Pay rates for Canton trustees will increase more than 60 percent and salaries for the treasurer and clerk will go up 20 percent after the November election.

THE CLERK'S AND TREASUR ER'S pay rates will rise from $33,000 to $39,600 after the November election. Also, beginning Nov. 20, 1989, the rates will annually be adjusted to the mid-point of the nonunion salary employee rate grade Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben and trustee Dean Swartzwelter want to get even, not mad, in court.

Hoben is upset about the timing of work on a new Joy Road water main, expected to snarl traffic near Centennial Educational Park beginning April 18.

In the wake of the district's millage defeat, Swartzwelter would like to pursue a lawsuit charging the government with failure to provide students with equal educational oppor-

Hoben and Swartzwelter vented their spleens at last week's school board meeting.

"I'm certainly not an expert, but each child is guaranteed by the Constitution the right to an equal educa-tion. And presently, students not only in Michigan but across the U.S. are not getting an equal education.

"I'd propose not going through the state system, but to go through the federal system, to the Supreme Court if necessary, to make it a natiorial decision as opposed to a state

"I'm not a lawyer, but it seems there should be some mechanism to do that, with all the other equalities guaranteed in the Constitution. It's being opened more and more to to cover more and more areas. There should be a way to legally open up the area of equal education and re-late if to this."

New Ways to REMOVE CATARACTS

Reports of new ways to remove cataracts crop up from time to time in the newspapers. The first of the modern methods of removing cataracts was developed in 1962. A freezing probe was used to attach itself to a cataract and then gently remove it. Then in 1967 a method using ultrasound was introduced to break up and remove a cataract. Frequently a news report will errantly announce these as "new" methods of removing cataracts. Actual ly, they have been around for some time. However, recent advances in technology have made it possible for more eye surgeons to use advanced techniques to remove cataracts. Some of these new refinements are worth mentioning.

kn all types of cataract operations a soft vacuum procedure is used to remove a cloudy cataract from the eye. Today eye surgeons are using computer controlled instruments to extract particles of cataracts. These instruments resemble the control panel of digital displays indicate eye pressure, vacuum pressure, fluid velocity, etc. The cataract, only about the size of an aspirin, is first detached from its skin, like the skin of a grape. Then its hard center is removed, like removing the peanut from the center of a piece of candy. Then milky portions of the lens are delicately removed. The cloudy material that was once blocking light rays from entering the eyes has now been removed. A clear artificial plastic lens is implanted to replace the cloudy one now removed New refinements in cataract surgery are being developed every day. They are helping to make one of the safest and most effective operations in the history of medicine an even better surgical procedure for a growing generation of older adults who will undergo cataract surgery.

UNTING FOR treasure kept Plymouth-Canton youngsters busy Saturday

Saturday, April 2, was the day for local Easter egg hunts. The Canton Parks and Recreation Department's annual hunt started at 10 a.m. at Griffin Park in Canton.

The Plymouth Jaycees' annual Easter egg hunt followed at 11 a.m. and was held at Plymouth Township

At the Canton event, recreation supervisor Bob Dates used a megaphone to make announcements to the "The voice doesn't quite carry over hundreds of people," he said. Dates also stood on a rock in the park, making him more visible to the gathering crowd.

The Easter egg hunt at Griffin Park was divided into three age groups: children age 4 and younger, 5-7 and 8-10. Different areas of the park were used for each age group.

AT THE ANNUAL Canton event youngsters searched for candy and for eggs filled with prizes. There were four special eggs for each age group; those eggs were turned in for Easter baskets. The crowd wasn't small at the

PLUS helps kids learn

Connie Robbins is glad her 4year-old daughter, Nicole, is par-ticipating in the PLUS preschool program.

PLUS — Pupils Learning Useful Skills — is a free preschool pro-gram offered by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools for 4year-olds and their parents.

Robbins, a Canton resident, also has an 8-year-old son who was in the program a few years ago.
"I like it," she said. Robbins spends part of each week at Central Middle School in Plymouth; she helps out with a variety of preschool activities.

"We try to get them interested in doing the activity for the day.' When her son was in the PLUS program, Robbins couldn't be as involved as she is now. Nicole was a baby at that time, which made it difficult for Robbins to be involved. "I'm glad I had a second chance, Nicole will start kindergarten this fall at Field Elementary School in Canton. WHEN NICOLE started in the PLUS program, such tasks as cutting out paper creations and writing her name were new challenges. Nicole can now do those tasks. Robbins would encourage other parents to consider the PLUS program and "to get involved with their child's education at the beginning.

"The staff here's just great. They make you feel at home.

Parental involvement is a key part of the PLUS program, according to Mary Fritz. Fritz is director of Chapter I and Head Start for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools; the PLUS program is part of her responsibilities.

The program is offered free of charge to those who are qualified. The preschool program is for 4year-olds and their parents living in the attendance areas of Eriksson, Farrand, Field and Gallimore schools; those living in the attendance area of Hoben Elementary School, tentatively scheduled to open this fall, also are eligible. "What you contribute is your time and interest," Fritz said. Parental involvement "is stressed and is an inherent part of the pro-

'Hypoallergenic?' There's no guarantee

Q. I've been buying hypoallergenic cosmetics for my daughter. Are they ic on the label only means the prodworth the extra cost to prevent allergic reactions?

A. According to the Food and Drug Administration, the federal agency which oversees the safety and label ing of all cosmetics, being labeled "hypoallergenic" or "allergy-treated" does not guarantee there is no chance of an allergic reaction when these products are used.

The possibility of a reaction always exists - even when the product has been used reaction-free for months, or even years.

The prefix "hypo" in this usage

In addition, there are no standards on how a manufacturer determines when the product is hypoallergenic.

Hypoallergenic has a different meaning to different cosmetic manufacturers. For one, it may mean clinical testing has been done on the labeled products. To another manufacturer, it may mean only omitting fragrances or other problem-causing ingredients.

ANOTHER LABELING misconception is "dermatologist tested." This important sounding phrase only uses approximately 12 cosmetics at the same time, it may be difficult to sort out safe from unsafe products. And manufacturers are continuously reformulating cosmetics, so new ingredients may have been added to your regular cosmetics.

The top five product categories that cause reactions, according to FDA studies, are skin care products (lotions, creams, etc.), hair preparations (including color), facial makeup, nail preparations (polish, remover, etc.) and fragrance products

Among cosmetics, the top four ingredients to cause allergic reactions, the FDA reports, are fra-grance ingredients, preservatives (antibacterial), phenylenediamine, lanolin and derivatives.

Dear Ms. Y .:

To date, not enough research has been done to produce evidence that the body absorbs the minerals in water as well as it does those in food. So until there is more concrete proof available, the best way to meet dietary mineral requirements is simply to eat a balanced diet made up of a variety of foods, including whole grains, vegetables and fruits.

Before Ross Roy Inc. moved into new executive headquarters in Bloomfield Hills last September, the ad agency was sprawled out in five different buildings in downtown De-

"We had so far outgrown our facility. We needed consolidation. We wanted to create an environment for productivity. We're prepared now,' said Dan Lutzeier, vice president for public affairs.

Ross Roy's striking headquarters, a three-story, 220,000-square-foot building, befits its new image. Billing itself as "the agency of the '90s," it provides not only advertising, but merchandising, direct marketing, public relations, film production and research. The company believes the advertising and communications industries are headed toward the single source concept.

'No longer can you be just an ad agency but a provider of complete marketing services.'

— Dan Lutzeier

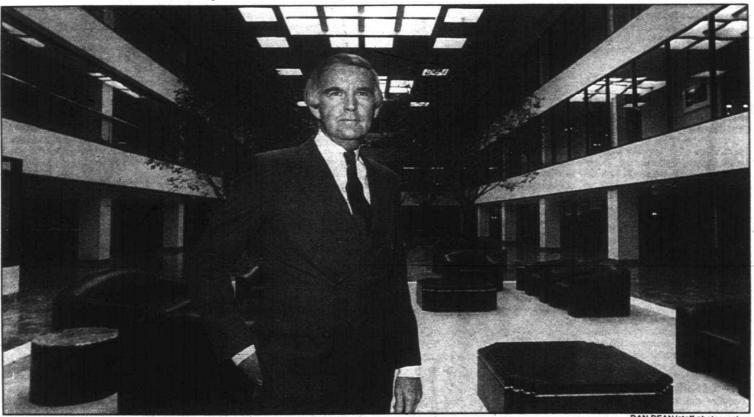

The figures provide justification for the forward thinking. Advertising Age pegs Ross Roy as the 22nd largest advertising agency in the nation, with $475.3 million in 1987 billings, an increase of 14 percent over 1986. In Canada, Toronto- and Windsor-based offices put Ross Roy among Canada's top 20 agencies.

"The growth rate has been remarkable over the past five or six years," Lutzeier said.

The firm, with clients like Chrysler Corp., K mart, the state of Michigan and Blue Cross and Blue Shield, has grown from a $191 million company in 1980 to its present standing under the leadership of CEO Glen Fortinberry.

FORTINBERRY, a J. Walter Thompson alumnus, has added clients like Clairol, Hoover and Toshiba

Ross Roy spokesman Frank Wilberding says the company originally had an option on riverfront property for expansion, but the city gave away that option, offering the 52brought together under one roof with the exception of a production department located in downtown Detroit.

The company recently showed off its Bloomfield Hills building, which contains an advanced unified wiring plan capable of linking together telephones, computers and all other telecommunications devices in every office. There are 19 conference rooms for brainstorming sessions, including a couple of particularly snazzy rooms for formal presenta-

Two hundred on-line computer terminals are presently operating, with 25 from remote subsidiary locations. More than half of current computer utilization is for Chrysler, processing 30,000 calls a month Chrysler incentives, telemarketing and sales training. Workers track daily sales of more than 15,000 salespersons across the country.

THE 121/2-ACRE site, near Woodward and Long Lake Road, has retained a "wetlands feel. We worked with the DNR to retain trees and save woods, to preserve ecology.

"It's really a woodlands paradise," Lutzeier added. "We're actually attracting wildlife out there."

Rather than level a large hill for an access road near the front of the building, the company decided to reroute the roadway and preserve the hill's mature stand of hardwood Two wetland areas likewise were connected by the introduction of a new manmade riverbed flowing under the visitor parking area.

Most of the 550 permanent employees made the move north. A 35person video unit is still housed in the Stroh Riverplace facility 11/2 blocks from the old building.

The headquarters' central attraction is an atrium which provides views of glass-walled offices on all three levels. The main lobby features Italian marble floors, glass elevators and a brass railed staircase, mauve leather chairs, oak end tables and lots of plants.

"We want our creative people stimulated by the environment," Lutzeier said. "There's lots of natural light. It helps nurture the creative process.

Much of the ground floor is still vacant. Space is available for leasing to compatible businesses. Howard & Howard, a Kalamazoo-based law firm, leases about 40,000 square feet. The idea is to keep space available for expansion.

One Ross Roy division on the ground level is the incentives department, which is equipped to develop and carry out rebate programs.

"No longer can you be just an ad agency but a provider of complete marketing services," Lutzeier said.

The idea of a privately-owned mediation company wasn't Schavrien's. He bought the Michigan franchise from Seattle-based U.S. Arbitration Inc., which has 25 affiliates across the country that provide binding arbitration and non-binding mediation services. Other services at the Michigan franchise include development of custom programs, providing volunteer arbitrators to social service agencies, making educa-tional presentations and carrying out consumer classaction suits brought by the state attorney general's

"TT IS USUALLY in everybody's best interest to resolve cases we hear without formal litigation," said Schavrien, whose chief clients are insurers whose customers are unhappy with settlement offers on claims. "We're brought in when claims are filed and there's an impasse, which is more often than you might think. We mediate or negotiate as an informal third party between the two disputing parties. Or we can make a binding arbitration decision."

Michigan cases are settled 84 percent of the time without going to court. National cases had an 30-percent settlement rate during Michigan Arbitration's first year of operation.

The firm has four mediators, all of them lawyers or retired judges, and Schavrien has a bank of 200 lawyers statewide willing to mediate and arbitrate for the company as independent contractors.

The company's growth rests on marketing, which is done statewide through seminars, conferences and re-

The public is frustrated with our courts today, said Schavrien. "Court costs and other expenses as ciated with litigation are outrageous, so we're betting most people and companies will want an impartial mediator or arbitrator who can do the job inexpensive-

Schavrien insists his firm is impartial even though the company always pays the $700-$800 fee for each mediation or arbitration.

"We're primarily here in most cases to negotiate, to open the line of communication," he said. "We're able to accomplish this in many cases when it couldn't have en accomplished in a courtroom. There's less pres-Sure because of our informal approach."

Michael Gillie, founder of the U.S. Arbitration in Seattle, believes there's plenty of room for growth for firms such as Michigan Arbitration Services.

"TWENTY YEARS from now, most civil cases will go right to mediation and arbitration, bypassing the court system entirely. Arbitration is becoming a main-court system entirely. Arbitration is becoming a mainstream legal process and has a lot of room for growth.

"People are ready for this because they're tired of waiting forever for their dispute to get to court. Time is money, and faster resolution of a problem saves money for consumers and for companies."

Added Schavrien: "Mediation is being utilized by major insurance carriers to expedite resolution of their liability claims. . . and is proving to be an effective way for disputing parties to explore all possible settlement opportunities."

The Rocks truly arrived in the sport last year, emerging from the shadow of other Western Lakes powers to win their first league and state

To its WLAA opponents and Class A ballclubs across the state, Salem is no longer just Plymouth Salem. It's now PLYMOUTH SALEM.

As the defending state champs, the Rocks are certain to draw out the best in the opposition, and duplicating last year's feat won't be easy.

But no one doubts the fact Salem. 17-2-2 overall and 11-1-2 in the league, has the players and talent to possibly win it all again.

WITH MANY key players return-ing, including All-American junior Jill Estey, the possibility of another successful season would seem cer-

The Chiefs gave Salem one of its toughest games en route to the state title when the Rocks eked out a 3-2, overtime victory in the district final.

"I SAID THEN, if Canton had beaten us, they would have gone all the way, too," Johnson said.

The Rocks will probably be ranked among the state's top five teams in the first statewide poll, and a major reason is Estey, who was named the best player in Michigan as a sophomore and then received

'88 outlook bright for veteran Chiefs

Plymouth Salem is not the only girls soccer team in Plymouth/Canton anticipating a successful season

Canton High School has as many experienced players coming back from a winning campaign as does its cross-campus rival.

And, while the Chiefs didn't win a state championship, they nearly prevented Salem from doing so, taking Salem into overtime in the district championship game.

Canton lost only one starter, All-Area defender Cheryl Nippa, from a team that posted an 11-3-3 record and was ranked sixth in Class A in the final statewide poll.

"We're looking forward to a good season," said second-year coach Don Smith, adding next Wednesday's game with Salem will be a good determination as to what the Chiefs can expect this year.

'WE SHOULD BE competitive. Anybody can be beaten, but we'll be tough to beat," he added.

Smith spent a lot of time early last season talking to his players about being competitive and believing in themselves. It wasn't until the sea-son was more than half done that the light went on after Canton tied Livonia Churchill.

"Now they realize they not only can be competitive, but can beat the best teams," he said.

"Sometimes the players can sense something is stirring. They can tell when they're competitive and when soccer

Smith is confident senior Lori Stoecklein can replace Nippa, who anchored the defense for three years. Stoecklein was an alternate starter at halfback last year and finished the season in strong fashion.

"I don't think they'll take too many prisoners," said Smith, referring to the group's aggressive and enthusiastic play. "I have to calm them down sometimes; they get very emotional back there.

The offense also is in good hands with three starters back, including junior Shannon Meath, who begins her third year on the varsity.

Julie Stabnick, the middle striker, was the team's leading scorer as a sophomore with 14 goals and three assists. Meath had 12 goals, many in key situations and against tough teams, and six assists.

Sophomore Jenny Russell played most of last season at halfback, but moved to left forward late in the season. She ended up scoring seven goals and having nine assists.

SENIOR MICHELLE Lonigro who had eight goals and six assists and freshman Ayana Nash, who has been impressive in early-season drills, will rotate into the lineup and provide front-line depth.

'We definitely have the possibility of being a good scoring team," Smith said. "We really don't have any super standouts; they're all pretty equal up front."

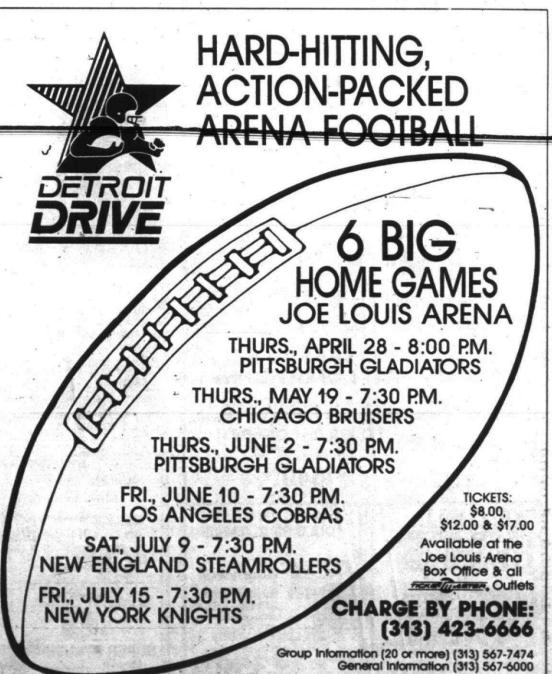

The Chiefs are solid at halfback where they have five returning players. Plus, Canton should be set at those positions for the following season, too, since four of the five are Senior Renee Rice, who tallied three goals and four assists last year, is the veteran of the group. Juniors Candi Jones, Michelle Fortier, Molly Menard and Jenny Steinhebel all received considerable playing time.

Even if we have girls get hurt, I think we can fill in adequately," Smith said, "although you would like to keep every position two deep and have fresh people on the field."

And the Michigan Junior Masters Association circuit has provided just that and more. Tulley, a senior at Franklin High

At each monthly tournament, Tulley competes against 65 to 90 bowlers. Juror talks about the process of selection

staff writer

Thursday, April 7, 1988 O&E

NTERNATIONALLY KNOWN SCULPTOR Alice Aycock has a vision that stretches far beyond the confines of the average non-artist's

As juror for the Michigan Fine Arts Competition at Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, Satur-April 9, through Saturday, May 14, she chose works that suggested or incorporated that same long sweep. It is completely different from the competitions of other years. For while exhibitions of past years reflected the personalities of the judges to a substantial degree, none have done so more than this Aycock comes out of a tradition of artists who work in, around, through and beyond images. Her take-off point for the group of outdoor wooden constructions that she created for Cranbrook in the mid '70s was the St. Bartholomew's Fair in 1133. Other sculptures and drawings have a relationship to farm machinery, kitchen equipment, war machines, architectural and battlegrounds. She draws from history, then filters and refines the reference, until it takes on an independent spirit that makes it a work or art with historical symbology with a ghostly image of once-upona-time function.

It is her own ability to push an idea beyond normal expectations, to move courageously along the narrow edge of the precipice that is mirrored in the show.

DURING A WORKSHOP at the Art Association, she led participants through the exhibition and explained why she chose each

"My concerns were first of all, in the run-through, that the work holds up. I went back three or four times. I probably respond to work that has some level of content."

She gave a brief history of art citing artists such as Cezanne, Picasso and Pollock who "give one the sense of how the artist viewed the world," as examples. Then it ceased, "hard edge" became an intellectual exercise that had to be explained to be understood.

The reintroduction of content was a marvelous thing . . . When image came back, it was a very exciting time for painting. In the '50s and '60s, all you had to know was dry and boring.

est that the use of image creates. As she stood before the $1,000 firstprize painting, "Jungle Jim's" by Jan Michael Field, she said, "There's a story going on . . . I like to look at that painting."

She said she had considered giving the first prize to a ceramic sculpture, "Rabbit Head" by Deborah McLellan ($750 second prize), but she was afraid people would assume "she only gives prizes to sculpture."

Of the rabbit she said, "It has kind of iconic quality. It's very o durate. It has a sacred stone quali-

Saying it has a little of the quality of the large sculpted heads (found in the wilds of Central America and Mexico), she added, I really like the transformation of the material, you don't know it's

THE EXHIBITION, in Avcock's mind, has a progression that begins with mark making and moves on to more personal handwriting, symbols and images. She commended The large painting, "Mozart" Piper Shepard (a large three-di-($100 award) by Allegory (a.k.a. mensional multimedia work), Caro-Nancy Nash) illustrated the inter-lyn Smith Armatage (painting),

James Fagan(two acrylics) and Benita Goldman (painted construc-tion) for taking chances and pushing their work rather than playing

She liked Rita Dibert's two photographs because they are "about very mundane things. They have a very mundane quality."

She stopped for a long time to enjoy two paintings by Carolyn Zak of Rochester ($75 award). She said of one of them that, from a distance, looks like a blackboard with scratches become very important. I like her color. I'd love to see this artist take on a larger canvas.'

She commented on the pure beauty of the painting by Karen Bodycombe of Ann Arbor. "I would ask this person to tell us something more we don't know, and take a chance." The unexpected colors used by Vallerie Allen Loop in Rumzy's painting moved back and forth from symbol, mark and form.

She compared the two wrapped figures in the photographs by David Rayfield of Midland to the French sculptures called "pleurers" or mourners and said it would be interesting to see how much farther it could move.

She liked the way the shapes in Jessica Gondak's two paintings "hold that tension" and the "pushpull tension" in D'Ann deSimone's two paintings ($75 award).

SHE LABELED both the shaped canvas by Larry Butcher of Mid-land and the sculpture by Stephen Nesvacil of Traverse City "idiosyncratic" and was sorry in both cases that a second work wasn't available. Butcher had sold his other one and Nesvacil's second had been broken in transit.

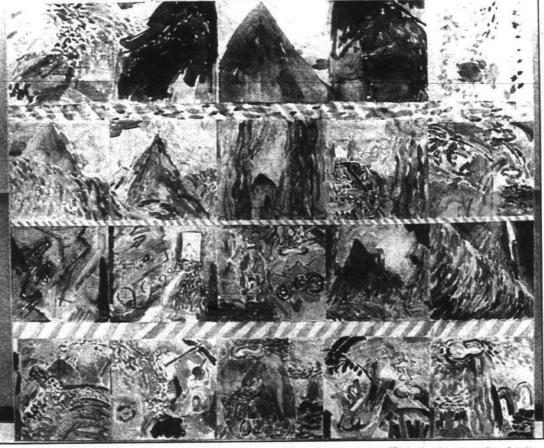

Of one of two "not very pretty" large paintings by Audrey Leama ckson (honorable mention), she said, "I like the way it holds its ground . . . it's more difficult art, that's what I respond to."

The three-dimensional construction by Robert Park, she said, "works very well with other pieces in the show. I wanted some pieces that talked to each other."

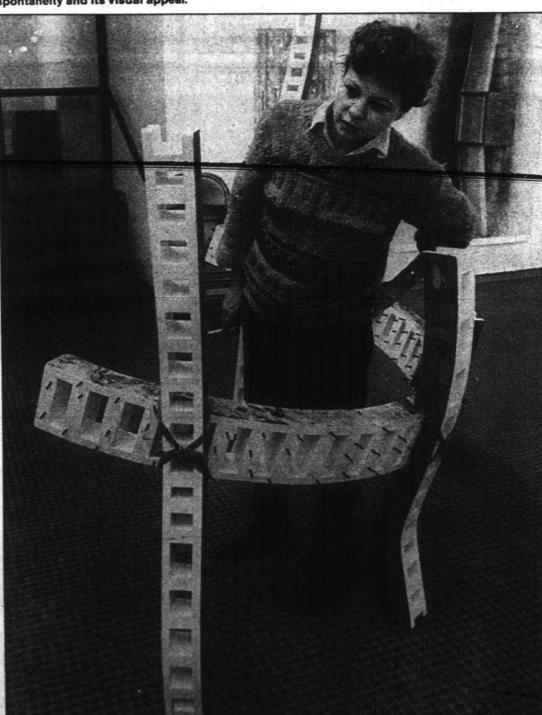

Of the large 16-square watercol-or by Yoriko Cronin of Livonia, she said she would like to see the artist work in watercolor or acrylic, but she liked the "mistake-prone spon-taneity," adding, "I like to look at it from a distance."

The two sculptures by Dwayne Szot (special category $500 award), "out of a Duchamp tradition," she compared to poetry and was re-minded of the Belgian artist, Panarencko, who makes "machines that fly, but none ever have."

The large 12-part watercolor by Yoriko Cronin of Livonia attracted the judge's attention for its spontaneity and its visual appeal.

Four Corners Press marked the occasion by reprinting Frank Angelo's "Yesterday's Detroit," first published in 1974. Known affectionately as "Mr. Detroit," Angelo is a long-time journalist (over 50 years! Not possible, you'll say if you've ever met the dynamic Mr. Angelo) who was just recently inducted into the Michigan Journalist's Hall of Fame. The former managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, now retired, lives in Birmingham and is the president of the Cranbrook Writer's Guild.

'Yesterday's Detroit" begins in 1701 with Cadillac's decision to build a fort on the banks of the "deep, clear river of the straits" ("Le Detroit") and ends in 1951, when Detroit celebrated its 250th birthday.

But this is no dry history book. Far from it. This is a man clearly in love with his city. This is a picture book for all intents, and Angelo made apt and inspired choices: Here's "Lucky Lindy," a Detroiter by birth, parading with his mother, Evangeline Land Lindbergh, a Cass Tech teacher, mere days before his historic transatlantic

On the right: Two smiling brothers - union advocates Walter and Victor Reuther. Victor is still wearing the bandages protecting the sightless eye shattered by a shotgun blast in (1947). Walter's right arm was smashed just 14 months earlier by a gunman. Walter Reuther had been bloodied before - as union official during the Battle of the Overpass at Ford's Rouge plant in

THIS IS NOT a definitive history book - and was not meant to be - but rather a compilation of events and people who helped to shape Frank Angelo's home town. The effects of the depresion, the union strikes, the 1942 riots, the wining sports teams of those years, the building and shaping of the downtown district - they're all here, and if you think it's been done before,

Bruce Catton's "Waiting for the Morning Trian" has been re-issued by Wayne State U Press, and what a joy it is to read. First published in 1972, the book is subtitled, "An American Boyhood." Catton, the great Civil War chronicler, grew up in Benzonia, on Lake Michigan's east ern shore. He was born in 1899, when trains were the principal mode of transportation.

This is nostalgia at its best - with each chapter as funny and as sad as the one before. But I only have a little space, so listen: "Early youth is a baffling time. The present moment is nice but it does not last. Living in it is like waiting in a junction town for the morning limited: the junction may be interesting but some day you will have to leave it and you do know where the limited will take you. Sooner or later you must move down an unknown road that leads beyond the range of the imagination, and the only certainty is that the trip has to be made. In this respect early youth is exactly like old age: it is a time of waiting before a big trip to an unknown destination. The chief difference is that youth waits for the morning limited and age waits for the night train."

On April 19 from 7-8:15 p.m., during what Birmingham's Baldwin Library is billing as "An Evening for Adults Only," five local authors will talk about writing for children. Gail Boledovich ("Alpha-Pals"), Bettie Cannon ("A Bellsong for Sara Raines"), Harold Gottlieb ("Joshua and the Grandfather Clock"), Carolyn Hall ("Teddy Bear Craft Book"), and Patricia Hooper ("A Bundle of Beasts") will be available for book-signing afterward. The event is free. The Baldwin Library is at 300 W. Merrill. Telephone 647-1700.
