The Canton Connection

A MILLION DOLLAR INVITE: As part of its observance of the 15th anniversary of the first ticket sale, the Michigan Lottery has invited two residents to a conference at the Amway Grand Plaza, Grand Rapids, this Saturday.

The two residents are among players who have won awards of $1 million or more. More than 100 of the 275 Michigan Lottery millionaires to date are scheduled to attend the conference to share details of their experiences since their big win. Among the lottery millionaires invited are William McCarthy of Plymouth and Raymond Reed of Canton.

STORYTELLING:

Western Wayne County Therapeutic Recreation Storytelling Hour will be held from 6-7 p.m. Nov. 17, Dec. 1, and Dec. 15 in the second floor conference room of Canton Township Municipal Building, 1150 Canton Center Road south of Cherry Hill.

There will be a fun hour of stories for handicapped children for a fee of $1 for Plymouth and Canton residents and $1.25 for non-residents. The activity is sponsored by Canton Parks and Recreation.

WORKING:

Janai Steep of Canton is among 13 cast members in the Alma College Players' production of the new musical "Working," to be presented in the college's Dow Auditorium at 8 p.m. Nov. 13, 14, 20, 21. Steep, a 1987 graduate of Plymouth Canton High, is the daughter of Sharon Steep of Canton. The play "Working" is an adaptation by Stephen Schwartz and Nina Faso of the Studs Terkel book by the same name.

ON POLICIES:

The Human Images class taught by Mike McCauley at the CEP has produced a 30-minute video tape on school policies in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

The program, produced by Amy Schimdt with Richard Perry, sports director at Omnicom Cablevision, centers on some of more controversial issues at the schools. One subject is the Spuds McKenzie T-shirt problem. The school does not allow students to wear any clothing depicting advertising for an alcoholic beverage. The show also addresses the topic of attendance. The school system now has 10 minutes between classes and some students believe an adjustment in policies would be appropriate.

The program Human Images is taped every Thursday at 1 p.m. and shown on Omnicom Channel 15 at 8:30 p.m. Monday and 5 p.m. Wednesday. The program on school policy will be aired the week of Nov. 9. Recent shows have been produced on overcrowding of the schools, and '60s activists.

PRESENTS

WHEELCHAIR: Monies raised over the past three years by the Ladies Auxiliary of Mayflower-Lt. Gamble Post 6695 VFW in Plymouth will be used to present a wheelchair and two folding walkers to the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Hospital on Thursday, Dec. 17. Bill Knapp coupons valued at more than $380 were collected during the presidential terms of Veneta Hornbeck of Plymouth, Myrtle Hurson of Canton, and Carolyn VanGorder of Canton.

The Ladies Auxiliary supports many activities at the VA Hospital, including a monthly Coffee Hour. The Dec. 17 presentation will be part of a patients' bingo sponsored jointly with the VFW Post.

'Morally wrong' Good Counsel parents oppose class

By Susan Buck
staff writer

A group of area Catholic parents is protesting what they call a controversial sex education series that is being taught at Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic School in Plymouth.

The Plymouth group, which has about 25 members, is headed by Michelle and Larry Forton, who do not have children attending the school. The group is protesting the New Creation Series, published by the W.C. Brown Co. of Dubuque, Iowa.

They are part of a larger group of about 100-150, called Concerned Catholic Parents of the Archdiocese of Detroit.

That group believes that the workbook material is presented too soon and too abundantly to children.

ACCORDING to Michelle Forton, about 25 people, including 10 parishioners from Good Counsel, picketed outside the school Nov. 4 during the time classes, which are held in the evening, were in session.

Forton believes that they also are supported by other parents who are not willing to come forward publicly. The group distributed fliers after all Masses last Sunday. They planned to picket again yesterday.

The class is strictly voluntary at this point and not part of the regular school curriculum or after-school catechism instruction, Forton said.

"Our problem isn't over whether it's voluntary or involuntary," she said. "It has planned parenthood philosophy, and it doesn't follow doctrine of the Church."

Jay Berman, spokesman for the Archdiocese of Detroit, rebutted those charges.

"The course has been reviewed at a number of levels both within the archdiocese and without," he said. "Certainly all those who have reviewed the text don't agree with them at all."

"We have had some difficulty getting those people to identify specific paragraphs, drawings, pictures, but we can't seem to get a specific response."

"The Church holds the parent is always the primary instructor in terms of children's understanding of human love and human sexuality," Berman said. "The parent also has a right to call in the Church to help with that."

"The course is completely voluntary. It's not presented to any child without the parents' permission and participation," he said.

Left turns proposed for Ford

By Diane Gale
staff writer

If you've ever tried to make a left turn off Ford Road onto an intersecting street in Canton you know how quickly exhaustion can turn to panic.

And if you are one of the thousands who use Ford Road, you know street lights at Haggerty, Lilley, Sheldon and Canton Center can change from green to red umpteen times before you get a chance to turn left.

Judging by the high number of accidents it's a roll of the dice whether you'll clear the intersection without having to file a police report.

What can be done to shorten the wait and make the intersections safer?

The answer depends on whom you ask.

CANTON OFFICIALS say the answer is to install left-turn signals on Ford at the four intersections.

Ideally, there would be left-turn signals on the four roads feeding onto Ford, said John Santomauro, Canton public safety director.

Officials from the Michigan Department of Transportation say studies show no need for the signals. And such has been the subject of a paper trail between Canton officials and the MDOT.

"We don't have a stable traffic situation along Ford Road because of the development of Canton," Santomauro said. "It's not only important to have the left-turn signals but I think it's critical."

In spring 1986 Santomauro wrote Desi Strakovits, transportation field operation manager, requesting consideration of turn arrows.

"It is this office's opinion that the installation of such turn indicators, upon completion of the widening of Ford Road, would be conducive to the flow of traffic and would enhance the safety of these individual intersections," Santomauro wrote.

STRAKOVITS SAID THE installation of a left-turn phase "has a negative impact on the capacity of an intersection. The result of this impact is increased delay and longer back-ups."

He promised, however, to order a traffic study to determine need.

The following are results of last summer's studies, according to Strakovits:

Ford and Lilley was operating between 59 and 84 percent of capacity; Sheldon was operating between 60 and 82 percent of capacity; Canton

PC schools will join state asbestos suit

By M.B. Dillon

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will do battle with asbestos manufacturers in Wayne Circuit Court after all.

The school district voted Monday to opt into a state class action lawsuit in an attempt to recover damages from asbestos companies.

In schools all over the country, asbestos was sprayed on ceilings to protect against fire. It also was used to insulate pipes and boilers.

The material since has been identified as a carcinogen.

PLYMOUTH-CANTON spent $200,000 to remove asbestos from Central Middle School last summer.

Most of the district's 19 school buildings have asbestos in their boiler rooms. The asbestos is wrapped, however, and three inspections have shown it to pose no danger, say school officials.

A federal class action lawsuit was filed in 1983 in Pennsylvania on behalf of all public school districts in the U.S. A trial date has not yet been set.

Districts must decide by Dec. 1 whether to remain in the federal lawsuit or to opt into the state action, according to a mandate from the Federal District Court in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

Plymouth-Canton school officials were leaning toward the federal lawsuit until they heard from their Lansing law firm.

"It is my understanding, on the advice of our attorneys, that we'd be better served by being part of the Michigan suit than the federal suit . . . in terms of the amounts (of damages) available," said Superintendent John Hoben at Monday's school board meeting.

Said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business: "There are three good reasons why we are asking the board to opt into the Michi-

Saloon gets $600 fine in drunk driving death

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

The Plymouth Rock Saloon, which could have lost its liquor license and been fined $12,000 for violations in connection with a drunk driving fatality last December, has been fined $600.

Charges stemmed from the death of Dorcas Ruth Aumann, 67, of Canton Township. Aumann was killed about 7:30 p.m. Dec. 13 when the car in which she was riding was struck head-on by Yvonne Hillier of Westland.

Hillier, 20, was driving on the wrong side of Joy near I-275 after leaving the Plymouth Rock, a bar/restaurant on General Drive at Joy in Plymouth Township. It was dark and her car's headlights were off.

Hillier's blood alcohol level was .20, Michigan State Police lab results showed.

THE LIQUOR Control Commission charged saloon owners Donald Vargo and Peter Elefterio with 12 counts involving the sale of alcohol to minors, serving visibly intoxicated persons and allowing intoxicated individuals to consume and loiter.

In a decision announced late last week, LCC commissioner Alex Laggis dismissed 10 counts, citing insufficient evidence.

Laggis found the Plymouth Rock guilty of two counts: selling alcohol to Hillier's underage passenger, Kathy Rene Paananen of Westland, and allowing Paananen to consume alcohol, said Verna Foote, LCC supervisort of hearings and appeals. Licensees Vargo and Eleftherio are owners of Var-Ken Inc.

Hillier, convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five to 15 years in prison after the accident, wasn't present at the hearing. She was subpoenaed Aug. 31, about a month before she was imprisoned.

No arrangements were made for Hillier to be transported from Huron Valley Women's Facility to the hearing in Lincoln Park. LCC prosecuting attorney Richard Rubin did not take Hillier's deposition.

Plymouth Township Police said they would have offered to transport Hillier to the hearing had they realized their services were needed.

"We would have had no problem picking her up had we known arrangements had not been made," said Chip Snider, Plymouth Township deputy police chief.

"I don't know why she wasn't there. That's the AG's (attorney general's) job."

Neither Rubin nor Laggis returned phone calls from the Observer.

DURING THE hearing, Rubin asked for an adjournment so that he could take Hillier's deposition. The commissioner denied the request, based on the age of the case and the LCC's caseload.

Laggis' ruling signaled victory for attorney Norman Farhat, who represented Var-Ken Inc., and who serves on Var-Ken's board of directors.

The Plymouth Rock was fined $200 in November 1985 for selling alcohol to minors. Other charges have been filed and dropped. The bar was licensed in 1981.

Bruce Aumann, Dorcas Aumann's husband and driver of the car in which she was killed, has filed a civil lawsuit against Vargo and Eleftherio. He also is suing Farhat, Hillier, and Jacqueline Shaff, the bar manager on duty Dec. 13.

Aumann, 70, still suffers from wrist, shoulder and leg injuries he suffered in the accident.

"I lost use of my left hand. It hurts most of the time," said Aumann, a retired TRW tool and die maker.

Aumann said that during Hillier's criminal trial, prosecutors asked whether he'd be satisfied if the judge decided on a one-year loss of license, five years' probation and alcohol rehabilitation for Hillier.

"I said, 'Yes, I would,'" said Aumann, who's grown frail and thin since the accident. "But how can you really put a value on it after you've lost a wife?"

"All of a sudden, she's gone. I can't forget. I still expect her to come around the corner. After 40 years, you're dependent on each other."

Center was operating between 57 and 92 percent of capacity.

From 1984 through September 1986, 111 accidents were recorded at Sheldon and Ford, Strakovits wrote, and for the same period 44 accidents were recorded at Canton Center and Ford.

Santomauro said he "respected and acknowledged" the "expertise of the engineers, however, sometimes I think the people who know best about the conditions of a road are the users and the officers from this department who drive the road."

Motorists often call the township to complain about Ford Road traffic conditions, he said.

POLICE DEPARTMENT records include a message from a Canton man who recently called to complain about the light at Sheldon and Ford Road.

The motorist said it "sometimes" takes 15-20 minutes to complete a turn. He suggested erecting an arrow or installing a time delay, "because there were too many people running the light," the message said.

Sharled traffic at Haggerty and Ford was the complaint levied by an employee on an American Yazaki Corp. suggestion form. The woman wrote: "The traffic light at Haggerty and Ford road is not green long enough for the people on Haggerty — it causes a big traffic tie-up for Yazaki employees," she wrote.

David Kotcher, Yazaki personnel manager and Canton resident, agrees. Considering the planned development in the area "it's going to get much, much worse."

Youngsters, young at heart share fun

"The wisdom of mixing age groups in social, learning, and work situations has been promoted in recent years by educators, social workers, gerontologists and others."

The advantages of generational mixing are being realized in Canton with programs operated through the Canton Township Parks and Recreation Department.

Barbara Trinosky of the recreation staff operates a therapeutic recreation program for senior citizens who have physical limitations. The group is known as SPREE (Seniors who are Physically Restricted Enrichment and Enjoyment).

The SPREE seniors are those who do not or seldom participate in Canton recreation programs for seniors because of physical problems. SPREE, operated by Western Wayne County Therapeutic Recreation Program, adapts programs for seniors to lessen the disadvantages of the limitations.

Tuesday morning youngsters enrolled in the Canton Crickets preschool program, also operated by Canton Parks and Recreation, met with the SPREE seniors.

During the morning the youngsters and senior citizens shared in storytelling times, arts and crafts, playing time, and making Thanksgiving centerpieces.

The activity was said to be a success and likely will be repeated.

Later this month, on Nov. 24, the Michigan Humane Society will bring its Pet Therapy program to SPREE. A number of kittens and puppies will be brought in for the seniors to pet and cuddle with.

The main thrust of the Western Wayne County Therapeutic Recreation Program is to offer adaptive activities for handicapped youngsters in Plymouth and Canton. SPREE is one offshoot of the therapeutic recreation program.

Sex ed class disturbs parents

THE FORTONS placed a full-page advertisement in the Plymouth and Canton Observer Newspapers on Oct. 1.

Advertisements also were placed in the Detroit Free Press and the Detroit News. So far, the group has spent about $10,000 for ads. The money for the ads was raised through donations, Forton said.

Supporters include parents from the metropolitan area, according to Michelle Forton, a former medical assistant and Good Counsel alumna.

The Fortons, who have two children — Timothy, 2, and Lynne, 9 months — object to the sex education workbook series, which is taught allegedly in mixed classes in grades one through eight.

They claim the books undermine parental responsibility in teaching children about sex combined with alleged graphic pictures of genitalia and explicit language, and there is unnecessary questioning of children's feelings.

The group does not believe sex education should be part of the curriculum at all.

"We want to put our children into the school," said Forton. "Right now I know it is a volunteer program but they are trying to implement it into the school. It is morally wrong, and it would be very wrong if we didn't do anything about it."

Berman said the New Creation Series is used in other parishes, without objection, in the archdiocese. About 150 children at Good Counsel are involved in the program, he added.

gan suit.

"Michigan school districts will have more control over the progress of the litigation. Litigation is expected to be concluded sooner than the federal case in Pennsylvania. And the litigation in Wayne County potentially may have a higher payoff than the federal suit that the district will be in unless we opt out of it."

THE LAW FIRM of Thrun, Maatsch and Nordberg won't charge hourly fees, but "we may be required, in the future, to pay for cost of inspection and/or testing of materials to prove our damages," Hoedel said. Attorney fees will be deducted from any damage awards or settlements.

It's expected that Wayne Circuit

Judge James Mies will try the case in 18 months to two years. Twelve public and private school districts in Michigan are suing asbestos manufacturers, miners, suppliers and producers.

A Plymouth woman injured in an auto accident involving a school bus Friday remained in serious condition Tuesday at University of Michigan Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Joan Scarpulla was in intensive care with breathing difficulties after sustaining several broken ribs, the spokeswoman said.

Plymouth Police, meanwhile, were continuing to investigate the 2:40 p.m. collision.

Scarpulla, driving a small Plymouth westbound on Linden, was struck on the driver's side by a Plymouth-Canton school bus northbound on Harvey, police said.

Remembering veterans

Veterans Day was celebrated on Monday in Canton with presentation of a Veterans Memorial Plaque to Canton Township from the Canton Rotary Club. The Canton Rotary Club chose the idea of a veterans memorial as a community service project and worked with the township on coming up with an appropriate bronze plaque. The memorial was presented Monday at special ceremonies in Canton Township Hall. Shown

Locals could gain from debt-free county

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Cities and townships in western Wayne County may joke about — or threaten — secession from Wayne County, but most local communities depend upon various county services.

And locals say they'd be worried if the county fell into receivership. Among local communities, Westland might stand to gain the most if the county's debt-reduction plans were approved by the state Legislature.

The county owns about 100 acres of prime property along Merriman Road, near Westland Medical Center. At least part of that property could be sold for industrial and commercial development, city leaders said.

"We're working with the county on that, we'd obviously like to see it on our tax roll and theirs," Westland Mayor Charles "Trav" Griffin said.

DEVELOPMENT would be a moot point if the county couldn't afford to widen Merriman, Griffin added.

"That's really a key to our overall development," he said. "We'd like to see it widened to five lanes so we can share in development around Metro Airport. It must be the only airport in the world with a two-lane road going past it."

Having an appointed receiver dictate county finances would make such a project "all but impossible," Griffin said.

Even though they would stand to gain less, other western Wayne communities also depend upon the county.

Garden City officials have met twice with the county to discuss service levels. City Manager Jon Austin said. City officials are especially concerned about improving county drains, Austin said.

In addition, Garden City uses county assistance to conduct health inspections and coordinate emergency services.

"The county is our emergency management coordinator," Austin said. "Normally, that kind of thing is no big deal. But it mattered last July when we had heavy rain and flooding."

The county provides similar services in Redford Township. Deputy Supervisor Kevin Kelley said. Redford officials aren't overly concerned about losing the services, Kelley said, but they are concerned about cutbacks.

"If they went into receivership I think they'd still be required to provide the kind of services they've been providing," Kelley said. "But I suppose the services would suffer cutbacks."

SOME COMMUNITY leaders said they were puzzled by Wayne County's debt problems.

have difficulty getting a handle on what the county problems are, where they start and, especially, where they end."

"Unlike its smaller neighbors, Livonia provides for most city services itself."

"The big thing the county provides here is roads," McCann said. Few local officials have even discussed the debt.

"To my knowledge it hasn't been discussed at the board level," Canton Township finance director John Spenser said.

Community leaders, however, said they believe the county budget must be balanced.

"Something has to give," Griffin of Westland said. "You can't go on paying bills without the money."

They generally praised County Executive Edward McNamara for declining to use a property tax increase to pay off the debt.

Instead, McNamara proposed raising $26 million a year by increasing the state cigarette tax, raising circuit court filing fees and adding a new parking tax at Metro Airport.

"These seem to be good proposals, but it's always tough to predict what the Legislature will do," Livonia Chamber of Commerce executive director John White said.

"Ed McNamara is a very good county manager," said Plymouth City Manager Henry Graper Jr. "Whatever he proposes has been well thought out. The issue isn't what the county does for us, but whether the county is solvent."

Townships revive talks of secession

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

When the going gets tough, the tough get going. And that's what some western Wayne County communities are considering doing.

"They're thinking about leaving the financially strapped county and forming a county of their own."

A local legislator is working on a bill that would allow a good portion of western Wayne to secede and form its own county.

But the move apparently has more to do with protest than secession. Even its supporters say the proposal has little chance of passing.

Nonetheless, state Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, said he was drafting a bill that would allow communities to split from the debt-plagued county.

"I'm putting things together right now," Law said. "But I haven't worked through all the figures at this time."

Law's bill would revive a concept put forth several years ago by former state representative Thomas Brown, a Democrat from Westland.

That proposal would have allowed virtually all of Wayne County, outside of Detroit, to form a new county, named Suburbia. But Brown's proposal was quickly shelved.

"When I was first elected five years ago, Tom Brown came by my office with the plan," Law said. "He said it may be of use someday."

Law's own proposal, if drafted, may include fewer communities. "I'm interested at least as far as the townships are concerned," Law said.

"I have three townships (Canton, Plymouth and Northville) in my district."

The Wayne County Association of Township Supervisors requested such a bill last month.

Members of the Conference of Western Wayne, an intergovernmental group that also includes cities, have also discussed the plan.

"They discussed it as a meeting I attended, but it was a kind of whimsical discussion," state Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, said.

Passage is far from certain. "Realistically, I'd say it would be a very, very difficult issue," Law said.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara called the action, "unfortunate."

"It's unfortunate they're doing it at this time," McNamara said. "The county certainly has debts that they're a part of, but the county provides services to these townships as well."

clerk's office, as well as other departments. When you think about it, that runs into a lot of dollars."

It is uncertain when the bill would be introduced, though Law said it could wait until the Legislature acts on a debt-reduction package for Wayne County.

McNamara said a number of bills would be introduced in Lansing this week to rid the county of $180 million in debt.

Plymouth Township supervisor Maurice Breen called the secession proposal a "statement" when his fellow supervisors first proposed it last month.

"You deal out of frustration," Breen said. "This is not a new issue. It seems like they're always trying to take money out of the out-county to solve other problems. If this passed, we'd be happy to do it. We feel we could do a better job on our own."

In requesting the bill, township officials pointed to long-standing differences with the county and the city of Detroit.

Lack of sewer development has hampered development in much of western Wayne, officials said. Township officials were also concerned about road maintenance. The county holds jurisdiction over numerous major roads in western Wayne.

But not all township officials are displeased with the services they've received from the county.

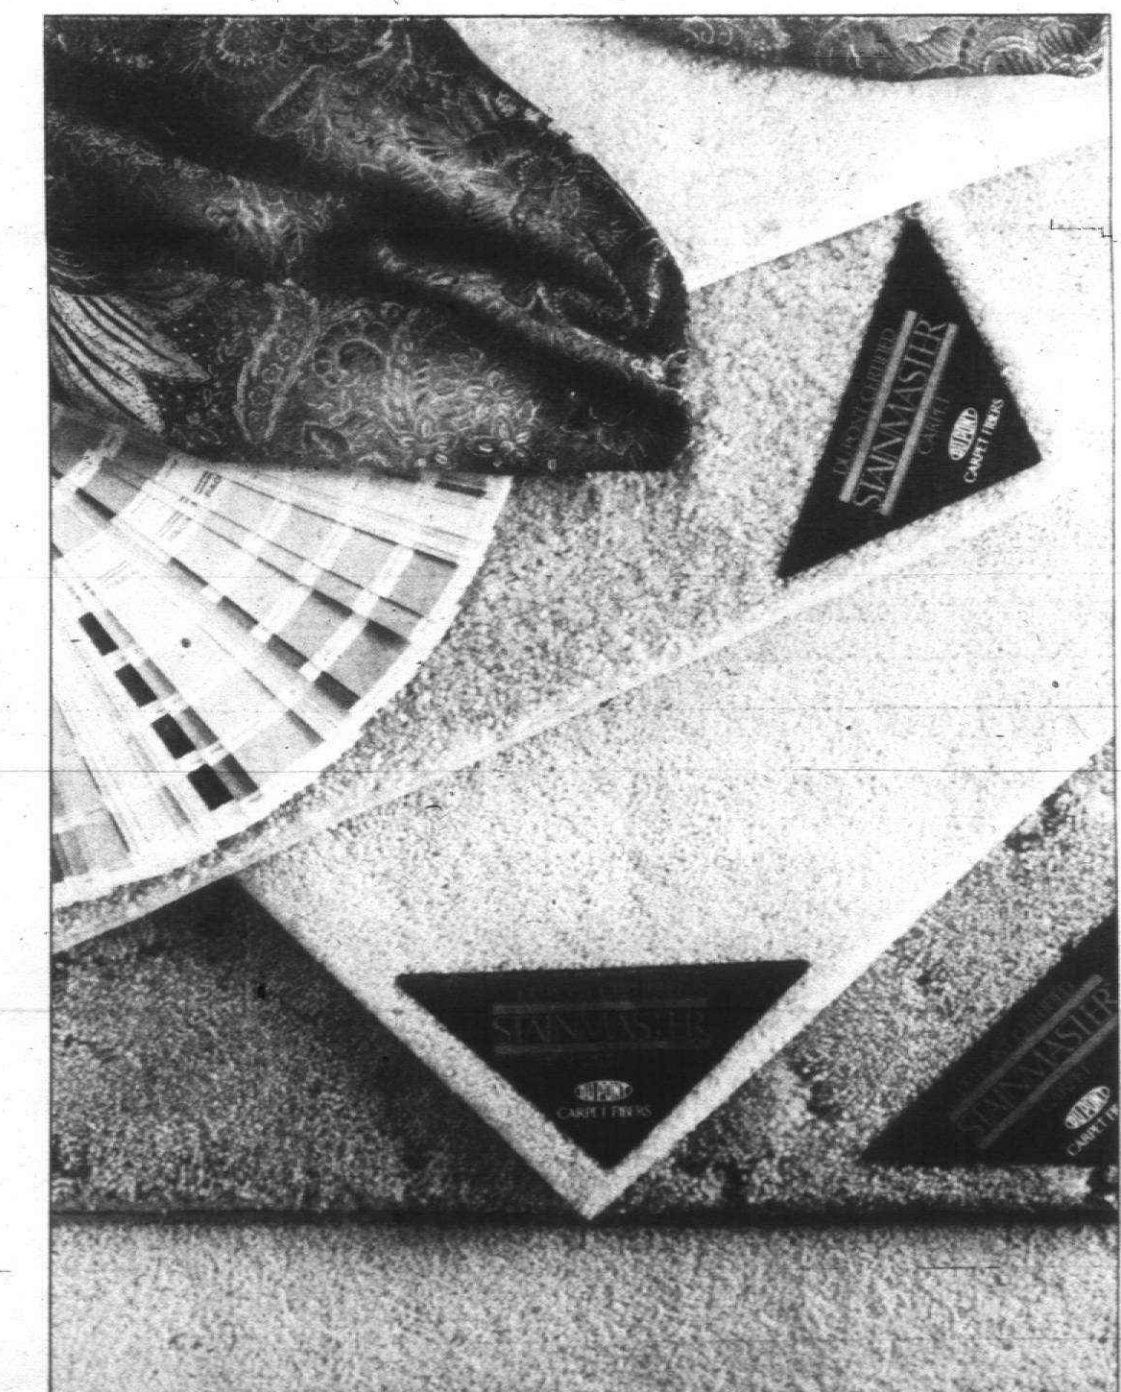

"I'd have to say we were pretty pleased, at least since Mr. McNamara has taken over," Redford Township deputy supervisor Kevin Kelley said.

Inkster Road, a parks spokesman said. It will also be used to complete the irrigation system at Warren Valley.

The grant was secured through the 1987 State Supplemental Appropriation Bill.

Gunman robs woman

A 20-year-old woman was robbed at gun point outside Meijer Thrifty Acre in Canton.

The Canton woman told police that about 6:50 p.m. Nov. 7 she was walking in the parking lot at Canton Center and Ford heading toward her car, according to Canton police information officer Dave Bojesic.

She said a man approached her, pointed a blue steel gun at her and said, "Give me your money."

He grabbed her purse, carrying $35, and ran south out of the parking lot.

She described the assailant as 6 feet tall, 20-25 years old, 180 pounds with dark hair. He was wearing blue jeans, a gray jacket and black baseball cap.

Anyone with information about the case is asked to call 397-3000.

Marching on

Local band to compete in 'Dome

The Plymouth Centennial Educational Park Marching Band will compete Saturday in the Pontiac Silverdome in the Marching Bands of America 1987 Grand National Championship Competition.

The Grand National Championship will include 50 bands from 10 states participating in preliminary and final competitions.

More than 400 local band boosters from Canton and Plymouth have made plans to be at the Silverdome when the CEP Marching Band performs in the preliminaries beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The band has had a full rehearsal since the state show on Oct. 24, including a three-hour rehearsal on Oct. 31 and a six-hour rehearsal on Saturday, Nov. 7.

The national competition marks the end of the CEP Marching Band 1987 competition season. The year will end with the annual band banquet at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 17 in the cafeteria of Plymouth Canton High.

This year the band was ranked best overall at West Bloomfield, Flushing, and Durand invitational. The percussion section took top honors at the state championships on Oct. 24.

Judging will be done by music educators from around the country including Gary Green, director of music, University of Connecticut; Fredy Martin, director and president of the Spirit of Atlanta Drum and Bugle Corps; and Fred Sanford, a teacher performer and author known as leading authority on contemporary marching percussion techniques.

"We have an excellent show a plan to make our appearance at the best of the season," said James R. Griffith, director of CEP Marching Band.

The band has had a full rehearsal since the state show on Oct. 24, including a three-hour rehearsal on Oct. 31 and a six-hour rehearsal on Saturday, Nov. 7.

The national competition marks the end of the CEP Marching Band 1987 competition season. The year will end with the annual band banquet at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 17 in the cafeteria of Plymouth Canton High.

JUDGING WILL be done by two separate panels of adjudicators. One panel will judge both days of preliminary competition, while a second panel will only adjudicate the finals.

Hospitals seek cap on malpractice verdicts

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Medical malpractice soon will become a major issue before the Michigan Legislature, health care industry representatives say.

If the cry sounds familiar — it is. Just last year, health care professionals campaigned for changes in Michigan's malpractice law. They set out to limit damages they said were driving doctors and hospitals away from Michigan.

But the new package of laws isn't adequate, according to the Michigan Hospital Association. This time, professionals say they will settle for nothing less than a cap on damages.

"It used to be that every 10 years or so there was a malpractice crisis but we can't afford to wait another 10 years," MHA President Spencer Johnson said.

Detroit area hospitals pay $9.54 per bed for malpractice coverage, the MHA said, highest in the nation. Suburban hospitals also are feeling the pinch.

"I would say we pay about $9,500 per bed," said Sister Mary Modesta, president of 304-bed St. Mary Hospital, Livonia.

Last year's package, aimed at revising legal provisions used to determine malpractice damages, fell short of the health care profession's goal.

"We got symbolic relief but no practical relief," Johnson said. "For us, malpractice is going to continue to be an issue until we receive real change."

That change, he said, involves capping damages that can be awarded in jury verdicts.

"Effectively, there isn't a cap right now," Johnson said.

Mushrooming malpractice insurance payments are crippling hospitals, he said.

"In 1980, our hospital's cost per admission was $35.32, in 1986 it was $190.19," Johnson said, quoting association statistics. "Premiums per hospital were $218,000 in 1980; in 1986 they were $1.19 million."

A spokesman for Redford Community Hospital said the small suburban hospital has been especially hard hit by rising malpractice insurance costs.

"It's gotten to the point where it's just ridiculous," administrator Robert Johnson said. "We're paying $500,000 a year in premiums on a 68-bed hospital." Rising malpractice costs have driven some staff members away, he added.

"We've lost some of our obstetricians and gynecologists because they tell us they can't afford to practice here anymore," Laible said.

Botsford Hospital, a 336-bed facility in Farmington Hills, created its own insurance pool during an earlier malpractice crisis.

"We're not subject to fluctuations in rates or availability, but we're aware of the problem," hospital president Gerson Cooper said. "In the five years we've had our own pool, we've seen three private carriers pull out of Michigan entirely."

Part of the problem, Cooper said, is that recent state case law draws no distinction between doctors and the hospitals where they serve.

"The prevailing philosophy is there's no difference," he said. "Plaintiffs' counsels are looking for deep pockets."

Botsford began including emergency room doctors under its coverage.

"If we hadn't done that we might not have been able to keep our emergency room open," Cooper said.

St. Mary, also self-insured, did the same.

"The problem was, you couldn't get anyone to insure emergency room staff," Sister Modesta said.

The twin problems, health officials said, are availability and cost.

"Years ago, the old family doctor might pay $2,000 or so a year in premiums," Cooper said. "Now, physicians find themselves with payments of $60,000 a year or more. This is especially true in obstetrics, orthopedics, neurosurgery and thoracic surgery."

The MHA plans to mount a major campaign by next spring, Johnson said.

Members are considering a no-fault proposal or a schedule of benefits, similar to worker's compensation.

"What we're saying is payments should be specified per injury," Johnson said. Awards for specific injuries would be capped at pre-set amounts.

At this point, association members haven't decided what option to pursue, Johnson said.

Sister Modesta said she hoped a federal package of laws would bring relief.

"In late August, there were recommendations out of Health and Human Services," she said. Proposals seek to limit damages and restrict the time period in which lawsuits can be brought.

"If this kind of package is created nationally, it will certainly have an effect on the states," Sister Modesta said.

Not everyone, however, is sympathetic.

Michigan Bar Association President Eugene Mosser said the new package of state laws should be given a chance before the Legislature re-opens malpractice debate.

"There are a number of so-called reforms passed by the Legislature last year," Mosser said. "We're waiting to see how they work out."

Though some of the adopted remedies might prove unworkable, Mosser said, they still should be given time.

"I've been told mediation won't work because you have to bring in a doctor while they have to bring in a doctor and, even now, it's difficult to get a doctor to testify against another doctor," Mosser said.

As far as doctors leaving the state, Mosser said: "I've read some reports that said we had an overabundance of pediatricians and obstetricians. It could be the laws of supply and demand taking effect."

Greater enforcement of medical competence standards would go a long way toward curbing malpractice suits, Mosser said.

"Attorneys don't file these kind of suits frivolously," he said. "For one, they're expensive."

"But the basic reason there are lawsuits, is because there's malpractice."

"For us, malpractice is going to continue to be an issue until we receive real change."

Local reps differ on budget

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

'My mind is open, but raising taxes shouldn't be the first thing we do.'

— Carl Pursell
U.S. representative

Local congressmen agree the federal budget deficit must be reduced, but disagree on how.

U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, advocates a spending freeze and "fair, across the board" spending cuts.

U.S. Reps. William Ford, D-Taylor, and Sander Levin, D-Southfield, said tax increases, coupled with spending cuts, is the way to go.

President Reagan was scheduled to meet with Congressional leaders during the Veterans' Day federal holiday Wednesday in an attempt to forge an agreement on cutting the nation's budget deficit.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders have advocated tax increases, but their proposals differ in the amount of tax revenue that would be raised.

The economic summit was prompted by slumping world stock markets. Both sides seek to reduce the deficit by at least $23 billion.

There would be $23 billion in automatic cuts under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings debt reduction plan.

Federal budget experts predicted the government would spend $108 billion more than it raised in fiscal 1988, but revised that figure to $150 billion.

Though cuts will be prompted Nov. 20 by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings debt reduction plan, those automatic cuts are clearly unacceptable.

"There's no one who wants to wait for Gramm-Rudman-Hollings to take effect," said Pursell, whose district includes part of Livonia.

Said Levin: "Gramm-Rudman-Hollings would create problems: it's not selective, it would send the wrong message to foreign markets and it would cut too much from defense and social programs."

A compromise plan, Ford said, "will probably cut some things Gramm-Rudman-Hollings wouldn't and leave some things it would cut alone."

Government entitlement programs will be lightly cut, if at all, congressmen predicted. Heavier cuts may come from the $286 million defense budget and $187 billion discretionary budget. Entitlement programs, including social welfare spending, account for $484 billion. At present, the federal government is paying $130 billion interest on money borrowed to balance the federal budget.

Levin, who represents Redford Township, said tax loopholes should be closed.

"Ways and Means already has a package that would close loopholes and some deductions for the very rich," he said.

Ford, whose district includes Garden City, Westland, Canton Township and part of Livonia, predicted military cuts would involve long term projects rather than immediate needs.

"(Retiring Defense Secretary) Cap Weinberger would scream if we had to pull ships out of the Persian Gulf and cut back our number of troops," Ford said.

Pursell said tax increases should be used as a last resort.

"My mind is open, but raising taxes shouldn't be the first thing we do," Pursell said.

Pursell led a bipartisan spending freeze group in 1985. By having seven of eight resolutions adopted into law, Pursell said, the group saved the federal government an estimated $11 billion.

The congressmen agreed cutting the deficit was like walking an economic tightrope.

"Economists tell us we need to raise taxes, but not too high and to cut spending, but not too much," Ford said.

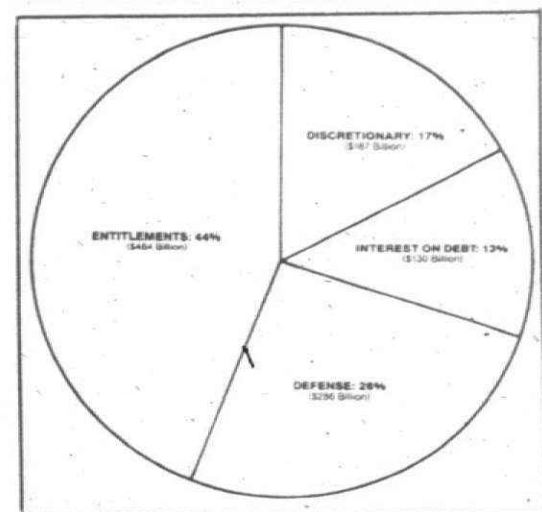

Pursell said low inflation and reduced unemployment has made it difficult to rally the public around the deficit.

"That's what you people need to do," Pursell said to a group of Observer reporters and editors.

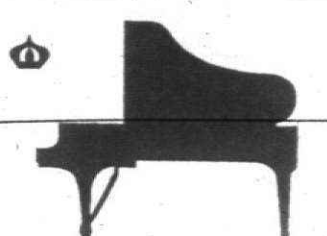

Ford and Levin spoke in telephone interviews.

Jittery world markets are just one side effect of massive U.S. government debt, Pursell said.

Increased credit inflates the dollar's value, increasing demand for foreign products while reducing demand for domestic goods, he said. The trade deficit, he said, reduces business earnings, producing slower job growth, factory closings and growing dependence upon foreign in-

As Congress begins cutting the federal budget, most experts believe the first action will come from the $187 billion reserved for discretionary activities — from operating government departments to financing the Nicaraguan Contras.

Expand or move?

Centrally locate central office

THE PLYMOUTH-CANTON Board of Education is coming close to making a decision on whether to expand the existing administration center in downtown Plymouth or to build one elsewhere.

The school board seems to be leaning toward expanding the existing board offices on S. Harvey as it has bought two homes nearby on Ann Arbor Trail, which would be used to expand the parking lot.

That purchase should not, however, prevent the board from making another choice as the sites represent a valuable investment. Both parcels could be sold now for the purchase price, and very likely for more.

THE PRESENT site is crowded and insufficient for all central administrators to be housed there.

An expansion would relieve crowding and allow incorporation of central administrators under one roof as desired. But how much room for growth is allowed in the expansion?

Will the cost of operating the expanded building be more costly than it would for a new building? Is the present site more accessible to parents, students, teachers and other employees than another?

Indications are the present site can be expanded for about $995,000, which is less than it would cost to build a center elsewhere. The administration, though, should get an appraisal on the value of the present board office as the proceeds from the sale of the land and building could be earmarked for a new board office.

The economics might allow for construction of a board office elsewhere.

THE MOST logical site for a relocated board office would be the Centennial Educational Park. At Joy and Canton Center Roads, the CEP offers a site centrally located to parents and students living in Canton and Plymouth. The site is closer to the center of the Plymouth-Canton community and is far more accessible than the Ann Arbor Trail/Harvey location.

The CEP also is centrally located for teachers and employees in the district. The two high schools on the site contain a large number of the district's employees. Add to this number Isbister, Gallimore, Miller and Hulsing elementary schools. And then add the schools that are just as close or accessible to the CEP as downtown — Bird, Fiegel, Eriksson, Fiegel, Field and the new Hoben elementary, West, Pioneer and Lowell middle schools.

Another major benefit of the CEP is that it has excess property originally bought for a third and fourth high school but not needed now for that purpose. And so the district already owns the land that could be used for a new board office. Which means that the site already is off the tax rolls.

Other districts nearby have found it advantageous to "cluster" educational uses on one site, including administration centers on the same site as a high school. Wayne-Westland, Garden City, Southfield and many other districts have found it efficient to have board offices on the same site or adjacent to a high school.

THE SCHOOL BOARD should take a close look at whether expansion really is preferable to relocation.

If expansion is done now it is very unlikely relocation will happen in the future. The decision made now will have lasting impact. The need to mold the Plymouth-Canton community, rather than split, should speak loudly to relocating to the CEP.

The renaming of the school district a few years back is indicative of the importance of Canton to the district. That recognition also should be reflected in the decision-making process of the administration on the board office issue.

Without voter support and the financial contribution of Canton, the school board would not have money from the bond issue to spend on expanding or relocating the board offices. Plymouth does not support school tax issues; Canton generally does. That reality also needs to be recognized.

Alzheimer's

Special month calls attention to needs of patients, families

THE ELDERLY mother forgets what you told her a few hours before.

She thinks nursing home employees are poisoning her food.

The woman also sees threats to her safety and personal belongings.

These are all symptoms of Alzheimer's disease, which is expected to strike nearly 120,000 Michigan residents by the end of the decade — maybe even someone in your own family.

National studies show there are 3 million with the disease with another 17 million affected either as relatives or health care providers for the victims.

What if this disease carried terrible symptoms: For the patient a lingering death without hope of recovery for the patient; for the family severe emotional strain and costly medical bills without hope of financial support?

And what if this disease left the medical community baffled, without knowledge of who it would strike next or even a clear indication as to how it strikes?

It would be time someone began doing something about it, wouldn't it?

No, this isn't about AIDS. It's about Alzheimer's disease.

November is Alzheimer's disease month.

It's a good time for our state representatives to begin taking the disease seriously, to begin developing a plan meeting the needs of Alzheimer's patients and their families.

ALZHEIMER'S disease claims 100,000 lives each year. It's the fourth-leading adult killer, ranking only behind heart disease, cancer and strokes.

It's not just an old person's disease, either. Alzheimer's can strike adults over 40 as well as those over 80. But patients aren't the only ones affected.

It's not a mandatory part of the aging process. Thankfully, most senior citizens never experience the disease. But an estimated 379,000 Michigan residents will be afflicted by 2030, according to a recent state task force report. That number could include our loved ones. Or ourselves.

Ask members of Alzheimer's-affected families about what society is currently doing to alleviate their emotional and financial suffering and they'll tell you: not much.

Caring for Alzheimer's patients is an exhausting, 24-hour-a-day job for family members, many themselves ailing and elderly.

Consider their problems:

• Caring for Alzheimer's patients is an exhausting, 24-hour-a-day job for family members, many themselves ailing and elderly.

• Long-term financial support is sorely lacking. Frequently, families have to reach poverty levels before receiving any kind of financial assistance.

• If Alzheimer's is difficult to treat, it's even more difficult to diagnose. Health professionals say every other possible cause must first be ruled out. And examinations are costly.

• Because of legal tie-ups, those who care for Alzheimer's patients are restricted from making decisions on the patients' behalf, further compounding family frustration.

CONSIDER WHAT Majorie Fuller, a program coordinator for the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, says:

"Of all the terminal diseases I've worked with, none has the potential for driving families apart as does Alzheimer's disease — none!"

Consider this, too: there are already some 60,000 Alzheimer's patients in our metropolitan area.

Alzheimer's hasn't totally been ignored, though.

A state task force recently proposed a number of common-sense solutions.

Providing greater government financial support, naturally, tops the list.

But state-subsidized autopsies of suspected Alzheimer's fatalities could vastly expand knowledge about Alzheimer's and related diseases.

Allowing Medicaid to directly reimburse family care-givers is an idea worth exploring, too. So is amending legal guardianship laws to allow greater family decision-making.

Some of these suggestions are relatively inexpensive, others aren't. But the question remains: What if Alzheimer's disease did strike someone in your family?

A day to remember virtues of peace

VETERANS DAY IS pretty tame stuff nowadays. Sure you might have seen a ceremony of two — a gathering at Westland's Vietnam Memorial, a ceremony at Livonia's Veterans Park — but that's about it. Not much else.

After all, it's been a long time since the United States has been at war, officially anyhow.

For veterans it has become a day of quiet reflection in an otherwise busy world. You know, a reminder that pops into the head after hearing a reference to Veterans Day on the radio.

"Jeez, that's right, it is today," muses a veteran as his car flies down the expressway to another day on the job. His mind goes back for just a second, a name, a face, an incident flashes into the mind's eye. Then, just as quickly, that remembrance fades as another car cuts in front of him and he resumes reality.

THAT EVENING another reminder as the evening news shows the entourage of veterans dressed in jungle fatigues, shivering in the cold, as they huddle around the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the wall, in Washington, D.C.

At night, crawling into bed, he lies awake and thinks for a minute or two, before falling asleep, about that time so many years ago when he was young and the world was suffering a violent convulsion.

But today we know the really great people are the poets, painters and physicians who have made the world a better place in which to live.

As you drove by a cemetery, you may have spotted a widow, standing alone over a marker, placing flowers, taking a moment to remember when her life was full of love and happiness with the man who was her veteran.

You also may find yourself sitting next to a woman at work who never knew was a veteran at all, but who spent an important part of her life in the midst of a traditionally male pursuit where women's contributions are hardly ever recognized.

BUT IF you're like most Americans, you just won't remember at all. And that's probably the best remembrance of all.

America, despite its history of involvement in war, wants to be different. It wants to stop fighting with enemies real and imagined. It would rather talk the problem out than Steve Barnaby fight it out.

It's a part of our nature that we've suppressed for far too long. But it also is a part of the American psyche that seems to be coming to the forefront.

We've finally reached an age where many of the younger generation really believe that war is an expensive waste, in terms of both money and lives.

The war generations of America grew up on the glories of military conflict. We were taught that it was the generals of the great armies, the Alexanders, Napoleons and Pattons, who were to be admired.

But today we know the really great people are the poets, painters and physicians who have made the world a better place in which to live.

War truly is a ridiculous pursuit, guided by men who fear to take the more difficult route — the path to peace.

Parents' role in jacket theft

To the editor:

My son, Michael Sullivan, had his gray leather jacket stolen from Plymouth Salem High School when he stayed after class for a minute after the bell rang. Because of the classroom location, Mike believes the jacket was stolen by someone in his second period electronics class.

It is hard to believe that this child's parents, or his friends parents (as he probably sold the jacket to buy drugs) have not noticed a leather jacket in their home the past month that does not belong there. The jacket, which was purchased at the Leather Loft, is a medium gray short jacket with a narrow band collar, size 36, has a furry zip-out lining under which is a ripped taffeta lining. I had planned to replace the lining but as a single parent who works full time and attends college in the evenings, I didn't get around to it.

Mike has been working since his early teens and buys all his own clothes. He works very hard for his money as he is employed by a horse breeding farm. He works every day after school, all summer, weekends and holidays. He was very proud of that jacket because he earned the money to buy it. I wonder what feelings of self-worth the boy who stole it has.

The fault lies not with the boy but his parents who do not check everything that comes into their home, including receipts. This is not an isolated incident. Every neighbor and co-worker I talked to had something of their child's stolen at some time or another. As for the jacket, Mike can purchase another with his hard earned money. For the boy who stole it, both he and his parents have a lot of heartaches in front of them unless changes are made now.

Should anyone have any information on the jacket, leave the information (or the jacket) with school security and they will see that we receive it.

Easy peace, hard price

To the editor:
I want to publicly encourage Congressman Pursell to maintain perspective in his dealings with the Good Neighbors, freeze niks, and others like them whose only desire is to see this country militarily imposed, morally confused, ethically flexible, and spiritually dead.

These special interest/hidden agenda coalitions are not speaking for me or others like me who realize that freedom has costs. This country was not born without blood. The red of the flag reminds us of this. It is unconscionable to think that maintaining our freedom will not be without risk of life.

We have been lulled into believing that peace at any price should be our foreign policy. This is a suicidal position — both for us and our children.

Life teaches us that those things we gain at great cost are precious. Conversely, gifts are easily discarded.

I'm afraid that the handout mentality in this country would, like Esau, be willing to sell its birthright for a bowl of peace porridge.

Lecturer sheds light on 1810 court ruling

IT WAS SO warm and Indian summerish on the afternoon of our recent election day that Russell Amos Kirk arrived bareheaded on the campus of the University of Detroit where the 69-year-old author and scholar was scheduled as guest lecturer.

This was just as well, for in the Kirk household at Mecosta up in the belly of Michigan's lower peninsula it must be confusing for wife Annette to know which attire to lay out daily for a husband known variously as a historian, political economist, critic, biographer, novelist, essayist, journalist, distinguished professor, debater, teller of ghost stories, Michigan's foremost man of letters and "The American Cicero."

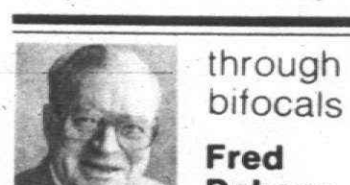

This time the humid lecture hall would hear him speak on "John Marshall and the Coming of the Corporation: The Constitution Changes the Economy," a stimulating 45-minute discourse that left this listener in awe at how one man so small of stature can know so doggone much.

Supposedly, an intelligent relationship such as this recognizes the name of John Marshall as one of the most famous of all American judges, having served as chief justice of the United States from 1801 until his death in 1835.

"LIVELY DISTURBANCES" at the stock markets during October sufficiently reminded most of us of how overwhelmingly the huge industrial and commercial corporations have come to dominate the economy worldwide here at the end of the 20th century," the Plymouth-born Kirk told an intent audience of students, faculty and this one interloper from off the street.

In the case of Fletcher vs. Peck, Marshall had found the opportunity to expound his fundamental doctrine of the sovereignty of the American nation as represented in the federal government.

"WITHOUT DISSENT from his colleagues, Marshall had found that contracts, out of social necessity, must be enforced, and property protected against encroachments; that the rescinding of the land grants was

Fred DeLano

Midway in his remarks, this erudite historian ripped listeners by saying, "We find ourselves in the small, low-domed chamber of the United States Supreme Court in the Capitol on March 16, 1810. Justice Marshall is announcing the court's decision in the case of Fletcher vs. Peck."

(For your edification, the Georgia Legislature had revoked land grants previously issued, some land having already been sold to new owners who argued that by revoking the grants Georgia had interfered with a lawful contract.)

"The great chief justice was a slovenly ungainly, humorous, loveable man. Except for his marvelous eyes, to call him uncouth was flattering. On the bench he maintained the federalist cause. His arguments and literary talents had baffled Jeffersonians."

In the case of Fletcher vs. Peck, Marshall had found the opportunity to expound his fundamental doctrine of the sovereignty of the American nation as represented in the federal government.

"WITHOUT DISSENT from his colleagues, Marshall had found that contracts, out of social necessity, must be enforced, and property protected against encroachments; that the rescinding of the land grants was unconstitutional under Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution, for the states as well as citizens were bound by the contract clause. It was one of the great landmark decisions."

It was Marshall's belief in a strong federal government, his broad interpretation of federal powers prevailing over state powers in case of conflict, his doctrine that it was within the Supreme Court's power to declare legislation unconstitutional, and that a corporate charter is a contract to be protected by law that set a pattern for generations to come.

"The Constitution of the United States has made possible our present economic pattern, even though that pattern is not at all what most of the framers expected would come to pass in this country. Nowhere in the Constitution are joint stock companies, let alone corporations, specifically mentioned," said Kirk.

"PROTECTIONS AND privileges of commercial and charitable corporations are derived from Article I, Section 10 and its clause prohibiting the several states from passing any law impairing the obligation of contracts."

"It was Chief Justice John Marshall who applied the contract clause to corporations even when those corporations came into conflict with a state government and who in certain of his decisions afforded commercial corporations the shelter and refuge of the federal courts. The growth of industrial and mercantile corporations in America is related to Marshall's rulings."

That wasn't all of the lecture, of course. If you wish to hear it all, I'll be happy to show you the complete tape.

An outside view of prison

JUDI B. steamed when she read my interview story about state Sen. Jack Welborn.

The conservative Republican from Kalamazoo contends Michigan prisons are too soft and fail to teach the values of discipline and hard work.

Judi B. is a prisoner's wife, and what set her off was Welborn's remark about TV sets, radios and typewriters.

"The money to purchase them comes from inmates' friends and families," she began.

THE PRISON, as she describes it in an eight-page letter, is bureaucratic and complicated. Some items:

- Purchases — Prisoners can buy TVs, radios, personal items and greeting cards, but only from the prison store — "not at F&M prices," Judi B. observes. "Most inmates earn $12 to $24 a month, which does not go far."

- Gifts — Nix. She may give her husband $60 a month, $15 at a time. "I give a guard $15 (cash), and he gives me 15 (plastic) tokens." Prisoners can't carry cash beyond 50 pennies.

- Visiting hours — They vary wildly and, in her view, arbitrarily. "The warden says it's too bad you work Monday-Friday. We don't make exceptions."

- "Most (wives) work... It takes an hour and 15 minutes to reach Jackson, and then the wife has to sign up for a visit and have the inmate come up for a visit which could take anywhere to an hour. By the time you reach the visiting room, it's 7:30. You have until 9."

- Visiting conditions — Judi sent along the prison handbook describing body searches of visitors but didn't complain.

- Phone calls — The prison system encourages inmates to visit, but they prefer calls, which must be made collect. "Most inmates' wives have phone bills from $100 to $300-plus a month."

JUDI B. didn't give me her last name and address. "Just a Westland post office box. "People who used to be your friends are no longer."

"Going to church is a hassle. People act like you're a leper. Even churches with strong prison ministries... don't know what to say to families of inmates."

Tim Richard

"I'm not single — so I can't join a singles group. So they suggest being placed in the married couples group about Marriage Encounter Weekends or Sweethearts Pot Luck."

Judi tells of an inmate's wife who had just been released from a mental institution and had no food. "I contacted six churches in Livonia and Westland — no one had food. I contacted Prison Fellowship — they were in an annual convention, and no one knew what to do." Finally she and other wives pitched in to buy the woman $50 worth of groceries.

JUDI SENT along a Newsweek column by an Oregon writer whose husband is serving a 10-year minimum term. The columnist charges, "Prison officials tend to discourage any type of networking among prisoners or their families."

Yet because of the ostracism from friends and churches, prison wives necessarily band together. Said Judi: "There's a 5-foot, 100-pound inmate's wife in Brighton that will fix your car for you."

None of this, of course, refutes Welborn's main point that prisons fail to teach discipline and the work ethic.

But Judi B.'s stories certainly make a case that prison is no country club for inmates, and it's pretty degrading for their loved ones on the outside.

Canton resident Carolyn Burns is president of the Plymouth Symphony League and of the Community Literacy Council.

She believes in helping others

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Carolyn Burns loves to read. As busy as she is, however, it's often hard to find the time for recreational reading.

Burns, a Canton resident since 1977, is president of the local Community Literacy Council. She's also president of the Plymouth Symphony League, the fund-raising arm of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

For a number of years, Burns has been active at the local, district and state levels of the Lutheran Church Women, a national organization. She's also president of the women's group at Resurrection Lutheran Church in Livonia.

Work on various literacy efforts takes up much of Burns' time. She became involved in literacy organizations and efforts for several reasons.

Adult literacy is one of the priority social concerns of the Lutheran Church Women. Burns believes it's important to be involved in such efforts, both as a Christian and as a member of a democratic society.

WHEN HER son had some trouble in the early elementary grades learning to read, Burns began to think more about literacy. She realized that learning to read isn't easy for all students.

"My son had a little more trouble and that probably turned my head a little. That's probably where I was first introduced to it."

Burns and her husband, Lowell, are the parents of two children. Their 21-year-old son is now a junior studying business at Central Michigan University; their 25-year-old daughter, who recently got married, is a CMU business graduate who works as a purchasing manager for a computer firm.

Burns grew up in Illinois and lived in Garden City a few years before moving to Canton. She's not a reading specialist; she attended the University of Illinois and studied home economics. She's found being a layperson has its advantages.

Burns is able to speak for adult non-readers as a layperson. Being a layperson helps her avoid being a threat to educators.

"My family has a lot of school teachers in it, and education was always important. School was an important part."

The local Community Literacy Council was formed in the late summer of 1985. Burns, who had been trained as a tutor through the Laubach program, spoke with Sharon Streen, assistant director of Plymouth-Canton Community Education. Burns asked Streen what materials were used in the adult reading classes.

BURNS MET with Streen and with Mary Kay Frey, one of Streen's colleagues. Burns found the educators to be helpful and enthusiastic.

Volunteers: An asset

Sharon Streen is grateful for the volunteer efforts of Carolyn Burns and of other people.

Without that assistance, it wouldn't be possible to help as many students, said Streen, assistant director of Plymouth-Canton Community Education.

"We would not be able to do it today without them."

The local Community Literacy Council volunteer tutors work one-to-one with adult students, helping them learn to read or to improve their reading skills. Students also have access to adult basic education classes taught by professionals.

For the most needy students, that one-to-one assistance is essential, Streen said. Those students have difficulty keeping up in a classroom setting without additional help.

Streen is interested in investigating other aspects of volunteer help, "because it works so well."

VOLUNTEER HELP would be a tremendous boost in working with adults and children for whom English is a second language, she said.

"You put them in a classroom and they need one-to-one help." Having limited English skills makes keeping up in a classroom difficult for those people, she said.

It's been professionally and personally rewarding for Streen to watch the local literacy efforts. Seeing those efforts succeed is exciting and rewarding for the educators and the volunteers.

"You do something and it works. It really works."

Suburban areas don't have adult education needs identical to those of urban areas with a high dropout rate.

"But the needs are still there." Learning doesn't stop at age 18 and the door to educational opportunity remains open for adults of all ages, she said.

Among the adults who are learning to read or working to improve reading skills, the majority combine adult basic education classes and work with a tutor. Such a combination helps the students learn more quickly, Streen said.

"They make tremendous strides very quickly."

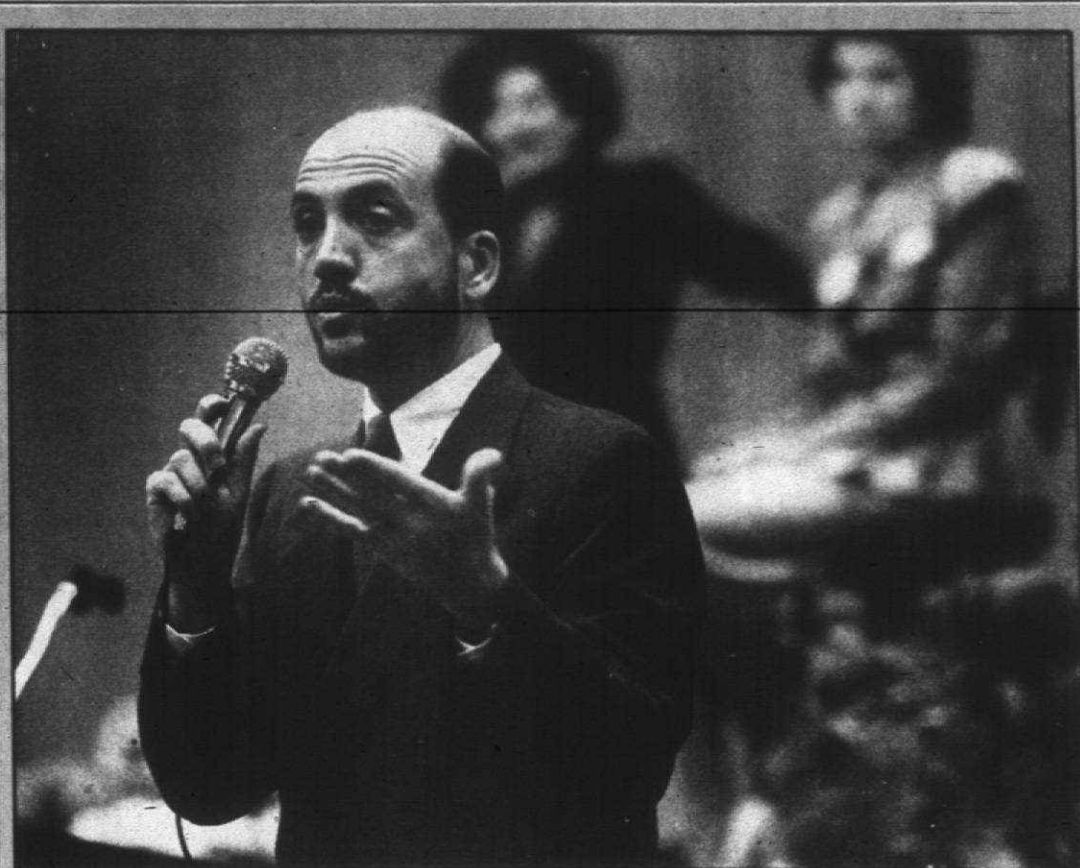

Volunteer tutors are a tremendous asset, although it's essential that they're properly trained, Streen has found. Community Literacy Council volunteers go through training sessions before they start working with students.

Streen hasn't found any degree of antagonism between the educators and the volunteers. Both play vital roles in helping students, she said.

"It doesn't really matter who helps the student grow." When educators and volunteers keep their minds on what's important, they don't think about turf disputes.

"They kept their eye on the target."

BEAUTY CONSULTANT Jeffrey Bruce knows an unattractive celebrity when he sees one.

Bruce, who spoke recently at a Plymouth Newcomers Club meeting, didn't hesitate to criticize such public figures as Tammy Faye Bakker and Donna Mills for being less than picture-perfect.

Although the makeup artist also had beauty suggestions for audience members at the meeting, his criticisms on the local level were gentler than those directed at the famous or infamous.

united tutors work one-to-one with adults, helping them learn to read or to improve their reading skills. Students also have access to Plymouth-Canton Community Education adult basic education classes.

"Every community does not have such a marvelous setup," Burns said. "We really are fortunate."

The local program has been used as a model in other communities, she said.

In her spare time, Burns enjoys reading non-fiction, including autobiographies.

"Just a variety of things. I simply cannot imagine not reading."

The work Burns does brings her in contact with a number of people, including professionals and students. She enjoys meeting different people; it's particularly rewarding for her to see adult non-readers learn to read.

"I really respect any adult who takes that on because it's not easy and it's not fast."

Burns has found that her involvement in varied activities is beneficial, in that something she learns in one place can be applied elsewhere.

IN SEPTEMBER, she attended a National Council of Churches program in Racine, Wis., on church involvement in literacy in North America. That program involved some 12 different denominations.

Burns served on the state task force to prepare for Literacy Sunday this year. That was combined with a concurrent resolution of the Michigan House and Senate recognizing September as Literacy Action Month in Michigan.

Burns has also been involved in Project Literacy U.S., a joint venture of the ABC and PBS television networks designed to increase awareness of literacy issues.

These days, Burns and her fellow members of the Plymouth Symphony League are busy preparing for two December projects. One is the sale of Christmas luminaries, done in cooperation with the Trailwood Garden Club; the other is the Christmas ball, scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 12, at the Livonia Holiday.

"Again, I am able to work with wonderful people. They work very hard."

Burns teaches beginning piano lessons and also enjoys doing needlework projects in her spare time. "I do a lot of that for gifts and our home."

Getting all she does done has been made possible with the help of her patient and supportive husband, she said. "Loretta Burns works for the Ford Motor Co."

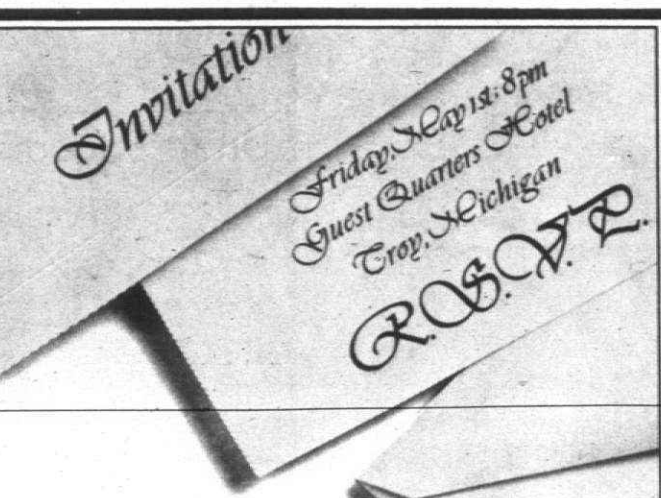

Burns is also grateful she had the pleasure of raising their children.

She's planning on returning to college to complete work on her bachelor's degree when her son completes school.

Burns, who plans to study business and journalism, will attend classes somewhere in this area. She jokes about having written checks for college expenses for seven years for the couple's son and daughter.

"When it's my turn, I will certainly be there."

tural Center. The meeting featured a brunch, a complete makeover of an audience member and a question and answer session.

The makeover of Diane Kelly was done by Judy Hepler, regional director for Jeffrey Bruce Cosmetics Inc. As Hepler worked, Bruce described the makeover to club members and guests.

"BRUCE, WHO is frequently seen on Channel 7's 'Kelly and Company' and on other television programs, shared a number of beauty tips with those at the meeting. Some braver members of the audience asked for specific suggestions on their appearance, while others preferred to keep a lower profile."

The tone of Bruce's presentation was light one. He used humor to make his points; the beauty consultant also didn't hesitate to point out positive features of audience members and of some celebrities. "Although the tone of the Plymouth Newcomers Club presentation was light, Bruce also had a serious message for those at the meeting. He has been named Michigan chairman for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and talked briefly about the disease."

Cystic fibrosis is a congenital disease of children, characterized by fibrosis, malfunctioning of the pancreas and frequent respiratory infections. Children with cystic fibrosis frequently die at an early age, Bruce said.

There's little public awareness of just what cystic fibrosis is, he added; it's often confused with other diseases.

Bruce is to appear in 14 benefit performances of "Peter Pan" at the Marquis Theatre in Northville. He'll appear in the role of the menacing Captain Hook.

The opening date for the benefit performances Bruce is to appear in at the Marquis Theatre is Nov. 27.

BRUCE IS looking forward to his time on the stage. He last appeared in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" at the Birmingham Theatre a couple of years ago.

"Typecasting," Bruce said in describing his appearances as Captain Hook. In plays, audience members all love to hate the villain, he said. Bruce is looking forward to hearing audience members boo and hiss as he appears on stage.

He's also looking forward to meeting children from the audience after the performances, such meetings will help children overcome their fears of the dreaded Captain Hook, Bruce said. The play's an ideal one for children age 3 and older, the makeup artist added.

"He's just such a ridiculous character," Captain Hook is pompous without having any reason to be, Bruce said.

"I'm taking singing lessons. God help me," Bruce, who is 40, will also dance in the play.

The beauty consultant joked that the mind is the first thing to go and thus learning his lines isn't as easy as it would have been in his younger days. As of Nov. 4, he had about two-thirds of the lines memorized.

Bruce doesn't mind spending part of the holiday season playing such a mean character. He also doesn't have any problem with Captain Hook's fate in "Peter Pan."

"He gets what he deserves, let's put it that way."

The Plymouth Inn

The Gracious Alternative

Someone you love is growing older and needs just a bit more support than he or she can get in their current living situation. A nursing home isn't the answer. Normal activities like eating and dressing aren't a problem. But you would be happier knowing someone was there to provide gentle encouragement and firm support when needed; in a non-institutional atmosphere.

The answer is The Plymouth Inn, a magnificent residence for seniors who want their independence but need some supervision as well. Consider some of the many advantages:

- Easily accessible via I-96 and I-275; only 30 minutes from both downtown Detroit and the northern suburbs, including Farmington Hills, Birmingham and West Bloomfield.
- Tranquil landscaped grounds and lovely common areas.
- Three delicious meals served in our central dining room by a friendly, attentive staff of professionals.
- Extensive, varied social programs and recreational opportunities.
- Game room, chapel, beauty parlor and lounges, all designed with the special needs of our residents in mind.

The Plymouth Inn welcomes your inspection visit. When you see what we have to offer we think you will agree that The Plymouth Inn is a very special place where your loved one can feel secure, yet independent. We invite you to call today for an appointment.

Our presence can be important

I WAS NOT invited to the party on Drummond Island. Seventy guests from a population area of more than several million is a very select list. I was not surprised at not being among the chosen few.

I was invited to participate in an area mall's celebration for Christmas. They said it was very important that I be there. They were important a leader in the community, and that my presence would help provide the Christmas spirit.

The party on Drummond Island featured a host of events that ranged from a seance in a Native American burial ground to a Christmas morning scene, complete with artificial snow. Party guests also could be actors in a movie, make a pizza, go shopping with play money and imitate baseball players in a post-game locker scene.

The schedule of events in the mall is more temperate. Shopping with real money is the main emphasis. Camera exposure is limited to the office for security, and the only spirit communication encouraged is with the holiday spirit that fosters buying and giving.

I won't be going to the area mall's celebration for Christmas—it was kind of them to invite me, and it is pleasing to hear how important my presence might be. I even thought it was a mimeographed invitation. I just don't share their sense of what I should be doing for the holiday season. Helping others make money is not my primary concern.

Perhaps I should be more grateful that the purpose of my presence was so clearly stated. There was no hiding that fact behind the ornaments of party life, however temperate or exotic they might be. No one will mistake the purpose of that mall's holiday celebration. They are spending money to make money.

I have a different reason for being here. The first question in the Westminster Catechism of 1647 says it all. "What is the chief purpose of man?" To glorify God and enjoy him forever.

"YOU ARE WELCOME"

moral perspectives

Rev. Lloyd Buss

This is not to suggest for one moment that I can live without money, or that it is unimportant. It just is not the highest priority in life. If the best thing fathers can do for their children is to love their mothers, then the best thing people can do for this world is to glorify the God who created it.

GLORIFYING GOD, however, creates a host of concerns for me. Believing that God's providence is sufficient for all, the unequal distribution of food and resources is especially troublesome. Believing that God is just and righteous makes the injustice of life painful. Believing that God created human life for love and fulfillment makes all hatred and uselessness especially abhorrent. Malls do need to make money. They would not exist very long without it. Spending money to make money is not wrong. Helping people have a truly special holiday season is a worthy effort.

It is also helpful to remember that when we glorify God, we shall enjoy not only God's presence, but also the community God creates through providence. That is the real party of life.

The Rev. Lloyd D. Buss is the pastor of Abiding Presence Lutheran Church in Rochester.

For more information, call 464-7343, 937-9378 or 937-2360.

A. Jolayne
FarrellA travel guide suited to seniors

Dear Jo:

I read your column a while back on tips for seniors when travelling. In addition to your advice, I would like to recommend an excellent paperback that we are presently using as we plan a trip around the States and Canada.

It is "The Seniors Guide to Budget Travel in the United States and Canada," by Paige Palmer published by Pilot Books. It costs US $3.95 plus $1 for postage and handling.

The guide points out ways to get discounts on everything — transportation, meals and accommodation. It is full of helpful hints on travel comforts, and lists scores of publications to help the older person do his or her travel homework before leaving home. Preplanning (what we are now doing) is emphasized to keep costs down.

The guide also includes a listing of motel and hotel chains that have discount plans for senior citizens and a catalogue of the tourism bureaus in all 50 states and 10 provinces. Special attention is given to the matter of staying fit and healthy while travelling. Frankly, my husband and I think it is an absolute "gold mine."

It can be purchased from Pilot Books, 103 Cooper St., Babylon, N.Y. 11702.

Mrs. S.B., Toronto

Dear Mrs. B.:

Thank you for your letter. I too will send for the book. I would like to remind those who plan to send for it to please write to the publisher and not to me.

For some reason lately I have received letters and checks for books recommended in the column. I do not have access to these books. The publishers do.

Dear Jo:

I am writing to you to express my feelings about something that has been troubling me and upsetting my wife for years. I don't even know if you can help us.

We have several grandchildren, and the one we are most proud of is in his last year of law studies at a university out west. He, like many of his Irish ancestors, has the "gift of the gab" so we're pretty sure he'll do well in his chosen profession.

Now for the problem: Whenever he comes to visit us, he dresses in what my wife calls rags. I call it plain sloppy. He is very respectful to us in every other way except in his personal appearance. We don't expect him to arrive in a suit and tie, or the like, just a nice neat shirt and slacks.

Now that I have written out our "complaint," I feel a little small, and I hesitate sending my letter along. Should we just ignore this, or should we say something? We hate to criticize him, we do enjoy his visits. Are we making a mountain out of a molehill? Maybe some of your readers might care to comment.

Grandfather W.

Dear Mr. W.:

I agree a great deal is "said" through the manner of dress by the young; by anyone for that matter. It would be my guess that he just isn't thinking and an indirect suggestion from another family member would solve the problem.

SEMTA's weekend bus fares to rise

Effective Saturday, weekend fares on Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority buses will increase, with the exception of senior citizen and handicapped fares.

Additional revenue generated by the new fare will offset the cost of increased weekend service that SEMTA will soon implement throughout the region.

The adult fare will increase from 75 cents to $1 on Saturdays and Sundays, the youth fare from 50 cents to 75 cents. Transfers will cost an additional 10 cents.

Fares for senior citizens and handicapped riders will remain at 50 cents, with 5 cents charged for transfers.

Passengers transferring from Detroit Department of Transportation buses to SEMTA will be assessed zone charges like weekdays up to a maximum of $1.

What is GLAUCOMA?

Glaucoma is an eye disease that is caused by an increased pressure from the clear, transparent liquid, known as "aqueous humor," inside the eye. This liquid builds pressure around the blood vessels inside the eye, which in turn limits the supply of oxygen to the optic nerve. When the supply of oxygen is cut off, the optic nerve dies, causing permanent blindness.

The sad and alarming fact is that glaucoma usually has no symptoms. However, glaucoma is easily and painlessly detected during a periodic eye examination. Through the use of an ophthalmoscope which checks the health of the optic nerve and a tonometer which measures the pressure level, the symptoms of glaucoma can easily be detected.

Glaucoma can affect people of all ages but is most prevalent in those over 45 years old. The flow of liquid described previously can be restricted by blockage, injury, induced by long term steroid use, or acquired as a birth defect because the drainage components were never fully developed.

The treatment of glaucoma starts with the use of eye drops to control the pressure. If eye drops or other medication fails to control the pressure, surgery is usually necessary. The surgery is a safe, simple and painless procedure, performed in the doctor's office. It is with an Argon Laser, which, through the use of a laser beam, opens the blocked passage so that the liquid may flow and decrease the pressure on the blood vessels.

For more information on this and other eye diseases, please contact The Coburn Clinic.

CText President Larry Moore of Plymouth and CEO Darryl Tjaden check on Amy Ballou's progress at the screen.

Computer firm on solid ground after shaky start

By Philip A. Sherman
staff writer

A publishing-software company that was almost ground out of business 18 months ago closed its 1986 fiscal year with $6 million in sales. It is better than halfway to doubling that figure for fiscal '87.

"We burned through so much money during our first two years you wouldn't believe it," said Larry Moore, the Plymouth resident who is president of CText. The company takes its name from the programming language it uses — "C" — and what they use the language for, creating applications software to process text.

With partner and chief executive officer Darryl Tjaden, CText was built in 1983 on the idea that newspapers and others that need editorial and classified advertising publishing systems don't have to use dedicated, or as Tjaden says, "proprietary" hardware. CText has more than 135 systems worldwide in service today.

Moore and Tjaden are renegades from Hastech, a Manchester, N.H., company that makes and sells electronic typesetting equipment.

They started with three employees in the basement of Moore's Plymouth home, but that lasted just two months. Then they moved to Tjaden's basement for a month and finally secured office space (now 3,000 square feet) off Eisenhower Parkway on Ann Arbor's south side.

It was hard to convince customers they were a growing company while they were sharing a room with a hot water heater, he said.

CText's success stems from its use of off-the-shelf personal computer equipment. The company is a value-added dealer for IBM, a value-added reseller for Apple and a big user of IBM compatibles.

A small engineering staff recalibrates hardware to fit a client's needs or uses the client's existing compatible system to run CText-licensed software packages.

MOORE AND Tjaden say the "open architecture" (which allows users to skip over one-company service technicians and perform their own system modifications) of personal computers guards against obsolescence and allows PCs to be updated as needed.

Computer technology boosts in-home equipment business

By Carolyn Carman
special writer

Home-operated businesses are on the increase, and part of the reason may be the rapidly improving technology of personal computers.

"People are becoming very successful in establishing their own in-home businesses," said Jerry Gabriel, owner of Rainbow Computers of Troy. "The cost is minimal for the types of computers now available."

Computer systems on the market today would have been out of reach of the average buyer just a few years ago, Gabriel said.

"It is opening up new avenues for a whole lot of people."

Gabriel sees two or three people a month who are interested in equipping an in-home office.

The first step in helping a client establish an office in his home is to find out exactly what a client's needs are before recommending a computer system, he said.

"We attempt to work with them and find out their needs and recommend equipment and software that will do the job they need."

Equipping an in-home office with a computer system costs $3,000 to $5,000, he said. Rainbow also sells computer supplies and work stations.

"A work station should run $400 or $500, and you don't need much more space than an ordinary secretarial desk for an adequately equipped home office."

STEWART WASSON, officer manager of Computerland in Livonia, said he has seen the number of customers inquiring about home office computers increase over the past two years.

"I see about three or four a week now where two years ago it was not nearly that — maybe one inquiry a week," Wasson said.

His store sells computer supplies, but furniture must be ordered.

"We can get furniture, but it is not a big seller for us."

Diane Easton of Inacomp Computer Services of Birmingham concurs on the rising popularity of home offices.

"The numbers have increased in the past year," she said. "It is not just large corporations any more."

The first step is to identify the customer's needs because there are more than 10,000 types of software, Easton said.

"Do they want to use it for word processing or accounting, or do they require a data base? You need to know this before you can recommend a system."

Another element is the price and attempting to get customers into a system they can afford that will meet their needs.

Inacomp carries a furniture line, Easton said, and they do see some one-stop shoppers who set up their entire home offices from purchases at Inacomp.

"We have clients who come in and buy it all here."

Inacomp's Birmingham location has experienced dramatic growth in

Expertise

Appraisers develop specialties as profession moves toward licensing

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

Barbara Seichter knows household furnishings. Holding a copy of a gold-plated 17th-century candlestick that could be worth up to $1,600 if it were genuine, she flips it over to reveal the $15 price tag from K mart.

"This explains why you can't look at a photograph to make an appraisal," said Seichter, a Bloomfield Township interior designer. Seichter is part of the recently formed Michigan Appraisers, a branch of the International Society of Appraisers.

"We believe that ethics is part of our profession. Licensing will come. It's already before the state Legislature in Texas," she said.

Seichter and Ruth Rattner, a fine arts appraiser from Birmingham, would like to see Michigan apply a higher standard to the process of appraising personal property. While ISA is a decade old, the Michigan chapter was formed only last spring.

The two, with several colleagues — each specializing in a particular area — have taken several courses offered by the ISA in conjunction with the University of Indiana working toward certification. ISA focuses on personal property only, not real estate.

Classes have focused on ethics, types of appraisals and tax appraisals, which follow strict Internal Revenue Service guidelines and are considered legal documents.

"It's grueling classwork," said Rattner, who has traveled as far as Texas for courses. "And if you don't pass the exams, you're not considered qualified."

THE TWO ARE still working toward certification, which will come upon successful completion of a comprehensive examination.

"Everyone sets themselves up as an appraiser," added Seichter, noting that many consumers simply seek an insurance appraisal from the shop where they purchase their specialty goods, like fine jewelry.

"Insurance companies are beginning to get fussier, asking for qualified appraisals," she said.

"If they accept your appraisal, they are liable. They want authentication because of claims they have to pay."

Rattner and Seichter, both freelance appraisers, think that the day is coming when all insurance companies will demand appraisals by qualified professionals.

Rattner, formerly on the curatorial staff of the Detroit Institute of Arts and an art historian, gets referrals through local galleries, museums and schools.

"It's a marvelous field for young people to get into," she said. "No matter what I know, it's not enough. I've been in the art world 30 years. The decisions you make carry a great deal of weight. You are responsible."

HOLDING UP a limited edition lithograph by American artist Larry Rivers, Rattner describes the process of appraisal. She notes the artist's signature, where it appears, color, that it's sixth of 16 in the series, and any visible damage.

"We do appraisals only from the object," she added.

Insurance and tax appraisals can vary tremendously on the same piece. Tax appraisal is required by the government when a person claims a charitable donation more than $5,000.

"For a tax appraisal, we check records of comparable recent sales. For insurance appraisal, we consider the replacement value," Rattner said, noting that such work often entails exhaustive research.

Rattner is neither an art dealer nor a collector.

"I have no vested interest, nothing to gain," she said.

Her fee is based on the amount of time she spends with her client and on research. A common, less savory tactic is for an appraiser to charge a percentage of the value of the item, often artificially inflating the worth to collect a higher fee, she said.

"CLIENTS USUALLY have art collections ranging from three to 60 pieces," she said. "Most need an insurance appraisal. But I also get referrals from galleries on clients who donate a work of art to a museum or a hospital and need a tax appraisal."

"It's very common for a general appraiser to appraise art in an estate," she said. "Often they're not qualified. They don't have the expertise. We can only specialize in one area. No one can know everything about everything."

Appraising licensing

There are currently 20 chapter members of Michigan Appraisers. Art Lake of Birmingham and Douglas Shubert of Southfield specialize in jewelry. Barbara Book of Bloomfield Hills focuses on antiques.

"We are listed by our specialty in the ISA directory," Seichter said. "I've worked together frequently with a man who is an expert on English porcelain. We network."

Whether individuals get a qualified appraisal "depends on how conscientious and caring a person is of possessions."

"INHERITING GOODS from parent or grandparent to child is the example of when an appraisal can be beneficial."

"Old toys and Depression-era plates have appreciated considerably," said Seichter. "While true antiques appreciate in value, reproductions decrease."

Another tip: know your homeowner's insurance policy. "Most policies cover up to $100,000 on metals, jewelry and silver and brass together with the pots and pans. Have these items specially scheduled," Seichter said.

Regarding tax appraisals, contributors should know they are allowed only fair market value on donations, not the higher replacement value. Both insurance and tax appraisals can be challenged in court. Neither woman has had that experience — yet.

"We keep very careful records of where we came up with the price," said Rattner. "Confidentiality is very important. Our files are locked."

Consumers should ask a potential appraiser for qualifications. "What are their qualifications?" Rattner said. "Ask if they belong to a professional organization. Do they have an area of specialization?" A good appraiser can also help a client find the best market to dispose of the goods, if that should be the case.

"I could advise them where to liquidate to get a fair market price," said Seichter, who is in touch with auction houses across the U.S. and abroad.

"So many people inherit things that are being ruined because they don't know how to care for them properly," said Rattner.

She recalled a family who inherited eight etchings that could be worth $150,000 in total shape. "The framing made them lose a lot of value. It will be expensive to restore them," she said.

Ruth Rattner can be reached at 258-5335, Barbara Seichter at 647-3660. Either can refer an appropriate local appraiser from the ISA chapter.

CText turning the corner

They also point to the added flexibility of a PC-based system. Customers still can run familiar programs or go on-line with a CText program. At some newspapers, reporters write stories on their home PCs using CText software and plug in their work when they get to the office.

For software, CText has licensing agreements with major companies such as Microsoft and Novell to use their programs and write applications that pull the programs together into a database for users, Moore said.

Their editorial program, for example, justifies text, uses an electronic mail system to route stories, counts headlines and is capable of doing two or more functions at once. The program demonstrated simultaneously was able to search for words in stories using the key word "money" while sending a set of stories to a typesetter and letting a reporter continue to write a story.

"We didn't want to reinvent the wheel so when we started we went out and bought every program we could find," Moore said. "They have experts concentrating on things like developing word processing programs — why should we compete with them?" Instead, Moore said, CText started hiring people who were willing to take a fresh approach to building networks of publishing systems. One of their engineers used to be a geography major. Another does all the arrangements for the University of Michigan marching band, Tjaden said. CText just hired its 70th employee.

Twenty-four of those employees are in customer service and offer round-the-clock telephone service. Moore said. Three employees wear beepers and are on call every week-end.

THE TORONTO STAR is the latest and largest newspaper to buy a CText system, according to Moore and Tjaden. Other papers that have bought combination or individual editorial or classified ad systems include the Star-Free Press in Ventura, Calif., the Daily Dispatch in Moline, Ill., and the Ypsilanti Press, which bought a classified ad system. "I like it a lot. It's so easy to use," said Tjaden. "We have an opportunity for up to $150 million in sales."

but users needed just two weeks "to learn it 100 percent, including transferring data from the other system."

Flowing money into development and research was the hardest thing about their first years in business, the partners agree. They also thought they were undercapitalized but never laid anyone off. Moore said 85 percent of CText employees have equity in the company.

During the times when it didn't look like CText was going to work, Moore and Tjaden said they kept themselves going "with the philosophy that we didn't want to quit because we didn't want to fail." Fail they didn't. A measure of their success was being named one of the 70 up-and-coming businesses to watch by Detroit Monthly magazine.

Today their job is to slice business off empires created by industry giants such as ATEC, one of the largest publishing systems available. Tjaden acknowledged there isn't much new business out there so it will come from someone else. "But nobody else is doing what we're doing," Tjaden said. "We have an opportunity for up to $150 million in sales."

In-home businesses add computers

In the past year, Easton said. The staff at the store has tripled in the past six months. She recommends going to a reliable establishment that has a technical department or support staff when buying an in-home system.

RICHARD BERMAN, president of Maple Office and Computer Products in Southfield, said his company added computer systems to its office supply line five years ago. He sees 50-100 customers a month who are interested in home systems and 25-50 of those customers buy systems for home use.

Maple Office also tries first to identify a customer's needs in a home office system.

"Our market is people who use the computer as a tool," Berman said. "The two big things now are the CAD (computer-aided design) system, and the desktop publishing market is exploding."

Berman sells a computer work station comprised of desk, hutch and file cabinet for $300.

"We sell hundreds of this setup. For about $1,500 a customer can be set up with the work station along with an IBM compatible system. We also carry all office supplies for the one-stop shopper."

Mercedes builds for American dreams

The average Mercedes owner is 46 years old and has a median family income of $108,000.

This is the sort of information that is calculated to make you feel guilty if, say, you are pushing 50 and have nothing much to show for your life other than tuition bills for another unemployed law-school graduate.

Nothing these days spells success quite as loudly as driving a Mercedes, at least for you and me.

The truly rich, I hear, are aficionados of cars like Chevy Suburbans, or perhaps a Range Rover or two. Regardless, there are times like when you pull into the discount station at Livorno and Joy — where they chalk the information on the non-working pumps in the window and do a big business selling kerosene for living-room heaters — when it takes a Mercedes to get real respect.

ALL OF which was on my mind last week when the folks at Mercedes-Benz of North America rented the Grosjean Yacht Club, which they do every year about this time, to give their annual State of Mercedes address.

On top of everything else, 1987 hasn't been a particularly good year for Mercedes. Its U.S. sales were off compared to the previous year for only the third time since 1965 — when the company locked up the West Berlin taxi market and got serious about exports. The first two times Mercedes saw a year-to-year sales decline their plants were on strike.

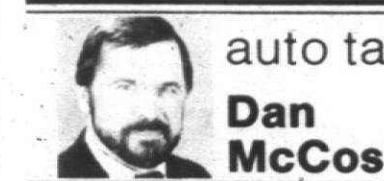

A hat you say. The rich are pretty much like you and me.

Going broke.

BUT MERCEDES buyers aren't exactly motivated by the extraordinary cost of a set of new shocks or other forms of automotive deterioration that normally lead to another 1/2-inch-thick payment book. Look around the next time you are putting in a new air filter in the parking lot at K mart. See any Mercedes?

The explanation offered by Hans Jordan, Mercedes vice president of marketing, for the slump in Mercedes share is that Mercedes buyers were in such a rush to get in on the tax advantages of buying their Mercedes last December it was inevitable that 1987 would suffer by comparison.

Breaks?

auto talk
Dan McCosh

WHAT ABOUT The Crash? Mercedes accounts for about half the cars in the United States selling for more than $30,000, but Jordan says its dealerships were empty only from Black Monday through Grey Wednesday, although he adds, "We are watching November closely."

Despite being so solidly entrenched on top, Hans Jordan knows life isn't all a bed of roses in the status symbol business.

There's Jaguar, BMW, Cadillac, Lincoln, Volvo nipping at his heels. Then Honda, Toyota, Mitsubishi and Nissan are beginning to get comfortable with the crowd that isn't concerned about the price of gas — let alone the exotics: Scorpions, Senators, Lamborghinis... but why go on?

There are more new luxury cars being introduced these days than any other market category. Even Alfa Romeo is making another try.

ALL THESE cars are expensive, although give Mercedes some credit, it makes a few models in the $70,000 range that are giving Rolls Royce a run for its money. But given the proliferation, the nagging question is exactly why is Mercedes the Cadillac of status symbols in America today?

Subaru has more electronics, Honda and Mazda more technological sophistication. Even Pontiac is going into all-wheel drive. No one faults the precision work that goes into a Mercedes, but that doesn't explain the total impact.

Ask the folks at Mercedes what makes their cars so good and you get funny answers. "Quality," they say. "Reliability... taking care of our customers." Used car lot stuff.

I THINK the reality is that Mercedes doesn't really know exactly why they are the best car in America to impress your neighbors. The Germans are logical, and Americans are dreamers.

The result is a nightmare for a logical marketing man. Mercedes sold diesel-powered cars for $35,000 a copy to Americans who claimed it was important to save 4 1/2 cents a gallon on fuel costs. Now that Iran is actually shooting at us, Mercedes finds Americans want at least 300 horsepower.

Street kids steal the emblem off the hood to make necklaces, and Mercedes dealers do a thriving business replacing stars for irritated owners.

Today, more Americans dream about owning a Mercedes more than any other car. But headlines are going up, stocks are down, and the kids are driving Jeeps instead of sports cars.

It turns out that Mercedes is ready. They're working on four-wheel drive, V-12 engines — more logical stuff for an illogical market. It's what they're best at.

Turkey time

Dan Greenberg, Observer & Eccentric film critic (left), talks to young filmmakers David Stern of Southfield and David Lee of Birmingham during a taping of the "Arts in Review" cable TV program, filmed on the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

Enjoying independence

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

ARDENTLY COMMITTED to filmmaking are David Stern, 27, of Southfield and David Lee, 26, of Birmingham, whose independent films premiered recently on a program at Detroit's Wayne State University. Three years ago, sitting in a small coffeehouse in midtown Manhattan, Stern and Lee spoke passionately about making a short independent film. The results were Stern's "Suite Harry" and Lee's "Curtains Baby Blues," which were shown at WSU.

"Suite Harry" is a 24-minute color film about a young music student who discovers an alcoholic ex-symphonist cellist rummaging through back alley trash cans near Orchestra Hall. The music student helps the drunken cellist recover his self-respect, his art and, ultimately, his dignity.

Stern noted the gracious cooperation of the Orchestra Hall management at one of seven locations in the film.

"It seemed to me to be the hardest of locations to find but they (Orchestra Hall management) were really accepting of the idea and very cooperative. But the problem was in the abandoned warehouse—One reason that they are abandoned is that they are unsafe and that causes all sorts of insurance and liability problems.

"WE HAD TO DO a lot of work to make the warehouse safe. There were no stairs to the second floor so we had to build stairs to get everyone and all the equipment up to the second floor."

It is in the warehouse where the derelict, drunken cellist, played by Sinischo, is confronted by the music student (Jerry Rippe) and forced to face his past and regain his dignity. Stern now lives in Southfield, but his past includes Chicago, Miami and New York University's Film School where he studied from 1979 to 1983. As many young film professionals do, he worked for a variety of commercial film production houses in Manhattan, always learning and polishing his craft.

It was in New York that the two Detroiters met and worked together. Lee graduated from Birmingham's Seaborn High School in 1979 and then attended Michigan State where he studied writing and film history with screenwriter Jim Cash ("Top Gun" and "The Secret of My Success"). He also moved to New York and worked for several production companies producing corporate promotional videos.

Lee's 27-minute film, "Curtains Baby Blues," was shot in New York and is very different from Stern's mood piece about success, failure and rejuvenation.

"CURTAINS BABY Blues" chronicles the fateful day when three movie characters discover that their creator, a frustrated screenwriter, is writing their dramatic and fiery demise.

'I suddenly had an art director, a production manager, sound people, they came in from all over the place, 30 people with equipment and lights set and waiting.'

—David Lee

The film's most interesting irony is that a psychological film dealing with a writer's inner torment can do so successfully, in black and white and color, with many scenes shot on exterior locations in New York.

The film opens with a graceful, blue-toned montage of Manhattan landscapes. "That was one of the finest parts of making the film. The film was finished and I had planned that I quit my job for months beforehand. I quit my job so I had my days, and I just walked around the city for weeks looking for the best shots, that looked like old New York."

"Eventually we had 30 or 40 sites picked out and we rented a car — my cameraman, Skip, and myself — and we just drove for 16 hours straight setting up the camera and taking the shots."

"We got some truly beautiful views. I was trying my best to capture New York City like they do in all the old films."

Those who have seen "Curtains Baby Blues" will agree that Lee's passion and commitment have paid off. The world of filmmakers who support themselves by filming commercials and industrial videos, or tending bar if they have to, is a special place.

"WHEN I FIRST started it wasn't a matter of hand-picking one or two people. There was one person who got involved in my film — it was in New York. Just by chance, I was driving a van for a guy on a camera shoot. He was a cameraman, a very accomplished New York cameraman named Skip Roesel. Lee said,

"He read my script and he didn't have a whole lot to do at that time

All in all, it's a pleasure: 'Second Time Around'

Because of school functions, final performances of the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Second Time Around" by Henry Denkler will not be held this weekend but next weekend, Friday-Saturday, Nov. 20-21. For ticket information, call 451-1853.

By Bob Weibel
Special Writer

No doubt an endless number of storylines could be spun off songwriter Sammy Cahn's memorable if somewhat sentimental line, "Love is lovelier the second time around."

The Plymouth Theatre Guild opened the season with playwright Henry Denkler's version, simply titled, "Second Time Around." Despite some uneven performances, director Clemie Cyburt has fashioned a fairly entertaining evening of theater. First of all, Denkler has crafted a clever comedy about love in our Golden Years. Here's the setup: The spouse has died, you're collecting Social Security — then suddenly one day across the room in the doctor's office your eyes meet — and you get that old feeling. You're in love again. Courtship is wonderful. Unfortunately, telling the kids turns into a disaster (especially the part about living together instead of getting married, to avoid losing Social Security money). Connie Fox and Walter Kerwick turn in good performances as geriatric lovers. She is especially charming when she says, "I just want to do all the things women dream of doing in the first marriage."

haired lecher." Rick Boldman has a way with sarcastic lines as he puts down his mother's suitor as a "dirty old white-haired lecher."

Also appearing as assorted relatives and lovers are Camilla Longley, Paul Cybert and Laurel Twichell.

The set, while sparsely decorated, is tastefully done.

Bob Weibel of Westland is a freelance writer, who has spent more than 25 years in community theater as a director, designer and performer.

and he said he would do it for free. "He had his own camera and he did a beautiful job shooting it, and as soon as he was involved people started falling into the project."

"I suddenly had an art director, a production manager, sound people, they came in from all over the place, 30 people with equipment and lights set and waiting."

Stern had a similar experience as he tapped into the extensive sub-culture of Detroit-area filmmakers, who earn their keep as they can so that they can make films.

"The fact is that when I came to Detroit, I didn't know anybody and didn't know how to go about gathering a crew, but I was lucky enough to talk to a couple of people who led me to John Prusak, who was my cinematographer."

"JOHN, LIKE SKIP in New York, had a very big following here in Detroit and once he said yes to the project, the pieces just fell together."

Prusak is well-known in the Detroit area as film instructor at the Ford Vocational-Technical High School in Wayne-Westland and former president of the Detroit Area Film Teachers. He is best-known, however, as cinematographer and filmmaker.

Stern and Lee plan to enter their films in as many film festivals as they can to gain exposure for their work.

"They intend, as well, to continue making films with the passion and commitment that brought "Sui Harry" and "Curtains Baby Blue" to the screen."

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village
Presents Yet Another Great Invention.
The new Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village Annual Pass might pale in comparison to the first Model T Ford or Edison's original light bulb. But, we think you'll agree, it's still a pretty nifty invention.
Not to mention a great deal.
Because during our introductory offer, from November 6, 1987, to January 4, 1988, you can pick up an Annual Pass for $18 (that's only a dollar more than one-time admission to the Museum and Village!).
There's even a Pass for children priced at $9. Each lets you visit us every day for one full year, stay as long as you want and start saving money after just one visit.
And we guarantee you'll visit the Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village, Dearborn.
After all, there's more to see and do here than ever before. Including a completely new $6 million Automobile in American Life exhibition. Our special "Streamlining" exhibit. The authentic Firestone Farm. And Edison's newly restored Menlo Park Lab.
That's in addition to our changing displays and special events. Like our Christmas celebration and The Howard Brothers Miniature Circus.
So start thinking about buying an Annual Pass. Start thinking about who'd like one for Christmas. Start dialing 271-9363 to order by credit card. Or start the car and head out to Dearborn for the great American museum that's also great fun.

Buddy's Pizza

Buddy's Rendezvous Pizza Restaurants are a longtime tradition in metropolitan Detroit. The original Buddy's on Conant and Six Mile Road was a blind pig in 1936. In 1945 it was converted to a "respectable" business establishment. In the early years, it was a favorite of the Italian-American community. Throughout the years, Buddy's has opened restaurants in four suburban locations — Farmington Hills, Livonia, Waterford and Warren. The menu ranges from Buddy's deep-dish square pizza to Antipasto and Greek salads.

IT COSTS A LOT TO SAY YES TO THE ABUSED.

BUT WE CAN'T AFFORD TO SAY NO.

The pain caused by child abuse can't be measured by bruises alone. They eventually heal. The emotional pain, however, can linger for an entire lifetime. To prevent child abuse and its consequences, the United Foundation Torch Drive supports 17 agencies that offer help.

Last year, you helped fund these agencies with $4.4 million. This year, the need has grown. Your contribution must reach more abused children in need of counseling, protective services and shelter.

So please give more to the Torch Drive and help fund 153 health and human service agencies in the tri-county area. Agencies that help not only the abused, but also the handicapped, the elderly, the homebound, the hungry, the underprivileged and many others. It costs a lot to say yes. But, to heal the emotional pain, we can't afford to say no.

Databases improving networking

Recognizing the need for timely, accurate and reliable information to assist with decision making is crucial if business owners are to take full advantage of networking.

As mentioned last week, networking can occur at several different levels. Attending industry seminars, conferences and workshops is one way that business professionals can gain access to others to exchange ideas, knowledge and information.

At another level, networking may be used to enhance the communication function of a business among all of its employees — regardless of their position.

IN THIS situation, networking is used to promote a continuous flow of information so employees may take an active role in suggesting new ideas and ways of doing things to improve operational performance.

Networking may also be used to bring together independent business owners serving the needs of the same or similar markets to better serve these markets as a group.

This type of networking has been going on for years (a business owner asking his marketing consultant to recommend a reputable accountant, patent attorney or personnel specialist).

Beyond this, business owners are now taking advantage of information through database access among members of a network.

AS AN example, a network of business professionals serving the needs of small business may transfer useful information in a matter of

focus: small business

minutes to one another as well as to clients with compatible computer systems. In this situation, information technology is used to enhance the networking process.

As business owners and managers, becoming involved in the "right" network for your business requires identifying what your information needs are as well as the resources available to meet these needs.

Many business professionals are interested primarily in establishing contacts in hopes of generating new business. Although a reasonable goal, expanding your client base doesn't happen without first developing the image, credibility and reputation among existing customers or other network members.

FOR ADDITIONAL information on networking, Ruth Ziegler will be speaking on "Methods to Maximize Networking Success" Tuesday, Nov. 17, at the Machus Sly Fox, 725 S. Hunter, Birmingham.

The event is sponsored by Ask the Consultant, an association of 14 independent advisory professionals working together to meet the needs of small business. Fee is $20 with reservation or $25 at the door. To make a reservation, call Judy Vindici at 258-5314.

Mary DiPaolo is the owner of MarkeTrends, a Farmington Hills-based business consulting firm. She is also producer and host of the cable television series, "Focus: The Small Business Environment."

Cogeneration takes hold

Colleges revive energy concept

Cogeneration, producing two forms of energy from a single source, is a new-old idea. And it's taken hold at two nearby colleges.

Both the University of Michigan-Dearborn and Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti, recently unveiled new cogeneration systems to meet energy and heating needs.

The systems take in natural gas, converting it to electricity. Steam produced in the process is captured as a heating source. They are expected to save their schools hundreds of thousands each year in energy costs.

"A typical generating plant converts about 35 percent of useful energy to electricity and the rest is heat," UM-D facilities management director Robert West said. "In this case, we are capturing the bulk of heat and using it to heat or cool our buildings."

The UM-D system, the smaller of the two, uses a 350-kilowatt gas fired generator.

It's also 10 times less expensive. The UM-D system cost $430,000 to build and should be paid off in three years, a university spokesman said.

"We're projecting it will save us about $150,000 a year in energy costs," university spokesman Steven Waasko said.

It will meet 60 percent of the campus steam needs and 20 percent of electrical needs, according to university estimates.

The $4.5 million Eastern Michigan system, 10 times as large, will meet 88 percent of the university's electrical needs and heat 95 percent of the campus, according to university president John W. Porter.

Expected first-year savings, $850,000, will be used to automate the university library, Porter said. Over time, the system is expected to save the university $1 million a year in energy costs.

The system will be paid off through a 10-year bond issue, a university spokeswoman said. Expected energy savings will help retire the bonds.

Cogeneration has been around for a long time, energy experts said, but has only recently been considered a viable energy producing source.

"Essentially, it's an old technology," said Steven Ewing, president and chief operating officer of Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. "But for a long while it fell into disuse."

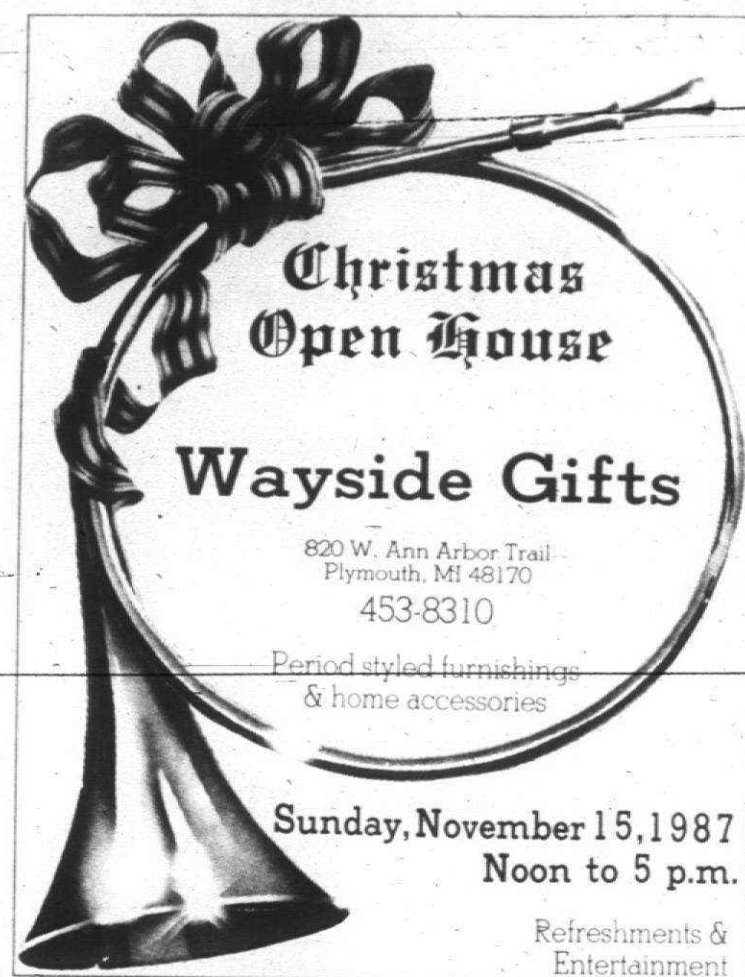

MichCon is supplying gas to both systems.

The 1970s energy crisis rekindled interest in the process, however, industry experts said that era's cost differences between electricity and natural gas weren't attractive enough to spur companies into building cogeneration systems.

The federal Public Utility Regulatory Policy Act of 1978, upheld by a U.S. Supreme Court ruling five years later, helped clear the way. So did rising electric prices and falling prices for natural gas.

Automotive plants and other heavy energy users have already incorporated cogeneration systems in their plants.

"Right now, there are about 20 systems," Ewing said.

House bill bans job use of lie detectors

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Nov. 6.

HOUSE

LIE DETECTOR TESTS — By a vote of 254 for and 158 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 1212) outlawing lie detector tests on employees and job applicants in most areas of the private sector.

The bill exempts firms doing intelligence work for the government as well as companies employing security guards and pharmaceutical workers. It does not restrict the use of polygraphs by federal, state and local governments.

Labor and civil libertarian lobbyists generally supported the bill, but the Reagan administration and most business groups opposed it.

Supporter Jim Jeffords, R-Vt., said "We do not need polygraphs in a free society like ours."

Opponent George Darden, D-Ga., called the polygraph "a legitimate investigative tool for all private industry."

All area members voted yes in support of the bill. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

EXEMPTING BANKS — By a vote of 184 for and 237 against, the House rejected an amendment to exempt federally regulated financial institutions such as banks from the legislation (above) prohibiting lie detector tests in most of the private sector.

Amendment supporter Chaimers Wylie, R-Ohio, said polygraph testing is needed "to protect the integrity of savings, lending and trading institutions that are at the heart of our economy."

Opponent Pat Williams, D-Mont., said "this outdated, timeworn, unscientific device called a lie detector" will not further honesty in financial institutions.

Members voting yes wanted financial institutions to be able to use lie detector tests on workers.

Voting yes: Broomfield.

Voting no: Pursell, Hertel, Ford, Levin.

TO ARREST MEMBERS — By a vote of 65 for and 130 against, with 238 members absent, the House rejected a motion "that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to arrest the absent members" during the session of Monday, Nov. 2.

The motion was sponsored by Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., as part of a GOP protest against the leadership tactics of speaker Jim Wright, D-Tex. Wright the week before had used what critics said were autocratic stalling and arm-twisting tactics to gain passage by one vote of a $14.5 billion deficit-reduction bill.

A yes vote was in support of dispatching federal marshals to arrest absent House members.

Voting no: Hertel, Levin, Broomfield.

Net voting: Pursell, Ford.

SENATE

INDEPENDENT COUNSELS — By a vote of 85 for and 10 against, the Senate passed a bill (S 1293) extending for five years the law providing for the appointment of special prosecutors who are essentially independent of the Justice Department.

The purpose of the Watergate-era law is to steer around conflicts of interest that arise when an administration investigates itself.

Roll Call Report

Under the law, a U.S. appellate court panel can, upon the recommendation of the attorney general, appoint an independent counsel to probe alleged wrongdoing by high executive branch officials.

The bill, which was sent to conference with the House, also limits the attorney general's ability to recommend against appointment of an independent counsel.

Senators voting yes supported the bill. Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle voted yes.

TO PROBE LAWMAKERS — By a vote of 49 for and 46 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to enable independent counsels to probe members of Congress along with high executive branch officials. The amendment was offered to S 1293 (above).

Madonna celebrates 40 years

If it's true that life begins at 40, then Madonna College has finally come alive. The school hit the big 40 last weekend and held a birthday bash for itself. There was a five-kilometer run in the morning to get things moving, a four-hour party for more than 1,500 with food, magic, prizes and games in the afternoon and a blowout dance at night at Fox Hills Country Club. Michelle Reska of Livonia, (below) a student at Madonna, appears to be standing on the back of a passing car, but she was actually standing on the school's sign and holding another sign announcing the party. One of the joyous celebrants was Sister Mary Francilene, the school president, caught placing a pin on the lapel of George Coombe.

Rocks, Chiefs meet again for cage title

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Heather Miller has been a key player for the Canton Chiefs, providing solid defense and strong play underneath the basket.

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

It's a game that has been taking shape for two months, a game that offers a fitting conclusion to the Western Lakes Activities Association girls basketball season.

Defending champion Plymouth Salem, ranked No. 4 in Class A, and its chief rival Plymouth Canton, a Class A honorable mention, will meet to decide the 1987 league winner at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Rocks' gymnasium.

Salem and Canton left no doubt they were the best teams in their respective divisions and are the WLAA's premier ballclubs as they went unbeaten (12-0) in league play.

The two are no strangers, however. They have played twice, both games taking place within the first two weeks of the season, and the Rocks have won both. Salem carries an 18-1 record into Saturday's showdown; the Chiefs come in at 15-4.

"Both teams have had tremendous success this season, so the chance to play again was almost inevitable," Salem coach Fred Thomann said. "We knew we were going to play them again at some point in the season."

THIS WILL certainly not be their last meeting this fall, either. The Rocks and Chiefs will face each other just five days later on Thursday, Nov. 19, in the opening round of the district tournament to be played at Canton.

The Western Lakes championship game has turned out to be a Salem-Canton show for a third consecutive year. The Rocks, who boast the state's top individual talent in senior Dena Head, also have won both of those games and will be trying to make it three in a row under Thomann.

Canton coach Rob Neu noted Detroit Southwestern's boys team has been a loser in the last six Class A finals, but the Prospectors have been one of two teams to vie for the championship.

"We're getting there and playing in the big game," Neu said. "It's not a big game if there's not the chance that you'll lose."

"You always like to play for a championship, and we've earned that right. That's a great feeling. Whatever transpires it will be a great experience."

THE ROCKS opened the season with a 60-50 win over Canton and then suffered their only setback, a 52-49 loss to Livonia Ladywood in the Great Lakes Tournament.

Salem rebounded to beat Detroit DePorres in the consolation game, Canton again (47-33) and Farmington Hills Mercy before mowing down 14 league opponents, including two in the playoffs, to establish a 17-game winning streak heading into Saturday's contest.

"What happened between Games 1 and 2 will be different than what happens in Game 20," Thomann said. "We've made some changes and adjusted as the season went on."

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Thomann doesn't mean changes such as the lineup or playing style, but rather a refining process that occurs during the course of a season.

"We're better decision makers with regard to the running game, with the offense versus man or zone," he said. "We've just done a better job of taking advantage of what teams are doing to us."

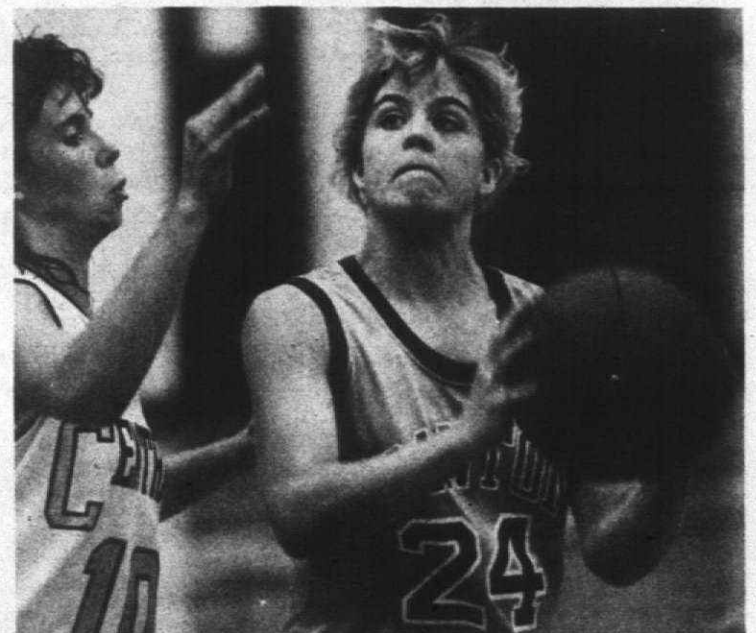

"AND I think we're a much better team than we were at the beginning of the season."

Thomann noted that Head was a great player when the season began, center Barb Krug, guard Jill Estey and forward Keri McBride have gotten better and Stacy Sovine, Teri King and Shelley Bohlen are improved players as well.

Head, of course, is the player the Rocks look to when they need points, and she is averaging 28.8. But she is not the only one who can score, and scoring is not the only thing she does on the court.

In fact, the 5-foot-10½ All-Stater can do it all as evidenced by the fact Sophomore Stacie Thompson has given the Chiefs added strength around the basket since being called up from the junior varsity team.

girls basketball

The following are summaries of the two games played earlier this season between Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton in girls basketball.

GAME ONE

Salem survived a second-half rally to defeat Canton 60-50 in the season opener for both teams Sept. 3 at Canton.

Dena Head scored a game-high 24 points, all in the first half as the Rocks took a 37-25 lead into halftime. The Chiefs climbed to within seven points at the end of the third quarter, 46-39. But the Rocks held on as center Barb Krug scored 10 of her 12 points in the second half. Jill Estey and Keri McBride finished with 10 apiece, combining for 13 points in the last two quarters.

Susan Ferko paced a balanced Canton attack with 11 points, which included 7-of-10 shooting at the free-throw line. Amanda Bell and Heather Miller scored 10 apiece, and Michelle Fortier and Karen Boluch added eight apiece.

GAME TWO

The second meeting on Sept. 17 at Salem was just the opposite of the first. Canton held the lead early in the game, and the Rocks won 47-33 with a successful second-half rally.

Dena Head scored 12 of her 14 points in the fourth quarter. After the Chiefs tied the score at 31, Head scored 10 of Salem's last 16 points.

Barb Krug had 12 points and 11 rebounds, and Jill Estey added 10 points and eight assists. In addition, Head also had 16 rebounds and five assists.

Canton was led by center Karen Boluch, who scored a game-high 16 points. Susan Ferko was next with six points.

School's best season ends with state meet

Plymouth Canton concluded its most successful season in girls cross country Saturday by making its first appearance in the Class A championships and finishing 11th out of nearly 30 teams.

"We wanted to be in the top 10 and just missed, but that doesn't mean we weren't successful," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "I thought we ran real competitive for the whole meet."

The Chiefs were as consistent as they have been all season — less than a minute separated the five runners who scored — but they had to overcome some pre-meet jitters first.

"I knew the girls were really nervous when they stopped talking about an hour before the meet," Przygodski said.

"Once the gun goes off all that leaves, but they were in awe of being there," he added. "It was the first time at a meet of that magnitude for those kids."

CANTON WAS led by Cindy Spessard, who has been one of the team's top three runners all season but enjoyed an especially strong finish. She was 47th overall with a 20:36 time, and teammate Lori Penland was close behind, running the race in 20:44 and taking 52nd place.

Lynda Schendel was 61st at 21:01,

Missy Jasnowski 83rd at 21:21 and Sherry Figurski 96th at 21:31. The seven-person team included Cathy McCabe in 114th place (21:43) and Sherry Sweeney in 141st (22:31).

"It was a good meet for us, because it did two things," Przygodski said. "No. 1, it gave us state meet experience, which we didn't have any of. No. 2, it showed us what we have to do team-wise to be one of the best teams in the state."

The Chiefs will lose Figurski and Sweeney, both seniors, to graduation in June, but most of the team that won the Western Lakes championship, the Schoolcraft Invitational crown and was second to eventual state champ Ann Arbor Pioneer in the regional will be back next year.

Spessard and Schendel are juniors. Penland, Jasnowski, McCabe and Adrienne Garrow, who filled in for McCabe in the league meet, are sophomores.

"It's been a great year," Przygodski said. "I think we did more than we ever dreamed we would."

"We got an inkling of what we could do at Schoolcraft and kept building on that."

"We plan on coming back again next year (to the state meet)."

Chris Kovath charges upfield against Dearborn Fordson. The senior halfback rushed for 50 yards on 14 carries and intercepted a pass in the defensive struggle.

Vergari is 13th in 'A' state meet

Doug Vergari meant business when he traveled to Lansing with his Plymouth Salem teammates for the Class A boys cross country meet Saturday.

Vergari ran an outstanding race and captured 13th place in the team event. He covered the course in 16:28 to highlight the Rocks' performance.

Salem didn't have enough runners close enough to Vergari, however, to crack the top 10 as far as team scores.

Bill Atwell placed 76th at 17:21. Al Rye was 98th (17:37), Scott Stryker 99th (17:37) and Brendon Masterson 106th (17:40). Salem's seven-man contingent included Jason Drury in 125th place (17:58) and Dave Hampton in 131st (18:01).

Plymouth Canton's Jay Swiecki and Plymouth Christian's Randy Gauthier fared well in the Class A and D individual races, respectively.

SWIECKI capped his senior season by capturing 20th place and posting a 16:51 time. Walled Lake Western's Brian Grosso won the individual contest (15:50), and Bridgeport's Paul Butterfield was first in the team race (15:36).

"Gauthier had a pretty respectable place for the state meet," Christian coach Steve Bauslaugh said. "There's tough competition up there (Wyoming Lee High School); there were no weak runners at all."

The highest a Plymouth Christian runner has ever placed at state is 20th, and Gauthier fell one position shy.

"He wanted to get above 20, so he could claim he had the highest finish by a runner from our school," Bauslaugh said.

"That's why he was a little disappointed, but he always has next year. That will make him a little hungrier for next season."

Shamrocks face well-rounded foe

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Tom Mach calls his next playoff opponent, Sterling Heights, a "complete team."

The Redford Catholic Central coach hasn't seen the unbeaten Stallions because Sterling Heights coach Bob Miles would not exchange films, but Mach's scouts have already filed their reports.

"Our freshman and JV coaches have seen them twice," said Mach, who takes his 9-1 Shamrocks into enemy territory again on Saturday. "Sterling Heights is a good team that's been scoring a lot of points. They have a big line, maybe bigger than ours."

The Stallions' defense has been just as impressive statistically as CC's, allowing only five touchdowns all season.

Offensively, Sterling Heights is averaging more than 30 points per game.

"Overall they're a well-developed team," Mach said. "They seem to be a big play team. But they're a hard team to measure when you're beating everybody like they have."

WHILE CC WAS involved in a knock-down, drag-out fight last Saturday in a state Class A playoff opener at Dearborn Fordson (a 14-7 CC win), Sterling Heights was romping to an easy victory over Detroit Public School League champion Chadsey, 37-6.

The Stallions opened up a 24-0 halftime lead, and according to Mach, had already run 50 plays by intermission.

Sterling Heights quarterback Chris Demtrial hit 5-of-6 first-half passes, two going for touchdowns. And the Stallions already had racked up 161 yards on the ground.

"What they run differently is the veer offense," said Mach. "They like to dive wide and then they like. They have two good backs. They like to hit quick with either guy."

KYLE WOLFE, a 5-foot-9, 175-pound senior, led the Stallions with 183 yards in 23 carries against Chadsey. His running mate, Mike Brook, had scored a pair of touchdowns before leaving the game in the third quarter with a twisted ankle.

But the key to Saturday's game may boil down to how CC deals with Demtrial's passing. If the Stallions open things up, CC's secondary of Chris Kovath, Jerry Rioux, Steve Searlag and Chris Johnston will have to be on the alert.

But in last week's win over Fordson, the Shamrocks proved once again that it takes more than a running team to beat them. Fordson's attempt to spring free tailback Fouad "Walker" Zaban proved unsuccessful as he rushed for only 35 yards in 23 carries. Earlier in the year, CC's defense held Birmingham-Brother Rice standout Jason Wolf to less than 80 yards in a 10-7 double overtime win.

football

In the win over Fordson, CC senior linebacker Scott McKee, who calls the defensive signals, made 15 tackles. And nose guard Erik Knuth disrupted many of Fordson's blocking schemes. Knuth also recovered a fumble to set up the winning touchdown in the final quarter.

CC's OFFENSE will be matched against a 6-2 defensive front manned by the hefty and mobile Stallions.

"They have a lot of linemen going both ways," Mach said. "They have the same guys going at you on both sides."

The Region IV playoff final gets under way at 1:30 p.m. Sterling Heights is located on 12901 15 Mile Road, just west of Schoenherr. The CC-Sterling Heights winner will face the Brother Rice-Grosse Pointe South Region III champion in the state semifinals Saturday, Nov. 21, at Walled Lake Central High School.

she averages 12½ rebounds, 6.2 steals, 7.3 assists and 3.2 blocked shots.

Estey has taken on a greater scoring role this year and is averaging 13 points. Krug and McBride a little more than nine apiece.

THE 6-1 Krug and 5-11 McBride also help Head with the rebounding, pulling down 9½ and five carsoms a game, respectively. And Estey remains the floor leader, contributing an impressive 9.2 assists and 5½ steals.

The Rocks have blown teams away when they get their transition game going full tilt, but Thomann noted the Chiefs work extremely hard at their transition defense.

"We like that game," he said. "If we get a chance to run we will, but we might not have many opportunities against Canton."

"Obviously, we've been a flow team where our pressure defense has forced turnovers and given us some easy scores. But when we run our half-court offense we have to have patience and good shot selection."

But offense won't be the determining factor Saturday. From years of experience, Thomann knows better.

"I'VE BEEN around a long time and involved with teams that won championships, and all of them played good defense," he said. "If we want to be conference and district champions, we have to play good defense. That's where it all starts."

Canton began the season 1-4, but the Chiefs have won their last 14 in a row. Neu's team got toughened up early, losing to Salem twice. Traverse City in the Mercy Hoops Classic and Catholic League champion Birmingham Marian in its first five games.

"If I had to do it over again, I would do it exactly the same way," Neu said. "It was those games that gave us a look at what we had and helped us to evaluate where we were and what we needed to do."

"The girls remember those games. They've experienced some tough opponents, they've been down, they've been beaten. And they've drawn on those games to help us win of late."

"The Chiefs don't have the single great player like Salem does in Head, but Canton puts a well-balanced team on the court."

Guard Jill Estey will direct Salem's floor game in Saturday's championship contest against Plymouth Canton. She is her team's second-leading scorer and is averaging nearly 10 assists a game. Estey is challenged here by Beth Wilson of John Glenn.

SENIOR KAREN Boluch is the leading scorer and rebounder, averaging 14 points and 12½ carsoms. Susan Ferko has had "an outstanding sophomore season," Neu said, and is next in scoring with an 11-point average. Senior Heather Miller is a tough inside player and averages nine points, and Amanda Bells is a definite outside threat, averaging 8½ points.

Ferko and Miller are good for five rebounds per game, and Candi Jones is the unsung hero of the team, according to Neu. She is one of several who make the Chiefs an excellent defensive ballclub and "steps up and forces the other team to play," Neu said.

"We prepared for this time of season," he said, adding the Chiefs didn't necessarily point for a rematch with Salem. "If it's Salem we play, then that's all that much better."

Salem has an outstanding group of girls who can flat out play basketball. Now add to that the fact it's the two Plymouth/Canton schools competing and add the community involvement, and you've created a great environment for high school basketball."

As the two teams proved beyond a doubt in recent weeks, they deserve to be playing for the championship. Now they will play the most important game to date.

"(Canton and Salem) have worked real hard," Neu said. "We've paid our dues. So it's time to go out, enjoy ourselves, put it all on the table and see what you've got."

Harrison girls put stop to long losing streak

The monkey is finally off their collective backs.

No, the sounds too simple. It doesn't accurately reflect the strain and burden the Farmington Harrison Hawks girls basketball team has endured.

Better make that the weight of the world, instead.

"You got that right," said Hawks coach Jim Neve after the Hawks ended the state's longest losing streak one game shy of the century mark Saturday.

"I've never seen 10 girls cry as hard as they did, they were so happy. It was unbelievable. I can't explain it."

THE HAWKS, who were 0-17 this season, had not won a game in four years and were winless in their last 99 outings, put an end to the dreaded streak with a 34-31 victory over Livonia Churchill in the Western Lakes playoffs at Plymouth Salem.

"They lost for so long," Neve said, "but they took it like professionals when they won."

They hugged each other and shook hands with the other team. They didn't embarrass anybody, or make the other team look bad, by whooping it up.

Neve said each of his players rose earlier Saturday morning to attend a 2:15 a.m. team breakfast. It was to be a time of preparation for their 10 a.m. game as well, and Neve said he could tell his team was eager to play.

"They played their hearts out," he said. "They did the whole thing. I just sat there and called a few timeouts."

THEY WANTED it so bad they

girls basketball

could taste it. They came out on the floor and said, 'We feel confident.'

"I'm just so happy for the girls," he added. "I can't express to you what was there (emotionally) on the sideline when they won."

The Hawks led 12-11 at halftime, extended that to 25-19 after three quarters and were in front by nine points with two minutes remaining.

But then Churchill's Dawn Gabrielle hit a three-point shot, "and I said, oh, boy, here it goes," Neve said. "But we got it up court and just stalled the time out."

Lesley Devine sank three three-point field goals herself and led the Hawks with 11 points, and Karen Najarian scored 10. Lanell Shoemaker had 15 rebounds and Darcy Pinz1 10.

GABRIELLE had seven points and Gretchen Lloyd 10 carsoms for the Chargers, who had beaten Harrison 27-25 on Oct. 27.

"There was never a time when one girl turned against another (during the losing streak)," Neve said. "If one was down, someone patted her on the back."

I look upon each one of those girls as though they're mine," he added. "I say to their parents I know they're your daughters, but I think of them as my daughters, too."

Marian downs Blazers in final

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Birmingham Marian led all the way Sunday in capturing its second consecutive Catholic League 3-B Division basketball title, scoring a 57-48 victory over Livonia Ladywood in a game played at the University of Detroit's Calihan Hall.

Marian (17-2) received another strong game from 6-foot-3 senior center Kathy Phillips, who scored 15 points and blocked 10 shots before fouling out with 3:17 left in the game. The Mustangs' senior forward Jennifer Shasky carried the offensive load by scoring a game-high 22 points.

Marian led 14-9 after one quarter and by as many as 11 points in the second before Ladywood closed the gap to two at the half, 24-22.

But the Mustangs' full-court pressure and inside strength began to wear on the Blazers at the outset of the third quarter.

The Mustangs reeled off 10 straight points before Ladywood could answer.

MARIAN MAINTAINED that cushion through most of the fourth quarter, but Ladywood made a late run when Phillips went to the bench with her fifth personal foul.

A basket by Ann Marie Thomas with 2:21 remaining closed the Marian lead to 50-47, but the Mustangs got a big basket from Shelby Young with 1:49 to go and they were never headed the rest of the way.

"I think everybody went 'On, my God,' when Jennifer fouled out," said Marian coach Mary Lillie. "But the other kids realized what had to be done."

With Phillips out, Ladywood tried to take advantage by punching the ball inside to its top scorer, 6-2 Katie McNulty.

"We had Shelby front her (McNulty) and then we had somebody cheat to the weakside to try to help out and it seemed to work," Lillie said.

McNulty led the Blazers with 15

girls basketball

points, Thomas contributed 14 and Yvonne Barnett added 10.

But the Blazers missed a ton of layups, including some critical ones down the stretch, and Phillips had a major part in that.

"KATHY WAS just awesome today," said the Marian coach. "She had McNulty timed real well. They've played against each other so many times she knew what McNulty would do and that was take the body and try to get as close to the basket as possible."

The two teams split during the regular season with Ladywood taking the last outing by overcoming a 10-point deficit in the final quarter.

We were feeling the pressure this year since we won it the last year, but the loss to Ladywood was so good because we felt we knocked in that game," said Lillie.

But by winning the rematch, the Mustangs can now concentrate on the state tournament.

Phillips went to the bench with her fifth personal foul. The two teams will play at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the annual Operation Friendship final. The first game of the double-header at 5:30 p.m. at Calihan pits PSL runner-up King against Catholic League C-D Division champ Detroit DePortes, which romped to an easy 59-27 triumph Sunday over Redford St. Mary's.

"This is the game we wanted, going up against the Public School League kids," Lillie said. "Last year we didn't play very well in a loss to King and we want to come back and score something."

With the loss, Ladywood fell to 14-4 overall. The Blazers may be picking up a non-league game this week to close out the regular season before entering the state district tournament.

Another league title is goal for Marlins

The next challenge will be the Catholic League swimming and diving championships.

Farmington Hills Mercy concluded an unbeaten dual-meet season Tuesday by downing rival Birmingham Marian 113-53 at Oakland Community College. The Marlins finished 9-0.

Mercy will be going after an incredible 24th consecutive league title Sunday, Nov. 22, when the entire league gets together at OCC.

The Marlins had two swimmers with a pair of individual victories in their season finale. Becky Wiquist captured the 200- and 100-yard freestyle races in 2:04.83 and 57.8, respectively, and freshman Polly Tenuta won the individual medley in 2:28.09 and the 500 freestyle in 5:32.6.

Wiquist also anchored the 400 freestyle relay team, which defeated the Mustangs with a 3:58.0 time.

Pioneers split volleyball matches

A trip north to the Upper Peninsula might have been a trip into a far west time zone, the way Oakland County's volleyball team responded to it. The Lady Pioneers lost at Northern Michigan Friday in four games, 15-11, 18-16, 6-15, 15-10, then staged a desperate comeback to edge Michigan Tech Saturday at Tech, 3-15, 7-15, 15-8, 16-14, 15-10.

Tracey Jones paced OU against Tech with 18 kills in 41 attacks with just two errors (390 kill average), a far cry from her performance against NMU (nine kills, eight errors, 24 attacks, .024). The Lady Pioneers trailed 14-8 in the fourth game before rallying for a 16-14 win.

Jennifer Henry had a solid weekend for OU, collecting 12 kills and four errors in 35 attacks (.229) against Tech and nine kills and three errors in 16 attacks (.438) against NMU.

The split left OU at 23-14 overall and 5-7 in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. The Lady Pioneers have three home matches this week: against Tech at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, against NMU at 7:30 p.m. Friday, and against Lake Superior State at 7 p.m. Saturday.

OU NOTES: The mens soccer team closed out its regular season with a 1-0 win at Eastern Michigan Saturday. Paul Phillips got the game's only goal with just 5:20 left, with Earl Parris assisting. The win made OU 14-4-1 entering the NCAA Division II playoffs this week-end.

The mens swim team opened its dual meet season with a 130-70 trouncing of GLIAC foe Grand Valley State Saturday at GVSU. The team were three double winners for the Pioneers. John Kovach in the 200-yard freestyle (1:47.99) and 200 butterfly (2:01.24). Scott Harris in the 500 free (4:51.27) and 1,000 free (10:04.02). Mark Vanderley in the 100 free (47.11) and 200 individual medley (1:56.30). The Pioneers host Toledo at 7 p.m. Friday and the University of Western Ontario at 2 p.m. Saturday. The women's team opens its dual-meet season at 2 p.m. Saturday against Western Ontario. The women's basketball team lost to HydroLink Fluid 78-56, an AAU team, in an exhibition game Monday at OU. Leah Fenwick led the Lady Pioneers with 16 points. Kim Klein-Green added 10. Cheryl Williams, a former All-American at University of Detroit, led the winners with 28 points and 10 rebounds.

Bands compete in Silverdome

The country's finest high school marching bands will gather at the Pontiac Silverdome this Friday and Saturday for the Bands of America grand national championship.

The 51 bands, including 14 from Michigan, are expected to attract more than 35,000 people. Ticket prices are $5-$9.

Band shows are choreographed to jazz, pop, stage and classical music. Colorful auxiliary units incorporate elaborate flags, innovative props and ballet, jazz and modern dance movements to create visual impact.

AREA BANDS include: Athens High of Troy, John Glenn of Westland and Plymouth.

During two days of preliminary competition, bands will be adjudicated by a panel of leading music and marching educators.

Twelve bands will perform Saturday evening in finals competition which will feature the "Commandant's Own" U.S. Marine Drum and Bugle Corps from Washington, D.C., in exhibition and conclude with a spectacular Olympic-style finale.

This "Olympics of Marching Bands" has been held throughout the United States in its 12 years, and in the Indianapolis Hoosier Dome the past three years. This marks the first year this national championship has been held in the Silverdome.

DEBBIE LAFERTY, spokesman, said Bands of America Inc. is a non-profit educational organization based outside Chicago that promotes the band experience in high schools.

Commercial sponsors are Elias Brothers Restaurants, Pontiac-area Hilton Inns, and Northwest Airlines.

Preliminary competition will begin at 1 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 13, and run until 8:15 p.m. Preliminaries will resume at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday and finals will begin at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 14.

Over 70 exhibitors — many of whom are some of the most prominent antique dealers across the country — will display their wares in handsome room displays. The show is designed to present a balance between excellent "formal" period antiques and select country antiques to attract a broad spectrum of collectors.

Admission is $5, good for both days of the show. Hours are 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday; 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

● SCANDINAVIAN SYMPHONY

The Scandinavian Symphony Orchestra will feature 17-year-old Catherine Cho performing Paganini's Violin Concerto No. 1 at its concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, in Southfield High School on Lahser at 10 Mile Road.

Cho was a finalist in the Macabees Quest for Excellence competition last year.

Also on the program will be Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 and Rossini's Overture to Il Signor Bruschino.

Tickets are $7 with a $5 rate for senior citizens. They will be available at the door. For more information, call 644-9203.

● DELTA KAPPA GAMMA AUCTION

● NORTHVILLE CRAFTS SHOW

More than 100 Michigan crafters will be exhibiting and selling their wares at the annual arts and crafts show Friday-Sunday, Nov. 13-15, in Northville Community Center, in historic downtown Northville.

The event is sponsored by the Michigan Cultural Association so that area residents can meet with and talk to Michigan artists who are keeping alive skills and craftsmanship that one day may be gone forever, a spokeswoman said.

Admission is $3, but no charge for children. Parking is free. Lunch is available. The show is open Friday 4-9 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

John Steinway is a piano man in every sense of the word — as his suspenders attest. At the left, all the pianos sold at the exposition were personally autographed.

Tuning in the PIANO MAN

By C.L. Rugenstein
special writer

JOHN STEINWAY leaned back against a model D, nine-foot Steinway concert grand and snapped his suspenders — gray, to match his business suit, but emblazoned with a piano keyboard.

"The shoemaker's children don't wear shoes, and the pianomaker's son doesn't play piano!" he laughed, quoting the adage in answer to the inevitable question. "I'm too ham-handed, though I do love music. I appreciate those who can play."

Steinway was in Livonia recently for Hammell Music's "Factory Selection" event, billed as the largest selection of Steinway pianos (over 50, from concert grands to studio uprights) ever presented in one place. Though retired from the family business, Steinway continues to represent them as a "consultant," he said, helping buyers select just the piano to suit their needs.

"EACH PIANO HAS its own voice, its own character," he explained. "One artist might come in, play a particular piano, and say 'This one's a dog!' The someone else may come right along behind him and think that same piano was the greatest ever built."

He speaks from almost 60 years experience in the piano-making business and a tradition that reaches back to 1853. That's when his great-grandfather Heinrich Engelhard Steinweg emigrated to America from Brunswick, Germany, with his seven children.

"He started in a very small way, in downtown Manhattan," said John Steinway. "And two years later he won a gold medal for the finest square piano at the American Institute fair." After that things skyrocketed. Steinweg (who'd become Steinway by then) became the typical American success story.

It was Theodore (C.F.) Steinway, Henry's son and John's grandfather who was responsible for several major changes in piano design and engineering in the 1870s. Among his contributions were the duplex scale and the shape of the modern grand piano's case. Until Theodore threw them a curve, all pianos were square.

"This rim," Steinway patted the bass end of the nine-foot grand he leaned on, "is 22 feet long from here to there (he indicated the treble end). It's bent by brute strength, five or six men pulling it around a mold and clamping it, to get this shape."

Steinway's connection with the business began in 1939, when he was a young man just out of school. "Like my father and brothers before me, I began as an apprentice in the wood yard," learning piano building from the ground up. "I'm not an expert at any of the skilled jobs but I know what they are."

AND HE'S PERSONALLY acquainted with many of the inventions (his Uncle Albert gave the piano its middle or sustaining pedal) even witnessing some in the making. A cousin, Paul Bilhuber, developed and patented the Diaphragmatic Soundboard in 1936.

The spruce soundboard under the piano's strings tapers from eight millimeters in the center, to 5 millimeters around the edge — important for making the board vibrate and throw more sound into the air. Steinway remembered watching his cousin experiment with it.

"He used this fine sand, almost like powder, on the board," Steinway recalled. "Then he'd watch to

'The shoemaker's children don't wear shoes, and the pianomaker's son doesn't play piano! I'm too ham-handed, though I do love music. I appreciate those who can play.'

— John Steinway

see how it flew into the air from the vibration of the board."

Few people realize that the concert tour was another Steinway innovation.

"In the late 1800s William and Henry had this idea about how to show off their pianos," Steinway chuckled. "They decided to invite prominent concert artists from Europe to go on a cross-country tour." This was in the 1870s, Steinway points out, traveling by train across what was then Indian territory.

THE TROUPE included a singer, Polish violinist Henri Wienawski, and Anton Rubinstein (no relation to Arthur), the most famous pianist of his day and a "wild lion of the piano keyboard!" Steinway said.

"Somewhere out west Rubinstein and Wienawski had one heck of a fight and refused to speak to one another," but, said Steinway, they continued the tour. They passed notes to one another through the stage manager to communicate, and the tour was a wild success for Steinway and Sons.

Steinway is no longer in the touring artist business, but they were responsible for introducing many renowned European artists to America, Ignace Paderewski in 1892, among them. Steinway knew Paderewski well. "He was a great pal of the family," he recalled warmly.

EVEN STEINWAY'S recreational pursuits are replete with names of music greats.

His precise, almost British accent reflects his New England background; his voice is drawing-room mellow. It's no surprise then when he says he's an actor ("Strictly amateur!"), appearing often at New York's Amateur Comedy Club, where his parents first met.

"One time we did a play by Dostoevski, 'The Idiot' — I was the Idiot," he recalled. "And old man Rachmaninoff came to see it." The cast had been tutored in pronouncing names by a Russian coach. Afterwards Rachmaninoff singled him out. "You pronounced very well Russian names!" the composer told the piano-maker-cum-actor.

At the moment, John is the last Steinway involved in the business, a fact that gives his recollections great poignancy.

"I HAVE 13 nephews and two nieces, but they've all gone on to do their own thing," he mused. "Perhaps in the next generation..."

For the present he has great hopes for the company's future, however. Steinway and Sons was sold to CBS in 1972, then divested recently to a private family in Boston.

"They're doing a great job of developing, being very quality conscious," Steinway said. "I'm happy with what they've done."

And being a part of it, representing the company his family built, recounting his experiences with musical history in the making, makes him happy also.

'Teach-in'

Oakway to present Vivaldi program

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Three music teachers who are concert performers will join the Oakway Symphony Orchestra next week to perform the work of another famous performing teacher — Antonio Vivaldi.

"It's very difficult to combine a teaching and performing career," said David Cerone, a violinist who will be heard in two works with the Oakway.

"One becomes very self-conscious. When one teaches, one becomes very self-conscious and analytical. But when one performs, one depends on instinct and natural feeling."

"One must break off from the analytical to the instinctual."

"One also becomes a virtuoso as a manager of time," said Cerone in a telephone interview from the Cleveland Institute of Music, of which he is president.

THE CONCERT starts at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 22, in the Harrison High auditorium, 12 Mile east of Middlebelt, Farmington Hills.

Violinists David and Linda Cerone will be joined by cellist Richard Piipo in a Vivaldi triple concerto (opus 3, No. 11).

Oakway conductor Francesco DiBlasi, fond of multi-instrument concertos, dubs the program "Vivaldi A Tre."

Vivaldi (1675-1741), the famous "red-haired priest," taught at an Italian girls' school as well as performing. He wrote some 450 concertos, some for solo instrument ("Four Seasons" violin concertos) but many for ensembles.

THE BAROQUE was admired by J.S. Bach himself, who showed Vivaldi's influence in his own Brandenburg Concertos.

Although Vivaldi wrote frequently for his young students, in no way are his works simple, Cerone said.

"They are extremely difficult in terms of intonation. There are so many repeat notes, so many arpeggios and scales, it's easy for a listener to spot blemishes."

"Take the first violin part in this concerto. It's very virtuosic. It's extremely well suited to my wife."

LINDA CERONE'S twin careers include chairing the preparatory strings program at Cleveland Institute and performing in concerts and recitals.

She was soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra under the late Eugene Ormandy. She is a graduate of the Curtis Institute. Married 25 years, the Cerones have two children.

Cellist Piipo is on the Wayne State University faculty as director of the strings department, conductor of the university orchestra and teacher. He has performed with the Peninsula Music Festival and Chicago Chamber Orchestra.

DAVID CERONE will be soloist for Ernest Chausson's "Poeme," a 14-minute, romantic, high flight of fancy written in 1896.

Two weeks after the Oakway concert, Cerone will perform the Chausson work with one of the nation's half-dozen greatest ensembles, the Cleveland Orchestra.

Cerone studied with Mischa Mishakoff, the late concertmaster of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, at Juilliard and the Curtis Institute. He taught at Oberlin College's Conservatory for nine years and was chairman of the string department at the Cleveland Institute before becoming its president.

A frequent solo and chamber performer, Cerone recalled one occasion when a former pupil wound up writing a review of his performance. How did it turn out?

"It was as if the person had not been my student," Cerone replied. "He maintained his distance and objectivity. I've never been panned by one of my students."

Orchestral works on the program will be J.S. Bach's Suite No. 1 and Jean Sibelius' Symphony No. 2.

BIOGRAPHICAL footnote: One of David Cerone's star pupils is Susan Synnesvedt, winner of Oakway's 1978 Young Artists Competition and twice soloist with the orchestra.

Synnesvedt, a Royal Oak native, worked as a substitute with the Philadelphia Orchestra a while and last year landed in the first violin section of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

"She's a marvelous talent — clearly one of the best," said the proud teacher.

CALENDAR footnote: Oakway will do one holiday performance of Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" ballet — at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6, again at Harrison. Tickets for that performance will be on sale at the Nov. 22 concert.

Running the risk of failure

LAST TUESDAY was a beautiful fall day. The kids had a day off from school so we decided to go out to the barn at the Maybury State Park. I took my camera to take "reference" shots. What are reference shots? It's a term I came up with as a cheap, phony, cop-out excuse for my inability to take a decent photograph. So when I get my pictures back from the printer and they are poorly cropped, out of focus, improperly exposed and possess no apparent aesthetic value, all I need to say is, "These are just reference shots for some future painting."

All the while my bruised ego writes in the painful realization that yet another 36 pictures did not turn out.

My poor photographic luck has, however, rallied my family behind me. Since Monte Nagler (O&E photography columnist) doesn't make house calls, my sons have purchased some wonderful books for me. Then they bought me a camera that has every automatic option you can think of. All you do is "point" and "push." So now when I take a terrible picture with no apparent aesthetic value, I still call them reference pictures. It's just easier to take them. But the disappointing thing is I thought I could "point" and "push" better than I do.

ANYWAY THERE we were, at the barn. I focused in on this little open door on the side of the barn hoping that a lamb would stick its head out. It happened! Not only that but the sun came out from behind a cloud at that second and caused the painted wood to glow red and the lamb's fleece illuminated in off-whites. "Click" went the camera. "Oh Dad - Honey" my family emitted as an almost holy moment occurred in my downhill photography career.

"But it didn't end there. I zoomed in on this giant hog lying in mud. The sun back-lit his head and his face reflected in the mire he slept in. The horse took a perfect pose just for me. A rooster crouched against the backless of an open barn door. The whiteness of the goose took us back to one posed wings out-stretched - just for me.

"Perfect, Dad! my boys said, as

Youth Symphony season opens

The sixth season of the Metropolitan Youth Symphony begins with a classical evening at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, in Southfield High School, 10 Mile and Lahser roads.

The program will include Beethoven's "Leonore Overture," Sibelius' "Finale from the Second Symphony," Smetana's "Themes from the Moldau" and Gershwin's "An American in Paris."

Tickets at $3.50 each will be available at the door. For more information, call 477-2894 between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Approximately 225 young music students will perform in three orchestras representing more than 40 tri-county communities this season, including members from Chatham and Windsor, Ontario, and Ann Arbor.

Directors are: Alan MacNaair, symphony orchestra, who is concertmaster of the Rochester Symphony and director of the Troy High School orchestra; Douglas Bianchi, concert orchestra, who is director of the L'Anse Creuse High School-North instrumental music program; and Judith Culler, string orchestra, who is director of the string program in the Troy schools.

Q. Last week I read your article in Condo Queries. I am happy to know there is someone you can contact regarding questions on condo living. The owners of our condominium are very upset and concerned as to the board taking it upon itself to paint each section of four buildings many different colors.

We are very upset by the colors that were chosen and this was all done without asking the owners to vote. We feel the condo owners have no protection. You are dictated to by people who have no regard for our feelings. This has caused us, many of whom are senior citizens, a great deal of stress. We have taken verbal abuse and we don't know who to contact regarding this problem.

We also bought when the real estate market was low. A move would be very costly. Can any legal action be taken against the board that makes such an important decision like this and has destroyed the looks of our property?

A. It would appear that part of your problem is, no doubt, political in nature. If discontent in your condo is such that a majority of the co-owners are unhappy with the board's decision, they can move, obviously, to remove the board and replace it with other designers. You should consult the association bylaws as to those requirements.

Alternatively, you can seek legal advice as to whether the changes made to the common elements are of such a severe nature as to destroy the aesthetic and/or architectural integrity of the condominium thereby requiring an amendment to the site plan, which would require a vote of a certain percentage of co-owners of the condominium, depending upon the master deed.

You can also take the position that the board was negligent in regard to how it maintained the condominium by way of its painting program, which could result in a claim being pursued against the board of directors.

Scoping out telescopes

"How Telescopes Work" will be the subject of November's AstroFest film and lecture presentation at the University of Michigan. The free public program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday in Auditorium 3, Modern Languages Building.

Jim Loudon, staff astronomer at the U-M's Natural Science Museum and AstroFest director, said he will explain the subject in detail, but in terms requiring no previous technical background.

"It is just the thing if you're considering giving or getting a telescope for Christmas," Loudon said.

AstroFest is sponsored by the U-M's Department of Aerospace Engineering and Natural Science Museum.

You should consult the association bylaws as to those requirements.

Alternatively, you can seek legal advice as to whether the changes made to the common elements are of such a severe nature as to destroy the aesthetic and/or architectural integrity of the condominium thereby requiring an amendment to the site plan, which would require a vote of a certain percentage of co-owners of the condominium, depending upon the master deed.

You can also take the position that the board was negligent in regard to how it maintained the condominium by way of its painting program, which could result in a claim being pursued against the board of directors.
