'We all make mistakes'

That was one of the few comments offered by a construction worker on the site of a building that collapsed Friday in Canton. The worker, who refused to identify himself or his company, said a crane had been rented to lift plywood onto the roof. Since the crane was only rented for one day, the workers decided to make as much use of it as possible by putting all of the wood on the roof. The building collapsed under the weight. "It just came down," the worker said. The building, one of two structures that will be office space, is near the northeast corner of Ford and Lilley roads in Canton.

Former UAW official faces gun charge

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

A 52-year-old Westland man, described by one law enforcement officer as a "police groupie," was arrested in Canton late Saturday and charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

The suspect, Richard Debs, also had a cache of police paraphernalia in his late-model Cadillac, according to a Canton Township Police report.

He was arraigned on the charge and released on $5,000 bond. He faces a preliminary hearing Friday in 35th District Court.

Debs, a former president of Local 1776 of the United Auto Workers, was carrying a semiautomatic handgun and a 3½-inch military style knife when police arrested him about 11 p.m. at the White Castle restaurant on Ford Road. Police had been dispatched to the eatery on a report of a suspect impersonating an officer.

DEBS WAS wearing a blue shirt that had "Police" imprinted on it and a patch that said "Michigan Police," the report said. He also had a Van Buren Township Police identification card in his pocket and a deputy chief badge in a badge wallet. Debs told police he was on "reserve status" with the Van Buren police, but the chief of that department denied that assertion.

Debs was employed on a part-time basis as a Van Buren officer from the fall of 1981 until the spring of 1982, according to Van Buren Township Police Chief Joseph Davies.

After impounding Debs' car, Canton authorities found a police scanner, a blue police portable flashing light and an "official Wayne County Sheriff's Department" placard on his dashboard, the report said. They also found a Wayne County sheriff's badge, picture identification card and cap in the car and a 12-gauge shotgun in the trunk.

'I always tell people to ask for ID cards because anybody can get a badge.'
— Tony Shannon

Police also confiscated from the car a military identification card that bore Debs' picture but another man's signature and a partially filled out Van Buren Township police identification card.

Davies said he has gotten "numerous reports" in the last couple of years of Debs claiming to be a Van Buren officer. Debs was arrested in July in Anaheim, Calif., on a charge of impersonating an officer, Davies said. He is due back in California later this month for a hearing on that charge.

TONY SHANNON, director of training for the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, and Canton police said there have been several similar incidents involving Debs in the state.

Debs was not charged with impersonating an officer in Saturday's arrest because he "never displayed it (the identification card) in a way so as to impersonate an officer," Canton police Detective Charles Raycraft.

Shannon said the county badge found in Debs' car Saturday was the type distributed in the mid-1970s by former county Sheriff William Lucas.

"It was a status type of thing," said Shannon. He said Lucas, like law enforcement officials nationwide, deputized citizens as a way of giving supporters "a little bit of prestige."

Candidates go after judgeship

By Diane Gale
staff writer

District court judges receive a $91,080 annual salary, which is paid by the state and local communities.

The roster of attorneys considering the third judge's bench at 35th District Court looks a lot like a bar journal directory.

The position hasn't been created, but Judge John MacDonald said there's a 90 to 100 percent chance that the state will add a third judge to the court that serves Canton Township, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township.

ANOTHER JUDGE is needed to ease the caseload, said MacDonald, who along with Judge James Garber, average 17,491 cases each year. The average district court caseload in the state is 11,883 annually.

District court judges receive a $91,080 annual salary, which is paid by the state and local communities.

MacDonald predicts legislators will approve the new position in October, the candidates will run for a two-year term in the August 1990 primary and the position will be filled in November.

MacDonald's six-year term expires next year and he said he plans to run again.

In the future, the new position also will be a six year term. However, the judges are trying to avoid having two judges in the court run concurrently again.

As one attorney put it, "there's probably 40 attorneys who would be interested in the job."

Some names kept surfacing as potential runners for the new post during an informal poll of area attorneys and district court employees. All judicial candidates must have law degrees.

Jacqueline George, a Plymouth resident, came in a strong third during the 1984 judge race won by MacDonald. George, a Detroit criminal defense lawyer, was only 334 votes behind second-place finisher Bob Greenstein.

"I'd like to try again," George said earlier this week. "God willing."

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP Supervisor Maurice Breen said he is keeping his options open.

"The third judge hasn't been created yet," he said. "I'm sure I'd be able to make up my mind.

"Everyone thinks I'm a favorite," he said. "I don't know. I'm busy doing what I'm doing. I like what I'm

Woman charged in fatal accident

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A 58-year-old Belleville woman is facing a district court preliminary hearing on negligent homicide charges in the April 13 traffic deaths of a Canton couple.

The woman, Dorothy King, told police she was "blinded by a flash of light," causing her car to cross the center line on Cherry Hill east of Lotz.

Her car struck a vehicle carrying Donald and Nancy Harms. Both died from the injuries, according to a Wayne County medical examiner's report.

King was arraigned Aug. 7 on two counts of negligent homicide before 35th District Court Judge John MacDonald, who entered a plea of not guilty. She is out on $5,000 personal bond.

THE PENALTY for negligent homicide is up to two years in jail.

A preliminary examination to determine if there is enough evidence to hold a trial is scheduled for 9 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 16, before MacDonald.

"I'm not going to go into why she went left of the center line," Canton police Detective Keith Lazar said.

Downtown?

Officials working on plans for civic center area

Canton at the crossroads

Predicting where downtown Canton Township will be and what it will look like is getting a lot of interest these days.

A series of Canton Observer stories about past, present and future development, called "Canton at the Crossroads," is asking residents to give their opinions about development in general.

AND A DOWNTOWN area keeps cropping up as a top priority.

Meanwhile, Canton officials are working on a possible civic area spanning 900 acres bounded by Cherry Hill, Canton Center and Beck roads. It will surround the township administration building, Canton public safety headquarters and the Canton Public Library.

An 18-hole municipal golf course is planned, along with condominiums, apartments and village style commercial facilities.

Some of the answers from Canton residents responding to the survey mesh with township plans and others do not.

The following are exerpts:

"I think Canton should have a downtown area not spread all over like Livonia," one writer said.

A letter signed P.M.S. said Canton should develop a downtown business district with strict architectural standards and upscale building codes allowing brick only in materials.

JOANN AND DON Gibson listed a downtown area as their first development priority.

"We strongly suggest if you want people like us (two career couple

Reaction lukewarm to tax plans

Local reaction to two school finance proposals that will appear on the ballot Nov. 7 ranges from confusion to lukewarm suppport.

One plan would increase the state sales tax by a half cent, generating $400 million in new school revenue. The other would raise the sales tax by two cents and would provide $1.4 billion in property tax relief.

"I don't think either proposal is facing up to the need that is there in terms of school districts across the state," said Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben.

"However, it's the only thing we have. The educational position is to support both issues and to vigorously support one or the other above that."

At a Monday workshop, the school board discussed both proposals. Before deciding to support one plan or the other, trustees want more information on the ramifications of both plans. They'll discuss the issue again Monday.

The two-cent proposal "has some (millage) capping features built into it . . . and is going to affect more equity across the state" than the half-cent plan, said Hoben.

"I think this is a cop-out on the part of the Legislature to come up with confusing ballot issue. It's going to leave a lot of people wondering. That happened last night talking to board. It's a complex issue. My gut feeling is neither will pass."

STATE REP. JAMES Kosteva, D-Canton, is among those backing the two-cent proposal. The supporters are borrowing a popular beer slogan to clarify some points about the plan.

It's "less filling," says Kosteva, because the net tax increase of the two-cent plan is actually lower due to the property tax decrease linked with it.

The plan would increase the state sales tax from 4 percent to 6 percent, raising about $325 million for schools while reducing property taxes by about $1.6 billion.

The half-cent proposal doesn't address property tax relief.

Kosteva, who was joined by Rep. Michael Nye, R-Litchfield, in quoting the beer slogan, said the proposal also "tastes great" because it attempts to get at the root of the problem — overreliance on local taxes to fund kindergarten through 12th grade education public schools.

It also works toward closing the per-pupil spending gap between rich and poor school districts, he said.

Kosteva and Nye also said they were trying to dispel rumors that the plan to raise the sales tax to 6 percent isn't balanced.

Their grassroots campaign is just getting under way, and they acknowledged they have a tough task on hand. They must educate voters about the complex proposal and win them over without much financial support. Their biggest booster so far is the Grand Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce, though the state chamber opposes both plans.

Ex-UAW official is arrested here

Shannon said Debs "carried a lot of clout with the unions and in the political arena" at the time.

"Basically, he's a police groupie," said Shannon. "There's a lot of people who like that stuff but were never able to achieve" such a position. "It happens."

DEBS IS employed at the General Motors Hydramatic plant in Ypsilanti. He was ousted as president of the UAW local there in the last election.

Shannon said police badges, radio scanners and flashing lights can be purchased at military equipment stores or through police equipment distributors.

"It's not against the law to buy any of that," he said. "I always tell people to ask for ID cards because anybody can get a badge."

Davies said the hiring of Debs in 1981 created a political uproar that ended with his resignation.

Debs was appointed to the part-time post and was promoted "within weeks" to police commander, the second-in-command spot in the department.

"I believe there was something political in that," said Davies, who was a patrolman in the department at the time.

After a series of articles about Debs appeared in a Detroit newspaper, pressure was put upon the Van Buren township board and Debs resigned.

Debs was indicted but was not convicted in a 1983 corruption case that involved Westland District Court Judge Evan Callanan. Callanan, his son and a Dearborn businessman were convicted in connection with case fixing.

Debs sued Van Buren Township in 1984 and a judge ordered that he be put on inactive reserve. Davies said that was not done because Debs failed to show up to take the required tests.

Vandals smash car windows

More than a dozen township residents had car windows broken and items stolen out of the vehicles last weekend. The rash of vandalism and larceny caused an estimated $2,000 worth of damage, and more than $3,000 worth of stereo equipment and radar detectors was reported stolen.

Nine car windows were broken late Saturday or early Sunday, Canton Township police said. In most of those incidents, the vehicles were parked in front of the owner's home or in their driveway, and nothing was stolen from the cars.

Late Friday or early Saturday, six other residents had discovered broken car windows and missing items. All of those victims had radios or radar detectors stolen and some reported the theft of personal items, including briefcases.

While most of the incidents occurred in residential areas, one victim had parked her car at Canton Cinema 6 on Ford Road when it was broken into. The township resident told police someone pried open a window and stole a radar detector.

BUSINESS BURGLARIZED: A building under construction on Ronda Drive was broken into between midnight Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday, and goods worth a total of $4,125 were stolen.

The business, Audio Tech, reported the theft of 29 oak stereo speakers valued at $2,850, a console television worth $600, telephones, an amplifier and an equalizer.

PURSES SNATCHED: Two shoppers had purses stolen in the Meijers store on Ford Road Sunday.

One victim, a Livonia resident, told police she put her purse in a shopping cart and walked away for just a few seconds before discovering the bag was gone. The purse contained keys and miscellaneous identification.

The second victim, a Westland woman, said she had a $263 unemployment check in her purse when it was taken. The incidents occurred at 3:30 and 6 p.m.

These are just some of the incidents reportedly recently to Canton Township police. To contact township police, call 397-3000. For emergencies, call 911.

with plans to start a family soon) to stay in Canton rather than save for a move to Plymouth that you:

"Develop a downtown area of Canton similiar to Plymouth, maintaining the quaint and historical character of this area, including nice shops, places to eat, maybe a theater and a town square park and farmers' market area," they wrote.

They suggest the township develop a village with cobblestone streets for pedestrians only and ample parking in an adjacent area.

Ron Shufeldt said: "Personally I would like to see the township buy all of the available land within the downtown area. Then maybe we could build a central park zone similar to Kellogg Park in Plymouth."

And then there are those who could do without a downtown area altogether.

Like a Forest Brooks Subdivision homeowner, who declined to sign his or her name, but wrote: "I think there are enough recreation areas in Canton and that Canton does not need a downtown area, either."

And Brian McShane wrote: "I would not like Canton to employ a plan for a downtown area, but I would like more recreational areas."

The information will surface during the exam, he said. He said that alcohol was not a factor in the case.

ACCORDING TO Canton Police, King was driving west on Cherry Hill east of Charterhouse, which is east of Lotz. The speed limit is 45 mph.

One witness said King's vehicle was weaving and then slowed to approximately 40 mph just before the accident.

Police believe from witness reports that "both vehicles were within the speed limit," Lazar said.

A team of Canton officers that recreates accidents to determine speed and other accident causes was not called in, he said.

A THIRD vehicle behind the Harmses', driven by a 19-year-old Garden City man, struck the Harms vehicle in the rear passenger area, Lazar said.

"He skidded into the Harmses' vehicle in an attempt to avoid the accident," he said.

King and the Garden City man were treated for injuries. Both were wearing seat belts. Neither Harms was wearing a seat belt, police reported.

Nancy Harms, 48, worked as a grocery store meat cutter. Donald Harms, 53, worked as a Consumers Power supervisor.

Attorneys seek judgeship doing, but if they keep jacking up the (judges') pay it will be kind of hard to pass by."

Ron Lowe, Plymouth city attorney, said if there is a race he will be a contender.

"I've talked to people and I've been encouraged to run," Lowe said. "I believe I'm well qualified and capable of doing the job."

Bruce Patterson, Canton's Merit Commission chairman, ran for the 1984 judge vacancy.

"If I can quote myself from 1984, I said the only elected position I was interested in was judge in district court — and that's 35th District Court," Patterson said. "I certainly would be interested as I was before."

"I don't know if I ever wanted to be a lawyer, but I always wanted to be a judge," Patterson said.

"I hope that doesn't sound arrogant," he said adding that there is an awesome amount of responsibility that goes with being a district court judge.

GREENSTEIN, a local attorney, ran for judge in 1984 hoping to fill the vacancy created when Judge Dunbar Davis retired.

In a campaign that observers called "the most hotly contested district court race in Michigan" Greenstein beat five other candidates in the primary, but lost in the final round by a 2 to 1 margin to MacDonald.

This week Greenstein said he's considering running for the third position.

"I think I would make a really good judge, but I really don't know if I would run for it or not."

Eric Colthurst, who serves as district court magistrate and has a private practice, said he is not running.

"At this point I'm not planning on running," he said. "I can't imagine that I would change my mind. There would have to be some real changes on the candidates. And I'm personally not ready to run at this time."

C. Gerald (Judd) Hemming, an attorney representing Canton, said: "It be would be unusual if I ran. Myself, like most attorneys, heard a lot of rumors about a new position opening up in 35th and until there is legislative action to create a position, I don't know. I haven't taken any action one way or another. I haven't really even considered."

ALAN DAVIS, who also ran for judge in the last election, said he would pass on running this time around.

"I'm a little more politically wise now, because I know that it takes money," Davis said.

John Vos, a Plymouth attorney, is running for city commission and said he would not be interested in running for judge. If Garber decided against running when his term expired in 1995, Vos said, he would want to fill that vacancy.

"At this time I'm working on my city commission race. When I decided to run for city commission I decided not to seek that position."

Stephen Foley of Canton was named by a number of people as a possible candidate. However, the Observer was unable to reach him for comment.

Historic Canton house moving to new site

A LITTLE bit of history is preserved in the Bartlett-Travis house that now sits at Canton Center south of Warren.

Estimates are that the home was built in the 1850s. And plans are to move it to Canton's historic district at Cherry Hill and Beck sometime next week.

The moving date has been changed so many times this year most observers have lost count. The most recent delays were caused by utility permits.

Not long ago plans were to build a Chinese restaurant at the location and it's fate would be decided by a wrecking ball. Then it was purchased by Ken Dividock, a Canton realtor, who donated the home to the Canton Historic Commission District.

"Hopefully, we'll be taking it back to the last renovation in the 1890s," according to Melissa McLaughlin, of Canton's Historic District commission.

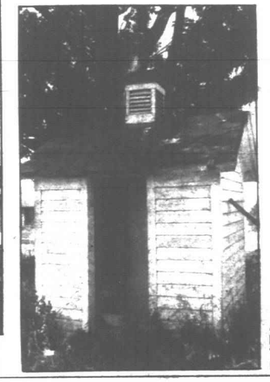
Plans to move the historic Bartlett-Travis House were canceled earlier this week due to utility permit delays.



A three-seater privy, behind the Bartlett-Travis House, will also be moved.

Canton student shines on summer science lab

Can an engineer's soldering iron compete with a curling iron in the heart of a ninth grade girl?

Definitely, according to the results of a Women in Science Summerscience program at the University of Michigan aimed at keeping junior high and high school girls in the science track.

Summerscience began on June 16 as 45 ninth grade girls from across the state settled into rooms on the sixth floor of a U-M residence hall.

Selected from among 350 applicants, the young women spent two weeks working on laboratory and computer projects designed to interest them and to reinforce their belief in their scientific competence.

Despite three runs to hospital emergency rooms for curling iron burns — vs. only one run for a soldering burn — the young women said they gained from the program.

"If I could do it again, I would jump at the opportunity," said Tiffany J. Brown of Canton's East Middle School.

The ninth graders experimented with thin-layer chromatography, soldered circuits to make digital clocks, designed watershed models and analyzed water samples. They visited a T-shirt silk-screening factory to find out about industrial operations, analyzed chemicals that had been processed by yeast, and built models of molecular reactions and then recreated their findings in beakers.

They also experimented with MacPaint computer graphics, toured the women's athletics facilities and debated scientific ethical issues with such passion that minority opinions were presented as part of group reports.

Cinda Sue Davis, director of the Center for Continuing Education for the Women in Science program, said Summerscience was developed to offer support to young women to stay in a field where women make up only 11 percent of the employed scientists and 13 percent of university science professors.

Funds for the program, which will be offered again next summer, come from the National Science Foundation.

Women are turned off and out of science for a variety of reasons, Davis said, including lack of role models, a lack of career information, little hands-on experience and persistent sex-stereotyping in the junior and senior high years.

During the program each young woman was presented with her own analog digital converter designed by Carl F. Berger, professor of education and director of the Office of Instructional Technology.

The instrument converts signals from instruments like thermometers and scales so computers can process them and graph them on the screen. For instance, the students measured the heat in a cup of coffee before and after adding cream, and then, using the converter, graphed their findings on a Mac PC.

"The analog converters were theirs to take back with them," Davis said. "They will donate them to science teachers at school, but the girls will install them, explain how they work and become the 'resident converter experts.' The experience should encourage a sense of their competence."

The ninth graders also contracted with Summerscience to give a 15-minute talk to other students about their experiences.

Faculty members who participated in the program include: Ronald J. Lomax, professor of electrical engineering and computer science; Henry Y. Wang, associate professor of chemical engineering; Gary L. Krause, a graduate student research assistant in civil engineering; Sandra R. Gregerman, coordinator of academic programs, School of Natural resources, and Seyhan N. Ege, professor of chemistry.

Westland woman is shot; father and sister charged

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

A Westland man and his daughter were charged Monday in connection with an apparent botched murder-suicide plan against the man's other daughter at the family's Wildwood home.

Police said the intended murder victim, 32-year-old Anna Kwiatkowski, was shot twice in the head from close range with a .32-caliber handgun Sunday afternoon. Kwiatkowski survived the shooting and was reported in serious condition Tuesday at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Ann Arbor.

Valentine William Kwiatkowski, 78, was arraigned by 18th District Court Judge Gail McKnight on one count of assault with intent to commit murder and one count of possession of a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Carol M. Kwiatkowski, 43, was charged with one count of assault with intent to commit murder.

Not guilty pleas for both were entered by the court. They were remanded to the Wayne County Jail in lieu of a $50,000 cash bond for each.

A PRELIMINARY examination was set for 9 a.m. Monday and McKnight ordered court-appointed attorneys for the pair, who said they don't have the money to pay for their defense.

The two defendants, joined by handcuffs, appeared bewildered and slightly disheveled at Monday's arraignment. The father, who spoke with a mild eastern European accent, asked McKnight to repeat and explain the charges.

The attempted murder charge is punishable by a maximum of life in prison. The felony firearms charge carries a maximum two-year sentence.

The victim, who weighs about 350 pounds and suffers from "substantial health problems" including asthma, was asleep when shot about 1 p.m., said executive Lt. Michael Frayer.

When she was still alive 90 minutes later, the two took her to the hospital, Frayer said.

Sgt. Robert Barthold told the court Monday that while in the hospital, Carol Kwiatkowski told her sister that her father had shot her. Although neither defendant has a previous criminal record, Barthold asked the court for a high bond because "it appears they discussed a suicide pact."

POLICE SAID mounting health care costs for Anna Kwiatkowski, who is unemployed and a volunteer at the hospital, appeared to play a role in the case.

The father is a retired General Motors employee. Carol Kwiatkowski works for Detroit Edison.

The pair reported to hospital workers they had no insurance and could no longer afford Anna Kwiatkowski's medical bills, Barthold told the court.

Police said Monday that Anna Kwiatkowski was an invalid, although a neighbor said she wasn't confined to the house.

"I've seen her out running errands in the car," said Kevin McKenna, 15. "The three of them were always together."

McKenna said the family has lived in the neat ranch house on Wildwood, north of Hunter, ever since his family moved to the neighborhood 10 years ago. Valentine Kwiatkowski has sold raffle tickets to members of his family, McKenna said.

On Monday, a hand-lettered sign advertising "Flower Arrangements for Sale" was visible against the backyard fence.

THE VICTIM had no knowledge of the plan, which was apparently devised in advance by her father and sister, Barthold told the court.

Reaction is lukewarm

The half-cent plan has the support of Gov. James Blanchard and several major education and business groups, including the Michigan Manufacturers Association.

Blanchard already has used speaking engagements to promote his plan, which earmarks the education money for specific programs.

The public can vote for both plans, either plan, or neither. If both earn a majority vote, the one with the most votes will take effect.

SEMCOG chief aims to promote recycling

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Every Wayne County household would have to begin recycling under newly proposed changes to the county's master plan for solid waste disposal.

Milton Mack, chairman of the county's Solid Waste Implementation Committee, said he was strongly considering several changing the county plan to boost recycling.

A key element of Mack's proposal would restrict county landfills from accepting unseparated trash. Trash separation is a necessity for any recycling program. Under such a program, households would be forced to put selected items in separate trash containers.

THE GOAL, Mack said, is to force consumers to recycle waste items that can be recycled — including paper, plastic and glass products — while leaving landfills open only for those products that cannot be recycled.

The proposed landfill restrictions would force communities to develop recycling programs, Mack said. It would also de-emphasize the 50 percent cut in county waste currently projected in the still-to-be adopted master plan.

The idea, he said, came from a recent waste handling symposium he attended.

"We've been looking at numbers. But in talking to people from eastern states like New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, I've found numbers weren't as important as getting a system in place that will work," Mack said. "Recycling, I believe, will work."

Under the previous plan, communities would have to cut waste 50 percent from current levels by the year 200 in order to continue using county landfills.

Mack, D-Wayne, is a four-term county commissioner whose district includes Canton Township. He is also chairman of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. As SEMCOG chief, he said, he would try to promote regional recycling programs.

Local governments, especially those in western Wayne County, had complained that mandating a percentage cut in trash would force them to build costly and controversial incinerators.

Plymouth Township supervisor Maurice Breen said Mack's proposal would represent a welcome change.

"IN CONCEPT, I don't have a problem with it," said Breen, who oversees waste issues for the Conference of Western Wayne. "What he's trying to do is the take the emphasis off burning."

A key element of Milton Mack's proposal would restrict county landfills from accepting unseparated trash.

The CWW is an intergovernmental group representing 17 communities, including Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Plymouth, as well Canton, Redford and Plymouth townships.

Bill would make criminals pay fee

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Every convicted felon and drunk driver would pay a $30 fee to compensate crime victims under a bill passed by the state Senate.

The bill goes back to the House of Representatives to see if they wil agree to Sen. Doug Cruce's amendment to bring drunk drivers into the program.

"This will provide funding for the crime victims rights' program," said Cruce, R-Troy, referring to the constitutional amendment approved by voters last year.

No area senators opposed House Bill 4869 as it passed 31-0. Sen. Richard Fessler, R-Commerce, had an excused absence. Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, missed the roll call.

THERE WAS NO immediate estimate of how much would be raised for the program because the bill was amended extensively in a Senate commmittee.

The bill establishes a six-member Criminal Assessments Commission under the Department of Management and Budget.

The panel would investigate and determine what is needed to pay for crime victims' services, estimated currently at $5.5 million annually by the Senate Fiscal Agency.

Whatever costs weren't covered by the fees would have to be made up by the general fund budget. But sponsors hope the fees will cover the costs.

- It's one thing for the state Legislature to pass a law and another to collect the money. According to the staff analysis, several things could happen:
- Some courts may not order the assessment.
- Other courts may waive or reduce them, if the convicted person is unable to pay.

Teachers union backs half-cent hike in sales tax

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Two leaders of the education establishment are going separate ways on the two state school tax proposals on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The Michigan Education Association is endorsing Proposal A, a half-cent increase in the 4 cents sales tax. The Michigan Association of School Boards is backing Proposal B, a 2 cents increase with part of the money going to property tax reduction.

"Supporting Proposal A is probably one of the most significant improvements for education in Michigan that could happen," said Larry Chunovich, the former Southfield math teacher who is MEA president.

CHUNOVICH said MEA is committing $1.5 million to an estimated $3 million campaign.

After the union's 60-member board unanimously endorsed the proposal last weekend in Sault Ste. Marie, it began a leadership conference to train 550 members on how to mount a campaign.

"Proposal A not only provides dollars for current programs, it sets standards for improved curriculum and decision making processes in the school system," he said. It would pump about $400 million in new money into public schools.

Chunovich said Proposal A will help 90.3 percent of Michigan K-12 students and deliver more education money because it takes effect sooner.

Proposal A was developed by the so-called "Harden Commission" of business leaders, unions and educators. It is supported by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

If voters approve both proposals, the one with the most yes votes will become part of the Michgian Constitution.

PROPOSAL B was endorsed last week by the MASB, consisting of elected school board members.

It would raise the sales tax by 2 cents, bring schools $460 in new revenue and cut school operating property taxes a net of $1.1 billion, or 33 percent on residences.

'Supporting Proposal A is probably one of the most significant improvements for education in Michigan that could happen.'
— Larry Chunovich, MEA president

"It is clear to us that 'B' is the only proposal that addresses the overburden of property taxes on local taxpayers in Michigan," said Justin King, executive director of MASB.

The so-called "Nye-Oxender" plan, Proposal B would collect part of school property taxes statewide, resulting in tax base sharing between wealthy and poor school districts.

The Michigan League of Women Voters added its support to Proposal B last month, saying it would be the most effective way to raise the spending level of poor districts while permitting wealthy districts to maintain or even increase their spending levels.

Grant aims to reduce minority mortality rate

The Wayne County Health Department office in Westland was among 20 health agencies receiving grants under a new $750,000 state program designed to improve the health of minority citizens.

The Westland office's grant is targeted toward reducing mortality rates for black adults from cardiovascular disease and stroke.

Other grants are targeted toward reducing infant mortality and increasing the number of minority workers in health care professions.

Minorities suffer significantly higher rates of cancer, cardiovascular disease, stroke, chemical dependency, diabetes, homicide, accidents and infant mortality compared with whites, state health director Raj Wiener said.

Michigan's minority population is approximately 1.76 million, including blacks, Hispanics, Arab-Americans, Asians, Pacific Islanders and American Indians. One out of five Michigan residents is a minority group member, Wiener said.

Area residents elected to county school board

Mary Blackmon of Detroit was elected president of the Wayne County Intermediate School District board at a recent WCISD meeting.

She replaces Canton resident Charles Akey, who served as president last year.

Blackmon is a former member of the Detroit Board of Education. Akey, a former Livonia Board of Education member, retains his seat as a WCISD trustee.

Other WCISD board members are: Armen Barsamian, Garden City, vice-president; Kathleen Chorbagian, Wayne, secretary; Boyd Arthurs, Trenton, treasurer.

Chorbagian is a member of the Wayne-Westland Board of Education. Barsamian is a former Garden City Board of Education member.

Board members are elected to six-years terms by a body consisting of one representative from each of Wayne County's 34 public school districts. Candidates may nominate themselves for the seat. A secret ballot election process is used.

Board meetings are held 8:30 a.m. the second Wednesday of each month at the WCISD Education Center, 33500 Van Born, Wayne.

Lindsey is a 5-year-old diabetic. Her daily insulin shots, diet restrictions and constant blood monitoring only provide day-to-day control over the disease. They do not cure it. So Lindsey, along with 11 million other Americans, still faces the long-term risks of diabetes — like heart disease, blindness, stroke, amputation and kidney disease. The complications of diabetes will account for an estimated 150,000 deaths this year alone.
But thanks to your contributions to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Lindsey and millions like her have something more to look forward to. In the past decade, JDF research has made great strides in isolating the causes and conditions of diabetes, bringing us closer to a cure. At the same time, diabetes increases by 6% every year. And in ten years the number of diabetics will have doubled.
So you see, your help is needed more desperately than ever before. For more information on the warning signs of diabetes and its treatment and what you can do to help, call JDF at (313) 569-6171.

Ford agrees to buy gas from area landfill

Ford Motor Co. has signed a five-year agreement with Waste Management to buy daily 2 million cubic feet of methane gas produced at the Woodland Meadows recycling and disposal facility in western Wayne County.

A mile-long pipeline will be constructed by Waste Mangement to transport the gas to the Wayne Plant boilerhouse, where it will be used to fuel steam-generating boilers for Ford's Michigan Truck and Wayne Assembly plants.

Woodland Meadows is a 150-acre facility at Van Born and Hannan roads in Canton Township.

CONSTRUCTION OF the pipeline and a processing plant, to be built north of the facility by Waste Management, will begin in the fall, pending permit approvals from both Canton Township and the city of Wayne.

"The system will be similar to a gas recovery plant Waste Management has in operation in Ohio," said Ray Kellas, mideast regional landfill operations manager for Waste Management.

"Burning methane is much cleaner than coal and produces no ash," Kellas said.

SUBSTITUTION OF landfill gas for coal at the Wayne plant means an annual reduction of more than 40,000 tons of carbon dioxide emissions and 200 tons of sulfur dioxide emission, said Vic Sussman, Ford's director of environmental control. That's because Ford will use the landfill gas instead of burning coal to raise steam for the plant.

Ford Motor Co. has signed a five-year agreement with Waste Management to buy 2 million cubic feet of methane gas a day from Woodland Meadows recycling and disposal facility, a 150-acre facility at Van Born and Hannan roads in Canton Township. A mile-long pipeline will transport the gas to the Wayne Plant boilerhouse, where it will be used to fuel steam-generating boilers for Ford's Michigan Truck and Wayne Assembly plants.

The coal will be replaced by the methane from the landfill that Waste Management must, by law, burn but has no use for the heat.

The methane gas will be extracted using vacuum pumps and a series of wells linked together by a collection pipe system. The methane will be transported north under the county drain and ConRail right of way to a processing plant.

AT THE plant, the gas will be filtered, dehydrated and compressed before being placed in the pipeline, which will transport it to the Ford boilerhouse as a replacement for much of the coal now being used. An estimated 1 billion Btu of heating power per day will be produced by the system.

Area government officials are supportive of the project.

"I'm pleased to see this kind of cooperation between an industry which generates waste materials and another company responsible for disposing of it," said Wayne County commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, whose district includes Canton.

"Siphoning the landfill gas not only conserves our natural fossil fuel resources as an energy source, but also eliminates a potential source of odor pollution at the landfill," said Mack, who is chairman of the Wayne County Solid Waste Planning Committee.

THOMAS YACK, supervisor of Canton, described the project as an ideal situation.

"Converting the methane to energy is an economic, efficient method of utilizing a natural resource created by the landfill decomposition," Yack said.

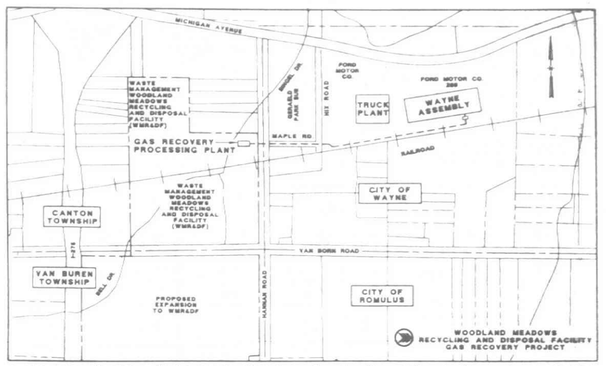
He said the location of the Ford boilerhouse to the Waste Management facility is another advantage.

"The productive use of the methane is so much better than burning at the site and wasting all that energy. It's the ultimate in recycling."

WASTE MANAGEMENT has 12 years of experience in landfill gas testing, extraction and marketing. The company has successfully designed, built and operated both gas purification (methane separated from carbon dioxide and other elements) and gas-to-electric systems.

The company has gas-recovery plants on line at 16 sites. Another 12 are planned by 1990. Of the 16 plants in production, 10 generate electricity and six are similar to the Woodlands Meadows project, which is direct use of the gas by the customer.

In addition to the Canton facility, Waste Management operates three other recycling and disposal facilities in Michigan.



A mile-long pipeline will be constructed by Waste Mangement to transport the gas to the Wayne Plant boilerhouse, where it will be used to fuel steam-generating boilers for Ford's Michigan Truck and Wayne Assembly plants.

Construction of the pipeline and a processing plant, to be built north of the facility by Waste Management, will begin in the fall, pending permit approvals from both Canton Township and the city of Wayne.

Landfill gas — How it's captured

Woodland Meadows consists of two separate landfill areas. The size and capacity of each bowl is determined by a geological survey conducted to study the local subsoil and groundwater conditions.

Each day an average 7,500 yards of municipal solid waste, collected throughout metropolitan Detroit — primarily Wayne County, is dumped into the landfill and covered with dirt by compactors.

At this rate, it will take 1¼ years for the last remaining landfill area to reach its capacity of solid waste.

- Ninety percent of the total 138 acres used for solid waste disposal at Woodland Meadows has reached its capacity and has been sealed with a 3- to 6-foot deep clay protective cap. Grass has been planted on top of each landfill to prevent soil erosion.
- Because solid waste begins to decompose immediately, methane production starts early, but does not accumulate until the landfill is covered with clay.
- Landfill gases, a mixture of 50 percent methane, 47 percent carbon dioxide, 3 percent water vapor and other miscellaneous gases, is produced as solid waste decomposes in the oxygen-free landfill. If the odorless, colorless gas is not collected it will migrate underground until it finds breaks in the subsoil and escapes.

To prevent methane from escaping, wells, usually from 40 to 120 feet deep, are drilled into the sanitary landfills. The wells are tied together with a system of horizontal pipes. Approximately 2 million cubic feet of methane is currently collected daily at Woodland Meadows. Until service to the Ford plant is begun, all methane collected is burned by a continuous flame system.

Performers to share Broadway spotlight

By Leonard Poger
staff writer

What do a TV commercial writer/producer, personnel assistant, legal secretary and a GM plant technical employee have in common?

The three, including a Canton resident, are rehearsing up to 42 numbers from 13 popular Broadway musicals for the Spotlight Players, a suburban community theater group which will produce its summer production this weekend and next.

They will be joined by a heating/refrigeration/electrical contractor and a professional singer for the musical revue, "Broadway! Broadway! Broadway!"

The show will feature well-known songs from "My Fair Lady," "West Side Story," "Music Man" and 10 other shows.

The show will be produced at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and the following Friday and Saturday at St. John Episcopal Church, 555 S. Wayne Road, south of Cherry Hill.

Tickets are $6 with students and retirees admitted for $5.

The six performers, to be accompanied by Linda Furuyama on the electronic keyboard, have extensive backgrounds in college, community theater or professional theater groups.

The commercial writer/producer in the cast is Kendra Lee Bernick, who works for Channel 50 and who has performed in numerous musicals and toured China and Europe with the Eastern Michigan University Madrigal Singers.

A DEARBORN resident, she has performed on stage since she was 8. Among her roles were Tuptim in "The King and I," Julie Jordan in "Carousel," and Leisel in "The Sound of Music." Recently, she completed a compact disc recording of American Contemporary Chroral Pieces with the Emily Lowe Chrorale.

She graduated from EMU magna cum laude with a bachelor of science degree in telecommunications and theater.

Besides writing and producing commercials, Bernick also appeared in industrial films and commercials.

Betsy Bronson, a legal secretary who lives in Hamtramck, has appeared in several shows produced with Opera Lite, which is helping produce the "Broadway!" show with the Spotlight Players.

Bronson has performed in "Oh, Coward," "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and "Give My Regards to Broadway."

She toured twice in the Detroit Art Institute's Prince Street Players as well as touring with Michigan Opera Theater's "Overture to Opera" program.

Anne Grobosky, a Westland woman who is a personnel assistant for the Dearborn Federal Credit Union, has performed with the Ford Motor Chorus and musicals, "Guys and Dolls," "Hello, Dolly!" and "The King and I."

A Westland native, she received her bachelor of arts in theater from Michigan State University. She performed in the Spotlight Players" production of "Heaven Can Wait."

TOBIN ALAN Hissong, a statistical process control employee for GM's Hydramatic plant in Ypsilanti, has performed with numerous Spotlight Players, Chelsea Area Players and Opera Lite shows.

A Canton resident, his credits include "Madwoman of Chaillot," "Pirates of Penzance," "My Fair Lady," "Anything Goes" and "Singing in the Rain."

Morgan, a Westland man who is a heating/refrigeration/electrical contractor, has performed with the Ford Chorus and performed in "Music Man" and "Heaven Can Wait."

David Pulice, a professional singer, has performed with the Spotlight Players, Opera Lite, Light Opera of Michigan, Michigan Lyric Opera Company, and Dearborn Civic Theater.

On a roll

Club offers thrills to coaster fans

By Arlene Funke
special writer

William Hughes has had a lot of ups and downs in his life.

The 29-year old Redford man is fascinated with roller coasters. He spends his summers "amusement park hopping," riding the big coasters until his stomach cries, "No more, please."

Hughes, a 1977 graduate of Thurston High School, is a member of a 2,000-member organization called American Coasters Enthusiasts. The group, which has members worldwide, sponsors major get-togethers four times a year at various amusement parks.

The main attraction? Riding — and screaming — to their heart's content. The next meeting is Aug. 18-20 at Valley Fair Park in Minnesota.

"We're drawn like bees to honey," said Hughes, who is single. "During our get-togethers, the park will be open just for us. We'll just ride (the roller coaster) for hours, endlessly. That's always a big hit during conventions."

Hughes, a street vendor for Penguin Ice Cream Co., was just 7 years old when he stepped onto his first roller coaster. It was the Blue Streak at Cedar Point, near Sandusky, Ohio. He became hooked on the ride's thrilling dips, rolls and plunges.

"I loved it from the start," Hughes recalled. Hughes, who calls himself "the world's biggest kid," remains dedicated to riding roller coasters whenever he gets the chance. He has gone as far as England and Denmark just to sample roller coasters.

"There are no two rides that are the same," Hughes said.

Roller coasters, introduced at Coney Island in New York some 100 years ago, are — pardon the pun — on a roll in recent years with the popularity of large theme parks. That's good news for enthusiasts such as Hughes.

Big roller coasters carry flashy names such as The Beast and King Cobra to inspire and entice riders.

"The hallmark of a good coaster is endless action," Hughes said. "Fast turns."

The highest coaster Hughes has ridden was the Magnum XL-200 at Cedar Point. The ride reaches 200 feet in height and is 5000 feet long.

"It's the tallest coaster in the world, not the longest," Hughes said. "The longest is at King's Island in Ohio, at 7400 feet long."

A roller coaster ride may last only two minutes but, to satisfy Hughes, it had better be full of speed and endless turns. The King's Island coaster is a full three and a half minutes of non-stop excitement. The Laser Loop, in Pennsylvania, lasts a scant 30 seconds, Hughes said.

Here's how Hughes gleefully describes his personal favorite, the Cyclone, at a park in Springfield, Massachusetts:

"It's a rather wicked-looking ride," Hughes said. "It has turns and dips all over the place. It lifts you out of your seat. On the way down, it pins you down. It's non-stop action.

Hughes joined the Chicago-based American Coasters Enthusiasts around ten years ago. The organization extols the fun of riding roller coasters and supports preserving old or unusual coasters. Hughes subscribes to Roller Coaster magazine, which has information about various amusement parks and rides.

Safety features and restraints make most roller coasters safe, Hughes said. The only time he can recall being nervous about a coaster's safety was when he rode the coaster at the now-defunct Edgewater Park in northwest Detroit. Most accidents happen "when the rider was doing something he shouldn't have done, such as standing up or changing trains."

The only drawback, for Hughes, is if "I ride too much my stomach might get a little queasy."

Recently, Hughes has been expanding his interests. He has enjoyed working as a weekly volunteer at Children's Hospital in Detroit, where he plays games and helps the youthful patients with arts and crafts.

He's now considering enrolling in college with the goal of becoming a recreational therapist.

Although roller coasters are his favorites, Hughes also enjoys water rides, "the wetter the better." He likes to ride ferris wheels, which he puts in the "scenic ride" category, and unusual or historical amusement park rides. He avoids high-speed, spinning rides.

During the winter months, Hughes enjoys downhill skiing. As he sees it, skiing has the same elements as roller-coaster riding. It's a slow, uphill climb followed by a swift downward rush.

Witnesses sought in crash

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Livonia police are looking for witnesses to a five-car traffic accident that killed a 35-year-old Redford Township woman Tuesday morning.

The woman, Michele Peuterbaugh, was taken to Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills, where she died of massive injuries later in the day.

Teresa Boike, 34, of Ann Arbor, was treated for minor injuries at Botsford and released. The other three drivers were uninjured in the 8:15 accident at Seven Mile and Gilliman.

According to police officer George Zellman, one car was stopped facing westbound on Seven Mile, waiting to make a left turn onto Gillman. Two other cars were either stopped or stopping behind the first car when Peuterbaugh's car, a 1986 Mercury Topaz, pulled around them, crossing the double yellow line into the eastbound lanes.

She collided head-on into Boike's car, a 1984 Dodge.

Zellman said the Topaz was so badly damaged, it would be very difficult to check it for mechanical problems that may have contributed to the accident.

"Maybe she put on the brakes and the car pulled to the left. Maybe she was taking evasive action. You can make all kinds of speculation. But we don't want to speculate. That's why we're looking for witnesses," said Zellman.

Zellman said he hoped there might be a driver or drivers who were traveling westbound behind Peuterbaugh who might be able to help police figure out why she would have passed on the left in those circumstances.

Anyone with information is asked to call 421-2900, Ext. 308.

Zellman said there was no indication that alcohol or drugs were involved. Test results from a mandatory autopsy are not expected quickly.

It was the fifth traffic fatality in Livonia this year.

Child care in crisis

County program costs skyrocket

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Kim and Billy Miller, ages 3 and 5 respectively, have been in county protective custody since a recent rain storm, when neighbors reported the two youngsters were locked outside their home, a shabby apartment in a western Wayne suburb.

The children, neighbors said, often appeared hungry and dirty, neglected by their mother, Sharon, 22, a high school dropout who is known to abuse alcohol.

Sharon also suffers from depression, ever since her boyfriend, Kim's father, left last year. She was divorced four years ago from Billy's father whom she married after discovering she was pregnant. Both men were abusive and neither pays child support. Sharon's life is a constant struggle to make ends meet.

Jason, 17, was having trouble both at home and in school last year when he attacked and seriously injured another youth. A ninth grader at the time, he was chronically truant from the suburban high school he attended. He lived with his mother and a stepfather he detested and with whom he regularly fought.

Convicted in juvenile court of assault and battery, Jason was confined to the Wayne County Youth Home for assessment.

The two incidents are not real. They are composites of actual cases, situations most common to social workers who work in suburban Wayne County.

Kim, Billy and Jason represent thousands of youngsters here who annually require alternative shelter because of neglect, abuse or delinquency.

THE COST OF providing such care is Wayne County's "biggest fiscal hemorrhage," according to Jennifer Granholm, an executive assistant to Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara.

In the past three years, county costs have skyrocketed from $21.8 million in 1986 to a projected $46 million next fiscal year. Combined expenditures by Wayne County and the state have increased from $10 million in 1986 for the abused and neglected to an expected $20 million next year, and from $12 million for delinquents in 1986 to a projected $22 million in 1990.

This year, the county has budgeted $36 million for child care expenses, a figure expected to fall $3 million short, according to Granholm, who said the single most expensive item is housing which has increased in cost by some 21 percent since 1986.

"When we receive the monthly bills, we are constantly surprised at the increases," she said.

Orchards Children's Services, a private agency with facilities in Livonia and Southfield, provides group housing for 24 youngsters ages 8 to 17 years and individual foster home placement for another 300 children.

Orchards foster home residences, most of which are in the suburbs, is one of the least costly forms of alternative housing, according to the agency's financial officer Jennifer Bagley.

DAILY FOSTER home rates, set by the state, range from $10.85 to $13.61 for children who have no special needs. For those with special difficulties, in need of counseling or other therapy, rates range from $26.90 to $29.66 daily.

Orchards operating budget this year is $6.5 million. Upkeep on the agency's three group homes, aimed at maintaining state standards, is one of the more costly line items in the budget, according to Bagley, who said such costs have jumped 11 percent since 1986.

Spectrum Human Services, a Livonia-based private agency, maintains 22 residential facilities, including three homes of six beds each in Westland for youths ages 13 to 17 years.

Daily costs range from $112 to $144 per child, depending upon required services that include everything from comprehensive counseling to assistance in obtaining summer employment.

"There are two things less expensive (than staffed housing)," said Candace Spaulding of Spectrum, "foster homes, which are hard to find for older kids, and independent living, but you have to be 18 or nearly 18 (years) to live there."

Regardless of cost, "it's cheaper than the alternative," Spaulding added.

THE NEED FOR for housing alternatives "mirrors society," according to Orchards director Deborah Dinco, who blames drugs for the increase in the number of youth who need shelter.

"Substance abuse is a serious problem. It prevents parenting and leads to some very severe neglect and abuse," Dinco said.

In recent years, the number of children requiring housing has increased an estimated 15 to 20 percent annually. Since January 1986 through January of this year, the number of Wayne County children in protective services increased from 6,400 to 9,100. The number of delinquent youths in custody increased from 650 to 800.

Marvin Kornegger, a social worker for 36 years and now manager of the state's Child Services Center in Westland, said drugs are responsible for "profound changes" this past decade. "We're seeing a sharp increase in the number of children in difficult home situations as a result of drugs, particularly crack cocaine."

By year's end, social workers will investigate an estimated 3,500 incidents of abuse and neglect in western Wayne County suburbs, according to Kornegger, who said countywide there will be 12,000 some such incidents.

THE AVERAGE length of stay in the Wayne County Youth Home is 29 days at a daily cost of $111.23, during which time youthful offenders are individually assessed and reas-

A downtown

Canton needs a focal point

CANTON HAS A chance to plan a downtown area, and we hope they grab it.

The township controls about 125 acres near the township administration building, and an Ann Arbor consultant is drawing up a master plan for the 900 acres surrounding the building.

Supervisor Tom Yack now sees the project as a civic center area that would include an 18-hole golf course at its center. Surrounding it would be condominiums, apartments and commercial areas.

Supervisor Tom Yack now sees the project as a civic center area that would include an 18-hole golf course at its center. Surrounding it would be condominiums, apartments and commercial areas.

It sounds good on the surface, but we're concerned that it may turn out to be just more of what Canton already has. Will the commercial areas be more strip malls?

We think Canton officials should listen to what residents have to say about a civic area before going ahead with their plans. And they will have an opportunity to do that this fall when there are public hearings on the township's master plan. We just hope they listen.

We've been asking residents about how they would like to see the township be developed. And one of the overriding concerns is that strip malls be stopped and a downtown area be developed.

From the responses to our survey, residents want a downtown similar to that of Plymouth and Northville.

That's not exactly what township officials are looking at in the civic area.

However, residents should realize that communities like Plymouth and Northville developed over long periods of time, and have a stock of older historical buildings on which to base a downtown area.

It would be pretty difficult to recreate a Plymouth in Canton.

However, we think Canton officials should aim at doing something like that.

The key seems to be foot traffic. People drive for hours to walk around places like Plymouth and Frankenmuth.

We think Canton officials should take that into consideration when planning a civic area.

A golf course is fine, but we think Canton needs to go further. A good site for the farmer's market would be a good place to start. The current location in the parking lot of a shopping center isn't the kind of setting that encourages people to come to Canton.

Giving the farmer's market an attractive home could also help Canton preserve it's rural, farming heritage and could even help some of the farmers stay in business. Keeping farmers in Canton in business is a good way to ensure that some land stays open and undeveloped.

We think such a market could be at the core of a downtown, village-type area. Where there are crowds of persons walking around, restaurants and small shops can often thrive.

And during the off-season for farmers, such a facility could be used for antique shows and other events.

Residents and officials all seem to agree that the township needs some sort of focal point. And such a structure could be that.

Canton has a chance to create something new. We hope they take it, but the preliminary plan looks like more of the same old stuff.

We just hope that residents show up when the master plan is reviewed and voice some of their concerns. There are some good ideas floating around the community, and they should be heard by township officials.

Suburbs, city

Cooperation can improve region

SUBURBANITES should take a great interest in Detroit's mayoral election — not because of who is or isn't running, but because of what strong, well-measured leadership means to southeastern Michigan.

Suburbanites should take a great interest in Detroit's mayoral election — not because of who is or isn't running, but because of what strong, well-measured leadership means to southeastern Michigan.

We hope Detroit's residents get the mayor they want and we hope they persuade that person to widen the field of cooperation with suburban communities. When that happens, we trust those communities involved and Detroit's mayor can put aside one, maybe even two of their differences and get about the business of working together to improve this part of Michigan.

Some question why this newspaper occasionally mixes Detroit's issues with those of the communities we cover. It could be said that as Detroit goes, so goes this corner of the state, but that's a debatable point.

Suburbanites must be more concerned with facts.

- Many people and businesses in the communities we cover have an interest in Detroit's good health. Convention visitors fill hotels and restaurants in the suburbs. Many businesses contribute to the mayoral candidates of their choice because that candidate's policies affect their ability to do business in Detroit.
- True regional mass transit, a benefit for all, will come into existence only when Detroit and the suburbs decide to find some way to cooperate with one another.

Eventually a major mass transit system has to be built for the good of both city and suburbs. The economic viability of the suburban innercore as well as the city of Detroit depend on it.

- Erasing racism as a factor in the urban/suburban relationship is imperative. Standing on either side of Eight Mile and yelling epithets at each other accomplishes nothing; nor does proclaiming the still-unfinished I-696 freeway the new barrier between Detroit and the northern communities, as some already are doing.

Integration as a cohesive and unified policy must be forged between city and suburb before we are ever to have economic stability and civil peace.

- Suburban crime will not subside until Detroit gets a grip on its own problems. Shoving drug dealers back and forth across Detroit's city limits merely shifts the problem around — it doesn't change it.

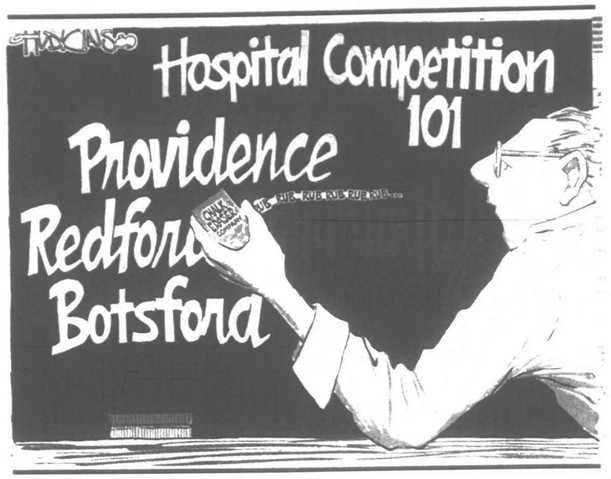
Regional cooperation is necessary, particularly regarding jail space. For example: Redford Township's police are stumped because their department arrests alleged drug dealers, but they're told there's no room for them in the Wayne County Jail. They say Detroit has a priority in housing criminals in that facility. True or false, the perception is there.

- A metropolitan area's reputation is imperative in either building or destroying its economic base.

A bad reputation for Detroit transfers to all our communities. Those outside of Michigan don't separate Detroit's problems from the metropolitan area. We've found that when we're visiting another state and people ask where we're from, the answer West Bloomfield or Canton isn't specific enough for them. They want to know the location of those communities and their proximity to Detroit. When they find out how close we really are to Detroit, they either respond with a crummy joke or just wince. One person recited a litany of 15,000 empty homes, Devil's Night fires, franchised crack dealers and the curbside sale of weapons. No one needs that kind of local, national or international reputation.

- Many of us are linked via pipeline with Detroit — a large percentage of our communities use Detroit water.
- Any weekday morning, look at the eastbound Jeffries and I-94, or southbound I-75 and the Lodge. Those traffic jams mean that much as we might like to believe we don't need Detroit, the evidence speaks to the contrary. Even tattered, it still is an important center of commerce. The weekends aren't much different — lines to the JLA, Brunch with Bach, ethnic festivals, concerts, special showings at the art institute, jazz festivals, the Grand Prix, boat races and Greektown. . . point made.

Detroit also gets a lot from our communities — and the rest of Michigan — in the form of tax dollars, clout in Lansing, grants from Washington that might have gone elsewhere, and, perhaps most importantly, a chance to set the tone for the way this area is perceived by the rest of the world.



Consumers victimized by employee neglect

Steve Barnaby

SUBURBAN malls are full of them.

Suburban restaurants are too.

And so are the much utilized fast food outlets.

And we all are victimized.

I'm talking about incidents of employee neglect — especially when it comes to young employees.

My favorite example of employee neglect revolves around a trip to a clothing store with my daughter. Standing at the counter was a girl, not much older than my 14 year-old daughter.

She was working the store alone. Not a supervisor, manager or owner in sight. Behind the counter was an out-of-place pay phone. Curiosity got the best of me.

"How come the pay phone?" I asked.

"Oh, they don't want us using the phone for personal calls. Nobody is ever here to watch us and they really don't trust us by ourselves. So they took out the regular one and installed this," she replied.

What a sad story.

Whoever owns or manages this store cares little about the employees or the customers, for that matter. Instead of hiring a manager to work with the employees, the owners would rather save the salary, install the phone and leave some untrained kid alone to survive as best as her instincts would allow.

UNFORTUNATELY this kind of employee/customer neglect is becoming more and more common.

As a consumer you've been victimized by one or many similar incidents.

For example:

- Waiters and waitresses who let customers wait for service as they talk among themselves.
- Far too many tables left uncleared so patrons have to wait to be seated and those seated are left to glare at others' garbage.
- Food which is served cold and waiters and kitchen personnel who are unable to get it heated to an edible temperature.
- Clerks in retail stores who spend their time waiting on you while complaining to a colleague about some personal problem.
- Clerks who know little about the product they sell and who show little concern over your concern.
- Fast food counter personnel who are unable to handle an unusual situation outside the programmed routine.

Asking to see the manager is of little help. Oftentimes the manager is as young and as unskilled as the employees.

It really doesn't have to be that way. Really it doesn't.

And you can't blame the kids.

But those with the power, business owners and managers, are falling down on the job.

Somewhere along the line, the business work ethic has been replaced by greed. Not by everybody, mind you, but by enough to give a bad name to business in general.

Grabbing the biggest buck in the shortest time is too often the credo of business today.

This need for greed is reflected in the neglect of employees by managers and owners. With the labor shortage increasing, the problem is only going to get worse.

Far too often, young adults and teenagers, many of whom never have worked before, are hired into a job, given little training and, even if trained, are rarely monitored in their day-to-day job performance.

It's a problem which only will be stopped when consumers say enough. No mas, no mas.

Columnist too tough on business

To the editor:

Don't you think Jack Gladden was rather hard on the "business people" in his July 31 column? He took it much too personally.

I wish there was a way, merely by looking at people, to decide whether more ID is required for business transactions. Wouldn't that make life easy. Yet, alas, then people would cry "Discrimination, you didn't ask him for ID."

So, truly, the only fair action for all is requiring it of everybody. I'm sure Mr. Gladden's MIL is very trustworthy, but there are those who aren't, who take a set of towels, linens, or anything they feel they need.

Wouldn't it be asking a lot of the business people to take the time with each customer to decide. . . "Should I trust this customer. He or she looks honest-but you never know." I feel you'd be one to complain about how long it takes to check into a hotel, if this were the case.

One last point, Mr. Gladden. The reason you couldn't charge your dinner was because you hadn't established credit which involves leaving a signed charge card slip at the front desk. You paid cash for your room. Again, a policy for all customers was merely being followed, because that's the easiest, most efficient, time-saving, and fair way to operate. I'm sure you wouldn't have left without paying your bill (for the meal), but businesses cannot know all their customers personally . . . an impossibility!

These precautions need to apply to all . . . including Mr. Gladden.

Have you ever heard of counter fatigue?

Lawbreakers to pay price

To the editor:

My own personal opinion is that Livonia District Judges James McCann and Robert Brzezinski conducted themselves with proper decorum, (refering to a previous letter headlined "Truth Hidden from the Jury," and printed July 27).

The sentence meted out to that pious do-gooder who saw fit to break the law was much too lenient. It is just too bad that she wasn't prosecuted under the Racketeering Act or RICOH. Under our current laws and our Constitution, the writer could hardly be classified as a baby and mom rescuer when in fact she knowingly and willfully broke the law.

As of now, the religious right and the fundamentalists, in spite of their concerted efforts to do so, have been unable to rewrite our Constitution to force their particular ideologies on our citizens with regard to religious conviction, prayer in schools, passing litmus tests on being a good, fundamentalist Christian in order to obtain an appointment to a federal position a la Ronald Reagan's administration, and the matter of freedom of choice for a woman.

Picketing is one of the guarantees of the Constitution and the rules governing that activity are specific. One of the rules is that the demonstrators have to keep a certain distance from the clinics and cannot interfere with those individuals wishing access to any facility whether it be for an abortion or for counseling. These women obviously of their own volition have decided a course of action they want to take in an unwanted pregnancy. They made the choice and that is as it should be in our democratic country. This is not Iran or Nazi Germany.

When one violates the picketing laws and blocks the entrances to buildings or even occupies those buildings and prevents the pregnant women from gaining access to the building or harasses them when attempting to enter that building, one is guilty of breaking the law.

If judges did indeed suppress the admission of religious dogma into the trial, they were mandated by law to do so. The two judges were not conducting a religious forum — they were ruling in a court of civil law. A jury of her peers found her guilty as charged and she had to pay the penalty. It is that simple. If she chooses to persist in her illegal activities, she must be prepared to pay the penalty.

Residents respond to survey

Strip mall ordinance needed

1)We should have an ordinance stating: no strip malls may start until 90 percent of the vacant stores are occupied.

2)Zone all developing land west of Canton Center Road RI.

3)Pave Haggerty Road from Joy to Michigan and actively look for industry to occupy this land.

4)Pave Warren from Lilley to the township boundary.

Richard and Henrietta Stachura

Follow lead of Plymouth

We moved from the east side of town. The community we lived in was Clinton Township/Sterling Heights. We decided to move to Canton because it was not overdeveloped and the amount of home you could get for your money.

In this area I think you have the township headed in the same direction as Clinton Township/Sterling Heights. Where overdevelopment with strip malls and industries bring much congestion in to the community.

I believe if you followed the lead of Plymouth or Northville that our community would be better off.

Take a ride on Hall Road (M-59) between Van Dyke and Garfield between 3:30 and 5.

Jo An Mix

Bigger lots are needed

1)Left turn signals.
2)Bigger lots in subs.
3)Stop strip malls.
4)No more high rise buildings.
5)State stiffing schools here.

We pay a lot of state taxes with no state money coming back.

Downtown area needed

Canton definitely needs a downtown area, the area around the police station and library would be perfect. No more paving of roads west of Beck until roads east of Beck are upgraded to handle increased traffic load (left turn lanes desperately needed). Stop strip malls.

More parks
are needed

I think Canton should start building more parks for the children and adults in the community. I'd like to see more than just the school playgrounds. One around every corner.

Unsigned

Canton losing personality

Canton is losing its own personality and uniqueness. We love it the way it was nine years ago. Now it's like every place else with all the strip malls and apartments. Stop! Stop! Leave it alone!

Kathleen Brand

Turn arrows are needed

I think there should be left turn arrows at all major intersections on Ford Road in Canton. My husband and I recently relocated from Wisconsin. We can't understand why Motor City can't channel its traffic in a safer manner. Even Wisconsin had left turning arrows. Let's help make our town safer as well as put our tax dollars to good use.

There should also be "right turn only" signs at the driveways of outcoming traffic at intersection gas stations. I have seen too many accidents involving cars turning left across three lanes of traffic. The people coming along the left turn lane are not expecting a car coming out between two lanes of traffic.

Debbie Huck

Stop building strip malls

1)No more strip malls.
2)More sidewalks, street lights.
3)A well planned downtown area, such as Plymouth.
4)More recreation, bike paths.

Do not spoil the west like you did the east, leave it more open land.

Unsigned

Larger homes are needed

I think there are Canton homeowners that would "up-grade" and buy large homes on acres and lots Canton can provide; has room to develop "classy" large homes, large lot subdivisions with their own clubhouse, pool, etc. facilities. No more malls, just residential. So Cantonites will not move to the suburbs west of us.

Development mishandled

As a longtime resident of Canton (about 20 years), I am very disappointed on how the township board has handled the growth of Canton Township. After all I would not think the residents of Canton would like to become another Livonia or Southfield.

I am also disgusted with the number of strip malls that have been built in Canton. We have already acquired to many and it they continue I feel the residents of Canton will be sorry. Also the number of subdivisions has gotten to be pretty great. I would like to see a halt to them and houses with at least one acre of land anyway.

I think this was an excellent policy and it would still be an excellent policy. But to maintain a country style atmopshere I believe there are some changes that will have to be made.

These changes are listed below one by one.

1) Put back on the books that a person must have at least one acre of land before they could build a house on it.

2) Stop building the strip malls that are being built at the present time.

3) Stop all subdivision development and quit putting houses on top of houses like subdivisions are known for.

If these steps are taken into consideration and acted upon I think we could stop the damage that has already occurred. These steps if acted upon would also help preserve the country style atmosphere of Canton that so many people have moved out here for.

But there is one final concern that must also be addressed. This is the question of taxes in Canton. As a long time resident I have seen the taxes rise to an outrageous level. I feel that these should be rolled back or kept under firm control so that Canton Township does not tax its resident to death.

Robert W. Kallioinen

Development sparks move

I think Canton residents should send a strong no to developers. The planning commission has once again bent over backwards for fat cat developer Richard Lewiston, approving unwanted and unnecessary development on Lotz Road next to our subdivision. This was the last straw. We are moving from Canton.

Unsigned

Get rid of hick image

I think that Canton should erase its hicktown image by developing an attractive shopping mall which would include Hudsons, Sears, etc., similar to Twelve Oaks in Novi, and located west of Canton Cetner Road.

Unsigned

Turn lights are needed

I think the most important thing is left turn lights at all main roads on Ford Road. One or two large malls would have been nicer than strip malls. Too many of the same type of businesses. We were told 14 years ago that when business (large and small) started to build in Canton our taxes wouldn't be as high. There are now many businesses but we do not see any difference in our taxes.

Unsigned

Stop the concrete

Stop the subdivision and stop the strip malls. Stop the concrete! We should be planting more trees (or conserving those that exist) not more brick and mortar. We are not only losing our beloved rural image, but are contributing to the destruction of our atmosphere. The area is becoming as cluttered as from where we came!

Canton at the crossroads

SURVEY - SURVEY - SURVEY - SURVEY

Canton is a developing city at the crossroads. Businesses are moving in at a rapid rate. Developers are eyeing property west of Canton Center Road with visions of subdivisions dancing in their heads.

But what kind of community should Canton be? Should it be another Livonia? Another Southfield? Should the township plan a downtown area? Should more recreation areas be developed? Should it try to retain its rural character?

There are lots of questions. We're asking Canton residents for some answers. We'd like to hear what residents would like to see their community become. Include your name and telephone number if you choose. Don't feel obliged to do so.

The Observer will publish the responses during August as part of a month-long project called "Canton at the Crossroads." We will be looking at development and social issues Canton faces as it grows.

State universities move toward dorm option

By Matt Jachman
staff writer

All but one of Michigan's 14 public universities with student housing are moving toward giving dormitory residents the choice of having a roommate who doesn't drink, a drive begun by a group of Oakland County activists.

Beginning this fall, 12 schools will consider student preferences about alcohol use when pairing roommates.

Wayne State University will offer students such a choice beginning in the fall of 1990.

But Michigan State University, the state's largest public college, has no such plans.

"I think they've come a long way, but they haven't come far enough," said U.S. District Judge Bernard Friedman, who led a fight to encourage the schools to give students the choice of having a roommate who doesn't drink or use illegal drugs. "But let's give them credit where credit is due."

Friedman, who handled many drug- and alcohol-related cases while a 48th District Court judge, said that legislation is needed to enforce the plan and address the use of drugs as well as alcohol. The non-drinking roommate option should also be implemented at the state's 44 private colleges, he said.

FRIEDMAN, DRUG and alcohol abuse counselors and students and parents banded together more than three years ago to pressure schools into providing the option, he said.

A major concern was that students recovering from a substance abuse problem would be tempted back into drug use when confronted with drug or alcohol use in their dormitory room. But Friedman said students should be given the choice of avoiding roommates who drink or use illegal drugs no matter the reason.

"All we're saying is that people should have a preference," he said. "We don't want to get into the legal or moral issues."

Lorna McEwen, public relations director for the Maplegrove Centers, substance abuse treatment clinics affiliated with Henry Ford Hospital, said the group will monitor how the non-drinking roommate option works.

She said she would also like to see more alcohol education programs at the colleges, including training for residence assistants in the dorms.

In the long run, she said, legislation may be needed.

ERIC WORLEY, an 18-year-old graduate of West Bloomfield High School, testified before a state legislative committee last fall about the need for the roommate option. The committee was studying a bill sponsored by Rep. David Honigman (R-West Bloomfield) that would have forced both private and public colleges to provide the option on housing application forms.

Ironically, Worley, who says he's a recovering cocaine user, plans to attend Michigan State in the fall. But he applauded the steps taken by the other schools.

"As long as (the option to choose a roommate who doesn't use alcohol) helps some people in some situations, that's good," Worley said. "I'll have to be faced with it."

Worley said that he doesn't have a drinking problem, but fears that drinking could lead him back to drug abuse. But, he said, he wouldn't hesitate to confront a roommate if drinking in their room became a problem for him. "I wouldn't think twice about letting him know my feelings," he said.

AT MICHIGAN STATE, Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs, said that giving students the choice of a teetotaling roommate wouldn't address the real issue — drinking by those under 21.

"We think we have long been implementing policies designed to minimize the consumption of alcohol in the halls," Turner said. "We are not a Johnny-come-lately to this problem. We have been at it. We haven't solved it."

School policy forbids on-campus drinking by students under 21. Students can be expelled for repeating offenses such as underage drinking or supplying minors with alcohol, Turner said. Students over 21 can drink in their dormitory rooms, but most students who live on campus are under 21, he said.

MSU also has a program of education about alcohol use and counseling for students with a drinking problem, Turner said.

Most of the 13 other state universities with dormitories ask students to indicate on housing forms if they want to room with someone who doesn't use alcohol.

In addition, the University of Michigan addressed the issue and how it will be enforced in a supplemental letter to incoming students. "Students who sign up for and then violate the substance free living arrangement will be expected to make a room change immediately," according to the letter, signed by Robert C. Hughes, director of housing.

But three schools — Michigan Technological University, Lake Superior State University and Saginaw Valley State University — suggest on the forms that the option is only available to students of legal drinking age.

And Ferris State University doesn't approach the issue directly, but asks on housing forms if physical conditions, including chemical dependency, should be considered in room assignments.

FOR HONIGMAN, who backed legislation that he says helped pressure public colleges that were not providing the option to do so, the fight is not over.

Honigman said he may introduce legislation in the fall that would force all of the state's colleges, public and private, to offer the option and better help monitor the policy.

signed to long-term facilities, either training centers or private sheltered or group homes.

The Maxey Training Center in Whitmore Lake currently houses 490 youths, ages 13 to 18 years, in minimum and maximum security facilities. Each attends school five days a week, including regular or special education classes and vocational training, at a cost of an estimated $140 daily.

Youths from Wayne County normally comprise 75 percent of the total population and 10 percent of those are from suburban communities, according to Julie Jenkins, program director at the facility. Since October 1988, 264 Wayne County youths have been considered for placement.

Athletes go for the gold

By Julie Brown
staff writer

THERE WAS no shortage of winners at the Michigan Special Olympics state softball tournament.

The event was held Friday and Saturday, Aug. 4-5, at the Canton Softball Center. It attracted some 826 athletes, chaperones and coaches, in addition to other volunteers, said Dick Clark of Wayne, tournament director.

"No rain, we're doing great," said Clark, a member of the Wayne Civitan Club, which hosted the event. He and others organizing the tournament had been concerned about the stormy weather, but Saturday's skies were clear and sunny.

"I got very little sleep last night," Clark said Saturday. "I sat in my living room watching it rain."

Athletes played some games Friday night, with tournament play continuing on Saturday. A total of 38 teams competed, in addition to skills competition involving some 40 athletes.

TEAMS COMPETED in different divisions, based on ability levels. Special Olympics provides opportunities for athletic competition and achievement among mentally retarded people.

Athletes must be at least 8 to compete in Special Olympics events, with no upper age limit set. This weekend's tournament marked the second consecutive year the state event has been held at the Canton Softball Center.

"It's going real well," said Susie Pidsosny of Canton, Wayne County area director for Special Olympics.

The tournament included opening ceremonies Friday evening, followed by a dance at the nearby UAW Local 735 on Michigan Avenue in Canton.

Following skills competition and tournament play, the awards presentation was held Saturday afternoon at the Canton Softball Center.

During the tournament, athletes stayed at two hotels near Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Having the athletes stay together makes coordinating the tournment easier, Pidsosny said.

All athletes returned home with a medal or ribbon. There were gold, silver and bronze medals, plus team trophies for first-, second- and third-place teams. Other athletes received ribbons.

"I guess my biggest concern is that they come and have a good time," Pidsosny said. Athletes learn the value of sportsmanship and team effort.

"It's a good example of what Special Olympics is all about," she said.

ATHLETES BENEFIT from the experience of competing, said Clark, the tournament director. They benefit from being away from home, from working together and from interacting with other people.

One action-packed game involved the Plymouth-Canton Thundercats and the Northwest ARC (Association for Retarded Citizens) Blasters. The Thundercats won that game.

The Thundercats team included 16 players, with an additional five athletes participating in skills competition. Skills competition includes such things as batting, ball toss, base running, fielding and throwing for distance.

The Plymouth-Canton Thundercats played the C.I. Wildcats Friday night and lost that game.

Summertime readers seeking a pleasant diversion

By Julie Brown
staff writer

SUMMERTIME READING is a popular pastime in the Plymouth-Canton community. Librarians and bookstore staffers have a good idea of what those readers are interested in.

"The best sellers are all up there," said Darlene Ursel, a reference librarian at the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth.

Popular fiction titles include "While My Pretty One Sleeps" by Mary Higgins Clark and "The Russia House" by John le Carre. "The Joy Luck Club," a book by Amy Tan telling the story of a group of Chinese women, is popular at the library in Plymouth.

Other popular books include mysteries, paperback romances and general fiction. Some readers choose to read the classics again, Ursel said. Those readers look for books by Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck and other well-known authors.

"We also have some non-fiction books that have been popular too," Ursel said. Biographies about Jackie Onassis and the late Gilda Radner are frequently requested. "Peace, Love and Healing" by Bernie Siegel is popular. That book includes advice from a physician on self-healing.

TRAVEL BOOKS are popular with summertime visitors to the Dunning-Hough Library.

Best sellers are frequently requested at the Canton Public Library.

"People are always interested in what's new," said Claire McLaughlin, an adult services librarian. "It's Always Something," an autobiography written by the late Gilda Radner, an actress/comedian who died of cancer, is popular with Canton Public Library visitors.

Other popular titles at the library include "The Temple of My Familiar" by Alice Walker (author of "The Color Purple") and "While My Pretty One Sleeps" by Mary Higgins Clark.

"A Woman Named Jackie," a biography of Jackie Onassis by C. David Heymann, is a popular book at the Canton Public Library, as is "The Russia House" by John le Carre.

"Those are the ones that have come over the desk when I've been here," McLaughlin said.

The librarians don't see tremendous changes in people's reading tastes during the summer.

"I think it's probably a myth," McLaughlin said. "Everybody talks about a book to take to the beach."

SHE'S NOTICED that reader requests in the summer are pretty much the same as during the rest of the year.

There are some changes at the Dunning-Hough Library during the summer.

"We don't have as much of the academic activity in the summertime," Ursel said. Some people take classes, but not as many as during the rest of the year.

Ursel's seen more use of the library by patrons throughout the day; during the rest of the year, the majority of visitors come in the evening. She's also noticed an increase in use of business materials, such as stock reports and corporation records.

"We're better equipped now to do that kind of thing, although we have a ways to go," Ursel said.

Books on tape are popular with Dunning-Hough Library visitors. Many patrons find those books helpful when they're traveling long distances by car. Videos — entertainment, travel, educational/instructional and children's — are popular too.

Some summertime readers choose to buy their books at local bookstores.

"We're selling the espionage thriller-type," said Mary Fraser, manager of the Metro News Center, on Joy in Canton. "Red Phoenix" by Larry Bond was so popular it sold out and had to be reordered.

"Polar Star" by Martin Cruz Smith, author of "Gorky Park," had been a bit slow in selling, but is picking up. John le Carre's "The Russia House" is doing well at Metro News Center.

ESCAPE-TYPE books for all kinds of readers are popular. Those books are what Fraser calls "good trash."

"It's just a good story, a people story," she said. Those books are more substantial than romance-type novels.

Biographies of Jackie Onassis are selling at Metro News Center. Books about baseball aren't doing as well.

Sales of sports books seem to vary according to the fortunes of local teams, Fraser said. The Detroit Tigers are in a slump and baseball books aren't doing well. Books on basketball, on the other hand, are doing just fine.

"So I think it makes a difference," she said. "People just aren't as interested in baseball as they might be if we were in the race."

Metro News Center customers also buy pop psychology books that have been well-publicized. Fraser, like the librarians, hasn't seen much change in reader tastes during the summer. Fiction best sellers may move more quickly in the summer, and travelers often prefer paperbacks to difficult-to-carry hardcover books.

In general, popular books, such as paperback mysteries, psychological thrillers and business-related books, continue to do well at Metro News Center in the summer.

As you might expect, the librarians and bookstore employees like to read. The Dunning-Hough Library's Ursel is reading "The Russia House." She tends to stick to best sellers, and finds that keeping up with current literature helps in her work.

"I read fiction," Fraser said. Her store gets advance copies of newer fiction books, some written by less well-known authors. She finds it helpful to read those books so she can make recommendations to customers.

Lucille Lockhart and Robert Hoffend dance to the music of The Danny Venice Band. The summertime street dances are sponsored by the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce, Dick Scott Dodge and the Detroit Federation of Musicians.

Summertime dances provide musical fun

A toe-tapping good time isn't difficult to find in Plymouth on Fridays.

Summer street dances are held 7:30-9 p.m. Fridays in the Penniman/Kellogg Park area in downtown Plymouth. The street dances will continue each Friday through Aug. 25.

Originally, the dances were planned to attract people downtown to enjoy the entertainment "and hopefully do a little bit of shopping," said Mary Roehr, executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce.

THE DANCES have been offered each summer for the past several years. They have evolved into more of a community activity, Roehr said. Many families come to downtown Plymouth with their lawn chairs, looking forward to enjoying an evening of dance and song.

The dances have a Big Band format, with different performers featured each week. Five or six musicians perform each week, including some vocalists.

"I think it almost seems kind of nostalgic to people," Roehr said.

MANY PEOPLE from neighboring communities without downtown areas are attracted to Plymouth for the summer street dances.

Dancing is strictly optional at the gatherings.

"There are some people who dance. Even little kids dance, I guess, in their own manner," Roehr said.

Sponsors are the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce, Dick Scott Dodge and the Detroit Federation of Musicians.

competition, which is better," said Mike Keith of Plymouth, head coach for the Thundercats.

The athletes, some of whom live at the Plymouth Opportunity House, have been practicing since right after Memorial Day. They've played the Northwest ARC Blasters and other local teams in scrimmage.

This year, Keith and the other Thundercats coaches have stressed that athletes should adapt themselves to the game, rather than the game being adapted for the athletes.

"It's a lot harder for our guys," said Keith, who has a son, 16-year-old Neil, on the team. "We train them by the book."

The hard-working Plymouth-Canton Thundercats celebrate their victory at the state softball tournament. The team is coached by Mike Keith with the assistance of Chuck Thomas, Shirley O'Connor, Allison Murphy and Leigh Langkabel.

WESTERN WAYNE County was well-represented at the tournament. In addition to the Northwest ARC Blasters (fourth place, eighth division) and Plymouth-Canton Thundercats (third place, eighth division), the Northwest ARC Crunchers (third place, second division) and Northwest ARC ARCers (fourth place, seventh division) participated.

The Wayne-Westland Tigers competed and received the first place award in the sixth division. Skills participants from Wayne-Westland also competed, as did a number of athletes from the downriver and Dearborn areas.

More distant communities were represented, including Lansing, Flint, Saginaw, Midland, Kalamazoo and Muskegon.

Assistance from the Wayne Civitan Club, Canton Softball Center representatives and others helped to make the tournament a success, Pidsosny said. Members of the UAW Local 735 were equally generous in their assistance.

"They were so gung ho last year," she said.

Plymouth Community Family YMCA campers get ready to do some fishing at Plymouth Township Park.

Happy campers

YMCA program's a popular one

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Eddie Samples and his friends were doing some fishing at Plymouth Township Park last week.

"I like fishing," said Eddie, a Plymouth resident and seventh grader at Plymouth Christian Academy in Canton. "I catch crayfish a lot."

Eddie, 11, doesn't take those fish home for dinner, choosing instead to throw them back into the water.

"They're too small," he said with a smile.

Fishing's one of many activities offered for kids participating in the summer day camp sponsored by the Plymouth Community Family YMCA. Camp sessions, for children ages 5-11, started in mid-June. The final session is scheduled for Monday through Friday, Aug. 21-25.

About 130 children will participate in the camp this summer, said Rich Roman, an Ann Arbor resident and camp counselor. Most participants are from the Plymouth-Canton area.

"Each week, we have different themes," said Roman, 24, a substitute art teacher with the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. Last week's theme was "Fantasy."

DAYS AT camp include opening ceremonies, free time, arts and crafts projects, games and sports. There's some flexibility in scheduling activities, with plans changed if the weather doesn't cooperate. Counselors-in-training lead some of the small group activities.

Each day includes an Olympic activity, such as the 50-yard dash, obstacle course, football/softball throw, or the egg and spoon relay. Camp Ohiyesa, near Milford, is the site of an Olympic competition in the summer; some of the Plymouth-Canton day campers participate in that competition.

Cookouts are usually held each Friday, the final day of camp. Campers also work on a "memory book," including drawings related to camp themes and photos of activities. Tournaments help children learn to play checkers and other games.

Field trips to such places as the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum, Domino's Farms and the Matthaei Botanical Gardens are included. Boat races — using boats made by the campers — and fishing are part of the fun.

"They've been catching fish," Roman said. The youngsters use hot dog pieces as bait.

"It works out real well for them and it's fun," he said.

CONTESTS, SUCH as an ugly foot contest, are featured. Campers are honored for having the ugliest feet, the biggest toes or other unusual characteristics.

"We try to do it in a positive sense." Roman and other staff members are careful to make sure campers' feelings aren't hurt.

The campers don't tire easily, but Roman doesn't mind keeping up with them.

"It's a challenge, because kids are quick. It takes a lot of energy to keep up with them. They're a lot of fun."

Roman is a 1988 graduate of Eastern Michigan University, where he received a bachelor's degree in fine arts with a teaching certificate. He's worked previously as a counselor for the local YMCA camp and has been a playground supervisor for the Canton Parks and Recreation Department.

At camp, children are encouraged to make at least one new friend. Staff members try to split up siblings.

"We don't discourage them spending time with their friends, but we like them to meet someone new," Roman said. Campers learn about the importance of respecting their fellow campers.

ROMAN HAS the capable assistance of other counselors and counselors-in-training at camp.

"I like being with kids and outside," said Marcia Rockwood, a 19-year-old Plymouth resident. She's a 1988 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School and a sophomore at Michigan State University, where she's studying early elementary education.

Staff photos by Bill Bresler

This is Rockwood's first summer as a YMCA camp counselor. She needs a certain number of hours working with children to earn her degree, and her time at camp will help fulfill that requirement.

"Just seeing when the kids are happy and having fun" is rewarding for Rockwood, who'd like to be a counselor next summer. "They're real fun to have around."

Scott Hamerink, 12, of Plymouth is also getting some work experience this summer. He's a seventh grader at Our Lady of Good Counsel School in Plymouth and was working last week as a counselor-in-training.

"I heard it was a lot of fun," he said. He's participated in the program as a camper and is considering working as a counselor when he's older.

Scott enjoys "when we go do activities like fishing and looking for golf balls and playing games." Campers at Plymouth Township Park find golf balls from the neighboring Hillop Golf Course.

When Scott goes back to school, he'll tell his friends "that I liked it and stuff. They have more fun than being bored at home."

(For more information on the summer camp, call the Plymouth Community Family YMCA, 453-2904.)

Pastor's a people person

By Julie Brown

The Rev. William Myers Jr. has been pastor at the Faith Community Moravian Church in Canton since December 1986.

As a college student, the Rev. William Myers Jr. used to commute from Inkster to Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. He'd pass through Canton during those drives.

"When I commuted through Canton, it was entirely rural, entirely."

Myers, who has seen the community grow and change, is in Canton to stay these days. He's pastor at the Faith Community Moravian Church in Canton, a position he has held since December of 1986.

Myers, 43, grew up in Inkster, graduated from Cherry Hill High School, and attended Eastern Michigan University. He worked his way through college, earning a bachelor of business administration degree.

"I thought I was going to be an accountant." He didn't start out in the ministry. Myers spent some seven years working in the trucking industry, interspersed throughout his time at EMU.

HIS FINAL position in the trucking industry was as operations manager for the Yellow Freight System terminal in Ann Arbor.

"It was not that fulfilling. I realized I was more of a people person."

He entered the Moravian Theological Seminary in Bethlehem, Pa. That seminary's student body includes Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and those of other denominations.

Myers, a Canton resident, earned a master of divinity degree from the Moravian Theological Seminary in 1976. During his time there, he met his wife, Beth, then a senior at Moravian College.

Beth Myers, who has a degree in music, is involved in music programs and other activities at the Faith Community Moravian Church. They have two children, 13-year-old Robby and 11-year-old Sarah.

William Myers was raised in the Moravian church.

"Most of my ministry, I've been a hospital chaplain." Before coming to Canton, he worked for a couple of years as a chaplain at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin in Milwaukee.

Myers was present when some 70 to 75 children died at the hospital. That work was difficult but rewarding, he was able to comfort parents whose children had died.

"It hurt a lot. I used to feel guilty when I came home and had two healthy kids at home."

BEFORE THAT, Myers worked as the Protestant chaplain at a Catholic hospital, St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton, Wis.

He'd started his work as a pastor at a Moravian church in Wisconsin. That church shared a pastor with a nearby Methodist church. Sharing a pastor isn't an uncommon practice for small, rural churches, he said.

During that time, St. Elizabeth Hospital set up a volunteer chaplaincy program. Myers did that work as a volunteer for a time and was then asked to join the staff as a chaplain.

He continued to serve as pastor at the Moravian church in Wisconsin but gave up his duties at the nearby Methodist church. Myers' ministry also included some time pastoring a United Church of Christ congregation in Wisconsin. That was an interim position he held between his time at the two hospitals.

The Faith Community Moravian Church has about 150 members. The church began in 1978, with services held at Pioneer Middle School; members have been meeting in the church building on Warren in Canton since the early 1980s.

The Moravian church is one of the oldest Protestant denominations, Myers said. Its roots go back some 100 years before the time of religious reformer and theologian Martin Luther, leader of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

A Roman Catholic priest, John Hus, was attempting at that time to reform the practices of his church.

HUS OPPOSED the practice of granting indulgences; he argued that forgiveness could not be granted by the church and that doing so was contrary to the Bible's teachings. Hus was burned at the stake in 1415.

Some say Vatican II, which in the 1960s altered worship practices and teachings of the Catholic church, vindicated Hus. He was in many ways a man some 550 years before his time, Myers said.

Historically, the Moravian church has emphasized the importance of missionary work. The majority of Moravians are non-white, with the largest provinces found in Africa.

Myers hasn't gone overseas to do missionary work, but does know about those efforts. He's a ham radio operator and has gotten to know many missionaries through that work.

There are three Moravian churches in Michigan, including the Grace Moravian Church in Westland and a church in Unionville, in the thumb area.

The job Myers has at the Canton church includes varied duties. He's the worship leader and the primary manager of day-to-day activities. His work includes planning, implementing programs, meeting new people in the community and counseling. Myers recently returned from a youth camp session in Ohio, an enjoyable but somewhat tiring activity.

Paperwork isn't his favorite task. Myers enjoys the one-on-one contact, "being able to enjoy people, to laugh with them, but at the same time to be with them in the not so happy times too."

Before entering the ministry, William Myers worked for a number of years in the trucking industry. "It just wasn't fulfilling. I realized I was more of a people person."

We cannot abandon our values

moral perspectives
Rev. David Strong

Two young men confronted me with their question. What should the president do about the hanging of Lt. Col. William Higgins by the Muslim extremists? They were stirred by reports of U.S. Naval ships going to the area. The two young men pushed more for an answer.

It is not just the United States. You have to put Israel into the picture. The fundamentalists on both Jewish and Arab sides will not give an inch. They both are demanding what they believe is God's will. Neither side will forget or forgive.

Our country is perceived as a supporter of Israel. I explained that the solution will not be made by a few actions by our own country. I also stated that the greatest mistake that we could make was to escalate the violence.

The two young men illustrate the idea that we "must do something." The young men express the attitude that America is so powerful that we can fix problems like this.

I asked my friends how many people had been killed in the latest airliner crash. Higgins is one man. Why will we risk war and further retaliation because of one man? It is our pride and status as a nation, this is what prods us to do something.

CERTAINLY WE feel compassion for the hostages. We do everything possible to seek their release. We must also relate our own moral values to what we would ask our nation to do. We cannot hold one set of moral values as individuals and then ask the nation to function with an entirely different set of values.

Would the average American order a shelling of a portion of a city in another country? Would you or I lead a terror mission designed to kill terrorists? The newspapers report that some of our nation's officials complain that Congress has withdrawn the CIA's capability to fight terror with terror. Fine, it is better to preserve the values of our nation than for us to adopt the terrorists' own methods.

I have traveled in the Middle East. I know that there are many both on the Arab and Israeli sides who want the conflict to continue. It is in their interest to prevent peace. There are many nations who do business with Iran. It is in their best interest. The problems there will not be solved by any one nation. Agreement must be built among the nations.

IN THE meanwhile, we must not bow to patriotic pressures to attack. We need to keep our own moral posture in mind when we urge our leaders to resort to violence.

Winning, in this situation, means holding true to our principles. Success means counteracting the crisis images promoted by the news media. As a ship's captain would say, "Hold her steady as she goes. We will stay on course and weather the storm."

Black marriages face a higher risk of breaking up

The marriages of black men who are deeply concerned about their ability to provide for their families are at greatest risk for separation or divorce, according to a University of Michigan study of the first four years of marriage.

"No matter what their income, young black men are subject to acute anxiety about their role as providers," the U-M researchers said. "This anxiety may lead them to be leery of marriage in the first place, and once married, it may continue to cloud their marital commitment.

"White husbands in our study also worried about family finances, but that concern didn t seem to predict marriage problems."

The researchers were Shirley Hatchett, assistant research scientist at the U-M Institute for Social Research; Elizabeth Douvan, professor of psychology and research scientist; and Joseph Veroff, professor of psychology and faculty associate.

The four-year study is in its last year, with the data collected during annual interviews in 1986, '87 and '88 with 199 black and 174 white couples randomly selected in the Detroit metropolitan area. All the brides were under age 36 and all the couples were in their first marriages.

The separation and divorce rate for black couples is about 2½ times greater than the rate for white couples. According to the study, black marriages are also more likely to be at risk if:

- The husband says he is not emotionally satisfied or fulfilled by the marriage.
- THE HUSBAND'S father is well educated.
- The wife has very strong kinship ties with her own family and feels her in-laws are intrusive.
- The husband and wife each have separate groups of friends.
- The wife is very young.

"All of these factors can affect any marriage, but we found that they were much more likely to have an impact on the stability of black marriages," the researchers stressed.

Sharing decision making power is a difficult for black men because for historical reasons, power in the home is particularly important to them, the researchers said.

"American black men and women traditionally have been out of sync with mainstream gender roles. In the past, blacks lived in a world where men were supposed to be powerful and women were supposed to be protected. In reality, however, black men were not powerful and black women could not be protected," they added.

The researchers were surprised at first to find that the sons of educated black fathers were likely to have unstable marriages. But like the economic and power issues, the finding is less surprising when considering the educated black male in an historical and social context, they said.

'In the past, blacks lived in a world where men were supposed to be powerful and women were supposed to be protected. In reality, however, black men were not powerful and black women could not be protected.'

— U-M researchers

Educated black men always have faced unusual pressures which put stress on their marriages and their children, the researchers said. Many of the fathers of the men in the study entered adulthood before the civil rights movement, when well educated blacks were lucky to get jobs as railroad porters or postal workers. The lack of mobility and opportunity led to resentment and frustration.

THE FATHERS who became adults during and after the civil rights movement faced a different but equally stressful situation, for now they were getting jobs never held by blacks before, the researchers said.

"In both periods, the fathers may have taken out their stress on their spouses, and these frustrated, anxious, distressed fathers were the role models for the sons who are now getting married."

They also discovered that, contrary to popular notion that black kinship ties are a strength in black marriages, wives who were firmly attached to their own families and who reported problems with their in-laws, were likely to have troubled marriages.

"Many of these wives had been single parents before marriage and may have received a great deal of support from their families. Those ties, however, eventually may have hampered the development of integrated family networks with the couple at the center," the researchers said.

Credit card doctors can make you ill

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

A new scam is afoot, one involving "doctors" and "patients," but it has nothing to do with medical care.

In this case, "doctors" are con artists armed with computers, and "patients" are consumers in need of improved credit ratings.

"Doctors" steal good credit ratings from computer files maintained by local credit bureaus and then sell the information to "patients" willing to pay $500 to $1,500 for the service. (See accompanying story.)

Relatively new on the consumer scene, the scam is thought to have originated in Houston, Texas, according to Deborah Nigbor of the Detroit Better Business Bureau. She said police there have uncovered goods amounting to approximately $15 million, bought by consumers using doctored credit ratings.

"They're buying everything from small merchandise to automobiles to homes," she said, citing one instance in which an unsuspecting Houston auto dealer sold 93 vehicles to different consumers, each using doctored ratings.

BASED ON THE possibility of big profits and the relative ease in fraudently obtaining credit information, it is believed the scam is apt to spread quickly to other parts of the country.

"There are many techniques for obtaining credit files, and I'm certain profits must be good" based on how fast the scam is growing, Nigbor said.

In Texas operations, "doctors" obtain code numbers to local credit bureaus and access computer files with home computers and telephone modems.

BUT ACCESS to credit bureau files is not easy, according to Darlene Taylor, operations manager of Trans Union Credit Information in Southfield. It is one of the larger credit bureaus in the nation.

"There are levels and levels and levels of security to keep (computer) hackers off the system. It's a must in our business," Taylor said.

Jennifer Neu of another major credit bureau, TRW Information Services in Farmington Hills, agrees.

TRW maintains more than 143 million files in 75,000 locations throughout the country, accessible only through sophisticated codes. Even if codes are broken, stolen or otherwise obtained, requests for information are closely monitored by a security computer program.

"Any deviation from use by legitimate subscribers, time, volume, location, specifics, anything out of the ordinary, is instantly noted," Neu said.

All suspicious use is immediately investigated.

MOREOVER, FILES maintained by credit bureaus frequently do not contain detailed information normally required in establishing new credit or securing loans, such as driver license numbers or mother's maiden name and date of birth.

Chris Anderson of Credit Bureau Reports Inc. in Farmington Hills works as a middleman. She solicits credit information from Trans Union, TRW and other credit bureaus, passing the data along to her clients, banks and mortgage companies lending large sums of money for the purchase of new homes.

Anderson receives numerous calls from irate consumers attempting to obtain homes loans and claiming credit report information supplied to the bank or mortgage company is inaccurate.

"It happens all the time, people calling and saying information is incorrect," Anderson said.

SHE ASCERTAINS accuracy by contacting the lender in question.

"If Art Van says they owe money, I call Art Van directly."

If the information proves inaccurate, she corrects the error, never learning the reason why mistaken information was originally included.

Queries by Anderson and others is often the first time "innocent consumers" learn they owe for goods they have never bought, merchandise bought by others using their credit information, according to Nigbor.

"Negative information is contained in their ratings. Sometimes they are even asked to foot the bill," she said.

The best guard is periodic inspection of your own ratings maintained by firms like TRW or Trans Union.

NIGBOR ALSO advises lenders to verify employment history in addition to credit ratings, as an added precaution against fraud.

In computer credit fraud, both "doctor" and "patient" are liable for prosecution on charges of fraud, according to an agent in the FBI's Troy office — the "doctor" for supplying fraudulent information and the "patient" for using it.

If, for example, a home is bought and the lending institution requests a title search by mail, wire fraud has been committed, punishable by up to five years in prison. If the phone is used to transact business, wire fraud may be involved, also punishable by up to five years in prison.

Supplying fraudulent and false statements to secure new credit or a loan constitutes a felony punishable by a fine of $5,000 and up to two years in prison.

Computer fraud also violates such federal laws as the Fair Credit Rating Act and the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, each punishable by up to one year in prison and fines of up to $5,000.

Texas, an agent said, "makes sense" as a center of credit fraud.

"Whenever the economic climate is poor, people tend to walk away from mortgages they can't pay," Nigbor said.

Rewriting credit history 'cures' deadbeat's woes

Credit "doctor" fraud normally follows a common routine.

Let's assume you're an average, hard-working, honest consumer who nearly always pays bills on time. Your credit rating is pretty good.

Then, out of the blue you receive a call from a collection agency, harassing you about an overdue bill. This is the first you've heard of the bill. No doubt a case of mistaken identity. But the collection agency seems to have detailed and correct information about you and your credit rating.

The collector, familiar with claims of mistaken identity, is persistent. The conversation becomes heated. Chances are, neither of you suspect credit fraud.

Here's how it works, according to Marvin Kaplan of Associated Credit Bureaus in Houston, Texas, where this particular form of fraud has found fertile ground. Millions of dollars in merchandise has been purchased by patients of credit doctors.

A poor credit risk needs an improved rating. He or she approaches a credit doctor who, for a hefty fee, sells him your good credit rating.

The credit "doctor" knows the code number and password that allows him entry to computer records maintained by credit bureaus. He or she locates a history that best matches the client. The credit rating happens to be yours.

Once the information is purchased, the buyer changes your address and phone number. Both are usually ficticious. Then, he or she applies for credit, charging merchandise or obtaining a loan without ever making a payment.

The lender, unaware of the scam, sends past due notices to the ficticious address for several months, before turning the account over to a collection agency.

The collector contacts you. He or she has no way of knowing you are not the person who made the fradulent credit purchase. The collector is as innocent as you are and assumes you are trying to throw him off track in collecting what appears to be a legitimate overdue account.

Know thy credit rating

practically speaking

Stored in the computer of one of the nation's 2,000 credit bureaus is a detailed listing of how much you owe on personal loans and credit cards, how quickly you pay these bills and how many times your payments have been late.

Most of us have no idea what our credit reports say — until it's too late. Jane, for example, didn't know her credit report erroneously said that she had defaulted on a student loan until a bank rejected her mortgage application. By the time the mistake was corrected, the house she wanted to buy had been sold.

To prevent such last-minute credit problems, the Farmington Hills-based Michigan Association of CPAs suggests you check your credit report periodically. In most cases, your record is probably filed with one of the country's five largest credit bureaus: Trans Union, TRW, Chilton, CBA or Associated Credit Services.

As a general rule, credit bureaus usually will charge a fee ranging from $3 to $25 for a copy of your credit report. If you have been denied credit on the basis of information supplied by a credit bureau, the creditor must provide the name and address of a credit bureau issuing the report on which it based its decision. You then have 30 days to request a free copy of your report. You must supply the credit bureau with your full name, telephone number, Social Security number and the name of the party that denied your credit application. Expect to receive a copy of your report in two to three weeks.

The average credit report can be bewildering to read. Nowhere in the report will you find a simple sentence explaining whether you are a good credit risk. A credit report does not issue any judgment on your credit reliability. Instead, it provides a factual but selective account of your employment and credit history. For example, the credit report may list an inactive department store charge account but make no mention of how you handle your utility bills or your mortgage payments.

At the heart of the report is your credit history, translated into an elaborate system of number and letter codes to indicate how you have handled debt over the years. A key to the codes is found on the form.

Although the format of a credit report will vary between credit bureaus, the information contained is essentially the same. Generally, the report will detail the name, number, type and activity of credit cards issued in your name; the amount of your credit limits and the amount of your outstanding balances.

OTHER ITEMS that may be found in a credit file include the names of the companies that have requested copies of your report as well as notations indicating whether you have been involved in civil suits or bankruptcy proceedings. All of this information is provided to the credit bureau by your creditors or other parties.

If you find an error on your credit report, you should write to the credit bureau immediately. When Jane informed the credit bureau she had paid off her student loan some seven years earlier, the credit bureau investigated her case and found that the issuer of the loan had somehow switched her records with those of another consumer.

When a credit bureau determines a mistake has been made or if it cannot verify the information in its files, the items in question must be deleted from your credit report. You may discover that a credit report presents certain correct but derogatory information out of context. In such instances, you should mail a concise explanation (approximately 100 words) to the credit bureau summarizing your side of the story.

Consider this example. After being denied a credit card, Paul checked his credit record, which showed he had paid his car loan and credit card bills late for a period of four to five months. The information was correct, but during this time Paul's wife was undergoing treatment for cancer. The late payments were a result of the financial and personal stress he suffered at that time. At the recommendation of his financial adviser, Paul sent a letter to the credit bureau explaining the circumstances behind his uncharacteristic period of late payments.

Paul also asked the credit bureau to send this information to any creditors who had denied his applications in the past six months.

HOW LONG CAN a negative statement be kept on your record? If the statement relates to bankruptcy proceedings, it may stay on file for as long as 10 years.

The Michigan Association of CPAs suggests consumers write to the Federal Trade Commission Correspondence Branch, Washington, D.C. 20580 for a copy of the Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1971, which clearly explains their rights to credit information.

Finally, a sale that really means business.

Car brand identity isn't what it used to be auto talk

Dan McCosh

It's not until you're standing in the rain and tell the parking lot guy "get me my Geo Prizm" that you start to realize the importance of brand identity in the automobile business.

First you get this blank stare, so you mumble something like: "You know, the little yellow car. Looks like a Toyota. Actually, it is a Toyota, but it's sold by Chevy. But it doesn't actually say 'Chevy' anywhere, see. Or Toyota either.

"Look, give me my keys and I'll find it myself."

I remember when a Chevy was a Chevy. This is the sort of statement that is guaranteed to get a few of my progenies' eyeballs rolled to the ceiling, but the fact is that "a Chevy" used to have a kind of solid, no-nonsense ability to let someone know what kind of car you drove. Sort of like "a Coke" used to work in a restaurant without a followup question like: "Classic Coke or Diet Coke?"

THE LAST real Chevy (pronounced Chivvy) that Chevrolet ever built was a straight-six Nova, preferably gunmetal blue with an automatic transmission. A nun's car, as a guy I worked with who had dropped out of a Jesuit seminary called it. Also once described as a "Heavy Chevy Blue-Bomber Special" by a young woman acquaintance who drove one, who also left me convinced that a $600 car bought with the earnings of a first job can look as good as a faded pair of jeans.

A proper Chevy improved with age, like wine, or at least aged with dignity, managing a certain aplomb even while propped on a couple of cinder blocks with the engine hanging from the limb of a tree. A proper Chevy engine came apart with a Crescent wrench, the seats quickly developed a patina that resisted further staining, and you were allowed one or two holes generated by a screwdriver left in your hip pocket.

Near the end of the line old Chevys kind of blurred together, like old married couples who begin to resemble each other, as a red door got rehung on a blue car and a transplant transmission was installed that slipped a little less.

BUT THEY were unquestionably Chevys.

All of this came to mind as I read about the efforts of Jim Perkins, who is to Chevrolet what Billy Martin is to the Yankees, struggling to improve the brand identity of Geo with Chevrolet dealers by spending a bundle on a new ad campaign.

Along with trying to make Geo a household world, Perkins has to sell a bunch of cars with names like Lumina, Celebrity, Corsica and Beretta — the latter the subject of a lawsuit by the handgun manufacturer of the same name. Try those on a parking lot attendant while you are in a hurry sometime.

Not that proliferating names and confusing customers was invented by Chevrolet. Chrysler still is trying to sell cars through more divisional umbrellas than General Motors, although to its credit it still makes things simple by calling most of them LeBaron. Even the most recognizable importers such as Volkswagen keep making up names to further confuse their customers, some of whom are still waiting for a phone call on their used Dasher.

Worst of all are relatively new marques such as Mitsubishi, with such unfamiliar names they are as likely to end up in the stereo section of the classifieds as the auto section.

The lack of brand identity can plague you in mysterious ways. The other day I heard a story about a guy trying to sell a Mitsubishi who waited about a week without a single call. Finally, he changed the ad to read that he had a Honda to sell, and was deluged. To the inquiries, he claimed that the paper made a mistake, but you ought to see this Mitsubishi anyway. He sold the car in a day.

When I stop to think about it, there isn't a single car on sale today that conjures up an undiluted image in my mind when I hear its name. Jeep comes close, but that's before you realize there isn't a simple "Jeep" anymore — it's XJ, Sahara, Wrangler, etc.

It's enough to make you want to reach for a box of Kleenex.

Closed-end mutuals for income

today's investor

Thomas E. O'Hara

of the National Association of Investors Corp.

Q. You had a recent column in which you named some stocks where you came up with a current income almost as good as you could get on one- to two-year CDs. Would you show me some other ways to get a higher return from common stock?

A. This week I had a market letter come across my desk from the Chicago-based brokerage firm of Wayne Hummer & Co. that pointed out the bargains in value and income you could get in a number of closed-end investment funds. As you may know, the shares of closed-end funds sell on the market like other shares of stock and frequently can be bought for less than their net asset value.

The brokerage firm named three very high-quality funds.

One was Adams Express. It recently was selling at $15¼, yet if all of its holdings were liquidated, it would have yielded $18.20.

OVER THE past 10 years, the average annual dividend has provided a yield of 12.4 percent. The major holdings of Adams Express are IBM, GM, McDonalds, Coca-Cola, Merck and Wal-Mart.

Another similar investment is Lehman Corp. It was selling at $13, yet had an asset value of $15.77.

Over the last 10 years, its dividends have provided an average return of 13.7 percent on net assets. This fund's major holdings are IBM, Digital Equipment, Philip Morris, ITT Corp., K mart Corp. and Marion Labs. This fund emphasizes growth more than the other two funds.

THE THIRD suggestion was Tri-Continental. This is the biggest closed-end fund. It was selling at $22⅝ and had a net asset value of $27.11. Its major objectives are long-term appreciation and growth in income.

Its largest holdings are Boeing, Time, Disney, GTE, Ford, Deere and AT&T. Its dividend average over the last 10 years has been 13.6 percent of net assets.

These funds do not always trade as such substantial discounts, but if you watch them for periods when they are out of favor, you may get an excellent value. As you can see from their major holdings, they all stress quality.

Thomas O'Hara of Bloomfield Hills welcomes your questions and comments but will answer them only through this column. Snooty help can impact sales focus: small business

Mary DiPaolo

Small business retailers, beware. Your employees may be exhibiting "snob syndrome," a malady found in those who deal with the public in establishments known for their upscale image and clientele. When employees begin to play judge and jury with every customer who walks through your doors, you stand to lose a great deal over the long term.

Anyone who has patronized a posh store without being dressed for it knows what I'm talking about. "I remember the time a friend and I went shopping for purses," says one Oakland County business owner. "We were dressed in our jeans, so nobody wanted to wait on us. Instead the salespeople were fawning over some woman who was trying to decide on a scarf, and here we were, ready to spend at least a few hundred dollars between the two of us. Needless to say, we bought the purses somewhere else."

What causes a salesperson to take on the role of snob as part of his or her daily dealings with customers?

"I think salespeople who act that way are very insecure, generally speaking," said Catherine Kasten, a Plymouth resident and self-employed computer specialist. "If these people are gossips by nature, then it isn't surprising to see them judging customers they know nothing about."

Business owners and managers who have received complaints about snooty sales personnel should always treat these types of incidents seriously. "If the manager or owner doesn't seem to care or doesn't act on the complaint immediately, you've got to question where they're at in terms of their own attitudes and behaviors," Kasten said. "Whenever I've had problems and found the management to be uncooperative or apathetic, I make a point to warn friends about the business and how it operates."

No business stands to benefit by hiring or retaining employees who take it upon themselves to judge the "right" from the "wrong" customers. Every customer should be treated with the same amount of respect and service regardless of the size or nature of the sale.

Next week, we will discuss what can be done to deal with employees and co-workers who instigate such problems.

Mary DiPaolo is the owner of MarkeTrends, a Farmington Hills-based business consulting firm. She is also producer and host of the cable television series, "Chamber Perspectives."

IT'S AUGUST, 1550. The King and Queen have invited you to feast with them and you're getting ready.

Remember, it's not every day one is invited to dine with the King and Queen. Don't be late. But don't be the first nobility over the drawbridge, either.

And gentlemen, be careful you don't miss that last button on your doublet (vest). Make sure your skirt is straight (yes skirt), and that your jerkin (ancient suit coat) has been to the cleaners recently.

Ladies, allow yourself plenty of time to get ready. Remember, it takes more than three hours for a lady to be properly coiffured and dressed in a bum roll (big is better), corset (at the same time - smaller is better, too), petticoats, floor-length skirt with hoop, bodice with detachable sleeves, stomacher (outer bodice), collar and hat.

MOVING FORWARD from 1550 to 1989. There is still occasional debate on what one should wear and how long it should take to dress. But you can come as you are to the 10th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival and enjoy the general merrymaking and, of course, the authentic costumes worn by more than 400 craftspeople and entertainers.

Barbara Logan of Royal Oak, a former Farmington Hills resident, is marketing director for the festival group, which is housed in a small, downtown Birmingham office. "People really aren't sure what the Renaissance Festival is," she said. "But the brave go and have a great time. Our exit polls indicate 96 percent of our guests will return. And they tell their friends. Last year, over our seven weekends, 130,000 people attended the festival."

The Renaissance festival is an accurate re-creation of a 16th century European village during a harvest celebration. Continuous entertainment (merrymaking) fills the nine-acre festival site on a wooded clearing in Holly.

The village is peopled by jesters, servers, wenches, dancers, mimes, magicians, jugglers, puppeteers, minstrels, knights, lords and all manner of townsfolk. Craftspeople from pickle sellers to glass blowers to clothesmakers offer their wares for sale. But to be truly accurate, the "villagers" need to look the part.

"With over four hundred costumed participants, you can imagine the cost involved," said Logan. "That's why, except for the principles, everyone provides their own clothing."

A COSTUME can cost the Renaissancer $75 to $300, depending on the degree of elaborateness. And also depending on the character to be portrayed, because in Renaissance times, as one's social station rose, more elaborate fashion was dictated. Keeping up with the Joneses originated in the fashion world of the Renaissance.

"As the middle class developed, they wanted to look like and started to wear the fashions of the wealthy," said Laurie Danforth of Rochester, one of the costume designers for this year's festival. "Many folks back then put almost their entire fortune into the clothes and jewelry they wore."

Danforth is a free-lance costume designer whose work has appeared at the Music Hall and Attic Theater and in the Oakland University production of "Amadeus." She also has been head of the costuming department for the Detroit Institute of Arts' Wassail meal.

"We want to be as authentic as possible. And since patterns really don't exist for this type of clothing, I research extensively," Danforth said.

Two costumes she worked on for the festival are for upper-class characters and have taken an average of 60 hours each to complete. "Working with clothing of this period is especially difficult because of the thickness involved for an accurate look. Textiles were crude back then and without the benefit of central heating, thicker clothes were a necessity," she said.

EVEN MORE important to the people of the time, Danforth explained, was that they didn't want to look as if they had to work. Thus, the more layers of clothing they wore, the more money it was thought they had.

Costuming for the Renaissance Festival has to be extremely heavy duty in construction because it takes a lot of wear and tear. Danforth favors modern materials like cottons and polyesters.

"As with anything else, budget determines many priorities. In theater, upholstery fabrics are used for their thick look, but they're heavy and not all that comfortable to wear. And the festival people wanted the right look but the garments had to be washable. I went a bit overboard on these. They're some of my best work. I just wanted them right. I made undergarments like the bum roll (makes hips look larger) and a collar and hat on my own time because when the actress steps into this, I want her to feel the part. It's just great seeing an actor get so excited about his or her role when they get into an outfit."

The jester wasn't kidding when he recommended costume designer Mary Musinski of Detroit to the Renaissance Festival management.

"It's true. I'm on a referral from the jester," said Musinski. She runs her own clothing design and production studio in downtown Detroit where she manufactures a clothing line for women that is distributed locally. Her work has appeared in the movies "The Rosary Murders," "Collision Course" and in smaller production companies around town.

MUSINSKI WORKS primarily in middle-class clothing for the Renaissance, although one of her favorite costumes she has done for the festival is for royalty, the Queen Mother.

Eighty percent of this costume is older drapery fabric, which I've lined with more contemporary fabric for comfort," she said.

She finds much of the fabric she uses for period costumes at going-out-of-business sales, treasure shops and garage sales.

"Aside from the challenge of making a well-built garment, one that can stand up close and live scrutiny, I'm dealing with limited quantities on some of these older fabrics," she said.

The Queen Mother costume took 30 hours to construct.

Musinski also dons costume to work at the Renaissance Festival in the Face Painting and tattooing booth.

"In the Renaissance period, tattooing was very popular with royalty and took the form of dragons, unicorns, hearts, flowers or rainbows. Of course, our tattoos are just paintons. We also do faces in animal styles. Kids love it. I look forward to painting a lot of happy faces every year," she said.

'Many folks back then put almost their entire fortune into the clothes and jewelry they wore.'

Estey honored as top athlete in '89

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Jill Estey, during her athletic career at Plymouth Salem, earned All-America recognition in soccer and was an all-state selection in basketball. She was a major reason for Salem's success in those sports the last three years. Estey will continue playing basketball as a scholarship athlete at the University of Illinois.

She was standout in classroom, too

By Dan O'Meara

Throughout her high school experience, Jill Estey's name has been synonymous with success.

She starred for three years on outstanding girls basketball teams at Plymouth Salem.

During four seasons of playing soccer for the Rocks, she was the premier player in a program that reached the pinnacle of success.

She also starred in numerous facets of interscholastic life that weren't as obvious, most notable among them the classroom.

In recognition of her overall quest for excellence and achievement in those endeavors, Estey has been selected the 1989 Observer Athlete of the Year in the Plymouth-Canton community.

"I HAD A great four years," said Estey, who stayed active athletically in the winter by playing indoor soccer. Besides holding down a 3.8 grade-point average with a tough class load, she also found time to serve on the student council, including its executive forum, and participate in the National Honor Society.

"Hey, I wouldn't have it any other way," she said. "You become so used to it, you can't imagine not doing all those things and being so involved.

"There's always so much extra time in the day. The more busy I am the more I budget my time."

Estey, who graduated in the top 5 percent of her class, plans to use her academic gifts to study aeronautical engineering at the University of Illinois, which awarded her an athletic scholarship in return for her future contribution to the women's basketball team.

She plans to emphasize the spacecraft (as opposed to aircraft) side of the industry, and an eventual position with NASA would fit her career plans. Estey has the pioneering spirit that coincides with President Bush's renewed interest in the space program and goal of putting a man on Mars.

"That's where I think our future is — in space," Estey said. "We're going to run out of space on earth, and that's where we're going to be living in the next 100 years."

DESPITE THE added demands of playing a collegiate sport, Estey is committed to maintaining the same academic standards.

"They're a bigger role than basketball," she said. "In basketball, my career is over in four years. It can't go on. Academics are your life, and whatever you do in college is going to get you your job, not what you do on the basketball floor."

It's safe to assume basketball, as it was the past four years, will remain a focal point in Estey's life.

She was the starting point guard at Salem for three years and will play that position for the Fighting Illini. But the 5-foot-4 Estey doesn't assume the

Bronco-buster LaRoche settles MSHL title issue

hockey

J.P. LaRoche will be a Bronco in several weeks, but Tuesday night he was a Bulldog.

And the Bronco-to-be was responsible for bringing down the Broncos in the Metro Summer Hockey League championship game at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

LaRoche, who will enter Western Michigan University on a hockey scholarship this fall, scored the winning goal 56 seconds into overtime to give the Bulldogs a 4-3, sudden-death victory over the Broncos, the MSHL's regular-season winners.

The 1989 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School flipped a backhanded shot past Bronco goaltender Jim Moule for the game winner. It was a difficult feat since LaRoche practically had his back to the net and, with two defenders closing ranks, was about to be hauled down.

"After (teammate Mike) Jorgensen fed me from the side, I had nothing else to do but backhand it," LaRoche said.

"IT WAS EITHER that or try to do a spin move toward the boards, but that would've taken too much time. In overtime, you pretty much have to go for the shots."

That was all part of the Bulldog strategy, according to coach Rick Mullen.

"Most times (LaRoche) turns around and goes to his forehand," Mullen said. "We talked about just getting the puck to the net and making something happen."

The Bulldogs became the second team in as many years to wear the Cinderella label to a successful conclusion in the MHSL playoffs. The Bulldogs finished third in the Bakes Conference, while the Broncos won the Eagle Conference with an 8-2-1 record and had a league-leading 17 points.

Ironically, Broncos coach Dave Cyplik, who was filling in for player/coach Alan Carnes, was on the opposite side last year when the Wolverines came from nowhere to win the league title.

Bulldogs defensemen Frank Mariani and Doug Tucker had better luck, however. They played for Cyplik last year when the Wolverines beat the Wildcats 9-8 in overtime, and they were on the winning team again.

"DOUG TUCKER skated over to our bench just before they dropped the puck (to start the overtime) and said 'This seems familiar,'" Cyplik said.

"If you remember last year, we were 1-9-1 and ended up winning the playoffs. The playoffs are what count. It doesn't matter where you finished in the regular season."

There'll be lots of playing time for SC cagers

The Schoolcraft College women's basketball team will leave on a bus this morning at 8 a.m. and arrive in London, Ontario 2½ hours later to play in the Ontario Provincial Tourney.

Game time today against the London All-Stars is 1 p.m. Schoolcraft also is scheduled to play later today at 6 p.m.

Sounds like a demanding schedule. Not so, says coach Jack Grenan.

"We're taking 10 people so nobody will be able to complain about playing time," Grenan said. "It'll be their chance to shine. They can sleep while I drive the bus to London."

Because Schoolcraft doesn't start its regular season until December, Grenan isn't expecting a whole lot out of his team, the only U.S. junior college invited to the four-team tournament. The other teams include the Ontario All-Star team and a team from British Columbia.

Grenan said Schoolcraft has spent the last two weeks preparing for the tourney. Among the leading returnees are Plymouth Salem graduate Barb Krug, a center, and forward Lisa Deplanche. Tracey Osborne is the leading 3-point shooter returning.

"With people working and on vacation it's been kind of haphazard, based on what I expect," said Grenan of recent practice sessions. "We're nowhere near ready, but we don't need to be ready until November. I just have to bite my lip and remind myself that we have nothing to lose."

Buff Whelan survives long day

baseball

Rey Fracassi, the manager for Duffy's Plumbing, may have summed up best the National Amateur Baseball Federation's College Division regional last weekend at Livonia's Ford Field.

"This is the most screwed-up draw of any tournament that I've been associated with," he said.

The eventual winner of the five-team tournament, Buff Whelan Chevrolet, won in a peculiar way.

The Detroit Adray League representative played a triple-header on Sunday, capped off by a 9-7 victory, a game which inched past the stroke of midnight, against Livonia Collegiate Baseball League representative Hines Park Lincoln/Mercury.

Whelan manager Dr. Joe Arends, whose team advances to the NABF finals today in Dayton, Ohio, said, "I've never had a longer day of baseball.

"I'm sure tired after 27 innings of ball, but can you imagine how these kids feel? But I'm not terribly surprised. The NABF has never been a highly organized group."

Sunday started with three survivors — Whelan, Hines Park and Duffy's (the other LCBL representative).

After taking a 13-2 pounding Saturday afternoon from Whelan, Duffy's came back in Sunday's opener to hand the Detroit squad its first loss of the double-elimination tournament, 8-1.

Stuart Hirschman, a 17-year-old pickup by Fracassi, threw eight strong innings to earn the victory. Jason Hicks came on in the eighth to finish up as the Detroiters were held to just two hits.

Duffy's collected 12 hits, led by Ron Makowski's 3-for-3 effort. Mike Kaczmarek, Todd Fracassi and Lee Tappy, all from Observerland high schools, added two hits apiece. Shortstop Steve Michelz knocked in a pair of runs.

BUT AFTER reviewing the NABF tournament bylaws, Duffy's was forced to play Whelan again in the second game on Sunday.

The reason? Both Whelan and Duffy's had already been given byes, while Hines Park, which had been scraping by in the loser's bracket, was entitled to its first bye on Sunday.

"We play Buff Whelan three straight times and never once play Hines Park, a team in our own league . . . tell me that makes sense," said Fracassi.

In Sunday's second game, Whelan eliminated Duffy's in a squeaker, 6-5, as relief pitcher Joe Skaisgir came on in the eighth inning to slam the door on Duffy's.

Ron Kurlinski, a pickup from Little Caesars, was the losing pitcher.

Michelz and Dave Crespi combined for four of Duffy's seven hits, while Tom Yorkison and Dan Cimini combined for four of Whelan's nine hits.

With temperatures plunging as evening fell, the final showdown pitted Hines Park against Whelan, the winner going to Dayton.

Whelan outlasted Hines Park in the slugfest, 9-7, as Craig Mayes, Dave Arends and Yorkison each collected three hits off Hines Park starter and loser Brett Loomis, who turned in a gutsy eight-inning performance.

THE KEY BLOW of the game came in the eighth when Marty Moraniec's blooper to right field dropped in for a two-run single.

Hines Park right fielder Dennis Szczechowski nearly made a spectacular catch on the play, but couldn't hold onto the ball after flipping over.

Terry Woods, a sophomore pitcher from the University of Michigan, came on in relief of Skaisgir in the fifth to pick up the victory.

Skaisgir was sent to the showers when Canton High senior Mike Culver ripped a two-run homer over the right field fence in the fourth. (He later added a double.) Kevin Learned singled in a pair of runs in the ninth, but Woods held off Hines Park to preserve the victory.

"Woods threw 85 pitches on Friday and another 60 today, so these guys got a little tired, but our relievers did the job when they had to," Arends said.

Whelan, noted as a hard-hitting team, finished fourth in the Detroit League with a 20-13 record.

"We were very respectable this year, but last year we took our lumps," Arends said. "We led the Adray League in home runs. Today the wind held up a few and this is a big park.

"But the important thing for me is that the kids have to have fun. Summer baseball is supposed to be fun, and it's my job to make sure that we laugh and joke around. Too many of these kids came to me from other teams and said, 'Coach, I wasn't having fun and everything was too serious.' That's why I'm in coaching."

WHELAN OPENED first-round tournament play on Friday with an 11-8 triumph over Hines Park.

Woods worked until the sixth, when he was relieved by Kevin Knoche.

Hines Park used two pitchers, including lefty Derek Darkowski of Michigan State (he took the loss), and Randy Buchler, the right-hander from LCBL champion Walter's Appliance.

Catcher Dan Niemiec slammed a pair of homers — a two-run shot in the second and a solo shot in the sixth — each in a losing cause. Jeremy Krol (Garden City) added two hits and Chris Sisler knocked in a pair of runs.

Cimini, a junior at the University of Detroit, went 4-for-4 for the winners.

In the other first-round game Friday, Duffy's outslugged Sterling Heights, 13-7, as Kaczmarek (Franklin High and Henry Ford CC), Joel Mussat and Mike Siwajek each collected two hits. Makowski and Brad Bush contributed two RBI apiece.

Jason Hicks, the winning pitcher, worked five innings before giving way to Kurlinski and Joe Jentzer (save).

The first game on Saturday was probably the most memorable of the tournament as Hines Park ousted the Northern Michigan Blues in 10 innings, 11-10.

HINES PARK trailed 9-0 after six innings, 10-3 after seven and 10-6 going into the ninth.

After scoring one in the ninth, Hines Park loaded the bases against Blues starter Justin Burke.

But a flyout to left (the second of the inning) turned into an adventure for the Blues, who managed to give up the eighth, ninth and 10th runs on the play, thanks to three consecutive throwing errors.

Niemiec, Szczewchowski and Joel Riggs all scored on the miscue, which was reminiscent of a scene from the "Bad News Bears."

Hines Park won it in the 10th when John Bonham walked, stole second and third, and scored when Culver fanned. Bonham raced home when the Blues catcher fired the ball to first.

Hines Park used three pitchers — Steve Witt, Bob Files and Loomis (the winner).

Burke worked all 10 in a losing cause. He held Hines Park scoreless over the first six.

Sisler, the Canton High grad from Kansas City Community College, knocked in four runs, while Riggs added two hits.

Chris Peck and Jay Martin each collected three hits for the Petoskey-based team.

IN THE SECOND game Saturday, Whelan blasted Duffy's in the first of three meetings, 13-2, as Moraniec cracked a two-run homer and Steve Mazzola added a solo shot.

Jim Vervaecke worked all seven innings in the mercy-rule shortened affair, scattering five hits.

Steve Hirschman, the other half of the Howell brother combination, started and took the loss for Duffy's.

Kaczmarek, Duffy's top hitter in the tourney, went 3-for-4.

And in Saturday's final game of the day, Hines Park ousted Sterling Heights, 12-6, as shortstop Steve Malgay and Culver each went 3-for-3. Niemiec and Sean Maloney each knocked in a pair of runs.

Bill Bannon, the Livonian from Dearborn Divine Child High, worked the first five innings before Files, the Salem High product, came on to pick up the win.

After that Hines Park caught a break, getting a bye while Duffy's and Whelan battled twice on Sunday.

But the wait for Hines Park turned out to be in vain as Whelan walked away with the first-place trophy and a trip to Dayton.

Walter's Appliance, the Livonia League champs, opens tournament play Saturday in Johnstown, Pa., as 22 teams battle for the All-American Amateur Baseball Association tournament title.

Broncos goalie Jim Moule attempts to cover the puck as teammate Mike Kneiding slides across the goalmouth in Tuesday's final. The Broncos won the regular-season title but were runners-up in the playoffs.

Bulldogs skate to MSHL title

The Bulldogs jumped in front with a pair of late, first-period goals, but the Broncos owned the second and tied the score. The teams matched goals in the third period, with Jorgensen getting the tying goal with six minutes left in regulation time.

In the first period, Mark Beaufait scored off the rebound from Mark Johnson's shot, and Jorgensen made it 2-0 with only nine seconds left in the period when he lifted the puck over Moule's right shoulder.

John Potts' slapshot put the Broncos on the board in the second, and the Broncos, after having a goal disallowed because of a high-sticking penalty, later capitalized on a 5-on-3 situation to tie.

The Bulldogs had a man off for holding and then received a bench minor for being too vociferous about a disagreement with the officials. While holding the two-man advantage, Mike Stahley's wrist shot made it 2-2.

"THOSE PENALTIES took us out of the flow, and we couldn't get any consistency going," Mullen said. "When you're killing penalties, it's hard to keep everyone in the flow of the game. Players have a tendency to sit too long."

Potts scored his second goal and gave the Broncos their only lead at 11:11 in the third, drilling a centering pass from Stahley on the power play.

"I thought the tide had turned in our favor," said Cyplik of the situation before Jorgensen countered with his second goal on a Bulldog power play.

"I thought we had a good grip on the game, but they came back and turned it around — and that's what makes a winning team. They won it on a kinda fluke goal, but so did we last year."

LaRoche said the Bulldogs' late-season surge was due in part to having a set roster with all of their key players. Jorgensen, for instance, had been at the Olympic Sports Festival recently and missed some games.

"We just got playoff fever," LaRoche said. "We wanted to win. We want to go to Chicago and see what we can do there."

Traditionally, the MSHL champion plays the winner of a sister league in Chicago the following weekend, but MSHL Commissioner A.J. Baker said the status of that inter-city series is uncertain this year.

transition to college ball will be an easy one.

"Everyone is asking 'Do you expect to start?' but I'm not thinking that at all," she said. "My major goal the first week of school is to come in in perfect condition. I want to be at the same level (as the veteran players) condition wise."

Estey is staying in shape by participating in open gym at Oakland Community College, and she was on the Western Wayne Wildcats team that finished fourth in the AAU under-19 national tournament last month.

THAT WAS good experience for Estey, playing against some of the other top college-bound talent in the country.

"That showed me my game is still improving. I wasn't plateauing," said Estey, who was one of the team's top scorers despite her playmaking position.

"The best part was that my college coaches got to see me play. When they saw me up here (in December) my shot was off. I was in a major slump. I was glad they got to see. Hey, this is the girl we recruited."

In three years of varsity ball at Salem, Estey played on teams that had a combined record of 68-9. In her sophomore and junior seasons, the Rocks were Western Lakes Activities Association champs and advanced to the Final Four in Class A each time.

"It would have been nice to get Miss Basketball," she said. "It was something in the back of my mind, but it's not something that brings me down.

"For a team goal, I wish we could have won a state championship in basketball — if only for (coach) Fred (Thomann) because he wanted to win it so bad."

'The whole team takes on the personality of the seniors. I realized everything I do has an effect on the rest of the team. I knew the other players would be asking 'Gee, is she taking this drill seriously?' If they see you are, they will, too.'
— Jill Estey
athlete of the year

With the Class of '88 went all-stater Dena Head, now a star for NCAA champion Tennessee, and a strong supporting cast, leaving Estey as the only returning starter and the obvious heart of a new and younger team.

ESTEY, WHO finished eighth in the Miss Basketball balloting as a senior, and her teammates made the Doubting Thomases take notice. Estey assumed the role of team leader and became the scoring leader, and Salem had yet another fine season, going 18-5 and winning a district title.

"I told Fred one day 'It's so much different when you're a senior,'" she said. "When you're an underclassman and you come to practice, you look to see what the seniors are doing. If they work hard, you do, too, because you don't want them to get down on you.

"The whole team takes on the personality of the seniors. I realized everything I do has an effect on the rest of the team. I knew the other players would be asking 'Gee, is she taking this drill seriously?' If they see you are, they will, too."

The fact Estey's future lies in basketball is rather ironic since she achieved her highest honor playing soccer, the sport in which she was twice an All-America selection.

As a sophomore, she had a school record 32 goals and 28 assists was named the No. 1 player in the state, leading Salem to the Class A championship in June of 1987.

The Rocks were unable to duplicate that success in the next two years but still had outstanding, state-ranked teams. Estey, one of the all-time greats in Michigan, bade a tearful farewell to soccer following Salem's loss to Plymouth Canton in the district tournament last June.

"I'M SAD AND I'm happy," Estey said. "I'm happy because we won the state, but I'm sad because I know I'm not going to play it again.

"I wish I could play both sports (in college) but it's so hard. I wish I didn't have to choose between the two."

True to the nature that allows her to gladly take on new challenges, Estey made the transition from forward — a glamour position she had played throughout her career — to midfielder in her senior year. Estey's goal production fell off to 13, but her contributions and importance to the team were manifested in ways that couldn't be measured statistically. Still, she finished her career with 88 goals and 75 assists.

"I told Mr. J (coach Ken Johnson) to put me wherever he wanted and I'd play hard," Estey said. "I loved playing halfback and I had as much fun as I ever did."

Marauders aided by unusual source in Great Lakes finale

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

There were plenty of nifty passes made Sunday in the Great Lakes Men's Soccer League title game played between the Livonia Marauders and Bud Light.

But the most important assist of the chilly night at Bicentennial Park came from a rock.

John Brennan's seemingly harmless shot from 30 yards out late in the game hit a stone, took a bad hop and bounced over the head of Bud Light goalkeeper Mark West, giving the Marauders a 3-2 win and the Clarke Cup.

Brennan, a Dearborn resident who plays at Oakland University, was accepting congratulations afterward when teammate Jim Rhoads joked, "the assist goes to a rock."

BRENNAN NODDED.

"I didn't think it was going in, that's for sure," Brennan said. "I was just trying to create something."

The bad hop wasn't the only misfortune suffered by Bud Light. Bud lost Carl Hopfinger late in the first half because of a red-card infraction, and that meant the team had to play short a man the rest of the match.

Light, which scored the game's first goal, was able to move the ball beyond midfield several times late in the game despite being shorthanded.

"The red card definitely hurts," Bud Light coach Kevin Fiebernitz said. "It was a hard-fought match. There's nothing we can do about it. We were a little unlucky today.

"I still felt we carried the play after the card. We had opportunities. These two teams are evenly matched."

THIS WAS THE first year the Marauders have won both a league regular-season title and the Clarke Cup, which signifies the playoff champion. The Marauders, who were the defending Clarke Cup champions, were 8-0-1 during the regular season.

Defender/midfielder Dan O'Shea is the team's elder statesman in terms of experience, although he's only 24.

"This is without a doubt the best Marauders' team I've played on," said O'Shea, who played at Oakland University and Livonia Franklin. "And Bud Light's the strongest (GLMSL) team I've ever played against. It was a really rough game.

"They played harder once they went down a man. We tended to push forward more thinking we should be ahead but they'll catch you flat-footed with their good forwards."

Chris Larson, one of Light's most dangerous forwards, tied the score at 2-2 midway through the second half when he headed Chris Koppi's corner kick past Marauders' goalie Colin Jex.

THE TEAMS were tied 1-1 at halftime but former Livonia Stevenson standout Gary Mexicotte gave the Marauders a 2-1 lead early in the second half.

Bud Light took the game's first lead on a goal by Jay Ruby, but the Marauders' Steve Morell evened the count minutes later, converting a crossing pass from Bob Neuman.

Although the Marauders finished the season undefeated, coach John Petterson said his team learned midway through that a team can go only so far on talent alone.

"This team was the most talented I've had, but we learned a lesson midway through that talent alone doesn't win games," he said. "We were in a slump the last three or four games and said 'This is it.' We decided we were going to shut our mouths and play hard."

TROY COBRAS UPSET: The Marauders received a scare last Thursday in the semifinal against the Troy Cobras, and were fortunate, perhaps, to advance to the finals. The Marauders and Cobras were locked in a scoreless tie Thursday after two overtime periods when the game was called because of darkness.

League rules state the game must be re-played the next day, said Dan Bowman, the neutral GLMSL representative for the semifinal game.

The Cobras had to forfeit Friday's re-scheduled game, however, because several players were attending the wedding of teammate Joe Moreau.

Cobra player Walt Kliza said his team told Petterson, who is the president and registrar of the league, that they could field a team Saturday.

But Bowman had jurisdiction of the game because of Petterson's involvement in the playoffs. Bowman decided the rule book takes precedence.

"It's not a very fair way to determine who goes to the final," said Kliza, a 1981 Livonia Bentley graduate. "A semifinal game should be decided on the field, not around a table — you know, politics.

"We're all very upset. I wouldn't have had any regrets if we would have lost with the winner going to the finals. In this situation that wasn't the case. But I respect the Marauder players."

Eye for beauty

Art-oriented office design suits surgeons

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

Art sends few stronger messages than those in the offices of three doctors specializing in cosmetic surgery in Bingham Farms. It is reassuring to find that all three have eye for color, design, line and aesthetic values of all kinds of art.

Drs. E. Jan Beekhuis and Jeffrey J. Colton recently added a partner, Michael F. Milan, and doubled their office space. With the help of Susan Monroe architect and Vicki Beekhuis, interior designer, the offices were rennovated and expanded from 2,600 to 5,200 square feet.

Architect and designer succeeded in balancing opposites — sophistication and warmth; and privacy (when necessary) with a feeling of openness and light.

The waiting room is luxurious and contemporary in style with polished marble floors and carpeting in a deep shade of raisin. The color theme throughout is black, white and raisin with touches of dark brown.

"There is a lot of very dark and very light," said Vicki Beekhuis. The reception area in the elegant, softly lighted, waiting room has been greatly expanded. From the new counter, there is a wide open view of the inner offices with sunlight filtered through the new glass brick wall panels and colorful works of art on white walls in the hall and offices beyond. The whole area sends a welcoming message of friendliness and good taste.

READILY VISIBLE from several vantage points are a framed Navaho piece which Colton smilingly referred to as a "physician's desk reference for Navaho people" a Margie Hughto painting. Colton said the medicine man carries these paintings on cloth with him when he goes to visit a patient. He unrolls them on the ground to refresh his memory, each has symbols and instructions in sign language on what to do about a particular malady. Hughto's painting on handmade paper, a trademark of this nationally known artist, author and teacher, is light, refreshing and definitely uplifting.

From a large empty area (to expand the offices), Beekhuis and Monroe created a hall with examining rooms and an office along the outside wall. The hallway wall is staggered glass brick panels which give the area an artistic dimension that a flat straight wall never could while providing privacy and lots of pleasant light for the small rooms.

The wall design, Beekhuis said, "Allows the light to move in and out." At the end of the hall is a large striking, abstract painting by Ray Frost Fleming of Birmingham and along the straight sided hall wall is a long, rectangular, framed work of art in brilliantly colored and sculpted handmade paper by New Mexico artist, David McCarthy. Colors and design lead the viewer's eye in a most appealing way.

The lighting in the long hall is small, low voltage, incandescent track lighting, similar to that used in many art galleries. Beekhuis said it lights the art well and provides drama.

Another Hughto work is around the corner in one of the smaller rooms. The art in the examining rooms is pleasant, undisturbing scenes — nothing about food, since many of the patients are there for liposuction.

EACH DOCTOR'S OFFICE, however, is highly individual and says a lot about the occupant. Dr. Beekhuis's office contains artifacts which he has brought back from his world travels. Colton's, done by interior designer Sheldon Scott a number of years ago and still holding up beautifully, has a wall display of maskS from Indonesia, Bali and Africa.

"I have an interest in masks," Colton said, "I'm interested in the features and the way different cultures see themselves." He pointed out the broken nose on one of the African masks.

Beekhuis said Milan's office is going to be done in an Amish style with plain, handsome pieces with a handcrafted look to them. Colton and Dr. Beekhuis share an interest in art. Colton admires paintings by an artist which his partner found in Australia that have colorful, almost childlike quality.

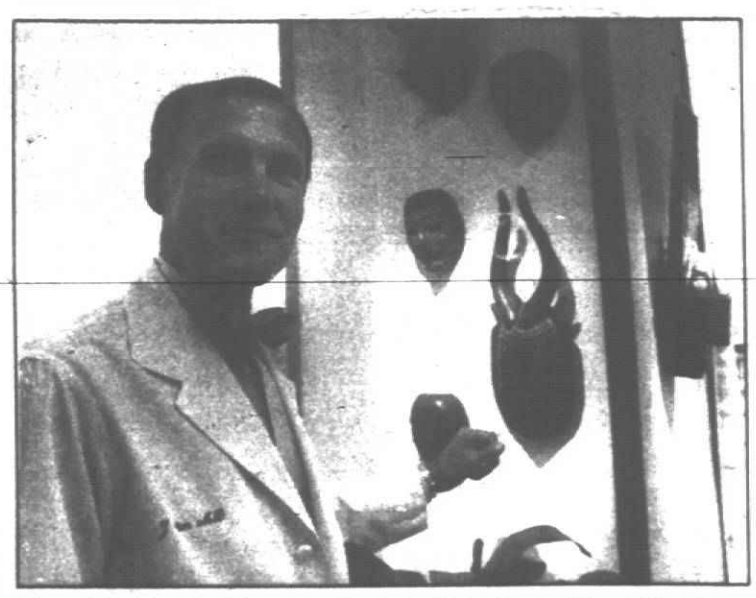
"Both of us seem to like similar kinds of things," said Colton.

Architect and interior designer found the doctors receptive to their ideas to take out walls, create interesting spaces, heighten the drama, make the offices sophisticated and still keep the atmosphere pleasant, open and friendly.

Susan Monroe, architect, and Vicki Beekhuis, interior designer, pause by the new glass brick paneled wall which separates private offices from the reception area. The wall is both functional and aesthetically appealing. At the end of the hall is a painting by Ray Frost Fleming of Birmingham.

Staff photos by Jerry Zolynsky

Staff members Carole Higley, left, and Nanette Rose, stop by the new, larger reception desk to talk over a schedule. Behind is a Navaho art work, originally meant to be a medicine man's helper, left, and a painting by Margie Hughto.



Dr. Jeffrey Colton has a collection of masks on the wall of his office. Not only does he like them as an art form, he also appreciates what they show about the development of bone structure and features from one culture to another.

Auto art sets record

The art which was on display and for sale as part of the Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook last weeekend, set new records in interest as well as prices realized.

Tom Hale, chairman of the invitational art exhibition, said he was delighted with the response from the public.

At the Saturday evening auction, the original painting by Pete Maier of Buck Hill Falls, Pa. for this year's poster brought a record $31,000. That's $6,000 more than was paid for the original painting for the 1988 Concours. Maier's finely, detailed, egg tempera painting of the 1929 Packard convertible parked at the front entrance of Meadow Brook Hall is 48 by 64 inches. In the handsome frame which Maier made and painted, it weighs 75 pounds. The car pictured belongs to metro area car collector Dick Kuhn and, as of Saturday evening, the painting does too.

Works by the other artists participating in the invitational brought the evening's total to $88,500 in about 40 minutes of fast bidding. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Meadow Brook Hall.

Hale noted there were presidents of four major automotive companies present at the Saturday evening event as well as widely recognized art collectors. He said gross proceeds from the entire art show and sale were $130,000.

Hale said he was as happy about the recognition which this kind of art is receiving as he was about the record prices, probably more so. Participating artists, considered among the best in this field, came from many parts of the United States and Canada as well as West Germany.

Benton—all-American as apple pie

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

How could Thomas Hart Benton be labeled regional? He's so all-American — so in love with the cities, the rural landscape, the history, the customs — most of all the people, the kids, the old men, the gangsters and bootleggers, the movie crowd and the pretty young women.

Yet that's the label he continues to have — he's a regionalist artist. He may have been born and raised in Neosha, Mo., but he studied in Paris and lived on the east coast a good part of his life.

The exhibition of his work at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Oct. 15 is a colorful, stimulating walk through Benton's development as an artist as well as through American history. He planned to do a series of 75 large paintings, "The Explorers and Adventurers of Early America," but grew tired of it after 18 paintings deciding he would rather paint real life scenes.

One large gallery in the exhibition is filled with these strong, aggressive works. Yet the paintings that seem most alive are those filled with colorful characters, busily engrossed in the tasks and pleasures that make up their daily lives. It wouldn't be a bit surprising to hear strains of "Ameri-

Thomas Hart Benton's painting at left is titled "Engineer's Dream," but maybe should have been "Engineer's Nightmare." It is oil and tempera on canvas, 1931.

Travel jaunts between bookends

Victoria Diaz

I'VE taken a lot of trips this summer. I've explored the Great Smokey Mountains, a number of bizarre bazaars in the Far East, the sidewalks of New York, the road to Morocco, and the shore of Lake Superior. I've even soaked up some of the atmosphere in Australia's rugged outback.

No, I'm not a bit tired. And not once did I have to worry about jet lag, lost luggage, missed connections, or anything like the daunting revenge of Montezuma. It was all highly enjoyable and, financially speaking, set me back less than 50 bucks. I made all the trips via what is really the next best thing to being there: marvelous travel books — some of which I purchased, most of which I found on the shelves at my local library.

Travel books do several things for me. From the snug harbor of my favorite at-home reading spot, they not only spirit me away to places I've visited often, but perhaps never "seen" so clearly as when I experienced them on the printed page. The books also, of course, have the potential to shape a part of my future, in a sense. Might I someday find myself strolling the exotic streets of Tangier, traversing Patagonia, or haggling for bargains in the markets of Katmandu, all because I encountered some intriguing words written about them once upon a time? You bet.

ONE OF MY MOST delightful summertime jaunts was taken just recently, after I discovered Stephen W. Plumb's "The Streets Where They lived: A Walking Guide to the Residences of Famous New Yorkers" (Marlor Press, $12.95). "(This) is a record of the places in Manhattan Where the famous have lived in approximately the past 100 years," writes Plumb. "It aims to guide the reader, in a series of short walking tours, street-by-street, to the actual houses, apartments, and hotels where they have stayed."

The book, with a list of more than 400 addresses, including even a few bellonging to infamous gangsters, also contains a brief history of each celebrity's residency. If lifestyles of the famous are your thing, you'll want to keep this small paperback at hand the next time you hit the streets of Manhattan. If you're not particularly celebrity-struck, you can still enjoy it as a unique guide to a bit of American history.

For a more exotic journey, you may want to take a look a t "Worldwalk" (William Morrow & Co., $19.95), Steven M. Newman's recent account of his trip around the world — on foot. Newman, a 28-year-old journalist set out from his home in Bethal, Ohio in 1983, and returned there four years later, after having trekked to such farflung spots as Northern Ireland (where his dirty laundry was mistaken for a bomb), Morocco (where he was nearly done in by a mob of hustlers), Turkey (where he was jailed), Thailand (where he faced machete-wielding bandits on a long, lonely road one night), and beyond. Though Newman's prose is sometimes awkward, and his Pollyanna-like attitude grinds now and then, "Worldwalk" is still a grand adventure.

CLOSER TO HOME, try Jim DuFresne's "Michigan: Off the Beaten Path"(Globe Pequot Press, $8.95) to discover relatively-unfamiliar nooks, crannies, and points of interest in the Great Lakes State.

Examples: The Horton Bay General Store, near Charlevoix, which was a frequent haunt of the youthful Ernest Hemingway when he spent his boyhood summers in northwest Michigan. The store (which appeared in his famed short story, "Up in Michigan") was built in 1876 and looks very much the same today as it did then, except that now, even though it still operates as a general store, it is very much a preserved shrine to Hemingway.

Other Hemingway memorabilia can be found at the Little Traversc Historical Museum in Petoskey, which also houses displays devoted to Michigan writer, Bruce Catton, who grew up in nearby Benzonia. Among the Catton artifacts at the museum is the original manuscript of "A Stillness at Appomattox," for which Catton won the Pulitzer Prize in 1953.

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office. It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Look for harmonic contrast

all about color
Helen Diane Vincent

Q. We are planning a formal Christmas wedding which will take place in the late afternoon. We both like the idea of the dramatic contrast of black and white for the bridesmaids' gowns. But this combination would require I also wear white, which makes me look washed out. I'm open to other colors but do not want to look too unconventional. Any ideas?

A. Nothing can match the sharp, dramatic contrast of black and white. But there are other colors that can lend themselves to harmonic contrasts while flattering skin tones. Here's one color scheme to consider: Select a pale apricot for your gown and veil and have that color coordinated with a very deep, warm red in a two-tone combination for the matron of honor and the bridesmaids' gowns. The red I'm referring to relates to the apricot family and is not the harsh crimson.

Be careful to select a silhouette and fabrics for your gown that are subtle and flattering. The principle is basic: the more color you introduce into the traditional gown, the more careful you have to be with the design and materials. If you choose satin, for example, then soften the shiny quality with grosgrain ribbon and lace. Accessorize with pearls and not the hard-cut stone jewelry. The hardest accent should be your diamond. Your bouquet should be a blend of pale peach, rose and yellow flowers. In combination they will create an optical mist that will blend with the pale apricot of your gown.

Whoever is giving you away can wear a standard black tuxedo, but the groom and the ushers have an option of wearing very dark gray tuxedos. If your mother and future mother-in-law want to contribute to the overall color scheme, have them choose colors for their dresses in the either very pale or dark blue-green colors.

The bridesmaids' two-tone gowns and the groom's and ushers' dark gray will accent and frame your presence not only for the wedding itself, but for the photographs of the event. Pale apricot will flatter you more than stark white, and the bridesmaids will have gowns they can wear for other festive occasions.

Q. I have been attracted to a black, green and blue iridescent bedspread that I would like to use in my bedroom. I know it will help me achieve a sophisticated look but I'm not entirely sure how to harmonize other colors for the room. Can you help?

A. In order to achieve a sophisticated look with the shifting colors of iridescence, you have to work within a narrow and carefully disciplined range of color and design options. Don't try to match any one of the fleeting, lustrous blues or greens. Instead coordinate with the optical mix these colors produce.

For all the other elements in your bedroom, coordinate within the range of analogous or neighboring colors. These would include blue-green, blue, blue-violet and a very selective use of magenta. So that the end result isn't too somber, use the colors in two distinct values: either very dark or intense, or very light and slightly grayed. The paler colors would be suitable for the walls and the carpet, or rug, while the intense colors would be best for the bed's decorative pillows. Anchor the entire scheme with a black border, perhaps accented with blue, for the rug.

Also keep the range of textures compatible with the lustre of the iridescent bedspread. Avoid anything heavily textured, or adding too many accessories that themselves are shiny and bright. Everything has to reinforce the iridescent effects and not balance or contradict it.

Q. We have recently redecorated our living and dining rooms, which are connected by a large arched open doorway. The furnishings are traditional and conservative. The same broadloom carpeting is used throughout. But instead of our choice of low-keyed colors in white and pale golds conveying subtlety, they look monotonous. We were thinking of adding color to the walls for a little more excitement. What do you think we should do?

A. By all means more colorful walls will add interest to a monotonous color scheme. In keeping with the present arrangement, I see three ca the Beautiful," "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen" "Oh, Susannah" or 'I've Been Workin' on the Railroad" in the background. If someone painted those pictures today, it would be corny, maybe it was when he did them, but they survive and flourish, corn can be life-giving.

THOUGH BENTON documents with a close to illustrator/narrator point of view, he's better than that. His highly refined style developed as he searched for the most effective way to respond to what he saw on his travels around the country. The long, fluid lines and rolling curves, the careful composition and sense of design all were honed to a fine edge.

In the first part of the exhibition are Benton's paintings before he had found his strong, individual style. No doubt about his talent, but he still had to shake off the influences of Europeans such as Cezanne and Manet, the cubists and the impressionists to become more than a very good imitator.

When he finds himself (it started to happen when he was living in Chilmark on Martha's Vineyard), his life commitment to art, seems to be restated in each painting. The bravado style shouts over and over — This is what I do. This is who I am. Take it or leave it.

The exhibit is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday. Tickets are $3 for adults, students and seniors, children under 12 and Founders members are free. Organized student groups, with advanced appointments, are admitted free.

options that will strengthen and coordinate the two rooms.

The most conservative of the three options would be to paint the living room walls in a soft gold, but more lively than the present golds. Introduce a soft rose through decorative pillows and an extravagant silk floral arrangement. Then use the same color in the connecting dining room. Reverse the strategy by adding brighter gold accents into the rose dining room. The second option, which uses the after-image principle, would be to paint the living room walls in gold, and the dining room in soft blue.

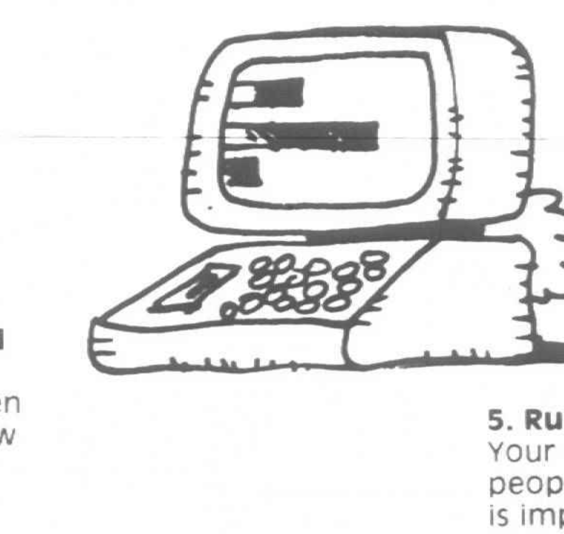
WRITE IT AND REAP!

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!



5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

STONEBRIDGE

Meet Mr. Seth and Mrs. Lindsey. Two friends sharing a moment that just might be remembered for the rest of their lives.

It's a scene that happens at a family community like Stonebridge, every day. On sidewalks where children play. At get-togethers where neighbors meet and talk. And in West Bloomfield schools where education is still a priority.

Stonebridge is much more than just quality homes. It's large bedrooms and family rooms, luxurious bathrooms, seven different floorplans, vaulted ceilings and European kitchens. But most of all living at Stonebridge is the start of something beautiful.
