County selects Canton to get needed landfil

Concerns about waste disposal sites hitting capacity in Wayne County swayed a vote to allow a landfill

Currently, the county has between 31/2 and 4 years of waste disposal capacity remaining and the proposed Canton landfill would extend the limit two or three more years, said Maurie Roach, Wayne County director of planning.

By an 8-4 vote, Wayne County Solid Waste Implementation Committee last week approved plans for a landfill on a 200 acre prime industrial parcel bounded by Lilley to the east, Michigan Avenue to the north and Conrail railroad track to the

"We're running out of capacity and the committee is extremely aware that's happening," said Roach.

"Thus the vote attempts to pre-significant action on part of the com mittee to address a very serious problem.'

THE COMMITTEE'S approval is one hurdle in a lengthy process before landfill development can start.

This longer route must be taken because Canton officials denied the proposal last year arguing the land is better suited for industry and a landfill would cause a hardship on residents.

Even if all qualifications are met, the earliest the landfill could open is mid-1989, said Mike Miller, Wayne Disposal-Canton manager of planning and development.

Miller recognized the committee's approval was an important step but tempered his response. "The day I'll be satisfied is when the first truck

Morton Taylor opens with lower speed limits

Morton Taylor between Joy and Warren is open and the speed limit is 35 mph.

Residents in the nearby Mayfair and Windsor Park subdivisions were concerned the speed would be 45 mph. Children from both subdivisions must cross Morton Taylor to attend Hulsing Elementary School, nced by the county Friday.

Hulsing Elementary School princi-pal Cheryl Clason said she would like to see the speed limit lowered to 25 mph "at least during school hours."

Speed limit signs are expected to be erected sometime this week, said Bob Mahoney, Wayne County engineer. The road is not designed to carry large trucks.

traffic operations for the department of public services, said: "Upon completion of Morton Taylor construction, we will post a speed limit of 35 mph. After new traffic patterns and volumes are established, a joint review with the Michigan State Police will determine any necessary changes of traffic control.

Problems could surface because pedestrians and motorists who commonly travel intersecting roads won't expect to see vehicles on Mor ton Taylor, Clason noted.

"No one is used to cars there." Clason said. "It's going to take people a while to get used to that.'

But for those who've been to war, Nov. 11 is a day of memories. A lot of Bill Nicholas' remembrances are relived daily on the U.S.S. Yorktown, or "Fighting Lady," now a World War II museum at Patriot's Point,

Nicholas, a Canton resident, spent nearly three years aboard the 40,000-ton aircraft carrier - the site of 31,170 wartime landings and home away from home for 3 500 men

The Yorktown sank 119 enemy ships, dropped 3,640 tons of bombs and destroyed 1,191 enemy aircraft.

"The Fighting Lady was christened by Eleanor Roo-sevelt in April 1943," said Nicholas, who enlisted and was off to boot camp the day his classmates graduated from Redford High School.

It was Nicholas' job in the Combat Information Center to track Japanese and American planes using radar. He also manned the flight deck with the fire crew

"Sometimes planes would catch fire as they landed. Other times a pilot would run out of gas and land in the water. The pilot would walk across the wing and the plane would sink. They were excellent pilots," said Nicholas, adjutant of Plymouth's American Legion Pas-

The highlights of being aboard The Fighting Lady, for Nicholas, were the filming of a movie and a visit from Ernie Pyle, the famed war correspondent killed by a sniper in the Pacific theater.

"A World War II documentary called 'The Fighting Lady' was shot aboard our carrier. Right now, the movie is being shown aboard the ship, which is a museum in Charleston," Nicholas said.

'When the premier of 'The Fighting Lady' was held aboard the carrier, Ernie Pyle was there. I had the plea-

Memories of Mama's hot soups

I knew the minute I walked in the house. There was this incredible aroma, wafting through the rooms, an aroma intense with herbs, onion, garlic and the faint detection of wine

No, we wern't being visited by a sloshed farmer. Mama was in the mood to make soup. And make soup she did.

I'll never forget that half of the freezer that was set aside for Baggies and Tupperware, filled with salvaged vegetables and loads of meat trimmings and bones. What seemed to be a witch's cauldron that must have made about five gallons was brought up from the fruit cellar. It was a heavy cast-iron pot with a hinged handle that had seen many a day of hearty chilis, thick sauces, medicinal chicken soups and nutri-

Delicious soups rich in vitamins and minerals can be made by imitating the French, famous for their soups. Before fresh vegetable are added, stock rich in flavor should be

The more vegetables and bones you use in making stock, the more delicious the soup will be. By the way, after making the stock, strain the bones and vegetables and discard. The vegetables become very mushy and watery. I always keep an extra bag of onions, celery and carrots for making soup.

YOU CAN MAKE stock from just about anything. All vegetable trimmings, tops of green onions, wilted and outer leaves of lettuce and cabbage and even the seeds from squash and peppers can thrown in the pot for added flavor. Unless your final product must be of one identity (like beef stock) just throw in a mishmash of chicken bones, beef bones, veal bones, even the trimmings from blade cuts and roasts. Ham bones and hocks are additional treasures that can speak for

The purpose in making soup is to break down the connective tissues in the bones and therby extract minerals, flavors and unrefined gelatin. All well-made soup stocks are rich in calcium. A healthy shot of vinegar added to the boiling melange will increase the calcium levels and hasten the breakdown of tissue and even aid in the withdrawal of more flavor from the bones in a shorter cooking time Don't worry about the taste because as the stock is boiled, the calcium will combine with the acid and the taste of vinegar will dissappear. A frequent question that always pops up at my soup-making seminars is what causes the stock to turn a rich brown color. To achieve this, first dredge the bones and meat with flour and then sear in hot oil until

Speaking of adding meat, it is desirable to add meat when making stock but this will usually result in meat that becomes stringy and lacks flavor

SCRAPS AND trimmings go into my stock and they are strained out at the end, then if needed, additional stew meat, prebaked chicken or yeal can be added about 30 minutes before serving. I can then add my herbs like a bay leaf and crushed peppercorns. Be on the watch for the bay leaf. Safety alerts are out because people have been known to swallow them and lacerate their throats.

Fresh chopped parsley and pinches of marjoram, thyme, basil and savory make the final product even tastier and more aromatic. Just before the traditional ladling of the hot brew into the crocks, an optional splash of vermouth, burgundy or chianti adds a subtle richness that smells as good as it tastes.

Whatever your mood, soup can warm, nourish, soothe, fortify and add a loving touch to an afternoon of sledding, skating, shopping and frivolity. Pass the animal crackers, please.

She grows her own

By C.L. Rugenstein special writer

If variety is the spice of life, herbs can give new zest to the foods that sustain it, believes Linda Wells.

Wells, who frequently demonstrates and gives lectures about the use of herbs through Michigan State University's Master Gardener extension program, is enthusiastic about growing, preserving and using culinary

Though she took cooking courses for recreation from the time she was 12 years old, "I got into herbs in college," Wells said. "One of my minors was history, and in European history and literature the botanical references caught my attention."

Visits to famous gardens in Europe during the course of her studies further piqued her interest. "They'd talk about the use of these herbs and why they were in those gardens, and I began to study them myself." Realizing that a lot of the things the poets and historians were talking about were culinary plants — "and liking food as much as I do," she declared - the two naturally went together.

Wells taught English and social studies in Detroit schools for 14 years while she experimented with growing herbs in the yard of her Birmingham home. Some of the herbs are unfamiliar to most cooks, but Wells believes they add a special something to culinary ef-

"THERE ARE are a couple that I just love," she said. Salad burnet is one of them. "The leaves have a light cucumber-y taste. You can add a little cucumber flavor to a dish without the gastric problems of that vegetable." The bright green leaves are a visual enhancer to whatever it's used in.

"It's also a pretty plant to grow," Wells added, "especially as a border plant. It's green early, low growing, a little rounded mound, and a self-sowing perennial."

who don't like celery," she said. "The flavor is excellent, especially in soup stocks." It grows in stalks like celery but, unlike burnet, can get out of hand, with a flower stalk that could grow to six or eight feet tall.

"Most herbs are not fussy. They'll grow as long as you give them sunshine, adequate water and a little bit of fertilizer," Wells said.

Wells preserves her herbs by drying, freezing and storing them in oil. Oil is her favorite method, and she prefers olive but said any good cooking oil could be used. "Most people don't use olive oil because it has a strong flavor, but I like it," she said. And by using oil she gets two products - the herb, preserved as freshly as possible, and the flavored oil to said use for cooking or salad dressings.

SHE OPENED a glass jar of basil to demonstrate. The leaves were still bright green, and the aroma sharp and fresh enough to almost taste.

Wells packs the herbs as whole as possible (in glass-topped mason jars with metal bail closures), then pours in oil to cover.

"Make sure nothing sticks up through the oil or it will spoil," she advised. "The herbs have to be completely covered."

Herb-drying can be done naturally, or in an oven heated to its lowest setting (100 degrees for an electric, the pilot light for a gas oven) and turned off.

To air dry, "Wash and hang the herbs in small bunches till dry in a dark cool place like a closet - if you're fortunate to have one that's not overflowing," Wells said. She stressed thorough drying. "Herbs, like sage, if dried in large bunches, can develop problems in the center where moisture gets trapped."

The same holds true for freezing. Washed herbs should be dried thoroughly, especially

"If you get water in the hollow stems of_ Lovage is another of her favorites. chives, they expand and explode," Wells "It's celery for people who have families pointed out. "So when you thaw them, all you'll have is green mush.'

> WELLS STRESSED keeping the herbs as whole as possible when storing. "Heat and pressure (crushing or breaking) release the volatile oils in herbs," she explained.

> Wells mixes her homegrown herbs to use as everything from seasoning mixes to hostess gifts (in small plastic bags tied with ribbon), to room deodorizers when their culinary powers are exhausted. Following are two recipes for herb mixes, which she blends in large batches and stores till the flavors meld like a potpourri. "Each herb gives up something to the whole and makes it better," she Kay McNaul, author of "High Tea and Social Times," spoke on tea parties at the Southern Michigan Unit of the Herb Society of America's recent "Tea with a Twist" in Birmingham.

Give English tea party for elegant afternoon

special writer

Afternoon tea, that bastion of British tradition, is enjoying a new popularity on this side of the Atlantic.

"In the last 10 years, there's been a revival of interest in things Victorian," the era in which "High Tea" became a social art, said Kay McNaul. "Women are looking for ways of entertaining that are differ-- a little more elegant and exquisite than cake and coffee

A native Ohioan, McNaul was in Birmingham recently to speak at the Southern Michigan Unit of the Herb Society of America's "Tea with a Twist." She talked a little about the history of tea in Britain and gave some ideas for those who'd like to have a tea party. Tea time was a flexible period,

McNaul pointed out, not always set for four in the afternoon. There was also a cream - or lemon - tea, which was your basic English-Irish-Scottish breakfast. It took its name from the heavy, clotted cream that would be spooned over the butter and jam on scones eaten with a latemorning 11 o'clock breakfast.

This was also the only time of day it was proper to put milk in your tea. "If you used it later than this, shame on you!" McNaul told the audience. "That was a social gaff."

HIGH TEA was a very formal event, actually a light supper for which only the best tea service, linens and silver were used. The Victorians had the routine down to a science including the proper number of sandwich varieties (three), and sweets (generally five). "Victorians were notable for their "sweet tooth," McNaul said with a laugh. It's this elegance Americans aim for, McNaul believes, by taking the idea of tea and making it distinctly their own with the use of themes. She gave some suggestion about where to find these.

Colors were pink, black and Foods helped to carry out the color scheme as well as the theme: smoked salmon sandwich spread on dark bread and Royal Tea Cake - a bundt cake flavored with one cup of Red Zinger herb tea. And, of course, to drink, Russian Caravan tea by Wagner.

McNaul gave several recipes from her cookbook "High Tea and Social Times," including one for flavored Chamomile Tea,' 'Ginger and Pickle mayonnaise: Mix ¼ cup flavored jelly to 1 cup mayonnaise, to use on fruit for traditional chicken salad sandwiches.

In planning a theme tea, McNaul concluded, the hostess need be limited only by her own virtuosity.

Canton advances to final

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

To listen to coach Rob Neu, Plymouth Canton advancing to the Western Lakes championship was just a reflex reaction.

Walled Lake Central would concur. The Vikings tested the Chiefs' reflexes and were promptly kicked with a 55-37 loss in the Western Lakes semifinal Saturday at Plymouth Salem.

Canton (15-4) will have a shot at Plymouth Salem for the Western Lakes Activities Association Championship next Saturday.

Neu touts the fact his team has no set plays or set patterns, opting to react to the situation on the court.

"PLAYS DON'T win games," said

Neu. "Players do." Hard to argue with that. Especially from a coach whose players ran off 10-unanswered points in the third quarter to make it a blowout. Heather Miller led a trio of scorers with 13 points for the Chiefs. Karen Boluch added 12 points and Susan Ferko chipped in with 11. The scoring attack was balanced as sev-

CC, however, stormed right back, moving down to the Fordson 6, but Elezovic's 23-yard field goal

Afterward, Mach second-guessed himself for kicking instead of going for the first down on a fourth-and-1 play.

"We talked a lot about it," he said. "Normally I wouldn't make that call, but our field goal kicker has been consistent all year.'

FORDSON COACH Charlie Jestice, to say the least, was not at all pleased with his team's firsthalf performance. But he felt lucky to be only down seven at the half. "Our kicking hurt us in the first half, giving them tremendous field position," he said. "We also had a couple of 15-yard penalties, which didn't help."

Fordson appeared to be a different team in the second half. The Tractors had the ball 10 of the 12 minutes in the third period. The Tractors marched 58 yards in 13 plays on their first possession of the second half, but were stopped short of a first down on fourth-and-6 at the CC 21 when Szalkowski's pass eluded the finger tips of tight end Andy Zotkovich.

But Tractors got the ball back in three plays and scored with 11 seconds left in the quarter, a 14-yard TD pass from Szalkowski to Ron Rahal. Sam Salame added the extra point and it was a brand new ballgame, 7-all. "It was the lengths of those drives which surprised me, but not the way they moved the ball," said Mach. "We had missed a couple of opportunities in the first half, but once they started driving I told our team we had to get the ball back and drive it ourselves."

THE WINNING POINTS came as a result of a

But on the very next play the Tractors' Found 'Walker" Zaban coughed up the ball on his own

And the Shamrocks wasted little time in scoring as Krueger carried it four straight times, capped by his 1-yard TD plunge with 7:11 left. Elezovic added the kick to make it 14-7.

Fordson got the ball back two more times, but the Tractors were stopped by the stubborn CC de-Zaban, Fordson's leading ground gainer all season, was held to 35 yards in 23 carries. The Shamrocks, in fact, allowed only 132 total yards while gaining 176 themselves.

"We played only one good quarter and they played three good ones and one poor one - CC deserved to win," said Jestice, whose team finished with a 9-1 record. "We just didn't block. They (CC) aligned in some different formations and we couldn't seem to find the right man to block. Their No. 98 (Knuth) hurt us a lot, and with the fumbles, you can't beat anybody playing like

"BUT CC IS AN outstanding team and it will be interesting to see how far they go."

Knuth, a 6-foot-2, 230-pound senior, again was the catalyst for CC's sterling defense

"He's a great one . . . he goes both ways and when we need a great play, he gives it to us," said

Another player who helped key the win was Hauncher, the Shamrocks' rangy quarterback. Although he was intercepted twice and completed only one pass, the 6-3 junior seems to have gained confidence during the latter stage of the

"Scott played pretty well," said the CC coach. "He made the right reads on the option and got some key first downs for us."

CC will be in enemy territory again this Saturday at Sterling Heights. Game time is 1:30 p.m.

"It's a big lift to beat Mercy three times," said Mustangs coach Mary Lillie after her team accomplished the feat for the first time. Marian won the first two by 52-51 and 44-41

"In the first two games, we got too wrapped up in the emotion and didn't play well," Lillie added. Mercy, 11-7 overall, had the second-quarter momentum as it broke the Marian press with relative ease and forced a lot of Mustang turnovers with excellent half-court de-

But the Marlins ran into difficulty in the second half when Marian adjusted its defense and prevented Mercy from getting the ball up court as quickly and effortlessly.

"WE GOT caught up in their picks a little bit, so we switched up and went to a (1-3-1) zone," Lillie said. "Any zone we play is spread out, because we're big enough to do that. "They were a bit hesitant, and that Mercy tied the score at 25 with six straight points before Phillips restored the lead for good. Then the Marlins missed the front end of two 1-and-1s in the final minute, while Phillips increased Marian's lead with a free throw and baseline turnaround.

cess never lasts. Schoolcraft College's womens basketball team cannot hide from that basic truth

Which is why coach Jack Grenan cannot rest on the laurels collected by last year's team - a 21-8 record and four-straight years as Eastern Conference champ or co-champ when three all-state players have moved to four-year programs. Gone are forwards Sue Lubbe and

Tracy Ladouceur (now at Wayne State) and guard Lori Abbas (to Eastern Michigan). Which means Grenan is facing a major rebuilding

Not exactly. It's difficult to say how good SC will be, with so many new faces, but the cupboard is far from bare.

"One thing I pride myself in is recruiting," said Grenan, entering his second season as head coach. "It takes a lot of hard work, but once you get the kids here the school and program sell themselves. Of the 14 kids I recruited heavily, 10 visited Schoolcraft and nine signed with us.

GRENAN'S RECRUITS will have to make an immediate impact for SC to keep its string of conference championships going, but there are experienced players to build upon. Like Sharon Miller, namely. The 6foot-1 sophomore came on at the end of last season, averaging 16 points a game over the last four. Miller's problem was consistency, she'd ei-

PERSONAL BACKGROUND

In addition, I have completed courses in Physiotherapy, Nutrition, and Acupuncture; and hold a Bachelor of Science degree in Human Biology from the National College of Chiropractic, and a Bachelor of Science in Biology Physiology from Eastern Michigan University Post-graduate studies included Applied Kinesiology and Sacro-Occipital Technique. To further my continuing education, I have received special training since college in Scoliosis from Dr. Mawhiney, and Pierce-Stillwagen Technique from Dr. Pierce. And, I have visited a number of other Chiropractic clinics to study their methods and procedures including: Drs. Tickel and Fyler Clinic in Oswego, Illinois, and Dr. Kendall at the Baypointe Clinic in Walled Lake.

Additionally, I devote three days every month attending a nationwide seminar in Chicago, Illinois, to stay current on the latest Chiropractic advances.

This is the kind of training and professionalism I offer you. If you have hesitated visiting a chiropractor, perhaps you didn't know that chiropractors go to such great lengths to continue their education and provide you with the latest techniques and the most qualified service. IT COSTS A LOT TO SAY YES TO A BRIGHTER FUTURE.

BUTWECANTAFFORDTO SAY NO.

Too many of our youth look at tomorrow and see only recycled yesterdays. Futures without promise. To give their lives new perspective, the United Foundation Torch Drive supports 35 agencies that sponsor youth programs in the tri-county area.

Last year, your contributions helped fund these programs with $10.2 million. This year, the need is far greater. Your contributions must reach more children and teens in need of guidance, shelter, structured activity, counseling and care. So please give more to the Torch Drive and help fund 153 health and human service agencies in the tri-county area. Agencies that not only deal with the underprivileged, but also with cancer, heart disease, Alzheimer's, substance abuse and much more. It costs a lot to say yes. But, when it comes to our children's future, we can't afford to say no. GIVE...FOR ALL THE GOOD YOU CAN DO.

Armed with all the right accessories, this couch potato is ready for a night of vegetating by the tube.

By Rob McCabe special writer

They come from all walks of life.

They could be your teachers, students, family members or friends. By day, their behavior causes no suspicion, but when night falls they sink into their sofas and metamorphose into couch potatoes.

With the television revolution, Americans became more and more content to remain at home, relaxing in their overstuffed armchairs, watching "I Love Lucy," "Our Miss Brooks" and a host of other seemingly-mindless television shows.

Now with the technical age advancing at such a rapid pace, VCRs, large projection televisions and cable have made it more and more difficult for these people to leave their homes.

Because couch potatoes take their relaxation and entertainment seriously, there are some newfangled gadgets on the market aimed at this group's needs.

ON THIS PAGE, couch potato model Matt Mercado lies comfortably on his sofa wrapped in "The Cuddle Wrap" by Biederlack, available at Hudson's Northland. Cost: $35. He is dressed in a Hugo Boss sweatsuit from The Broadway in Birmingham. Cost: $245. At either end of his sofa are comfortable throw pillows from Pier 1 in Royal Oak. Cost: $8.99 each.

Seated on the coffee table is the Couch Potato Doll from Coleco, available at The Male Room in West Bloomfield for $18. No home should be without these adorable stuffed toys, especially if you're a couch potato yourself.

A NEW GAME on the market aimed at all sofa spuds is the Couch Potato Card Game, available at Kiddie Land in West Bloomfield for $12.97. This is to be played during commercials, so those who are bored during this media blitz can enjoy the time between breaks.

Not shown is the new Couchpotato Down Comforter Featherbed, available by mail order only from The Company Store. The featherbed is stuffed with a blend of European goose and duck feathers, while the attached comforter is filled with white European goose and duck down. The tightly woven shell is made of 100 percent cambric cotton.

Showboat singer on a roll in Nashville

By Iris Sanderson Jones special writer

There she is, blonde and pink against a silver stage curtain, at the end of a line of entertainers singing her heart out on the General Jackson Showboat here at Opryland USA.

It is a long way from North Farmington High School, but it is the same thing Jenny Roberts Wilcox has been doing since she discovered the songbird in her throat at age 5.

Jenny was in Kenbrook Elementary School in Farmington Hills, singing with her family in the Northwest Baptist

She didn't exactly know what that meant but she never took her eyes off the gold star during the years that followed. And here she is, in a 1920s costume now, making 650 diners laugh and clap while they eat roast beef at big round tables in the Victorian Theater.

Our 300-foot-long paddlewheel steamer is chugging down the Cumberland River past the shoreline of downtown Nashville, but at the moment nobody cares.

JENNY'S STORY has an old theme.
"To Thine Own Self Be True." "Dream
the Impossible Dream." Or maybe "I Did
It My Way." As Jenny says, "If you've got the desire to do something, do it."

Jenny comes from a musical Farmington Hills family, so she had lots of encouragement to do it her way. Her Birds of a feather flock together this time of the year when the Canada geese take over Jack Miner's Bird Sanctuary in Ontario.

By Sue Mason staff writer

Near Kingsville, Ontario, it's not the sound of cars you hear, but the melodic cry of Canada geese come October and late February. The geese reign supreme at Jack Miner's Bird Sanctuary during their migratory flights to warm regions in late fall and their northerly summer homes around Hudson Bay in early spring. At the peak of migrations some 30,000 to 40,000 geese stop at the sanctuary, gobbling down 5,400 bushels of corn and 10 tons of barley and putting on aerial displays that attract bird watchers from far

A VISIT to the sanctuary is like a step back in time. Geese are attracted to the 400-acre site in the same way they did when Jack started the sanctuary in 1904, and the fowl are caught for banding in the same pens used when Jack happened on the idea of tracking the birds' flights. But don't expect to see wide expanses of water and a lack of civilization. The sanctuary encompasses Miner's old brick-and-tile factory and family home. An old stable serves as a museum, and the birds' favorite resting place is across the street from the homestead.

"On weekends we have big crowds," said Jasper Miner, the only living son of the sanctuary's founder. "We'll have cars lined up for a mile on both sides of

It wasn't by chance that Miner, a native of Dover

Center, Ohio, ended up with property popular with the geese. He attracted them.

IN 1904 he bought seven geese from a farmer, clipped their wings and put them in a pond that had been a clay pit for his tile factory. It took four years before 11 wild geese landed there for a rest.

But the sanctuary wasn't a haven in its early years. Of the first 11 feathered visitors, five were killed by Jack's neighbors. Even Miner, himself an avid hunter, occasionally shot geese for sport. But in 1911, Miner decided to make his property off limits for hunting, and it became a sanctuary for the geese and other wild fowl.

As more and more birds began to stop at the sanctuary, Miner turned to the lecture circuit to raise money to keep it going. His son, Manley, served as his business manager, and his speaking engagements took him throughout the United States and Canada.

His work attracted the attention of auto pioneer Henry Ford, who paid for the original photographs of the geese that were used to illustrate Miner's lec-

By 1931 the Jack Miner Migratory Bird Foundation was established in both Canada and Michigan so that charitable contributions could be channeled into it. Today it takes $250,000 a year to maintain the sanctuary.

Miner died in 1944, but the work he started has been carried on by his family. Jasper is an affable tour guide, quick to recount stories of the early days of the sanctuary, when visitors sat on top of barns to watch Miner band geese. His son Kirk left a job in industry in the early 1980s to help.

THE GEESE begin arriving at the sanctuary in mid-October and stay there until the first heavy snowfall in early December.

The geese feed at the sanctuary in the early morning and evening. Many spend their day in the field across from Miner's home, while some venture out for the three-mile trip to nearby Lake Erie.

For bird watchers the viewing is at its best at 3 and 4 p.m. That's when the Miners take to threewheeled all-terrain vehicles to drive through the resting areas and force the flock to fly - for some exercise, Kirk explained.

The birds take to the air in a breathtaking 10-minute aerial display. The air shows, so to speak, are staged between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15 and involve between 20,000 and 30,000 geese.

The sanctuary includes a small pond for ducks and geese that are crippled and can no longer fly. Visitors, especially children, are encouraged to feed the birds barley, kept in a small shed within the enclosed

THE FACTORY building has been turned into a corn crib to store feed for the geese and a glassenclosed stadium has been erected facing the ponds so visitors can watch the banding, done seven to 10 times during the geese's visit.

The sanctuary has banded more than 86,000 birds, and the Miner Museum displays jars filled with the metal bands that have been returned by hunters from 24 states and five Canadian provinces.

The museum is filled with Jack Miner memorabilia - the red and green clothing he wore on his lecture tours, gifts from supporters such as baseball great Ty Cobb and letters from Ford and Thomas

"Saturdays are really hectic when the geese are here," Jasper said. "You could get elbowed to death in the museum it's so filled with people.'

Not far from where the geese land are the graves of Miner and his wife, Laona, and a few hundred feet from the sanctuary proper is the original Miner home, Heritage House, open to visitors only two days a year, the Saturday and Sunday closest to April 10,

Miner's birthday. There's also a stand of trees near the house called Kennedy Woods where visitors can enjoy a picnic

While geese are the main attraction at the sanctuary, there's plenty of other wildlife to see. Pens line the sanctuary along the road, filled with multicolored pheasants. One pen is home for an injured gold-resting place for wild ducks — pintail, wood, canvas-back, mallard and blue teal. The later species' arrival is the first indication of the changing seasons. They are the first birds to arrive and the first to leave, Kirk said. The Miners also raise bobwhite quail with help of students in Windsor-area schools. Each spring the Miners take the quail eggs to the schools, where the students incubate them. The young chicks are re turned to the sanctuary and kept to raise the next brood, while their parents are released in the wild. The Miners are proud of the sanctuary's succes especially considering its founder never completed school. It has has served as a model for other sanctuaries throughout the United States.

"There's all this talk about wetlands preservation, but there's never any mention of food," Jasper said. "You have to have food, water and protection. If you don't have all three, it won't work.'

Canada geese aren't the only ones making a splash at the sanctuary. Other wildfowl, such as these swans, also get into the swim of things.

Wild geese won't be calling much longer

If you want to see the Canada geese at their most abundant, you'd better hurry.

Next weekend is the last peak weekend for geese watching at the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary. The grounds of the sanctuary are open to the public Monday through Saturday, and the aerial displays are at 3 and 4 p.m. daily, weather permitting.

Getting to the sanctuary isn't difficult, but the best way is to follow Kirk Miner's directions:

Take the Ambassador Bridge to Canada. After leaving the bridge, follow the signs to Highway 3 and stay on the highway until the Road 29-Kingsville exit. Turn right and go three miles until you see the sign for the sanctuary. Turn right at the street with a Sunoco gas station on the corner, and you'll find the sanctuary about a mile down the road. For an update on the geese's arrival, call (519) 733-4043. What's good for the goose is good for the gander when it comes to fowl food. Here little Shane Fawler gives the geese some grub.

COMPLAINT I have heard frequently about sleep sofas is that if they are comfortable as a bed they are not comfortable as a sofa.

I found a wonderful upholstery line that makes sleep sofas with an inner spring mattress that is comfortable either way. The name of the manufacturer is Perfection Furniture and can be seen locally at Pioneer Furniture Co. in Sterling Heights.

Q. I am considering a piano for my living room. However, at the present time, no one in my home plays. I am purchasing it strictly as a piece of furniture. My room is 22-by-15-feet and I have a large bay window where I am considering placing the piano. What do you think of this placement? Can you recommend brand names of pianos or color choices? My living room is traditional with some contemporary mixed in.

A. I checked with Evola Music Company in Bloomfield Hills. They feel as I do. A baby grand will work well in your bay window. They advise that Baldwin is the finest domestic piano with prices ranging from $11,000 to $30,000. The leading import is Young Chang from Korea with prices ranging from $6,000 to $15,000. The grand piano will certainly add drama to your lovely sized-living room. Who knows? With a piano there is a possibility of taking advantage of the pleasure it offers as an instrument. As for color, any wood tone including ebony can be used.

Q. My living room is 16-by-11-feet with a cathedral ceiling. I want something striking. The room is beige with a two-tone brown carpet, two gold couches, one gold chair and one red. The TV is 25 inches and is against the wall with a chair on either side. I have pictures on the other two walls with which I am happy. I have looked and looked for that one wall that rings the bell.

A. Try any of the local furniture stores for my suggestion which follows. Mirror stripes_are available in a set of four. They are about 8 inches wide and about 72 inches long, with bevelled edges. You may use two sets spacing them evenly across the wall. This will add dimension, sparkle and a crisp look to your room

Q. The experts say "Do it now," but when I follow that philosophy I seem to end up dropping one thing to do another. Should I "do it now" or not?

A. A very good question. "Do it now" is one of the most valuable and yet misunderstood theories in existence. Do it now if it means: picking up after yourself instead of leaving a trail; finishing and cleaning up any projects you are presently doing; or acting upon something quickly that does not interrupt your current schedule, (such as picking up litter or taking along something which belongs where you are going).

Note it now (and schedule it for later) if: It will distract from your work already in progress or it means starting a project which you will not have time to finish

AN EXAMPLE MIGHT be a person who is cleaning out a desk and eyes a stack of reading material. Believing in Do It Now, he ceases reorganizing and becomes side tracked into reading articles. Suddenly the cleaning time is over, other needs demand his attention and essentially nothing has been accomplished.

Another instance might be someone who is vacuuming a hallway and comes to an overflowing linen closet. The cleaner mumbles, "Well, the experts say 'Do It Now,' so I guess I will." The vacuuming is stopped and soon the hallway is littered with piles from the closet

Instead, the reorganizer or cleaner should keep 3-by-5-inch scratch pads and pens handy. Each task noticed can be noted on a separate scratch sheet and placed in a card file reminder box. These reminders can then be incorporated into future planning.

Counterpoint

New materials shine as working surfaces

ACK OF adequate counter space is one of the most common kitchen laments. Yet, as any cook knows, the placement of counters is just as important as the amount of surface available.

To see if your kitchen meets minimum requirements, check your dimensions against those prescribed by the National Kitchen and Bath Association: at least 15 inches next to the handle side of the refrigerator, at least 12 inches on either side of the range or cooktop as a minimum, with at least 18 inches on one side; at least 15 inches next to the oven (if separate from the range); at least 30 inches on one side of the sink and 24 inches on the other; and a minimum of 42 inches in the mixing center, the area usually positioned between the sink and the refrigerator.

IDEALLY, THERE should be 96 inches of countertop frontage in an efficient kitchen. If your kitchen doesn't measure up, poor design may be responsible for impeding your efficiency in the kitchen.

If remodeling is in order, today's consumer will be pleased to discover a boundless selection of countertop colors, styles and materials to meet any decor, from high-tech to American country. In fact, the choices are so plentiful many consumers enlist the help of a certified kitchen designer or an NKBA member to guide them through the selection and remodeling process.

A kitchen designer can help find a countertop that just suits your cooking needs. Popular choices include:

LAMINATE: A survey by National Kitchen & Bath Association revealed laminate is still the leading countertop material. Easy to maintain and install, laminate is available in almost any color imaginable, from tels, brights and metallics. Patterns are the latest development in laminate surfaces, which can be speckled, streaked with color or striped vertically or horizontally.

Wood-grained textured laminates combine the rich look of wood with the easy care maintenance of laminate. Other faux finishes imitate the look of granite or marble, but at a fraction of the cost and weight.

SOLID CORE MATERIALS: Another way to achieve a granite or marble-like appearance is with solid core counter materials. Both the color and pattern permeate the counter, so nicks and scratches are not obvious, and flaws can be sanded out without damaging the surface. Because the material is non-porous, it resists stains. A multitude of special treatments are possible from contrasting edging to delicate inlaid de-

TILE: Because the combinations are limitless, tile affords a truly custom look to kitchen counters. Tile can withstand intense heat and is easy to maintain, making it a durable, practical and economical choice. The grout around tile should be sealed periodically to prevent stains.

Other countertop materials such as wood, marble and granite, are ideally suited to certain activities. For example, butcher block counters are great for kneading bread, but need to be oiled weekly with mineral oil to maintain their patina. Marble is a perfect surface for candy-making, but its porosity demands it be re-sealed periodically.

Program to integrate computer sound

A new program at the University of Michigan School of Music that integrates the latest advances in computer sound, video imagery and other technological innovations into the total undergraduate curriculum is expected to make U-M a national leader in the field.

Several other universities have centers for research on computer applications in the performing arts, but the U-M program is the first in the country committed to providing all performing arts students access to the technology that is transforming the field, according to Prof. David Gregory, director of the U-M School of Music's Center for the Performing Arts and Technology.

Some of the innovations will revolutionize the way that music and other performing arts are performed and enjoyed, but to those who dread the idea of computers invading orchestras, Gregory says, the new technology may "actually bring the audience closer to the music, by focusing attention on the music rather than on the performer.'

The U-M facilities will include video and sound studios incorporating sound sampling and replications devices, electronic keyboards and percussion machines, and computer hardware and software with applications in theatrical design and choreography.
