing arguments fell on deaf ears.

Plymouth native Chris Belhart (four) and Bob Mlynarek (three) contributed seven assists.

Tony Esser of Plymouth scored one of the Falcons' goals.

Dave Church stopped 24 of 27 shots in the Engineers' goal.

GUSTAFSON WAS the hero for Hennessey on Saturday. He scored three goals. The final goal, with 20 seconds left, was the game-winner. Darryl Sattler also scored.

On Sunday, the Engineers got off 26 shots on goal and scored 10 times. Six of the 10 were power-play goals, much to Baker's delight. The Engineer power play has been fairly anemic all season.

Belhart and Tom Madden notched two goals and two assists apiece. J. Jewett also scored twice.

Church had another strong game in goal. He stopped 37 of 40 shots.

"Last weekend was tremendous," Baker said. "The guys showed me a lot coming back like that."

SCORING LEADERS: It used to be that the top five scorers in the NAJHL belonged to Compuware. That's not the case anymore.

Fraser's Don Stone is pulling away from the pack. He has scored 41 goals in 31 games. He also has 18 assists for a league-high 59 points.

The next three belong to the Engineers. Bryan Krygier (21 goals, 25 assists), Larry Pilut (16 goals, 30 assists) and Gustafson (21 goals, 23 assists) are second, third and fourth. Jewett is 10th in the league with 10 goals and 27 assists.

Trick-caster headlines '87 Bass-a-rama show

Bill Parker

MOST 16-year-old boys are busy chasing the girl next door or running off with a buddy to the neighborhood video arcade. But not Scotty Lucas.

Born and raised in Noblesville, Ind., Lucas is known by many of the locals there as a modern day Huckleberry Finn. The young man likes nothing better than to spend his time fishing and hunting in the nearby Indiana wilderness.

Through this love of the outdoors Lucas has developed a rather unique talent, trick casting.

Lucas isn't just your average trick caster either. He's ranked number two in the country in trick casting, is a field tester for DuPont "Stren" and also does trick shooting with a compound bow for Bear Archery Co.

Lucas' trick casting show will be one of the highlights of the seventh annual BASS-A-RAMA '87, scheduled for Feb. 13-15 at the Waterford Community Center.

Sponsored by the Michigan Bass Busters of Oakland County in cooperation with the Waterford Community Center, BASS-A-RAMA '87 will feature seminars, demonstrations and displays on the newest fishing tackle, lures, boats, motors and accessories.

Some of the other featured guests scheduled to appear at the BASS-A-RAMA include Jerry McKinnis, host of ESPN's "The Fishing Hole;" Ron Shearer, a champion pro fisherman and host of the television series "The Great American Outdoors;" John Reiland, world champion light line fisherman; Ron Spitler, fisheries biologist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources; and Captain Steve Jones, one of the most successful charter fishing captains in the state.

The Waterford Community Center is located at the corner of M-59 and Crescent Lake Road in Pontiac.

Show hours are 3-10 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $3 for adults. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Show hours are 4-10 p.m. Fridays, noon-10 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. On Feb. 15 the show will close at 8 p.m.

● Outdoorama '87 Sport and Travel Show will be held at the Michigan State Fair Coliseum Feb. 20 through March 1.

Admission is $4.50 adults and $2 for senior citizens and children under 12. (Children under five will be admitted free.)

SKIING EVENTS

● Whoppers North American Vasa, the fourth stop on the Leaf Great American Ski Chase — eight cross-country ski marathons held throughout the United States — will be held Saturday, Feb. 14, at the Grand Traverse Resort in Traverse City.

Over 1,500 skiers from across the country are expected to participate. The highlight of the event will be a 50-kilometer marathon. A 25-kilometer half marathon and a 10-kilometer mini-Vasa will also be held.

For more information call (616) 946-4272.

● The Jimmie Heuga USA Express — part of a nationwide marathon downhill ski series — will be held at Boyne Mountain Wednesday, Feb. 11.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Jimmie Heuga Center, a non-profit organization which develops exercise programs for physically challenged individuals.

B.J.'s a Hawkeye

Ex-Warrior goes down fighting against U-M

C.J. Risak

THE BUZZER sounded. The game ended. The celebration began.

B.J. Armstrong stood dead still near midcourt, seemingly oblivious to the jubliant fans spilling on to floor in a wild frenzy all around him. Then he slumped over, bending and grabbing both knees in a combination of exhaustion and disappointment.

This could have been one happy homecoming for Armstrong. But if it had been, no one would have cheered. Or almost no one, anyway.

That's because Armstrong took his considerable basketball talents from Birmingham Brother Rice to Iowa. Not the University of Michigan. Not Michigan State.

"I looked very hard at both Michigan and Michigan State," Armstrong would say later. But he opted to accept George Raveling's bid to play at Iowa. That was 1985. By the end of Armstrong's first season as a Hawkeye, Raveling had split for the west coast and the University of Southern California. Armstrong decided to stick at Iowa.

GOOD MOVE. At least until Saturday it was. Iowa had lost just once, a home game against Indiana, and had spent a week or so at the top of the national rankings. Entering Saturday's game at Crisler Arena, the Hawkeyes were No. 2 in the country.

And B.J. Armstrong was their starting point guard. He was averaging better than 12 points a game. He was in charge of running new coach Tom Davis' fast-paced, full-court attack. Big responsibility for a sophomore, but so far Armstrong appeared to be up to the challenge.

A win over Michigan Saturday would have made him happier than at any time this season. He tried to downplay his feelings after the 100-92 upset, but his performance down the stretch betrayed him.

As Armstrong accurately assessed, "We just weren't sharp today. (Michigan) just outplayed us, outhustled us. They beat us to loose balls."

When asked if it was a tough loss to swallow, Armstrong said, "Sure it is, sure it is. You always like to win on the road. It's always frustrating to lose."

HE WOULD repeat those same thoughts a dozen times in the next hour to a variety of local media, all wondering what it was like to be bombarded with deafening cheers in his hometown — after losing the game.

"Every loss hurts," he said at one point. "I try to approach each game the same. It would have been nice to win one here."

For Armstrong, a win would have been sublime. But from the opening minutes it was apparent an upset was in motion. U-M would open up a lead, Iowa would battle back, then the Wolverines would answer with another charge.

Frustration is an integral part of sport, and Saturday's game was frustrating for Armstrong. He could see his team was operating at three-quarter capacity, a normally lusty V-8 plugging along on six cylinders. And he could not inspire any more out of his teammates.

Finally, Armstrong took matters into his own hands. He had scored just five points, but with six minutes left and Iowa down 80-71 he started to force the action. Two free throws dropped, then two more. A driving layup for two. A beauty of a baseline jumper, 12 feet out, arched and ripped through the net. Another layup.

BUT THE LAST basket came with just 15 seconds remaining. The game was over; only the final point spread need be decided.

Armstrong had scored 10 of his 15 points in that stretch run, but it could not change the outcome. He made all four of his second-half free throws; his teammates managed just four-of-10.

"We're just going to have to pick ourselves up and work harder," he said outside the visiting team's locker room underneath the Crisler Arena stands. "We'll have to work harder, do the things that got us here."

Hard work is what earned Armstrong a starting role with one of the nation's best teams. He was listed way down on the Iowa depth chart in preseason, but quickly rose to the summit. Against U-M, he played 27 of 40 minutes, sharing the position with Detroiter Bill Jones.

"I believed in myself, in my ability," said Armstrong. "I just thought I could play. I look at all point guards, see what they do, pick up things from all of them."

POINT GUARD is the most difficult position to play in basketball. Quarterback, ballhandler deluxe, defensive ace, passer extraordinare, cheerleader — then scorer. Armstrong was hard on himself after Saturday's loss.

"I tried to get everyone involved in the game, all my teammates," he said. "I probably didn't concentrate enough. Some of (the blame) I take on myself. We weren't sharp enough."

There are perhaps six teams in the Big Ten that are among the top 30 in the nation. Add to that some difficult non-conference foes for Iowa, and it would be impossible to be sharp every game — particularly when even the worst teams are taking dead aim at the one at the top of the pyramid.

Iowa is a solid club, 10 players deep, a team that can apply full-court defensive pressure for 40 minutes, and a team that can either muscle the ball inside or knock down a string of outside jumpers.

Armstrong is a big part of this team. He tried to disassociate himself with Saturday's disappointment. He already was looking ahead: "We'll just have to come back and win Wednesday."

Turn-of-the-century bedrooms, a porch dining room and the friendly Sunday brunch line are just three of the features that make a traveler feel at home at Stafford's Bay View Inn in Petoskey.

The northern LP—and 'homey' Stafford's

Iris Jones

I had already eaten everything on the Sunday buffet tables, but I couldn't resist sneaking one more blintz as I waited to say goodbye to Stafford Smith at Stafford's Bay View Inn in Petoskey.

Stafford was in a black tuxedo at the end of the hot food table, regularly checking the Eggs Benedict, the tomato and bread puddings, and explaining the sauces made from Michigan foods and clustered around the home made waffles.

He was also carving the ham and watching the batter overflow the old fashioned round waffle iron at his elbow.

Stafford 'Duff' Smith has been a famous figure at the end of the Sunday brunch line for a quarter of a century and all his regular customers know him well, so it takes a little time to say hello or goodbye, just long enough to sneak a last blintz or eye the nearby dessert table ruefully.

Janice Smith was in the lobby, greeting guests exactly as she did in 1960 when she and Duff met here for the first time. Janice was a hostess and Stafford was assistant manager. They married and bought the inn in 1961, and have been part of northern Michigan history ever since.

1986 was their 25th anniversary and the hundredth anniversary of the inn, at least in its building stage. The summer of 1987 is the centennial of the actual opening so they plan to celebrate their hundredth birthday twice.

TRAVELERS COME to an inn like this because the owners know the definition of the word host, "to greet or entertain in your own home, or elsewhere." The Smiths not only own this place, they have over the years been the plumbers, builders, decorators, cooks, so it is no illusion that they are welcoming you into their home.

As he carves the ham, Stafford swings right occasionally to point out an early photograph of the inn. It was built in 1886 as a 12-room boarding house catering to the summer residents of Bay View, the seasonal home of Chicago 'cottagers.' Even now, the three-story Victorian 'cottages,' with their gingerbread roofs, dominate the surrounding streets.

The name HOWARD is in the stained glass window over the entrance door. The inn started out as the Woodland Avenue House, became the Howard House and then the New Howard House until the bank foreclosed in 1918 and it reopened as Hotel Roselawn in 1923.

Joseph Graham, founder of the Graham Paige automobile, sold it to Arthur W. Twarz, who named it Bay View Inn. He sold it to Dr. Roy Heath, and when Heath was looking for just the right person to inherit his love for innkeeping, he sold the white clapboard hostelry to a young 22-year-old Stafford Smith for $30,000 in June, 1961.

The place had 50 tiny bedrooms with common baths down the hall. Guests came by train, had their own reserved table in the dining room and stayed for the summer. When the trains stopped running the next year, the Smiths had to redesign their inn for modern, mobile travelers.

Travelers come to an inn like this because the owners know the definition of the word host, "to greet or entertain in your own home, or elsewhere." Duff and Janice Smith not only own Stafford's Bay View Inn, they have over the years been the plumbers, builders, decorators, cooks.

THEY HAVE been building, adding and renovating ever since. Stafford's Bay View Inn now has 20 guest rooms, each with its own bath. Everything is slowly being converted to the style of the 1880's.

Duff refuses to even consider putting telephones and television sets in the rooms. There is one in the lounge but Duff likes to put out a platter of complimentary hors d'ouevres in the evening and watch former television junkies get to know each other, maybe even wander together into the dining room for dinner.

The small white clapboard hotel with the Victorian wallpaper and the antique beds was open summers only until 1968. During that first decade, the Smiths ran the inn during the summer and did other things in the winter. Janice taught English at Petoskey High School, and still does.

Duff started a catering business, and took over the dining rooms at Boyne Highland and Nubs Nob in Harbor Springs and at the Weathervane Inn, Charlevoix. In 1971 he started the Pier Restaurant in Harbor Springs. That is where I first met him; I think he was painting the front door at the time.

The Smiths celebrated their 25th anniversary and the centennial of the inn by opening a restaurant called Stafford's One Water Street in Boyne City, their chance at last to build a place frm the ground up. By 1990, they hope to have a 45-room inn next door.

OVER THE YEARS, Stafford has relinquished more and more of the innkeeping to others, to Dudley Marvin, general manager of the restaurants, and to Judy Honor, GM of the Bay View for six years and hospitality/catering expert for the whole organization.

Stafford accepted the centennial business award from the Historical Society of Michigan in 1986, and will become the first president of Country Inns and Back Roads Association Feb. 1. If you are an inn lover you probably own the guide book Country Inns and Back Roads, revised for the 21st year by author Norman T. Simpson.

I have visited only a few of the 210 inns described in that book, but my experience is that their success or failure depends on exactly that attribute of 'being a host' that typifies the Bay View Inn.

The beautifully renovated rooms, with their antique furniture and quilts, are an important part of that at-home feeling, of course. It is also very down-home to linger over pink tablecloths, with antiques and turn-of-the-century wallpaper around you, enjoying a view out the window of summer lake or winter snow.

GOOD FOOD makes you feel at home, even if the setting is more elegant than your own home. Stafford's Bay View Inn was one of three midwest inns featured in the April issue of Gourmet magazine in 1985; the article included Stafford's recipes for chicken Dijon, seafood fettucine and shrimp chinois.

As I stood in line on that recent Sunday morning, however, sneaking a final blintz and watching Stafford Smith carving ham and serving waffles at the end of the table, I knew that rooms, food and even service were important, but not enough.

What it takes to be an innkeeper is the same thing it takes to be a great host in your own house. You make everything as fine as it can be and then you are a very personal host.

Stafford's Bay View Inn is fully open from May 15 to Oct. 3. You can rent a room and have breakfast year round, but the popular dining room is only open weekends in the winter.

There used to be three buffets a week in the old days: two on Sundays and one on Thursday, which was maid's night out. Now there is just the Sunday brunch buffet: adults $11; children 7-11 $6.50; children 3-6 $3.50.

Room rates this time of year start at $67 for one person, $84 for two people in a room, including a full breakfast.

For more information contact Stafford's Bay View Inn, US-31 Bay View, Michigan 49770 or telephone (616)347-2771.

150th to be big tourist year for state

The year-long sesquicentennial will help pump $14 billion in tourism revenue into the state economy and propel Michigan to its fifth consecutive record tourism year, AAA Michigan is predicting.

With 150th anniversary celebrations and special events planned in nearly every section of the state, tourism should grow about 5 percent this year, said Peter Erickson, AAA Michigan member services director.

That would equal the increase registered last year when nearly 50 million travelers helped boost tourism revenue to $13.3 billion. From 1983-1986, tourism revenues rose by $2.8 billion, or 27 percent. Erickson attributed the record growth of 1986 to low inflation and the lowester average gas prices in eight years.

Erickson said the cost of an average 4½-day trip, including camping and more expensive hotel stays, also equaled the figure of the year before, $151 per person.

Erickson said self-serve, no-lead gas averaged 94 cents a gallon in 1986, compared to $1.24 cents the year before. He said the average cost along state routes was the lowest since AAA began keeping records for self-serve no lead in 1979.

Figures from the state Department of Transportation for 1986 show a record 70.6 billion miles were traveled in the state, including a 4 percent increase at 22 major tourist attractions last summer, a 4.4 percent jump in state tax collections for hotel and motel room rentals for the first nine months and a 7 percent rise in Mackinac Bridge crossings.

Michigan is expected to spend about $12 million, same as last year, to promote the state's 36,000 miles of rivers and streams, 11,000 inland lakes and 19 million acres of forests.

Food quiz: What is your nutrition IQ?

DO YOU think that you know basic nutrition?

Today, basic nutrition goes beyond a single nutrient's food value and involves whole, complex foods. Most of us know we should reduce saturated fats and increase fiber — but can we translate that into an appetizing dinner menu?

This quiz, from Nutrition Action's nutrition director, Bonnie Liebman, will tell you how you're doing.

Remnants:

Couple uncover the survivors of Poland's past

Photographer Tomaszz Tomaszewski and journalist Malgorzata Niesabitowska spent more than five years tracking down the surviving Jews of Poland. They worked out of the public eye, on their own time, using their own money to complete a major documentary book. In the photo on the wall is the last kosher butcher in Warsaw, Zygmunt-Srul, during prayers in the Warsaw synagog.

It's almost like looking at a lost civilization, this exhibition of color photographs from a book about Jews left in Poland after the Holocaust, at Birmingham's Pierce Street Gallery. These are gentle, thought-provoking glimpses of a way of life that seems to disappear as you watch it.

The first chapter of the book, "Remnants: The Last Jews of Poland" has a one word title, 'Why?"

Why would a young, married, Polish couple from Warsaw, Tomasz Tomaszewski, free-lance photographer and Malgorzata Niezabitowska, journalist, want to write about Jews? Like 90 percent of the Poles, they are Roman Catholic. The Jewish population of Poland has all but disappeared. Why did they want to interview old people, living by themselves in small towns and villages?

And in turn from the Jews they could find, came another why. Why us?

But, the couple persisted from 1980 to 1985, working on their project quietly while they did other assignments, driven by a curiosity that wouldn't go away.

She said, "My grandmother, who brought me up, told me about Polish Jews. It was a normal part of Polish history. My grandmother was a very clever person. She wanted to educate me in a particular way, and Jews were part of my heritage."

With that said, this slim, blond, blue-eyed journalist spoke of the atmosphere when she was going to school in the '50s and '60s, "The Jewish subject was taboo in Poland. The Jewish subject was untouched — in the press, on TV, in books — there was just nothing."

SHE WONDERED WHAT, if anything, was left of the once second largest Diasapora in the world that numbered more than 3 million before World War II. Their influence on the culture and economy of Poland had been significant for a thousand years.

Her curiosity was fueled by a well-remembered pain, "In 1968, 25,000 Jews left Poland. They were very assimilated . It was very painful. They considered themselves Poles, not Jews. They were invited to emigrate. I had some very good friends who were Jews in high school and my first year of college. I was very shocked. It was the first serious experience of my life. They came to my apartment. We discussed it all night. It stayed with me — the pain. But I was too young to deal with the subject."

Niezabitowska, with degrees in law and journalism, from the University of Warsaw, and Tomaszewski, a free-lance photographer, trained in physics and optics, at the University of Warsaw, met in 1977 and were married in 1978. Both were active in the Solidarity Union and she went to work for its paper, Solidarity Weekly, from the first issue on. When that was closed down, she worked for other papers and many of her articles appeared in Western publications including Paris Match, les Tempes Modernes and Moment/USA.

THEY USED THEIR OWN funds on the project to find, talk with and photograph the Jews of Poland. In all, she did 1,000 interviews and he took 7,000 pictures. Film was often difficult to find and so were the Jews they wanted to photograph and interview.

"We could write the next book on how to find the people," Niezabitowska said. "They are not hidden, but they are not publicized at all. It's very important to win the trust of the first person. They were anxious, surprised, suspicious. Many of them are lonely. No one visits them. When we came they asked why."

Tomaszewski said he printed some of his pictures to show them what he had done. "They liked the pictures very much. They saw they were not manipulated."

She added, "After the first barrier was crossed, they were friendly. They called us children. They wanted us to stay with them and they told us many stories.".

He said,"They had the feeling they are the forgotten people."

She said many live in small, remote villages, "They don't need money or clothes. What they need is human beings. They were very nice to us. We became friends. We stayed in contact with them."

Tomaszewski is vice president of the Union of Polish Art Photographers, the only one of its kind in the country. Membership brings an I.D. card that is the essential credential for free-lance photographers.

When he had an exhibition of 120 of the photographs of the Jews at this organization's gallery in Warsaw in 1985, the response was heartwarming.

SOME 12,000 ATTENDED during four weeks run, a record breaking figure. The photographs of the Jewish cemeteries in serious disrepair stimulated a movement to raise funds and volunteer help to care for them.

He said, "Poland has 450 Jewish cemeteries, most in very bad condition. Even people who live near these places don't know they are there. We just wanted to shake the people and it worked. "

While the book has not been printed in Poland, a German version is being printed in Switzerland for distribution in Germany, Austria and, Tomaszewski hopes, Holland.

Sedar at the Jewish Community Center in Warsaw was photographed by Tomaszewski in 1983.

He said the book is like the second chapter of Roman Vishniac's photographs of Jewish life in Poland before World War II.

But, in the last year, life has changed dramatically for this talented, energetic couple and their daughter, Maryna, 8. They are living in Cambridge, Mass., where Niezabitowska is on a yearlong Nieman Fellowship for journalism at Harvard.

He is working on "Discovering Americans," an assignment from National Geographic. They just returned from a trip to Wyoming and before that made a 5,000 mile, 26-day trip by car from Boston to Los Angeles .

He reports with a smile of delight that he has shot 200 roles of film and adds that quality is paramount when shooting for National Geographic," You have to bring them the best of the best."

He remembers when film was hard to come by and many things interfered with the work, but he doesn't dwell on the past and neither does she. It is as if they have a sense of destiny and there are many missions to accomplish.

"Remnants: The Last Jews of Poland," Malgorzata Niezabitowska and Tomasz Tomaszewski, Friendly Press, $35, Pierce Street Gallery, 217 Pierce, Birmingham. Hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday.

Marquis clears decks for 'Pinafore'

A SOUTHFIELD father-daughter operatic team will be featured when the Michigan Lyric Opera returns to the stage after a successful first season.

George Bloomfield and daughter Mary Anne will be part of an all-area cast in the production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore" at the Marquis Theater, 135 E. Main Street in downtown Northville.

Professional singers and orchestra will perform in this popular operetta on two successive weekends, beginning Saturday. The schedule is as follows: 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 7 and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 8. The following weekend there will be a Friday night performance at 8 p.m. in in addition to Saturday and Sunday shows.

The production, with support from the Michigan Council for the Arts and the Natinal Endowment for the Arts, is directed gy Joyce Uzelac and conducted byt Douglas Morrison of Livonia.

Tickets are $10, available at the theater in advance or at the door. Credit card sales are available by calling 349-8110.

Mary Anne Bloomfield is a recent graduate of Michigan State University, where she was a member of the Women's Glee Club. No stranger to local Gilbert and Sullivan fans, she has appeared in "Iolanthe," "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance,"and "Ruddigore" with the Marian Rice Players and the St. Bede Players.

SHE RECENTLY was added to the artist roster of the Michigan Lyric Opera and is making her professional operatic debut as one of the "sisters, cousins and aunts" of the Captain of the H.M.S. Pinafore.

Her father is a veteran of the stage, having appeared in numerous roles with the St. Bede Players, Grosse Pointe Players, Southfield Community Players, the Tuesday Musicale of Detroit Centennial, and many others.

For the Lyric, he recreates the role of Sir Joseph Porter, admiral and "ruler of the Queen's Navy." Other G&S roles in his reportoire include Ko-Ko in "The Mikado" (four times, including last February with the Michigan Light Opera), the Duke of Plaza-Toro in "The Gondoliers," Major General Stanley in "The Pirate of Penzance," and Rob Oakapple in "Ruddigore."

Gilbert and Sullivan's characteristically dry humor is evident in Pinafore, which is a two-act musical comedy set on board a British naval vessel. The commander of the ship is Captain Corcoran (played by Stephen Sell of Redford) who has a daughter named Josephine (Jane Schoonmaker Rodgers). Josephine is in love with Ralph Rackstraw, a common sailor played by David Troiano, but their relationship is hindered by the difference in their social stations.

CAPTAIN CORCORAN also has an admirer in the peddlerwoman called Little Buttercup, who possesses a dark secret. The captain, wishing to make his daughter Josephine a suitable match, selects stately Sir Joseph Porter (George Bloomfield), an admiral.

Sir Joseph is rebuffed by his intended, since she plans to elope with her beloved Ralph. The plot is revealed by the sinister Dick Deadeye, played by Mark Byars of Garden City and Ralph is put in irons. Byar's real-life role, incidentally, is that of a "good guy": Garden City police officer.

Finally, Buttercup reveals her secret: that Ralph and Captain Corcoran were switched in infancy. Ralph's now elevated social status frees him to marry Josephine, while the captain, now a commoner, becomes Buttercup's first mate.

Meanwhile, Sir Joseph resigns himself to wed Hebe (Dorothy Duensing), a cousin who is constantly tagging along, and all ends happily.

The "switched baby" plot is powerful and dramatic in grand opera, but becomes a ridiculous scenario at the hands of librettist William S. Gilbert. The very hummable melodies of Arthur Sullivan tradtionally have the audience doing just that as they leave the theater.

This "encore season" of the Lyric company follows a very successful first season that played to good crowds at all three offerings: "The Golden Age of Operetta," "The Mikado" and "Die Fledermaus."

This year's efforts will be marked by improvements in the technical quality and appearance of the shows, according to a MLO spokesperson.

The season will close with a June presentation of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" (in English).

"H.M.S. Pinafore" will run for two weekends, at 8 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday this week, with a Friday night performance added to the following weekend's schedule. For ticket information, call 349-8110.

Fun side of caricatures is challenging artifacts

David Messing

THIS YEAR I plan to take a course in sign language so that we can have special art classes for the hearing impaired. I plan to attend a small business seminar to better understand the "ins and outs" of business. I also hope to take a few classes in glass etchings and other specific art forms.

All pretty noble and self-improving topics wouldn't you say? So how did I start out this year? Juggling. Yes, juggling. I don't believe that juggling will enrich my art or lead me closer to any life goal, however, I thought it would be fun.

One of my art students, David Britchford, asked me if I would like to attend his class in juggling. I laughed, then thought, then laughed again and said, "Sure."

The first night I juggled three bean bags. But I invented a new style, bit my lip and ran into three people. If I juggle for 10 seconds, I cover about 30 feet running after bean bags, which are, for some reason, constantly falling out of my reach. I guess "fun" is not always easy.

IF YOU LIKE to have some fun in art, try doing a caricature. First I would like to say that caricatures are fun! They are 180 degrees from portraiture. In a portrait you try to play down unattractive or uncommon features. In caricatures you emphasize or poke fun at certain characteristic features. I feel a caricature should never be cruel or disrespectful. Any feature of face or body can be overdone to the point of injury and this should never be the goal of the caricaturist. So with that warning out of the way, let's talk about how to do caricatures.

A caricature is truly an art form. Art is selection and selection is caricaturing. It is studying the model or photo and extracting only those lines and shapes that are characteristic of the person. How you place those lines and shapes on paper sets the mood of the caricature. If your lines, shapes and colors are bold and greatly exaggerated, then your caricature will be wacky or silly. If your lines, shapes and colors are more carefully drawn and more subtly placed, then your caricature is more realistic yet still humorous. Both styles are appreciated and will be accepted.

A caricature is a visually brief description and that is a good tip for finding what to draw and what to leave out. Mentally describe the features to yourself before you begin to draw. Remember, it is your mind that tells the hand what to draw. Clarity in the mind produces clarity and accuracy of line on the paper.

ABSTRACTION MEANS to pull out or select, and the caricaturist must first master abstraction if he or she is to improve in this field. Caricatures of many artists are weighted down with too many lines and details, causing the artwork to hover somewhere between realism and cartoon. Probably the greatest compliment to a caricaturist is when someone says something like "that's his face exactly. In just a few lines you got his features perfect."

The hardest people to caricature are pretty girls and women because everything is pretty and there is little to be humorous with. Men are a caricaturist's playground because their features are usually bolder than those of women.

Always be sure to ask what are the hobbies of the subject and also the occasion for the request. Probably what will make you or break you as a caricaturist is style. "Style" is your personal touch or the look that is characteristic of your ability. The quality that causes people to say "Oh I've seen his work before." Style is not taught and it is particularly distasteful if it is copied. Style is developed by practice and is appreciated if only for its originality.

So try some caricatures. But you may have the same revelation I had this week — fun is not always easy.

Think of yourself as a poet

photography
Monte Nagler

Did you know there is a very powerful universal language spoken by everyone, young and old, rich or poor, from all parts of the world? What I'm referring to is the language of the photographic image.

And just as a knowledge of basics is essential to communication and understanding in any language, so is it in photography.

For example, we all know about grammar and punctuation in the English language. We know where the periods and commas belong. Similarly, in photography we need to know the basics, such as how to set the shutter speed, how to determine the correct aperture and how to read the depth-of-field scale.

But as creative photographers, we go a step beyond this. In short, we must learn to become poets with our cameras. You see, a poet makes grammar a secondary thing. The words flowing from the creative self are primary. The poet is tuned into his innermost feelings and these are expressed in words. Poems are written expressions of the inner self.

Photographers must strive to do this, too. We must make the mechanics of photography secondary in order to concentrate on the poetry. It's easy to get correct exposure with our cameras. Now let's work toward getting proper exposure with our photographic feelings.

Remember that as photographers, we have the ability to make visible what others can only sense. This is an exciting concept. Begin to think of your feelings as the true lens of the camera.

Realize that a photograph, and you as the photographer, can reach out and stir human emotions that often go beyond what the spoken or written word can do.

Remember, the lens that truly sees the beauty of a flower, the innocent smile of a child, or a dramatic sunset isn't attached to the front of the camera. Rather, it's the lens inside us.

Learn never to underexpose your feelings. Remember that it's not the artist's brush that produces the painting, the violinist's bow that makes the melody, nor the poet's pen that writes the sonnet.

Similarly, it's not the camera that produces the photograph — it's you.

Put your inside lens to work and become a poet of photographic language.

Showing Amish quilts

"To Warm Your Heart" is the theme of the sixth annual quilt show to be held at The Village Barn of Franklin 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Feb. 6,7.

There will be more than 50 handmade Amish and American country style quilts and wall hangings. The show is coordinated by Gail Hurn of Evansville, Ind. and Linda Lindsey of Houston, Texas.

Hurn will give a program, "Quilts in General; Amish in Particular" at The Village Barn at 7:30 p.m. Friday. There is no charge for the program, but reservations are required. To make them, call 851-7877. Both Hurn and Lindsey will be available throughout to answer questions.

Quilts with Amish design will be highlighted, many with a contemporary look in solid colors and many with the heart-shaped design characteristic of Amish culture. Several replicas of antique quilts with bright colors combined with navy or black in the style of the midwestern Amish will be on display.

All quilts and wall hangings are for sale and special orders will be taken. Also available will be Amish pillows, folk art, dolls baskets and related items.
