Getting their kicks

The varsity pom pon squad of the Canton Chiefettes practices its routine for Tuesday night's basketball game. Both the Chiefettes and the Plymouth Salem Rockettes are getting ready for Saturday's regional pom pon team competitions at Franklin High School in Livonia. Local hunting areas coming under fire

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Hunting areas in Canton are under fire.

Hunters toting shotguns in search of game in the vicinity of residential areas have local officials concerned and an ordinance change is under way.

No one has been injured by a hunter in Canton, but "we want to do something before" there is an incident, said John Santomauro, Canton public safety director.

Recent population and housing growth has spurred the proposed ordinance change to ban hunting and the discharge of firearms in areas where they are currently allowed.

THE ORDINANCE would ban hunting north of Ford Road and west of Canton Center. The area currently allows restricted and open hunting.

West of Canton Center east of Beck south of Cherry Hill and north of Geddes would change from open to closed hunting. The ordinance also would ban hunting in the small area west of Barr Road south of Geddes and east of Napier.

All land in Canton east of Canton Center is closed to hunting.

The ordinance change would allow hunting: west of Canton Center, north of Cherry Hill and east of Napier; as well as south of Cherry Hill west of Beck, east of Napier and north of Geddes.

A smaller area where hunters would be allowed to roam is south of Geddes east of Barr, west of Canton Center and north of Van Born Road.

The question of liability was first raised by clerk Linda Chuhran. "We have hunting surrounding township hall and in areas with subdivisions, and it's out of step with what's going in the township," she said.

Dan Durack, Canton personnel director, consulted Risk Management, the township's liability insurance administrators, about the ordinance.

"Their' basic reaction was there should be no hunting at all . . . because of the possible liability if someone gets killed in a hunting accident," Durack said.

He said he believed the township would be free of liability for an accident that happened on private land. "But there's always potential for the township to be held liable," Durack said.

"It's an attorney's job to be overly cautious. I think the ordinance has to be reviewed on an occasional basis every few years to make sure the areas open for hunting are still appropriate. You don't want any hunting in areas where there's significant population."

THE BOARD ADOPTED the ordinance earlier this month.

However, before the ban becomes effective a request must be made to the state Hunting Area Control Committee, composed of representatives from the Department of Natural Resources, Michigan State Police, the township supervisor and a representative from the Wayne County Sheriff's department.

The hunting committee must schedule a public hearing within the township to hear testimony from interested people. The committee is enabled to allow ordinance passage.

Committee will push for school tax boost

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Twice last year a low-key approach failed to convince voters in the Plymouth-Canton schools to authorize a tax hike for school operations.

So a more active, visible campaign will be waged on the publicity front leading to the March 22 election.

On that date, voters will be asked to approve a tax increase of 2 mills ($2 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation) to maintain school programs at current levels.

JUDY AND JOHN LORE head a committee of about 50 cultivated by school officials to promote the ballot proposal.

"We've got to point out to parents of children involved . . . and of preschoolers, too . . . it is up to them," said Judy Lore.

"I think this time, more effort will be made to point out we're not trying to add programs," she continued. "With finances the way they are now, just to keep programs where they are now, we need money."

Lore said she's convinced that the district needs the money.

"We've had quality education up to this point. We want to keep quality."

The heavy artillery — postcards, fliers and a telephone campaign — will be launched the last two to three weeks prior to the election, Lore said.

School expenses outdistancing revenue

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Revenues in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools aren't keeping pace with expenditures, something the school board tried to remedy in revising its general operating fund budget Monday night.

While revenue is up 1.7 percent over last year, expenditures have risen 3.7 percent.

The difference means a projected drop in the fund balance from $4.3 million to $3.8 million by June, said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business. In the fund balance are assets including unallocated cash, inventories and receivables.

Of an available $58.8 million, trustees appropriated $55 million: $29.3 million for instruction, $23.6 million for support services and $2 million for the project fund.

Teacher salaries and instructional supplies are paid for out of the instruction fund. Support services include administration, maintenance, transportation and business services.

"The initial revenue projections were based on 16,100 students. The actual fourth Friday student count was 15,959; 151 fewer students than projected," said Hoedel.

"This had a negative impact on the state aid membership formula.

"State revenue is projected to decrease $82,553 from the initial projection," he added.

An executive order cut of about $41,000 further reduced revenues, said Hoedel.

THE REVISED budget also makes adjustments for areas in which actual costs are above or below projections.

It cost $130,000 more than anticipated to install portable classrooms at schools throughout the district.

"The cost of insulation skyrocketed, and so that budgeted line item increased," said Hoedel.

Other cost over-runs included: $84,702 for miscellaneous district expenses; $65,991 for Alternative Education; $32,136 for repairs and maintenance; and $30,027 for fringe benefits.

New band uniforms were paid for with $65,000 in miscellaneous district funds. The Alternative Education budget grew when Growth Works costs swelled to $140,000 from $70,000.

Insurance contracts were re-bid, resulting in reduced fringe benefit costs. Offsetting that was a 5-percent increase in retirement expenses, and a 1-percent increase in dental insurance costs.

Expenses were lower than expected for: fuel and gas ($181,160); electricity ($81,094); insurance ($65,000); board contingencies ($40,000); and transportation ($25,445).

The district saved money by buying natural gas directly from a supplier.

The actual cost of district liability insurance, budgeted originally at $450,000, is $385,000, resulting in a $65,000 budget decrease.

"In case people think we're spending money like crazy, we're not," said trustee Dean Swartzwelter.

"Our expenses are up only 3.7 percent, less than the Consumer Price Index increase. We've held to 3.7 percent, but the state is withholding funding.

"In terms of cost-per-pupil countywide, Plymouth-Canton is 31st in a list of 35," said Superintendent John Hoben. About $3,250 per student is spent annually by Plymouth-Canton schools.

TRUSTEES ALLOCATED $127,000 in interest income to four bond projects.

Fatalities spur beefed-up traffic enforcement

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton police will crack down on traffic violators on Michigan Avenue in response to three fatalities on that roadway earlier this month.

Another person died on Michigan Avenue in Canton last year.

The four deaths in six months involved three accidents where motorist left the roadway and lost control of their vehicles. Speed also may have been a contributing factor.

On Feb. 5 a Canton couple was killed on Michigan Avenue a quarter mile east of Beck when another motorist left the roadway and struck their Caravan mini-van. On Feb. 2 a Canton man was killed on Michigan Avenue east of Lilley. The driver apparently lost control, swerved off the road onto the median on Michigan Avenue and slammed into a parked semi-trailer truck.

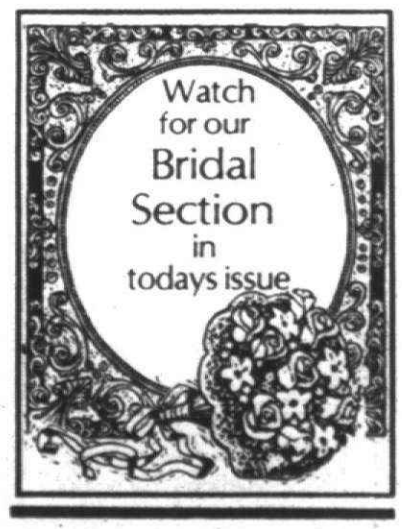
JOHN SANTOMAURO, Canton public safety director, gave the police directive for heavier traffic enforcement on the state highway earlier this week in response to those deaths.

Most of Michigan Avenue in Canton is posted with a 55 mph speed limit. Santomauro warns, however, that the speed limit considers ideal driving conditions. Motorists should drive slower when weather is poor, lighting is insufficient or there are other hindering factors.

In 1987 there were eight fatalities on Canton roads:

- Two people died as the result of an accident Jan. 15 on Lilley and Ford. Alcohol was listed as a contributing factor when a motorist drove left of the center line.
- One person died as the result of an accident Feb. 5 on Cherry Hill and Buckingham. The roads were listed as dry and the victim drove left of the center line. Alcohol was not listed as a factor.
- One person died as the result of an accident April 7 on Ford and Gorman. The roads were listed as dry. The cause of the accident was listed by police as the motorist "drove left of center, improper overtaking and passing, improper lane usage." Alcohol was not listed as a factor.
- Two people died as the result of an accident June 7 at Michigan and Lotz when a vehicle left the roadway and struck a ditch. Alcohol was not listed as a cause.
- A pedestrian, walking in the roadway, was killed June 14 at Ford and Lilley. Alcohol was listed as a factor for the pedestrian and the motorist was not charged.
- One person died as the result of an accident Aug. 16 at Cherry Hill and Lilley on dry roads. One driver ran a red light. Alcohol was not considered a factor.

Of the fatal in accidents in Canton last year two involved alcohol. Santomauro said that nationally alcohol is listed as the cause in at least half of serious accidents.



District adopts curriculum for AIDS

By M.B. Dillon
and Tedd Schneider
staff writers

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are a step up on the state when it comes to AIDS education.

Gary Hawks, interim state school superintendent, is requiring school districts to adopt an AIDS curriculum. The mandate is in keeping with a recently-passed state law that says public schools must teach students about dangerous communicable diseases.

Plymouth-Canton is one of the few districts in southeastern Michigan already teaching students in grades 6-12 about the fatal disease.

PLYMOUTH-CANTON and the Wayne-Westland school districts are two of the few districts in western Wayne County currently teaching students younger than high-school age about AIDS.

Monday, the Plymouth-Canton trustees unanimously adopted a curriculum drafted by the state departments of education and health. It will be treated as "a frame of reference in support of" instructional materials the district already uses.

"I've gone over the materials and looked at the guidelines from the department of education. They're not ideal, but they represent a good starting point in many respects," said trustee E.J. McClendon, a retired University of Michigan public health professor.

"I think as our teachers work with it, they will find successes and failures with it. I think they'll find it helpful as a departure document.

"We'll have to experiment in a lot of ways to help kids protect themselves," he said.

Plymouth-Canton schools began AIDS instruction for sixth-, eighth-, and ninth graders last fall.

There is no cure for AIDS, which attacks the body's immune system. The disease is transmitted through activities which allow the blood or [illegible] of an infected person to enter a healthy person. The AIDS virus is spread via sexual contact and the use of contaminated needles.

TRUSTEE MARILYN SCHWINN would like to see more instruction on "what AIDS isn't, not what it is.

"To get rid of the false thoughts that are out there, I would like to see more about what AIDS isn't," she said. McClendon agreed with Schwinn.

He spoke of a third grader who asked her mother recently, "Mom, when do I have to die from AIDS?' She figured if she had to die of AIDS eventually, she might as well get on with the preparations," said McClendon.

School board members took exception to a statement by the state superintendent that "parents should be notified by the local school district of their option to have their child excused from instruction on AIDS."

While parents may have their children excused from classes dealing with sex hygiene, a statute that dates to the 19th century mandates education on communicable disease, McClendon said.

Five state directors of public health have held that AIDS education qualifies under the communicable disease instruction, and not sex hygiene instruction, he said.

It's a sticky question, and one that attorneys, including the state attorney general, won't touch, McClendon added.

"If it were dental health, or almost any other kind of health issue, we could teach it without worrying about having to ask for permission," said McClendon.

"But I doubt we'll have many parents concerned enough to raise public alarm . . . Unfortunately, the whole business gives rise to controversy. But lives are at stake. This is nothing we can treat cavalierly."

Wayne-Westland OKs classes

Wayne-Westland Community Schools students will begin learning about AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) this semester.

The school board Monday unanimously approved the curriculum proposed for sixth, eighth and 10th graders.

"I think we have a concerned public that wants us to teach our kids about the realities of life," said board member Kathleen Chorbagian.

The district will be one of the first in southeastern Michigan to supply information on AIDS to elementary school students, although sixth graders will participate only in limited discussion about the disease.

AIDS is transmitted through blood via sexual contact or through the use of unsterile needles. There is no known cure.

As with other components of the sex education program in Wayne-Westland, parents may choose to have their children excluded from discussions and programs devoted to AIDS.

Parents will be able to preview the educational materials used as part of the AIDS education effort.

The approved curriculum includes six videotapes that may be shown to students in the eighth and 10th grades.

High school students will study AIDS in either biology or home economics classes. Since biology is a required course for all 10th graders, all students will receive some form of AIDS education before graduating.

Pom pon squads get their kicks at event

Local high school students who are members of the pom pon squads here have been busy this week working out at the Centennial Educational Park.

The Plymouth Salem Rockettes and Plymouth Canton Chiefettes are priming up for this Saturday's regional pom pon team competitions at Franklin High School in Livonia.

The regional competition, which begins at 12:30 p.m. will involve Davison High School in the Flint area and a number of nearby schools such as Livonia Churchill, Livonia Franklin, Northville and Garden City.

The state competition will be held Feb. 27 at Davison High School.

The 21-member Chiefettes, coached by Christine Branham, performs at all home football and basketball game for the Canton Chiefs.

The 27-member Rockettes, coached by Anne Buie, took first place in the Northville Fourth of July Parade, and finished second in the Plymouth Fourth of July Parade this year. The Rockettes perform at all home football games and basketball games. The are Crystal White and Jolie Shay.

The Rockette Show at the CEP is scheduled this year for the first weekend in May.

Aides win 15-minute break

Plymouth-Canton educational aides won one and lost one Monday night.

The school board considered two grievances filed by the employee group.

Educational aides, still working under an extended contract, provide teachers with instructional and supervisory assistance.

Trustees voted 5-2 to permit study hall aides to take one 15-minute break as opposed to five-minute breaks between class periods. Dissenting were trustees E.J. McClendon and Marilyn Schwinn.

All board members except Dean Swartzwelter and Les Walker voted to deny aides payment for attending a lecture before school opened in September.

A letter to district employees invited them to come hear a guest speaker on the opening day of school, said Dick Egli, community relations director for Plymouth-Canton schools.

A grievance was filed after compensation was denied to two aides who attended.

Thieves grab radar detectors

Two radar detectors were reported stolen last week to Plymouth Township police.

A Bel radar detector valued at $85 was pilfered from a car at Highland Appliance on Sheldon and a Cobra model worth $80 was taken from a car on Turtlehead.

Windows were smashed in each instance.

A silver 1984 Pontiac Fiero was reported stolen from a lighted area behind Denny's restaurant on Ann Arbor Road. A former employee left his car unattended between 4-5 a.m. last Friday, police reports indicated.

A framed print of a cracked egg and ant, valued at $50, was reported stolen from Silverman's restaurant on Main.

Group to urge school tax hike

"We're going to work through PTOs in each school, representatives from various booster groups, everyone who really has contact with the schools."

Even senior citizens, who aren't always happy with property tax increases, will be approached, Lore said.

"Just because you don't have anyone in school now doesn't mean your responsibility stops. You still want it to be a desirable community."

RAYMOND HOEDEL, associate superintendent for business, blames Lansing for the district's financial situation. "The bottom line is we're losing big in state aid."

Plymouth-Canton, which received $9 million in state aid during the 1986-87 school year, will get only $7 million this year, Hoedel said.

The district's unallocated fund balance of $4.3 million at the start of the current budget year is expected to fall to about $3.8 million at its end June 30, Hoedel said.

Some accountants recommend that municipalities and school districts maintain an emergency surplus account of 10 percent of annual operating budgets.

The surplus at the beginning of the budget year was 8 percent.

School administrators project a further $1.8 million loss in state aid and the potential loss of another $900,000 due to a mandatory rollback of the tax rate to compensate for soaring property values in budget year 1988-89.

IF THE TAX hike wins approval, the actual increase to property owners would be more on the order of 1.38 mills rather than 2 mills — to 40.40 mills from 39.02 mills levied now, Hoedel projected.

That would result from a reduction in the debt retirement rate plus a reduction in the operating rate due to the Headlee Amendment.

Approval means the owner of a $100,000 house would pay school taxes of $2,020 compared to $1,951.

School revenue lagging behind expenditures

Voters approved a $13 million bond issue in 1986. Interest earnings for the program were higher than the anticipated $1.1 million.

Funds were appropriated to the Financial Legal Fees budget ($50,000); Program Contingency Fund ($47,000); Gallimore school addition ($20,000); and renovation at Eriksson, Field, and Hulsing elementaries ($10,000).

Money allocated to Gallimore will help pay for security costs incurred after the elementary school was vandalized, Hoedel said.

Panel urges student transfers

By Tedd Schneider
staff writer

A committee has recommended transferring some students to different elementary schools in the Wayne-Westland district next fall to make better use of existing buildings.

The committee, which includes parents and school administrators, also recommended Monday that all schools be kept open for the immediate future and that the district keep its current elementary-junior high-high school format.

Insufficient space would rule out changing to the sixth-eighth grade middle school and ninth-12th grade high school format that is favored by some Michigan school districts, the committee said in an interim report to the school board Monday.

Wayne-Westland Schools includes a portion of Canton Township.

The school board will take final action on the committee's report during its rescheduled meeting on Monday, Feb. 29.

Public hearings on the proposed changes will be held 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 22, at Hamilton Elementary School and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 24, at Wildwood Elementary School.

THE PROPOSED changes will affect only some 225 of the district's 17,000 students, said Thomas Blacklock, deputy superintendent.

Changes recommended by the committee are:

- Transfer from Schweitzer School to Roosevelt School students living east of the C&O Railroad tracks between the Rouge River and Michigan Avenue.
- Assign students moving into the Westland Meadows mobile home park to Elliot School. Westland Meadows residents currently attending Taft School would remain there.
- Transfer Wildwood School pupils living in an area bounded by Palmer, Wayne Road, Hazelwood and Radcliff to Hamilton School.
- Transfer to Wildwood School students currently attending Hamilton School who live in the area bounded by Hively, Venoy, Vanlawn and Cherry Hill.

The committee said some of the proposed transfers are designed to alleviate crowded classrooms and absorb projected growth in some areas, particularly the Westland Meadows park.

IN A separate but related development, school officials said Monday they are looking at the possibility of reopening the second floor of Hicks School.

William Harvey, associate superintendent for instruction and planning, said the six upstairs classrooms have been closed for 12 years.

"There would be some plumbing and heating costs associated with reopening the classrooms, but we are looking into the possibility," Harvey said.

2 being held on drug charges

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Alfred Scicluna of Canton and Eugene O'Sullivan of Redford remain in jail awaiting a circuit court trial on drug charges.

Each face mandatory life in prison sentences.

They were arrested Dec. 5, after a three-week investigation by special investigation divisions of three police departments — Roseville, Warren and Sterling Heights, said Lt. William Vogel, Roseville police department.

They allegedly tried to deliver a kilo of cocaine to an undercover police officer at a shopping mall at 12 Mile and Gratiot in Roseville.

A KILO OF cocaine has a street value of about $125,000, Vogel said.

O'Sullivan, nicknamed Gino, and Scicluna, nicknamed Falcon, were charged with one count of delivering a controlled substance more than 650 grams, and one count of conspiring to deliver cocaine.

"If they're found guilty for that crime, they will be sent to prison without possibility of parole for their life," said Jeffrey Strouss, who initially defended O'Sullivan.

"That's the only crime that's as serious as murder in this state," Strouss said. "Certainly one of his defenses will be entrapment."

Scicluna and O'Sullivan pleaded not guilty in Roseville's 39th District Court before Judge William Ward. A $200,000 cash or surety bond was set for each.

Scicluna and O'Sullivan failed to post the bond and remain in the Macomb County Jail.

A Macomb Circuit Court trial date has not yet been set, according to Scicluna's attorney Marvin Blake.

SCICLUNA WAS charged in 1985 with extortion and intent to deliver cocaine of more than 50 grams after a Canton, Redford and Michigan State Police investigation.

Scicluna's attorney in the 1985 case, James L. Feinberg, argued police had an improper warrant. The drug charges were dropped when Scicluna agreed to plead guilty on the extortion charge, said Redford police Inspector Russell Lynch. His sentence was life probation.

Area's health care costs top state — study

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A hospital stay costs more in southeastern Michigan, including Wayne and Oakland counties, than in all other areas of the state, according to a recent survey.

But the group that commissioned the study said hospital costs are in line with regional differences for other goods and services.

The Southeast Michigan Hospital Council based its conclusion on evidence that regions where hospital costs were highest also posted higher costs for other goods and services.

'What we found was southeastern Michigan has a higher cost of living than other regions.'
— Steven Simmons, hospital spokesman

"WHAT WE found was southeastern Michigan has a higher cost of living than other regions," council spokesman Steven Simmons said. The SEMHC issued the survey this week.

Average cost per hospital admission was $4,306 in southeastern Michigan in 1985, according to the survey. It was the last year for which full figures are available.

Costs were second-highest in the greater Flint area, the survey said. The lowest cost, $2,450 per admission, was recorded in the Upper Peninsula.

Among survey findings:

- In addition to posting the highest hospital costs, Southeastern Michigan and Flint also rank first and second in overall costs based upon 16 goods and services ranging from milk prices to dry cleaning costs.
- The Upper Pennisula, with the lowest hospital costs, also posted the lowest overall prices for goods and services.
- Hospital care costs for southeastern Michigan were 18 percent higher than the state average.
- Labor costs were highest in southeastern Michigan but in line with regional differences throughout the state. Wage rates for health services in southeastern Michigan, however, were below the state average for all industries.
- Labor costs account for 57.7 percent of total hospital expenses.
- Non-labor costs, including construction, land, security and insurance vary among the eight regions and are highest in southeast Michigan.

The state was divided into eight regions for the purposes of the survey. boundaries were suggested by the SEMHC.

Cost comparisons were based upon the goods and services including auto insurance, auto repair costs, dental care, dry cleaning, movie tickets, milk, gasoline, home construction, home insurance, lodging, plumbing services, police services, prescription drugs, residential rent, public education and garbage collection.

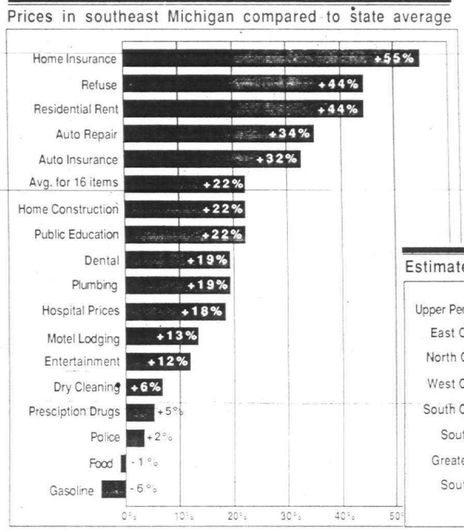
SOUTHEASTERN Michigan, including Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw, Livingston, Monroe and St. Clair counties topped the list in nine of the 16 categories. It ranked second for dental services, dry cleaning and prescription drugs and third for movie tickets and police services.

It ranked lowest in gasoline prices and sixth for milk.

The Upper Pennisula ranked second in public education costs but no higher than third in any other category. East Central Michigan, an area stretching from Traverse City to Alpena, ranked seventh in overall costs.

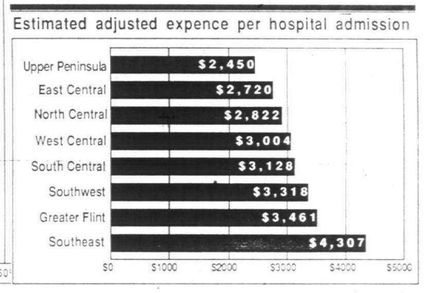
The survey was compiled by Public Sector Consultants, Inc. of Lansing.

Prices in southeast Michigan compared to state average



Prices for essential goods and services in southeastern Michigan, left, generally exceed state averages. The difference is reflected in higher hospital costs, below, according to a recent study compiled for the Southeast Michigan Hospital Council.

Estimated adjusted expence per hospital admission



Region's taxes exceed services

Southeastern Michigan pays far more to the state than it receives in state services, a regional health care agency said.

The Southeast Michigan Hospital Council said its study of regional hospital costs also revealed its service area received less in state spending than it produced in state taxes.

"The study demonstrates that the recent so-called Wayne County 'bailout' wasn't a bail out at all," council president Donald Potter said.

Wayne County, however, received more in state spending than it produced in state revenue in fiscal 1986, the last year for which numbers are available.

In that year, the county received $4.2 billion in spending, while producing $3 billion in tax revenue.

But a SEMHC spokesman said the difference might be exaggerated.

"There are a lot of state offices in Wayne County and the numbers reflect their presence," Steven Simmons, vice president of public relations, said.

Oakland County received $861 million in state spending but produced $2.2 billion in tax revenue, Simmons said.

Sons lower divorce rate

AP — Sexism plays a role even in divorces, with the parents of sons less likely to separate than couples raising only daughters, according to a new study.

S. Philip Morgan and two other researchers at the University of Pennsylvania, using U.S. Census data, found that parents with sons have a 9 percent lower risk of divorce or separation than parents with only daughters.

The study, which will be published in the July edition of the American Journal of Sociology, also found the difference held across racial and age groups and categories of the mother's education.

"Who would imagine that the sex of a child would affect their parents' risk of marital disruption?" Morgan said Monday. "We argue in the paper that children promote marital stability but that sons do more than daughters because fathers are more involved in rearing their sons than daughters."

The theory was supported by answers from mothers and children in the National Survey of Children conducted by Temple University researchers, the Penn group said.

THE PENN researchers said their findings do not assume men instigate the breakups or that the decision to stay in a marriage is theirs alone.

Post office to cut window services

Local postal patrons will find that window services will be reduced starting Saturday because of a congressional budget cut.

Plymouth Postmaster John Mulligan announces that effective Feb. 13 the window hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The customer lobby doors will remain open on Saturdays for access to post office boxes and purchases from vending machines.

The Canton Township branch at Harvard Square, Ford and Sheldon, part of the Westland Post Office service area, will have window hours cut 1.5 hours for the week.

At the Canton branch, the new hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Before the changes, the branch was open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Lobby hours will still be maintained at 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Canton facility.

The main Westland post office on Wayne Road just south of Hunter will have window services reduced 45 minutes a day during the week and one hour on Saturdays.

The branch at Westland Shopping Center will be cut two hours during the week and two hours on Saturday.

The biggest cutback will be at the city of Wayne branch, on Newberry near Michigan Ave., where four hours will be cut through an early closing on Wednesday afternoon.

The changes in hours are part of a national spending cut by the postal service ordered by Congress in an effort to save $160 million this budget year and $270 million for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

EVEN WITH the cutbacks the Westland Shopping Center branch will still have the longest hours in Michigan.

The center branch will be open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Previously, they were open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

In the Wayne branch, the new hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. every weekday except for Wednesday when the window services will be open 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

There will be no layoffs of postal employees but there will be cuts in overtime.

He added that he was given only a specific number of hours to cut window services, not a dollar amount.

As part of the service cutbacks, there will be no street mailbox pick ups Sundays.

Former Plymouth mayor named festival head

Joe Bida

Joe Bida of Canton was appointed manager of the Plymouth Fall Festival at the last meeting of the festival's board of directors.

Bida replaces Mike Vanderveen, who submitted his resignation recently to Ken Holmes, president of the Fall Festival Board.

Vanderveen has indicated he is looking for a house closer to his job and may be moving out of the community, Holmes said. The board adopted a resolution thanking Vanderveen for his services as manager and assistant manager before that.

Bida, who served as assistant manager for the 1987 Fall Festival, is a former mayor of the city of Plymouth, former Plymouth City Commissioner and before that was director of the city's Department of Public Works. He also served as DPW director for Garden City before coming to Plymouth.

The festival application process will begin at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 2, in Plymouth City Hall.

At its last meeting the festival board approved the application process for the 1988 Fall Festival.

This year the event will be held from Thursday, Sept. 8, to Sunday, Sept. 11. Paul Sincock, festival publicity manager, said that letters are being sent to past participants and service clubs to explain the new application process.

The board has determined that the application process will begin at a mandatory meeting of the prospective participants beginning 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 2, in city commission chambers upstairs in Plymouth City Hall, Church at Main.

"It is critical that everyone who has participated or thinks they might like to participate in the Fall Festival this year attend this meeting," said Eleanor Shevlin, board member and past president.

"It is very important each group send a representative or two in order to pick up the new applications and become advised of some very important deadlines and new procedures."

Letters were mailed to the various groups on Feb. 1 advising them of the mandatory meeting on March 2.

"Even if your group did not get a letter, if you are planning on participating in the Fall Festival you should attend the meeting," said Sincock.

Area's post offices drop Saturday hours

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

Most western Wayne County post offices will be closed on Saturdays — beginning immediately.

Post office branches in Livonia, Redford Township, Westland, Plymouth and Canton Township will abandon Saturday hours. The Garden City Post Office will remain closed on Saturdays.

Closings are part of an effort to save $2,657,000 from the U.S. Postal Service's Detroit division. Saturday mail delivery will continue, despite the closings.

"THE 100 plus offices in the Detroit division will close a half day per week, most on Saturday, and outgoing mail processing on Sunday will cease," Detroit division postmaster John M. Horne said.

The division's current $550 million budget must be cut to help balance the federal budget, Horne said at a press conference Monday at the main post office near downtown Detroit.

By themselves, Saturday closings are expected to save the district $600,000, Horne said.

"Other cuts will come from not filling vacant positions, fewer hours for part-time flexible employees, cutting down on travel and training costs and not updating computerized equipment," Horne added. "No layoffs are anticipated."

STAMP PRICES are expected to rise from 22 cents to 25 cents in mid-April, he said.

The district includes all of southeast Michigan.

• In Livonia, the northeast station at 19276 Middlebelt won't be open on Saturdays. The main office, 11800 Merriman, will remain open from 8:30 a.m. to noon Saturdays, but won't be open Thursday mornings. Its new Thursday hours are 12:30-5 p.m.

"The lobbies will remain open for box mail pickup and vending machines," said Livonia postmaster Michael Gresock. "And the four contract stations in Farmer Jack stores will remain open from 8:30-5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8:30 a.m. to noon Saturday."

The stores are at Six Mile/Inkster, Five Mile/Levan, Grand River/Eight Mile and Farmington Road/Seven Mile.

• In Redford Township, both post offices will be closed Saturdays. Redford post offices are at 26050 Plymouth and at 18840 Woodworth. Hours at the contract station inside Farmer Jack at Inkster/Plymouth remain unchanged.

• In Westland, the main post office, 6300 N. Wayne will be open 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"We are shortening the day. Normally we were open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m.," postmaster Lloyd Wesley said.

The Westland Mall branch office will have its hours shortened to 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, he added.

• In Garden City, the post office will be closed Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. New Wednesday hours are 1 to 5 p.m. The post office, 1854 Middlebelt, will remain closed on Saturdays. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

• In Plymouth, the post office will be closed Saturdays and the office lobby closed Sundays. The post office is at 860 Penniman. A contract station inside Great Scott!, 44505 Ann Arbor Road, will remain open.

• In Canton Township, the post office will be closed Saturdays. Weekday hours remain 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The post office is at 5936 N. Sheldon.

District postmaster Horne stressed express overnight mail delivery service will continue.

He said the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, mandated by Congress, requires the U.S. Postal Service to reduce operational spending nationally by $160 million this year and $270 million next year.

"WE WERE given the cut and told we can't raise rates or borrow money," Horne said. "This is over and above the forthcoming rate increase expected in April."

Although retail service is being eliminated on Saturday, it will remain a normal processing day for inside postal workers, Horne said.

"We are asking the public to understand the cuts were mandated by law. As a consequence, this is our response to it," he said. "We will continue to provide service with the least inconvenience to customers."

"We know that some people may be inconvenienced by the changed hours, but we hope they will also understand our difficult position."

In addition, because of the national holiday, Washington's birthday on Feb. 15, all post offices will be closed next Monday and there will be no delivery. Mail processing and collections will be on a regular holiday basis.

> '(Post offices) will close a half day per week, most on Saturday.'

He tracks Soviet computer crooks

Plymouth resident Jack Bologna has probed the mind of the white-collar criminal and now is turning his attention to computer crime in the Soviet Union.

"Some people think it (white-collar crime) is a product of a capitalist system," Bologna said. "But look at the Soviet Union."

Pressure, not profit, could be the cause of Soviet white-collar crime, he added.

"They've been having problems for years and in theory, their system's not profit-motivated," Bologna said. "But when you put pressure on people to perform, they lose their ethics."

Bologna, who runs Computer Protection Systems Inc. of Plymouth, will be among a 25-member delegation going to the Soviet Union on April 12 for a three-week visit with Soviet authorities in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Riga and Tbisisi.

"The rest of my colleagues are specialists in handwriting, ballistics, blood, hair and fiber," he said. "I'm going as a person interested in white-collar crime generally, but computers are a part of that. And I'm the only computer guy going."

Last weekend, the Soviets admitted that some officials had stolen $6.5 billion by falsifying farm production reports.

"THAT'S EXACTLY what I'm looking for," he said. "I'm hoping that by sharing insights with them, I might provide them with some understanding of why they're having problems and what some possible solutions might be."

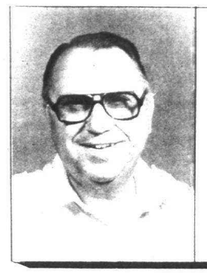
But he said he may wind up asking more questions than answering.

"We hear that they're behind us at least in the business applications of computers because most of their research and development has to do with military applications," Bologna said. "So I'm curious about how they use computers in law enforcement application."

Bologna holds degrees in accounting and law and he is currently assistant professor of management at Siena Heights College, Adrian.

Bologna has authored over 40 technical articles on a variety of business and management topics. Through his consulting firm, founded in 1980, he publishes two monthly newsletters: the Forensic Accounting Review and the Computer Security Digest.

A featured speaker at numerous conferences, Bologna has delivered



'When you put pressure on people to perform, they lose their ethics.'
— Jack Bologna computer expert lectures throughout the U.S. and Canada, France, Chile and New Zealand.

HIS CURRENT research interests are in investigative auditing and in the motivation of high tech and white collar criminals.

He has provided computer security assistance to the Mead Corporation, M&M Mars division of Mars Inc., Chrysler Corp., Truck Stops of America, American Hospital Supply Corp., and the Standard Oil Co.

As a college instructor, Bologna has taught criminology, security administration, principles of management, organization behavior, business ethics, business policy and small business management.

Economic equality: next civil rights goal

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

When it comes to racial attitudes, Michigan is no better or worse than anyplace else, but racism is a national problem that demands new black-white understanding to solve, says national NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks.

"I have not found much difference in Michigan," Hooks told reporters. "There's prejudice and hate in every state."

Hooks criticized the divisiveness between Detroit and other areas of the state during a Thursday appearance at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. He added, however, that he believes racism exists in every state and every community.

The civil rights activist spoke on the legacy and future of the movement as part of the university's Black History Month observance.

His audience included students from Southfield and Southfield-Lathrup high schools.

Hooks told his racially mixed audience that closing economic gaps between white and black Americans is as important today as expanding black political power was during the 1960s and ending slavery was during the 1860s.

"WE CAN no more exist half first class and half second class than we could half slave and half free," Hooks said.

Hooks speech touched on civil rights issues past and present.

● On Martin Luther King: "The tragedy was very few people heard him when he was alive. He became everybody's leader when he died. You can kill the prophet but the message lives on."

● On the recent NAACP campaign to remove Confederate flags and symbolism from Southern state houses: "Do you recognize the Confederate flag stands for slavery? What would happen if people flew the swastika?"

● On the legacy of King and other 1960s civil rights activists to young blacks: "One of the things you have a right to be proud of is that black folk working within the system brought about change."

● On progress: Hooks pointed to "6,500 elected officials" and "295 mayors" nationwide who are black.

● On South African apartheid: Hooks said he "prayed" the system of enforced racial separation would "die a peaceful death." But he warned that violence could take place if the U.S., Japan and other "First World" nations refuse to take a stronger stand against South Africa's white minority government.

● On reports of racism at the University of Michigan and other educational institutions, including allegedly racist statements made by a U-M dean: "I don't know what he meant, but I can read between the lines." The message, Hooks said, was that educational quality suffers when blacks are included.

'We can no more exist half first class and half second class than we could half slave and half free.'
— Benjamin Hooks
NAACP executive director

At the same time, Hooks encouraged young blacks in the audience to work harder to prepare themselves for college. He criticized emphasis upon "black English" during a question-and-answer session with students. While he agreed with a student's assessment that college entrance exams were "culturally biased," he said bias was irrelevant. "The answer is — study."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is the nation's oldest civil rights association. Hooks, a Memphis, Tenn., native, has been its leader since 1977.

County executive, sheriff announce jail expansion

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Vowing to keep more criminals behind bars, Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara and Sheriff Robert Ficano jointly announced an $8 million county jail expansion project Thursday.

But county officials might have to ask the state for at least $2 million to make it a reality.

Money from the sale of Westland Medical Center will be reserved to add space for 470 prisoners, McNamara said.

SALE OF the former county hospital is expected to bring in $6 million. The rest, McNamara said, would have to come from other sources.

Without being specific, McNamara said, state and federal sources could be tapped.

A seven-story addition would be built on Gratiot, next to the old county jail. The addition would hold 240 prisoners. It would be built on space currently used for prisoner recreation. Space for 170 additional prisoners would be added at the new jail, according to project architects Sims-Varner of Detroit.

Expanding the old jail would enable the county to keep overall costs at $20,000 per prisoner bed, McNamara said. Building a new jail would push costs closer to the national average of $69,000 per bed, he added.

The first 40 beds would be added this fall. The total project would be completed by fall 1989, McNamara said.

Ground could be broken this summer, McNamara said. The project awaits county commission approval.

OTHER JAIL expansion plans, including Ficano's proposal to house three prisoners to a cell, are pending.

"This isn't the end," McNamara said. The expansion proposal, however, isn't based upon triple bunking.

The county exceeded jail capacity "83 percent of the time" last year, Ficano said. An estimated 3,000 prisoners have been released due to overcrowding during the past 18 months, he added.

The county currently has space for space for 1,678 prisoners. New space would be added by closing gymnasiums and offices.

Teen health

Schools' study is under way

Wayne-Westland Community Schools deserves credit for adopting an open approach on the teen health clinic, a proposal that historically has been a controversial and emotionally charged issue in other districts.

WANT three words guaranteed to create a suburban stir?

Try the phrase "teen health clinic."

Even so much as whisper the idea in a few area communities and you'll be lucky to get out of town ahead of the school district sheriff (i.e., school board president) and a posse of "concerned" parents.

Last year, the Taylor Board of Education backed down from a plan to place clinics in that district's three high schools after a large number of parents protested the idea.

The parents believed — incorrectly — that the clinics would provide birth control devices to students in that district.

School board meetings took on an angry mob mentality until the idea was dropped.

Similar controversies have developed in other local school districts.

IN WAYNE-WESTLAND, though, there seems to be a different, more enlightened attitude.

And much of the credit belongs to the Wayne-Westland Community Schools District (which includes a portion of Canton), specifically the committee charged with heading up a yearlong study of the district's teen health needs.

In fact, the Teen Health Assessment Project Committee is going about its task with such level-headed professionalism, we believe it could serve as a model for other districts seeking to address similar concerns.

The committee has been meeting twice a month in its effort to determine exactly what type of overall health education program would best suit the district's 8,400 secondary school students in the 1990s.

The proposed program may or may not include the opening of teen health clinics at John Glenn and Wayne Memorial high schools.

Among the tools the committee will be using to help design the program is a comprehensive, confidential survey of some students in grades 7-12 and a similar survey of parents who have junior and senior high school sons or daughters.

The survey, to be taken in March, was designed with the help of the Center for Urban Studies at Wayne State University.

Committee members have shown by their actions that they will present a thoroughly researched proposal to the school board next spring.

IN ADDITION to its professional manner, the district's committee deserves praise for adopting an open approach on what has historically been such a controversial and emotionally charged issue.

A few parents sit on the committee and its meetings are open to the public.

The school administrators and health care professionals who make up the balance of the committee don't treat lay members as window dressing either. One parent's suggestion that the survey be available to parents of elementary school children is being incorporated into the project.

The health education proposal offered by the committee will ultimately have to stand on its own merits.

It will have to meet the approval of both the Wayne-Westland school board and the public.

Regardless of the result, both the district and committee members deserve credit for their efforts.

Take heart

Do something to save your life

We have come a long way in dealing with heart disease. But in many cases, it is just that — dealing with a disease already on its way to killing yet another person. Prevention is the key. And that can only be effective if you, the individual, cooperate.

FROM NOW ON we should take Valentine's Day to heart. Like New Year's, we should make it a time of renewal and resolution.

But instead of renewing a relationship with a long-lost love or resolving to launch into a new love interest, we should make it a day to take care of our hearts — that pump which feeds our entire system with its life-sustaining fluid.

Sure some industries would like you to buy some cards or a box of candies for the one you love. And that may all be well and good. But we really do need a day dedicated to combating one of this country's major killers — heart disease.

Certainly, we have come a long way in dealing with heart disease. But in many cases, it is just that — dealing with a disease already on its way to killing yet another person.

PREVENTION is the key. And that can only be effective if you, the individual, cooperate.

- Make the week in which Valentine's Day falls that time when you call your physician and get your annual checkup. If nothing else, that nagging feeling that you ought to do it will be relieved.
- Eating nutritionally can be a gourmet's delight. So watch your diet. It does take some getting used to. So make it an adventure by searching out some cookbooks and recipes that show you how to fix appetizing, yet healthy dishes.
- Make exercise fun. After checking with your physician, develop a good cardiovascular fitness program. It's very important that you adopt a program that you enjoy. Otherwise you'll quit after a short time. Maybe running isn't your bag. But maybe swimming, bicycling or walking does fit your fancy.
- Quit smoking. It can be done. But you must trick yourself into it by replacing the pleasure it offers by replacing it with something just as gratifying or maybe even more so.

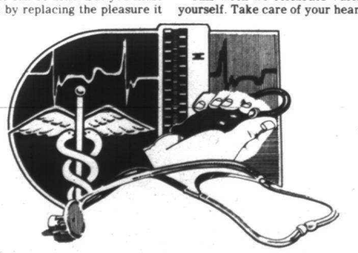
Try putting away each day the money you would have spent on cigarettes. Pavlov's bell couldn't work any better. Think about it. If you smoke two packs a day at $1.35 a pack, by the end of the first year, you will have saved $985, enough for a nice, quiet vacation.

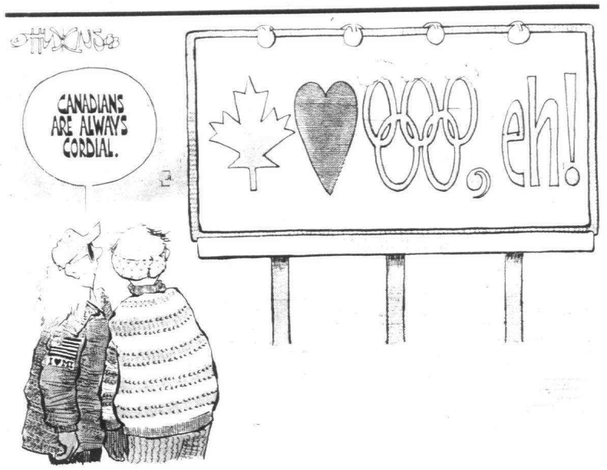
- "Bad" news can be good news. Too many people wait too long to see a physician for needed testing for fear of what they might find out. But heart disease just isn't going to go away by itself.

You and your physician working together can ferret out the problem, if any, and begin dealing with it. Some forms of heart disease are genetically triggered and may require surgery to fix. And today's success rate in procedures like bypass surgery are great.

Watching your diet and exercising can make the odds even better. The stronger you are, the more chance you have of surviving and recovering from a heart operation.

This week we celebrate Valentine's Day. Love yourself. Take care of your heart.





Suburbs should be wary of gambling committee

Steve Barnaby

Some plans just naturally make a body wary.

That's the way suburban Detroiters should feel about the "gambling" committee being established by the big city's mayor Coleman Young.

Frankly, setting up a study committee is an age-old political ruse to get what you want by having other folks reaffirm your wishes.

The cleverest part of the plan, of course, is to plant some opposition members on the committee. So when all is said and done and the committee does come out with a proposal approving casino gambling in Detroit, the mayor can always say, "see the unbelievers on the committee have seen the light. So should the rest."

Not a bad ploy. It often works.

But fortunately for those opposed to casino gambling, the mayor is having a tough time finding opposition which is willing to serve.

In this town casino gambling packs the same kind of emotion as the abortion debate. You are either for it or against it. No middle ground in this forum.

MAKE NO MISTAKE, casino gambling is something with which every suburban resident should be concerned. Its adoption would change the foundation of this community for as long as the roulette wheels spin for the dealers shuffle the cards.

Despite the fact that the casinos would very likely be located on faraway Belle Isle, the impact would be the same as if they were built in the next subdivision.

Remember, that people contemplating moving their businesses and families to this area don't distinguish. Nationally, Detroit is Detroit to those folks, whether it be Livonia, Plymouth, Farmington or Birmingham.

If Detroit is a gambling city, so are we.

Besides, Atlantic City has learned all the tough lessons about casino gambling. We should learn from it.

The only entities to benefit from gambling in that city are the casinos. The city still has many of the problems it had before the first gambling house popped on its lights.

Sure, we've got crime in metropolitan Detroit. But little sense exists in inviting in more. And it doesn't take much investigating to learn about gambling's link to organized crime. They have been partners in this country for longer than any of us can remember.

And if even all the crime associated with casino gambling remained within Detroit's boundaries, we know the scum who control it will live outside the cities. And those kind of neighbors, no matter how polite they may be, we don't need living next door.

Most important to remember is the kind of metropolitan area we want to leave behind for our children.

So by chance, if you're asked to sit on Coleman Young's gambling committee, cast your vote by saying "no thanks your honor." It's your safest bet.

Samaritan restores faith

To the editor:

I'm still smiling over the good Samaritan who found my stolen briefcase and dropped it in the mail.

It restored my faith in people, in someone who took the time to help out a stranger and make my life easier without a thought to reward.

But I know God's keeping score, and he just licked his finger and put a mark by your name.

Thank you so very much, whoever you are.

Student view on ice festival

To the editor:

Now and then people utter the expressions "love on the rocks" or "job on the rocks" or "scotch on the rocks," but what is "art on the rocks"? None of the above.

"Art on the rocks" is a new genre . . . ice sculpture!

Gigantic blocks of ice are transported to the working areas of the ice artists along the sidewalks of town and the center of the park. The working areas are "roped-off" for the safety of the spectators.

Hundreds of participants enter each year, including ice artists from Japan. The prerequisite for this art is frigid — cold, cold weather. Artists are heavily-clothed with only eyes uncovered. With extended electric chainsaws, they animate blocks of ice to a "buzzing" burst. Solo sculptures are by one; multi-media by groups.

The objects cover many characters and interests. In 1985 an outstanding ice-piece was the "chess set." Its size was mammoth and appeared as large as a room, with perfectly chiseled pawns.

This year the ship "Mayflower" was unique. It was a complex piece because of detail and the delicacy of the ropes and sails. It symbolized not only the Pilgrim's ship but the old landmark hotel, "The Mayflower" in Plymouth town.

Family agency is appreciative

To the editor:

The board of directors of Plymouth Family Services wishes to express to you its appreciation for media coverage presented by your paper.

We are grateful to your reporter, Julie Brown, who has written many excellent articles covering the agency's services and programs. Increasing public awareness of our services enables us to help more members of the community.

The primary goals of Family Services is to provide counseling to individuals, couples and families who live and work in the Plymouth community. The agency also offers an alcohol/drug education series to its clientele.

Respite care (older adult support services) is a new program for families and caregivers of adults age 60 and over. In-Home service provides relief for caregivers of disabled or frail older persons. Out-Of-Home care is provided for older persons who need supervision when family and friends are not available.

Continuing publicity through media articles is a very important means by which we are able to continue our mission. Your contribution to your community in this manner is greatly appreciated. On behalf of the board of directors of Plymouth Family Services, I thank you.

Don Davies, D.D.S., Plymouth

Thanks for arts coverage

To the editor:

As co-chairmen of the Plymouth Community Arts Council's first annual Fine Arts Competition, we would like to thank Julie Brown and the Plymouth Observer for the superb coverage given to us during the competition and of the show itself.

We felt that this Fine Arts Show added another dimension to the exciting Ice Sculpture Week in Plymouth and your articles helped bring it to the public attention.

We would like to also publicly thank all of our committee members who did a fantastic job of making the show a success.

Without Michigan National Bank, our first annual Michigan Fine Arts Competition would not have been possible. We especially thank them for funding this endeavor.

Again, many thanks for your continued support.

Rich Perlberg

There is reason to be frightened in Birmingham, Bloomfield Township, West Bloomfield Township and Farmington Hills.

All these affluent communities have attractive homes, well-kept neighborhoods, shiny cars in the driveway and one thing else: a rapist in their midst.

Since April there have been nine attacks in seven homes in a 16-square-mile area bounded by 13 Mile, Maple, Farmington and Cranbrook roads.

It's impossible to say that the attacker has always been the same man, but the similarities are frighteningly similar. He wears a ski mask and carries a knife. He attacks women in their home, once returning to the same address to attack a separate victim. He either gains entrance to the home or surprises women in their garages. The victim has almost always been alone. One exception: A Farmington Hills attack in which two women were raped.

IT'S FRIGHTENING to say that the attacks appear to be both random and calculated. There appears to be no common bond among the victims other than geography. Although the victims may be randomly chosen, it is hard to believe that the attacker moves by chance. By always catching the victims alone, he most certainly stakes out his prey beforehand. There is no way that such knowledge cannot strike fear into the hearts of women and those who love them.

The fear was evident in the people and their anger at a community meeting in Birmingham last week. Officials prudently called the meeting to offer information and advice to a worried populace. But people wanted more. They wanted someone to do something. They wanted someone to catch this guy.

HYATT EBY, a neighborhood activist, said he had heard all this advice after the first rash of attacks in Birmingham and Bloomfield Township last April. No more advice, he said. He wanted action. He wanted an arrest.

Well, of course. Everyone wants an arrest. It is difficult to tell how well the police are pursuing this case. But one thing is certain. Most of us have an unrealistic idea of what police can do. They can investigate crimes, they can locate known felons, they can react to eyewitness accounts. They can try to fight crime by long-range efforts such as community awareness programs, increased patrols and development of neighborhood watches.

But they can seldom stop a specific crime from happening. If you can't stop an intruder from breaking into your home or lurking in your garage, what makes you think a handful of police can?

Such talk does nothing to ease the fear. As one woman told me, "This is Birmingham. We don't even lock our doors here." They should be locked now.

Senate race brings back some old, familiar faces

Tim Richard

DEJA VU, the French say — something already seen.

That's how the 1988 U.S. Senate race is shaping up in Michigan. Nearly all the candidates have been around before.

Incumbent Democrat Don Riegle, 50, is seeking his third six-year term. He has been in politics 22 years.

Riegle was 28 and working for IBM in New York State when he got a call from the Republicans in Flint recruiting him to run for the U.S. House against incumbent John C. Mackie.

That was in 1966, a Republican landslide year in which Gov. George W. Romney won re-election and carried six Republican congressmen with him. Romney appointed Bob Griffin to the U.S. Senate, and Griffin won a full term, defeating the late G. Mennen Williams.

By 1970 Riegle was antsy to run against Sen. Phil Hart, but Republican chieftains insisted on an ordained candidate — Lenore Romney. She lost to Hart.

INCREASINGLY UNHAPPY with the Nixon Administration on civil rights, "the seeming contempt for young people" and the lack of GOP support he was getting, Riegle switched parties in 1973.

In 1976 Hart was dying of cancer and wouldn't seek a new term. Riegle won the Democratic nomination. The Republican he defeated was Marv Esch, a fellow member of the "class of '66." Six years later Riegle bested Phil Ruppe, a third member of Romney's class of '66.

IN THIS YEAR'S Senate sweepstakes, one of the first announced candidates was Bob Huber, 65, former mayor of Troy, state senator and congressman. Huber has been around, too. He made his first Senate bid in 1970 — against Lenore Romney. He made his second Senate bid in 1976 — against Esch.

Jim Elsman, a Birmingham lawyer, is seeking the GOP Senate nomination. At 51, Elsman is by no means old, but he has been around, too.

In 1966 he was a Democrat and got into the race against Soapy Williams and the late Detroit mayor, Jerry Cavanagh.

By 1976 "Roots" was popular TV and book fare, and ethnicity was "in." So "Dutch" Elsman, as he was now known, made another Senate bid — the one against Riegle and two others.

Since then, Elsman did a party switch and today is running as a Robertson Republican.

JIM DUNN, 45, hopped in last week. In 1980 Dunn won a term in the U.S.House in the old 6th District, which stretched from Lansing to Jackson. In 1982 the Democrats adjusted the boundary to exclude Jackson, where Dunn had spent a ton of money, and include Pontiac. Dunn lost.

Dunn made a U.S. Senate bid in 1984, but the Grand Old Party was looking for another consensus candidate and ganged up to support former astronaut Jack Lousma unsuccessfully against Sen. Carl Levin.

Dunn earned a reputation as a savage primary campaigner. This year he acknowledges "mistakes" and intends to seek a higher road.

RIEGLE, HUBER, Elsman, Dunn, deja vu.

The lone new face is Armand Velardo, a tax lawyer from the east-side suburbs. I didn't see him at the recent Republican State Convention, although I talked to a woman who talked to Gelardo on the phone and swears he really exists.

Don't misread me. I'm not complaining about seeing familiar faces in the campaign. After all, I covered all those contests, and I'm still around.

FOOTNOTE: In his 1972 book "O Congress," Riegle, then still a Republican, wrote of his friendship with a Texas congressman. They spoke at each other's fund-raisers and compared notes on their Senate ambitions. Their joint idea of a gag was to trip one another in the House aisles. The Texan even gave Riegle a $500 contribution.

That Texan was George Bush.

Justice Kennedy joins constitutional class

Fred DeLano

A particularly timely dispatch from my favorite conservative on the national scene, the scholarly and renowned Russell Amos Kirk, doctor of letters, arrived in last week's mail. Its focus was upon the phrase "original intent" as it pertains to provisions of the U.S. Constitution drawn up in 1787 and ratified in 1788.

The timeliness stems from the fact that just one week from today the man who will be sworn in as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, Anthony Kennedy, has taught constitutional law for 22 years at the McGeorge School of Law in Sacramento, Calif.

On the day Justice-to-be Kennedy was confirmed by the U.S. Senate, 97-0, his acceptance statement included the sentence, "I am committed to the idea of the rule of law and to the American constitutional system."

I'll wager that pleased the Kirk clan living on top of Piety Hill in the little town of Mecosta up in mid-Michigan. This is why:

Critic, historian of ideas, biographer, novelist, political theorist, essayist, journalist, distinguished professor, lecturer and debater, the Plymouth-born Kirk has been in the thick of intellectual controversies for more than three decades.

He addressed the constitutional intent issue in a recent lecture at The Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C., presenting — and attempting to answer — these questions:

"Are the provisions of the constitutions binding in perpetuity upon all judges, unless those provisions should be formally amended? What latitude of interpretation should be allowed to the Supreme Court? Are there ascertainable original intentions of the men who framed and ratified the constitution? If so, are those intentions still applicable at law, two centuries later?"

The verbatim copy of the lecture runs 11 single-spaced pages and is recommended reading for any student of U.S. history. You possibly could get a copy by writing Kirk at Mecosta 49332 or The Heritage Foundation, 214 Massachusetts Ave. N.E., Washington, D.C. 20002.

Limited space forces me to jump to what I consider highlights of his conclusions, and I quote:

"If a reasonable attachment to the written text of the constitution — which does not mean a blinkered literalism at all times — is not retained or restored as the standard for interpretation of the basic law of the United States, we will be left with a most unpromising alternative.

"That alternative mode would be the domination of American public policy and much of American private life, by the impulses, prejudices, and ideological dogmata of the nine justices of the Supreme Court.

"Those justices having received no systematic preparation for serving as a kind of oligarchy or council of ephors, they would make many blunders, some disastrous. They have made a good many grave blunders already over the past 40 years and more.

"Their power to do mischief would become almost infinite, their ability to rule prudently would be improbable. In any event, such a scheme would abolish the American democracy and enfeeble both Congress and the presidency, if the justices were permitted to perpetuate their assumption of haughty authority, power the courts of law never were intended to exercise.

"But presumably the Supreme Court would not be permitted to continue in this usurping of power. The Congress and the executive force, if pushed to the wall, have means for repelling this judicial insolence."

Senate outlaws college bias

Here's how Michigan's two U.S. senators voted on major issues during the opening week of the second session of the 100th Congress. There were no House votes.

Roll Call Report

SENATE

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL — By a vote of 75 for and 14 against, the Senate passed and sent to the House a civil rights bill (S 557) outlawing all forms of discrimination in all operations of colleges and universities that receive federal aid.

This would undo a 1984 Supreme Court ruling, in a case involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania, that the federal law banning sex discrimination applies only to the specific campus program receiving federal aid, not to the entire institution.

Supporter John Kerry, D-Mass., said "let us reaffirm our commitment to civil rights in 1988."

Opponent Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the bill "authorizes a dramatic, radical increase in the jurisdiction of the federal government."

Senators voting yes favored the bill.

Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle voted yes.

NEWS MEDIA OWNERSHIP — By a vote of 60 for and 30 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment in behalf of Rupert Murdoch's bid to continue owning both newspaper and television properties in New York and Boston.

The amendment to S 557 (above) sought to preserve Murdoch's exemption from the Federal Communications Commission ban on "cross-ownership" of broadcast operations and newspapers in the same market. He owns the New York Post and WNYW in New York and the Boston Herald and WFXT in Boston.

The FCC waiver applies only to Murdoch and would end under a 1987 law now being temporarily stayed by a federal court. Murdoch says that if the law stands, he will put the New York Post up for sale and probably also divest himself of WFXT.

Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who voted to table the amendment, said he does not want the FCC "to buckle before the onslaught of a powerful special interest named Rupert Murdoch."

Murdoch supporter Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said ending the FCC waiver "will suppress . . . robust, wide-open debate in the Boston and New York media markets."

Senators voting yes were opposed to the pro-Murdoch amendment.

Levin and Riegle voted yes.

ABORTION AMENDMENT — By a vote of 56 for and 39 against, the Senate attached anti-abortion language to the bill (S 557) extending the reach of federal anti-discrimination laws (above).

Under the language, the new civil rights legislation could not be used to require colleges and universities to perform or pay for abortions.

Senators voting yes favored the anti-abortion amendment.

Levin voted yes and Riegle voted no.

Special Olympics: Her specialty

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Paperwork isn't what Susie Pidsosny likes best about her job.

Pidsosny is Wayne County area director for Special Olympics. She enjoys working with athletes and volunteers.

When she's at Special Olympics events, Pidsosny sees all of that hard work going to good use.

"It makes all the work worthwhile."

The Special Olympics program provides athletic training and competition opportunities for retarded people. Special Olympics is open to athletes age 8 and older.

Wayne County Special Olympics athletes range in age from 8 on up to their 60s, with 27 the approximate average age.

Canton resident Susie Pidsosny is Wayne County area director for Special Olympics.

Staff photos by Bill Bresler

"Let me win, but if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt" is the Special Olympics oath.

"They're not there to win, they're there to do their best," Pidsosny said.

SOME OF the athletes get frustrated at times when things don't go their way. They're reminded that winning isn't what's most important; trying is what counts.

"We tell them that's all we're asking." She likes seeing the determination on the faces of the athletes.

One event she recalls involved a basketball tournament. One team was losing; a player from that team fell.

A player from the winning team quickly helped that player get up and then asked the spectators for a round of applause for his hard-working opponent.

"I just thought that was so wonderful. If I hadn't been hooked before, that would have done it right then and there."

Pidsosny, a 35-year-old Canton resident, has been involved with Special Olympics for about eight years. She started as a volunteer at a bowling tournament.

"My husband and I both went and got hooked immediately." Pidsosny's husband, Richard, is assistant area director for Special Olympics in Wayne County.

"We kept it in the family," she said with a laugh.

Richard Pidsosny, an electrical engineer with the Ford Motor Co., knows quite a bit about computers; that expertise has helped keep the Special Olympics program well-organized.

AS TIME passed, Susie Pidsosny became more and more active in Special Olympics.

"I always jump in both feet at once." If she's interested in a cause, she gets involved.

Pidsosny worked in a variety of other Special Olympics volunteer jobs, including games director for the spring games. She assumed her current position in September 1986.

Her role is a volunteer one. She's the area director for all of Wayne County except for the Detroit Public Schools, which has its own program.

Pidsosny oversees programs in Wayne County, including those run through school districts, group homes and several Association for Retarded Citizens groups.

She's responsible for coordinating the countywide meets.

Special Olympics programs are offered year-round in a variety of sports including softball, soccer, winter sports, gymnastics, weightlifting, walking and swimming.

Pidsosny was impressed with what she saw at the bowling tournament when she volunteered.

"Just the feeling that we got when we left that first bowling tournament" made Pidsosny feel that the athletes enjoyed the bowling and liked being with their friends.

PIDSOSNY DIDN'T have any earlier experience working with retarded people. She was born and raised in southwest Detroit. She graduated from Western High School and earned a bachelor's degree in liberal arts from Wayne State University.

'They're not there to win, they're there to do their best. We tell them that's all we're asking.'
—Susie Pidsosny
Special Olympics

"It was a totally new experience," she said of her Special Olympics work.

When she worked as a Special Olympics bowling coach, some of the athletes had better averages than Pidsosny did. She took some teasing about that.

"We have some excellent athletes." Last year, a Wayne-Westland softball team brought home the bronze medal for third place at the International Summer Games.

The Special Olympics program is designed so that athletes compete with those at comparable skill levels. The program benefits from the help of volunteers, including members of such groups as the Civitans and the Jaycees.

Pidsosny has lived in Canton since 1977.

"We really like it. We really enjoy the community." The Pidsosnys have no children, although they work with a number of young Special Olympics athletes.

Wayne County's Area 23 of Special Olympics includes about 1,435 athletes. That number represents about 20 percent of the eligible population, she said.

Bruce Goins is a 17-year-old senior at North Farmington High School. He's in treatment at Straight as a recovering alcoholic.

One step at a time, he's going straight

By Loraine McClish
staff writer

BRUCE GOINS is dividing his time these days between classes at North Farmington High School, swim practice, his Farmington Hills home and Straight, where he is in treatment for drug abuse.

The 17-year-old wryly admits that his current lifestyle, in some respects, is similar to living under house arrest. He makes little to no decisions about how his time is spent. He needs written permission to vary the schedule for even an hour.

But step by step, he is given larger amounts of responsibility, working toward his graduation from Straight, when he will hopefully be equipped with the wherewithal to face a future without drugs.

He refers to himself as "Mr. Tough Guy," or "a wild and crazy man," when he speaks of his life before entering the long-term therapy in Straight last June.

Today, he says "I'm learning how to have a good time." Before, his good times used to be more costly and hardly enriching.

"I'd get the money, then get the alcohol, then get drunk, then get paranoid and start watching the clock because I had to sober up before I got home. Then I'd feel guilty — or ashamed of some of the outrageous behavior. Then, in order to deal with the embarrassment I'd get high again.

"It wasn't fun. It was boring and scary."

WHAT GOINS describes is the vicious cycle Straight finds common in the 12- to 20-year-olds who come for help to the Plymouth-based facility.

When Goins uses the word "drugs," he is talking about the entire gamut of abused substances, including alcohol. His "druggie friends" are those who use (or used) any of the substances, sometimes in combination.

"My choice just happened to be alcohol. It was no trouble to buy. I was buying it, or getting it, since I was 12. Last year in school, all I had were druggie friends. Coming back to school was hard. I think it was a week before I even talked to anybody. Now, I have one straight friend," he said.

Goins is in phase 4 of the five-phase therapy.

"Graduation day will come when it comes," he said. "I'll be here for as long as it takes."

In phase 1, teens are removed from their own home and school. They live in foster homes, attend school at Straight and receive intensive counseling there.

Special Olympics: It's her specialty

"Time, I guess, is the big element." Time constraints can make it difficult for athletes to get involved in Special Olympics activities.

SHE APPRECIATES the assistance of the volunteers who help keep Special Olympics running smoothly.

"I think we're very fortunate." Those who are interested in volunteering may call Pidsosny at 981-2300.

"Without the volunteers, we would not have a program."

Those volunteers include teachers, accountants, "just a little bit of everything," she said.

Some volunteers are high school students; others are older people. Some volunteers have children involved in Special Olympics.

"We try not to overtax the parents," Pidsosny said. They try to keep the parents' time free, so parents can watch their children compete.

This year, the state softball tournament for Special Olympics will be close to home for Pidsosny. It's scheduled for early August at the Canton Softball Center on Michigan Avenue.

That event will attract at least 500 athletes from throughout Michigan, Pidsosny said.

The Canton resident plans to continue working with Special Olympics "as long as they want me." It's her goal to have one of the best county programs in Michigan.

Sue Goins' role as a house mother is a requirement of her son's treatment in Straight.

They're recovering from a life of lunacy

By Loraine McClish
staff writer

When Sue Goins' youngest child was winding up his junior year in high school, she though her child-rearing days were nearing an end. But by the time he was a senior, she was foster mother to a houseful of teen-agers.

"I have five now and have been told I'll have another one next week," she said.

The teens have been removed from their own homes and schools in the first phase of drug rehabilitation through Straight.

Her role as house mother is a requirement of her son's treatment in the Plymouth-based program, which boasts a 70 percent success rate.

"We have our ups and downs," she said of the teens who have come and gone since last fall. "Some days, the energy here is so high you can feel it. Some days are down in the pits. But even on the down days, I can see the progress. I see some of them opening up, blossoming like flowers."

The house is run strictly according to Straight guidelines. In many respects, the parents of the recovering teen are held to rules as rigid as those laid down for those in treatment, while each works their way back from what Goins called "a life of lunacy."

THERAPY FOR teens and their families runs parallel.

"This week, we're attending classes in how to be rational. The teens will be attending eight classes. The parents must attend three," Goins said.

Sue and Gene Goins' "life of lunacy" paralleled that of their 17-year-old son, Bruce, even though Bruce was drinking long before his parents suspected that as the cause of a lot of irrational behavior.

Bruce was ultimately diagnosed as a "functioning alcoholic," which takes a lot of manipulating and a lot of clever lying and covering-up.

An example of this were 24 hours skipped from North Farmington High School in one marking period on such a selective basis that the parents were never informed. Or keeping up a just-barely-making-it C average to stay on the swimming team, the only thing meaningful to him in school.

Isolated incidents of discovered lies, reckless driving, back talking or no talking, a fist punched into a steel locker, alcohol hidden in a shampoo bottle and, ultimately, physical violence brought Bruce to a round of sessions in drug rehabilitation centers, with psychologists and psychiatrists.

"Not one of them told me he was addicted," his mother said.

WHAT THEY told her was variations on the same theme.

"We were told some teens had a harder problem going through with adolescence than others. We were told he did not have a drinking problem.

"He was labeled 'incorrigible,' and we were told to send him to military school. We were told he had an attitude problem. We were told he had parents who were a little out of touch with the times, and we should soften up a bit with the curfew and responsibilities.

"But whatever we did, nothing changed."

THE LIFE of lunacy hit its nadir the day school was out last June: a party, the threat of an assault and battery charge against Bruce, an attempt by him to jump out of a second-floor window, an attempt to cut his arm and a call to the Farmington Hills Police to break up a wild fight.

"It took three squad cars to do it," Sue Goins said.

Her next phone calls were to every rehabilitation center she knew. She connected up with Straight because it was the one that could give her an immediate appointment.

Sue Goins knew she would be leaving their son at Straight, which is part of the program. Bruce thought he was going to see another counselor for more outpatient treatment, which is also part of the program.

"Gene went to indulge me. It was mandatory that he be there for that first meeting, but he was still in denial. He just couldn't bring himself to believe his son had a drug program," Sue said.

"Bruce was scheduled to go to swim camp that week, and after that, he had a job as a camp swim counselor. The staff at Straight told us that would have to wait or it was going to be too late.

"The first time we heard Bruce say 'I am a druggie,' my husband cried. I felt nothing but relief. I was relieved because it was the first glimmer of hope that we were finally going to get some help."

SUE AND Gene Goins spend a minimum of two nights a week at Straight, 42320 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, in open meetings, classes, discussion groups or rap sessions, "getting back our own personalities," she said.

"All of us changed through this time. We were altering our behaviors for four years while this was going on," she said.

And she sees a "100 percent turnabout" in her son's self confidence and self esteem.

"There's no more stomping up the stairs and slamming the door. If we have a conflict, he is the one who forces me to come to a resolution.

"He's taking responsibility for his own actions. He's learning how to come to grips with a challenge."

Going straight hasn't been an easy task

In phase 2, they return home, where the rebuilding of the family takes place under Straight guidelines; therapy is provided for the entire family.

IN PHASE 3, they are sent back to their own school. Getting an afternoon or weekend job is encouraged. The staff at Straight believes it has at least one of its teens placed in every fast-food restaurant along Ann Arbor Road.

In phase 4, the teens begin to deal on their own with the pressures of the day — one pressure and one day at a time. Intense therapy continues. So does the "house arrest" status. The staff knows where every one of its 80 teens are every minute of the day.

In phase 5, the teens are allowed days off. They're challenged with finding new friendships and new activities.

When Goins reaches Phase 5, he will also join Alcoholics Anonymous.

While Goins was living in a foster home, his parents, Gene and Sue Goins, were becoming licensed foster parents to take other teens in Straight into their home.

Living in the same house with the newcomers to Straight, Goins said, has given him the only responsibility he says he can remember in life where he felt really committed.

"They can't fool me. I've been there," he said. "I know about the yelling and the pouting and the slamming doors. I know about the 'I-don't-care' image and the excuses the teacher hates me, the dog ate my homework.

"I know about the violence and the anger feelings and the mood swings. I know that we all, somewhere along the line, just never got around to learning how to share our feelings."

There was a time in his life, Goins said, "when I had to do more and more crazy stuff to get a good feeling. A lot of that came from calculated risks, look at my driving record. I was so insecure, and I thought it was fun. Everything was centered around the next wild party."

Goins is not giving much thought now to college or a career.

"I'm still forgiving myself for some of the stupid things. But mostly I'm living just for today, just one day at a time."

moral perspectives

Rabbi Irwin Groner

The best gift of all is giving of oneself

One of the most fascinating aspects of human existence is the giving of gifts. Some are intended to display wealth and power, to dominate. Others are an expression of reciprocity and exchange for favors received.

There is an endless assortment of rewards and punishments that we give ourselves as prizes for successes or penalties for failure. Be it a cocktail or a safari, the indulgence is legitimatized under the all encompassing phrase, "You owe it to yourself."

Life is a wondrous gift of God. Each person, regardless of status, sex or age, is given a 24 hour day and night. The recipient is free to employ or exploit it. Yet God gladly accepts whatever stewardship we may offer in return.

The receipt of any gift carries an element of surprise and for a fleeting moment transports one into a magic world that transcends time, space, poverty, and difficulties.

UNFORTUNATELY, many associate deep love with expensive gifts. Children teach us much, for they register little concern for brand names and price tags. They are impressed by unique, genuine, and appropriate affections of affection.

In his provocative book "The Meaning of Gifts," the noted Swiss psychiatrist, Paul Tournier reminds us that in "some respects, the great quest for gifts is a means by which we deceive ourselves, and by our little gifts, we numb our longing for the greater ones which escape us."

Even so, if each gift is a symbol of love, it communicates powerful statements of worth and belonging. If giving is identifying with another at the level of care and affection, then gifts must be chosen with delicate discrimination, since they embody our feelings about relationships.

Beyond the motives and methods of giving, we need to remember Emerson's trenchant words: "Rings and jewels are not gifts, but apologies for gifts. The only gift is a portion of thyself."

Rabbi Irwin Groner is with Congregation Shaarey Zedek.

Most Holy Trinity Church to present choral concert

At 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 14, the Detroit Philomusica Chorus will present a concert at Most Holy Trinity Church, Porter and Sixth streets, Detroit.

The program will consist entirely of vocal music of Sir Edward Elgar. Although best known for his large-scale orchestral music, Elgar produced a sizeable body of music for voices throughout his long career.

Featured on the program will be the first known local performance of the song cycle for chorus with piano, "From the Bavarian Highlands." Written during summers in the 1890s when the Elgars vacationed in the scenic Bavarian Alps, the work set to music poems by Elgar's wife, Alice.

Rounding out the program will be an early set of sacred motets for choir and organ, the song cycle, "Sea Picture," with Danica Randall, mezzo-soprano, and a group of songs for unaccompanied chorus.

The Detroit Philomusica is a semi-professional chorus founded by its conductor, Thomas Kuras, and concentrates on the performance of little-known music of the 18th and 19th centuries.

This varied program of Elgar's music will be "at home" in the Victorian style Most Holy Trinity Church. The church was redecorated in a modern adaptation of the Victorian style. The program will utilize the church's restored pipe organ built in 1867, the oldest such instrument in Detroit.

The concert will benefit Most Holy Trinity. The 90-minute concert will begin at 3 p.m. Tickets are $4 and available at the door. For more information, call Sally Owen at 965-6292.

Mt. Hope Congregational Church, 30330 Schoolcraft, Livonia, will have two special events on Sunday, Feb. 14, to celebrate Valentine's Day.

During the 10:30 p.m. church service, the preschool and elementary Sunday School children will sing songs of Jesus' love. After the service, Friends and Lovers, a fellowship group of young marrieds, will serve a "Feast of Love." A strolling barbershop quartet will circulate during the all-church dinner. There will be no charge for the dinner but donations will be accepted. For reservations, call 425-7280.

Stanford C. Stoddard: "Money is the one form of language that doesn't restrict itself to state boundaries. A dollar is a dollar. There's nothing wrong with states' rights — except in money and banking."

Stoddard: banking's maverick innovator

Despite his current problems, Stanford C. Stoddard has a place in history as one who changed the face of banking.

"My father saw the despair and trauma of the Great Depression," said Stoddard in an interview last week. "I can't say I experienced the trauma," he added, but he learned a lot of banking from the late Howard C. Stoddard, founder of Michigan National Bank, and he learned about the economic trauma of the 1930s.

Following his father as chairman of Michigan National from 1972-84, Stoddard, now 57, was unconventional — a "maverick" who advocated consumer banking, statewide branch banking, nationwide banking, consumer credit cards, Saturday hours and electronic banking.

And he predicted a marriage between banks, travel agents and utilities.

He spoke admiringly of the late G. Mennen Williams, liberal Democratic governor from 1949-60, and chuckled at his own heresy: "Bankers are supposed to be conservative Republicans, aren't they?"

STODDARD IS free on bond pending appeal of his federal court conviction for defrauding Michigan National's Jackson subsidiary. But the interview topic was change in banking — what the company he headed had done, and what he sees ahead.

He was forced to resign 3½ years ago and recently was forbidden by the Federal Reserve Board to have any role in banking because of the administrative law judge's finding that he misapplied funds. Stoddard contends the charges weren't substantiated. Currently he has a business in the American Center in Southfield where he handles franchise financing.

His father had worked for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, a federal agency, and believed many area banks failed because they did too much underwriting of investments.

Bankers of the 1930s and '40s believed in local, unit banking because "only the local banker knew what to do. He didn't provide a lot of credit sometimes to the consumer because he thought the consumer was a risk type of person."

Here's the fax: transmitting changes business operations

By Philip Sherman
special writer

Richard Leland of Mailboxes Etc. in Livonia tells the story of a local client who closed a real estate deal in Traverse City.

The client didn't have to leave Livonia. All the paperwork necessary for closing the deal was beamed back and forth via fax machine, in less than an hour, for under $2 per page.

"It shouldn't have even taken that long. Pages can transmit in under 30 seconds, but there were other considerations that had nothing to do with the technology," Leland said.

Mailboxes Etc., a packaging and shipping service, is one of the many franchises adding fax capabilities to photocopying, printing and, in some cases, convenience services such as film processing. The franchises are gearing for a growing market that requires rapid document transmission but doesn't want to invest in a fax machine.

On the flip side, the cost of fax machines has dropped so substantially during the past four years that small businesses once locked out of the technology by cost alone now can afford a cost-effective, high-quality machine, according to Arnie Rautbort, regional sales manager for Fax Express in Farmington Hills. His company sells only fax machines.

Fax is short for facsimile transmission. A document, photograph or anything that can be photocopied can be fed into a fax machine, which transmits the information, via ordinary telephone lines, to any other compatible fax machine in the world. The information rolls out of the receiving fax machine in the same format as it was sent. Quality varies, depending on the machine and the type of paper used.

'Customers can fax information for immediate approval and follow up with regular mail for file copies.'

— Arnie Rautbort

LELAND SAID Mailboxes Etc. is installing fax machines throughout its stores so customers with infrequent fax needs can beam documents from one Mailbox to the next, or to an office. The process can be reversed so a person waiting in any Mailbox store can receive a document from any office, much the way Western Union telegraph offices sent messages before phones were available.

"There's no confusion, no misunderstandings like on a telephone — it's clean because it's written," Leland said. "You can send anything anywhere. We still have to use Telex for the Third World, for getting into places like Zimbabwe, because fax is just getting there," he added. "But it won't take long." Telex is direct, terminal-to-terminal word communication.

It hasn't taken long for lawyers in particular to realize the advantages of moving documents via fax, according to Rautbort. "Customers of mine can fax information for immediate approval and follow up with regular mail for file copies," he said. Legal briefs, leases — "anything legal that needs to be approved" — is being sent in a matter of seconds, taking much of the allure out of overnight mail services.

Armand Schneider, a Federal Express representative, said "We know it (fax) will take away from the document business" but added the company plans to compensate for its document mail service with a heavier emphasis on packages.

He also said the company's now-defunct Zap Mail service, which offered fax-on-wheels convenience to businesses, "was an idea before its time. But we were going into international expansion and that combined with the losses on Zap forced its closing." The service ran from 1984 to September 1986.

Popularity of the half-pound overnight letter should not be underestimated, Schneider said, noting it was 16 percent above projections as of November 1986. The five-pound Courier envelope also was relatively unharmed by fax because "people are using it for the larger, 50-60 page documents you wouldn't want to send through a fax," Schneider added.

RAUTBORT ALSO said doctors with multiple offices but one set of patient records are seeing the advantages of fax transmission. "If someone is in one office and their records are in another, they can be faxed. Doctors involved in international research projects are also sending information via fax because it is faster and less expensive, he said.

"In general the market isn't as specific as it used to be. Any office now can use fax due to price drops," he said. A November 1987 Business Week article said the average cost of a full-featured fax machine is about $2,300, down from $4,700 in 1980. It cited figures from Dataquest that said 330,000 fax machines were sold last year, compared to 50,000 in 1980.

Even with the price drop, American Speedy Print, headquartered in Birmingham, still is studying the idea of installing fax machines in its 462 franchise outlets, according to Linda Suneson, purchasing director.

THE STODDARDS' philosophy was that consumers deserved services, too. And because consumers had no access to major capital markets, they should be served by a statewide bank that could assemble a large amount of deposits in order to spread the risk.

"This idea was bitterly opposed by the Michigan Bankers Association. They actually passed resolutions condemning statewide branch banking. Obviously, it was directed at one institution — Michigan National — which was organized in 1939-40 when the law allowed some form of statewide banking."

AFTER A BANK holding company law was passed in 1971, Michigan National was reorganized as a series of banks with names like "Oakland" and "West Metro" following its parental name. Last year under a new law, Michigan National became a single bank again.

To Stoddard, statewide banking is natural. "There's nothing sinful or immoral about it," he said, citing the experience of Western growth states.

Beginning in October, banks will be able to acquire other banks across state lines. The Michigan market may see famous eastern names like Chase Manhattan and Morgan Guaranty popping up.

"The United States is the only developed country in the world that didn't have national (nationwide) banking," Stoddard said. "Money is the one form of language that doesn't restrict itself to state boundaries. A dollar is a dollar. There's nothing wrong with states' rights — except in money and banking."

TWO OTHER policies marked Stoddard and Michigan National as mavericks.

They pushed consumer use of credit cards. In the recession that began in the late 1970s, he recalled, "We got a lot of criticism from the regulators who said, 'You're too forbearing with these people. These accounts are six months past due. Charge it off.'"

His reply, hearkening back to the experience of the Depression, was: "What does it serve to cut off these people? It won't always be like this in Michigan. These people will stay with you."

And Michigan National offices were open on Saturdays, just like Sears and Ward's and other retailers. Howard Stoddard began that move, hiring teachers and using staff who liked the idea of a Sunday-Monday weekend.

Automatic teller machines aren't unique to Michigan National, but Stoddard said the bank he headed placed the largest order when they came on the market — "larger than Citicorp, Bank of America, any of the giants. That was one of the great decisions. We virtually flooded the state."

Now a person can travel to a faraway state and prove creditworthiness in an emergency by getting a printout of his account balance with the ATM card. "That's the beauty of electronic banking," he said.

DOWN THE ROAD, there are opportunities for these changes:

- "The marriage of banking and travel is a natural," he said. "Airlines make tens of thousands of reservations for people who never show up. Sometimes people take the trips and don't pay the travel agent."
- A bank/travel agent could make the reservation, debit the travelers $50 as a down payment and deduct the remainder at the time of the flight. "We have all the electronic apparatus for arranging for hotels and rent-a-cars and everything else. But there's a prohibition for banks to operate travel agencies except in a very narrow area."
- At present, utilities read meters, mail out bills and wait 30 days for the customer to send a check. An easier way would be for the bank to deduct a typical monthly bill, then make an adjustment later for greater or lesser utility usage.
- A broader-based kind of financial institution that includes the functions of savings and loan associations. S&Ls have wanted to become banks for years, he said, and already can branch statewide.

But Stoddard wouldn't have banks operating as stock brokers because brokers give advice that can result in capital losses. A bank, he said, should be able to say:

"When you leave money with us, you're going to get it back, and there's going to be no question about it."

Fax machine speeds business

"We're definitely into it here in our home offices. It's a real benefit for communicating with our banking sources and vendors.

"We're doing field testing to see if it would be an asset for our customers, but we don't have any results yet," she added.

Darryl Buchanan, vice president of operations in charge of the field testing, said about five centers have a fax machine and that they'll be "doing it for sure in the regional offices."

In the future, Rautbort said fax development companies will come out with plain paper machines, voiding the use for today's thermal paper. He also already has seen thermal ribbons that transfer images to plain paper.

Thermal paper can, but doesn't always, fade over time. Rautbort said he's been carrying the same documents in his briefcase for more than two years, and they're just as crisp as the day they were printed. But plain paper will allow more faxed documents to be used as actual file copies and not just for approval.

Perhaps the largest change Rautbort foresees is a direct tie-in among all office machines. For example, someone in office A could write a document on a personal computer and send it directly from the screen to a fax machine.

"It will be all computer communications," he said.

Folk hero status of Ross Perot is troubling

The latest episode of the Ross and Roger show has Fortune magazines stacked knee-deep at drugstore cash registers in the GM building.

Ross Perot has the best description of the on-going war of words between him and GM management when he calls it "gorilla dust" — a reference to the ape's habit of tossing handfuls of dirt in the air to distract its opponents when fighting.

So far, at least, no gorilla has landed on the cover of Fortune, as Perot did recently, grinning next to the headline "How I Would Turn Around GM." But the cover story is solid gold gorilla dust, distracting from one of the better analyses of GM's current problems I've read lately, including an insightful look at what really transpired between Perot and GM.

Perot, you remember, built EDS, a kind of Kelly Girl service for companies in need of computer programmers, into one of the largest personally run companies in the country. The sale of EDS to GM including the original buyout made Perot the world's richest man in terms of ready cash — but did little to teach him humility.

THE CONFLICT between Perot's public image and GM's troubles with EDS is spelled out in two separate articles in the current issue of Fortune.

In Fortune's overview of GM's current condition, EDS is seen as lacking the technical expertise GM needed, while EDS management under Perot was insistent on maximizing its profits on services supplied to its parent GM.

GM's effort to audit its new acquisition spurred the corporate infighting that led to Perot's first public criticism of GM on the cover of Business Week. The gorilla dust flew faster after that.

CURIOUSLY, GM finally appears to have turned around EDS.

The last earnings report was up 45 percent for GM Class E (EDS) stock, with a decline in charges to GM. Without Perot, EDS management appears to have achieved a major change in the company's strategy, increasing its share of outside business and reducing its reliance on GM while boosting overall sales.

Perot's suggestions for turning around GM, on the other hand — 25 points that concentrate on bringing on quicker decision making at a lower level of management — seem to be straight from the GM handbook as rewritten by GM chairman Roger Smith. The most original idea is replacing the current board of directors with outside stockholders which, of course, eliminates Perot these days.

THE IRONY of attempting to take credit for current GM strategy is that at the moment it doesn't seem to be working. Smith, of course, argues vehemently it just hasn't been given enough time.

Perot's style is best illustrated by an anecdote about how he went to a local Cadillac garage and discovered, by talking to a mechanic that GM was buying cheap gaskets that had to be replaced to fix the cars.

It's a folksy tale, although according to Cadillac engineers, early models of the engine in question leaked because of a new robot-applied liquid sealant that wasn't working. The engines didn't have any gaskets, let alone cheap ones.

So here we have Perot talking to mechanics. Smith claiming ignorance of the problem (which figures — who's going to tell the boss unless he asks first?). GM engineers fixing the problem, and nobody much communicating with anybody.

IN FACT, Perot seems to enjoy playing brinkmanship with his own credibility. While he's chiding GM for excessive decorating costs in its boardroom, we are expected to assume the Remington bronzes on his desk were bought at K mart.

The wonder is that he has gained an uncritical audience so easily. It's a reflection of the depth of GM's current problems and the public perception of what ought to be done.

Yet another kind of gorilla dust.

Mortgage interest law simplifies rules

In my column published Jan. 21, I mentioned that interest on up to two home mortgages is tax deductible, provided the total mortgage does not exceed the cost basis plus improvements on these houses.

While this rule is still valid, the tax law passed a few weeks ago significantly changes one aspect of this rule. It helps the medium-income families but harms the higher middle class and rich people.

The key features

The critical date is Oct. 14, 1987. Old rules apply to mortgages that were in place before that date. However, for new mortgages two different caps have been imposed.

First, you can deduct the interest payments on home mortgages that total up to $1 million on no more than two houses. These mortgages must be taken out on new or substantially remodeled houses. The "cost basis" rule applies to the deduction of this interest.

Second, there is a separate cap on the refinancing of your old house. Previously, you could fully deduct interest on refinancing your house provided the loan did not exceed the original cost of the house plus the cost of improvements made and the amount spent on certain allowable items (for example, medical and educational expenses).

Under the new law all that is changed. You can now borrow up to $100,000 on your existing house and fully deduct the interest on this loan. The cost basis of your house does not matter any more. Neither do the medical and educational expenses. In short, you can borrow up to $100,000 on your house and do anything with the money you please. The interest on this loan will be fully deductible from your income tax.

More complicated issues

What if you refinanced your house with a cost basis of, say, $200,000 and obtained a $150,000 loan? Since your new loan is lower than the cost basis of the house, would you be allowed to deduct the interest on $150,000 from your taxes? The answer is yes, but only if the excess interest (over the $100,000 cap) is deducted from interest income earned on investments.

Let's take a different situation to see if we can't take advantage of the $1 million limit and you should have a $400,000 house on which you still owe $50,000. If you paid off the existing mortgage you would own this house free and clear.

Now if you take out a $300,000 loan, the loan would be far below the $1 million limit and you should have no difficulty writing off the interest on this loan. Right? Wrong, says the IRS.

Since you are refinancing your house, you are still subject to the $100,000 cap. The law does allow you to borrow up to $1 million and deduct the interest on it, but the loan must be used either to acquire, or to substantially rehabilitate, the property.

Consumer loan interest still applies

If you borrow more than $100,000 to refinance your house, and do not have interest income, interest on the excess balance can still be partially written off as consumer interest for the next three years. The consumer interest rules allow you to deduct only 40 percent of the interest in 1988, 20 percent next year, 10 percent in 1990 and nothing after that.

Refinancing makes sense

Under the new rules, refinancing a house for up to $100,000 makes sense in three instances. First, your net worth could grow dramatically if you released the locked-up equity from your house and invested it safely.

Second, if you have expensive (18 percent on your Visa, for instance) loans outstanding, you can significantly cut your debt cost by replacing them with a home mortgage.

Finally, if you refinance your house and pay off outstanding consumer loans, you would be able to deduct the home mortgage interest completely; without that you can only deduct 40 percent of your interest this year.

Interest deduction rules are complex. Consult your financial planner who would be able to help you with your specific problems.

Prepare for minimum wage hike

Mary DiPaolo

The political and legal environment under which all small businesses operate is continually subject to change. As new or existing business owners, it is our responsibility to regularly monitor changes that can significantly impact the future of our organization.

This week's column focuses on one prospective change influencing the state of small business.

One of the hot issues under debate relates to Sen. Edward Kennedy's proposal to raise the minimum wage to $4.65 per hour over a three-year period. There are strong arguments for and against the proposed legislation. President Reagan says that such an increase could cost hundreds of thousands of jobs.

"AND IT'S minorities, young people and the poor that are hit the hardest," Reagan said at a recent meeting with minority business owners. Based on statistics produced by the U.S. Labor Department, Reagan claims that for every 10-percent increase in the minimum wage, there would be an associated employment decrease of 100,000 people.

Kennedy has argued against Reagan's claim with the 1981 findings of the Minimum Wage Commission. According to Kennedy, the commission found the "past hikes in the minimum wage have had no significant effect on adult unemployment, youth employment, inflation or the viability of business enterprises."

Kennedy also argues that "today a full-time worker who earns the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour makes less than $7,000 a year, which is 40 percent below the poverty line for a family of four."

IN KENNEDY'S view, the country would be "turning its back on the working poor" by rejecting the minimum wage hike.

For small business owners who employ a majority of full-time minimum wage staff, there is little doubt that a mandated increase would increase internal operating costs.

The typical response may be to reduce the numbers of full-time employees. But this type of knee-jerk reaction could hurt a company's overall performance.

"It doesn't take a genius to figure out that employee productivity and morale suffers when business owners treat them (employees) as nothing more than cheap mass labor," said one Oakland County retailer.

"IF BUSINESS owners properly plan for their labor requirements on a regular basis, they will avoid the problem of being forced to cut back when something like this happens."

Business owners interested in obtaining more information on the status of the proposed minimum wage legislation may call Richard Fiesta or James Riley from the Sub-Committee on Minimum Wages Hearings at 1 (202) 225-1927.

From the heart

Warmth infuses film documentary 'Young at Heart'

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

"We do our films just a little bit differently. We like to do films from the heart." — Sue Marx

TO THAT ATTITUDE of a loving daughter, add a filmmaking partner, Pam Conn, and two artists in their mid-80s. Throw in support from community organizations and the result is a beautiful short film, "Young at Heart," which will have its area theatrical premiere Friday, Feb. 19, at the Maple Theatre in Bloomfield Township.

Marx and Conn are partners in Sue Marx Films, and the artists are Marx's 85-year-old father, Louis Gothelf, and his bride of 18 months, 84-year-old Reva Shwayder.

Franklin residents Gothelf and Shwayer first met on a trip to England. Both represent the human spirit at its best. They have the courage to live with heads held high. The stubborn refusal to bow, bend and break before life's tragedies characterizes those who are, indeed, young at heart.

The film will be featured on the Maple's bill with the Lillian Gish-Bette Davis movie "Whales of August." "Whales" also stars Vincent Price and Ann Sothern. Like "Young at Heart," it is a touching story that tells of older men and women with the courage to live in the face of death.

DISCUSSING the film about her father and his wife, Marx said, "The documentary tracks the entire development of their love story." She explained she just wanted to tell a beautiful story.

Conn put the senior citizen's dilemma in proper perspective: "The problem in America seems to be that people are scared to death of growing old. We wanted to give more people the opportunity to see that growing old can be beautiful, can have love, romance and interest."

'The documentary tracks the entire development of their love story.'
— Sue Marx

The Marx-Conn filmmaking partnership began four years ago.

Marx, Indiana born and bred, has a bachelor's degree from Indiana University. She taught school, came to Detroit, married, raised three daughters and received a master of arts in sociology at Wayne State University.

For the last 15 years, Marx has worked in programming in the Detroit area. For nine years she produced "Profiles in Black" at Channel 4. She counts five Emmy awards among her prizes as a producer-director-writer-filmmaker. Her films have been on the Public Broadcasting System, Showtime, HBO and most other cable channels and also have been shown around the world by USIA.

Conn is a Detroiter, single, who views herself primarily as writer, with poet, producer and music composer running close behind. She has worked at WJBK-TV and at the Detroit News. Partner Marx declared with a touch of awe in her voice, "Pam does crossword puzzles with a pen."

THOMAS ARNETT

Sue Marx and Pam Conn both worked on films individually before becoming partners and making "Young at Heart." The short film is about Marx's father, Louis Gothelf, and his marriage at 84 to Reva Shwayder. Here they chat on the Oakland Community College campus in Farmington Hills.

Personalities contrast nicely in musical comedy

Performances of the St. Dunstan's Guild of Cranbrook production of "They're Playing Our Song" continue through Saturday, Feb. 20, in Bloomfield Hills. For ticket information, call 644-0527.

Solid gold performances by the principals make the St. Dunstan's production of "They're Playing Our Song" a joyous, upbeat experience.

With music by Marvin Hamlisch and lyrics by Carole Bayer Sager, the show has many spritely numbers. Neil Simon's book offers his usual witty repartee as it fictionalizes the onetime real-life collaboration and romance between Hamlisch and Sager.

Vernon Gersch (Joe Lannen) is already a celebrated composer of popular music when aspiring lyricist

Barbara Michals

Sonia Walsk (Debi Green) attempts to team up with him. She is awed by his fame, while he is overwhelmed by her exuberance. In learning to work together, romance develops but hits some sour notes.

The vivacious Green is an ideal Sonia. She has a wonderfully powerful voice and delivers both songs and dialogue with gusto.

Lannen is very creditable as the punctilious Vernon, and his pleasant singing voice has a relaxed quality that provides perfect counterpoint to Green.

ALL IS NOT that harmonious for Vernon and Sonia, however. While Vernon is attracted to the free spirit that Sonia tries to be, he loses patience with the emotional baggage she carts around from a past relationship.

With Alastair Mackintosh's great set design, Barbara Ann Gowans' fine musical direction and Teri Giannetti's interesting costumes, this is a very polished production. It is surprising, then, that director William Kircher doesn't get better work from members of the chorus. Their lackluster performance provides the one dull note.

"The girls," representing Sonia's alter egos, sound fine but lack any distinct personality. "The boys," representing Vernon's other selves, are

Warmth infuses 'Young at Heart'

THEIR MOST recent film, "This Is My Home — This Is Detroit," was a 1987 promotional piece about living in the city of Detroit.

The filmmakers' partnership began shortly after Conn bid on a film project for Wayne State University.

Pam: "I underbid Sue."

Sue: "I had bid on the same job and thought they were going to get what they deserved. But I saw it and loved it."

"It was wonderful and I said to Pam: 'Why don't we try to do some stuff together?'"

Conn's film was "Wayne State University — Gateway of Opportunity." She said, "It won some national awards so I knew I had hired the right people, which is what a producer is supposed to do."

That sprightly attitude infuses their work together.

The 30-minute film is told without artifice or embarrassment. It is a simple, straightforward statement made with the highest standards of filmmaking.

Marx said: "We work in film. We like to touch it and hold it up to the light and see our images."

CONN SAID, "We were fortunate to have such a fine crew but then, as I said, hiring the right people is what a producer is supposed to do. Tom Campau was our cinematographer. Jeff Jones did audio, and Lawrence Marshall edited the film. Without them ..."

Marx pointed out, "Making a film like this is a labor of love and requires dollars, serious dollars. The foundations and organizations which underwrote the film were Sinai Hospital, the Michigan Council for the Arts, Mich-Con, Blue Cross-Blue Shield, the Community Foundation of Southeast Michigan, the Max and Marjorie Fisher Foundation and the Helen DeRoy Foundation."

Filmmaker Sue Marx has five Emmy awards for her films, which have been shown on major cable television channels.

wooden except for Jack Brutell, who is delightfully nerdy as well as the only one moving his lips.

Warning: it is impossible to view "They're Playing Our Song" without the tinkly title tune reverberating in one's head for days.

Barbara Michals teaches high school English in Southfield. A theater critic for the last 14 years, she is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

'The boys,' representing Vernon's other selves, are wooden except for Jack Brutell, who is delightfully nerdy as well as the only one moving his lips.

Animals have 'pecking order' nature

Timothy Nowicki

Every company has a corporate structure that outlines the divisions of power and decision making. For a system to run smoothly, a hierarchy must be recognized.

A president of a company does not wear a label saying "president," nor does the treasurer wear a sign saying "treasurer." People within the company recognize them as individuals and their appropriate status.

Animals, too, have hierarchies within their social groups. In animals it has come to be known as a "pecking order" because it was recognized long ago in chickens. Dominant chickens would feed by pecking at grain first, while those of lesser status had to wait their turn.

TO MOST PEOPLE, all fox squirrels look the same, but other fox squirrels can recognize individuals quite readily.

Each individual has attained a position in the group's social structure. They do not wear signs either, so you must watch to see who is dominant over whom.

An animal's position in its social group can be attained in several ways.

Large size is often a factor in dominance. Small animals would rather be subservient than risk being injured by a larger animal.

Some animals are born into their position. Young born to a high-ranking mother will attain her status.

Fighting is also a way of determining rank among closely matched individuals.

A GOOD TIME to observe dominance at work is at a bird feeder.

If a high-ranking chickadee is feeding and a lower-ranked chickadee arrives to feed, the lower-ranked bird will fly away. Higher-ranking individuals will also displace lower-ranked birds already feeding.

The other day I watched a very aggressive red squirrel defend a feeder. Though it was only one-third as large as the fox squirrels that were approaching the feeder, it would fearlessly chase them away if they got too close.

It seemed incongruous and humorous that a small individual would be dominant over a much larger animal. Because food was abundant in the area, the larger fox squirrels may have decided to feed elsewhere rather than fight and risk injury.

We Educate Your Children To The Best Degree Possible.

What degree of success will your children achieve? Intellectually. Morally. Physically. Emotionally.

The answer will depend on the degree to which you are willing to help them.

If you are truly concerned, an important way to help is to ensure they attend a school dedicated to developing their full potential, a school like one of the independent Michigan schools listed below.

Why an independent school rather than a public or parochial school? It's simply a matter of degree.

- The degree of attention. A low student/teacher ratio ensures individualized instruction, careful guidance and monitoring of a child's progress.
- The degree of care and concern. Independent schools are committed to education in the broadest sense: cultivating not only academic achievement but also nurturing students' moral, physical and emotional well-being in a secure academic environment. Individual attention also allows teachers to recognize problems quickly and provide the care and support needed.
- The degree of freedom. At an independent school students are not regimented, not impeded by the system. They are allowed to build upon their own strengths, and are encouraged to work to the best of their abilities.
- The college degree. Preparation for higher education is stressed at each stage of student development. A firm foundation in the fundamentals — including science, history, literature, foreign languages and computer science — paves the way for success in college and career.

How to choose a school.

Parents are cordially invited to visit individual schools where they can compare programs and absorb the different atmospheres. We're sure that with 20 diverse schools, you'll find one ideally suited to your family's needs. For more information about the Independent Schools of Michigan as well as information about financial aid programs, write for a free brochure to AIMS, 31201 Dolphchester, Madison Heights, MI 48071 or call 1-313-585-0151.

Exercise won't prevent colds

Barry Franklin

DID YOU know that

- Although many fitness enthusiasts believe that exercise improves their resistance to infection, there is no conclusive evidence to support this claim. Moreover, athletes should be cautioned against exercise in the presence of fever or illness.

- There are more than 200 exercise videos on the market today. It is estimated, with two new ones coming out each week. There are now home exercise videos for older adults, pregnant women, disabled people and heart patients.

- There are about 10 teaspoons of sugar in a 12-ounce can of Pepsi? In fact, soda pop is the largest single source of sugar in the American diet.

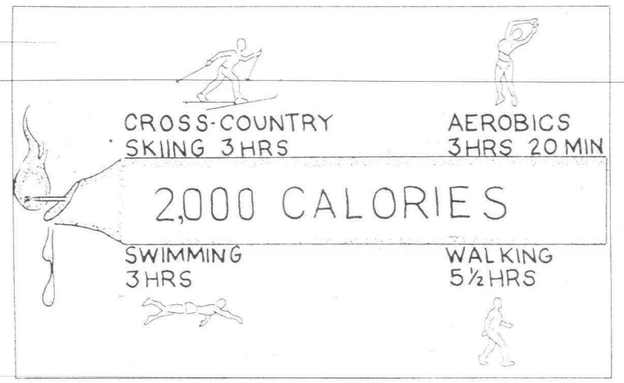
- About 25 percent of all sports injuries involve the knee.

- The results of a long-term clinical trial, involving thousands of heart patients with elevated blood cholesterol levels, showed that for every 1 percent the cholesterol level was reduced, the risk of heart attack was reduced by 2 percent. The patient who reduced blood cholesterol by 25 percent cut the risk of having a heart attack in half.

- According to a recent scientific report, nicotine chewing gum appears to help people attempting to stop smoking.

- Many experts now suggest that you expend about 2,000 calories a week on some form of exercise. Why? Research has shown that this amount of physical activity provides maximum protection against heart disease (see drawing).

Barry A. Franklin, Ph.D., is director of cardiac rehabilitation and exercise laboratories, William Beaumont Hospital, and associate professor of physiology, Wayne State University, School of Medicine.



How much exercise does it take to burn up 2,000 calories? That depends on the kind of exercise.

FACTS ABOUT LEASING #1

Why More New Car Buyers Are Leasing.

Michigan

Auto Club Leasing Company

This is the first in a series dedicated to providing useful information about leasing. Over the next several months Auto Club Leasing Company, a subsidiary of AAA Michigan, will provide in-depth answers to some of the most common questions about leasing. If you have a question about leasing, or if we don't answer your question completely, please write our consumer information department at the address below. We welcome your comments and suggestions.

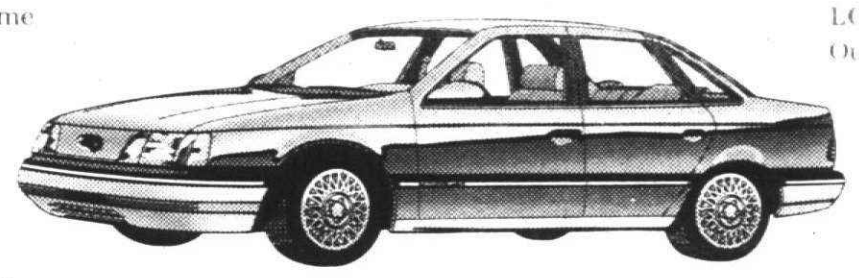
PRICE
Monthly payments on a lease can be much lower than monthly payments on a finance purchase. If you financed the Ford Taurus shown for 48 months, your monthly payment would be $314.36.* If you leased the same car, your payment would be only $193.41. Over 48 months you could realize a net savings of $1,555.44.

MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY
Because lease payments generally are lower than finance payments and there is no down payment with leasing, many people find they can afford to drive a more expensive car. Even if you have champagne taste on a beer budget you'll be surprised by the level of luxury you can afford.

LEASING DOESN'T TIE UP CASH
When you lease there is no down payment. You make your first payment, leave a fully refundable security deposit, pay license and title charges (usually less than $100.00) and that's it. Why tie up a big chunk of cash in a down payment when you could use that money for something really important? Like a vacation. Of course you could also invest that money and let it work for you instead of you working for it. Why use up your valuable cash on something that depreciates as fast as an automobile? If you need money for home improvements, the kids' education, an emergency, or any other good reason, you won't have to worry about having your dollars tied up in your car.

DRIVE A NEW CAR EVERY FEW YEARS
Everyone likes to drive a new car, but with average new car prices nearing $14,000.00, most people simply can't afford to buy a new car every few years. If you finance a car and then try to trade it in after a couple of years, you may find you owe more than the car is worth. With leasing you decide how often you'd like a new car. Lease terms are available from 24 to 60 months, so whether you want the luxury of a new car every 2 years or the low payments of a 60 month lease, it's up to you.

48 Month Finance Purchase



Ford Taurus L $314.36 per month*

CONVENIENCE
When you lease you go to one place for any make or model. You don't have to run from dealer to dealer to compare prices. And at the end of the term there is no used car to get rid of. You simply bring the car back or you can buy it at fair market value. Never again will you have to worry about getting a fair trade-in from a fast talking car dealer or go through the hassle of trying to sell the car yourself. After all, if you wanted to be a used car salesman, you'd do it for a living.

Tina Hauptman gave an outstanding individual performance Monday night as North Farmington won a contest between Lakes Division gymnastics powers.

Hauptman either won or tied for first place in all four events and finished with the highest all-around score in helping the Raiders hand Plymouth Salem its first defeat.

North recorded its best score of the season, 132.4, and the Rocks, despite the setback, also accumulated their highest total thus far with a 126.85.

Salem is 4-1 against Western Lakes teams and 6-1 overall. The Raiders are 5-1 and 7-2.

North had lost its previous dual meet to Westland John Glenn last Thursday, but the Raiders rebounded with a sixth-place showing in the Plymouth Invitational Saturday.

"We knew we didn't go after our routines like we should have (against Glenn)," said North coach Jeff Dwyer, adding his team was out to correct that Saturday.

"When the girls realized how well they had done and saw how high they had finished, they were really happy and excited, and it carried over to (Monday) night," he added.

Hauptman, who had her highest scores of the year, and Salem's Amy Pastori scored 8.6 to share first place on vault, and Hauptman was equal with teammate Nicki Yuskowatz on the uneven bars, both with 7.8 scores.

Hauptman had no falls and performed a lot of high-superior moves to score 8.85 on beam, and she had her highest marks in floor exercise with an 8.95.

Salem was led by Pastori, who had the Rocks' best all-around performance, finishing second on beam (8.75), third in floor (8.7) and fifth on bars (7.35). She was third in the all-around behind Hauptman and Yuskowatz with a 33.4, her highest total of the season.

Yuskowatz was nearly as outstanding as Hauptman, giving the Raiders a tough-to-beat combination. She also was second in floor (8.8) and fourth on vault (8.5) and beam (8.5). Hauptman scored 34.2 in the all-around and Yuskowatz 33.6.

North freshman Kristen Szutarski helped the Raiders, too, with a solid performance that saw her place third on vault (8.55), bars (7.7) and beam (8.55). She was fifth in floor (8.35).

"Even (Troy) Athens and Freeland usually don't score that high," Salem coach Kathi Kinsella said of North's 34.2 team score on beam.

Salem's Debbie Popp finished fourth on floor (8.45), fifth on vault (8.45) and sixth on beam (8.1). Dana Holda was fourth on bars (7.4), Jenny Krieger sixth on vault (8.3) and Sharon Way sixth on floor (7.75).

In addition, Krieger met regional qualifying standards on bars and beam Monday, and she has now qualified in all four events. Way missed qualifying on floor by .05.

"My girls did everything that could be expected," said Kinsella, adding the Rocks broke the 30-point mark on beam.

"I told my girls not to worry about beating this team, to just get the qualifying scores. That was good enough for me."

CANTON 130.3, JOHN GLENN 125.35: Debbie Williams and Angie Temelko proved to be a formidable combination, but the duo couldn't overcome the Chiefs' superior team capabilities in Monday's gymnastics meet at Canton.

Williams, who had the best all-around score at 33.45, won the vault (8.9) and bars (8.55), and Temelko captured first on floor (8.75).

The Chiefs dominated the beam and floor exercise competitions to gain an edge over the Rockets.

Canton's Mary Jo Charron won the beam with an 8.55, Sharon Moran was second (8.45) and Jennifer Tellier tied Temelko for fourth with a qualifying score of 7.6.

While Temelko won the floor exercise, Canton's Apryl Mosakowski and Charron tied for second (8.5), Heather Murphy was fourth (8.35) and Moran was fifth (8.2).

"Glenn has a small team with two excellent girls, but they don't have enough depth to back it up," Canton coach John Cunningham said. "Otherwise, they would be a very competitive team."

The Chiefs, on the other hand, have quality gymnasts and enough depth to cover any shortcomings on a given day.

"If you have six girls (in an event) and two make mistakes, then four still hit their routines and score," Cunningham said. "The thing that helps us is our balanced scoring."

Rockets overwhelm wrestling opponents

☐ More wrestling, 2D

'. . . As we got going, I thought maybe we could pull it out. That day it wasn't to be. John Glenn got the momentum going, and nobody was going to beat them.'

— Ron Krueger
Salem wrestling coach

The Western Lakes Activities Association had never known such parity among its wrestling teams until this season.

In light of that, it was only fitting the 1988 champion should accede to the throne with a well-balanced team effort, and that's exactly what Westland John Glenn had Saturday.

The Rockets had only two individual champions, but they were runners-up in six other weight classes. With eight wrestlers in the finals, Glenn had the title locked up before the evening session.

"We got kids into the championship round, and that closed the door on everyone," Rockets coach Tom Buckalew said. "We didn't have to win anything — which is something I didn't necessarily expect."

After the dual-meet season, the league tournament was expected to be the most wide-open affair in the WLAA's brief, six-year history.

GLENN HAD tied with Livonia Stevenson for third place in the Lakes Division, while five-time champion Plymouth Salem and Farmington shared the dual-meet title. Any one of those four, along with Western Division winner Plymouth Canton, was thought to have a legitimate shot at this year's crown.

"In 20 years of wrestling, I've never seen a league this balanced," Buckalew said. "We could have finished anywhere from one to five. Obviously, (his wrestlers) prefefred one."

The Rockets won their 19th championship in school history, but it is their first in the WLAA. Furthermore, Glenn becomes the first school other than Salem to win the tournament.

"I like the Salem people, and (Salem coach) Ron Krueger is a personal friend," said Buckalew, who was an assistant coach for many years when the Rockets won 18 titles in the old Northwest Suburban League.

"I'm not concerned about unseating them. I'm very pleased for my kids being able to win it."

CANTON, WHICH tied Walled Lake Western for most individual winners with three, was second with 106½ points to Glenn's 190. Salem, which had a young team but came on to do well in dual meets, was third with 137½.

"I kind of suspected it when the season began," said Krueger of the possible end of Salem's grip on the league trophy.

"But, as we got going, I thought maybe we could pull it out. That day it wasn't to be. John Glenn got the momentum going, and nobody was going to beat them."

Glenn's winners were Rob Matigian at 132 pounds and Chuck Lauber at 167. Taking second but nonetheless helping the team in a collective sense were Mike Daniels (105), Nate Kemppainen (119), Jeff Allen (138), Dereck Tharp (185) and Abe Zakhem (198).

With so many in the finals, Glenn enjoyed a 44-point lead, which dwindled to 29½ by the end of the tournament. But the Rockets could afford the luxury of conceding points, plus the competitive edge may have been gone since the Rockets were assured of first place.

"WE DIDN'T wrestle particularly well in the finals," Buckalew said. "We had hoped to get 5-6 into the finals, and we got eight. That was such a fantastic performance that we had a little letdown.

"I don't know if wrestling better would have changed the outcome of those bouts, but I know we could have wrestled better than we did."

Other league champions included Canton's Tom Flores (98), Craig Rinke (138) and Jerry French (heavyweight), Salem's Jeff Delbeke (105) and Dave Mang (112), Stevenson's Mike Schrock (126) and Kurt Will (145), North Farmington's Zaim Cummalaj (198) and Western's Pat Conway (119), Nick Papadakos (155) and Jason Nichols (185).

Key victories for the Rockets, according to Buckalew, included Kemppainen's 10-5 decision over Salem's Todd Bourlier and Tharp's 4-3 decision over Bill Lindbert of Farmington. Though both went on to finish second, they gave Glenn added points in bouts that were considered toss-ups.

In the 105-pound semifinals, Daniels defeated Livonia Stevenon's David Wojciechowski in overtime, and Kraig Kuban prevented Glenn from being shut out at 155 when he pinned Salem's Steve Burlison early in the consolation round.

THOUGH THE Rockets lost twice in division duals, Buckalew said his team had never lacked for effort and was getting better going into the league meet. He pointed to a recent tournament victory in which the Rockets defeated two teams that had beaten them, Southgate Aquinas and New Boston Huron.

"We've had some tough losses," he said, "but we haven't had disappointments.

"We've gotten tremendous performances out of our kids all year. It just hasn't always been successful."

Ten years ago this week the Plymouth Canton wrestling team established itself as a contender in the Western Six League by placing third at the conference meet. Chiefs, Rocks give good account on mats

By Dan O'Meara

Westland John Glenn won the Western Lakes wrestling championship, but the final tally was clear indication of the healthy state of the sport in the Plymouth-Canton schools.

Canton was runner-up to the Rockets, and Salem settled for third place after winning all five previous years since the league was organized.

Canton coach Rick Menoch noted the Chiefs wrestled according to the way they were seeded and, in that regard, did their best to challenge Glenn, which put eight wrestlers in the finals and thereby decided the outcome.

"Our guys wrestled to their capabilities," Menoch said. "Everybody on the team did a tremendous job. We couldn't ask anymore of them.

"We weren't getting the help from other teams," he added. "The teams that were beating John Glenn earlier in the year just weren't winning. The help we thought was there just never came."

THE WLAA doesn't select a most outstanding wrestler, but Menoch believes Canton heavyweight Jerry French would have been a strong candidate for such an award.

French was the No. 2 seed and pinned all three opponents he faced, including top-seeded Joe Williams of Glenn in the final, to become one of Canton's three champions.

"Jerry had been handled when he wrestled (Williams) earlier in the year," Menoch said, but French was the clear winner this time, pinning the Rocket heavyweight in 3:05.

In his first bout, French pinned Walled Lake Central's Charles Hare in 1:47, and he pinned Livonia Franklin's Frank Johnson, who was unbeaten against league opponents (9-0), at 2:43 of their semifinal contest.

"He's our most improved wrestler," Menoch said.

SUPPORTING Menoch's statement about the Chiefs wrestling to expectations, Tom Flores and Craig Rinke, both seeded No. 1, won championships at 98 and 138 pounds.

Flores pinned Kevin Khashan of Northville (1:18) and Matt Konenski of Salem (1:49) and edged WLC's Soren Murphy 2-1 in the final. Rinke took the same route, pinning Doug Hoyt of North Farmington (2:37) and Tom Sarah of Livonia Churchill (2:37) before winning a 5-1 decision over Glenn's Jeff Allen.

Menoch also was pleased to see Josh Barrie and freshman Liam Rentz capture consolation titles at 119 and 132, respectively.

Of the 12 wrestlers the Chiefs had entered, 11 placed among the top six. The Chiefs were one wrestler short since Tim Nardini was unable to compete at 126 because of a back injury.

"This should motivate (the team) going into predistricts," Menoch said, "because we're wrestling the best we have all year.

"THE TOURNAMENT was well-balanced, and it speaks well of our league," he added.

Salem had won six league championships in a row and seven in the last eight years, including two in the old Suburban 8 League.

"It was just a fair day for us," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "We had some good things happen and some bad things happen. We just have to get on with what's coming up next."

Salem's Jeff Delbeke backed up his No. 1 seed at 105, and Dave Mang proved the seeding judgment wrong by winning at 112.

Delbeke pinned Farmington's Chris Phillips (1:06) and blanked Canton's Matt Keeler 8-0 to get to the final, where he whipped Glenn's Mike Daniels, the No. 2 seed, on a 9-1 decision.

Mang was seeded second behind Farmington's Chris Gardiner, having lost to the latter wrestler in the dual meet. Mang was ahead on points 8-0 in the earlier match when Gardiner capitalized on a moment of opportunity to take a pin.

Mang never faced Gardiner, who lost to North Farmington's Jack Beall in the semis. Mang, after pinning WLW's Josh Kenny (0:47) and decisioning WLC's Ken Brown (7-4), pinned Beall in the final (1:24).

CC wins league title

When the state's top two wrestling teams square off in a league meet, it's no surprise when it takes the appearance of a dual meet.

Which is precisely what happened at Saturday's Catholic League final at Harper Woods Notre Dame. Redford Catholic Central, ranked No. 1 in the state, lived up to its rating by besting Birmingham Brother Rice 259-230½.

And what about the other six teams competing? Well, next closest was Dearborn Divine Child with 123. Notre Dame finished fourth (81), followed by Orchard Lake St. Mary's (57½), Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard (25½), Pontiac Catholic (17) and Madison Heights Bishop Foley (eight).

Talk about domination. CC had wrestlers reach the finals in 10 of 13 weight classes. Two of the other three made it to the final four. And Shamrocks won eight titles.

THE TWO powerhouses met in the finals seven times. CC won five. That should make the Shamrocks a strong favorite for the state title.

Three CC wrestlers won their championship match on falls. At heavyweight, Toby Heaton pinned Rice's Joe DiPonia in 1:07; at 138, Brendon Rock pinned another Warrior, Mike O'Connor, in 3:21; and at 185, a third Rice wrestler was pinned by his CC counterpart when Ted Rieple nailed Tom Fenbert in just 33 seconds.

Other Shamrock winners were Mike Gentile (112), 7-5 over Rice's Kevin Kinane; Jay Helm (119), 8-3 over Mark Starosciak of Divine Child; Matt Helm (132), 11-4 over Matt Starosciak of Divine Child; Chris Lemanski (167), 7-3 over Rice's John Cotant; and Lee Kreuger (198), 8-3 over Notre Dame's John Pierce.

Jim Raglow (105) reached the finals for CC before being pinned by Rice's Jeff Bushon in 5:28. Scott Christianson (126) also made it to the last round before losing, 16-2 to Rice's Chris Snooks.

Brian Tulley (155) placed third for CC by beating Dan Fooks of Notre Dame 17-1 in the consolation final, and Kevin Rowe (98) finished fourth when he lost to OLSM's Sean Rock 8-5 in the consolation final.

Only at 145 did the Shamrocks fail to reach the final four.

Canton rebounds for victory

Plymouth Canton rebounded from a bad week to thump Walled Lake Western in volleyball Monday, 15-6, 15-8.

The Chiefs had lost their last two matches to Livonia Franklin and Livonia Churchill, but "really rose to the occasion" against the Warriors, coach Allie Suffety said.

"We were just coming at them and caught them flat once we got them down," he said.

Shannon Meath was 4-of-4 attacking and Susan Ferko 4-of-7 in the first game in which Canton recorded 12 kills out of 21 attempts. The 5-foot-11 Ferko also had two key blocks in each game.

The Chiefs scored the last six points of the game on Melinda Yergin's serve, and Meath had two of the team's five aces.

Alissa Huth set the ball for eight kills and Michelle Fortier two. All of Canton's assists were recorded by setters, which meant its passing was was accurate, Suffety said.

In the second game, Huth served for 11 of her team's 15 points and had three aces, including one for the game-winner. She also had six assists.

Ferko was 3-of-3 attacking the ball with three kills, Meath 2-of-4 and Fortier 2-of-2. Meath and Fortier had two kills apiece.

The Chiefs are 2-3 in the Western Division and 4-4 overall. Western is 7-11 overall.

"The kids made a comeback," Suffety said. "They had to take a hard look at themselves after the last two matches. They knew what they had to do and were challenged.

"I'm really proud of them," he added. "I think this is a good match for our future."

W.L. CENTRAL 16-15, SALEM 14-8: The Rocks held the upper hand over Walled Lake Central in the first game Monday, but the Vikings battled back from the brink of defeat to win the match.

Salem erased a 10-7 deficit when Asaka Motoyama served up seven unanswered points to give the Rocks a 14-10 lead. Salem, however, couldn't get the winning point.

"The first game was a real battle," Salem coach Betty Smith said. "It was good for the kids to see that. Walled Lake Central being a real power in the league, they can compete with them."

The Rocks had trouble with their serve reception in the second game and fell behind early. But they were down by only two points, 8-10, when four calls went against them, Smith said.

Several passes off WLC serves were close to the net, and Kara Cummings tried to keep the ball in play on Salem's side. As she went up, a blocker from the WLC side did also and reached over the net while Cummings attempted to set the ball, Smith said.

"They were legitimate efforts to play the ball," she said, "and (the Vikings) interfered with our effort. The referee took our momentum away."

Smith said she thought the Rocks showed improvement since they played WLC the first time, noting Salem lost that match 15-6, 15-6.

Laura Porterfield had four kills, Roseann Sumpter and Motoyama three each. Sumpter also had three blocks, and Motoyama had 10 service points and two aces.

Aimee Hayden played a solid game in the back row, Smith said, and Cummings had 33 sets, resulting in 12 assists.

Raiders on rise

North sees improvement in Plymouth meet

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

North Farmington coach Jeff Dwyer is beginning to realize just how good his gymnastics team might be.

For that matter, so are the athletes themselves after the Raiders made a strong showing with a fifth-place finish in the 13-team Plymouth Invitational held Saturday at Canton High School.

Their performance was a complete turnaround from North's last outing in such a big meet. The Raiders were 13th out of 15 teams in the Troy Athens Invitational Jan. 16.

Canton and Plymouth Salem, which finished ahead of North in that meet, were sixth and ninth Saturday. Westland John Glenn was seventh and Farmington 11th.

"We knew there were some teams we couldn't beat, but we wanted to beat the teams in our league and the ones scoring around us," Dwyer said.

THE RAIDERS were a question mark at the start of the season, having lost many top gymnasts to graduation. But Saturday's performance was a sign of team maturity, according to Dwyer.

"The girls are turning it on at the right time of the season," he said. "If they keep it going, we'll go as far as we realistically can go.

"I said at the beginning of the season we could be a good team, and the girls are starting to hit their routines now."

When the Raiders scored 118.65 in the Athens meet, it was the low point of the season, Dwyer said. North raised that score to 132.3 at Canton, and the Raiders had their highest score (132.4) of the season Monday in a dual meet with Salem.

The trio of Tina Hauptman, Nicki Yuskowatz and Kristen Szutarski keyed North's performance. Yuskowatz was injured and unable to compete at Athens.

THE RAIDERS fared best Saturday on the vault where Szutarski tied for seventh and Hauptman was ninth.

Yuskowatz was ninth in floor exercise and Hauptman 13th. The latter placed 11th on the uneven bars. Yuskowatz 14th. Yuskowatz also was one of three girls tied for 16th on the balance beam.

In the all-around totals, Hauptman scored 33.85 for 13th place, Yuskowatz 33.45 for 12th and Szutarski 33.0 for 15th.

"Scoring as well as we did shows we're doing something right," Dwyer said. "I think we've turned it around and, hopefully, can keep it up. I'm just trying to keep the girls going and improving every little bit."

Athens and Midland Dow competed without one of their top gymnasts, while Freeland captured the team title behind the efforts of Jamie Nieman, who won the bars, floor exercise and vault competitions and was 24th on beam.

"HER BARS were exceptional, practically Olympic caliber," Canton coach John Cunningham said. "It was fantastic."

Nieman fell three times during her beam routine, dropping down into the pack, "but in the others she was truly exceptional," he added.

Six of the top 10 teams in the state competed, making the Plymouth event a mini-state meet. Top-ranked Traverse City was absent, but Athens, Dow and Freeland were ranked second, third and fourth as of the latest poll.

"I was pleased with sixth place in the invitational," said Cunningham, adding that none of the five teams ahead of the Chiefs will be in the same regional.

Canton scored 127.8 and had an average meet, according to Cunningham.

"WE HAD THE opportunity to go over 130, but we just didn't have that good a meet," he said.

Given the stiff competition, the Canton coach figured fifth place might be the highest the Chiefs could achieve.

"We felt we made a good showing, and that's what we wanted to do," he said. "We wanted to gain confidence and see how we shaped up against these teams."

A big surprise for Canton was freshman Heathy Murphy's fourth place on the beam with an 8.7. Apryl Mosakowski was 12th on floor and Darcy Gignac was 12th on vault and 26th on bars.

"We're talking about some of the top gymnasts in the state, so that's exceptional," said Cunningham.

"(THE CANTON girls) weren't pleased to finish out of the top 10, but they were in serious contention for a ribbon."

Salem coach Kathi Kinsella figured ninth place was "about where we fit in." The Rocks added no new tricks to their routines, but concentrated on "adding a little polish" to what they were already doing.

"I can't complain," she said. "The girls did what I asked and polished things up. I'm satisfied with where they're at."

Amy Pastori was Salem's top scorer in all four events. She was 17th on bars (8.2), 18th on floor (8.25), 21st on beam (7.8) and 24th on vault (8.25). Her all-around score was 32.5, good for 18th place.

Kinsella said the Rocks will have to decide whether to remain content with their current standing or add difficulty and attempt to move up before their dual meet with Canton, which has been switched from Wednesday, Feb. 17, to 4 p.m. Monday, Feb. 22.

"WE CAN DO everything nice, neat and clean — and stay ninth out of 13 teams," she said, "or we can put in new tricks and have the scores go up. That's the choice the girls have to make."

flair, countered Glenn's duo on the vault, finishing second (8.75) and fourth (8.45), respectively. McLean was consistent, also taking second on bars (8.2), and Charron, Gignac and Shannon Connell tied for fourth (7.65).

Canton's Murphy was fifth on vault (8.4) and tied with Glenn's Nicki Coombs for sixth on beam (7.5), and Charron was sixth on vault (8.2).

For the Rockets, Temelko was third on vault and bars, and Williams was third on beam and sixth on floor. In all-around totals, Williams scored 33.45, Temelko 33.1, Charron 32.9 and Gignac 30.75.

"We're about a 130-132 team," Cunningham said. "If we're lucky, we'll get up to 135. That's what we're going for. We'd like to have that at league meet time."

Mercy wins

Farmington Hills Mercy's ski team finished the dual-meet season undefeated as the Marlins beat Hartland 10-32 at Mt. Brighton Monday.

Mercy, 7-0 in duals, competes in the Mt. Brighton Interscholastic Ski Association Championships today. The meet includes slalom and giant slalom skiing.

Bill Parker

ONE WINTER event I always look forward to is the Detroit Outdoorama. Held annually at the Michigan State Fair Grounds, Outdoorama is sponsored by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

The show features more than 300 U.S. and Canadian outfitters and product exhibitors. There are also displays by various conservation groups, daily stage shows, a trout pond and refreshments, all adding to the carnival atmosphere.

This year, Outdoorama will be even bigger than in the past. Aside from the above features, this year's show has expanded to include "Sportsman's Gallery" and "Outdoor Sports Showcase."

Located in a 25,000-square-foot building, "Sportsman's Gallery" will feature exhibits by MUCC-affiliated conservation clubs, informative seminars on hunting, fishing and shooting sports, and displays of live ducks, geese, snakes, birds of prey and other wild creatures.

"Sports Showcase" is a newly expanded area that features daily seminars and clinics by acclaimed sports anglers and hunters.

Show hours are 6-10 p.m. Feb. 19; 4-10 p.m. weekdays; 12-10 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays except Feb. 28 (closing day), when the show will run 12-8 p.m.

Myrna Partrich

Good posture means good body alignment

Dear Myrna: I am a typical case. I'm a woman 31 years old, slim, good-looking, intelligent and 5-foot-11 with poor posture. It's the old story of growing up ashamed of being tall. I'm not married and still have problems with my height. My posture does bother me and I'm afraid what I will look like in the future. I sit sloppy, which might be what is bothering me the most.

Still having problems with your height?

If you say you are slim, good-looking and intelligent, what about adding stately? I'll bet you are stately.

Being on the extra-short side myself, I try to stand as stately as possible. But you're already there.

You are correct in being concerned about your posture. Good posture means good body alignment. A key element to good alignment is the spine. The muscles in front of the spine should be in balance with those in back for the body to move in harmony.

Let's think about the fundamentals of good posture:

- Standing up straight with body weight lifted up into the chest and upper torso.
- Head balanced between the shoulders, not sticking way out over the chest.
- Shoulders pulled down with shoulder blades flattened, not protruding.
- Abdominals and buttock muscles gently tightened, not oversqueezed or hanging loose.
- Arms resting at your sides.
- Weight equally distributed on both legs and in front of the ankles, never on the heels.

Thinking about this position, then putting yourself into it takes time and patience.

There are times when we forget good posture. For example: The secretary who sits slouched over the typewriter and the pianist who hunches over the piano.

If there are no exercises performed to counterbalance this position, the muscles continue to contract only in one direction.

Be careful, sometimes when you are depressed, your body tends to follow suit. You might start to slump over, with shoulders becoming rounded, chest caved inward and stomach muscles will sag.

Now when you're tense, your shoulders rise higher, your upper back area becomes contracted and tense. Remember that our bodies are a trap for every emotional experience.

Sitting sloppy, as you put it, can definitely put a crimp on your stately look. We can't have that.

Remember the following tips:

- Think abdominal muscles — strengthen them if you have to, but inhale and lift up when sitting to give you support.
- When sitting, bend your torso forward at the hips, not the waist.
- Aim your buttocks toward the angle created by the seat and the back of the chair.
- As you sit back, place your hands on the arms of the chair or on the side edges of the seat and ease yourself down.
- Press your shoulders down and lengthen your neck without lifting your chin up.

These few posture tips I've given you are basically just a beginning. You should consult an exercise expert to show you how to strengthen the proper muscles used specifically in posture.

You are already aware of the problem — that's half of it. Now just concentrate further to correct the problem.

(Myrna Partrich, co-owner of The Workout Co. of Bloomfield Township, is happy to answer any questions readers may have regarding exercise. Please send your signed letters to: Sports Department, Myrna Partrich, 1225 Bowers, Birmingham 48012.)

Stevenson's Joe Saunders had a hand in all three Spartan record performances. Saunders set a new mark in the 100-yard butterfly (53.5), combined with Tony Albert, Greg Jubenville and Doug Coderre in the 200 medley relay (1:44.0) and teamed with Duane Flippo, John Kohaneck and Jeff Murphy in the 400 freestyle relay (3:24.7).

Canton's victories came from Jeff Homan in the 100 breaststroke (1:06.0) and Brad Flowers in diving (201.85 points).

The loss dropped Canton to 6-4.

Ocelots keep on winning

By Brian Killeen
staff writer

On a roll and playing like champions, the Schoolcraft College womens basketball team has won nine out of their last 10 games.

Included in that streak is a 61-51 victory over Grand Rapids Junior College Saturday night in a non-league match in Grand Rapids that improved the Lady Ocelots overall record to 17-6.

In the first half SC executed well, taking a 33-25 lead into the dressing room. But the second half wasn't quite as easy.

SC and GRJC both came out of the locker room ready for intense action. GRJC got the better of it as they whittled SC's lead down to four points with ten minutes left.

But the Lady Ocelots maintained their composure and took the game over from there to come away with the win.

The victory was a bittersweet one. Sharon Miller, SC's 6-foot-1 starting center who is averging 14 points a game, went down with a sprained ankle. She is expected to be out of the lineup for at least one game.

Tammy Adkins and Michelle Dvksinski took up the slack for SC scoring 18 and 14 points, respectively. Penny Piggott also knocked in 10 points.

SC'S MENS TEAM split a pair of non-conference games, losing 94-79 Saturday to Grand Rapids Baptist, then beating Adrian's junior varsity 87-75 Monday at SC.

Against Baptist, the Ocelots were paced by Steve Hawley, who had 41 points.

Baptist took a 47-39 halftime lead and never looked back. Poor shooting doomed the Ocelots. SC shot just 37% for the game, while Baptist hit 62% from the field. Baptist also made 24 of 30 free throws to bury the Ocelots.

In the win over Adrian, the game was tight in the first half with the Ocelots only leading by three points at the half, 45-42. The Ocelots were able to pull away after that, thanks to Hawley's scoring. He finished with 39 points, giving him a total of 80 points in two games. Brad Ridgeway added 19 points.

Schoolcraft is 8-17 overall.

Chiefs gain added respect with win

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Fittingly, Plymouth Canton basketball coach Tom Niemi stood inside the Chiefs' weight room Tuesday night as he spoke of his team's resurgence.

In three years at Canton, the veteran coach has helped lift Canton from a .500 team in 1985-86 into the heavyweight of the Western Lakes Athletic Association this year.

Tuesday, Canton showed its supremacy in the WLAA, defeating Lakes-Division power Westland John Glenn at home, 63-48. The win raises Canton's overall record to 12-2. The Chiefs are leading the Western Division with a 7-1 record.

CANTON WAS 12-8 overall last year and 10-10 two years ago under Niemi's guidance.

"I'm very proud of my team, they've worked very hard," Niemi said as he he straddled his arm on one of the weight supports. "They've been rewarded for working hard. I feel we have a solid program, and we're trying to develop that. We have a good staff, and tremendous support from the administration and community. That's what it takes."

Senior forward Mitch Fyke scored 19 points and Brad Carey added 12 points for Canton in a game that became foul-plagued and sloppy in the turnover department. Matt Littleton was the other Canton player in double figures with 10 points.

'I'm very proud of my team, they've worked very hard. They've been rewarded for working hard.'
— Tom Niemi
Canton cage coach

Glenn (9-5, 6-1), trailed by as many as 14 points in the first half, but pulled to within five, 52-47, on a jump shot by Greg Anderson with 2:16 left. Canton sealed the outcome, however, converting 10-of-12 free throws in the final two minutes, as Glenn had to foul to gain possession of the ball. Carey made five-of-six from the line in the final two minutes.

ANDERSON SCORED 11 of his team-high 16 points in the second half for Glenn. Rick Teel scored 10 points for the Rockets, whose leading scorer, guard Marcus Lowe, fouled out with just six points.

"When you lose your top player it doesn't help," said Glenn coach Bob Killingbeck. "That's the way it went, though. Marcus Lowe had a rough night tonight. You can't have it every night."

Much of Lowe's frustration was due to Canton's man-to-man defensive pressure, Niemi said. The Chiefs played man-to-man most of the game and the Rockets responded by hitting just eight of their first 25 field goal attempts.

Canton, 12-of-25 in the first half, led 17-8 after one quarter and 30-19 at halftime.

"I THOUGHT we played excellent defense against a quick team," Niemi said. "We forced them into a lot of travelling calls and I thought we controlled the tempo of the game."

"We spread the court and forced them into doing things they did not want to do. Glenn is a very good basketball team."

Churchill squeaks by Salem

Late-game heroics by Chad Campeau saved host Livonia Churchill Tuesday from blowing a nine-point lead after three quarters in its game with Plymouth Salem.

Campeau sank a free throw and a two-point basket in the final minute, helping carry Churchill to its ninth win against five defeats, 57-52. Salem fell to 6-8.

Churchill led 45-36 after three quarters, before Salem pulled to within one, 53-52. The Rocks' Todd Marion was called for a technical foul with 58 seconds left, however, and Campeau converted one of the two free throws awarded Churchill on the technical. Campeau scored a basket on the next possession.

Brad Wylie and Steve Ditchkoff led the Chargers in scoring with 15 points each. Kyle Percin added 14 points.

Bill Anderson scored 15 of his game-high 19 points in the first half for Salem, and M.J. Ewald added 11 points and eight rebounds.

REDFORD C.C. 89, NOTRE DAME 46: With four starters relegated to the bench, Redford Catholic Central's seemingly safe third quarter lead Tuesday suddenly loomed a bit ominous — until a guy named Jeff Shaner took over.

CC ended up winning the Central-Division game handily, but with starters Brian Dugas and Anthony Arrington out with injuries and Bill Vitti and Ray Richards on the bench in foul trouble, it was time for a new face to shine.

Shaner, a junior guard, was that new face. With the four starters on the bench, Shaner hit a 3-point shot and a 2-point basket midway through the third quarter to keep CC in command.

CC raised its Central Division mark to 6-3, 11-3 overall. Host Harper Woods Notre Dame fell to 1-8, 3-11.

Vitti played long enough to lead the Shamrocks with 22 points. Scott Hauncher, who had 17 first-half points, added 21, and Richards had 19.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
PLYMOUTH CHARTER TOWNSHIP PLANNING COMMISSION

TO AMEND TEXT: Purpose of Article XIX, and Section 19.1, Paragraph 2, and Section 19.12(b) by adding Paragraph (4), and Section 19.12, Paragraph 16.
DATE OF HEARING: February 17, 1988
TIME OF HEARING: 7:30 P.M.
PLACE OF HEARING: 42350 Ann Arbor Road

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Planning Commission has received a request to amend Zoning Ordinance No. 83, Article XIX, PLANNED UNIT DEVELOPMENT OPTION, by amending Article XIX, as follows:

A PROPOSAL TO AMEND PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP ZONING ORDINANCE NO. 83, ARTICLE XIX, WHICH CURRENTLY READS AS FOLLOWS:

PURPOSE:
It is intended by the Community that uses of high intensity shall be located in areas which will not adversely impact the orderly development of existing or future residential areas. Commercial, office, research, testing and residential uses in structures beyond two (2) and two and one-half (2½) stories in height are more urban in nature and, therefore, could be in conflict with a specific development area and the general character of the Township of Plymouth, if not properly regulated in regard to location, relationship to adjacent land uses and development requirements. The Community has provided a MR Mid-Rise District to provide for locations for these higher intensity uses, separately or in combination, in areas which will not impact the existing or future land uses of adjacent properties and the Community as a whole. The Community, however, recognizes that within the C-2 Zoning District there may be sites which, because of certain existing and specific factors, could be developed beyond the 2 to 2½ stories without negatively impacting adjacent properties and the community as a whole.
It is further understood that said developments may be consistent with the planning goals of the community only in specific locations, under specific conditions, related to height, bulk and location of buildings in accordance with sound planning and Site Plan principles. It is therefore, intended that the Planned Unit Development Option is designed to permit flexibility in the regulation of land development, encourage innovation in land use and variety in design, layout and type of structures constructed, achieve economy and efficiency in the use of land, natural resources, energy and the provisions of public services and utilities, encourage useful open space, and provide better housing, employment and shopping opportunities particularly suited to the needs of the residents of the Township of Plymouth in C-2 zoning districts on parcels of five (5) acres or greater where the basic principles set forth in this article are met.

Chocolate — food for sweetheart or the gods

Terry Glbb

WITH Valentine's Day just around the corner, I thought it might be appropriate to talk about the most popular Valentine's Day gift — chocolate.

Chocolate is a consuming passion in this country. Each of us eats an average of 10 pounds a year. Swedish naturalist Linneaus, who named most of the plants we know today, named the cacao tree "theobroma cacao" meaning "food for the gods." A real accurate description!

CHOCOLATE IS literally an international creation: The cocoa bean, which is the base of all chocolate, grows in big pods in tropical areas.

History notes that Central America recorded the use of cocoa beans as payment and demanded as trinkets as long as 1,000 years ago. The beans were associated also with divinity and power.

These beans were used by the Aztecs to make a cold drink called chocolatl. When Cortez conquered Mexico, chocolate was one of the valuables sent back to Spain. There, the artistocrats heated the drink, sweetened it and added cinnamon — the same way it's still enjoyed today.

From Spain, the cocoa beans moved to France and then throughout Europe.

THE DUTCH neutralized the acid in the bean to mellow the flavor.

The Swiss contributed milk chocolate by adding milk. They also are responsible for turning chocolate into a solid food by "conching" the liquid. Conching is a process of long, slow heating and stirring that develops the flavor and gives chocolate candy its melting smoothness.

Chocolate is a very complicated, natural food. Its flavor comes from more than 1,200 different chemicals. And why one person prefers one brand to another is a matter of personal choice.

While basic ingredients are the same for all chocolate, the blend of cocoa beans used, the amount of conching, the amount of cocoa butter added and other factors all affect the quality and the taste. The quality of any chocolate depends on the manufacturer's formula, which is a closely guarded secret.

THESE SIMPLE tests will help you judge your favorite chocolate:

- Appearance: The surface should be smooth and glossy. A dull surface may indicate that vegetable fat was used instead of cocoa butter. A whitish film, called "bloom," on the surface comes from the chocolate being exposed to temperature changes. The bloom is actually some of the cocoa butter that has melted and risen to the surface. It's unattractive, but harmless.
- Smell: There should be a rich, satisfying chocolate aroma, not too sweet or too bitter. A lack of aroma may indicate a lack of flavor also.
- Break: The chocolate should break cleanly with no crumbling edges. There may even be a snapping sound if it's a thick piece.
- Melt: When held in your hand, the chocolate should feel cool and should start to melt. Messy chocolate is a sign of quality.
- Flavor: When eaten, the chocolate should have a full, rounded taste that lingers after it is swallowed.

WHILE CHOCOLATE has some negative aspects — it's high in calories and saturated fat and may cause an allergic reaction in some people — it does have other positive qualities besides its terrific taste.

Chocolate is a quick source of energy. It contains, in small amounts, some important nutrients including calcium, iron, potassium, phosphorus, vitamin A and some B-complex vitamins. Also, chocolate is not bad for your teeth. It contains a protein that actually helps prevent tooth decay.

Finally, be sure to save a few pieces from your valentine. Chocolate contains phenylethylamine, the same chemical that the brain produces when a person is in love. When the romance ends, the chemical drops, too.

Eating chocolate may increase the amount of this chemical in the body and make you feel better again.

Women's getaway set

Recent reports in the Wall Street Journal and Working Mothers magazine indicate that a vast majority of working mothers still do most of the work involved in taking care of the home and the family.

That prompts a question, according to Elaine Kramer of the Kramer Corp. of West Bloomfield.: When do women take care of themselves?

With that in mind Kramer Corp. is offering a Just-for-Yourself Weekend for women at the Northfield Hilton hotel in Troy March 11-13.

The weekend will combine luxurious surroundings, nutritious, but elegant meals, informative and entertaining speakers, fun and pampering for any woman to come away with a new spirit, Kramer spokeswoman Catherine Stapels said.

The weekend will begin with free hors d'oeuvres in Hurley's, the hotel's night spot. The rest of the weekend will include presentations by people like Anita Terry of the Birmingham YMCA who will look at what type of exercise is right for each person.

For further information on the weekend, call the Kramer Corp. at 360-1404. Registration for the program will end Saturday.

What is a BRIGHTNESS ACUITY TESTER?

Cataracts can be a serious threat to vision affecting millions of people. Fortunately, with modern technology, cataract surgery has yielded high success rates.

Early symptoms of cataract formation include blurred vision and glare. Glare is due to scattering of light by the opaque lens (in the eye) and can be visually disabling for some individuals. A new instrument called the Brightness Acuity Tester (BAT) provides measurements of functional visual acuity while simulating three common bright light conditions: 1) High - direct overhead sunlight, 2) Medium - partly cloudy day, 3) Low - bright overhead commercial lighting. The purpose of the test is to assess the patients' ability to see under various glare-producing conditions. The test is easily performed in your ophthalmologist's examination room and provides him/her with valuable information regarding the effect of a cataract on your visual function.

This innovative device is used during your complete eye examination at the Coburn Clinic.

For more information on this and other eye developments, please contact The Coburn Clinic.

Plath biographer had her troubles

TODAY marks the 25th anniversary of Sylvia Plath's death. At age 30, in a London flat where Yeats once lived, the brilliant but troubled young writer finally succeeded in killing herself. She did it by sealing the kitchen doors and windows and resting her head in a hissing gas oven.

The troubled, often bizarre life of the gifted author of "The Bell Jar" and "Ariel" makes for good reading — her depression, her creative frenzies, her attempts to be the good wife and mother without sacrificing her all-encompassing desire to write — such good reading that readers are apt to forget how important her writings were (and are) to the literary world.

Linda Wagner-Martin hadn't forgotten. She began researching Plath's life several years ago, when, as a creative writing instructor, she kept hearing about Sylvia Plath from her better students.

"My talented women writers were on to Sylvia Plath long before I ever really knew about her. Her work spoke to them, possibly because they found themselves in similar situations. She was the kind of person who needed to be all things to all people. She couldn't just be a writer. She couldn't just be a wife and mother. She needed to be the best at everything and the effort just burned her out," commented Wagner-Martin.

WAGNER-MARTIN, A former Detroiter and Wayne State instructor now teaching at Michigan State University, put together an outline and a couple of chapters proposing a book on Plath, focusing on her giftedness and how it affected her life and those around her.

It's been more than three years since Simon & Schuster put in the highest bid for her book, "Sylvia Plath, a Biography (hardbound, $18.95). Three long, intensely frustrating years later, with no advance publicity, no review copies or distribution of galleys, and no thanks to Plath's husband, Ted Hughes, and his sister, Olwyn, executors of Plath's estate, the book is finally being distributed. (A review appears elsewhere in this section.)

At first, Hughes and his sister seemed interested in cooperating, Wagner-Martin recalls.

A recipe found in an old Amish cookbook is what The Apple Wreath co-owners Pat Tancill (left), Marion Elkins and Marianne Alf follow in assembling the apple wreaths used as to symbolize their new shop.

Artistic venture

Pat Tancill is in charge of scouring the area for high-caliber handwork by area artisans.

Wreathed in friendship

By Marie McGee
staff writer

IT WAS about 10 years ago that Marion Elkins began making apple wreaths as gifts for friends and relatives.

Elkins is still making those same wreaths — the only difference being she does it in the workshop of a gift shop she and two two neighbors operate in Livonia.

The shop is called The Apple Wreath — and now she does it for the general public who frequent the quaint shop on Seven Mile just east of Farmington Road in a newly developing shopping center, Loveland Plaza.

IT IS SOMEWHAT significant that the three business partners chose the apple wreath as the name for the shop. According to Amish folklore, the apple wreath is a sign of friendship — much like the pineapple is reportedly the sign of hospitality dating back to Colonial days. Both symbols are enjoying a comeback with the popularity of "country" type home decor.

The three partners, Elkins, Pat Tancill and Marianne Alf have been friends for many years. All three reside in the same subdivision.

Prior to moving to their present homes, Tancil and Elkins were neighbors in another Livonia subdivision. The move to their present location was happenstance.

Elkins and Alf are currently next door neighbors and do a lot of gardening together.

"EVEN OUR DOGS play together," they said.

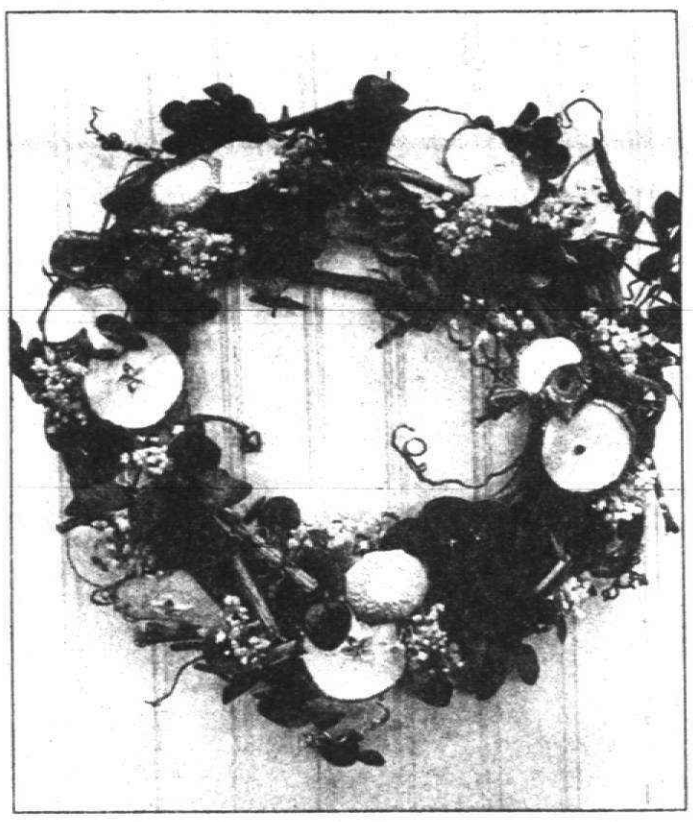
The business venture was Elkins' brainchild.

"I was working part time at the Craftique, a gift shop just west of the Apple Wreath location. When the Craftique owners decided to retire, my husband and I thought of buying that shop, but we couldn't strike the right deal.

Always interested in crafts, Elkins said, "I thought about it but decided it would be a lot more fun to do with friends."

She then approached Tancill and Alf. "The interest was there," she said.

The trio then began serious investigation of what it would take to open a small business. One of the things they did was to attend a seminar that alerted them to the possible pitfalls. To succeed, three things were important: location, enough capital and being able to spend time — "lots of it" in the new business.



Apples dried in the shop are used in wreath arrangements.

THE WOMEN FELT the new shopping center was a good location and they were certainly willing to spend the time needed to run a business, but decided early on to attempt the venture without assuming a large debt.

"We didn't want to take out any big loans," they confided.

One of the ways they figured they could save a lot of money was by doing the store decorating themselves.

'Tin-bashing' alive and well

By Arlene Funke
special writer

HOWARD SCHWEPPE calls himself a "tin-basher."

Schweppe is a 69-year-old Livonia resident who fell in love with tinsmithing 11 years ago after taking a class at Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

Using antique tools, Schweppe fashions colonial-style lanterns, pitchers and chandeliers from pieces of sheet metal.

"It started in New England in the late 1600s," Schweppe explained. "The old tinsmiths principally made kitchen utensils and lighting devices. Everybody relied on tin until almost the 20th century. Today's tinsmiths make gutters, downspouts and furnaces."

Schweppe, who recently retired as a consulting engineer, has crafted and sold numerous pieces to people who bring him pictures from magazines.

"THE THINGS I MAKE are copies of museum piece items," he said. "They have some historical significance."

Although Schweppe still considers his tinsmithing a hobby, he's spreading his wings a bit. Several of his pieces are for sale at the Apple Wreath, a gift shop on Seven Mile east of Farmington Road in Livonia.

According to Schweppe's research, tinsmithing was brought to the American colonies by Welsh craftsmen. Principal material was sheet iron coated with tin. The more expensive copper and brass were introduced later.

Entering his workshop, behind his daughter's house in Farmington Hills, is like stepping into the past.

On the road with house collage artist

By Debbie Wallis Landau
Special writer

'I like to work on both large and small pieces simultaneously. I tend not to lose my perspective that way, get bored, or set in one pattern. What's fun is the limitlessness of the materials I can use.'

—Andrea Striewski

IF ANDREA STRIEWSKI had pursued her original goal of teaching physical education, art fair goers wouldn't have been able to enjoy and buy her detailed architectural collages of Victorian homes.

But Striewski, studied her subjects at Michigan State University years ago. She refined her love of sports into passionate pride and love for teaching them. Now, armed with a degree and eight years ago, she read an article that changed her life.

It was a piece in House Beautiful which profiled a man who constructed wooden collages. Striewski thought they were very primitive. But she was enchanted with the idea because "I had always been fascinated with my own homes in Ferndale and Birmingham where I grew up," she said.

She bought herself a hand jigsaw and made a rendition of her own house out of wood. As she became more adept and started exhibiting her work at various art fairs people commissioned her to replicate their homes.

It was at the 1984 Meadowbrook Art Fair in Rochester that Striewski met her husband, Ted. Their booths faced each other and they were intrigued with each other's work, thinking a bracelet might be a good trade for a collage.

TODAY, THE FARMINGTON HILLS artist's creations are exhibited at about 30 art fairs across the country each year. Striewski has certainly enlarged on her early understanding that "one's bottle can be one's castle."

No longer are her homes simple wooden edifices. Visitors to the Birmingham art fairs, the Sholom Aleichem art fair in March or the Charlevoix summer art fair are familiar with the whimsical mixed media collages which blend textures such as copper, lace, handmade paper scraps, mesh from real screens and wood Striewski hand-paints. Doll house furniture has been utilized for pillars and porches. Paper cutouts of rosy flower pots soften the starkness of a black wrought-iron fire-escape.

Each time one peers at an intricate collage a new figure is glimpsed — be one, it might be a sombre-eyed girl, in a muddy blouse shown in brown tones, or another, it could be a lazy cat or white owl perched on a chimney or sill. Wisps of antique lace seem to curl in an imagined breeze.

Striewski says being a regular exhibitor at art fairs has been a boon to her career. This year, she has expanded her previous itineraries of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Ohio to include Florida. Shows in Boca Raton, Miami and Key Biscayne are scheduled later this winter.

"I enjoy them all, particularly the Birmingham and Charlevoix markets where the customers are sophisticated in their knowledge and their recognition of what goes into a piece," she said.

One misconception Striewski would like to dispel is that art fairs don't attract serious-minded business people.

"My thought is that some people still feel art is a hippy business, the way it was portrayed in the '60s and '70s. Art fairs were supposed to be a way for certain crafts people to manage to live out of their vans. Would you believe me if I told you some artists earn as much as $100,000 a year, or $10,000 from one show?"

SHE SAID MOST artists work a five-day week and then do a weekend fair, sometimes hundreds of miles from home.

Striewski uses a van for transport. She and Ted try to participate in the same fairs as often as possible and are comfortable relieving each other and selling the other's work.

Striewski takes about 50 pieces, ranging in size from 44 by 40 inches to 14 by 18 inches. She's usually in a 10 by 10 foot booth and always includes unframed smaller works which she calls her "multiples" — houses which are not bordered by a matboard covered wooden outline of the individual house design.

"It would be great to sell just large pieces, because, let's face it, you enter art fairs to earn money. But variety is part of the art fair game. Not everyone has the wherewithal or the interest in spending a lot of money, I understand that," she said.

Her prices range from $25 to about $800 for the largest collages, but she said, "I find the pricing of your own work is so arbitrary. For me, it's one of the most difficult aspects of exhibiting and selling. I'm willing to listen to what people have to say. I can usually tell if they're negotiating from genuine need or just to test me."

She said she admires the resiliency of the artists she meets at fairs. "At each location, the parking is different, the community is a strange one, the weather varies greatly. All the work has to be both weather-proofed and people-proofed. And, of course, there are occasions where you just break even with expenses."

Though she says one can never predict the outcomes, past successes and the reputations of good markets influence her's and Ted's decisions to apply for participation in various fairs.

"Michigan Council for the Arts publishes a list of the year's forthcoming art fairs," Striewski said. "I send in an application fee, usually slides and jury fee. It can get expensive."

LAST YEAR, SHE won purchase awards at the St. Clair and East Jordan fairs.

"Unlike cash prizes, these were situations where a corporation or business entity appropriated fixed amounts to actually purchase a piece for permanent display in an office, or art center or community building," she said.

Although she hasn't actively entered any competitions, she doesn't discount that in the future. Currently, about one-third of her work is by commission.

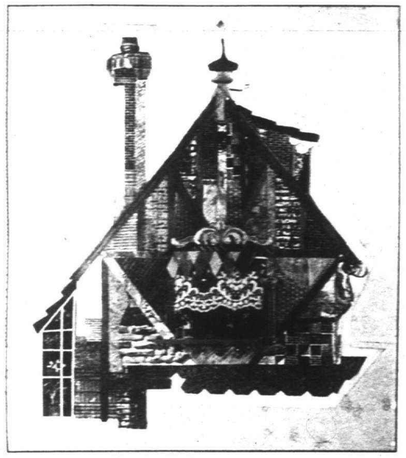
When she's not doing the art fair circuit, she completes two or three sizeable peices each week. The cutting and matting assistance she gets from her daughter, Shelley Bouwens, and another helper, Donna Hamilton, have enabled her to maintain a good production flow.

"I like to work on both large and small pieces simultaneously. I tend not to lose my perspective that way, get bored, or set in one pattern. What's fun is the limitlessness of the materials I can use."

Considering that she began the larger, mixed media pieces just over two years ago, Striewski is extremely pleased to say she hasn't experienced any real setbacks.

"Whether you have terrific sales or just hold your own, it's a terrific feeling to know you might be selling a person his or her first piece of art," she said.

In her studio in her Farmington Hills home, Andrea Striewski has her own art and that of others to inspire her and a lot of materials to use for her collages.



"Contemporary Tudor" by Andrea Striewski incorporates unexpected materials such as lace and some surprising images which surface on close inspection.

Enlisting the help of their husbands (plus other family members), the women went at it hammer and saw.

"That saved us a lot of money," said Tancill, whose husband, Bill, put up shelving while Elkins and Alf's husbands — both named John — painted and wallpapered and laid carpeting.

The end product is part of The Apple Wreath's apparent success. A charming, warm, uncrowded and uncluttered atmosphere where the works of Michigan artisans are displayed to full advantage.

THE INTERIOR IS done in forest green and cream, mauves, with soft accents of blue and peach. The wallpaper, selected by Elkins, has proven to be particularly attractive to customers.

"We know of at least three people who liked the wallpaper so much they wanted to know where they could get it and now they have it in their own homes," said Tancill.

The women also decided at the outset "to buy conservatively" in purchases of antiques — both authentic and reproductions they planned to feature in the store.

What they learned in a hurry was that there was a demand for authentic antiques. "We sold out almost all the things we bought for the opening and have replenished the stock two or three times," said Tancill, whose job it is to scour antique marts for items.

Repros — or reproductions — on the other hand, have not done as well so will be downplayed.

Getting ready for the opening just prior to the Christmas holidays evokes some good — and some bad — memories and a few chuckles.

For instance, "The day of the opening, we locked the keys inside the antique cash register we were going to use for a cash box and had to take it to the locksmith before we could use it," smiled Alf.

Believe me, it helps to have a sense of humor, said Tancill, who in addition to her entrepreneurship is a member of the Livonia Board of Education.

HOLIDAY SALES were better than expected, the women note.

"In the beginning, our husbands kept telling us not to expect too much — not to be too disappointed. It takes awhile for a business to catch on, they would tell us," the women said.

"Frankly, they were amazed at how well things went for

Maybe, said Elkins, it's because the shop's merchandising emphasizes true craftsmanship by area artisans — some new and old. (One of them is tinsmith Harold Schweppe profiled elsewhere in this section).

"We're not just another 'country store,'" said Elkins.

Even the authentic apple wreaths they sell are indicative of the fine artistic quality they hope to promote.

All three women help assemble the wreaths by hand. And that calls for a lot of slicing and dicing and drying and turning — after you find apples that are the right size and color.

But more than that, it has become the core of a close relationship.

The Apple Wreath is at 32626 Seven Mile Road, Livonia. The phone number is 474-6090.

mic-1700s. Many lanterns have holes punched to form the popular colonial sunburst pattern. Traditionally, the holes were punched outward so wind wouldn't extinguish the candle's flame.

"The first lantern I made, it took me a whole week to punch the holes," Schweppe said. "Now it takes about three hours."

Standing in precision are tools that Schweppe has found at antique shops, flea markets and private sales. Each has a specific function, such as cutting, pressing, folding or shaping the metal. One of his oldest tools, a burring machine, was manufactured in 1825.

"You can hardly tell the difference between the appearance of tools from 150 years ago," Schweppe said. "Except the ones made now are junk. I don't want any newer equipment."

ACCORDING TO SCHWEPPE, few people today are engaged in tinsmithing.

"One of the reasons is that the equipment is so hard to come by," he said. "A lot of these things look like a ball of rust when I get them. It takes a lot of work to restore them, but it's worth it."

Interest in colonial replicas, always very popular on the East Coast, is growing in other regions, Schweppe believes.

Some customers ask Schweppe to design and craft wall sconces and chandeliers for their homes. Others seek hard-to-find items, such as Bible lanterns.

"I'm amazed at how many young people who have inherited family Bibles and buy these," Schweppe said.

"The most satisfaction is making something nice and see the face of the person who comes to get it," Schweppe said.

Schweppe, who teaches small groups his craft, has two friends who share his passion for tinsmithing.

Plath biography worth reading

By Victoria Diaz
special writer

review

Sylvia Plath: A biography by Linda W. Wagner-Martin. Simon and Schuster. 272 pages. $18.95

If you're not already familiar with the fascinating story of American writer, Sylvia Plath, you'll probably find Linda Wagner-Martin's "Sylvia Plath: A Biography" worthwhile reading.

For serious Plathophiles however, constantly in search of new revelations and fresh insight into their tragic idol and her work, the book may be something of a disappointment.

Plath, the first child of highly-educated (though not affluent) parents, was born in Boston in 1932. Her father, an entomology professor at Boston University, died of complications of diabetes shortly after Sylvia's eighth birthday, and his death and her memories of him would later deeply influence both her life and her work.

In 1953, already the recipient of numerous prestigious writing awards, and with fiction and poetry credits in several major publications, Plath, suffering from depression and mental exhaustion, attempted suicide. After spending several months in mental institutions, she went on to continue a life of remarkable literary achievement, married English poet, Ted Hughes, and gave birth to two children Then, in 1961, rejected by Hughes and beset with chronic physical illness, Plath, in the early hours of a cold February morning in London, made another attempt at ending her own life, this time succeeding.

WAGNER-MARTIN'S book is highly readable — a real page-turner, as a matter of fact — and a balanced, honest portrayal of someone who, though she has become a kind of American legend, was, of course, ultimately as human as the rest of us. This is Sylvia, warts and all, from her persistent vanity, to her penchant for using people to further her own needs, to an occasional disturbing tendency toward real howling vengeance.

Here also, though, is Sylvia's admirable side her remarkable capacity for hard work, her devotion to Hughes and her children, her courage, her personal charm, her magnificent dedication to her art.

In addition, Wagner-Martin has clearly sketched one of the most essential facets of Plath's enigmatic character: her ambivalence toward the traditional role of women, toward sex, toward marriage, and toward the sacrifices she was expected to make in the name of motherhood.

Despite its strong points, though, serious Plath fans will still likely find this book coming up short. For one thing, there's just simply not a lot new in "Sylvia Plath: A Biography." Much of what is here has already been related in Edward Butscher's "Sylvia Plath: Method and Madness (1976);" "The Journals of Sylvia Plath (1982);" "Letters Home (1976)"; or Plath's autobiographical "novel," "The Bell Jar," published in the United States in 1971.

YOU'VE GOT A NICE FACE..BUT

Do you know what I consider one of the greatest drawbacks of the seller who tries to sell his own home? The fact that most prospects will not confide their objections to the seller's face. I've found that the great preponderance of buyers are gentle, polite and caring individuals. That's the problem. They don't want to hurt you.

You may have the nicest face on the block, but a promising buyer may have abruptly decided that he couldn't afford the price of your home and left. He didn't want to hurt your feelings. On the other hand, price is a subject that they WOULD discuss with a Realtor (they do it all the time) who could then work them how it could possibly be financed within their means.

A nice prospect wouldn't dream of telling a nice seller that the carpeting was worn or certain rooms need to be repainted. They'd tell this to a Realtor though, who could arrange to make minor financial adjustments or repairs and save what could have been a lost sale.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at: KENNELLY REALTY - 19500 Middlebelt - Ste. 201 E., Livonia, MI 48152 - 471-0404 We're here to help!

"I know now why so little new has been written about Sylvia. It's because the Hugheses make it impossible," she continued. "They stayed with us long enough to see what we were doing, and, of course, nothing pleased them. They attempted to change hundreds of pages of manuscript, even to the point of making changes in material that had already been published.

"Essentially, they were trying to write my book for me, and, apparently, they'd tried it with others who had attempted the same thing. Some gave up in frustration, but I just get more stubborn. My book was about Sylvia Plath as a woman and a gifted writer. It wasn't meant to damage anyone."

Wagner-Martin said she and Simon & Schuster made as many concessions as they could without changing completely the character of the book. "We all got so many nasty and threatening letters from the Hugheses, Simon & Schuster finally turned all correspondence over their attorney who told the Hugheses there saw no reason to change anything in my book, and Simon & Schuster finally released it quietly in October, with the Hugheses still threatening lawsuits."

Wagner-Martin said the British publishers took a little longer to get over their fear of Ted Hughes, now England's poet-laureate. Seems he'd been embroiled in a splashy and very expensive lawsuit over a story the London Mail had published about the death of the women he'd left Plath for. Publication in England is now scheduled for early March, with an excerpt coming out in British Vogue this month.

"Sylvia's life and works had a great impact on a lot of people," Wagner-Martin said. "There's no question about how important she was to the poets, for instance. And what's interesting is that the best reviews of her collected poems seem to come from young males. They're just amazed by the scope of her work, by her sense of comedy and fast metaphors. She touched everybody who'd ever come in contact with her — both as a person and as writer."

SOME OF DETROIT'S best known poets and performance artists will get together on Wednesday, Feb. 24, for "Read & Feed: A benefit for the Cass Methodist Emergency Food Program and the Art Center Music School."

Gloria House, Leslie Reese, M.L. Liebler, John Sinclair, Faruq Z. Bey, Trino Sanchez and others will read and perform at the Old Miami Bar, 3930 Cass Avenue (just south of the Wayne State campus) at 7:30 p.m.

The Cass Methodist Food program feeds Cass Corridor residents, and the Art Center Music School offers its services to lower income families in the corridor. These poets and artists are known for doing good things around Detroit. Over 250 attended a similar benefit in December. For just $3 you can feed bodies and hearts in need.

HOLY SPIRIT, You who solve all problems, Who light all roads so that I may attain my goals. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me & Who, in all instances of my life, is with me. I want this short prayer to thank You for all the things and to confirm once again that I never want to be separated from YOU even in spite of all material illusion. I wish to be with You in Eternal Glory. Thank You for Your Mercy towards me and mine. Repeat this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the favor will be granted even though it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after favor is granted without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear. -E.D.

Nuptial gifts for each other

ALTHOUGH wedding rings are gifts a bride and groom give each other, it has become traditional to mark the celebration with another, more private exchange of presents. Conventionally this gift also has been a piece of jewelry, most often a watch or second ring.

Of course, not just any Swatch or Timex will do for the occasion. Keepsake timepieces are available in a wide range of prices.

At the top of the line for both men and women are designer watches with wafer-thin cases and subtle diamond styling. There are chronometers that will function in outer space or beneath the 12-mile reef.

And then there are watches that offer history, as well as style. Antique pocket watches come in plain and fancy styles, with price tags to match.

One line of watches has brought out reproductions of '30s- and '40s-style wrist watches for under $300. For women, there are old-fashioned brooch and delicate pendant watches, available in estate jewelry collections and in antique stores.

GROOMS WHO WANT to adorn the bride on her wedding day have a number of options. In addition to a diamond engagement ring, a man can offer his intended a solitaire pendant, diamond stud earrings or a tennis bracelet, those elegant strips of sparkling simplicity. "Cocktail" rings of diamonds and colored gemstones also can mark the event.

The 16- to 18-inch pearl necklace is a bridal tradition, but pearls come in all lengths. A bride with a swan neck might like a choker (14 to 15 inches) or a Princess Di-style collar. The matinee length (22 to 23 inches) or opera style (30 to 36 inches) might suit another woman's style.

Another kind of pre-nuptial present that's traditional is the monogrammed sterling silver or gold brush set. For men, this usually includes a twin set of brushes. For women, the basic set includes a mirror, comb and brush. Crystal perfume bottles also are appropriate.

ANOTHER POPULAR gift is an elegantly ornate frame for a wedding picture. These frames can be as plain or elaborate as one's taste, and they can be monogrammed and personalized with initials and wedding date.

Simply romantic

Picking what's best for you

SARAH FERGUSON, Caroline Kennedy and Maria Shriver all share one trait: Their fantasy of a Camelot wedding, complete with pageantry and a massive, dramatic bridal gown.

Of course, elaborate beading and ice blue taffeta might not be your cup of tea. Consider these trompe de l'oeil effects for looking your best on the big day:

- Short and petite? — Shop for dresses with neat seams or lace appliques that run lengthwise. Consider empire, princess or A-lines with small collars and cuffs.
- Tall and lanky? — Minimize your height with trim that wraps all around, wide belts, large collars, big cuffs, flared or tiered skirts and low necks.
- Full figure? — Choose a carefully fitted, solid-colored dress in a princess or loosely shaped style that skims the body. Say no to clingy fabrics.
- Thick midriff and waist? — Aim for the slimming effect of a lifted waistline and A-line skirt.
- Skinny midriff and waist? — Give yourself a little shape with well-defined midriffs in contrasting colors.
- Broad shoulders? — Look for dresses with smooth, set-in sleeves, low V-necks or high-covered necks.
- Narrow Shoulders? — Drape them with cape collars or capelets.

The bridal gown appearing on the cover is available at Jacobson's.

The cover was photographed by Jerry Zolynsky.

Hair fashions were by Daniel J. of Farmington Hills. Makeup was by Bloomies of Farmington Hills.

This special bridal section appearing in all 12 Observer & Eccentric Newspapers was coordinated by Marie McGee, special sections editor. Advertising coordinators were Cindy O'Day and Sue Brooks.

FROM ROMANTIC to simple, sophisticated to traditional, a wedding dress exists to suit every taste.

While personal preference and budget determine the gown you choose, fashion trends in the stores shape the parameters of your final choice.

As American women take their cue from royalty — both the British royal family and the American equivalent, the Kennedys — the traditional wedding has returned.

More than any other trend, the pendulum swings toward the traditional shapes of wedding gowns that are in stores today.

Remember Lady Di walking regally down the cathedral aisle, train floating elegantly behind? For weddings that are regal in spirit but scaled down in size, the train appears in adaptation.

The lengths are cathedral and semi-cathedral, draping 1½ to 2 yards from the waist. Traditional gowns now are fairy-tale dresses in translation — glimmering, opulent dresses realized for the bride-to-be.

This year, wedding dress designers pay extra attention to detail. The sleeve receives new emphasis with delicate embellishments.

Some gowns are designed with sleeves that can be worn on or off the shoulder, while other sleeves are shirred but fitted, ruffled or pouffed. Simple or elaborate in shape, sleeves demand notice via bows or flower trim, lace, sequins or beading.

Discreetly eye-catching faux jewels set other sleeves apart, forming rows or tasteful bands of glimmer around cuffs. When dresses are sleeveless, look for the retro inspiration of stole necklines that give the shoulders an elegantly wrapped appearance.

BODICES, SKIRTS and the aforementioned trains have their own share of rich, embellished detail.

Designers like After Six and Bridal Originals present gowns with elaborate beading, sequins and carefully rendered appliques for an interesting play of light as you walk down the aisle.

Another detail that's as elegant as it is precious: delicate cut-out work, at the neckline, on the train or at the hem of a skirt.

IF YOU'D like to know the difference between this year's and last year's models, look for the placement of bows.

While they appeared in moderation on trains last season, this year they're more auspiciously placed on the shoulder, the waist, throughout the skirt and cascading down the train.

Bows also appear at the dropped waist, a reminder that waistlines figure strongly this year with empire and dropped waists re-emerging.

At Oscar de la Renta, bolero jackets grace strapless or delicately strapped dresses in the Wedding Collections.

The designer also had done evening suits, a beautifully pragmatic option to a single-wear, billowing gown. Buttons

Ultimate Bride is new concept in specialty fashion merchandising

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

MOST PEOPLE don't think department store when it's time to shop for bridal apparel. Montgomery Ward hopes to change that.

The Ultimate Bride in Ward's Wonderland Mall store is part of the company's new image — expanding brand name lines and dividing the store into specialty departments in an effort to become more competitive.

Nobody hopes the concept will work more than Lina Del Signore, owner of the Ultimate Bride.

"Customers don't know we're here yet," she said. "In Plymouth now we are extremely busy. Here they don't know about us."

Del Signore owns Lina's Bridal & Imports, a popular salon in Plymouth which draws clientele from as far away as Grand Rapids and Traverse City "because we have one of the largest selections of gowns in Michigan — every manufacturer and designer included."

In an effort to spread the word about her newest endeavor, Del Signore has placed advertising in national magazines like Brides and Seventeen.

THE SALON INSIDE Montgomery Ward has a different name from her other store because she sees it as a separate identity.

"I don't want to call it less than the best. It is the best. Just less overhead is involved so we can offer more savings to the customer."

Hand selected gowns sell for 20 percent off and more. There is a 10 percent discount on all new orders.

"The emphasis here is on quick service. We stock five or six gowns in each size."

The salon has the look of a store within a store. It is set off from other merchandising areas by glass walls. Silver tinsel streamers hang from the ceiling alongside paper snowflakes. A large neon tube sign lights the window facing the western most entrance to Ward's off of Plymouth Road.

Bridal gowns line the walls. Bridesmaids dresses in a rainbow of colors fill the racks in the middle of the store. The back wall is a solid line of mirrored dressing rooms.

The Ultimate Bride also features imported gift items like espresso makers and demitasse cups, bomboniere — party favors for wedding or anniversary parties, shoes, hats and veils for the bride-to-be and her wedding party.

"A bride doesn't have to go any place else," she said. "They can even choose invitations."

She deals with five local printers.

For Del Signore of Livonia, the wedding business is a family affair. With her husband, John, she is building a banquet hall near the I-96/I-275 corridor to be called Villa Del Signore. It will accommodate four receptions at a time.

"It will be completed in September 1988. The entrance will be four stories high, gold and glass," she said. "It will have a fountain, marble floors, and a brass railing stairway for the bride."

The couple owns Fonte D'Amore restaurant on Plymouth Road in Livonia, where their two grown sons work. Their two teenage daughters work with their mother in the bridal salon.

"When I was a 9 year old girl in Italy, I went to embroidery school. I grew up with sewing. I have a weakness for fine fabric. I can feel and know the contents of the material. My dream was always to handle the finest most delicate fabrics," she said.

"This is one type of business you can't open unless you know how to fit the girl. Fitting and finding the (figure) problem is more important than the cut of the pattern. You must find people to fit the gown to perfection."

Del Signore's first endeavor, her shop in Plymouth, is in its fourth year of operation and going strong. She never worked at other bridal salons before opening her own business.

"I jumped right into the fire," she jokes.

Her approach, the concept of offering the bride a dress plus all the trimmings, is what attracted Karen Stimmell, a Ward's executive based in Chicago.

Stimmel scouted local bridal salons and was most impressed with Lina's in Plymouth. Thus came the offer to open the store in Montgomery Ward.

"What she found appealing was the complete line of service we offer," Del Signore said.

"I did this to give brides more service here," she said. "The location is good. We offer every dress in any magazine. If we don't have the dress in stock, we can order at 10 percent off."

The Ultimate Bride is open seven days a week, 10 to 9 daily and 11 to 6 on Sunday.

Not only is it easy to get, it's also a free service offered by several local jewelry stores.

The Wedding Pages has 176 pages devoted to every phase of planning, budgeting and coordinating a wedding reception, honeymoon and new home. It is in workbook form so the bride can fill in her plans and ideas as she goes along and keep all of her wedding information organized in one place.

Brides receive a free copy of the workbook by simply filling out an order form at participating jewelry stores. The bride will receive her free wedding planner in five to seven weeks, providing the wedding date is at least four months away and the bride lives in the metropolitan Detroit area.

Drama and flair

Her versatile satin gown with on-or-off-the- shoulder hand-beaded basque bodice has puffy sleeves with detachable gauntlets, cut-out detail on the skirt and double ruffle cathedral train. Pendulum swings toward traditional are jeweled and skirt lengths range from mid-calf to the knee. De la Renta suggests these dresses may be the perfect choices for second- or third-time brides, or for those women who prefer streamlined simplicity.

FOR THE 38 PERCENT of brides-to-be who sew their gowns or have them made, Vogue Butterick patterns expand the realm of possibility.

Opulence and romance abound, according to Leona Roche, bridal consultant for Vogue Butterick.

"Brides who might have worn 10 yards of fabric several years ago are using 20 yards this year."

As proportions grow more luxurious, so do details. Look for pattern styles with fichu necklines, off-the-shoulder cuts, beribboned, clinched waists and bustle backs.

Vogue Butterick fashion director Cindy Rose says that double embroidered lace and embroidered sheer fabrics used over silks and satins will be important this year. Lace and ribbons edge cuffs, hems and sashes, and opalescent trims replace metallics for glimmer.

FOR AFTERNOON OR second weddings, Vogue Butterick gowns provide alternate-length options.

Although many styles are elegantly traditional, there are sophisticated silhouettes that are cut out to reveal short taffeta styles with shawl collars and a modified suit consisting of a lace peplum jacket over a slim skirt.
