The Canton Connection

LOVE BASKETS: The Salvation Army in cooperation with Omnicom Cablevision and the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce is making plans for its fourth annual "Baskets Filled With Love" food drive/telethon to be held on Saturday, Dec. 5.

As part of the telethon there will be special videotaping sessions for local talent who wish to perform in the telethon. If you sing, dance, do magic tricks or have other talents, join the sessions 6-9:30 p.m. Thursdays, Nov. 5 and 12, and 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays, Nov. 14 and 21. Other taping sessions may be arranged on request. To schedule your time, call telethon chairman Pete Smith at 459-7335 or program director Maria Holmes at 459-7321.

ON GOSPEL HOUR: If you tune in to Jerry Falwell's "Old Time Gospel Hour" at 9 p.m. Sunday on Channel 62, you'll hear singer Cliff Lambert perform. The 1984 graduate of Plymouth Christian Academy in Canton is a music major at Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va. A Canton resident, Lambert was among the youngest vocalists ever to tour with California's Continental Singers when they performed in Europe in 1982. The award-winning Lambert also has performed overseas with the Chamber Choir of Liberty University and with the Southwestern Virginia Opera Society.

ABOUT SCHOOLS: Edwin Page, former local school administrator, spoke last week at the University of Detroit on "Critical Issues in the Schools Now and Their Implications for the 21st Century."

Page, a professor of education in the University of Detroit School of Education and Human Services, worked for 30 years for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. His last position was executive director of special programs and student services. Page's talk at U-D focused on the educational reform movement of the past five years; the nationwide teacher shortage; recent legislative actions, judicial decisions and new rules and regulations that affect the handicapped; and the extremists' influence on school curricula.

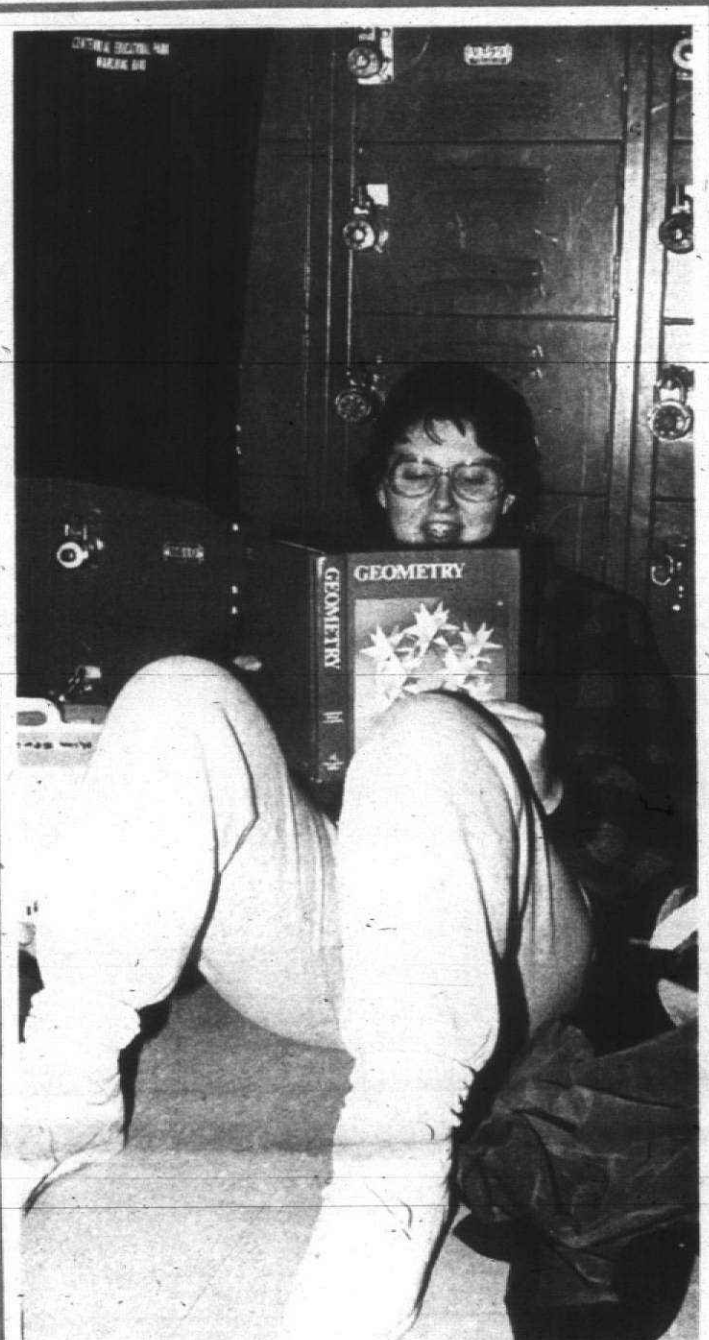

Page is executive director of the Michigan Association of Administrators in Special Education and last year was an association president. He is a member of the Statewide Dissemination Service Advisory Board, which provides parents, consumers and mental health advocates with information on programming activities, government activities and pending legislation.

For Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, Page had administrative responsibilities in special education, student support services, Title I, Head Start and Indian education.

HAS OFFICE: The Plymouth Symphony now has an office of its own.

A two-room office was recently donated to the symphony by Drs. Philip Warren, Nils Korsnes, Roger Bookwalter and Robert Millard. Kiyu Morse, symphony board president, said that the office will provide, for the first time, a central location for the Symphony Society Board meetings and storage for the extensive files of music accumulated over the symphony's 42 years of performing.

The new address for the symphony is 9430 S. Main. The phone number to order tickets for the 1987-88 concert season is 451-2112.

Humane psychic

Powers used to find love, truths — not ghosts

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A would-be tongue-in-cheek Halloween article became a story about a man searching for life's answers when Lou Golden began talking.

Some of the things he talks about might be better followed by "believe it or not" but the majority are intriguing, mind opening concepts about life, death and philosophy.

THE BIRMINGHAM RESIDENT and founder of the non-profit Parapsychology Society International Inc., explores odd, unexplainable happenings.

Golden doesn't give many answers but stresses the same message: "What is this magic — for want of a better word." He answers himself: "Human love — it's amazing, beautiful, powerful and it can take pain away. I believe it."

"You find the more you look, the greater the mystery," Golden said, adding that he wants to use what he learns to help people better conduct their lives. He stresses the importance of relaxing and taking control of your life.

"We're not looking for the headless horseman," said Golden who will make a repeat engagement before the Plymouth Study Group this spring.

Ask him to give a name to what he does and you won't get a simple response.

He's leery about claiming to be a psychic, yet he tells stories about supernatural type experiences in his life.

Like the time he was consumed with thoughts about his son when he thought he was going to die during a choking episode. Later, he returned home to find his son searching the house because he heard his father calling, Golden said.

GOLDEN WARNS AGAINST being suckered into paying exorbitant fees for "Tom Foolery" guised by people claiming to have psychic powers.

"People are very gullible. I hate to say that but, dammit, it's true."

"A psychic is a person with unique abilities and perceptions who can tell about the past, future and something about many other factors. Each individual has the potential. Psychics have something extra."

People approach Golden to ask if he thinks they have that sixth sense. Golden, who says his apropos surname was never changed, conducts a series of "very simple" tests to elicit an answer. He kept the criteria secret because it would defeat their effectiveness, he said.

"Why would anyone want to (be psychic)?" Golden said, laughing. "If they think they're going to use it to win the horse races, it won't work."

"I'm not interested in ghosts but I am interested in human potential. The purpose of our society is to find truths."

Teachers receive 14-percent raise

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Marking a drastic departure from 1982 when Plymouth-Canton teachers went on strike, a new two-year contract has been approved nearly a year before the current one expires.

The agreement grants 7-percent pay increases for 1988-1989 and 1989-1990.

It brings the starting salary for a beginning teacher to $23,794 from $22,237, in the first year of the contract.

For teachers at the top of the scale, reached after they put in 11 years and earn a master's degree, the salary is $43,000. That goes up to $46,403 in the contract's first year, said Norm Kee, assistant superintendent for employee relations.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT came at a Monday night press conference called by chief negotiators for the Plymouth-Canton Education Association and Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

The board of education unanimously approved the contract during Monday's meeting.

The 819-member teachers' union ratified the pact Thursday. The exact vote was unavailable but the margin was overwhelming, union officials said.

This is the third time the district has reached an early agreement with its teachers.

The contract reflects a meeting of the minds over class size, something administrators and teachers have clashed over in the past.

While no maximum class size was agreed to, "the district is trying to ensure classes are as balanced as much as possible," said union representative Tom Cotner.

Classes will be averaged to the extent possible, so that all have the same number of students. At the elementary level, an aide will be added once classes reach 34 students.

ALSO PART of the new contract is a teacher evaluation procedure that places more responsibility on building principals.

"It takes what's been done and makes it standard. Things are spelled out in terms of time," said union negotiator Maryann Ligato.

"I believe this will help improve instruction and increase due process for teachers."

The settlement provides vision benefits for the first time, and improves employees' long-term disability package.

The district picks up the full tab for teachers' health benefits.

The agreement wouldn't have happened without the superintendent getting it started, said Cotner.

"I think everyone can look at Plymouth now and see how to handle a labor contract."

Expedited bargaining began last spring at the behest of Superintendent John Hoben.

"The message we're awfully anxious to get across to the community is that the chief union officials and chief board officers will be pulling

Board faces deadlock in trustee appointment

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Main players in the game of appointing someone to serve the remainder of trustee Steve Larson's term predict a deadlock 3-3 vote, costing the township the price of a special election.

Larson announced he will leave the elected position sometime in December to move to another community. The board of trustees will have 45 days to fill the vacancy after accepting his resignation.

The appointee would serve until Larson's term expires November 1988, when voters will choose who will take the job.

IF TRUSTEES FAIL to agree on the appointment, the county clerk will notify the governor, who will call for a special election.

"It's very seldom that that happens," said Larry Merrill, deputy executive director for the Michigan Townships Association.

He said most communities don't want to incur the extra cost of a special election and usually come to an agreement on an appointment.

Earlier this year it was estimated a special election, on separate issues, would cost the township some $26,000.

"Unless we can find some sort of solution or compromise, we're headed toward a deadlock," said trustee Loren Bennett, who echoed other trustees. "Even for a saint, there'd be a deadlock."

Clerk Linda Chuhran said, she'd rather see the vacancy filled by a public vote.

"I don't think we'll ever agree and I don't want to see someone who is a buddy get appointed," Chuhran said.

TRUSTEE BOB PADGET said he hopes the person who gets the position is someone with experience with Canton committees and volunteer groups.

A major issue surrounding the appointment is the candidate's position on whether to hire a superintendent and if the treasurer and clerk posts should be part time.

Presently, the board has approved immediately hiring a superintendent and cutting the clerk's and treasurer's jobs after the November 1988 election. The person filling Larson's spot could change the outcome of a new vote on the questions.

Some of the people mentioned by trustees as possible candidates for Larson's seat are:

- Phil LaJoy, a Canton Merit Commission member for seven years, is serving on the superintendent selection committee. He has been active in the Canton Soccer Club since 1978 and serves as Plymouth Salem High School junior varsity soccer coach. He also teaches marketing and sales at Plymouth-Canton high schools part-time.
- LaJoy, who owns a Norrell Temporary Service franchise in Ann Arbor and works separately in sales and managing training for corporations, said he was considering the trustee position. LaJoy said he had mixed feelings about taking the job and that his time was committed in a lot of other areas.

"If I were to go for it, I think I would bring a lot to it. My background is heavy in human resources. My focus is taking a common sense approach. If I did it, I would have to go at it in a professional way."

He said that he didn't want to get involved in the political bickering of officials presently.

"I think it would be a challenge and interesting. There's a lot of work to be done."

- Ethelne Kirchgatter, Plymouth-Canton school board member for 8 1/2 years, said she hasn't had "much opportunity to give it much thought."
- "We've been in this community for 23 years and I've been involved in everything from church, to the arts council, the symphony and the AAUW — the kinds of things that the normally involved person would participate."
- "I've served on various boards with various personalities and attitudes," she said.
- She said that specific references to serving as trustee are "prematuring."

- Carol Bodenmiller, a past two-term Canton trustee, said she hasn't given the possibility of filling the position a lot of consideration.
- Bodenmiller served on Canton's planning commission and various other township committees.
- "Any person who would fill out Steve's term would have to know what they're getting into with the superintendent and supervisor," said Bodenmiller, referring to the board's proposal to hire a superintendent and make the supervisor's post part-time.

The person who serves the remainder of Larson's term shouldn't be chosen on the basis of how he/she feels about the superintendent issue, Bodenmiller said. The decision should depend on the individual's perspective on other major issues that will come before the board, she said.

- Frank McMurray has been involved with the community block grant committee, planning commission, historical society, Jaycees, Holiday Park subdivision association, Chamber of Commerce and other local committees and groups.

McMurray, who ran and lost three times on the Democratic ticket for trustee, said he would be interested in Larson's position. The State Farm agent said "there's something to be said for someone in business" working as trustee.

"I'd add my knowledge in the community and my involvement in the community for more than 20 years."

- Tom Yack, Plymouth-Canton school board member for 11 years, said he couldn't fill Larson's position due to a conflict with his term on the library board, whose members are elected. Yack also is active at St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton.
- "I would love to put my two cents into the township," Yack said.
- He said that working with the library board now is exciting because of the building under construction next to township hall.

County communities.

The newly built facility for men began receiving prisoners in December 1986.

MAY WILL FILL the vacancy created by John Jabe who was appointed in May to serve as warden at the State Prison of Southern Michigan at Jackson. Jimmy Stegall, acting Scott warden, will return to his duties as deputy warden.

"I've been observing it from afar but it seems like it is getting together as planned," May said.

Any new programs or changes would be developed after he has time to study the current system, May said.

May's successor at Phoenix hasn't been named, according to the Department of Corrections. William Overton, Phoenix deputy warden, will serve temporarily until someone is appointed, May said.

May's "lengthy experience in administration with the department makes him most suitable for the Scott post," said Robert Brown Jr., state corrections director.

May's employment with the state began in 1958 at the Department of Social Services as a social worker. He was eventually promoted to special investigator and social work supervisor.

IN 1967 MAY began work as a parole agent with the Department of Corrections and moved up the ranks to deputy regional administrator in Detroit in 1974. He also served as administrative assistant at State Prison of Southern Michigan in 1972.

In 1980 he was named warden at Phoenix. The transfer to Scott is a promotion, including an upgrading of the state's warden classification, he said.

He has a bachelor's degree from the Detroit Institute of Technology where he majored in sociology and minored in psychology.

Plymouth-Canton band finishes third in bid for 4th title

Until the Plymouth CEP Marching Band reached a position of dominance by winning state titles in 1984, 1985 and 1986, Flushing and Durand consistently were among the "powerhouses" in band competitions year after year. Their one-two finish marks a return to the top for both bands. Lakeview also has been a crowd favorite in recent years while Linden is a relative newcomer.

Rain marred the morning and daytime preliminary competitions but stopped by the time the evening final competition began. This was the seventh year in a row that the CEP hosted the Michigan Competing Band Directors Association state finals.

When the final scores were tabulated, the Flushing Raiders came out on top with Durand in second place and the CEP Marching Band in third. Finishing fourth was Lakeview and Linden was fifth.

professional way in which both bargaining teams approached the issues and solved the problems."

The contract takes effect in August and expires in August 1990.

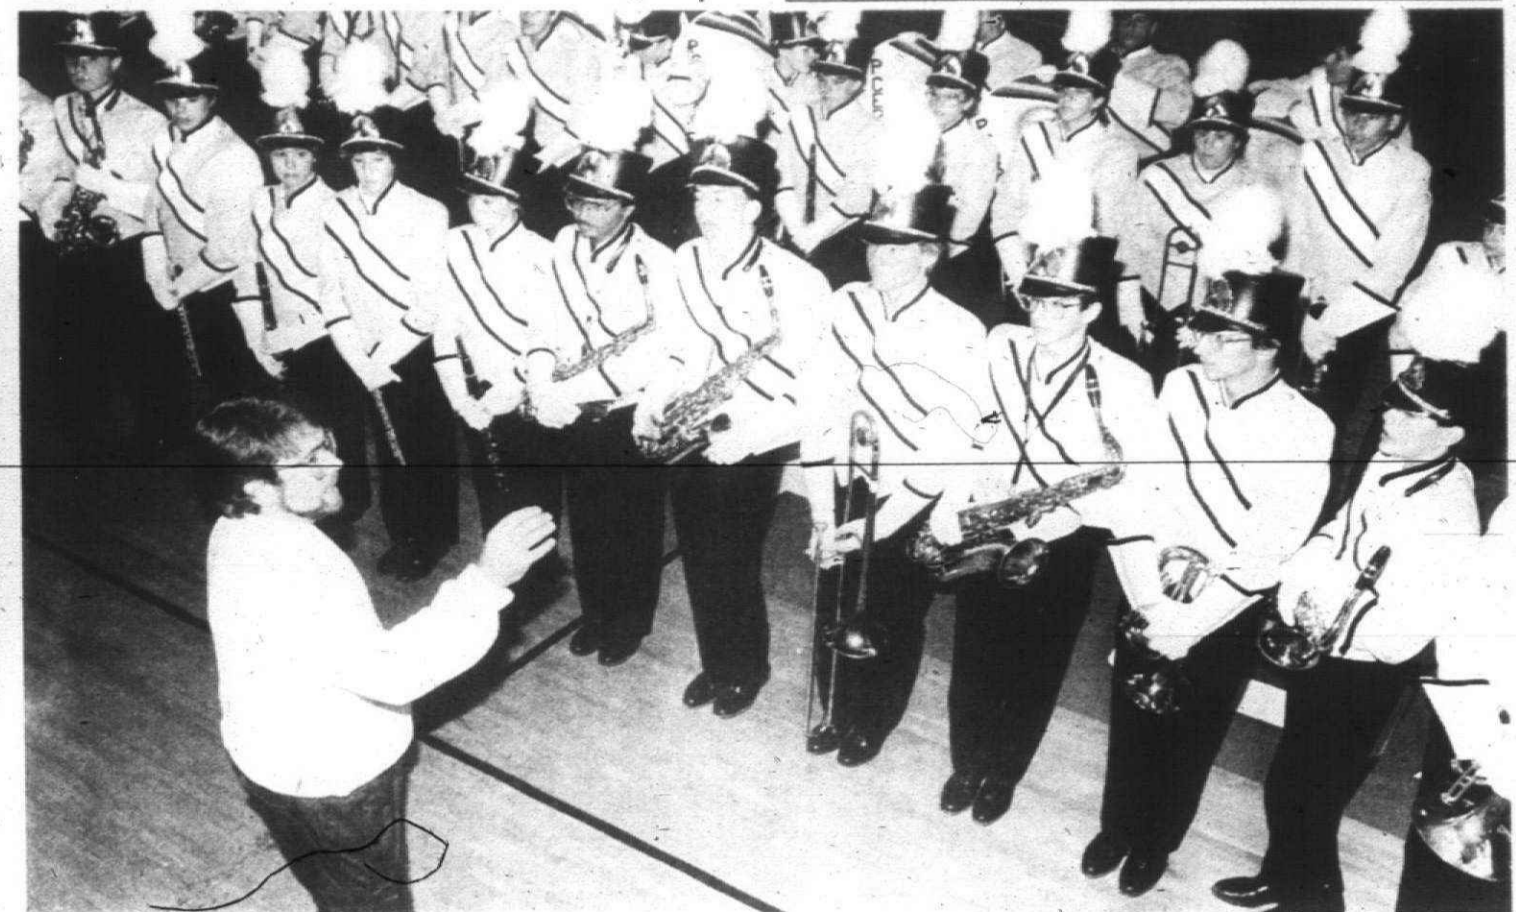

FEELINGS AMONG the paraprofessionals, or educational aides, aren't as positive in Plymouth-Canton.

The aides, who help teachers instruct and supervise students, are working on an extended contract.

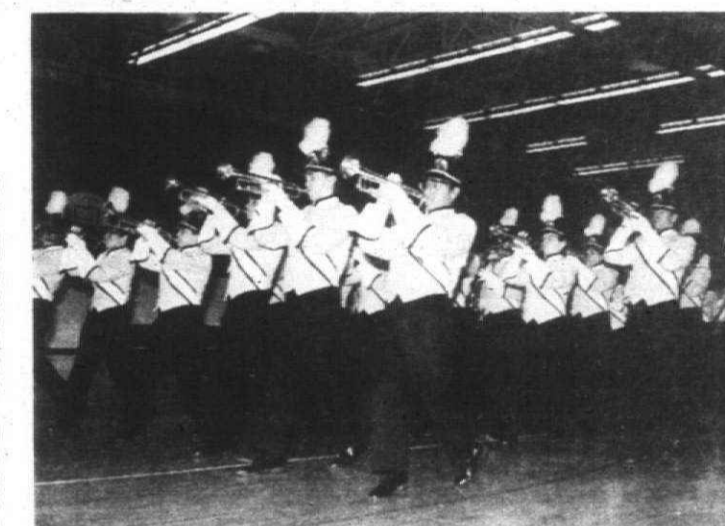

"They've filed an unfair labor practice charge against the district, and are in the process of selecting a fact-finder."

"We would like to see as cooperative an attitude from the district as we've seen with the teachers," said Ligato.

Working on an expired contract are the district's bus drivers and mechanics. Negotiations are proceeding slowly.

about me." The society's monthly newsletter is mailed to 2,400 people around the world, he said.

Golden stresses that he doesn't want to interfere with anyone's religious beliefs.

GOLDEN, WHO by day works as president of Commodity Steel & Processors, Inc. in Warren, said he's searching for answers to philosophical questions and "phenomena that's not scientifically explained."

The phone number for the society is the steel business number.

He said some of the questions the society seeks to answer concern intuitive clairvoyance, meditation, psychic healing, biofeedback, ESP, precognition, mental telepathy, spontaneous combustion, reincarnation, poltergeists, ghosts and psychophysiological research.

"I'm not interested in ghosts but I am interested in human potential," Golden said. "The purpose of our society is to find truths."

Golden tells stories about interesting people around the world, like African witch doctors, who place healing importance on hugging and human warmth. He said he learns by listening.

During a recent monthly society meeting at the Drury Inns in Troy, Golden individually greeted the 14 some people who showed. Some were regulars, others were visiting for the first time.

He stood in front of the room, about 6 feet tall, with salt and pepper hair, dressed in a dark suit and yellow silk tie with a brilliant diamond pinky ring.

In a calming voice and demeanor, Golden broke the ice by teasing some of the visitors and telling stories about unexplainable happenings. Like the time the 90-pound woman lifted the rear of a car to save her trapped child. "There has to be a reason."

THEN THE seriousness begins. He asked four people who "want help," whether it be physical or psychological, to sit in chairs in front of the room facing the others.

Golden turned the lights off and those remaining in the group closed their eyes and thought about sending "energy" to the four. After minutes of silence, interrupted by weeping noises from one of the women in front, the lights went on and the remaining 10 told what they felt and saw in their minds eye about each of the four. They talked about where they believed the energy needed to be directed.

Later, the four confirmed some of the body areas where the individuals said they "sent" their energy as locations with physical problems.

At the close of the meeting, Golden exuded sincerity and elicited obvious respect from the small group.

"The more I discover people like this (Golden nodded toward a woman in the group), the more interested I become, and that's the thing that keeps you coming back."

"I can tell you there are definitely people who are gifted. I've known them. I've discovered them. I've seen them."

When asked what type of questions he wants answered, Golden addresses the simple and everyday.

"How do you eliminate stress? We want the answer. How do you learn to live with your brother? We want the answer. How do you make life more humane? We want the answer. And what are you willing to do to help? It's a search to the human problem."

The answer is, you learn about love and then you've learned about the human problem."

"together for the next three years," Kee said.

THE PAY INCREASE of 14 percent over two years places Plymouth-Canton "pretty much in line" with what other area districts are receiving, officials said.

"The average raise has been 4.1 percent over the last five years. When you take into consideration the two 7 percent raises, it raises it to 4.8 percent. All state settlements now are averaging between 6.5 and 7.5 percent," Hoben said.

Compared to those in other Wayne County districts, Plymouth-Canton's pay scale ranks above average.

Hoben said, "I feel this is a fair and equitable settlement which maintains the positive progress which we've experienced in the last five years. I am pleased with the professional way in which both bargaining teams approached the issues and solved the problems."

The contract takes effect in August and expires in August 1990.

Bond program vote imminent

By Leonard Poger staff writer

The Wayne-Westland school board approved the first step Monday that will lead to a second campaign to get voters' approval of a $12.9 million building program.

If the procedural steps are approved by the Michigan Department of Education and the local board next month, voters can expect a special election Friday, Jan. 22. The Wayne-Westland school district includes a portion of Canton Township.

Technically, the school board Monday approved asking the state education for a preliminary qualification of the bonds. Accompanying the request is a detailed application of the specific improvements to be done with the bond money.

The school administration is hoping the state will take action by late November so the board can proceed with its election plans.

Superintendent Dennis O'Neill said the Jan. 22 date has already been cleared with the county clerk's office.

He pointed out that the proposed building program is about the same as the $12.5 million bond proposal rejected by 124 votes out of 7,100 at an April 2 special election.

If the new bond issue is approved next year, it would cost less than $1 per $1,000 of assessed value, or no more than $25 a year for a home with a market value of $50,000.

Wayne-Westland School District

The specific tax rate would be determined in the future, after discussions by school officials and bond attorneys representing the district.

Affecting the tax rate would be projected interest rates, length of time for which the bonds are issued, and the type of bonds issued.

THE LATEST proposal is $400,000 more than the earlier one, with the major difference being in renovations and equipment rates, length of time for which the bonds are issued, and the type of bonds issued.

The center is on Marquette, west of Wayne Road.

O'Neill reminded the board Monday that the board and administration have been talking about the building program for more than 1.5 years.

In formally approving the bond qualification request Monday, the board had no comments.

O'Neill said earlier the proposed changes at the Ford Center would have $200,000 of plastic forming and molding equipment, machine tools, metal forming, stamping and press equipment, plus $75,000 in equipment to handle computer-aided design (CAD) and computer-aided manufacturing (CAM) classes.

Another $210,000 is proposed for the remodeling of the center's electronic, small engines and computer rooms.

The superintendent said that while the center is only six years old, it was designed on a 1976 curriculum and needs updating to keep up with changes in computer education.

The district hopes to get state matching funds to help pay for the Ford Center equipment, he added.

THE BALANCE of the building program is almost the same as the spring proposal with all schools in the district to have remodeling, rehabilitation, property improvements, and equipment.

Actually, the total cost is projected at $13.945 million but the district expects to receive $1.045 million in interest from the sale of the bonds and before the construction and equipment contracts are paid.

The 23 elementaries would get just over $4.1 million; the junior high schools $2.3 million and the other four secondary schools $4.3 million.

Milford's firefighter tragedy won't affect local volunteer training plans

By Doug Funks staff writer

Even though three volunteers from other departments were killed in a training accident last weekend in Milford, supervisors here say they have no plans to muzzle their part-time firefighters.

Volunteers out-number full-time regulars 20-8 in the city of Plymouth and 18-16 in Plymouth Township.

Canton Township, with 31 regulars on the payroll now and six more expected to be hired next year, has no volunteers.

"We feel we have a very good program and all safety precautions that can be taken are taken at this time," said Al Matthews, fire chief in the city.

"I can see no change, no reason for change," said Plymouth Township Capt. Fred Knupp. "Like everybody, we assume we do things safely. We give 'em pretty good training and feel comfortable what they can do."

VOLUNTEERS in both communities must be at least 18 years of age, in good health, with no felony convictions and a clean driving record.

City volunteers must live within the city limits, township volunteers within four miles of one of the two stations.

Trained volunteers in both the city and township work side-by-side with regulars. All volunteers are summoned to all structure fires in both communities.

Responses are better during non-work hours. As many as 15 will show up evenings or early-morning, as few as a half-dozen at other times, Knupp and Matthews said.

Township volunteers aren't allowed on the scene of a fire until they've completed 66 hours of state certified training, a state certified driving course and learned in-house procedures and operations, Knupp said.

Additionally, all township volunteers are required to attend two three-hour internal training sessions per month.

CITY VOLUNTEERS also must complete 66 hours of training, but they can haul hoses and assist at fire scenes on a limited basis as they demonstrate progress in training, Matthews said.

But for the first year, volunteers in the city serve mainly as "go-fers," he added.

City volunteers must attend monthly three-hour, in-house training sessions.

Community group takes old Geer School to heart

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If Geer School had a heart, its coxles would be warm right now.

The abandoned, old-fashioned school house has been adopted by a community group that's attempting to restore the building to its 1880 grandeur.

It's hoped that by the fall of 1989, Plymouth-Canton students once again will spend school days in the one-room, red-brick school that closed in 1982.

Thus far, the group has raised about $25,000 of the $100,000 needed to revamp the building inside and out.

THE LAST $500 came in Sunday when the Geer School Committee hosted a Plymouth Historic Home Tour. The Plymouth branch of the Association of American University Women co-sponsored the event.

Buses transported folks to Plymouth landmarks including the Charles Bennett House on Main Street, Pumpkin Hill Home on Adams Street, the Cass and Margaret Hough House and, of course, Geer School.

Good weather kept spirits up but staff were down.

"We were a little bit discouraged by the small number of people (less than 100) who took advantage of the tour," said committee member Donna Keough, who welcomed Sunday's Geer School visitors dressed in period costume.

"It was frustrating because a lot of time and effort went into planning it."

The last class to attend Geer held its own fund-raise during the tour.

"They took it upon themselves to sell hot and cold cider, homemade cookies and Indian corn at the school," said Keough. The students, who numbered "10 at the most," raised more than $150.

The cookies, shaped like a miniature Geer School, were made with cutters crafted by local tinsmith Bob Horwood. Horwood's first wife (now deceased) was a teacher at Geer.

Anyone interested in buying one of the $15 cookie cutters may order one by calling Keough at 455-2548.

THE RESTORATION effort is coming along "slowly, but surely," I guess, said Elaine Kirchgatter, another committee member.

"It's never as much or as fast as we would like it. We're kind of nickle-and-dimeing it."

There's enough money now to go ahead with the first phase of restoration. Passers-by soon will notice the roof and windows being replaced, the building's addition being removed, and cracked bricks and mortar being repaired.

Other fund-raising projects are in the works, said Kirchgatter.

For a quarter, students soon will be able to buy pencils imprinted with the words "Geer for Geer."

Miniature, handcarved wooden desks are being sold for $20. Replete with tiny inkwells, they can be ordered by calling Kirchgatter 453-8054.

Geer School commemorative tiles are available at The Frame Works, 833 Penniman in Plymouth and at Frame Works II, 44730 Ford at the New Towne Plaza in Canton.

Fashioned in clay relief by local artist Julie Bohnhorst-Dodson, the tiles are $25.

The school district has kicked in money for a new roof, and Blackwell Ford Inc. contributed $6,000.

The committee is applying for foundation grants.

"Hopefully, that's where we'll get some of the bigger money," said Kirchgatter.

An antique blue-and-white coverlet donated by the Plymouth Antiquarians will be auctioned at the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular in January. It'll be on display through December in stores in Plymouth and Northville.

Woman from Canton voted nursing academy fellowship

Marcia D. Anderson of Canton has been elected to fellowship in the American Academy of Nursing.

Anderson, a professor in the Wayne State University College of Nursing, was among 19 registered nurses inducted for significant contributions to the profession.

Anderson also is president of Personalized Nursing Corp. P.C., which she formed in 1983.

Anderson developed a practice model for nursing entitled "Personalized Nursing."

Her model has been used to operate an outpatient mental health and substance abuse treatment clinic, provide nursing staff for an entire hospital inpatient psychiatric unit, operate a statewide network which provides treatment referral and support groups to chemically-dependent nurses in Michigan, and provide nurses to three Michigan prisons to demonstrate an outreach model of nursing treatment with chemically dependent prisoners.

A 1986 WSU Career Development Chair Award recipient, Anderson also has published several articles, including "Personalized Nursing: An Intervention Model for Use With Drug Dependent Women in an Emergency Room" in the International Journal of Addictions, and "Psychosocial Screening Tool for Ambulatory Clients" in Nursing Research.

She also has been featured in The American Journal of Nursing.

Anderson also was the recipient of the Michigan Public Health Association Award for Excellence in Community Health Nursing in 1982, and the Professional Business (Probus Club) Award for Community Service in 1986.

County school chiefs: Say no to tax shift

By Wayne Peel
staff writer

Shifting school financing from property to sales taxes won't work, a spokesman for 34 Wayne County public school superintendents said Monday.

Speaking on behalf of his colleagues, Northville Schools Superintendent George Bell urged state school board members to reject a tax shift. Bell's comments were made at a public forum held by the state Board of Education at Wayne State University.

"As a group, we cannot support an erosion of local property tax base," Bell told state board members and members of the Michigan School Finance Commission. "The (stock market) scene of the past few weeks clearly shows the local property tax is the most reliable and stable source of revenue."

Bell is chairman of the Wayne County Association of School Administrators. His comments were directed at the Harden Commission Report. A state study group, it has called for increasing "educational opportunity" among Michigan public school students. Cutting local property taxes and replacing the lost money with a statewide sales tax increase would go a long way toward closing spending gaps between rich and poor districts, commission members said. (For details of Harden Commission recommendations, see related story.)

"We cannot support a proposal which is based upon the belief that several districts, particularly out-of-formula districts, will vote to increase millage above the 18-mill level," Bell said.

Out-of-formula districts receive no direct state aid. Instead, they receive state support for special education and other state-ordered programs. Bell criticized the Harden Commission report for failing to address these programs.

"Special, vocational, and intermediate school district funding are also essential components of a quality educational program in Michigan and must be addressed in any funding proposal," he said.

Rather than change the formula, Bell said legislators should give more money to schools. State support for local schools has fallen from 50 percent to 10 percent in the past 15 years, he said.

Senate looks at school financing

By Tim Richard
staff writer

The Republican-led state Senate will move promptly on school funding reform, said John Engler, majority leader.

"We'll be able to lay something on the table in a few weeks," said the Michigan Legislature's top GOP spokesman.

"There will be a significant amount of property tax relief," he said, defining "significant" in the 20 percent ballpark.

THE SENATE version is likely to meld proposals by the Harden Commission and Republican plans offered by Sen. Rudy Nichols, Sen. Dan DeGroff and House leaders.

So it's likely to contain: school operating property tax cuts replaced by a 1-2 percent increase in the sales tax (for voters to approve), some form of statewide collection of business property taxes, and a spending floor of $3,000 per pupil in every school district.

Engler also recognizes the wariness of suburban districts in the high technology belt stretching from Rochester to Ann Arbor. Most of those districts get no state aid, and so the state can't cut their budgets in a recession.

"There'll have to be adequate guarantees," said Engler, of Mount Pleasant, during an interview in the Observer & Eccentric's Livonia office. "We can't pass it if it has such consequences."

HOUSE SPEAKER Gary Owen, the Legislature's top Democrat, is less enthused about the school finance reform, stressing its complexity and the desire of every interest group for a voice.

"I think Ed Harden's commission did a tremendous job," said the Ypsilanti lawmaker, referring to the State Board of Education's 36-member commission, which reported Sept. 22.

But Owen said the final version had "very lukewarm support from business, opposition from the labor unions and teachers union." Without broad and enthusiastic support, reform will be a problem, he said in an interview on WXYZ-TV's "Spotlight on News" program.

"I don't think just a tax shift is the answer. We need more revenue in K-12. We need to deal with the fact that, in Willow Run in my district, we spend $2,000 less, or thereabouts, than two miles away in Ann Arbor. And that's primarily in program offerings and amenities."

LIKE ENGLER, Owen sees great disparity between school districts.

Like Engler, Owen wants to raise the floor for poor districts without lowering the ceiling on affluent districts.

But they appear to part company on the need for more revenue.

"The bottom has fallen out of the farm economy," said Engler, whose district includes Gratiot County, where farm assessments plummeted 35 percent in one year, according to the State Tax Commission.

"And there's no immediate prospect for a rebound," Engler added. "Today's costs of production are such that, even when you factor in minimal governmental payments, you can't cover double-digit interest rates" at which many farmers borrowed to acquire land in the '70s.

Farm groups have spearheaded the proposal to levy school taxes on industry — particularly nuclear power plants — statewide rather than district by district.

ENGLER RECENTLY returned from a trip to China, a nation of one billion that "now is an agricultural exporter where a few years ago they couldn't feed their people."

The visit convinced him the United States is part of a global economy where education is of paramount importance.

"We're kidding ourselves if we think we can afford high dropout rates. We can't afford the social costs of dropouts, either in the social welfare system or the criminal justice system."

"Being good isn't enough. We have to be excellent."

A major weakness, Bell said, is that property tax payments can be deducted from federal income tax returns while sales taxes cannot.

"It is unlikely that we will solve state problems by sending more money to Washington," he said.

Harden recommendations would be to cut home owner property taxes to 13 mills. Though voters could raise the tax rate, Bell said he doubted whether they would. Districts would not be allowed to seek tax increases unless they contributed some of their current tax revenue to a statewide pool.

"We cannot support a proposal which is based upon the belief that several districts, particularly out-of-formula districts, will vote to increase millage above the 18-mill level," Bell said.

Out-of-formula districts receive no direct state aid. Instead, they receive state support for special education and other state-ordered programs. Bell criticized the Harden Commission report for failing to address these programs.

"Special, vocational, and intermediate school district funding are also essential components of a quality educational program in Michigan and must be addressed in any funding proposal," he said.

Rather than change the formula, Bell said legislators should give more money to schools. State support for local schools has fallen from 50 percent to 10 percent in the past 15 years, he said.

"The current state aid formula is sound if it were adequately funded," Bell said. "Simply put, in-formula school districts need additional state funds if the equality gap is to be reduced."

State government could do more to help schools by eliminating government waste, tightening assessment procedures and restructuring tax increment financing authorities, Bell said.

Several speakers at Monday's information session on the Harden report also criticized TIFAs (Tax Increment Financing Authority). The state-approved tax districts, designed to promote business development, divert tax money from schools and local governments to road, utility, sewer and other improvements within the district.

A constitutional amendment is needed to implement any change in school financing. State school board members will decide whether to School financing proposals at a glance

Shifting the tax burden is only part of the Harden Commission's recommendations. Here are other recommendations at a glance:

- Official name: "Educational Quality in the 21st Century," prepared by the Michigan School Finance Commission. Its common name comes from the study group co-chairman, former Michigan State University president Edgar Harden.
- Participants: Community activists including representatives from the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, New Detroit, Michigan Farm Bureau and state League of Women Voters, as well as school groups, legislators and journalists.
- Philosophy: Committee members said Michigan needs equality of "educational opportunity," ensuring every student has access to a quality education.
- Recommendations for state officials: The state legislature and board of education should define basic educational requirements for all students, establish performance standards for students, require districts to provide annual plans for educational improvement and to involve other community leaders in the process and declare educational bankruptcy in districts failing to meet those standards. The last proposal would have state officials running local schools, as receivers run financially bankrupt cities and businesses.
- Financing recommendations: The legislature should create a $200 million trust fund to finance new education programs. Making per-pupil spending more equal would involve a constitutional amendment calling for a two-cent sales and use tax increase, a flat 23-mill tax on businesses and industries, a flat 18-mill tax on residences and farms, cutting the current maximum tax limit from 50 mills to 38 mills (A mill equals $1 per $1,000 of assessed valuation). Energy payments would be exempted from the sales tax increase.

Districts couldn't seek tax increases unless they contributed to a statewide pool. Either either all commercial, industrial and utility tax revenue or property tax revenue in excess of state-mandate per-pupil spending figures would be contributed. The money would be distributed to other districts, augmenting poorer districts' budgets.

Canton station robbed

An armed robbery was reported Oct. 24 at the Clark gas station on Ford and Sheldon roads in Canton. About 1:30 p.m. a man with a brown towel wrapped around his face entered the station brandishing a blue steel semi-automatic gun and demanded money from the cash register, according to a woman clerk. The woman was alone in the station at the time of the incident, said Canton Police information officer Dave Bojesic. The man reportedly fled from the station with about $250 in assorted bills. Police are without additional witnesses or a suspect, Bojesic said. Anyone with information is asked to call Canton Police at 397-3000.

STUTTERING GROUP
A new adult stuttering therapy group is being formed by the department of speech pathology at the Oakwood Hospital Canton Center. Bush camp wins 2nd district delegate battle

By Wayne Peal staff writer

The battle for control of the Michigan Republican Party moved to western Wayne County on Tuesday as supporters of vice president George Bush scored a victory over supporters of GOP presidential hopefuls Jack Kemp and Pat Robertson. County 2nd District GOP loyalists squared off over the method used to select delegates to the Jan. 14 county convention. On the surface, it was a battle between representation by community or at-large.

'It seems the Bush people are laying the groundwork for a winner-take-all system.'
- Elaine Donnelly, a Livonia Kemp supporter

Political insiders, however, see the victory for at-large selection. Increasing chances more pro-Bush delegates will be sent to next year's state convention. "It seems the Bush people are laying the groundwork for a winner-take-all system," said Elaine Donnelly of Livonia, a Kemp supporter.

The vice president's Michigan campaign is still reeling from last August's GOP primary, where Kemp-Robertson delegates scored a number of upset victories. The coalition helped draft a heavily conservative GOP state platform for last November's general election. The conservative coalition also held the upper hand in the 2nd District, selecting a pro-Kemp chairman.

Thirty-three delegates will be sent to the state convention, Jan. 29-30, in Grand Rapids. Under the old system, 16 would have directly been selected from Livonia, eight from Plymouth Township, five from Northville Township, three from Plymouth and one from Northville.

Nursing home study group calls for reforms

Report lists recommendations for protecting elderly in homes

By Diane Gale staff writer

Legislation and money will decide nursing home quality of life issues as outlined in an elaborate state report. Laws regulating nursing home staff are identified as a top priority in a report submitted by the Nursing Home Action Team, consisting of state agencies, nursing home representatives and advocacy groups. After more than a year of meetings, the group submitted a report Wednesday identifying 40 recommendations that addressed patient abuse, quality of care, access and financing in Michigan's 440 nursing homes.

Woods, who sponsored two bills addressing training and certifying nurses aides. Two House bills, sponsored by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, address Medicaid discrimination and are before the Senate Committee on Human Resources and Senior Citizens. "Prompt consideration and passage of these consensus bills by the Senate is warranted," said Hollis Turnham, the state's long term care ombudsman, with Citizens for Better Care, a statewide non-profit advocacy group.

Some of the following changes have already gone into effect as the result of action team suggestions: Revision of Department of Public Health rules requiring maximum civil fines be imposed in all cases where a nursing home fails to report in a timely manner that a patient was abused. Establishment of a central registry in a cooperative effort between the Department of Public Health and the Department of State Police listing nursing home employees who have been convicted of patient abuse.

● WESTGATE DINNER THEATER
 A day trip to Westgate Dinner Theater in Toledo to see "Westside Story" will be taken by the scaled-down Tri-City Therapeutic Program, Westland Mayor Charles Griffin said Monday.

Griffin, speaking at a city council study session concerning the fate of the Tri-City Program, recommended the formation of a task force made up of area cities to study implementation of a new program.

The council had approved the administration's plan for changing the Westland-based program to a residents-only effort in August.

Griffin said Monday the task force would "look at broadening the scope of the refined program."

Others at the study session suggested holding a group consultation with the representatives from Wayne and Garden City, the two other paying members of the former Tri-City program, before the formation of a task force.

About 30 people, including Wayne Mayor Patrick Norton, several Westland council members and candidates, representatives from the Wayne-Westland and Livonia school districts and state Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, attended the meeting in Bailey Center.

New disabled program eyed

He cited what he said were positive results in previous cooperative ventures — the Nankin Transit Authority for local public transportation and the Central Wayne County Sanitation Authority.

Ann Boolin, representing the Conference of Western Wayne, said a properly run multicommunity program would provide better chances to tap into county and state resources and money.

But council members attending the session said any new program would have to address the issue that forced last summer's changes — perceived inequities in who foots the bill for the program.

City officials were upset that Westland contributed more than 60 percent of Tri-City's $73,000 budget last year while only 204 local residents were enrolled among the nearly 500 clients.

Under the previous arrangement, Wayne and Garden City contributed the remaining 40 percent of the program's budget.

BUT A LARGE percentage of participants in the nationally recognized therapeutic recreation program were from cities making no financial contribution at all, city officials said.

Michael Muesett, a former director of the program who fought the change to residents-only restriction, said Monday he was pleased with the city's decision to reassess the program.

"It almost looks like things have gone full cycle," he said. "They (the city) are going to ask other communities to get involved in reaching a decision."

"That's what we've been looking for all along."

GRiffin admitted there was some merit to claims by Tri-City supporters that by limiting the program to Westland residents only, the city would be limiting the quality of the program.

"To have a successful program, you need the participation of others," he said.

Eldorado on the block

A 1977 Cadillac Eldorado is one of the items that will be on the auction block beginning 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 30, in the Mayflower Meeting House for the PolioPlus Auction sponsored by the Rotary Club of Plymouth. Businesses from the Plymouth community have donated new items and services for the auction. A preview of merchandise and cocktails are offered at 6:30 p.m. Admission is free; donations are tax deductible. PolioPlus, Rotary International's project aimed at eradicating polio will be the recipient of money raised by the auction, which will be conducted by Whalen Auction Service of Plymouth. Plymouth Rotarians Dr. Bill Covington (left) and Bill Robinson are shown examining the Eldorado to be auctioned off Friday.

House explodes self-help road fee bill 2-1

By Tim Richard
staff writer

State lawmakers Tuesday dynamited a key building block in suburban's attempt to fund new local road construction.

The House of Representatives bombed, 2-1, enabling legislation that would have given counties with high economic growth the power to levy "impact fees" on developers of commercial, industrial and apartment projects.

"I'm very disappointed," said John Grubba, managing director of the Oakland County Road Commission. He has been selling the idea since returning from a national convention 1 1/2 years ago.

"We intend to pursue it. It took six times in South Carolina," Grubba said.

BUT REP. MAXINE Berman, D-Southfield, the bill's sponsor, was less optimistic about trying again after the 63-34 defeat.

"I have other bills. I don't know if I have time" to pursue reconsideration, the second-term lawmaker said.

Why did an essentially self-help bill for Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Genesee and Kent counties bomb nearly 2-1?

Pressure from house builders, politics and lack of enthusiasm from Gov. James Blanchard's administration seemed to be the answers.

"If Oakland folks don't convince Republicans..." Democrat Berman began, noting few Republicans outside the Oakland delegation supported her House Bill 4722. Here's how area representatives voted:

Democrats for: Justine Barns of Westland, Berman of Southfield, James Kosteva of Canton, Wilfred Webb of Hazel Park.

Democrats against: John Bennett of Redford Township.

Democrat absent: William Keith of Garden City.

Republicans for: W.V. Brotherton of Farmington, Mat Danaaskis of Lake Orion, David Hoisnman of West Bloomfield, Judith Miller of Birmingham and Gordon Sparks of Troy — all Oakland.

Republicans against: Lyn Bauges of Livonia, Gerald Law of Plymouth Township — both Wayne.

GROUPS BACKING the bill were the Michigan Municipal League and many commercial-industrial developers.

Opposed were the Michigan Association of Homebuilders and many residential real estate firms, whose argument was summed up by Redford's Bennett:

"They say impact fees will add 1-2 percent to the price of a house. Use the 2 percent figure 'cause that's more likely. That will add $1,600 to the price of an $80,000 home.

"About 80 percent of people can't qualify for purchase (of new homes). This will disqualify many prospective buyers. There will be stagnation, less housing, less jobs."

Berman countered it would be better to amortize the fee into a 30-year mortgage than to charge the public higher taxes.

"We can't have development without roads," she said. "It (impact fees) is a new and off-the-wall idea. It's been used elsewhere."

But like many critics of the bill, Berman said in a corridor interview she prefers a statewide gasoline tax increase — a measure Gov. Blanchard opposes.

"It would be a true user fee. Tourists would be paying it. But we didn't have that option today," she said.

THE BILL, if enacted, would have allowed county road authorities to prepare a five-year plan designating a development district. The elected county board of commissioners would have to approve the fees under an amendment sponsored by Rep. Sparks of Troy.

Almost all discussion of the idea had been in terms of industrial, commercial, office and hotel areas where vast amounts of job-related traffic are generated on two-lane county roads.

Fees could have been applied only to new projects, not existing ones.

One supporter was Ken Strobel, vice president of Bellemead Development Corp., a national firm located in Troy. "A real threat to the state's growth and economic stability," he wrote to lawmakers, "is traffic gridlock."

He said his firm voluntarily committed $9 million toward a $12 million road improvement project in Troy. "Traffic gridlock will drive customers away, as it did in Houston," Strobel warned.

The Plymouth Inn

The Gracious Alternative

Someone you love is growing older and needs just a bit more support than he or she can get in their current living situation. A nursing home isn't the answer. Normal activities like eating and dressing aren't a problem. But you would be happier knowing someone was there to provide gentle encouragement and firm support when needed, in a non-institutional atmosphere.

The answer is The Plymouth Inn, a magnificent residence for seniors who want their independence but need some supervision as well. Consider some of the many advantages:

- Spacious mini-suites for those who desire extra comfort and privacy.
- Deluxe semi-private accommodations, richly appointed, with private lavatories and showers.
- Easily accessible via I-96 and I-275; only 30 minutes from both downtown Detroit and the northern suburbs, including Farmington Hills, Birmingham and West Bloomfield.
- Tranquil landscaped grounds and lovely common areas.
- Three delicious meals served in our central dining room by a friendly, attentive staff of professionals.
- Extensive, varied social programs and recreational opportunities.
- Game room, chapel, beauty parlor and lounges; all designed with the special needs of our residents in mind.

The Plymouth Inn welcomes your inspection visit. When you see what we have to offer we think you will agree that The Plymouth Inn is a very special place where your loved one can feel secure, yet independent. We invite you to call today for an appointment.

At the crossroads

Changes to prompt coalition?

CANTON TOWNSHIP government appears to be at another crossroads.

One obvious major change is institution-of the superintendent form of government.

But other changes are in the works. And, at least for the short term, these "other" changes likely will have as important an impact on Canton government now as will hiring of a superintendent.

These "other" changes involve personnel shifts on the current board. Presently the board is operating on a four-member majority consisting of Bob Padgett, Steve Larson, Loren Bennett and John Prenczky.

Supervisor Jim Poole once was a fifth member of that majority, but now more often votes his own way, particularly since Padgett/Larson led the way on the superintendent issue. Treasurer Gerry Brown has steadfastly avoided joining a faction while Clerk Linda Chubran has steadfastly remained a coalition of one.

BASICALLY Canton politics has remained locked into the above mode since the last election three years ago. The majority has held, leaving little motivation to call a truce to the political war waged over the past three years.

Now there appears to be a crack in the door. Larson is moving out of town, which requires his resignation. Padgett, a veteran on the board, says he believes he's ready to step down. If so, half of the ruling majority will be gone after the November 1988 election.

Larson's replacement will be appointed by the board. If a 3-3 stalemate develops, the governor will be forced to intervene. Hopefully Padgett's replacement (if he does, indeed, decide to step down) will be chosen at the polls in November 1988. It would be a sham if Padgett resigned before his term expires, allowing his successor to be appointed.

The slate of three trustees could hold fast and refuse to compromise on Larson's replacement. Politically, it would be more effective now to abandon slate politics and enter the '88 elections without one faction struggling to have a favorite son/daughter elected at the polls.

Even if a new slate of four emerges from the November 1988 election with their candidate victorious, the new majority certainly will be on shaky ground unless they also bring in with them a new clerk, treasurer and/or supervisor. A 4-3 majority walks on very thin ice when they attempt to extend their rule beyond one term.

The departure of two trustees, if it occurs, would have a major influence on the board as well as on the tenor of Canton politics.

WHAT IS more likely to happen is development of a new coalition.

That process likely will begin with the appointment to replace Larson. The new coalition will involve Brown or Poole, or both, and continue into the November 1988 election. Otherwise, all incumbents will risk defeat at the polls if voters grow weary and decide on a clean sweep.

A new coalition will be necessary because of the individuals involved. Padgett and Larson are strong leaders on the board. Because of that, trustees like Bennett and Prenczky have not had to exercise any leadership. As a result, they are not prepared to lead a new majority into the future. And so a coalition with one or two officers should be formed.

Appointment of a superintendent to run township government will, indeed, have a major impact on Canton government. But the absence of Larson and Padgett from the board also will have a major impact on Canton politics.

While Larson and Padgett are strong leaders, their strength has only served to continue the present slate, which guarantees continued existence of the present volatile political environment. As long you have a powerful ruling majority, there isn't much tendency to compromise.

While we recognize the many contributions Padgett and Larson have made, we recognize also their departure could improve the climate of government in Canton by making compromise more likely.

Overcrowding at Allen, too

To the editor: In response to Mary K. Williams letter to the editor Oct. 15.

There are a few of us with children attending Allen School that are sympathetic to Mary K. Williams and her battle with the school board over the large classes at Farrand.

My daughter is in first grade at Allen and there are 31 pupils in her class. There are 31 and 29 in the other first grade classes. The principal has asked for support for the teachers of the students in both first and fifth grade, and he has made minimal progress.

We are presently working on a letter to the school board stating our concerns with the enrollment. This problem will not go away, so it is time to begin to think of our children. Are there any other schools in the Plymouth/Canton district with class sizes too large? It's time to address this problem.

Tamara Milazzo, Plymouth

Keep pastoral life in place

To the editor: You accuse Plymouth residents of apathy in your editorial of Oct. 22.

The good people in my neighborhood have drawn up petitions and attended city commission meetings to prohibit downtown expansion into homes up Ann Arbor Trail to the west. We are given to believe that it was to no avail. We see that a few business leaders have the power to impose their wishes on residents.

People try their hardest to communicate their views, to make it clear that we want our taxes used to enhance our community, to mandate our feelings that we love the small-town, bucolic flavor of Plymouth. The city commission turns a deaf ear. That makes me angry and makes me wish for an entirely new commission.

While indicating support for peace, he has not stated his position on the president's upcoming proposal for $270 million dollar aid to the Contras.

Through Neighbor To Neighbor's efforts nearly one thousand handwritten letters have been sent to Congressman Pursell and well over two thousand persons have signed petitions opposing Contra aid.

All of this has taken place right here in our own community - including individual home meetings.

So why wasn't the press interested in covering this meeting? They were informed.

Richard and Janet Holt, Plymouth

Disappointed by the lapse

To the editor: As a frequent reader of your newspaper I was disappointed at your lapse of coverage of the Neighbor to Neighbor meeting that was called in your paper last week. It was obvious by the large turnout of people that this organization, aimed at influencing Rep. Carl Pursell to vote against aid to the Contra rebels, is well supported in this community.

Since the organization was formed in this area six weeks ago, over 1,600 handwritten letters have been mailed to Rep. Pursell voicing the opinions of his constituents. This kind of outpouring from this community should not be ignored by the newspaper that specifically represents them.

I will look forward to reading further accounts of their mission in your newspaper, as well as advertisements for their gatherings. Thank you for your time in this matter.

Sheryl M. Pimlott, Redford

Law's gun bill must not pass

To the editor: State Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, a member of House Judiciary Committee, has lent his name as a sponsor of House Bill No. 4531, adopted in the Senate as Senate Bill 179.

The bill would prohibit all local government in the state of Michigan from enacting firearms regulation beyond the level of control provided by existing state laws. Clearly in urban communities around the state existing state handgun regulation is failing to address the problem of handgun violence.

Each community in our state deserves the right to protect its citizens using locally adopted ordinances addressing the particular needs and problems that are threatening the safety of the public in that community.

The language of the bill is so broad that it threatens to deprive local communities of any control over any firearms. The bill states that local units of government may make no law regarding pistols or other firearms that is stricter than state law.

The Anti-Handgun Association urges Rep. Law to remove his name from this bill and work to keep this bill off the floor of the House.

The problem of handguns and shooting in Detroit and other Southeastern Michigan urban areas continues to grow, and local governments are trying to deal with the problem through local ordinances.

For the state Legislature to remove the only local method of addressing the handgun problem and then criticize local governments' inaction on this problem is hypocritical. AHA believes this is the real issue at hand, not the right to bear arms or any other constitutional issue.

Local governments must remain attuned to the needs of their constituents; pre-emptive state legislation regulates everyone and protects no one.

Love letters Lighting a Devil's Night fuse

IF YOU DON'T like love letters, turn the page because that's what this is. Sort of. It's also about Devil's Night and an anniversary.

Presumably you don't have to be reminded that it's tomorrow's date that has earned the Devil's Night designation, there having been considerable publicity warning of dunderheads who brighten the pre-Halloween sky by going about burning down abandoned houses and the like.

On the same date more than three decades ago, Mother Goose and I lit a different fuse. Instead of burning down a home, we started building one. It was the day we were wed.

Some of our closest friends have chuckled over this coincidence through the years and my mate has helped the laughs along by revealing that on the day in question I knocked on her door and said, "They're going to throw the switch at 3 o'clock, is that OK?"

Please understand, the mood was light. The euphoria of romance was heightened by the fact that we were in Las Vegas, having deliberately picked that particular Saturday and site to hear wedding bells.

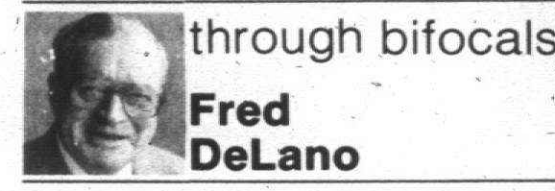

However, then as now, Oct. 30 fell in the middle of the football season. On the "first things first" theory, we were married on schedule, but I did leave a 3 a.m. wake-up call.

Lest you guffaw in error, the reason was that only by pre-dawn departure were we able to drive to Los Angeles and be in our Coliseum seats in time for the kickoff between the Los Angeles Rams and Detroit Lions - with my bride adorned in Honolulu blue and silver and a tiny stuffed lion pinned to her shoulder.

Was it worth it? Of course, the Lions winning a close battle on a fourth down touchdown by Leon Hart.

Or do you mean, was the marriage worth it?

When I started using the term Mother Goose in print I don't recall. But I think it was in defiance of guys who speak of their wives as "my old lady," "the war department" or just as "the missus."

through bifocals Fred DeLano

These many years later the memory bank is crammed with recollections, some sad, some joyous. The road has taken many turns, but always together. The stars that once were in her eyes have been replaced by pain, and there are many who wonder why she should suffer when I'm the one who should have been afflicted. There is no answer.

When I started using the term Mother Goose in print I don't recall. But I think it was in defiance of guys who speak of their wives as "my old lady," "the war department" or just as "the missus."

Probably the greatest pride is in the two gossings born of this lady, both of whom are now married adults, and the grandchild generation that has followed. Long after we both are gone, our mark will remain.

A wife is a jill-of-all trades, and I'm sure that as the years have rolled by many a hope and dream have been packed away in concealed disappointment like a snapshot album that is never opened. Concern for the family has been foremost. One way or another, the fragile moments have been survived because that has been her strength as wife and mother.

To observe the recent Sweetest Day, I drove Mother Goose past a couple of jewelers' shops and a florist's because she's a mite gimpy and finds walking difficult. But at least doing something nice was in my mind. I'm not a poet and am not much good with conversational bon-bons, but I did find a card that says what's in my heart.

Many other husbands may find this symbolic too: "I may not put my love in words too often through the year, And maybe I don't say enough to make my feelings clear; But, even so, I'm sure you know that each day all year through, My greatest happiness in life depends on loving you."

If that doesn't light the Devil's Night fuse again, nothing will.

'Cowboys' always there

The leaves were raked and piled, but the best efforts failed to start even a smouldering fire.

"It's too wet," I said Sunday. "Nothing can burn in this weather."

I went inside to find out how wrong I could be. My wife told me of the horrible story she had heard on the radio: something had gone wrong at a practice fire in Milford, three volunteer fire fighters had died.

It was stunning news. I have never lived in Milford, but I know it well. Although chambers of commerce boast of the uniqueness of their towns, the Milfords of the world share many traits with the community where I grew up and with many where I have since worked and lived.

ONE OF THOSE common threads is the volunteer fire department. It takes a large city to support a full-time fire department. Outstate, the people who pump gas, farm crops, tool factories and otherwise perform hard manual labor are the backbone of volunteer fire departments. State-wide, three of every four fire fighters is a volunteer.

As a youngster, we called these guys cowboys because of the way they drove their cars to fires with red lights swirling from their dashes or atop their old Fords and Chevries. But we did so more with admiration than ridicule. These guys were brave, some would say foolhardy, and they were dependable. When the siren sounded, you knew Del and Frank and Larry would respond immediately and would do what the rest of us would not do - volunteer to fight fires.

Volunteers chafe at the idea that full-time firefighters are professionals. That implies, they believe, that volunteer departments are somehow nonprofessional. They volunteer their time, they argue, but their experience makes them as competent a firefighter as anyone.

Nonetheless, it also is true that small towns would be hard pressed to field a full department if they demanded stringent training for each volunteer.

FOR A STORY, I once went on a training session with volunteer firefighters. We were led inside a smoke-filled cinder block building. You could not see more than a foot ahead except for a lurid glow in the basement where the fire had been set. You could not breathe except for a mask filled by a life-giving air pack.

I was somewhat embarrassed that I could not complete the drill. But volunteer firefighters waiting their turned rushed to me to see if I was all right. There was no joking, no teasing, no remarks about a green reporter who didn't have the right stuff to be a firefighter.

Instead, they recognized the best you can hope for in a burning building is a tenuous grip on safety. Yet they are willing to do it - voluntarily.

Rich Perlberg

On the top floor where the smoke lessened somewhat, we were allowed to take our masks off. I didn't put mine back on securely and started hacking and coughing as we walked downstairs.

The instructor noticed my distress and quickly ushered me out a side door where to my surprise it was bright and sunny. I had thought the whole world was made of gloomy smoke.

I was somewhat embarrassed that I could not complete the drill. But volunteer firefighters waiting their turned rushed to me to see if I was all right. There was no joking, no teasing, no remarks about a green reporter who didn't have the right stuff to be a firefighter.

Instead, they recognized the best you can hope for in a burning building is a tenuous grip on safety. Yet they are willing to do it - voluntarily.

Education

Money is only a partial solution

IT COSTS an estimated $143 a day, $52,195 a year, to put a kid in a youth home.

That's one of the best reasons we can think of for strengthening Michigan's educational system.

For youth home residents and other troubled youngsters, the faces change but the profile remains the same - almost invariably they cannot read, cannot perform simple mathematic functions and lack even the rudimentary skills needed to get and keep a job.

It's a grim picture. And it's getting worse. The future for untrained, unskilled workers grows increasingly dim in this computerized, specialized age.

IT'S TIME we spent more on education. But let's spend our money, time and energy wisely.

The Harden Commission, a state study group headed by a former Michigan State University president, has put forth a number of bold proposals for overhauling public education in our state.

Many of these proposals have already been presented on these pages. Most undoubtedly will be debated by citizens and school officials throughout our state.

There's a danger, however, that the boldest proposal - closing the gap in per-pupil spending among Michigan public school districts - will obscure what should be the real educational goal: boosting literacy among Michigan public school students.

Equalizing the amount of money spent per pupil is a worthy goal, but even commission members admit it's only part of the solution.

BECAUSE TEACHER salaries and benefits account for such a large proportion of school budgets, inequality of dollars spent per pupil reflects an inequity of teacher pay as much as a lack of quality education. While teacher salaries in many districts are shockingly low, spending more per student won't automatically translate into a more literate, employable crop of students.

It's time we spent more on education. But let's spend our money, time and energy wisely.

Rather than tying up our schools and state government in a lengthy debate on per-pupil spending, it's time we urged them to move quickly to help produce more self-supporting graduates.

It's time we demanded our youngsters were literate not only with regard to reading skills-but in mathematics, science and the basic citizenship principles upon which our nation is built.

To do that, we need to band together to press our elected officials into making literacy a top state priority.

WE NEED to demand our governor declare an "educational emergency," providing both a climate and timetable for change.

We need to demand the Michigan Department of Education develop programs to boost reading, writing and thinking skills among struggling students.

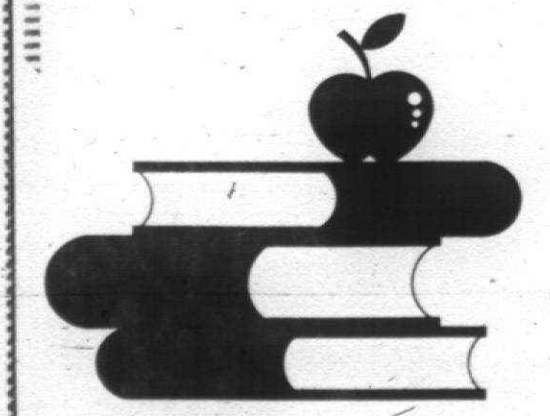

We need to demand our state legislators dig up the money to support these programs, as well as to retrain teachers in financially strapped school districts in how to implement them.

We need to demand our local school districts implement these programs - and, if necessary, give them the money to do so.

And we need to work with our local schools - and our kids - in seeing to it that every high school graduate can become a productive member of society. It's time business and school leaders sat down, locally and statewide, to discuss the kind of employee needed for future jobs.

It's too easy to become trapped in a financial debate that will only pit rich school districts against poor ones, ultimately wasting everyone's time.

There's a generation at risk. Time is short, but the answer is clear. If we don't move to meet their needs now, we'll be doomed to provide for them from this point forward.

It's back to school for student teacher

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Nancy Klein is spending plenty of time at Allen Elementary School in Plymouth Township these days.

Morin, a 23-year-old senior at Eastern Michigan University, is doing her student teaching at Allen. It's not the first time she's been at the school, however; Morin was a student at Allen in her younger days.

She's doing her student teaching with Margaret Kidston, a second-grade teacher. Kidston was Morin's kindergarten teacher during the 1969-70 school year.

Some of the second graders in Kidston's current class have seen the class picture that includes both Kidston and Morin in their younger days. To those students, the 1969-70 school year was a long, long time ago.

"It makes you feel 100 years old," Morin said with a laugh.

Kidston, a Plymouth resident, remembers having Morin in class as a student. She remembers Morin's four brothers and has also, more recently, seen Morin on the EMU campus. Kidston is pursuing her master's degree at EMU.

"She has a very fine way of keeping her assessment of the students very current," Morin has a positive attitude and gives the youngsters plenty of encouragement, the veteran teacher said.

Morin's favorite part of student teaching is seeing the students succeed and improve.

"They just eat up that positive reinforcement."

Morin, the daughter of Kenneth and Patricia Lindensmith of Plymouth, grew up in Plymouth. She attended East and Central middle schools and graduated from Plymouth Canton High School in 1982.

Morin went to Schoolcraft College for about a year, taking general classes. She then transferred to EMU.

She considered getting a business degree and came close to completing the requirements for that degree. Morin realized that she needed to work at something she would enjoy, so she switched to education.

"I'm just having a terrific time." The Plymouth resident will graduate in December with a bachelor's degree and will be certified to teach kindergarten through eighth grade.

THIS IS Kidston's 24th year teaching in the local school district. She started teaching at Smith Elementary School in Plymouth, following her 1958 graduation from Albion College with a bachelor's degree in education.

Kidston taught at Smith for three years and then took seven years off to have a family. She was asked by Thomas Workman, who was then the principal at Allen, to come to Allen and teach kindergarten half time.

This is Kidston's 21st year teaching at Allen. Although she has had other student teachers in her classroom, this is the first time a former student of hers has returned as a student teacher.

Kidston, a 1954 Plymouth High School graduate, remembers starting out as a new teacher. Having grown up in Plymouth was helpful for her. She knew what local resources were available and could find people to speak on various subjects to her classes.

Safety is essential for trick or treaters

Halloween's a time for hobgoblins, high jinks and happiness. It's important, however, to celebrate Halloween safely.

Local law enforcement officials advise parents to take precautions when sending children out trick or treating. Youngsters should wear light-colored clothing; reflectorized clothing adds an extra measure of safety.

It's a good idea for trick or treaters to carry flashlights. Youngsters shouldn't wear masks that could impair their vision, said Richard Myers, Plymouth police chief.

It's best to be accompanied by an adult, he said. For older children, it's best to travel in groups if an adult isn't out with the trick or treaters.

"The old adage, there's safety in numbers certainly is true."

Hours established for trick or treating in Plymouth are 5:30 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31.

IT'S ALSO important to confine trick or treating to familiar homes and neighborhoods, said Officer David Boljesic of Canton Township's Public Safety Department. Even in familiar neighborhoods, young children shouldn't go out alone.

Private parties, held in homes, schools, churches or community centers, are a good Halloween entertainment option, Boljesic said. Youngsters who do go trick or treating should stay in well-lit areas.

"We have had very little problem in this area in the past," the Canton officer said.

In Plymouth Township, the hours of 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31, have been established for trick or treating. Carl Berry, Plymouth Township police chief, agreed it's important for an adult to accompany trick or treaters, particularly for children younger than 12.

A child who chooses to wear a store-bought mask should remove that mask when crossing streets "because it does restrict vision," Berry said. Children need to be particularly careful when crossing streets.

It's a good idea for a young trick or treaters to have a paper with family names, address and telephone number pinned to his or her costume or in a pocket, he said.

Local police officials plan beefed-up patrols for Halloween and for Devil's Night, Oct. 30. Devil's Night haven't, however, presented major problems for local police in past years.

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP has "liquid light" necklaces available for $1 each at the township treasurer's office. The fluorescent green necklaces are designed to make trick or treaters more visible.

Children also need to be careful about eating candy that's suspicious looking.

"Kids should go with their instincts," Plymouth's Myers said. If something looks suspicious, it's best to throw it away.

When trick or treaters return home, parents should check their candy for signs of tampering, local law enforcement officials said. Children shouldn't start eating candy while they're out trick or treating.

"We're in the age of product tampering anyway," Myers said. Any candy that appears to have been tampered with should be disposed of.

"If it has been opened, they should dispose of it," Berry said. "In these times, it's wise to do it just to be safe."

It's also best to throw away fruit or homemade candy items from homes where the givers are strangers, Canton's Boljesic said.

Candy screening will be available on Halloween at three local McDonald's restaurants. Screening will be done at:

• McDonald's of Plymouth, 220 W. Ann Arbor Road, from 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31;

• McDonald's of Canton, 44900 Ford Road, from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31;

• McDonald's of Canton, 40241 Michigan Ave., from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31.

CHILDREN NEED to be aware of the dangers they face, law enforcement officials agree.

"The parents are the key element in this," Myers said. Parents need to present safety information in a straightforward, non-threatening way.

"I think they can cope with it rather well," the Plymouth police chief said.

Canton Township's Boljesic agreed. He has spoken at a number of local elementary schools and has found children capable of handling safety information.

"Kids can grasp quite a bit more than we sometimes give them credit for." Children shouldn't become paranoid, but they do need to understand the dangers they face, Boljesic said.

"It's unfortunate, but it's true." Fire safety is also something to consider when it's time to celebrate Halloween. It's important to choose costumes made of materials that aren't flammable.

Parents can also talk with their children about what to do if a costume does catch fire. Children should "stop, drop and roll" rather than running.

Children aren't the only ones who need to be careful on Halloween; drivers should also be extra careful. A maximum speed limit of 15 miles per hour is recommended in residential areas, Berry said. Drivers need to be careful on all roads.

"Be especially alert for children."

Local police officials plan beefed-up patrols for Halloween and for Devil's Night, Oct. 30. Devil's Night and Halloween haven't, however, presented major problems for local police in past years.

Enforcement actions will have to be taken in cases involving property destruction, Berry said. He doesn't anticipate much trouble in that area.

"The kids in this area are pretty good kids."

Parents need to be aware of what their children are doing, Myers said.

"We're certainly not against people having fun. We're against people breaking the law."

Learning about teaching

Continued from Page 1 "She's helped a great deal." Kidston didn't find it difficult to have Morin come into the classroom as a student teacher. Teachers look forward and not backward, she said. They're accustomed to accepting people on their own terms as they are. "You take a person at their worth at that time." There isn't much time in a busy classroom to make comparisons, Kidston added. Kidston also has taught hundreds of students in the years since Morin was in her classroom. "Your memory kind of dims too on some particulars." "And it's worked out really well. Everything really worked out well." It's coming into a classroom at the start of a school year is easier for a student teacher than coming in at the start of the second semester, Kidston said. By the start of the second semester, so many things are already established in a classroom. "It's different but it's fun," the student teacher said of her classroom responsibilities. "We have a great time."

Symphony starts season

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra will begin its 42nd season with an 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 6, performance at the Plymouth Salem High School auditorium, 46181 Joy Road, Canton.

Russell Reed

The concert will feature works by Beethoven, Vieuxtemps and Tchaikovsky. The orchestra will perform under the baton of Russell Reed, music director and conductor of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

In addition to a full concert series in Plymouth-Canton, the symphony will present concerts in Ypsilanti in December and in Novi in March.

Reed is professor of music and director of the symphony at Eastern Michigan University. He teaches conducting and serves as president of the Michigan Unit of the American String Teachers Association.

The featured soloist for the upcoming performance will be Walter Verdehr, violinist. He will perform the Vieuxtemps Violin Concerto No. 4 in D minor.

THE SOLOIST is a professor of violin at Michigan State University's School of Music. Verdehr is a frequent soloist with U.S. and European orchestras and has recorded with the Tonkünstler Orchestra, Vienna, and three other recording companies.

Verdehr has taught master classes in Europe, Australia and China, where he is honorary professor of music at the Xian Conservatory. The Verdehr Trio will perform at the Lincoln Center in February and will tour Germany, Austria, Burma and China in March.

Cellist Debra Fayrolon, who was to appear as the opening soloist, has developed tendonitis and will not perform as originally scheduled.

The Friday, Nov. 6, concert will include performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 8 in F major, Op. 93, and Tchaikovsky's Marche Slave, Op. 31.

Concert-goers may join symphony members...and meet Reed at the "Gala Afterglow," to be held at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth after the concert. Price is $8 per person.

ORIANA, a four-member ensemble, will perform music from the Colonial period Sunday, Nov. 8, at First United Methodist Church in Plymouth.

Colonial music to ring at Plymouth First Methodist

ORIANA will perform "Music of Colonial America 1725-1800" at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at First United Methodist Church, 45201 N. Territorial, Plymouth.

Colonial American music was not limited to sacred choral anthems alone. Solo songs and airs, both sacred and secular, flourished during the time period, as well as instrumental music for large and small ensembles.

ORIANA is a vocal and instrumental ensemble that performs Baroque and Classical music on original instruments. Musicians for this concert are: Norma Gentile, soprano; Daniel Foster, baroque violin; Alice Greninger, baroque violoncello; and Robert Uterback, harpsichord.

Admission is free of charge. A free-will offering will be taken during intermission. For more information, call 453-5280.

ORIANA WILL perform a concert of this music by native and immigrant composers to the New World using period instruments.

Among the works to be performed are songs by Francis Hopkinson dedicated to George Washington, instrumental dance and airs from Ballad Operas by the French-born composer Pelissier, a violin sonata by Raynor Taylor, the E major keyboard Sonata by Reinagle and patriotic songs, including the Star Spangled Banner and Hall Columbia in original settings.

St. Andrew Church plans dinner

St. Andrew Episcopal Church, 16350 Hubbard, between Five Mile and Six Mile roads, Livonia, will have its second annual harvest dinner and silent auction Thursday, Nov. 5. Dinner will be served 5-7 p.m. and the auction will take place 4-9 p.m.

Dinner tickets are $4 for adults and $1.75 for children under 10. Dinner will consist of chicken, stuffing, potatoes, salads, rolls and butter, desserts and beverage.

In the silent auction, people can write down bids on specific items. Some of the things up for bid include doll clothes, free cottage rental, lawn maintenance, snow shoveling, baby sitting and haircuts. The auction is free. People do not have to attend the dinner to participate in the auction.

Dinner tickets may be bought from any ECW member, calling the church office (421-8451), or at the door.

church bulletin

The church bulletin is published every Thursday in the Observer. Information for the church bulletin must be received in our office by noon the Monday preceding publication. Send information to Suburban Life section, Observer, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

MUSIC DIRECTOR MARKS 20TH YEAR
St. Matthew Lutheran Church in Westland recently had a special anniversary service and celebration for Corinne Lehman. Lehman is celebrating her 20th anniversary as organist and choir director.

A reception followed the 8 a.m. service.

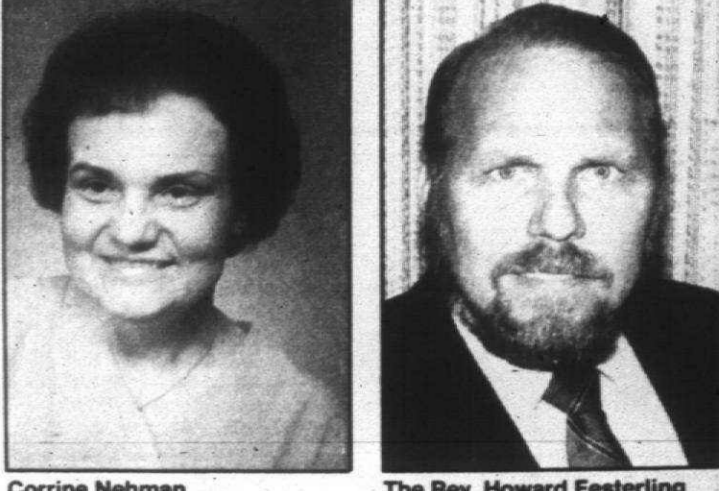

With the help of Lehman, the music program at St. Matthew Lutheran has grown in her 20-year tenure. When she started, Lehman directed four choirs and played the organ at all of the worship services.

The Sunday Choir has grown from 12 to 40 voices. There are also five Bell Chords directed by Shirley Luckwald and two Christian Day Church Choirs directed by Esther Schlicher, Bary Hinek and Chris Behminder. There is also a chamber choir directed by Paul Lehman, son of Corinne Lehman.

Lehman organized the first Christmas concert in 1968, which has since become an annual event. She's also been involved in taking the choir to Venoy Continuing Care Nursing Home each December.

Lehman started training on the organ when she was 8. She received her training from Erich Von Behren, who is the minister of music at St. Lorenz Lutheran Church in Frankentum.

The Sunday worship service included the singing of Lehman's favorite hymns, "We Thank You, God, For Music," "Praise to the Lord," "My Hope is Built on Nothing Less," "Light High the Cross," "Beautiful Savior," and "O, Jesus, Grant Me Hope and Comfort."

RETREAT
Colombiere Center, near Clarkston, will be the site of Village Presbyterian Church's officers' retreat Friday and Saturday, Nov. 6-7.

The deacons are requesting non-perishable foods for the Thanksgiving baskets that will be delivered to those in need. The collection will be ongoing during the month of November.

COURSE
Ward Presbyterian Church School of Christian Education will present three new eight-week courses starting at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 4. Willard Davis will teach a course designed to encourage spiritual growth, "Life After Birth." The Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Gould will teach "Waiting on God." The Rev. Harold Edmonds and Cindy Ziemba will teach "Helping Children Learn," a course designed for parents, teachers and those who work with children. There are classes for all age groups. For more information, call the Christian Education Department at 422-1836.

REVIVAL
Kenwood Church of Christ, 20290 Merriman, Livonia, will have a revival Sunday through Wednesday, Nov. 1-3. Times of services will be 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. Marshall Leggett, evangelist, will be the guest speaker.

REFORMATION RALLY
The Rev. Howard Festerling will be the guest speaker at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 1, for a Reformation Rally at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 17810 Farmington, Livonia. The rally is sponsored by area churches of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod and will feature a special liturgy and music to celebrate the Lutheran Reformation, starting in 1517.

The deacons are requesting non-perishable foods for the Thanksgiving baskets that will be delivered to those in need. The collection will be ongoing during the month of November.

NO-FAULT MENTALITY is glibly agile at ignoring connections. Of course the national deficit has nothing to do with the market falling off and the billions of dollars poured into the building of more weaponry moral perspectives

Rev. Robert Schaden

Not accepting the blame is a default in thinking

There is really no telling where the stock market will be by the time this column is printed. Nor can I forecast the precise nature of events in the Persian Gulf. However, one thing will more than likely remain the same. Whether the disasters are on Wall Street or on the high seas we will no doubt still be living in what one of my friends calls a "no-fault world."

Even as children we were citizens of this no-fault world. "I didn't mean it," "I couldn't help it," or "She made me do it" were only some of our variations of the no-fault theme. Strictly speaking, no-fault is translated to mean "not my fault." That leaves an opening for blaming someone else or chalking up the incident at hand to something like natural causes.

We have all heard how someone's little brother or sister "made me do it," and more than likely we have heard the equally believable explanation, "It fell off the table all by itself." Even in adult life no-fault is wonderful because it avoids the pain of personal responsibility and the aggravation of behavioral change.

In the adult world this seems to work well for tobacco companies who want us to believe the link between cigarettes and cancer is likely purely coincidental. It is equally handy for unions who want to blame bad administration for the ills of a corporation or for administrators who prefer to believe the blame at the feet of the union. The no-fault approach lets shoddy teaching off the hook as easily as it offers lazy students an excuse for the last three failures.

Whether the issue is a tumbling stock market, an attack by a host nation, or something as relatively innocuous as junk along the freeways, things do not happen by themselves. We are all a part of the connection, and the cry that it is all our brother's fault is just as ridiculous in the adult world as it was when the cookies disappeared and we were 5.

The Rev. Robert Schaden is with the Newman House at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Greenfield Construction tunnels to success

By Philip A. Sherman
Staff writer

Angelo DiPonio is able to look back on 50 years in the construction business because his mother packed him good lunches.

"She used to pack me such good lunches, and I had so much respect for her that I knew I couldn't let her down," DiPonio said. That's when he was in his late teens, digging basements by hand for contractors.

That was 50 years ago this year. Today, from behind a semicircular desk in a paneled office on Merriam in Livonia, DiPonio, 70, still steers his business. This year the Greenfield Construction Co., the name of DiPonio's enterprise, should gross $40 million, according to vice president Roger Van Omen.

Greenfield Construction specializes in tunnels — tunnels for people to walk through, tunnels for refuse to flow through on its way to treatment plants, tunnels for run-off water to travel through so it can get to a river. DiPonio has five tunnels under way in Houston, totaling 11 miles of boring through sand, silt and bedrock.

Van Omen estimates they've built 120 miles of tunnel over the years, with most projects averaging two miles. A two-mile tunnel doesn't sound like any big deal until DiPonio or Van Omen trot out facts on tunnel lore. Don't try this at home, but to start a tunnel, dig a vertical shaft. Van Omen said most are 30 to 80 feet deep and serve as the only access to the tunnel. Through that shaft go workers and machinery that either will grind horizontally through bedrock or ooze through silt, enemy of tunnelers. Silt is the stuff that hangs between clay and sand with a grain size large enough to absorb and trap water.

SILT IS dangerous. Van Omen said it's called "unexpected ground," meaning core drillings didn't indicate its presence. Recently in Houston, Van Omen said a team was drilling and hit a wet sandy vein when they were expecting firm drilling. "At that depth it runs like water. Before the operator could do anything it was pouring in around him and his machine. He bailed out and the tunnel filled up with sand for 600 feet." The operator made it safely out of the tunnel.

But they aren't always that lucky. In 1971, Greenfield Construction was one of four companies working on an intake tunnel that would draw water from the lake just north of Port Huron to a treatment plant in Detroit.

Van Omen said the tunnel went five miles under Lake Huron. As his crews were lining the tunnel close to shore, Van Omen said "another contractor drilled a hole to our tunnel while we were ventilating."

Van Omen said methane gas — which is highly combustible — "was pulled into our tunnel. The other contractor did some welding and the sparks caused an explosion. The force was like being in a gun barrel without a slug. Our people were propelled down the tunnel." Van Omen said about 21 of his workers died in the blast along with some city inspectors working on the project. The tunnel was completed, however, and Van Omen estimates it's been in use for about 15 years.

THAT'S THE risk end. In general, as tunnels are dug they're lined with timber and reinforced every four feet until the underground avenue is completed. It's then filled with a liner, usually concrete.

By the time it's done, Van Omen said the average tunnel will have a diameter of about 100 inches — just under 8½ feet. Partially due to the fact that tunneling is an extremely high risk business, Van Omen said your basic medium tunnel going through relatively soft ground will cost approximately $5 million per mile.

Greenfield Construction also does above-ground construction, such as the facelift of the Detroit Zoo entrance at a cost of $12 million, Van Omen said. They're also lowering the Lodge freeway so it will fit under the new, enlarged version of Cobo Hall's banquet, campaign and meeting facilities.

The company DiPonio built has 300 employees and is involved in about $80 million in construction, Van Omen said. It's survived and prospered because a few simple rules are carved in bedrock.

Van Omen said Greenfield Construction can either make or lose millions by the way it judges jobs. "The key is not to get two or three bad jobs in a row," he said. That means careful up-front analysis of the job prior to a work agreement.

It also means being "an organized guy," in DiPonio's words. "I keep schedules, and I found out a long time ago what makes a person fail — giving up. I've never given up on a project. We have a reputation of being respected in our industry."

"I also had the good fortune of having to learn this business from the ground floor up by physically being involved," DiPonio said, noting he worked in the same business with his father. Part of their work has involved building houses and when DiPonio put an employee in charge of the project he told him:

"If you want to learn to be a house builder, go to the site, pick up trash, pick up lumber and find out how carpenters build houses. If you don't know how to do something, you can't tell another what to do."

Schostak: develop, market, manage

By E. Dale Lee
special writer

Robert, David and Mark Schostak all sit in company chairs today, but as children their father says they all had a misconception about the family business.

"They thought we were in the sign business because our company's signs were all over the place," said Jerome Schostak, chairman of Schostak Brothers & Co., the industrial-based commercial and industrial real estate broker, developer and manager celebrating its 65th year in business.

Robert and David, vice presidents, and Mark, an associate with the firm, now know real estate development and management are synonymous with the Schostak name in southeast Michigan as the Ewing name is to the oil industry on "Dallas."

The moving force behind the highly successful and still-growing firm is Jerome Schostak, who, in his 34 years with the company, has seen far more profit than loss.

"I got into the development business because I like to create," he said. "I enjoy using my own ingenuity to sense a need and then having the capacity and enterprise to fulfill it."

Schostak Brothers & Co. has ventured into arenas closed to others because of its diversity: It has the capacity to develop property for itself or clients, employs property managers and is particularly strong in real estate brokerage — matching buyer to seller and arranging mutually beneficial terms.

Jerome Schostak displays the model of the Oakland Technology Park, one of his company's developments.

"Most firms in these businesses develop, broker or manage, but we're specialists in all three," Schostak said. "We have the numbers of people, the track record and the expertise to deliver. That's what separates us."

SCHOSTAK, WHOSE firm emloys 350 and is headquartered in the 30-acre, 750,000-square-foot First Center Office Plaza, pursues developments chiefly in southeast Michigan. But the company's market stretches to Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota and other parts of Michigan.

"Other companies made mistakes," Schostak said. "We didn't run to the Sun Belt to get burned. We stayed here in the Snow Belt and we're doing well."

Schostak prefers ownership to producing a development for someone else.

"I look at real estate as a product, and we build to own," he said. "We take care of the development so it stays in good shape and appreciates (in value)."

"By essentially building to keep, we're producing a stable of mature developments for revenue generation and equity. For us, development for our uses is a good investment."

Schostak Brothers also has an edge on competitors because of competitors' inability to sustain short-term losses for long-term gains.

"It takes one to five years for a development to mature and become revenue-producing, and during that Developments undertaken in recent years by Schostak Brothers & Co., founded by Louis H. Schostak, include:

- Redevelopment and expansion of Wonderland Scopping Center, Livonia.
- The 750,000-square-foot First Center Office Plaza, Southfield.
- The 1,800-acre Oakland Technology Park, Auburn Hills.
- Laurel Park Place shopping center, with Jacobson's as the anchor store, Livonia.
- Maccabees Mutual Life Insurance Co. headquarters, Southfield.

- Renovation of the former Maccabees HQ into offices for W.B. Doner advertising agency, Southfield.

- Remodeling and expansion of Macomb Mall, Roseville.

- Shelby Corners, an 80-acre mixed-use development, Shelby Township.

- Redevelopment of the J.L. Hudson building, Detroit.

- Expansion, leasing and management of Universal Mall, Warren, in conjunction with Landau and Heyman, Chicago.

Small business fights child care legislation

By E. Dale Lee
special writer

Small business owners are rallying to choke proposed legislation that would assure the jobs of men and women who take long-term child care or medical leave.

"As small business owners, we'll bend over backwards to bring back a quality employee, but I object to a government mandate telling me I have to bring somebody back," said David Willett, president of the Lansing-based Small Business Association of Michigan and publisher of the Associated Newspapers, a group of weeklies in Wayne.

"How do you operate a small business while that employee's gone? In small business, every employee is critical," Willett said. "Being against parental leave is kind of like being against motherhood."

"But look at it this way: When you're riding instead of walking, you create a burden. Somebody has to pay for that, and if parental leave is government imposed, the consumer ultimately will bear the cost."

The Family and Medical Leave Act, to be voted on soon by the House and Senate in Washington, would, if approved:

- Grant a total of 36 weeks per employee per year for companies with at least 15 workers.
- Entitle each employee to 26 weeks of medical leave a year.
- Entitle each employee to eight weeks of family leave for the birth, adoption or care of a sick child or to care for a sick parent.
- Require employers to maintain health benefits while employee and he or she stays for more than 13 weeks, that person becomes a valid employee and is

FRANK McMURRAY, who runs the State Farm Insurance office at 5773 Canton Center Road in Canton Township, is concerned that a mandated parental leave law would increase unemployment benefit costs to small businesses that couldn't afford them.

"If I spend a lot of time training a replacement employee and he or she stays for more than 13 weeks, that person becomes a valid employee and is eligible for unemployment when the original employee re-returns," he said. "This law will drive up unemployment benefits."

"I just want to know where this bank of replacement workers will come from. Who will take a job knowing that he or she will be on the street soon?"

Dick Francis, a former SBAM president and now director of merchant banking for Carleton Ward & Co., a Bingham Farms-based mergers and acquisitions firm, said small business "could be destroyed if this becomes law."

"Small business has a history of accommodation of quality workers; if people do their jobs well, we're all too happy to take them back," he said.

"But I oppose mandated parental leave vigorously because of the economic burden it would place on small business."

"The proposal is too rigid, would add to the employment rolls and could open up companies to wrongful discharge lawsuits. Small business has done its job by being flexible and responding individually to employees' needs."

JUDITH TREPECK, managing partner of Birmingham-based Grey & Trepeck, a financial services company, calls the parental leave concept "absurd."

"I don't really resent giving good employees the opportunity to take parental leave. I resent the government getting involved here. Business owners should be able to handle implementation by themselves."

Trepeck said she would support parental leave if its limit were "six or eight weeks."

Pearl Holforty, a partner with Southfield-based Plante & Moran, an accounting firm, believes the proposals as they stand "leave small business owners wide open to abuses."

"Workers can take time off at their leisure, knowing their jobs will be waiting," Holforty said. "It will be hard for employers to find competent replacements willing to accept uncertain conditions of employment, unemployment benefits surely will escalate and valuable time will be lost training workers who probably won't stay very long."

HOLFORTY doesn't endorse parental leave. She said it would give undue protection to marginal employees.

"Employers always will take a quality worker back, no matter what, but this proposal puts employers at the mercy of employees because the job must be waiting," she said. "Is it really fair when an employer carries on medical benefits for six months or so then the employee decides not to come back? There are more than a few kinks in this idea."

time the developer's money is at risk," Schostak said. "Companies looking for that instant reward are in the wrong business."

"Success in this business is won over the long term. You don't spray powder and begin making money. It takes fortitude, patience, a lot of capital and a track record. New companies succeed, but it is not easy to do so. We succeed."

Schostak doesn't believe in following the "herd mentality," and sometimes chooses to ignore industry trends while blazing his own path. "We don't do something because somebody else does," he said. "We do it because it's good for us."

While many multimillion-dollar corporations much smaller than Schostak Brothers hire marketing professionals to seek clients and researchers to seek their needs, Jerome Schostak won't yield that role.

"We get our clients by knocking on doors and using shoe leather," he said. "There's no substitute for hard work."

"My marketing enables us to develop a client base. But the business of getting developments we build occupied is the job of our executive staff."

SCHOSTAK CALLS the building business "cyclic" in Michigan, a "feast or famine" enterprise.

"We're on the up side now, and lots of good things are happening," he said. "Oakland County building activity in particular makes developers elsewhere envious. Compared to the rest of the country, I-75, I-96 and I-275 are developing quite nicely, and we're glad to be a part of the excitement."

Schostak considers his company a catalyst for quality development in Wayne and Oakland counties. It is serving as development manager for a Manufacturers Bank data processing and operations center that will open before the new year at Haggerty and Six Mile in Livonia and for the 1,800-acre Oakland Technology Park in Auburn Hills, which broke ground Sept. 21, among other developments.

"We don't do a lot of developments," Schostak said, figuring his company is involved with less than 10 a year, "but the ones we're a part of are well done. That's our track record. And we're proud of it."

1 bright idea does not a profit make

Remember the "new" Coke? When the new formula was un-corked in April 1985, the Coca-Cola Co. thought it knew what it was doing to get where it wanted to be as an organization. But it failed miserably with the introduction of its new product.

One of Coca-Cola's biggest planning-related mistakes was that it did not stop to consider the psychological impact of meddling with a 99-year-old soft drink. After all, Coca-Cola ranks right up there with motherhood, apple pie, and baseball.

The second mistake was that Coca-Cola relied too much on the results of taste tests conducted among 190,000 consumers, the majority of whom claimed to prefer the new formula.

WHILE IMPORTANT when evaluating the appeal of new foods and beverages, taste testing represents just one element of the marketing mix besides such factors as pricing, packaging and promotion.

As a result, the effects of these other marketing mix elements, once implemented, can convince testers that even glue tastes great. In the "new" Coke case, it appears as though the company was more interested in putting the opportunity before the plan — and as a result the opportunity turned out to be a wrong one to act upon.

Rather than planning their work and then working their plan, Coca-Cola worked the opportunity, and it didn't work out right.

Prosperity demands extreme cars

The last known assault on the all-time pole-sitting record was made in the spring of 1960 by a team from Royal Oak Dondero High School, who attempted to remain parked in the same spot at the Totem Pole Drive-In for 18 hours without getting thrown out.

The feat demanded ordering a new Big Chief burger every 20 minutes or so to comply with the unwritten criteria used for eviction or loitering "charges by management."

Managers, of course, were under the delusion they were running a restaurant rather than providing the southernmost anchor point of the Woodward cruising strip. Nobody knew exactly who held the existing pole-sitting record, but it was rumored to be a team from Highland Park, which was evicted in mid-afternoon after the security guard started checking the Cokes for melted ice.

But even a kid from Woodward Avenue, where cruising has once reached this state of finesse, has to be impressed by Friday night in Goteborg, a town in Sweden that is soul sister to Flint, but where they make Volvos instead of Buicks.

Swedish scenery is, in fact, much like northern Michigan, which makes it the last place someone from, say, Sault Ste. Marie would care to go for a break. But the scenery was only the beginning. Nearing Goteborg recently, we passed a 1953 Cadillac convertible on the way into town — auto talk

Dan McCosh

It turns out that cruising in big, old American cars is a genuine phenomenon in Sweden today. Some of the cars can be traced back to leavings of American servicemen stationed in Europe. Others are scrounged in the United States and imported. In any case, they are expensive, difficult to maintain and scarce — the ideal foundations of a serious cult.

In some ways, it's a parallel to the recurring bouts of nostalgia middle-aged Americans sometimes succumb to in the form of joining hot-rod clubs or maybe buying one of the minor-league collectible cars from the fifties.

But in Sweden, this cruising is an eerie kind of nostalgia about an era that never was, at least not around downtown Trollhattan. It's some wishful thinking about the American Dream, with Swedish youth looking for a zany contrast to the common sense that permeates Swedish life and politics. There are some parallels to today's Sweden and the American era that produced the fin cars and cruising. Stable periods in the economy and subsequent boredom seem to beget excess in behavior.

The irony is that today's Swedish teenagers still understand the joke — the craziness American auto designers in the late 1950s managed to express with some of the most outrageous industrial design that ever rolled down the road. From the distance of a couple of decades, with car designers settled in a pseudo-modern rut, the wild excesses of the 1950s take on a different theme, as if it was the button-down era that really knew how to have a good time after all.

Given this premise, that economic success begets tailfins, one could argue that Japan is ripe for a hankering to own cars with bumps on the fenders. In fact, Japanese collectors are moving into the U.S. nostalgia market as well, going after 1958 Imperials as if they were Manhattan office buildings. But, unfortunately, the fin cars going to Japan are likely to end up in some collector's warehouse. It's tough to imagine a Japanese businessman mastering the Totem Pole slouch.

Or for that matter, it's also an unseemly posture for a 30-year-old American stockbroker. For him, maybe the security of a Volvo.

OLDE DISCOUNT IS READY TO SERVE YOU

Recent market activity demands that you get the most out of every securities transaction. And OLDE Discount offers one of the Lowest Commission Schedules available.

Stock Price	1-100 Shares	200 Shares	300 Shares	400 Shares	500 Shares	1000 Shares
$1-$20	$40	$50	$60	$70	$80	$105
Round Trip	$20	$25	$30	$35	$40	$52M
Over $20	$40	$60	$80	$90	$100	$125
Round Trip	$20	$30	$40	$45	$50	$62M

Regular transactions of over 500 shares, add just 5¢ per additional share to the 500 share commission rate. Round Trip transactions of over 500 shares, add 2 1/4¢ per additional share to the 500 share Round Trip rate. For example, 1000 shares of any stock trading over $20 per share would carry a $125 regular commission rate, while the Round Trip commission for the trade would be $62.50.

Compare our commissions with other brokers — you'll see how much you save.

And active traders can save an additional 50% off our already low commissions by using the OLDE Round Trip. Just complete a stock transaction, both buy and sell, within 31 days, ask for the Round Trip on the closing transaction, and we will cut 50% off your closing commission.

With OLDE you can save up to 90% from full cost broker commissions.

Pets of the week

Sheba, a 10-week-old female boxer mix and Harvest, a 1-year-old female black cat, need homes. Sheba (Control No. 222164) is described as sweet and easygoing. Harvest (Control No. 221527) is described as affectionate. To adopt these pets, or to check for lost pets, contact the Westland Kindness Center of the Michigan Humane Society, 721-7300. The center is at 37255 Marquette, Westland.

Lawmakers wrestle with auto tests

AP — One of the Michigan Legislature's least favorite programs, auto emissions testing in the Detroit area, is up for renewal or an early death in the state Senate.

And so far, the threat of federal penalties is keeping the program hanging on by a thread.

The chamber voted last Thursday to extend the anti-pollution program for another year. But one lawmaker said he may continue his campaign to kill it this year despite threatened federal penalties that could block new industrial construction in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

"There may be a second chance" to dump the testing program when a budget bill to finance it is considered, said Sen. Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford.

"A lot of legislators aren't that concerned because it doesn't affect their districts."

Another senator, however, said elimination of the program would almost certainly result in federal penalties, which could block planned factory construction in Ecorse, Detroit and Auburn Hills and cost thousands of jobs.

Sen. Christopher Dingell, D-Southgate, said the state could suffer the loss of highway, sewage treatment and air and water pollution control money. And he said the federal Environmental Protection Agency is required to impose the sanctions if Michigan doesn't continue the testing program.

On an 18-15 vote, the Senate approved an amendment to continue the testing program until Dec. 31, 1988. The original bill, sponsored by Nichols, sought to restore the original expiration date of Dec. 31 this year.

Attorney General Frank Kelley had ruled that the original expiration date had been improperly drafted, and struck it down.

Dingell tried to get the bill sent back to committee, and Sen. William Faust, D-Westland, sponsored the amendment to extend the program for a year. The Senate will have another chance to alter the bill next week.

Under the 1980 testing program, motorists in the three-county area must have yearly tailpipe inspections — and correct defective exhausts — before they can buy license plates. The program was ordered because the area violated federal Clean Air Act guidelines for certain pollutants.

"I don't think it is helping with the health of the people of southeast Michigan," said Sen. Richard Pessler, R-Commerce. "Let's eliminate it — let's get rid of it."

"It's time this Legislature stood up to the federal government and said our program has no validity," he said.

U.S. House extends independent counsel law

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Oct. 23.

HOUSE

INDEPENDENT COUNSELS — By a vote of 322 for and 87 against, the House passed a bill extending for five years the law under which independent counsel can probe executive branch officials free of interference from the Justice Department. This sent the bill (HR 2939) to the Senate.

The Reagan Administration wants to overturn the law on grounds it allows the judiciary to usurp the executive branch's prosecutive authority. Supporter Lawrence Smith, D-Fla., said the law averts "conflict of interest where a person or an Administration has to investigate itself."

Opponent Pat Swindall, R-Ga., said the law transfers to the judiciary "the very heart of the president's responsibility" to execute statutes. Members voting yes wanted to extend the independent counsel law. Voting yes: Pursell, Hertel, Ford, Levin.

Voting no: Broomfield.

TO PROBE LAWMAKERS — The House rejected, 169 for and 243 against, an amendment to make members of Congress suspected of criminality answerable to independent counsels as well as to the attorney general and U.S. attorneys. This occurred as the House (below) debated and passed a bill (HR 2939) extending the law under which court-appointed special counsels can prosecute high officials of the executive branch.

Supporter Dan Lungren, R-Calif., said "the question is, are we going to clean up our own House?"

Roll Call Report

Opponent William Hughes, D-N.J., said the purpose of the independent counsel law is to remove "the potential and perceived conflict" of an Administration investigating itself.

Members voting yes wanted independent counsels to be able to prosecute members of Congress.

Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Broomfield, Birmingham.

Voting no: Dennis Hertel, William Ford, Sander Levin.

AIDS ISSUE — by a vote of 368 for and 47 against, the House moved to prohibit the Center for Disease Control from using fiscal 1988 appropriations to further homosexual activities.

The vote occurred as the House appointed conferees on legislation (HR 3058) appropriating 1988 money for the Department of Health and Services and other agencies.

At issue was $675,000 the CDC granted to the Gay Men's Health Crisis of New York City for educational programs to combat AIDS. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said the money was behind publication of a booklet exhibiting homosexual sex.

Dannemeyer said "it is not the function of the U.S. government to directly or indirectly encourage the homosexual lifestyle."

Opponent Bill Green, R-N.Y., defended the organization as "a major factor in reducing the incidence of AIDS in the gay community in New York."

Members voting yes supported the funding ban.

SENATE

WAR POWERS — The Senate passed, 54 for and 44 against, a resolution giving Congress greater say in the Administration's ongoing military policy in the Persian Gulf. The resolution (S Res 194) was a much diluted version of an attempt to invoke the War Powers Act in response to the policy. That would have brought American forces home from the gulf after 90 days unless Congress voted to extend their duty.

As passed and sent to the House, the watered-down measure requires President Reagan to report on his policy to Congress within 30 days. After another 30 days Congress would vote on the policy.

Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said the resolution, although weak, should be approved to signal Congressional concern over the policy.

Opponents were Administration allies who saw the resolution as meddling and foes who considered it toothless.

Senators voting yes supported the resolution.

Voting yes: Carl Levin, Donald Riegle.

TO COUNTER IRAN — The Senate adopted, 82 for and 10 against, an amendment to the war powers resolution (above) authorizing U.S. military action against any Iranian ship or facility in the Persian Gulf that "threatens" an American warship or other vessel carrying American citizens.

Sponsor Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said, "It's about time we stood up to the Ayatollah."

Opponent Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said "if that isn't a 1987 version of the (Vietnam era) Gulf of Tonkin resolution I don't know what is."

Senators voting yes supported the amendment.

Voting yes: Levin, Riegle.

BORK NOMINATION — By a vote of 42 for and 58 against, the Senate rejected the nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Senators voting yes wanted Bork confirmed.

Voting no: Levin, Riegle.

Send a greeting, boost a charity

When you buy holiday cards from an organization that struggles against a disease or a social problem, you become a part of that struggle.

Buying a charitable card puts you in the fight against asthma, diabetes, cancer or arthritis, to name just a few. Or you help the fight against alcoholism and drugs or you support attempts to improve the lot of disturbed kids, youngsters with learning problems or those in a hospital.

A charitable card does double duty. It's enveloped with love and sealed with warm wishes for holidays that are merry. It carries the additional message that you care enough to want to make the world a little brighter.

We printed as many cards today as we could get on in one page. Other cards will be published as space permits.

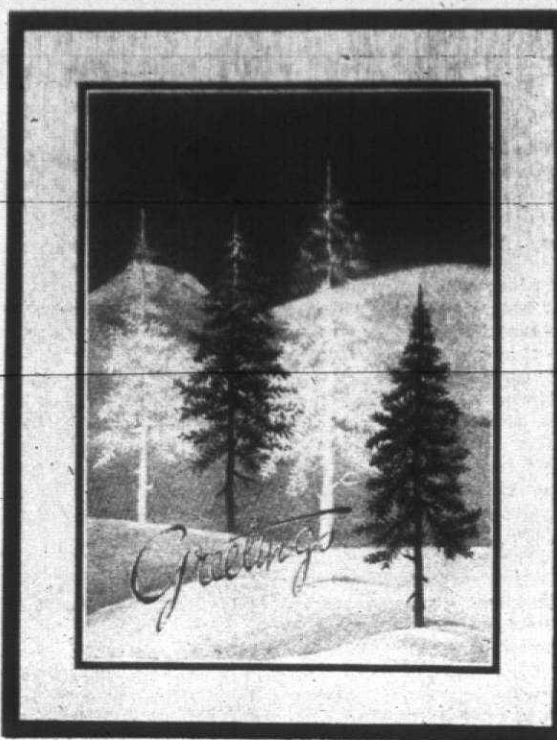

Duplicate cards from charitable organizations are on display in books in the Observer & Eccentric offices. Buyers may ask for the books during regular office hours and peruse them at leisure to make their selection. It's a long-standing O&E tradition.

Another tradition is Holiday Card Sale Day, a joint venture between The Birmingham Eccentric and The Community House. The non-profit organizations provide the cards and a salesman. The Community House provides tables for display and plenty of time to select cards.

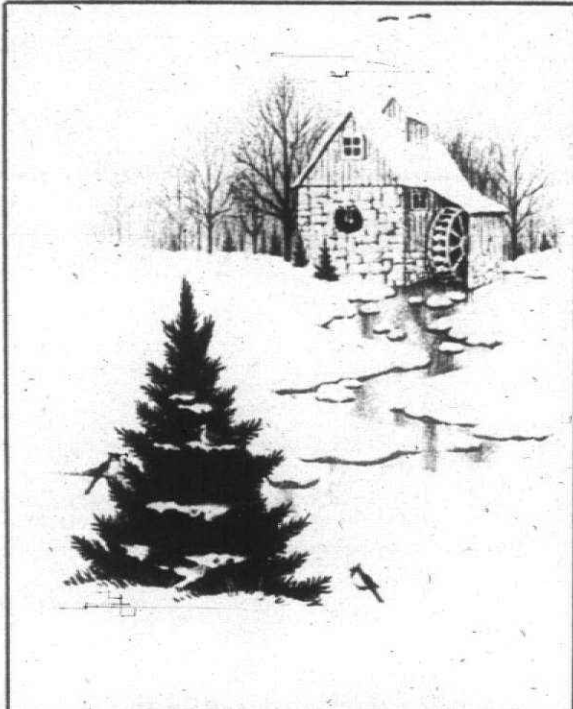

Holiday Card Sale Day runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 4, in The Community House, 360 S. Bates.

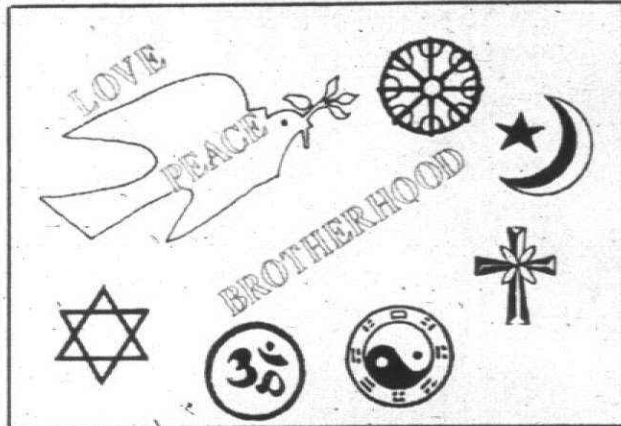

KIDNEY FOUNDATION OF MICHIGAN. Six cards, from $9.25 per box to $14.50 per box. 1 (800) 482-1455.

SPINA BIFIDA ASSOCIATION sells 25 of the white, red and green cards to a box for $8. Orders are taken by Vincetta Nicosia, in Troy, 689-9858.

CYSTIC FIBROSIS FOUNDATION. 12 designs. Selections can be made in the foundation's office, Suite 210, 24655 Southfield Road, Southfield. The office number is 552-9615.

MICHIGAN ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE. 4 designs from 790 Featherstone, Pontiac. Prices: $4.50 to $8.75 for boxes of 16 or 20.

Christmas is a story of Love which spread to all the world.

SUDDEN INFANT DEATH SYNDROME FOUNDATION offers two designs this year. Orders are taken by Marilyn Tatsak, 336-3305.

LUTHERAN CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICE. Information from Pat Sloucum, 647-0138.

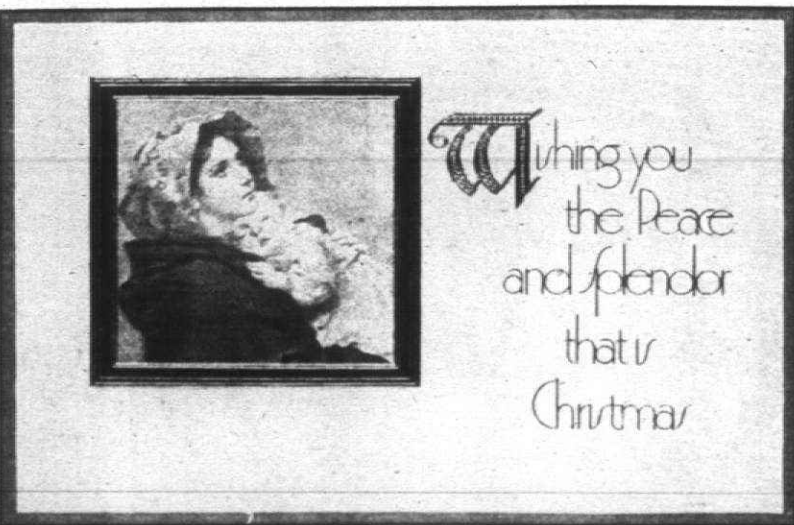

ST. VINCENT AND SARAH FISHER CENTER'S card, an original design, can be purchased during regular office hours at the reception desk in the complex, corner of 12 Mile and Inkster, Farmington Hills.

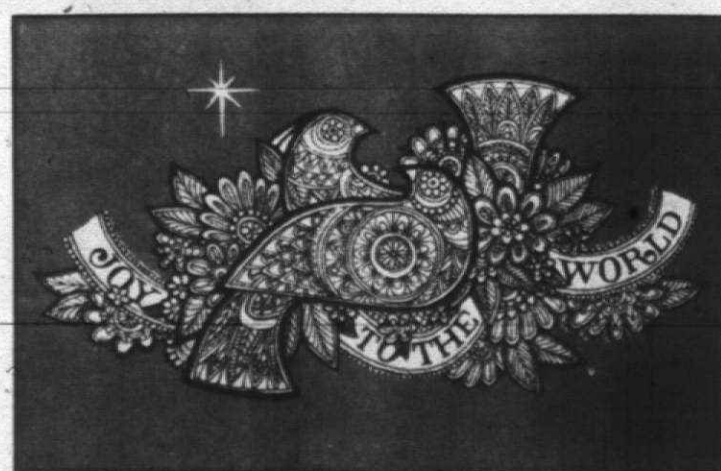

RIGHT TO LIFE-LIFESPAN. Telephone orders taken by calling Right to Life, 251-2757.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DISORDERS ASSOCIATION. Several designs: 17251 12 Mile, Suite 103, Southfield.

In the '80s, even gas company must compete

By Tim Richard

Selling natural gas sounds easy. You're a utility — no competition. Just pump the stuff, send out bills and grow with the economy.

"We're very competitive," says the dissenting voice of Edgar L. (Ed) Doss. He is in the metro region general manager's office at Consumers Power Co. and he repeatedly used the word "competition" in talking about the big changes in his industry. There's competition with oil. Competition with Detroit Edison's electricity. Competition across city boundaries with MichCon. Competition to buy from the cheapest sources.

"In order to grow, we're going to need not only a major portion of the new construction, but to convert customers from other fuels," said the Rochester Hills resident.

HIS REGION — most of Oakland County; southern Macomb, and Livonia, Plymouth, Westland and Wayne in the Wayne County suburbs — serves 51 percent of Consumers Power's 1.2 million statewide gas customers. (Oustate, Consumers also sells electricity.)

"In the 1950s, the federal government set an artificially low price ceiling for gas at the wellhead. Producers were miffed," Doss began. "Then the North Sea opened up, and rigs went there from the Gulf of Mexico. The Arab oil embargo began in 1973. Gas was tight. People tried switching to alternative fuels.

"When the oil embargo hit, we (Consumers) were selling 350 billion cubic feet annually. Now we're at 270 BCF. So we're looking for new markets — water heating, drying, cooking, lighting."

"In 1978, the federal government began to deregulate," said Doss, describing a process that extended over several years. "Basically, today we're a supply and demand industry."

Consumers is strictly a distributing company, picking up natural gas from a transmission company at White Pigeon, Mich., on the Indiana border.

It negotiates contracts of 15-25 years with pipeline suppliers, who in turn buy from producers on a "take-or-pay" basis. You pay even if you don't use it all.

"In 1978, the federal government set a new form of competition. LARGE FUEL users find they don't have to buy retail at state-regulated prices from Consumers. They can negotiate lower prices for short-term supplies with producers."

At first that sounds like bad news for local utilities like Consumers.

'In order to grow, we're going to... to convert customers from other fuels... We're picking up (former) oil customers... We're going to raid Edison's market.'
— E.L. Doss
Consumers Power Co.

But wait. The big customers still must find someone to pipe that gas to their plants.

"We're encouraging it," Doss said. "FERC (Federal Energy Regulatory Commission) says pipelines and distribution companies should be common carriers. So a customer hires a pipeline and distribution company to transport his gas. We're paid a fee, but we never own the gas."

"We're picking up (former) oil customers," Doss said.

In his metro region, Consumers carries gas for 250 such customers — large schools, Beaumont Hospital, Somerset Apartments, several auto yards that we're going to start marketing next spring. Frankly, we're a very competitive method of security lighting."

"In the commercial and industrial sector, propane dealers have provided construction heat during the winter phase. We're actively and aggressively seeking that business. We can beat the propane cost."

Doss, 46, joined Consumers in 1965 after earning a degree in civil engineering from the University of Wisconsin and rose to energy services manager.

Along the way, he picked up a master's degree in management from Central Michigan University and was promoted to regional general manager in July of 1986.

He served on the Rochester Board of Education and was its president in 1985-6. Other activities are with Kiwanis, his city's economic development corporation and the local chamber of commerce.

"It's going to be an exciting time," said Doss. "Our CFO (William McCormick Jr.) believes utilities are market driven."

"We're going to bring more industry into the area. We're going to raid Edison's market."

What is an INTRAOCULAR LENS?

An intraocular lens is a small, chemically inert piece of plastic which is surgically implanted inside the eye to restore vision once a cataract has been removed.

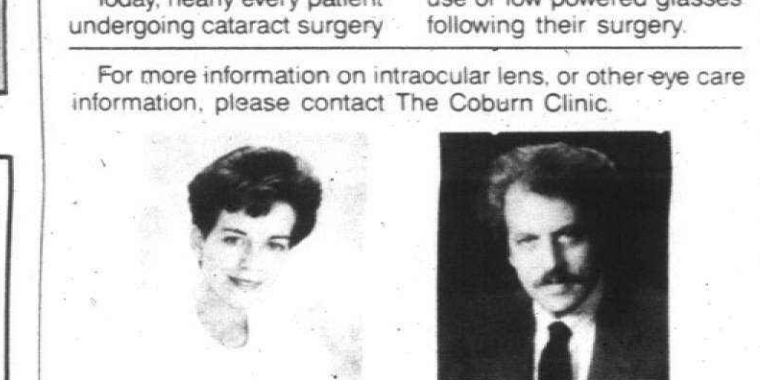

Years ago, visual rehabilitation following cataract surgery could only be accomplished by using thick, cataract glasses or a contact lens. If a cataract was removed from only one eye, those thick glasses created an optical imbalance between the two eyes. If a contact lens was selected, it usually was ineffective since it could not compensate for the increased astigmatism that frequently followed in early cataract surgery. Thus, the development of the intraocular lens (IOL) for short, back in the early 1970's.

Today, nearly every patient undergoing cataract surgery also has an IOL implanted. Once it is implanted, the lens is permanent. IOLs can be implanted in patients of all ages, however cataract surgery is primarily a procedure that is performed on persons 55 years old and older.

The tiny, highly polished plastic IOL measures only 6mm (1/4") in diameter and has two loops off the side which, helps the surgeon affix the proper placement of the IOL in its permanent position.

Prior to surgery, an ultrasound instrument, known as an "A-scan," measures the eye to determine the correct power to make the IOL. With the correct power lens, many cataract patients enjoy the freedom of limited eyeglass use or low powered glasses following their surgery.

House 65 speed bill contains 'ticket tax'

A House-passed 65 mph freeway speed limit bill faces an uncertain future in the Michigan Senate because it contains the controversial "ticket tax."

It makes no sense to link the number of tickets to the number of police officers," objected Rep. M.L. Mickey Knight, R-Muskegon.

He echoed arguments of Republican senators who refused to adopt Gov. James J. Blanchard's proposed $5 surcharge on all tickets for moving violations as a method of raising revenue to hire more state police troopers.

BUT A WEARY majority of the House, which has voted on various forms of the bill six times, was eager Tuesday to get the issue out of the way.

The bill was adopted 72-34 and sent back to the Senate for concurrence on the ticket tax.

Area representatives supporting it were: Democrats Justine Barns of Westland, James Kosteva of Canton and Wilfred Webb of Hazel Park, and Republicans Lya Banks of Livonia, W.V. Brotherton of Farmington, Mat Dunaskis of Lake Orion, David Honigman of West Bloomfield, Gerald Law of Plymouth Township, Judith Miller of Birmingham and Gordon Sparks of Troy.

Opposed were Democrats John Bennett of Redford and Maxine Berna of Southfield, neither of whom spoke during floor debate. Absent was William Keith, D-Garden City.

THE BILL was repaired from last week, when metropolitan area lawmakers charged it discriminated against their areas in the areas of penalty points.

The compromise will set the same penalties for driving over the speed limit regardless of whether the speed limit is 55 or 65," said Democratic floor leader Lewis Dodak of Monroe.

The new schedule of violations, points and minimum fines is:

- 56-60 mph — zero points, $10 minimum fine.
- 61-70, one point, $20.
- 71-80, two points, $40.
- 81-85, three points, $40.
- 86 and up, four points, $50.

The higher speed limit will apply to only 720 miles of rural interstate freeways of Michigan's 1,700 miles of limited access highways, Dodak said. Trucks and buses still will be limited to 55 mph.

THE "TICKET TAX" is expected to yield $6 million — 1.2 million tickets issued in 1986 times $5 each.

The revenue will go into a special highway safety fund, to be doled out by a small group of state officials rather than the Legislature.

That irritated Rep. John Maynard, D-St. Clair Shores, who told fellow lawmakers, "You take the heat (for the tax), and they take the glory (spending the money)."

GOP House leader to speak

State Rep. Paul Hillegonds, R-Holland, will speak before the Wayne County Republican Forum, Thursday, Nov. 12 at the Roweway Inn, 8220 Mastriman, near Metro Airport, Romulus.

Hillegonds is House minority leader. He also serves on the Legislative Retirement Board. Hillegonds has also served on House labor, taxation and oversight committees.

Hillegonds is a University of Michigan graduate. He received his law degree from Cooley Law School, Lansing.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited.

Marygrove celebrates No. 60

With a series of celebrations in November, Marygrove College marks its 60th year at its campus on W. McNichols and Wyoming in Detroit.

A President's Reception for business and civic leaders, a Big Band Birthday Bash, an open house, a special mass of thanksgiving by Archbishop Edmund Szoka and musical recitals are among planned festivities.

Founded in Monroe by the Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary in 1925 as a Catholic girls' college, Marygrove moved to the 68-acre site in 1927. It has become the independent, co-educational, liberal arts base for educational programs geared to the needs of the Detroit urban region.

THE ANNIVERSARY weeks begin Friday, Nov. 6, with a faculty recital by noted composer, musician and guitarist Michael Bryce. He will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Sacred Heart Chapel of the Liberal Arts Building. Parking and admission are free.

On Tuesday, Nov. 10, Szoka, archbishop of Detroit, will celebrate a "Liturgy of Thanksgiving Celebrating the Harvest of 60 Years" in the chapel at 11:30 a.m. It is preceded by a musical interlude at 11:15 and followed by a reception for some 200 guests.

At 4 p.m. Tuesday, Marygrove president John E. Shay Jr. will host a reception for hundreds of Marygrove's friends in the business and civic community in Madame Cadillac Hall on campus. Members of the Michigan Legislature, the city council of Detroit and surrounding communities, and leaders of area businesses will attend.

ON SATURDAY, Nov. 14, the "Big Band Birthday Bash" will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Alumni Hall of the Madame Cadillac building.

Reservations, at $30 per couple, can be obtained from Gwyn Makara, college public relations, or by contacting party co-chairs Mrs. Norman Skrukch, 565-0450, or Mrs. Richard Wing, 382-2342. An afterglow concludes the evening at 12:30 a.m.

The following week will be highlighted by an open house on Thursday, Nov. 19, hosted by admissions office for prospective students and their families.

Some health plans are like hospital gowns: They never cover as much as you wish they would.

When it comes to health care, traditional medical insurance leaves a lot to be desired. Because they only cover a portion of your costs, Health Alliance Plan, on the other hand, is much more comprehensive. We offer complete coverage for virtually everything from pediatrics to geriatrics. And this extensive medical coverage is available from over 1,600 physicians at 23 medical centers, 18 hospitals and hundreds of individual doctor's office locations.

To find out how you can become a member, call 872-8100. You'll learn why Health Alliance Plan is such a great way to cover your medical needs. And that's the naked truth.

Hospital hosts Halloween fare

It was intended to provide a chance for families to enjoy the spirit of Halloween in a happy and cheerful environment, free from fear.

And by the turnout, it succeeded. The 4,500 youngsters and parents who attended Botsford General Hospital's third annual Halloween party Sunday surpassed last year's total.

Spooky excitement ran high as families entered the mystical world of All. The Great Pumpkin and Sweetums, said Beverly Weiss, operations manager for the Farmington Hills hospital.

Cheerleader Erin O'Brien of Redford Township is given an apple by hospital volunteer June "Sparkle" Marchioni.

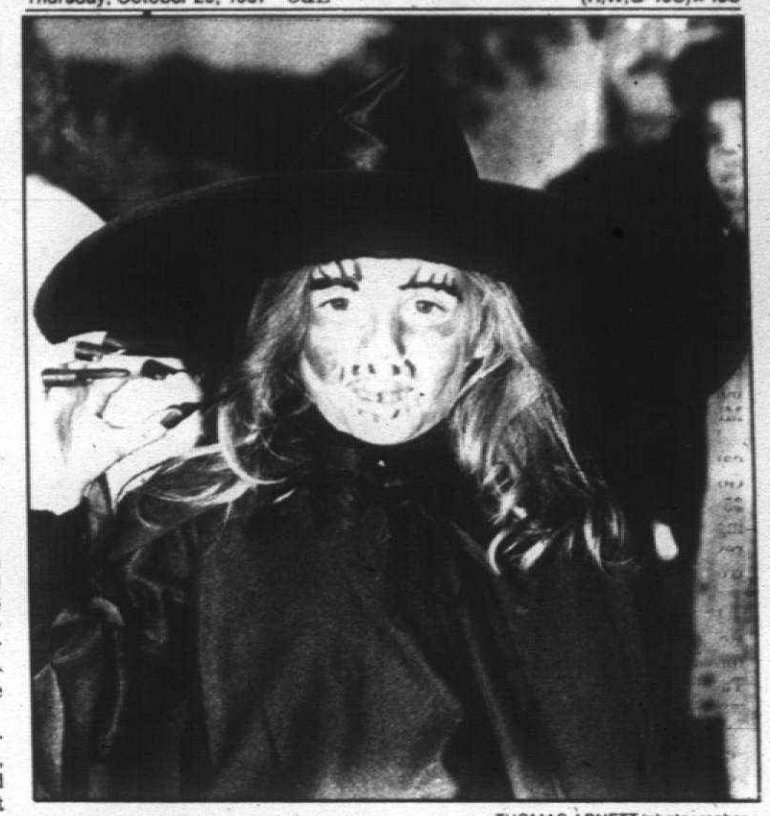

"With the help of our many hospital employees and volunteers who gave their time, and without the many donations from area companies and individuals, we would never be able to treat so many to so much. We thank them all profoundly."

THE PARTY, held in the Administration & Education Center, featured the Witches Walk, an activity center, a juggling mime, Farmington Community Library storytellers telling scary tales, a Punch & Judy Puppet Show and a Haunted Path. New this year was Clown Alley, a trip to fantasy land. The ever-popular Trick or Treat Lane included traditional goodies. Nutritious goodies also were served.

The party draws from the hospital's service area — Farmington, Farmington Hills, Livonia, Redford Township, Southfield and West Bloomfield Township.

Five colorful children's characters, including Yogi Bear and The Great Pumpkin, posed for pictures with the costumed youngsters and their parents.

To drive home safety during the holiday season, Farmington and Farmington Hills police officers presented their "Stranger Danger" and "Holiday Safety" programs.

Melissa DeQuin, 6, of Redford Township, roamed the hallways dressed as a witch.

Group pressures Pursell

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

Continued U.S. aid for Nicaraguan contra rebels may be in limbo in Washington, but the issue is stirring passion closer to home.

A grass roots effort to convince legislators of constituent support for the Central American peace initiative and opposition to further contra aid has signalled out U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, to get its message across.

"In the upcoming vote, we want Congressman Pursell to represent the majority of Americans who oppose further aid to the contras," said Plymouth Neighbor to Neighbor organizer Caren Gardner.

She noted that the most recent Harris poll pegged 68 percent of American people opposed to continued aid for the contras. Gardner characterized the contra rebels as "a U.S. financed army plagued by divided leadership and an atrocious record of human rights violations."

Fifty Neighbor to Neighbor supporters met last week in Livonia at Newburgh United Methodist Church to discuss strategy and further action. Friday a group representative met privately with Pursell.

While Pursell has publicly stated support for the Central American peace plan and hopes for more positive relations in the region, Gardner claims he has not responded to hundreds of personal handwritten letters from Plymouth and Livonia voters. Hundreds of additional letters have come from Jackson and surrounding towns within Pursell's district, she said.

"We have responded to every letter we have received," countered Gary Cates, based in the congressman's Ann Arbor district office. Cates noted that the Reagan Administration has not formally requested a vote for aid.

Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez for his 10 point peace plan is the latest nail in the coffin for more contra aid, according to other insiders.

A Washington based congressional aide said the chairman of the House foreign affairs committee (U.S. Rep. Dante Fasell, a Florida Democrat and contra aid supporter) believes the aid package is in such bad shape now that it would be soundly defeated.

"There is a peace treaty — a cease fire — that ends Nov. 7. Reagan won't ask (for more aid) until after the cease fire, that would look bad. But (the vote will come) before Thanksgiving, that's my best guess," said Tom Joyce, press secretary to Congressman William Ford, D-Taylor.

Joyce said Ford has "no role in the foreign affairs committee. He's just one of 435 members of Congress. And he's (voted) consistently against (contra aid) as well." Ford's district includes Westland, Garden City, Canton Township and southern Livonia.

U.S. Rep. Sander Levin, a Southfield Democrat whose district includes Redford Township, was unavailable for comment. Levin has voted against contra aid.

Levin aide Noan Gelfond said the latest appropriation for the Nicaraguan rebels — $100 million — expired in September. The administration will ask for $270 million in new support.

Andy Fisk, a People to People spokesman, said the group decided to concentrate on Pursell because "there is going to be intense pressure from the administration on this vote and we want to make sure that we have the swing votes sound."

He acknowledged that Pursell endorsed the Arias peace plan early this year and that the congressman voted for a moratorium on the contra aid package last March.

"When the call from the president comes, we want to make sure that Pursell will say I'm going to vote no because I have 1,700 letters on my desk from constituents."

People to People has also targeted U.S. Rep. Paul Henry, a 5th district Republican from the Grand Rapids area. Nationally, the organization has members in eight states targeting a handful of representatives and senators believed to be key swing votes necessary for a sound defeat on contra aid.

A message from Oakwood's Cardiology Center

Four weeks ago, Charlie Mitchell thought his playing days were over

Charlie was lucky. Because when his heart attack occurred, his teammates recognized the symptoms and immediately rushed him to Oakwood Hospital's Emergency Room. Their quick response and Oakwood's fully equipped, 24-hour emergency room are two factors in Charlie's speedy recovery.

Many people wait too long before seeking medical treatment.

A delay can cause additional damage to the heart...even death. Oakwood Hospital is just minutes away, and we can do a world of good. For 30 years, Oakwood's cardiologists have been dedicated to the treatment of cardiovascular disease. Our treatment capabilities are state of the art, ranging from drug therapy to the latest surgical techniques. Treatment options include the use of anticoagulant drugs — like streptokinase — that destroy blood clots in the arteries. But, because everyone is different, the treatment is determined on a patient-by-patient basis. And Oakwood's cardiology experts individualize the care each patient receives as well as the treatment program.

Oakwood is also devoted to the patient's follow-up care, with education courses and monitoring that help lead patients back to full, active lives even after a heart attack. So don't delay.

League champs Canton girls breeze past WLA A competition

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Canton was favored to win its first Western Lakes girls cross country championship Tuesday, and the Chiefs certainly lived up to pre-meet expectations.

Canton placed five runners among the top 19 finishers and won the meet going away. The Chiefs compiled a 52-point team score and bettered runner-up Farmington by 34 points.

"I knew if we ran as well as we could, we were going to win the meet today," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "Everybody was just ready, hungry and ran well."

Walled Lake Central's Colleen Yuhn took individual honors with a 19:32 time, but the Canton parade began with Lori Penland, who was second in 20:17. Of the top 10, three were Chiefs, with Lynda Schendel taking sixth place (20:35) and Cindy Spessard ninth (20:49).

Canton's top five crossed the line within 1:18 of each other. Sherry Furguski was 16th (21:33) and Adrienne Garrow 19th (21:35).

'When we work hard, it's very competitive. I tell the kids to run easy, and I might as well be talking to the wall. They don't go easy on each other.'

— George Przygodski
Canton girls coach

THE LATTER played an important role, filling in for teammate Cathy McCabe, who was ill and unable to compete. Garrow's performance was a reflection of the depth the Chiefs have, Przygodski said.

"Our practices are so competitive because of that," he said. "It's our depth that pulls and pushes us, and that's probably one of the keys to our success."

"When we work hard, it's very competitive," he added. "I tell the kids to run easy, and I might as well be talking to the wall. They don't go easy on each other."

The Chiefs retained their competitive edge throughout the season, pointing for the league meet and Saturday's regional. Along the way, Canton won the Western Division with a 5-0 record and won all nine dual meets.

"I'm just really happy for the kids," Przygodski said. "The season gets a little bit long, but when you have something like this to work toward suddenly the season gets short again."

AND THIS year's title might not be a one-time thing. The Chiefs could be back a year from now to defend their crown since six of their top eight runners will return for the 1988 season.

"I think we'll be up there again," Przygodski said. "We'll have as good a nucleus as anybody coming back."

Farmington, the Lakes Division champion, was led by fifth-place Bonnie Stecker and No. 10 Army Trunk, but the Falcons couldn't match the overall strength of their Western Division counterpart.

"We mixed it up a little better," Farmington coach John Barrett said, referring to his team's battle with Canton at the Redford Union Invitational.

"We did our best. Canton just has an outstanding squad, and we congratulate them."

"WE KNEW our competition would be Canton and Walled Lake Central, and Canton had the outstanding times and maintained them. They have a good group of five, and there's no real difference between Nos. 1 and 5."

Livonia Stevenson, spurred on by Karen Kuphal (seventh), Jennifer Daniel (12th) and Carrie Creehan (13th), finished fourth behind Walled Lake Central. Plymouth Salem was fifth as Jenny Sample took 11th place and Kim Mishler 18th.

Salem year ends in 3-2 regional loss

Livonia Stevenson will have to show up and play its next game, possibly several more as long as the Spartans keep winning, to retain its title as Class A soccer king.

The competition certainly won't concede the crown, but Stevenson may have cleared its last major hurdle en route to another championship Wednesday when it edged Plymouth Salem 3-2 at Centennial Educational Park.

"I don't think there's anybody out there that can play like (the Rocks)," said Spartans coach Pete Scerri after his team extended its unbeaten streak to 66 games.

"This is the best team. Year in year out, they and Churchill are the best teams we play. This was the game; now we're on our way."

Stevenson, 16-0-2, will face a decent Southfield team in the regional final at 2 p.m. Saturday in Brighton. The Blue Jays, 16-2-1 following a 3-0 win Wednesday over Trenton, knocked off Catholic Central in the district final.

SALEM, which tied the Spartans 0-0 during the regular season, finishes with a 13-4-2 mark after seeing Stevenson come from behind to erase a 2-1 second-half deficit.

"We would have won the state if we had won tonight," said an equally confident Salem coach Ken Johnson. "I think we are No. 2 in the state."

Johnson said he thought the Rocks outplayed Stevenson in terms of soccer skills and added the loss was especially crushing when "everyone played 101 percent; everyone played his best game tonight."

Stevenson junior Pete Galea scored the winning goal with only 2:33 to play, driving the ball home with a header. On a play in front of the Salem net, Mel Karfis hit the ball first, and the rebound came back to Galea for the deciding score.

"I went up and headed it and hoped something would happen," Galea said. "With two minutes to go, we knew we could pretty much hold them."

THE SPARTANS scored first on Eric Schwedt's goal, and sophomore Jason Flynn, who came up from the junior varsity for the tournament, helped set up the score.

Flynn's sidwinding kick kept the ball in play along the sideline, and then he popped the ball over the heads of two defenders 20 yards up field, putting Schwedt in the open field with the ball.

The Rocks tied the score at halftime on the first of two Denny Reynolds' goals, and Salem controlled the play to begin the second half.

Salem pressured Spartan goalie Jeff Bencik, who made some key plays, but Reynolds managed to give the Rocks a 2-1 lead at 15:57. He got into a 1-on-1 situation with a defender, waited for his teammates to catch and spread the field, and then delivered a successful shot from the wing. Bencik leaped to attempt the save, but the ball was just out of reach.

"If we could have gotten another one (for a two-goal lead), I thought we would have won," Johnson said.

BENCIK had to make other saves against Reynolds and Joe Tippman before Stevenson evened the score at 2-2. After a corner kick, Kurt Will won a loose ball and knocked it in with 18 minutes to play.

Scerri said he was surprised it took three goals to win.

"Nobody has scored two goals on us," he said. "Of course, our best defender (Derek Williford) was on the bench (with a broken ankle)."

"They played like champs," he said of his team. "They were down and they came back."

Salem, Canton conclude season with grid rivalry

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Salem set out eight weeks ago to make the 1987 football season a watershed year.

Now the Rocks, who were 3-6 the last three years, are one game from a 6-3 finish and turning that record completely around.

The only team standing in Salem's way is cross-campus foe Plymouth Canton, which has not beaten the Rocks in four previous meetings but hopes to stop the Rocks from accomplishing their goal.

The teams close out the season at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Centennial Educational Park in a game between natural rivals due to the proximity of the schools.

"I hope it's intense for us," Salem coach Tom Moshimer said. "I know it will be intense for them."

"WE DOWNPLAY it until this week, but now we'll allow it to become a big game. Now that it's here I hope we can be as intense as they are."

The Chiefs are 3-5 after breaking a three-game losing skid with a 6-2 win over Farmington Saturday.

"It's bound to be an emotional game," Canton coach Bob Khoenle said. "All of these kids know each other. A lot of them grew up in the same neighborhoods and went to (grade) school together."

Salem boasts a potent offensive attack with its triple-option wishbone, featuring a number of capable backs, including Garrett Bowie, who had a 56-yard scoring run in Friday's 34-21 win over Livonia Churchill.

But quarterback Steve Holt has to be considered as big a threat after he ran for 72 yards and two touchdowns, including a 35-yarder, last week.

"EVERYBODY says he's too slow and can't run," Moshimer said. "All he does is run and pile up yards. So if people let him run, we're willing to let him run."

Khoenle knows the Chiefs will have their hands full trying to keep the Salem horses in the corral.

"The wishbone is hard to defense, because there aren't many teams that run it anymore, for one thing," he said. "It's a big challenge, because you have to defend a broad front and can't have many breakdowns."

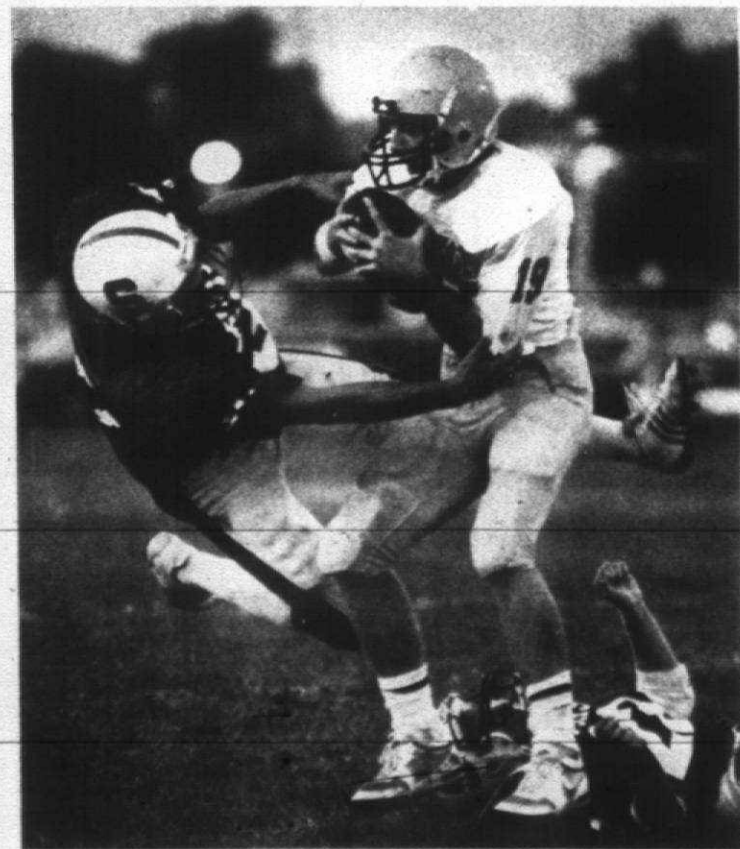

Canton's offense has struggled for much of the season. Things might have been different for the Chiefs, who played a lot of close games, had they been able to take advantage of more scoring opportunities.

"In all the close games we lost, we had a chance to score and win them," Khoenle said. "We just don't seem to be able to kick it in when we have to."

"IT CONCERNS you in a game like this, because if a team that runs the wishbone gets ahead they can run the ball and grind it out."

"Of course, we'd like to get ahead of them and make them do things they don't like to do," he added.

Salem has shown it can throw the ball when it needs to, but defense has been Canton's strong point and is responsible for the Chiefs playing so many teams tough.

Ocelots avenge loss in tourney

A measure of revenge was all Schoolcraft College's volleyball team needed to get mentally ready for the invitational tournament it hosted Saturday. The Lady Ocelots accomplished their goal, avenging an earlier loss to Southwestern Michigan Community College and, in so doing, capturing the tournament. SC and Southwestern met in the finals, and the Lady Ocelots proved they were the better team. They won their first game in the final capped a perfect tournament for the Lady Ocelots. All told, they played 10 games and won them all. SC advanced to the finals by beating University of Michigan-Dearborn 15-6, 15-8 in the semifinals. In pool play, the Lady Ocelots whipped Henry Ford CC 15-8, 15-2; Madonna College 15-4, 15-7; and Lansing CC 15-1, 15-4. But it was the win over Southwestern, which entered the tournament ranked fifth in the NJCAA, that was most satisfying. SC, No. 5 in the NJCAA, should now jump up a spot. Eastern Arizona CC is No. 1, followed by Mesa (Ariz.) CC and Bellevue (Ill.) CC. Once again, Jill Ehlerst was the leading force behind the Lady Ocelot triumph. The sophomore outside hitter collected 59 kills in 61 attacks with just three errors (.574 kill average) and nine digs. SC plays at Henry Ford CC at 6 p.m. today.

Chiefs win title outright; Rocks whip Farmington

Plymouth Canton clinched its third straight Western Division championship by trouncing Livonia Franklin 66-38 Tuesday in girls basketball. "Anytime you accomplish the feat of winning three straight championships you have to feel good about it and proud about the achievement of the girls in the program," said Canton coach Rob Neu. The Chiefs also won their 11th straight game for their longest winning streak since 1977. Karen Boluch led Canton, which outscored Franklin in all four quarters, with 16 points. Sue Ferko added 13 and Heather Miller chipped in with 11. Rose O'Bea paced Franklin, 4-5 overall and 6-8 in the W.L.A.A. with 18 points and Cathy Cruz had 10. "They've got a real strong team," said Franklin coach Dan Freeman. "They shoot very well, and they have some big girls and rebound well." With the win, the Chiefs improved to 12-4 overall and stand 9-0 in the division.

SALEM 68, FARMINGTON 52: Westland John Glenn trailed 34-20 at the half, but came back strong in the third and fourth quarters to earn an 11-point victory Tuesday over visiting North Farmington. "It was like deja vu against them," said Glenn coach Pat Bennett, whose team had to battle from behind to earn a victory the first time when the two teams met. "We were down by as many as 18 points. We didn't play very good basketball. In the third quarter we took charge. We were more aggressive. We didn't allow them to play offense." Both Wilson paced the winners, who outscored North 18-6 in the third quarter and 25-12 in the fourth, with 24 points. Denise Gumke added 14 points and 17 rebounds and Cheryl Hawley meshed in 10 points. North, 7-8 overall and 3-6 in the Lakes Division of Western Lakes Activities Association, was led by Suzi Butcher with 17 and Donna O'Brien and Vikki Seamounts with 11 each. With the win the Rockets improve to 11-4 overall and 7-2 in the Lakes.

SC gets hot too late in year

For the third consecutive game, Schoolcraft College's men's soccer team blanked its opponent. It's an impressive streak, but it only makes the realization that it's too little, too late that much more painful. Had SC recovered from injuries and started playing like this a few games earlier, it would be in the hunt for another region title. Instead, the Ocelots are stuck with a hopeful wait-'til-next-year attitude. Their victim Saturday was Lakeland CC, which had beaten SC earlier this season. But in that meeting, Paul Burrill had not played. He was all the Ocelots needed this time, scoring twice in the second half for a 2-0 victory. SC plays at Henry Ford CC at 6 p.m. today.

Post-season berths depend on final games

By Brad Emons and Dan O'Meara staff writers

WHAT'S THE SCOOP on the state football playoffs? By Sunday night everything should be cleared up, but between now and then there will be a few anxious coaches and teams, wondering whether they'll qualify for one of the state's coveted 64 post-season berths. Class A Region IV is the most intriguing, as two area teams are hanging on the edge. The playoff system, a computer ranking based on the number of victories and opponents' victories, currently finds Westland John Glenn (7-1) and Redford Catholic Central (7-1), both looking from the outside in Region IV. ● Both teams first must get past their respective opponents in the season finale to have any kind of a shot. Glenn must defeat rival Wayne Memorial (6-2) and CC must top Southgate Aquinas (6-2) for the Catholic League's A-B Division championship. No easy task for either team. ● Sterling Heights (8-0) and Dearborn Fordson (8-0) are "locks" on two of the four spots. Sterling Heights, tops at 113,000 on the computer, could lose at 2-6 Mount Clemens and still get in. Fordson, 110,000, could finish at Melvindale (5-3) and still make it. Both teams, however, should finish the year undefeated. ● The teams with an inside track for the other two spots are once-beaten Detroit Chadey (9-5) and Uca Eisenhower (9-8.75). Chadey will be a virtual lock if it defeats 7-1 Detroit Cass Tech in the Public School League championship, but that is no guarantee. And Eisenhower should get the other spot if it beats 7-1 Sterling Heights Stevenson (another Region IV team), which is no cinch. ● Catholic Central, fourth this week on the computer at 94.75, and Glenn sixth at 92.625, will both be rooting for Cass Tech and Sterling Heights Stevenson to win this week to have a chance at one of the two final spots. Both CC and Glenn have a slight edge over two other once-beaten teams, Port Huron Northern (91.750) and Berkley (93.750). Port Huron Northern winds up the season at Warren Cousino (5-3) and Berkley travels to Oak Park (2-6). ● It appears that three other once-beaten teams — Troy (91.750), Dearborn Edsel Ford (90.208) and Sterling Heights Stevenson (88.0) — are real longshots.

Canton's last three games have been decided by 14 points. A blowout win over Willow Run in the opener and losses to Western Lakes champion Westland John Glenn and runner-up Farmington Harrison are the only games decided by more than a touchdown. "They play a very aggressive style of defense where they blitz the linebackers a lot," Moshimer said. "They come at you hard, which gives you problems. "ANY TIME you blitz you're taking a gamble," he added. "When you do, if you hit the wrong spot, it can be a big play (for the offense). With the triple option, we think we have a chance of busting the big play." Moshimer was concerned about his defense, particularly the secondary, when Churchill threw the ball successfully and was tied 21-21 with the Rocks at halftime. Salem shut down the Chargers in the second half, however. "We're going to work real hard on our defense," Moshimer said. "We feel we can move the ball well enough; the question is whether we can stop them." (Canton) held Churchill in check, which is something we couldn't do. But, on the other hand, Churchill held them in check (14-7 overtime loss for the Chiefs), and we moved the ball on Churchill." Moshimer said. Falcons repeat as league champs

Unlike past years, Farmington went into Tuesday's Western Lakes boys cross country championship race unsure of what might happen. But the result was the same as it has been the previous three years with the Falcons taking their fourth straight league crown at Schoolcraft College. Farmington was the not the runaway winner it has been in other league meets. The Falcons edged Walled Lake Central by two points, 85-87.

Plymouth Salem, the only team to beat Farmington in the dual-meet season and the Lakes Division champion, was third (100), Plymouth Canton finished fourth (102) and Western Division champ Livonia Franklin took fifth (130). (See complete scoring summary on statistical page.)

"We came into this not knowing what we were going to do," Farmington coach Jerry Young said. "Other years we'd come into the conference meet knowing we were going to win it. Today we knew we were in a dogfight."
BRANDON LONDON finished lower than expected, but was still the Falcons' top runner with a 10th-place effort. Teammate Matt Walter was 12th, Brad Moore 17th, Rob Holloway 22nd and Ron Smedley 24th. The latter held the key to Farmington's repeat performance. Steve Quenneville ran out because of a knee injury, and Smedley was running his first varsity race after missing much of the season with either an injury or illness.
Young was counting on either him, Greg Endres or Eric Crawford to balance the team in the No. 5 spot. Smedley responded by running 50 seconds faster (17:32) than he previously had and leaving just 17 seconds between Farmington's Nos. 1-5 runners.

"I told them 'One of you guys has to do it, or we're not going to win it,'" Young said. "Smedley ran his heart out and saved the day."
"One of them had to stay with Holloway, two of them did and we were alright. That was the depth we needed without Brandon doing what he can do up front."

LONDON WAS CLOCKED at 17:15, Walter 17:18, Moore 17:24 and Holloway 17:28 with Smedley finishing off the victory. The Falcons underscored the word team in that London didn't have his best of days. But enough of the others did and the Falcons prevailed once more.
"We had kids come in and pick up for Brandon, who just could not get his wheels going," Young said. "Unfortunately, London had a hard day — and the other kids supported him. Salem had their troubles, too. So did we but we were able to hold together better than they did."

The Rocks, who were led by third-place Doug Vergari and bolstered by Bill Atwell in 13th and Brendon Masterson in 19th, had hoped to have five men in the low 17-30s, but it didn't work out that way. Salem's Nos. 4-5 were 31st and 34th.
"It was nice to come in having beaten them in the dual, but a meet like this is up for grabs," Salem coach Geoff Baker said. "If one guy runs bad it can blow your whole score."

"FARMINGTON came back and showed its strength, and Walled Lake Central put it all together today. I'm sure Jerry (Young) had a long talk with (his Farmington team) after our meet and told them what they had to do."
Franklin had won the Western Division championship and was 7-0 in dual meets. Charlie Olschanski led the Patriots with a sixth-place finish. "If we didn't run our best, we knew we could slip that far," Franklin coach Bob Holmes said. "This was a decent performance, but not like our last two (dual meets)."

Education needed to safeguard resources

EDUCATION is the bottom line. If we want to preserve our natural resources for our children, grandchildren and our grandchildren's children the general public needs to be educated about the dangers facing our natural resources and the environment, in which we live. Changes need to be made, drastic turnabouts in our thinking and our way of life. But without education many changes will either come too late or not at all. Our natural resources are not on the list of top priorities of most legislators.

Look at the mistakes we've already made. Look at the extinct and endangered species lists of both plants and animals. Look at the problems we have with solid and hazardous waste disposal. Look at pollution and the deteriorated conditions of our air, land and water. Look at the accelerated rate of eutrophication (aging) in many lakes right here in southeastern Michigan — in our own backyards. These are all man-made problems that didn't have to be. There's a hole in the ozone that scientists can't decide if we created or not. When will we learn?

DR. GORDON GUYER, director of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, got me thinking about some of these problems Monday night while addressing a group of citizens concerned about some of these same issues, at the Community House in Birmingham.

Guyer, a former entomologist (insect scientist) with Michigan State University, has been a longtime leader among the world's environmentalists. He was part of the research team at Michigan State University that explored the effects of pesticides in the Great Lakes food chain. And it was through the work of this research team that it was discovered that contaminants like DDT eventually find their way into the lakes, up through the food chain and finally into the bodies of birds, mammals and humans. He was also instrumental in pushing through landmark legislation that eliminated the use of many contaminating pesticides.

IN MONDAY'S PROGRAM, sponsored by the Paul H. Young Chapter of Trout Unlimited, Guyer gave an hourlong talk about the use of pesticides, the problems caused by artel-borne toxins and some of the other major environmental issues facing this great state. Guyer summarized his talk by saying, "The most important issue is education. Right now there are no required programs in grade school and high school about the

On the hazardous waste problem Guyer admitted Michigan has some very serious problems and feels the best way to attack these problems is to initiate educational programs for industry in order to raise the ethics of environmental quality.
"We need to find ways to find money, and encourage legislation to put a high priority on our natural resources," said Guyer.
With rapidly changing industry Guyer feels Michigan will move from an industrial boom economy to an economy more dependent on small businesses and tourism. To do this we need to have a quality environment.
"The future and the quality of our environment lies with the DNR and other people who care," said Guyer. "In that respect the DNR is the most important agency in the state."
Guyer pointed to the Moose Lift Operation, which reintroduced moose to the Upper Peninsula, the recent planting of grayling in the AuSable and other rivers and the experimentation with planting Sichuan peaches in several areas of the state, as positive steps taken by the DNR to increase the quality and variety of our natural resources.
"And the only reason these projects came to be was because people care," said Guyer.

The DNR has extended the enrollment deadline for the Michigan Environmental Youth Awards Program to Nov. 6.
The program is an environmental education initiative administered by the DNR's Office of Public Information. The Youth Awards Program encourages young people with an adult sponsor to organize a project that focuses on preservation and conservation of Michigan's natural resources.
For more information, contact the DNR's Office of Public Information at (517) 373-1214.
Pesticide use will be the topic of discussion at a two-day educational conference titled "Pesticides: Benefits, Risks and Alternatives," Dec. 3-4 at Michigan State University's Kellogg Center in East Lansing.
The conference is designed to increase the public's awareness and understanding of safe pesticide use through the dissemination of the most accurate and current information available and to promote alternatives to chemical pest management in Michigan.
Registration fee is $35. For more information, contact Barry Griffin at (517) 373-1087 or Dr. Michael Kamrin at (517) 353-6469.

FREE ADVICE -- No Problems

When you get ready to redecorate, you want the right materials: the right primer, the right type of paint, maybe an exact color match, the right wallpaper, and possibly some extras like buckets, paste, brushes, rollers, dropcloths, and so on.
What you don't want are problems. So be sure to ask for our absolutely free advice before you decorate. Your work could go a lot smoother that way.

We recommend and sell KURFLES paints and stains.

PHOTOGRAPHIC HISTORICAL SOCIETY TRADE FAIR

The Michigan Photographic Historical Society will hold its 16th annual trade fair from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 1, at Bonnie Brook Golf Club, just off Telegraph Road south of Eight Mile Road.

This is one of the few collector's shows left in the country, specializing in antique cameras, hard-to-find usable equipment, images and literature concerning them, plus other collectibles in the photographic line.

In honor of Michigan's 150th anniversary, and the society's 15th anniversary, the event will offer an exhibit of photographic items "Made in Michigan," borrowed from members' private collections.

Admission is $3 with ample free parking. Lunch will be available.

GEM SHOW

The Midwest Faceters Guild will host its fourth gem and jewelry show, Friday-Sunday, Oct. 30 to Nov. 1 in the Dearborn Civic Center, east of Southfield on Michigan Avenue.

Shining example

Contemporary Arboretum nurtures past

Shown here is the exterior of the Maple model, the largest of the three models in the Arboretum development. Plenty of windows and open planning take full advantage of the natural beauty of the site.

Jo Hulce (above) stands in the kitchen of the Beech model. Below, she is shown with her two partners in the Arboretum development, Richard Cherkasky and John Shekerjian of John Richards Development Corp. of Birmingham, in the living room of the Beech model.

IT TOOK JO Hulce about five years to finally decide what to do with the property adjacent to the historic farmhouse where she lives on McClumpha Road in Plymouth Township.

After 32 years and "a lot of good times," a decision was in order, but difficult to make nonetheless. She took her time, she said, because it was a special piece of property.

Hulce, a former school board member and prominent in the arts community, and her husband moved to the area from Dearborn because "we wanted to raise our children in the country."

It was country living at its finest, she recalls with a grin. The farmhouse, long since restored beyond its original expectations, was home to four Hulce children — but more than that. It was the hub that centered activities that went hand in hand with living in the country.

THOSE WERE THE days when the 4-H clubs were active, Hulce noted. The family had horses and the children raised their own farm animals.

Adjacent to the rambling farmhouse was a mature forest of beech and maple, an ideal place for scouting overnights and picnics galore. Smack-dab in the center was a clearing that served as a baseball diamond, she recalled.

"The woods has never been timbered," said Hulce, a longtime advocate of preservation. "Except for maybe a small boy with a hatchet," she added with a pixie-like grin.

It is that 16 acres that Hulce finally decided to part with, but not just to anyone or to any kind of development.

"I spent a long time looking for a good developer," she said, "one who would be interested in preserving the land as much as I was."

SHE FINALLY FOUND who she was looking for in the John Richards Development Corp. of Birmingham.

The two partners in John Richards had developed Pinehurst at 14 Mile and Lahser, and I liked what I saw," Hulce said. She invited them out to her site and the three eventually became partners in the development they call "Arboretum."

The development of 25 homes, on McClumpha south of Ann Arbor Road, takes advantage of the cluster zoning option that allows for random placement of the homes to take advantage of the beauty of the site.

"It is a shining example" of the cluster zoning option, commented township planner James D. Anulewicz.

The architect was David Schaff of Plymouth.

The development, nestled in the woods, features two- and three-bedroom one- and two-story models that take full advantage of the view the site offers.

"The design is very unique for Plymouth," Hulce notes. "It's country contemporary whereas most of the Plymouth area is more New Englandy."

The developers plan to include a commons/picnic area, expand a nature pond and re-do tennis courts that have been Hulce-home landmarks.

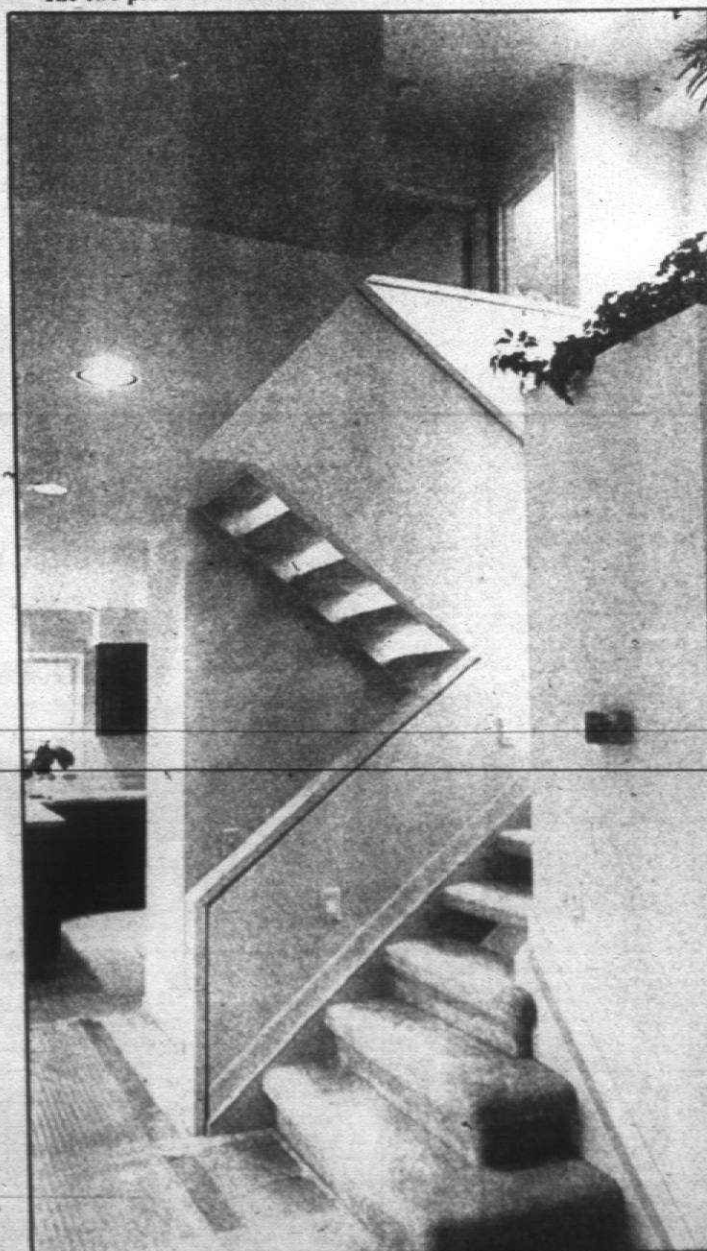

But more importantly to Hulce, nature trails will be developed throughout the development where special attention will be given to the wild flower plantings that abound in the woods. Green-thumb enthusiast that she is, she envisions "having a hand" in carrying out those plans.

Very few of the trees have been cut down to create Arboretum, Hulce notes with pride. Wherever possible, they have been moved, she said.

Remember the baseball diamond that was once in the center of the woods? Some of those trees were moved to that area that has since become a boulevard area in the center of the development.

If Ma Nature was looking for a house, she'd love Arboretum.

Models are open from 1-6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Entrance to the 2,500-square-foot Maple model shows the open stairway to the second floor where an optional loft area or third bedroom is located. The second story is open to the great room below.

'Penzance' a spirited production

By Mary Jane Doerr
Special writer

The Light Opera of Michigan opened its 1987-88 season with a new name, Opera Lite; a new location, the Smith Theater on the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College; and a spirited production of the Gilbert and Sullivan musical, "Pirates of Penzance."

The operetta is delightful, with strong voices in the lead. Ruth Lapeyre as Mabel and David Froiana as Frederic Troiano's beautiful lyric tenor voice showed the wear of competing in the Metropolitan Opera Auditions the weekend of Oct. 17-18, but he managed to sing and act the role with expertise.

David Jackson stole the show with his tongue-twisting lyrics that just came faster and faster. As the Major-General Stanley, he was pompous, silly and funny.

Lapeyre has been working with Opera Lite for a year now but this is the first production where she has been used in the cast. The difficult singing of Mabel's role was no challenge for Lapeyre's agile soprano voice. She attacked the heights with ease and grace, as well carrying out the humorous antics the role requires.

"Pirates of Penzance" might well be a dry-docked "H.M.S. Pinafore," the stories are so similar. The opera takes place on the rocky coast of Cornwall where a group of pirates are celebrating Frederic's 21st birthday. Ruth, sung by Rosemary DiDomizio, is a middle-aged nurse who loves him, but he does not know if he shares her affection.

Major-General Stanley (tenor David Jackson) and his ward Mabel (soprano Ruth LaPeyre) are at the mercy of the revenge-seeking pirate king (baritone Mark Byers).

Mark Byers was commanding as the Pirate King, and Terry Burcher showed off his bass voice as the Sergeant of Police.

David Pulice directed the production with his usual skill and Don Daniels conducted a more than adequate orchestra. The simple but versatile sets were designed by Marnon Construction, Robert A. Janes and members of the cast. Costumes were by UMGASS and Suzanne Werpette. The production is scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Oct. 30-31 and 2 p.m. Sunday. For ticket information, call the Smith Theater box office, 471-7700.

Check bulb storage temperature

Correct storage is important if you want to enjoy the beauty of your bulbs again next year.

I'm afraid it's a little late for the caladium since we have had some light frost, but if you wish, you may try to salvage some of them. Caladium tubers should be stored with some soil attached after they have been left to dry for a week or so in a warm, dry area. Store the same as dahlias, but at 60 degrees.

Dahlia stems should be cut off to 4-5 inches. Dig tubers carefully, hose off soil and dry upside down in a shady area for a few hours. If the storage area (35-40 degrees) is very dry, cover the tubers with a slightly moistened packing material and sprinkle with water occasionally to prevent shriveling. Wait until spring to divide the dahlias. The bud growth will tell you where to divide.

down to earth

Tuberous begonias can withstand a light frost, but dig them soon. Leave about 4 inches of top growth attached and dry for several days in the sun, until the stem stubs detach easily.

After digging the rhizomes of the calla lily, shake off the loose soil, let the plants dry slightly before removing the top growth. Both tuberous begonias and calla lilies should be stored the same as dahlias, with tuberous begonias needing temperatures of 45-60 degrees. Keep the packing dry.

Canna stems should be cut off at ground level and the rhizomes dried upside-down for a few weeks. They should then be placed in a warm, airy room where they can continue to dry. Store (45-55 degrees) with the soil attached. The roots must be kept dry during storage. Packing material is optional.

Dig gladiolus corms anytime after the foliage begins to yellow, but before a hard freeze. Leave a growth of 1 inch on the corms, shake off loose soil and dry in the sun for a few hours, then place in an airy location for two to three weeks. Remove old corms from the base of the new, large corms and cut the tops to within 1/2 inch of the corm. Place them in mesh bags or in shallow flats with screen wire bottoms. Store in a well ventilated area (35-45 degrees). The temperature should never drop below freezing.

Can't stems should be cut off at ground level and the rhizomes dried upside-down for a few weeks. They should then be placed in a warm,

Doing color by eye

I WISH I was smart. You know the type — every class in high school seemed to be a snap for them. Then in college, they would study a little, play a lot and then ace every class they took. To justify my inconsistent grades, I would think to myself, "Maybe those smart guys aren't as happy as I am."

I still follow that line of rationalization when it comes to my being overweight. I'll ask myself, "Are thin people r-e-a-l-l-y happy?" Early on I learned to just be satisfied with being cute, charming and artistic. Humility is also one of my good points. Which is why I say, "A little more humility and I'll be perfect."

Well, anyway, academics were always work for me and art was always fun. So early in my college days, I learned to offset every academic class with an art-oriented class just to keep my grade average up. And keeping my grade average up was very important during the late '60s, because if your grade point dropped too low, boys would find ourselves in the army.

ONCE AGAIN THE world of art proved beneficial. I remember when I had to take a physical at Fort Wayne. The man who weighed and measured my height said, "Congratulations, son."

Puzzled, I asked, why. "Well," he continued, "you're just 10 pounds under being too heavy and just one inch under being too tall."

My sarcastic reply to that was, "Thanks a lot. I guess that just makes me about the biggest and slowest moving target out there, now doesn't it?"

Needless to say, that physical inspired me to new heights in academic achievement. But in studying, reading and memorizing was still laborious to me. For some reason, I always correlated memorizing interesting things like color combinations with boring things like the hardness scale in geology.

For the most part, I still struggle with quoting color basics. I have no trouble making the colors I want, but to tell you beforehand what colors to use, I choke up. I could probably be compared to the musician who can play anything by ear, but struggles to write or read music. I wonder if that would be called, "Doing color by eye?"

I am always impressed when I ask either one of my two oil paint teachers a questions about color. Sue Robb teaches our oil classes and Carmen Enriquez teaches portraits in oil and our watercolor classes. When you ask either one of them a color question, they answer, "Well, mix this with that and add 20 percent of this with a touch more of that" to which I always say, "Umm, I knew that. Those are the same colors I'd use." One day I asked Carmen if she had any good formulas for skin tones in oils. Her reply follows.

Basic flesh tones: white, yellow ochre, cad red light, cerulean blue. Cool tint, used in receding planes of the head: white, yellow ochre, viridian, cad red light.

Halftones: B. sienna, viridian, cad yellow ochre, chromium oxide green, cad orange.

General shadow (caucasian skin, also base for dark skin): B. sienna, white, viridian cad orange.

Darkest darks: B. sienna, viridian, cad orange.

Basic dark flesh: B. sienna, White V. viridian, cad orange.

Lights of dark skin: B. sienna, white, viridian, cad orange.

Halftones: B. sienna, viridian, cad orange plus viridian to cool or ultramarine VI. Plus cad red light or venetian red and white or aliz crimson and white.

Shadows: B. umber or B. Umber or B. Sienna or B. umber and aliz crimson.

Darkest accents: B. umber, aliz crimson and ultra blue.

Watercolor: flesh tones — yellow ochre, cad red light, cerulean blue (very little); shadows — raw umber, cad red light, cerulean blue; halftones — raw sienna, cad red light, cerulean blue.

Look for the unusual

All photographers like to have their eyes strayed by the "ooohs" and "aahs" of appreciative viewers. This not only means that the photographs were well received, but serves as an incentive to make you want take more pictures.

How can you improve your photographs and get positive acclaim? One good way is to be on the lookout for the unusual, which, most often, is right there in front of you.

What needs to be done is to develop your skills in seeing the unusual and then producing the image on film. Listed below are some things to look for that will help you capture that something different on film.

AS YOU LOOK through the viewfinder of your camera, really begin to "see." For example, a back-light shot of a landscape may subject into an unusual dramatic silhouette. A shadow cast by an early morning or late afternoon sun can add that extra touch.

How about an unusual cloud formation or perhaps an approaching thunderstorm? A photographer with a keen eye can isolate a small detail or a striking pattern to produce a photograph of unusual quality.

Even using backgrounds effectively can add important impact to your shot. Keep your eyes open for an exciting splash of color; it may be that final ingredient for that special shot.

Don't overlook reflections and pay close attention to careful framing and composition. All of these will generate those "ooohs" and "aahs."

Using your camera's controls creatively can add the unusual to your pictures. Too slow shutter speeds can blur the action and give a misty, dreamlike appearance to subjects such as flowing water.

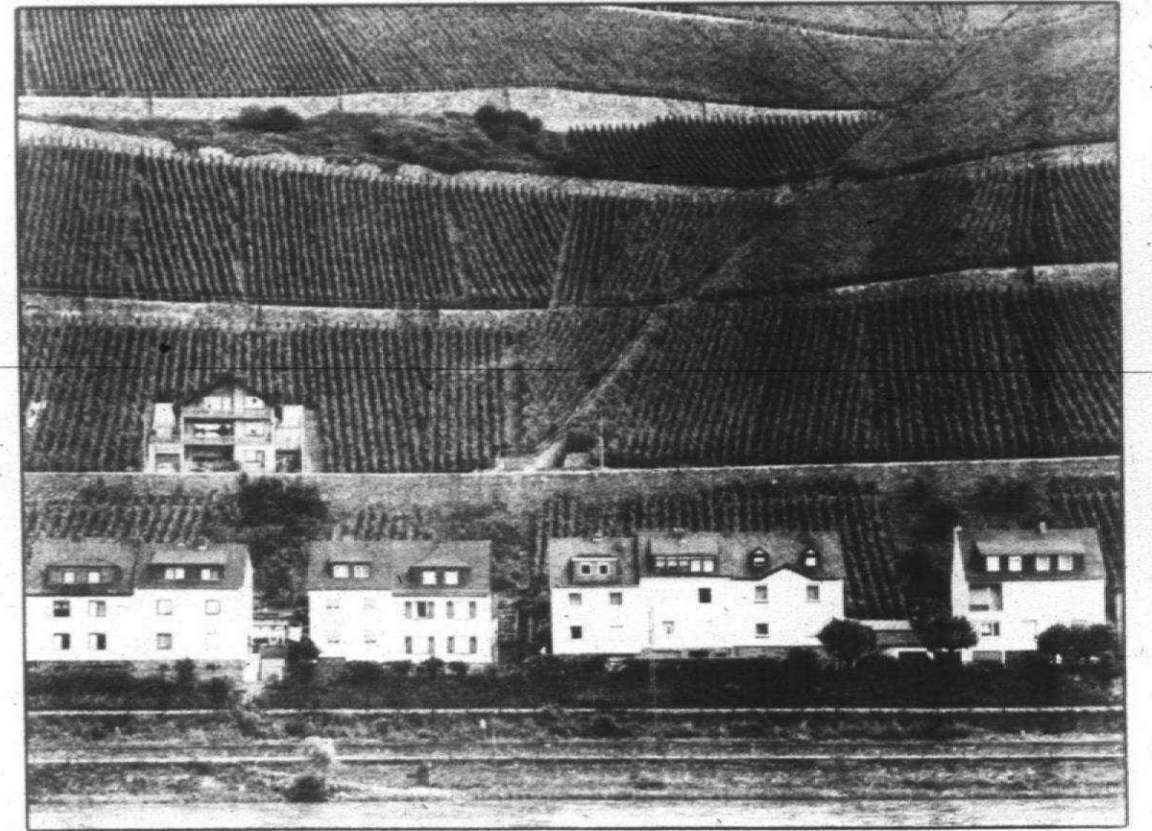

FAST SHUTTER speeds will, of course, freeze the action at its peak. Remember that your aperture controls depth-of-field and that, in turn, can be used to get an unusual look in your picture.

Even candid shots will capture that unusual, fleeting expression that is so elusive in posed portraits.

For you vacationers, put your traveler's vision in gear and be on the lookout for the unusual. An obscure street scene or other out-of-the-way image will add impact and interest to your travel photographs.

In summary, it's okay to deviate from the normal in your photography. Being a little unusual in your photographic thinking will reward you with pictures you'll be proud of.

Painter/professor to display work

The most recent paintings of Harold Linton of Southfield, a professor of architecture at Lawrence Institute of Technology, will be on display at the I. Irving Feldman Gallery in West Bloomfield through Nov. 30.

The exhibit, at 6917 Orchard Lake Road, is open to the public at no charge. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Linton's exhibit, "Between Matter and Spirit," includes 14 large canvases that explore color relationships and arrangements. These arrangements reflect many of the patterns Linton sees in nature.

Striving to make an abstract statement that emphasizes rhythm, spatial interval and color structure, Linton mixes and layers thousands of colors to achieve his goal.

Linton is a prolific artist whose work has appeared in numerous galleries throughout the country. He is the author of a nationally distributed textbook called "Color Model Environments," and also the author of a book called "Color in Architectural Illustration," due to be published soon.

condo queries

Robert M. Meisner

Q. My management company has presented a contract to us for review. We have an attorney on the board, but he has had no experience in representing condo associations. The management company said it is a standard contract. What should we do?

A. The management contract is probably the most important contract that the association will be called upon to review and sign. The management company usually has substantial responsibility in regard to the successful operation of the association. There have also been situations where management companies have a change in ownership or have gone out of business and left associations "high and dry." Accordingly, the management agreement should be carefully reviewed by legal counsel who, presumably, has experience in dealing with the problems incident to management companies vis-a-vis condo associations.

Q. We are having trouble raising funds for our advisory committee since the developer does not want to fund it. We want to hire an attorney and accountant. Do you have any suggestions?

A. Go to the developer and indicate that the advisory committee established by statute and the condominium documents should be funded by association monies in order to help prepare itself for the turning over of control of the association to the co-owners. Indicate to the developer that he, since he is in control of the condominium association, has a fiduciary duty to insure that the advisory committee is properly funded so as to make intelligent decisions in behalf of the co-owners.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney specializing in condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

'Our Town' exhibitor

Art work created by Redford artist Ruthann Platt will be on display at the "Our Town" art exhibition and sale, a juried show featuring Michigan artists and their interpretations of "Our Town," any hometown and its meaning to them. Platt's work is a watercolor, "Floral Array." Platt had two watercolors in last year's show. The exhibition opens today at the Community House, 380 S. Bates, Birmingham and continues through Sunday. An artist's reception and awards ceremony at 2 p.m. Sunday will climax the show, which will close at 5 p.m. For more information, call 644-5832.

SELL HOME YOURSELF? I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my home through a REALTOR? I can sell it myself and save a lot of money." Right? Wrong!

This kind of thinking usually turns out to be financially unwise. The prospects who usually start by mentally deducting the commission and then start negotiating from there. On the average, a homeowner saves little or no money when he sells his own home. In fact, the opposite is often true. A lot of time is wasted showing homes to unqualified curiosity seekers and many possible sales are lost because the owner did not possess the experience to financially structure a viable sales in today's fast-changing market.

As a private seller you're at a great disadvantage in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of go-it-yourself pitfalls. You've got a lot invested in your home. It makes sense to list it with a REALTOR. He'll sell it for you — without hitches — for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

Flowers hold special message for bereaved

By C.L. Rugenstein
special writer

THOUGH MEMORIAL donations in the name of a deceased friend or relative are the trend today, floral tributes still play an important part in extending sympathy and support to bereaved families.

"Flowers are a visual expression of love and respect," said Bud Lipinski, vice president of floral wire service Industry Development Services. "Most families do want flowers at a funeral — they just don't want to be inundated with them."

Lipinski speaks from 40 years experience coordinating floral tributes for the funerals of notables like Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Colonel Sanders and Elvis Presley.

Flowers create a background of warmth and beauty, Lipinski feels, which adds to the dignity and consolation of the funeral service. They also help a family deal with the reality of death by the comfort generated by friends' thoughtfulness.

Lipinski recalled an incident related to him by a local funeral director, in which flowers played an important part in helping a wife deal with the death of her husband.

"IT WAS AN UNEXPECTED death, a construction accident," Lipinski said. "The wife was so distraught she wouldn't allow anything in the room with her husband, not even an American flag."

When she arrived later, however, and saw the bareness of the room, she called a florist and ordered flowers herself, also allowing the funeral director to bring back floral tributes already sent by friends.

"There's a lot of anger when a death is unexpected," Lipinski explained. "At those times it's very difficult to work with a family. But after they begin to realize what's happening, they begin to change their minds about a lot of things."

Lasting Distress

Effects of bereavement haunt many

MOST AMERICANS tend to think that after the death of a loved one, survivors suffer a relatively short period of grief and then "get over it" with the passage of months or years.

University of Michigan researchers dispute such beliefs.

A study by Camille B. Wortman and Darrin R. Lehman of the U-M Institute for Social Research revealed that accidental death of a child or spouse inflicts psychic pain on survivors that is more serious — and longer-lasting — than is commonly believed.

They found that the effects of bereavement haunt many survivors for as long as seven years after a fatal accident.

Wortman and Lehman interviewed 40 individuals who had lost a spouse in a motor vehicle crash and 54 parents who similarly lost a child, matching each group with a control sample. Their research was supported by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

BOTH SPOUSES and parents, interviewed four to seven years after their loss, usually had not "worked through" the loss or otherwise come to grips with it.

Death of a spouse or child is one of the most stressful events that a person can experience during the course of his or her life, the U-M researchers note. Death of a spouse appeared to be even more traumatic than that of a child, possibly because a spouse's death also eliminates a source of support.

Sudden accidental death can result in survivors experiencing symptoms beyond the expected grief and sense of loss. The U-M study showed that they suffered variously from diminished well-being, anxiety, alienation from friends and relatives, deterioration in job performance and income. Divorce (in a parent group) and death rates were increased.

Employment effects were evident. Among surviving spouses, only 36 percent were still working at the same job when interviewed, compared to 55 percent of the control group. Among parents, only 38 percent continued to hold the same job, compared with 68 percent of the control group.

EIGHT OF THE 54 parents interviewed had been divorced since their child's death. In the control group only one divorce was recorded.

A large percentage of the respondents (from 30 to 85 percent, depending on the question) continued to dwell on the accident or what they might have done to prevent it. They appeared unable to accept/resolve or find any meaning in the loss.

It is possible, the researchers suggest, that many people continue the psychological work of mourning their deceased loved ones for the rest of their lives.

"OUR DATA CLEARLY indicate that, following the traumatic loss of one's spouse or child, lasting distress is a normative response to the situation, not a sign of individual coping failure," Wortman and Lehman explain.

Americans, the U-M researchers say, generally consider expressions of grief for more than a short time after a loss to be unusual and inappropriate. "We feel that the expression of distress four to seven years later is all the more remarkable in light of the implicit social pressures to be recovered from the loss."

Psychological theory holds that most bereaved people not only recover from the loss but "work through" their grief so as to free themselves from the former attachment.

"OUR RESULTS," Wortman and Lehman say, "provide little support for either of these views. This study provides evidence that experiencing a sudden, unexpected loss can result in enduring difficulties."

Sixty-seven percent of the spouses and 53 percent of the parents told the U-M researchers that they have not made any sense of the tragedy at all or rationalized any meaning in the death.

Using national norms to assess psychological well-being, Wortman and Lehman found that bereaved spouses were virtually indistinguishable from psychiatric outpatients on six of nine measures.

Longer-range studies, they add, will be needed to see whether their respondents "will gradually show some improvement or whether they will continue to exhibit the same amount of distress for the rest of their lives."

Trauma of suicide

SOS — signaling help for survivors

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

SUICIDE DOES more than take a single life. It can shatter a family, rock a community to its core, leave co-workers and friends feeling guilty.

According to mental health care workers, it differs from accidental death or death from natural causes in many ways.

"For one thing, it's very violent," said Mary Leonhardi, coordinator of the Survivors of Suicide (SOS) groups in metro Detroit.

"OVER HALF ARE (accomplished) with guns. It's very sudden. Families can interpret it as a rejection. Police may even consider (survivors) perpetrators at first, treating the death like a homicide."

SOS was created more than a decade ago to offer help to survivors, left to cope with probably the most traumatic experience of a lifetime.

In 1974 while he was director of the suicide prevention center in Detroit's Herman Keifer Hospital, Dr. Bruce Danto began tracking phone calls from survivors.

"He decided to try and respond to their difficulties by asking volunteers who manned the crisis phones to work with him," said Leonhardi, who joined the venture in 1978.

THAT CORE GROUP evolved into five SOS groups, led exclusively by volunteers. A professional leader, with a master's degree in the human services field, steers the weekly, free sessions. A survivor acts as group co-leader.

"It's a very individual thing," said Leonhardi. "Some (survivors) need one session. Others might come back weekly for two years. It usually depends on how long after the death they join the group.

"And after the first year, they come as much to help others as to get help themselves."

Typically, survivors are left with tremendous feelings of guilt, and the unresolved question of why the act was committed — in many cases when things appeared to be getting better after a difficult time.

"Survivors often find that three to six months after the death is the hardest time," said Leonhardi. "People expect them to be getting on with their life by then. There's pressure to move on. But the grief is still there."

Most SOS groups attract spouses and parents of the victim — often the hardest hit emotionally — but participants include everyone from siblings to friends to co-workers.

"Our philosophy is that grief is a normal process for people to go through. It's not sick. There are things unique to suicide that make it difficult," said Leonhardi.

"People band together to get and give help from one another."

SOS is part of the Neighborhood Service Organization Emergency Telephone Service/Suicide Prevention Center. Groups meet in various locations across the metro area, including Westland, Dearborn and Southfield. Those interested in obtaining more information can call 224-7000 anytime.

2 years and the hurt is still there

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

BRUCE KLIMEK seemed an unlikely candidate for suicide.

The athletic 23-year-old Livonia native had a good job in Dallas, a college degree from the University of Michigan and the love of a big family and friends.

He had just passed three of four parts of a grueling certified public accounting examination and had joined a church group in his new hometown — a large, bustling city in Texas.

The last weekend of his life, he paid his phone bill and apartment rent and phoned a friend in Wyandotte, telling her that he was looking forward to his parents' scheduled visit in less than two weeks.

Because he was always conscientious and work oriented, co-workers were concerned the following Wednesday morning when he didn't show up for work or call in sick. A friend went to check, and discovered the tragedy. He had fatally shot himself inside his apartment. The date was March 5, 1985.

Two and a half years later, Mary Klimek still grieves for her son, the third of five children.

"WE DON'T QUITE understand it yet," said Mrs. Klimek, a substitute teacher in the South Redford School district. "He kept a lot to himself.

"I was not educated at all about suicide. I was not familiar with the signs. Even if I had known, I don't think he showed any (warning)."

At first she searched for help at grief seminars and with a Livonia church group she found was geared toward helping widows and widowers cope.

"It didn't serve our needs," she said.

Through a grief seminar, she found a woman whose husband had committed suicide. The woman told her about SOS — the Survivors of Suicide group. Finding that group in mid-June 1985 was like hooking onto a life raft.

"At first I went twice a week. It really helped me to talk about my feelings with others who felt the same way. They understood. We're in the same boat," she said.

"Two years later, you're still not normal. In some respects, I'll be stronger. But I don't think I'll ever get the same enjoyment out of life."

On the positive side, Mrs. Klimek is glad she and her husband were able to be supportive of each other.

Through group meetings, she has learned that many families are torn apart by suicide, pointing blame, seeking divorce.

THE OTHER CHILDREN are now closer. She overhears her 21-year-old son telling his 24-year-old sister that he loves her. She sees them being more sensitive to others. One son attended a few SOS meetings with her this year because he was worried about a friend he thought might be considering suicide.

"I definitely needed (the support group)," Mrs. Klimek said. "Friends, even close relatives, don't want to talk about it anymore."

The worst days are special occasions, like the same birthdate she and Bruce and a daughter all shared, as well as holidays and anniversaries.

Currently Mrs. Klimek is assistant group leader of the survivors group that meets at Westland Convalescent Center. She attends the weekly meeting sometimes with her husband, but most of the time alone.

The Klimek family has established a scholarship fund in Bruce's memory at his alma mater, the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus. The first scholarship was just awarded.

"We've gone on by trying to help people any way we can," Mrs. Klimek said.

Precautionary measures

A will is the only way to make sure that everyone in your family is taken care in the way you want them to be when death comes. Deciding who gets what ahead of time and then documenting that in a will eliminates a lot of family arguments later.

5 reasons why you shouldn't delay in making out a will

ESTATE PLANNING and postmortem planning fall under the category of uncomfortable topics for most people. Many of us avoid making a will or setting a plan for disposition of assets upon our deaths for two simple reasons. One, we are uneasy with the thought that someday we will die; and, two, we feel that our estates are too small to justify the time and expense involved in the will preparation process.

Regardless of the size of your estate or your philosophy on death, estate planning and post-mortem planning involve everything that you have worked for during your life — and ensure that your wishes will be followed should you become incapacitated or die. According to industry experts, there are five important reasons why making a will is an essential process — you can choose your donees, minimize taxes, appoint a guardian, name an executor and establish a place of residence.

● In the absence of a will, up to one-half of a married individual's property usually will be distributed to the surviving spouse, with the remainder passing to their children. However, even though this distribution of property may not be consistent with your wishes, you have no recourse. By failing to prepare a will, you have abdicated the right to select your beneficiaries, and what and how much each beneficiary is to receive.

A Foundation Of Trust Since 1904.

The quiet dignity of Schrader Funeral Home has long been a tradition in the Plymouth-Canton Community.

The Schrader Family has built a foundation of trust over the past 83 years. We're proud that for three generations we have been here when you needed us.

We realize that the loss of a spouse, child or parent can be a devastating psychological and emotional experience. This experience can be shared with others who have gone through the same transition. With this in mind, we are sponsoring the HORIZONS Survivors Support Group.

The HORIZONS Survivors Support Group is led by our staff grief specialist, Diane M. O'Connor, M.A. You are invited to meet with Diane and attend our group meetings which will be held at the Plymouth Historical Museum every third Monday of each month. The meetings run from 7:30 to 9:00 and are free to the public.

Decision making

Pre-planning

To avoid family problems, let your wishes be known

By Mary Rodrigue

A TRAGEDY the magnitude of Flight 255 brings home the fragility of human life, but people are still hesitant to discuss their own mortality.

"Spouses need to know each other's (funeral) wishes. Parents should tell their children what church and even particular minister they want," said Richard Goodnuff, Redford Township funeral director.

Goodnuff, owner of Goodnuff-Burnham Funeral Home, assisted at the temporary morgue set up in an airport hangar after the Aug. 16 Northwest Airlines disaster in Detroit that took 154 lives.

"I think the crash brought that out. People need to verbalize what they want," he said.

BUT EVEN FUNERAL directors can get tongue-tied on the subject of death.

"Last February, I attended a funeral directors conference in Phoenix. There in the Phoenix area, representatives go door to door (selling prepaid funeral packages)," Goodnuff said.

"I don't think people in the Midwest are quite ready for that approach yet. I can't see going up to a 40-year-old man working on his lawn and ask if he's thought about the type of funeral he wants. But in the west and in the south, it's a very acceptable practice."

Locally, the market for prepaid funeral packages falls into two categories, Goodnuff said.

"The majority have a family member dying and because death is imminent, they come in to set up arrangements and pay for the funeral," he said.

"Others, usually people in their 60s, have wishes they want fulfilled. Maybe they don't have children. They choose the type of service, minister, and put the money for the funeral in a special account."

GENERALLY, FULL services, excluding cemetery plot, cost $2,700 today. In accordance with Michigan law, that money goes into an escrow account. The price cannot change for the buyer of a prepaid funeral. The funeral director collects interest on the money until it's withdrawn for the service.

"The same price structure applies whether it's an at need (present) or pre-need (future) funeral, in accordance with Federal Trade Commission regulation," said Goodnuff.

● A properly prepared will can help to alleviate any tax liability that might be levied against your estate. Taxable estates valued at less than $600,000 are exempt from federal estate tax, but so-called "hidden resources" — life insurance policies naming the decedent as the insured, or qualified retirement plan benefits and IRAs — can swell the estate's value, oftentimes making it subject to federal estate taxation. Trusts and other techniques available through your will can lessen this tax burden.

● If you have children, perhaps your greatest concern is who would take care of them if both you and your spouse were to die unexpectedly. A will can be used to name a guardian, someone whom you trust to care for your children's best interests. Courts generally will accommodate the wishes of the parents in cases where a specific guardian is named.

● Without a will, you will have no say in who carries out the administration of your estate. If no will exists, the court will appoint an administrator. However, the court could appoint a creditor (they sometimes qualify for this position), which would not necessarily be in the best interests of your estate. By naming an executor in your will, you can ensure that a trustworthy person of your selection will handle the administration of your estate.

● Finally, for tax and other reasons, you may want to establish a particular state as your state of residence. For example, if you have moved frequently, or have homes in more than one state, each state could claim you as a resident and subject the estate to multiple probate proceedings and overlapping claims to state death or inheritance taxes. To minimize this risk, indicate clearly in your will which state you claim as a place of residence.

Experts agree that many of us simply fail to recognize the importance of a will. If we die without a will, we can unknowingly leave a myriad of problems for our loved ones, and we greatly reduce the chances that our undocumented intentions will be carried out. The solution for everyone — no matter what the size of your estate — is to have your will prepared now and alleviate some of the uncertainties and problems that could arise later.

"I don't know if it leaves (the buyer) better off," he added. "For some people, it's probably better to make their wishes known to loved ones and then invest the money themselves.

"But definitely let your wishes be known."

"People really do pre-arrange their own funeral!"

"Today, I asked our funeral director if people ever pre-arrange a funeral service. He told me that they do... as a demonstration of love and consideration for others."

"Pre-arrangement could protect our family from having to make decisions at a time when decisions could be confusing and difficult."

"You know, this is an opportunity to involve our family in the decisions. Then, they will know our preferences and desires, too."

We invite you to learn more about the thoughtful advantages of pre-planning and funding the funeral service. Our pre-arrangement literature will be helpful to you, as well as those close to you. In quiet privacy we shall be pleased to provide informed counsel and attentive answers to your questions concerning pre-arrangement.

Psychology of flowers

The mass arrangement reflects important European, Old World historical influences. The abundance of mixed flowers and colors in the composition above suggests the Dutch-Flemish period of the 17th century. At the left, the visual beauty of design is achieved through the mass appearance of form, color and texture. No one flower or color stands out with distinction.

Flowers speak when words fail

By Sherry Kahan
special writer

FLOWERS CAN speak for people at a funeral when they want to express their feelings, but are at a loss how to do it."

This is the way Judy Yovanovich, manager of public relations for Florist Transworld Delivery Association (FTD), looks at the floral arrangements at funeral homes. She feels the same about flowers sent to the home.

"Giving flowers is an indication that someone cares," said Yovanovich, speaking from the FTD international headquarters in Southfield. "People often feel that flowers are a softening influence at a hard time. Conversation is not that easy. People are not sure what to say."

At that point they can talk about the flowers.

A tremendous variety of blooms is available to the public today partly because flowers not in season in one part of the country can be obtained from another. It is also because greenhouses are growing flowers all year around and additional blooms are coming here from South America. They also are imported from such countries as Holland, France and Germany.

FREQUENTLY SEEN at funeral homes today are arrangements in baskets, vases and dishes. A fireside basket made of wicker, rattan or reed-like ferns might hold carnations, chrysanthemums and daisies. Sometimes it can be tipped on its side to accommodate tall gladioli.

A traditional vase selection might include only one kind of flower or a mixed arrangement, perhaps roses, carnations and gladioli. Low bowl dish gardens containing green plants are popular, with an occasional flowering plant added for a touch of color.

Lilies are now available for these bouquets along with Gerbera daisies, iris and other bulb flowers.

More and more exotic beauties are holding their heads high among the traditional blossoms, pointed out Yovanovich, a resident of Farmington Hills. Want a tall flower that looks like a bird? Pick a bird of paradise, orange with tints of purple. Anthurium, usually red, pink or white, has a heart-shaped glossy leaf and white spikes curving down. The Fugi chrysanthemum is also large with long, stringy petals of white, yellow, bronze or lavender. The velvety flowers of the liatriis turn up atop a long skinny green spike of a stem.

ONE OF THE smaller, more delicate posies is alstromaria, or Persian lily. It has a fantastic array of colors.

Another kind of floral tribute may be paid by an organization or lodge to a former member. In these the flowers are blended to form the emblem of the organization.

Bouquets sent to the home are usually smaller and more low key than those to a funeral home. Scaled to the home atmosphere are dish gardens and small bouquets for vases.

Yovanovich advised consulting a florist when flowers are to be sent out of town.

"Different floral tributes are used in different parts of the country," she said. "By consulting, one can learn what is most acceptable in a region. The florist can often ask the florist in the other community about the most appropriate arrangement. Each florist in the FTD network has a selection guide with a map showing what types of floral pieces are most popular in other sections of the country."

Most families want flowers

The unexpected death of rock'n'roll star Elvis Presley brought to mind another of Lipinski's experiences, illustrating the importance of flowers to grieving people.

HE HAD VOLUNTEERED to help coordinate and arrange flowers at Graceland and at the service.

"There were funeral directors there from all over the country," Lipinski recalled, "and over 3,300 plus floral arrangements, with more coming in the day after the funeral."

The Presley family made an announcement after the funeral that anyone who wanted a flower as a memento could come to the mausoleum the next day.

"There were 27 florists out there passing flowers out to people," Lipinski said. "And would you believe, all those flowers were gone in four hours?"

Lipinski feels that some people resent being told how to express their sympathy, and want to be free to choose to send flowers, a card or donation, bring in a meal to the bereaved family — or do all of that.

But his choice is still flowers, "dedicated to the alleviation of grief."

"Flowers do not wither and die in the mind of the bereaved," he said.
