Township eyes saving 19th century hamlet

By Tom Ferguson
staff writer

Urban sprawl hasn't quite reached the crossroads hamlet of Cherry Hill, leaving a rare piece of history nestled near the Washtenaw County line.

Canton Township preservationists who want to keep it that way have offered a plan that is particular to Michigan: Saving virtually an entire 19th century farm village, including vistas of surrounding cropland.

Twenty-one acres owned by the township would be devoted to a working farm and community events site with such amenities as walking trails and bridle paths.

The board of trustees has sent the Cherry Hill Preservation Plan to the planning commission for a recommendation before making a decision on adopting it. The plan was developed for the township historical commission by the nationally recognized preservation architectural firm, Quinn Evans of Ann Arbor.

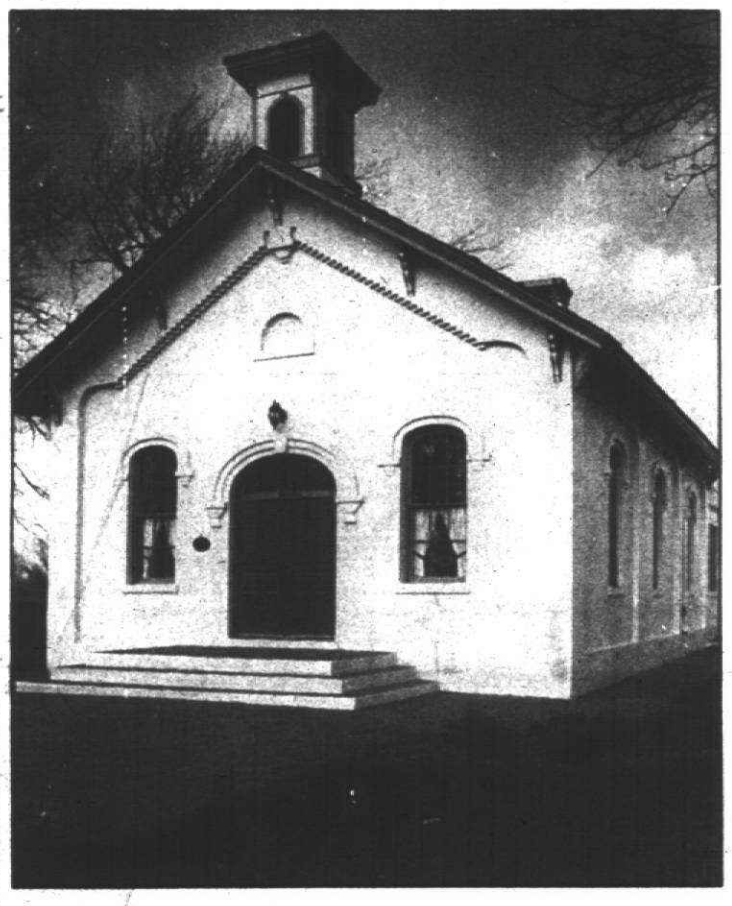
As we near the turn of the century, the signs at Cherry Hill and Ridge roads remind folks of a community that first settled the area in the early 1820s.



The recently renovated Cherry Hill School is used today for various functions. The original chalkboards remain on the walls.

District will need new high school for '90s

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

> 'Where we have spaces, we don't have kids, and where we have kids, we don't have spaces.'
> — Michael Homes assistant supenntendent for instruction

"We will be in a new decade in a few weeks, and if it goes as fast as the last one, we aren't going to be ready," Michael Homes told the Plymouth-Canton school board during his housing report Monday night.

"We're not certain what the 1990's will bring. We're really struggling with that."

Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction, presented feedback on the district's current and future housing needs at a workshop.

Interestingly, said Homes, members of the public and administrative staff agree practically right down the line on the need for:

- A third high school, additional elementaries, and possibly a new middle school to handle current and projected enrollment.

Both groups suggested the possibility of converting Central Middle School back to a high school. Community members said student population at Centennial Educational Park has to be reduced.

"Enrollment is viewed as excessive and limiting in terms of using the facilities as designed," Homes said.

- Money to build. Support for a bond issue is strong. So is support for the sale of existing district property to finance school construction, Homes said.
- The adjustment of attendance boundaries next year as part of a long-range re-districting plan.

Recommendations from the housing task force, to be presented in the next few weeks, will reflect development anticipated by Canton and Plymouth Township planners, Homes added.

"It's expected that 1,200 to 1,300 brand new units are going to be in place on or before the fall of 1993," said Homes. "It's startling to see all the vacant land still available in the central and south areas of the school district. It's been real easy to adopt Horace Greeley's philosophy."

While its easy for the district to point west, getting there will take some doing, officials said.

"We're property poor," said Superintendent John Hoben. "We have nine sites. We did have 21 sites.

"We're a highly transient school district," he added. "We lost 370 kids this year, and 254 last year. Demographic shifts involve 9 to 11 percent of the district's population every year. Couples are buying $100,000 - $125,000 starter homes, and they're delaying having families."

"Where we have spaces, we don't have kids, and where we have kids, we don't have spaces," said Homes.

About the only thing community members and school staffers disagree on is what to do with Tanger, a former elementary school that houses special programs.

The consensus from last month's five community forums "was to maintain Tanger as a school facility. The range of thought on uses was pretty broad," said Homes.

The 52 administrators surveyed had "mixed feelings" about Tanger, "but there was a strong inclination toward selling that property and using the proceeds to handle other needs we might have," said Homes.

Heating units suspected source of poisonous gas

By Tom Ferguson
staff writer

Building inspectors are investigating heating units as the likely source of carbon monoxide poisoning that felled 23 workers Monday at a Canton Township plastics plant.

"They're looking at heating units as being possibly faulty, causing back drafting," said township police information officer Patrick Nemecek.

Building Department officials, whose report was not complete, were not available for comment.

Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. workers who responded to the scene Monday shut down nine of 13 heaters and one of two water heaters after finding defects, MichCon spokesman Paul Ganz said. A private contractor had worked on the units "a day or two before," Ganz said.

A spokesman for Lindsay Pavelich Manufacturing Co., reached Tuesday, would say only that the "plant is open, the air is safe" and that officials had approved resumption of operations. The plant manager was unavailable for comment.

The plant on Ronda near Mettetal Airport is named for previous owners Ted Lindsay and Marty Pavelich, Detroit Red Wings hockey stars in the '40s and '50s. The plastic injection molding company is now a subsidiary of Chivas Products Ltd. of Sterling Heights. It supplies parts to the big three automakers.

"People were lying down on the ground when the fire department got there," Nemecek said.

The call for help came in shortly after 1 p.m. Ambulances from Canton, Plymouth Township and Westland took the victims to hospitals with complaints of nausea and dizziness. All were treated and released — 12 at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia, eight at Garden City Osteopathic Hospital and three at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne.

Hospital spokesmen said the victims' complaints were symptomatic of carbon monoxide poisoning, and reported no evidence of other contaminants.

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, tasteless gas that can be fatal or cause serious illness.

Apparent poisonings involving large numbers of workers automatically trigger a site investigation by the MIOSHA division of the State Health Department. Investigation dates are not announced in advance. None had occurred as of Wednesday.

Group calls for review of ordinances

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A newly formed group met for the first time Tuesday night to hash out problems with neighborhood laws and concerns the township administration is losing sight of average residents.

The goal of Canton VOICE (Voice of Independent Concerned Electorates) is to review and possibly attempt to change wording in an ordinance package recently approved by the township board, according to Canton VOICE president Richard Petrtyl.

THE ORDINANCE package goes into effective Jan. 1. Ordinance revisions will take minimally six weeks.

"The ordinances aren't straight forward," Petrtyl said. "The goal is to have the ordinances written reasonably and fairly, so they don't infringe on people's rights."

The group complains that the ordinances are ambiguous and not written for the average resident. They could be interpreted to unfairly restrict certain materials for fences, satellite dishes and home occupations, he said.

About 40 people attended the three hour meeting at the Canton Public Library. Canton VOICE is an off-shoot of the Michigan RV Homeowners Association which succeeded in killing an ordinance that virtually banned parking RVs in most neighborhoods.

"We're going to make a concerted effort and take the ordinances out to the community," said Leon Adkins, Canton VOICE vice-president.

RESIDENTS WILL decide if the ordinances are restrictive, he said.

Adkins said Canton Supervisor Tom Yack is setting the standard for Canton, instead of Canton setting the standard for Yack.

Yack declined to comment about allegations coming from Canton VOICE.

"I won't respond through you," Yack said. "I'd be very happy to talk to them. I get calls from people who have complaints and that's the way to deal with them."

On the other hand, Adkins said the group has tried unsuccessfully to work with the township.

"We feel we've been short changed," Adkins said. "We're not going to go away. So far, Yack hasn't given us an indication that he's willing to work with us."

The township planning commission has been reviewing the ordinance package for two years. Yack questioned at a recent public meeting where the residents have been during that process.

Clerk Loren Bennett said the township administration is more than willing to debate the ordinances.

A study suggests that the Cherry Hill Inn, built in 1860 for travelers on the Detroit-to-Chicago turnpike, could be put back into commercial use and serve as a focal point for residents.

Township wants to save hamlet

"This is one of the few crossroads villages left in the state, and it's virtually untouched," said Kim Scherschligt, resource development manager for the township.

TECHNICALLY, Cherry Hill deserves to be called a "hamlet" because no secondary roads have been developed where a few 19th century farmers clustered near the intersection of Cherry Hill and Ridge roads.

Several historic farmhouses remain, as do the cemetery and the core buildings: school (already restored), church and inn. Only the blacksmith shop and a nearby mill have been lost over the years.

The Cherry Hill Inn was built in 1860 to cash in on the Detroit-to-Chicago turnpike traffic. When Michigan Avenue was chosen as the turnpike route, the inn lived a long life under Plan B: general store downstairs, dance hall upstairs. Dances were still there after World War II.

Today the inn is privately owned and divided into housing rental units. The inn could be placed back in commercial use, again serving "as an important focal point for the current and future residents, just as it did for the earliest settlers," the Quinn Evans study said.

APPROVAL OF new historic district guidelines by a majority of property owners in the area is the first step toward developing the Cherry Hill plan.

Reaction of residents at informational meetings has been generally favorable, said Terri Bennett, historical society chairperson. Residents even have taken to "self-policing" of the restored schoolhouse.

Ultimately, state and national historic designations would be sought.

"This is a very long-term plan," Bennett said, "something that requires good planning and development over a five- to 10-year period."

THE QUINN EVANS plan includes four major components:

- A study of all structures within the historical area, as well as identifying land uses and natural features.
- A preservation master plan, including recommendations on setbacks, utility placement, road detail, traffic control devices and individual home site plans.
- A development plan for the township's 21 acres.
- A development phase plan for the preservation area.

Interested citizens may obtain a free copy of the plan at the Township Administration Building, Resource Development Division, 1150 S. Canton Center Road.

"Cultural resources are a very valuable part of any community's image," Bennett said. "We'd like to have this sense of roots, sense of history reserved — not for tourists, but so residents can understand and appreciate how the community developed."

Trouble-plagued bridge opens

At 10:32 a.m. Tuesday, Mayor Robert Bennett and city council president Fernon Feenstra cut the red ribbon and officially opened the new, five-lane Newburgh Bridge.

The road was closed in May and officials feared it would take two construction seasons to complete the bridge.

But despite a flood June 21, after days of torrential rain, which left a back hoe and crain under water and threatened the project, the bridge was finished in one season.

The project included widening the pavement on Newburgh Road to five lanes between Plymouth Road and the bridge, widening the bridge to five lanes, widening Newburgh to four lanes between the bridge and Ann Arbor Road, adding 800 feet of right-turn lane on the north side of Hines Drive east and west of Newburgh Road, and the building of Jughandle Road west of Newburgh between Plymouth and Hines.

The construction project relieved what had been one of Livonia's worst bottlenecks.

Not only did Greenfield Construction of Livonia come in ahead of schedule, but the $1.4 million cost was $200,000 below estimates.

Holiday cheer on the menu for area seniors

Frank Palmer checks his bird.

AREA seniors were treated to a holiday dinner Monday, compliments of Plymouth's Salvation Army Advisory Board and "waiters" from the Kiwanis Club of Plymouth.

More than 150 seniors from Canton, Plymouth, Northville and Westland enjoyed the annual feast. Some were even chauffeur-driven to the dinner, said Salvation Army Lt. Jeffrey Beachum.

On the menu were turkey, potatoes, cranberries, vegetables, beverages and, to top it off, pumpkin pie.

West Middle School's Advanced Choir supplied the entertainment, singing Christmas carols and performing scenes from their upcoming holiday musical.

Members of the advisory board shopped, cooked all day, and footed the bill.

For winners of a raffle, the holiday fun isn't over yet. They have free meals at an array of area restaurants to look forward to.

Would-be dairy owners plan tasteful transition

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The Cloverdale Farms Dairy and restaurant was on the verge of being sold this week to a Plymouth Township couple who plan some changes.

"We want to bring in some new blood, some new life," said John Kownacki, who with his wife Phyllis said he hoped to close the sale of the Plymouth landmark this week.

But while they plan changes, "We have such a belief in it," Phyllis Kownacki said, adding that she and her husband plan to "keep the flavor" of the 40-year-old dairy.

The dairy was listed earlier this year for $800,000 with the Patrician Group Inc. Owner Joyce Kallos said she planned to retire, and was looking for someone who would preserve the history and integrity of the name.

OF CHANGES, Phyllis Kownacki said, "We'll start doing the interior, but we don't want to close down.

"We'll move some things inside," she said, but the counter will stay. "We have quite a few regulars," Kownacki said.

The couple also plans menu changes, including addition of deli sandwiches, soups, salads and quiche.

They plan on remodeling countertops, tables "and the floors, of course," she said, and also plan to remove coolers to the left of the cash register and create a small meeting room.

"We could accommodate small groups for business meetings," she said, and for children's birthdays. They also plan to create a children's menu.

The couple said they also planned to start breakfasts with Santa and the Easter Bunny.

"We'll still carry some novelties, some penny candies," Kownacki said. "We'll still be making the ice cream in the back."

Of the business's 30 employees, Kownacki said, they can remain if they can cope with the changes.

THE KOWNACKIS have lived in Plymouth Township for 16 years and has three children. John Kownacki owns an electrical design and engineering firm in Livonia.

"We're going to try and be here as much as we can. We're not going to be absentee owners," Phyllis Kownacki said.

The Plymouth store is one of two Cloverdale Dairy stores, although the ice cream is sold at various markets.

The store in Northville is the only other Cloverdale Farms store. It is not for sale.

Cloverdale founder Herman Bakhaus retired in 1974, and sold the business to plant manager Jim Tomlinson — Kallos' first husband — and co-worker Tony Gonzales.

Tomlinson bought out Gonzales, then the business passed on to Kallos and sons Jim Jr. and Bob.

Star to attend 'Heights' showing

A nostalgic cast of hundreds will descend on the Penn Theatre in Plymouth tonight.

American Movie Classics, the cable channel that shows nothing but venerable celluloid, has booked the 670-seat Penn for a private promotional showing of "Wuthering Heights."

The in-person star will be Geraldine Fitzgerald, last living principal player in the 50-year-old romantic classic. Fitzgerald was nominated for an Academy Award for her role opposite Laurence Olivier in the film.

Fitzgerald and a print of "Wuthering Heights" are touring major cities to promote AMC, which carries no commercials and is not a pay channel. The promotional exposure helps keep AMC's name before the public, and before the cable system operators who decide whether to include it in their basic package.

Admission is free, but a ticket is necessary. A few tickets may still be available from radio station WJR, whose on-air personality Mike Deja will be master of ceremonies.

Geake named top legislator for strong child advocacy

State Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, has been honored by the Michigan Psychological Association as Legislator of the Year at its annual fall conference in Sheraton Oaks, Novi.

Geake, whose 6th Senate District includes Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and Canton, is vice chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. He was commended by the association for his strong advocacy in the protection and welfare of children.

Geake is known statewide for legislative leadership is preserving high standards of professional practice and quality care in the mental health field, said Dr. Harold Lockett, the assistant director of the Hawthorn Center on Haggerty north of 6 Mile in Northville.

The senator played a key role in keeping the outpatient programs at Hawthorn from being discontinued in the latest round of budget cuts, said Lockett. "All of the staff at Hawthorn are highly respectful and appreciative of Senator Geake's sensitivity to mental health issues in general, and especially those pertaining to children.

Geake is a member of the committee on human resources and senior citizens and is chairman of its subcommittees on mental health and social services.

New school has support

Vacant land at CEP is a potential source of considerable revenue, said Hoben.

"We have 308 acres there, and half of that is prime property. It'd be better on the tax rolls than it is sitting idle," he said.

School board member Roland Thomas asked the task force to consider as a viable option the building of a new high school at CEP, in light of the overhead a new school would present, and a possible drop in future enrollment.

"I don't want to end up like Troy (where the school board and community are battling over the need for a new high school)," Thomas said.

"We must have a plan in place so people understand where we are going and why," he said. "There's an electorate of 8,000 to 10,000 out there. We have to be careful in dealing with that."

Truck driver suspected of making big haul

A semi tractor-trailer truck driver is suspected of stealing $800 worth of company checks and 42,530 pounds of steel valued at between $15,000 and $20,000 last weekend, police said.

The truck was taken from Trek Transportation Systems on Ronda Road in Canton. The haul never made it to its destination, police said.

HOUSE BREAK-IN: Thieves stole more than $2,500 worth of goods from a house in the 47000 block of Geddes Road Sunday, police said.

The items reported stolen include a $250 tuner, a $200 cassette deck, a $250 amplifier, a $300 disc player, a $200 equalizer, a $180 turntable, a $200 stereo, a $500 television, a video cassette recorder with an estimated value of $400 and $2 in change.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE: Two Canton women tried to commit suicide last weekend. One of the woman was apparently saved by a new 9-1-1 emergency calling system, which automatically gives police the address from where the call is made.

Both women survived, police said.

In the one case, the woman dialed 9-1-1 and announced she tried to commit suicide by inhaling carbon monoxide.

She refused to give police her address. However, when she dialed 9-1-1 her home address appeared on the police screen.

The woman was apparently unaware of the new 9-1-1 system, police said.

The officer found the garage door closed and blankets tightly wrapped around the bottom of the door to prevent air from getting in.

The woman answered the door with her head wrapped in a towel and she complained of being dizzy, police reported. She was taken to Annapolis Hospital, Wayne.

In a separate case, the husband of a 34-year-old woman told police that his wife had swallowed prescription pills. She was taken to St. Mary Hospital for treatment, police said.

GARAGE BREAK-INS: More than $1,000 worth of goods were taken from a garage in the 39000 block of Coronation last weekend, police said.

The homeowner reported that an $85 kerosene heater, a $160 belt sander, a $75 router, $150 worth of router bits, $a 100 kerosene heater, a $250 drill, a $150 saw and blade and $450 worth of miscellaneous tools were missing.

Another garage was broken into last weekend on Longwood, police said. The homeowner said the garage door was left open only 20 minutes when the break-in occurred. The homeowner reported a $70 drill motor and a $125 router were taken, police said.

MOTEL HEIST: A breaking and entering was reported at the Knights Inn motel on Ford Road last weekend, police said.

An Apple computer valued at $1,900; an $85 printer, a $130 telephone and a $90 radio were reported stolen. About $250 worth of damage was also reported to police.

CAR BREAK-IN: A 1985 Ford Thunderbird parked on Mott Road was broken into last weekend, police said.

A car radio valued at $260; a $80 amplifier, a $200 leather jacket and a $100 radar detector were reported stolen.

These are some of the incidents recently reported to Canton police. For emergency police or fire calls dial 9-1-1. For business-related calls dial 397-3000.

Value ratings steam schools

By Tom Ferguson
staff writer

A few columns of type in a 100-page report have educators from Livonia to L'Anse steaming or beaming.

Most are steaming.

The report, released last month by a private Lansing research firm, assigns "value ratings" of one to five stars for 524 of Michigan's 563 school districts.

To speed readers, the stars look like reviewers' opinions of rock albums or chop houses. And the one- to five-star school ratings already have been well-publicized in the news media.

"It's easy for people to jump to conclusions, and that's very unfair," said Joseph Marinelli, superintendent of Livonia schools, which earned a quite respectable three stars.

"It may be a starting point toward a statewide report card for schools," said Daniel Manthe, associate superintendent of the Wayne County Intermediate School District. "But it's a very weak starting point. My problem is that the average citizen will give this full credibility when in fact it does not deserve that."

THE STUDY, "Profiling Michigan's School Districts," sets out to provide a kind of bang-for-the-buck index.

The authors, economists Robert Kleine and Frances Spring, describe it as "the first attempt to develop a system for evaluating the performance of Michigan's school districts relative to their financial means."

Many educators, who agree that accountability is an idea whose time is overdue, are not very happy with the way the attempt was made. They point out what they see as flaws in the study design and are dumbfounded by the value rating system.

"School districts are microcosms of society, and they reflect the nature of any particular community," said Michael Wilmot, Garden City (☆☆☆☆☆) superintendent.

"Education is a heckuva lot more complex than some particular set of data," Wilmot added.

"It's just another battering schools go through where it looks like we're not doing a good job," said Jan Jacobs, superintendent in South Redford (☆). "They (Public Sector Consultants Inc.) should be given credit for trying, but their ranking of schools is mind-boggling."

The study contains a good deal of information besides the value ratings. "I intend to spend more time studying it," said Livonia's Marinelli. "Their material on 'tax effort,' for example, is very interesting data."

IT'S THE COMPUTING and comparing of numbers — the sizzle of the study report — that draws the heavy criticisms.

Simply put, Public Sector chose four variables to arrive at a "performance index" for each district and another set of variables to arrive at a "financial means index." Districts were placed in one of five

One criticism of the Public Sector study is the way districts are grouped. Rankings for any of these "urban" and "suburban" districts, for example, would change dramatically is they were transferred to the other group.

Numbers could be deceiving

Wayne-Westland and Livonia emerge with low numbers under Public Sector's indexing system. What look like similar scores, however, have not much to do with each other.

Wayne-Westland's financial means score is driven up by 16.6 points by "relative tax effort" — meaning its millage rate is high relative to others in its group. But the district's state equalized valuation per pupil is only $49,844, compared with Livonia's $134,031. As a result, Wayne-Westland ranked fifth highest in the state in tax effort while spending $1,641 per pupil for basic programs.

Livonia, the study says, spent $2,003 per pupil for basic programs in fiscal 1988, but ranked 427th statewide in relative tax effort.

Though the two districts emerged with similar value indices, Livonia was rated ☆☆☆ while Wayne-Westland — which actually had a slightly higher index — earned a ☆ rating. That's because the former was classified "urban," the latter "suburban."

Meanwhile, Livonia showed the highest performance score of any district in the Observer area

Criteria called confusing

By Tom Ferguson
staff writer

Criticisms of the study are more basic than the matter of passing out stars.

● The categories: Recognizing that educating students in Detroit, Northville, Jackson and Escanaba are vastly different enterprises, co-authors Frances Spring and Robert Kleine came up with their district groupings. There is wide belief in the educational community that the categories don't do the trick.

Livonia School Superintendent Joseph Marinelli wondered aloud why his district is "urban" while most neighbors are "suburban."

"Is Livonia really economically independent?" he asked. "Our citizens rely on jobs all over the metro area."

Ironically, Livonia (☆☆☆) probably picked up two stars because of its categorization. Farmington (suburban, ☆) scored almost identical to Livonia in performance minus financial means.

Superintendent Jan Jacobs similarly wondered why his South Redford district is suburban while the other half of the township (Redford Union, ☆☆☆☆☆) is urban.

Dennis O'Neill, superintendent of Wayne-Westland (☆), said there is an almost infinite number of socioe-

Speakers blast county trash plan

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Wayne County's solid waste management plan, county officials said, is a state-of-the-art document that will promote recycling.

But speakers at a public hearing Tuesday called it a flawed document, not even worth the recycled paper on which it's printed.

"It's a non-plan plan," said Dennis Piper of Redford, a member of the environmental group Sierra Club.

While individual comments varied, most of the 15 people who spoke at the hearing generally agreed on several principles:

● The plan, they said, doesn't provide enough leadership. Several speakers said they would like to see the county require a countywide recycling and composting plan, or at least assist communities in setting up regional plans.

"WE WON'T have one plan, we'll have 43 different plans," said Joan Linteman, of the Livonia League of Women Voters chapter.

Audubon Society member James Bailey of Redford said his group opposes the plan because of its "piecemeal nature."

● At the same time, they said, the county plan doesn't sufficiently promote recycling.

● Likewise, they added, it doesn't do enough to restrict incinerators — particularly the controversial new Detroit incinerator.

"I'd like to see a five-year moratorium on incinerators," Piper said. "That way, you'll see more recycling."

The county plan seeks to have communities reduce their waste flow by 75 percent over the next decade to continue to be allowed to use county landfills. It provides a large exception, however, for communities that begin recycling and composting programs.

Those communities will be exempt from landfill restrictions even if they fail to meet the specified reduction level.

Milton Mack, chairman of the county's Solid Waste Implementation committee, said that was about as far as the county could go, both legally and politically, to promote recycling.

Both the Michigan Constitution and a series of court rulings restrict counties from forcing any single waste handling option on cities and townships, said attorney Mike McGee of Livonia, an adviser to the committee.

Beyond that, Mack said, county politics requires a balance between pro-recycling factions, generally based in the suburbs and Detroit, which has already made a massive commitment to incineration.

'Remember, we have to sell this both to the individual communities and to the county commission.'

— Milton Mack
Solid Waste Implementation Committee Chairman

"REMEMBER, WE have to sell this both to the individual communities and to the county commission," Mack told audience members.

Twenty-nine of the county's 43 cities and townships must approve the plan. So must the county commission, eight of whose 15 members represent Detroit residents.

Several speakers said economics would make it impossible for smaller communities to embark on recycling and composting plans of their own, forcing them to use incinerators.

Mack, however, said two multicommunity groups, the Conference of Western Wayne and the Downriver Community Council, are already investigating regional plans of their own.

Those who missed Tuesday's hearing can still submit comments through Friday, Dec. 15, by writing to the Wayne County Department of Public Works, 415 Clifford, Detroit 48226 and making reference to the Wayne County Solid Waste Master Plan. Copies of plan also available through the county DPW.

Tree sale benefits Straight

Straight Inc., a non-profit drug and alcohol treatment agency, is selling Christmas trees this month to support its programs for adolescents and their families.

Trees are available at Straight offices in Plymouth, 42320 Ann Arbor road, east of Lilley.

Trees are priced between $26-$35. A portion of the price is tax deductible, said sale co-chairman Howard Ballard.

Sales will be 4-8 p.m. Monday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Straight was founded in 1976. As of this month, Straight has become a Blue Cross/Blue Shield substance abuse provider.

The Plymouth center has assisted more than 650 families since its inception in 1986, according to Straight statistics.

Additional information on the trees, or on Straight, is available by calling 453-5616.

School leaders criticize study's groupings

economic variances between districts. "Not many districts are just like Wayne-Westland," he said. "But put them in a group together and we would be very close."

Edward Roeber, supervisor of MEAP for the state Department of Education, suggested that no pigeonholing criteria can really account for the different tasks faced by different districts.

"Midland has an advantage over Jackson," he said. "In the Upper Peninsula, you can find districts with high unemployment and low standards of living but high achievement by students. (The parents) value education."

● Measuring performance: Three-quarters of each district's performance score was derived from calculations involving MEAP (Michigan Education Assessment Program) test scores. MEAP tests are given each year across the state and are intended as an aid to show students and their teachers where they need to do more work.

MEAP scores are not meant to be used for district-to-district comparisons but are publicized each year in the news media. Roeber, who developed the test, admits, "We're not naive enough to think that comparisons would never be made." But he has trouble with the way Kleine and Spring used the numbers.

One of the study's variables, for example, is based on improvements in MEAP reading scores between fourth and seventh grades.

"Indexing those two grades when statewide we see an average improvement of about one percent doesn't make any sense," Roeber said. "I've told them this."

Roeber and other educators had numerous apples-and-oranges complaints about the way the test scores were employed.

Spring, co-author of the study, said MEAP was used because no other statewide numbers were available. SAT and ACT scores, for example, required approval from each district.

"We're not the first ones to use MEAP in this way," Spring said. "If educators think there is a problem — we're trying to get this discussion started, to make the types of things available that would allow us to quantify better what we already have."

IT HAS BEEN a painful start to the discussion. The first draft of the Public Sector study, circulated under standard research practices to several "readers" for comment, was leaked and widely circulated. Several administrators interviewed for this story said they had seen the leaked draft, found errors in basic data and submitted corrections. South Redford's Jacobs said the dropout rate in the final report still is not accurate and would have earned his district a second star.

The narrative of the Public Sector report goes out of its way to say, in many ways and places, that it is lacking in scope. The educational system must make more data available for analysis, the authors write.

"We would like to see the Department of Education pick up the ball by issuing some type of report like this on an annual basis," Spring said. "We're going to be willing to continue on."

Livonia's Marinelli said: "I'm wondering if Public Sector shouldn't have spent more time taking results and making a draft for a more long-term effort without releasing the data, which people already cling to as reality. They admitted it was not perfect, but they went ahead and released it anyway."

Roeber, of the Education Department, who has grave criticisms of the report's methodology, was asked whether it might nonetheless be a step toward some kind of annual accountability report card.

"It's probably a step," he said. "You put something out there and it gets blasted. Then somebody comes along and improves it. Or they'll try to do it themselves."

Public Sector's corporate officers are highly confident that will happen and that their first report will have played an important role. In a letter to readers they write: 'By the end of the 1990s, enhanced and sophisticated information processing, acute analysis, and public demand will make possible the measurement of educational outcomes. Public servants, including educators, will follow in the footsteps of private businesspersons and will be obliged to document value for dollars received."

"Unfortunately," Marinelli said, "the enterprise of education is very complex. It's hard to come to judgments based on a few statistics. We have a real problem here trying to be accountable to the public in a way the public can understand."

South Redford's Jacobs zeroed in on just how far there is to go beyond a rating system based on some MEAP indexes and the dropout rate. The percentage of a district's students going on to college is one example of more meaningful variables that must be taken into account, Jacobs said.

He cited a researcher who has followed one group of students into adulthood, "interviewing bosses and neighbors, people they worked with, then working backwards trying to identify things that made them successful adults."

"Most studies just go into it quick and dirty," Jacobs said. "That's just not valid. We've got to get serious about it."

categories (urban, suburban, city, town and rural), and each district's performance number was ranked in comparison with others in the same category.

"Value rating" (the ☆'s) was reached by subtracting the financial means score from the performance score.

"This provides a measure of the difference between what a district is putting into its educational system relative to what it is producing," the authors wrote.

Districts whose value number hovered near average for their group emerged with three stars. Stars were added or subtracted for scores that fell above or below average.

Wealthy districts (with financial means ratings of $$$$$) tended to earn low value ratings despite good performance ratings. At least six districts with AAAAA performance ratings (the best possible), including Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills, wound up with value ratings of ☆.

"You mean to tell me Hamtramck (☆☆☆☆☆) has a better school system than Livonia?" one administrator asked. "C'mon."

The study itself warns — probably futilely, given the ☆ to ☆☆☆☆☆ format — against misreading the stars.

"A district with a low value rating may not be a 'bad' district,'" it says, simply one with higher financial means than others in its group.

"We've been trying to drum into the minds of the press that you need to look at more than just the star ranking," author Spring said.

Effort, emotion high in game

THE PRESSURE was on the Plymouth-Canton girls' basketball team Friday in their showdown with West Bloomfield in the Class A semifinals tournament held in Grand Rapids.

But when the final buzzer sounded, the Canton girls came up on the short side, 45-40.

There were some bright and emotional spots. Canton senior Susan Ferko scored a game-high 19 points, with 11 coming in the second half.

The Chiefs led by two to five points during much of the game, but that margin of victory slipped away in the final moments.

For the seniors, the game was the end of a dream.

But for the remainder of the team, there's always next year.

Women lawmakers hold key to consent bill

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Women members of the state House of Representatives hold the key to whether a parental consent abortion bill can get the two-thirds vote it needs to survive a veto by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

And as of Monday, it looks as if a large majority of women representatives will line up against it, as they did for years on efforts to cut state abortion funding.

Rep. Michael Griffin, D-Jackson, sponsor of the House version, predicted he would have 65 to 68 votes at the end of this week's lengthy debate.

The bill needs 55 votes to pass in the 109-member House, but Blanchard has promised to veto it. Overriding his veto would require 73 votes, leaving Griffin at least five short.

THE BILL Monday won a bare 10 votes of the 19-member Public Health Committee, with six voting no and three with excused absences -- the equivalent of a no.

Of 13 men, nine voted yes, three no and one was absent.

Of six women, one voted yes, three no and two were absent. The lone woman yes vote was Margaret O'Connor, R-Ann Arbor, the House's most conservative member.

The House has 20 women members.

Among Observer & Eccentric lawmakers, Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, and Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, voted yes. Justine Barns, D-Westland, had an excused absence.

The Senate passed a slightly different version of the bill with 30 yes votes, four more than a two-thirds majority.

A GIRL 17 or younger would have to get the consent of at least one parent to obtain an abortion if the bill becomes law.

But she also could ask permission of the probate court in her home county under Griffin's version (HB 5103). Under the Senate's SB 513, she could go to any of the 83 probate courts in the state.

Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, an opponent, said Tuesday she will offer an amendment to rename it the "judicial override act" because judges actually will make most of the decisions and will permit girls to have abortions.

"The judge has no choice but to consent under this bill," Bankes said.

She cited Massachusetts research on a similar law which took affect in April of 1981. In the next nearly two years, virtually all 1,300 girls who sought judicial authorization for abortions received one. She quoted an anti-abortion judge as saying, "The law puts judges in the ridiculous position of being rubber stamps."

Hers will be one of perhaps 100 floor amendments to be offered during what is expected to be a protracted debate.

DUNASKISS, THE north Oakland County pro-life Republican, supports the bill.

"If you have a minor who wants cosmetic surgry for a scar, you need parental consent. This (abortion) can leave a minor with an emotional scar, and Michigan requires no parental consent," he said.

Dunaskiss called the Michigan version better than one in Minnesota, where the girl must obtain consent of both parents, even where the parents are separated and one hasn't been seen in years.

"They (pro-choice people) made a lot of one unfortunate case. They're basing their whole case on Bell," he said, referring to the Monday news conference of William Bell, an Indianapolis man whose daughter died after a botched, illegal abortion, apparently because she was afraid to tell her parents she was pregnant.

Pro-choice lawmakers, such as Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor, calls the judicial option "ridiculous" because going before a judge "would intimidate or baffle most adults."

Metroparks aid Toys for Tots

For the second consecutive year, the Huron-Clinton Metropark Authority offices at several locations will participate in the "Toys for Tots" program in cooperation with the United States Marine Corps Reserve.

The following Metroparks will provide barrels at park offices in which individuals and organizations may drop off new toys:

- Metro Beach near Mount Clemens.
- Stony Creek near Utica and Rochester.
- Hudson Mills near Dexter and Ann Arbor.
- Kensington near Milford and Brighton.
- Lower Huron near Belleville.
- Lake Erie Metropark in Brownstown Township.
- The HMCA administrative office in Brighton Township.

The toys have to be new, unwrapped and non-violent. Plastic weapons are not accepted. They may be dropped off now through Dec. 15.

The toys will be turned over to the Marine Corps Reserve who will classify them by gender and age group and deliver them to the various social agencies that have applied for contributions.

Last year, more than 75,000 toys were delivered to over 51,000 children in the Detroit Metropolitan area.

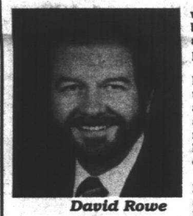
Hypnosis Seminars Offer Help To Lose Weight, Stop Smoking



David Rowe

Plymouth YWCA is making a risk-free offer to those serious about wanting to stop smoking or to lose weight. The program will be held at the Plymouth City Hall on Tuesday, December 19th. The Stop Smoking program will begin at 6:00 p.m. followed by a "Weight Control" program at 8:30 p.m. The cost for each program is $40.

Sit through half of the hypnosis season, be hypnotized two times while you're there, and unless you're convinced the seminar will work for you, you may have your $40 back. You have nothing to lose but smelly cigarettes and ugly fat!

Clinical Hypnotist David Rowe will conduct these seminars. These same programs have been offered by American Lung affiliates in 74 cities in 11 states, the Texas Public Health Association in 15 cities, the National Kidney Foundation of Louisana in seven cities, and community education programs in 125 Michigan cities. Registration is being taken by calling 455-7143.

House committee will delay drug wiretap bill

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Seven months after it passed the state Senate, a bill authorizing wiretaps in drug cases saw daylight in the House Judiciary Committee.

But chairman Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, made it clear Tuesday he intends to bury Senate Bill 1125 in his committee after only one hearing.

"This will be a chance to look at its shortcomings," said Bullard as he scheduled negative testimony from two opponents but none from the bill's sponsor, Sen. Nick Smith, R-Hillsdale, or committee supporters.

"This is the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights. It would not be appropriate to pass this on the anniversary of the Bill of Rights," Bullard said.

"I'M DISAPPOINTED to hear we're getting such a one-sided analysis," replied Rep. Richard Bandstra, R-Grand Rapids. "We can't throw away the Bill of Rights legislatively."

Bandstra and several other Judiciary Committee members, including David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, left the room before the hearing was over.

Smith left, too, apparently miffed that Bullard didn't follow protocol by calling first on the sponsor. The bill would allow county prosecutors to obtain court-supervised wiretaps in drug cases.

Bullard announced it was unnecessary to consider the bill "at any time in the future."

A Senate staff member said after the hearing that Democrat Bullard's committee has reported out only two Senate bills in 11 months while the Republican-led Senate Judiciary Committee has reported out a long list of House bills.

MORTON HALPERIN, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Washington office, painted a grim picture of the 21 months his telephone was secretly tapped by the FBI when he worked in the National Security Council in the Nixon Administration.

Of the tapped conversations, 25 percent were between himself and his wife, and 30 percent were between his wife and other people — leaving "a sense of violation and intrusion."

Halperin likened wiretaps to general search warrants issued by the British crown in the 18th century — "to search anywhere for anything . . . one cause of the American Revolution.

"A wiretap search is akin to a general warrant — the seizing of a very large quantity of material."

IN CONTRAST, he said, the normal search warrant requires an officer to knock on the door, give the property owner notice, allow the owner to observe the search if he or she is present and give the owner an inventory of what is seized. The property owner then may go immediately to court and ask the judge to order the property returned.

But a wiretap goes on for months, he said, and one can't get the property back.

He said that once lawmakers authorize wiretaps for drug cases, they will be peppered every year to extend wiretaps to more and more cases. "Don't invite Big Brother into the phone lines and bedrooms," he warned.

Halperin said he didn't know why the Nixon administration ordered his phone tapped. His guess: "In many eyes, I was that worst breed of all — a liberal Republican."

JAMES CARR, a federal magistrate in Toledo for the last 10 years and author of books on wiretapping, said he is "not an absolute opponent of court-ordered wiretaps."

But they're extremely expensive, he said — $32,000 per investigation — and only a fraction of the conversations they pick up are incriminating.

The good features of the Michigan Senate bill, he said, are that it's limited to drugs, requires training and certification of officers, accommodates "windfall" evidence on non-drug felonies and requires police to exhaust all conventional techniques before applying to a court for wiretap authority.

But Carr's list of its weak points was longer:

- It lacked privacy protections that are in the federal statute.
- It provides "an unjustified opportunity" for a prosecutor to pick anyone to supervise the wiretap.
- It fails to require the prosecutor to state a goal that would end the wiretap.
- Its time limit is so weak that "the limit on extensions is really no limit at all."

Child care plan begins for county employees

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

It's said that Britain's future leaders meet on the playing fields of Eton.

But Wayne County's future leaders could soon be meeting at the playground outside the county building.

A new in-house child care center began this week for children of county employees and could become the first step in a countywide campaign to promote child care for all workers.

Billed as a model for business and industry, the center provides nursery, play and learning opportunities for preschool youngsters from six weeks to 5 years old.

"FAMILIES MEAN business in Wayne County," County Executive Edward McNamara said Monday in unveiling the program. "With so many parents of young children in the workforce, it would just make good sense to create an environment to reduce anxieties associated with child care for our employees."

Promoting child care is a key McNamara administration goal, said deputy county executive Michael Duggan, president of KidSpace Inc., the non-profit agency responsible for the county child-care program.

"Care of the employee's children is the employer's responsibility, but we felt the obligation to lead by example," Duggan said. "I think you're going to see Ed McNamara becoming more vocal about this issue."

Wayne County Commission Chairman Arthur Blackwell II, vice president of KidSpace, called the program "a great idea" but urged caution in efforts to extend the concept to private businesses.

"YOU CAN'T sell Utopia until it's been in operation awhile," Blackwell said.

The county, he added, should join in efforts to lobby federal lawmakers for subsidies or tuition tax credits for parents whose children attend child-care centers.

Parents are charged $90 per week to enroll a child in the county program, though "scholarships" are available for families whose combined annual income falls $35,000. A 10-percent discount is also available for each sibling enrolled in the program.

Space has been set aside in a high-ceilinged room on the Wayne County Building's main floor for older children, in the east wing for infants and toddlers and in a large, freshly-painted and carpeted, basement room for "noisy play."

A playground with jungle gym and picnic tables has also been built on the front lawn.

KidSpace is responsible for hiring the program's six full-time caregivers and for all liability involved with the program.

IN ADDITION to Duggan and Blackwell, the agency's board of directors will also include parents of children enrolled in the program.

Though games, finger panting and other organized play activities will be featured, in addition to nursery and games children given instruction in science, art, math and computers.

"We're calling it a learning experience through play," said Kathy Alexander, a systems benefit analyst for Wayne County who assisted in the program's creation.

Programs are provided through the Merill Palmer Institute. Affiliated with Wayne State University, the institute is a nationally recognized leader in child development.

The center can accommodate 65 children, though 19 were enrolled at the time of Monday's orientation session.

But there is at least one the presence of children has already made a difference. The cannon that stood watch outside the county building for as long as anyone can remember has been removed and returned to Old Fort Wayne.

"We found out is wasn't ours to begin with, but was on loan all these years," said county spokeswoman Irma Clark.

Workout event aids children

An Exercise-a-Thon will be held today through Sunday to benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan.

The foundation exists to fulfill the personal wishes of Michigan children with terminal illnesses or who suffer from medical conditions sufficiently life-threatening to warrant intervention. The foundation also provides support for the families involved.

Participants may help make some of these "special wishes" come true by pedalling away on fitness equipment, jogging or stair-climbing at the Livonia Schwinn Bicycle and Fitness Center, 28860 Seven Mile.

The third annual Exercise-a-Thon is sponsored by the National Bicycle Dealers Association in cooperation with participating Michigan Bicycle Dealers Association members.

A gold medal guest joins hospital event

Steve Fraser, America's first gold medalist in Greco-Roman wrestling in 1984, was the keynote speaker Tuesday at the St. Mary Hospital 30th Anniversary Breakfast.

The hospital is in Livonia.

Speaking to more than 100 local businesspeople on "Going for the Gold in the Business World," Fraser brought his true-life story of capturing an Olympic gold medal to his listeners and showed them how to go for their own form of gold in both their personal and business lives.

Fraser now is a special projects coordinator for Domino's Pizza Distribution Corporation.

Since 1985, he has taken his message all over North America, appearing before thousands of association members, civic groups, and students.

THE HOSPITAL'S business breakfast was one of three special events planned to commemorate the 30th anniversary. An employee celebration will be held tomorrow and an anniversary Mass will take place Sunday.

Some 30 years ago, on Dec. 8, 1959, St. Mary Hospital opened its doors to the community. Built by the Felician Sisters on what was then only farmland, St. Mary soon be became the major health care facility for Livonia and surrounding communities.

St. Mary Hospital opened with 175 beds, 99 physicians, more than 300 employees, and provided all the necessary facilities and services of a community hospital.

Today, under the direction of president Sr. Mary Modesta and executive vice-president Sr. Mary Renetta, St. Mary serves 11 communities with 304 beds, more than 350 physicians, and more than 1,100 employees.

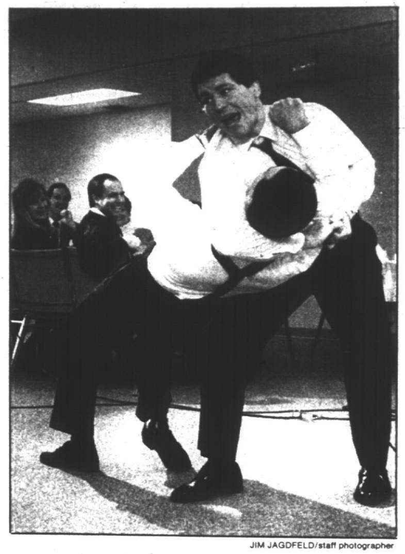
Four major expansions have enabled St. Mary to keep pace with high technology and provide the latest in health care to its patients, said Modesta.

FRASER, 31, is an assistant wrestling coach for Eastern Michigan University, has been a member of the U.S. Olympic coaching staff, and is a committee member of USA Wrestling.

During his 1977-80 collegiate career at University of Michigan, Fraser earned all-American honors twice and was a three-time All Big Ten selection.

A co-captain his senior year, Fraser has wrestled in several national and international competitions including tourneys in the Soviet Union and Poland.

He has been inducted in the Michigan Amateur Hall of Fame and was recognized as Amateur Athlete of the Year by USA Wrestling.



Steve Fraser demonstrates the flying headlock takedown that won him the gold medal in the 1984 Olympics. His more-or-less willing volunteer from the audience is Mark Churella.

Dems target Pursell's seat

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Chambers of commerce and state Republicans are raising money for a 1990 battle over congressional and legislative reapportionment. They fully expect organized labor will be active on the Democratic side.

"Reapportionment gives us in the business community the best chance to see change in Congress, the state Legislature and county boards," said Robert LaBrant, vice president, general counsel and lobbyist for the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce.

Metropolitan suburbs could lose two congressional seats, gain a state Senate seat and probably gain a state House seat, he said. The party that wins control of the State Capitol in 1990 will write the apportionment laws.

With 98 percent of U.S. representatives routinely reelected, LaBrant told a western Oakland County audience, the makeup of Congress can be changed only after a 10-year U.S. census.

"Reapportionment is the most important political decision to be made in a decade," he told a luncheon audience of chamber leaders in Novi.

MICHIGAN WILL lose two of its 18 House seats by 1992, it is widely agreed.

"Detroit will continue to have two districts. Somewhere in the suburban ring will absorb the loss," he said.

Republicans will target the 14th District seat of Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit; Democrats will target either the 18th District of William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, or the 2nd District of Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth.

Chamber officials are seeking donations of $19.89 (no corporate checks) for their political action fund to aid candidates. Amy Hamlin of the Novi chamber said the fund will be used only in legislative races, not local ones.

State Rep. Willis Bullard, R-Milford, is leading a Michigan Reapportionment Fund that LaBrant said will raise money for computer support and possible litigation.

He said chambers are being asked to aid that fund. He reported the state chamber gave $10,000 and local chambers a total of $12,000.

"Attorneys aren't cheap," added Bullard. "It costs money to fight a battle like that."

BIG WINNERS in Congress after the census will be California, 4-6 seats; Texas, 3-4; Florida, at least 3, Arizona and Georgia, 1-2 each.

Big losers will be New York, 3; Pennsylvania, 2-3; Michigan, Ohio and Illinois, 2 each.

Congressional reapportionment will be done by act of the Michigan Legislature. Currently the state House is 61-49 Democratic, the Senate is 20-18 Republican, and the governor who signs bills is a Democrat — a possible political deadlock unless the 1990 elections change things.

"In 1992, for the first time since 1968, Republicans may have a shot at control of the state House," said LaBrant, adding that Democrats have their shot, too.

"For us in the business community, politics will not get any cheaper. Swing districts will be very expensive," he said.

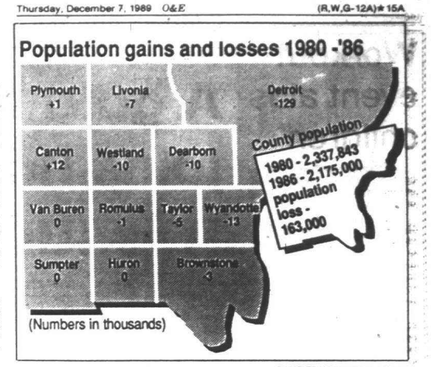
ON THE LEGISLATIVE side, LaBrant predicted Detroit will lose one of its state Senate seats and that it will probably go somewhere in Oakland or Macomb counties.

Detroit will lose three or four state House seats. Western Oakland and Livingston counties will gain one of them, he predicted.

Reapportionment of the Legislature will be done by the Legislature itself for the first time since the 1950s. Reason: The State Apportionment Commission always had deadlocked, 4-4, along party lines, forcing the high court itself to handle legislative reapportionment. So the State Supreme Court declared the Apportionment Commission invalid.

In 1991, courts will intervene only if the Legislature is deadlocked. The State Supreme Court would handle legislative reapportionment; the federal court, congressional reapportionment.

In addition, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1986 that partisan gerrymandering is subject to court jurisdiction, LaBrant said. But the courts have never taken a case in which partisan gerrymandering was charged.



DAVID FRANK/graphics editor

Political observers believe that despite its population loss, Detroit will continue to have two districts and the suburbs will absorb the loss. Republicans will target the 14th District seat of Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit; Democrats will target either the 18th District of William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, or the 2nd District of Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth.

Canton should OK tree ordinance

CANTON HAS A chance to preserve trees in the township through the approval of an ordinance.

We just hope the township board approves the measure being proposed by Township Supervisor Tom Yack.

However, while we support such an ordinance, we hope it will go further and be used as a tool by the township to encourage the planting of more trees.

The township has been working on the woodlands ordinance for about seven months and Yack says he plans on bringing it before the township board early next year.

Such ordinances help government keep developers in check.

That's the up side of such an ordinance. The other side is that a too restrictive ordinance can hinder development, and cause problems for residents.

WE WOULD LIKE to see the township craft a measure that would encourage developers to leave trees, but at the same time not restrict development of property.

We'd like to seen an ordinance that would do more than just save old trees. We'd like to see one that would give the township some say in the planting of new trees.

The planting of new trees helps decide what the township will look like in the future. Their location and type can change a neighborhood.

Having trees means that residents will hear the sounds of song birds in their neighborhoods.

We think that's something well worth striving for and support the township in its efforts to put such an ordinance on the books.

New age

Is it music or a conspiracy?

TALK OF conspiracies usually makes us roll our eyes. Rarely can you get more than two people to agree on a course of action and carry it out in public. So when folks start talking about how there's some giant conspiracy, we become a bit skeptical.

We felt that way when one of our reporters covered a conference sponsored by the Michigan Alliance of Families entitled "New Age Body-Mind-Spirit — Who Controls?." The gist of the conference was that somehow there's a group of New Age people holding secret meetings and plotting to take over our minds.

We really can't envision New Age people, in fact we're not even certain what New Age is. We're heard the term used in reference to music, but never in reference to a group of conspirators. And we're doubtful that they even exist as a group.

Speaking at the conference was Diane Daskalakis of Plymouth Township, who is associated with Citizens for Better Education, a group of Christian fundamentalists who have voiced concern over the showing of R-rated movies in the Plymouth-Canton schools.

In her speech, Daskalakis said that children are being exposed to New Age disciplines.

Those disciplines include such things as yoga, Hinduism, Buddhism and Satanism — basically anything that isn't in the Bible.

If Daskalakis is correct, that means Satan worshipers and members of eastern religions are conspiring to steal our children's minds. We doubt that representatives of those various beliefs could even agree where to meet, much less hatch a New Age conspiracy.

Let's get real.

Theater violence

Let police officers do their job

WE AS A people wouldn't hesitate a moment to send in a taxpayer-paid militia to keep a library open.

Defending residents' rights to experience free expression of ideas at a movie theater is just as vital.

But a shooting at the Southfield Americana Nov. 17 is a frightening example of how that right is jeopardized.

The incident leads the list of violent confrontations and minor skirmishes at area theaters. If we allow this violence to continue, we will snuff out one of the best and brightest forms of expression in our country.

Everyone, by now, knows the incident in question. During a late evening showing of Eddie Murphy's new movie, "Harlem Nights," a man walked down an aisle carrying a handgun. His first shot inside the theater ended in a shootout with police in the parking lot.

Three people were shot and a woman was hit by a car as she ran away.

IN A COUNTRY founded on free expression, the public must be given access to all movies and allowed to formulate its own collective opinions. If this violence continues, theater owners will shy away from showing or handling movies with even a lick of gunplay. After that, any film will be shelved if it contains language some consider questionable.

Ultimately, film topics and themes will come under attack, particularly if they are of a political nature.

Neither "Silkwood" nor "All the President's Men" would have been made in such an atmosphere.

Most of the films that regularly play at the Maple in Bloomfield would be blacklisted. Pretty soon, Don Knott's movies will rise from the slime and we will be forever condemned to watching bad films about talking dolphins.

This isn't the way to go.

Solutions do exist.

In the short term, let the professional law enforcement officers do their job for a designated period. Hiring rental cops really only creates an illusion of security. Residents want real safety.

Secondly, society must stop turning its back on the underclass. A segment of society armed with weapons is a desperate group of people seeking recognition, status and a way to survive.

The persons with power and influence must work harder in providing education and opportunities for those who have turned to drugs and guns as a way of life.

If the powerful refuse to shoulder this responsibility, the violence will only increase and all the police and jails in the world won't make a difference.

No one is faulting the Americana management for hiring a private security force, but it lacks the impact and authority of recognized law enforcement officers.

Initially, the false bravado of someone carrying a gun is more likely to melt if he knows someone is there to shoot back.

Also, Southfield's police are highly trained in conflict management and less likely to create or compound a bad situation.

This situation wouldn't have to be, or should it be, permanent. But if it is necessary to protect our Constitutional rights, then that duty should fall on the taxpayers, through the police. This very public burden shouldn't be shouldered alone by the theater management.

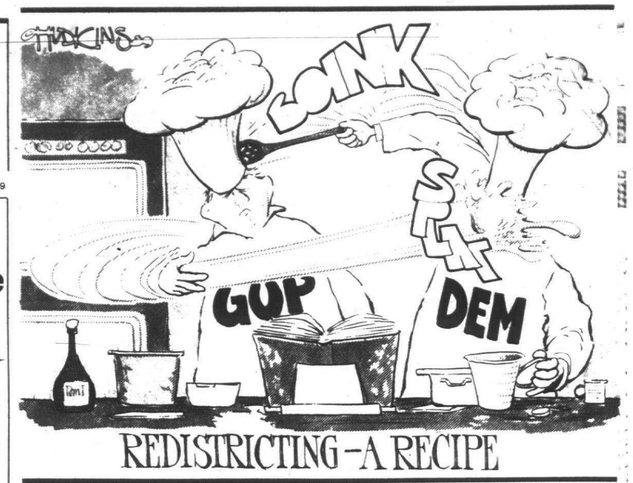
But residents shouldn't be led away from the social significance of this issue and be distracted by ancillary concerns.

- Is this incident fodder for those who advocate handgun registration? Probably not. Law-abiding people tend to register handguns now.

In general, banning the right to own guns invites exposure and attack of our other constitutionally guaranteed rights, such as freedom of expression — the one we're talking about here.

- Is this incident fodder for racists? It shouldn't be. The people involved in the Southfield shooting were black. The armed people who tore theaters apart when "Colors" was playing on the West Coast were white.

- Was the content of the film itself responsible? Let's look at another question with no clear answer: Do war toys make children violent? Everyone has experts on all sides of each issue, and they're all missing the point.



He cared enough to serve city that needed his help

Steve Barnaby

TODAY I want to spend a little time telling you about a guy who deserves to be recognized far beyond the reaches of the community he has served for more than a decade. We really should have more political leaders like him.

Those of you who are thinking about a career in local politics should listen up. This guy is a role model that is worth emulating. Those of you who get frustrated with your present leadership should pay heed.

As an executive with Michigan Bell, Vince Fordell could have led a much different political career in a city with much more status. He could have lived in a bigger house in one of the more elite communities.

But that's what makes Vince Fordell special. He cared enough to serve a little city which needed a whole lot of help.

Fordell first came on the scene back in the early '70s when Garden City was in a fix. Racked by scandal for the previous two decades, the city was trapped with a charter that provided it little, if any, leadership. Basically, nobody was in charge. Civic vultures preyed on the neglected carcass.

A CHARTER commission was elected and Fordell was named chairman — a wonderful stroke of fortune for the troubled municipality.

Recently Fordell was honored after wrapping up his career as the city's mayor for the last 10 years.

And because Vince Fordell dedicated the last 15 years to his hometown it's a heck of a better place.

Vince is one of those politicians who has the respect of many people — including journalists, this one included.

Now that's not to say that we didn't have our disagreements. We spent many a day — and night — sparring over the merits and demerits of the charter being forged by the commission. At that time, 1974, I was the editor of the Garden City Observer. It was my job to see to it that the public stayed well-informed on how the situation was developing.

You must understand that in Garden City, politics just isn't politics — it's an avocation for most everybody, it's entertainment, it's gospel. And everybody wants to know what's going on at city hall.

More towns should be like that.

PEOPLE IN Garden City cared what the new charter said, cared so much that keeping the charter on track was a tough job for its chairman. And, I suspect, the local editor didn't make his job any easier.

But with great determination, Vince stuck to his guns and saw his vision through.

A strong established faction in town wanted a full-time mayor. Vince saw it differently. He believed it more prudent that a professional city manager be hired to guide the city.

After much political wrangling, Fordell won the day.

But that was just the beginning of the battle. Politicos with all sorts of axes to grind came out of the woodwork to oppose the charter. But Fordell and his small band of believers persevered and once again overcame diversity by narrowly winning the confidence of the voters.

Although always opposed to a full-time mayoral position, Fordell spent 10 years as the city's part-time mayor, overseeing development of the charter of his small city.

Frankly most of it was thankless work, little money, little glory and a whole lot of headaches that Fordell really didn't need.

But Garden City is grateful. Thanks Vince and best of luck.

Inspection fee is a hidden tax

To the editor:

The proposed Canton inspection of your home when it is resold is nothing more than a hidden tax on your home.

The purpose of government is to serve the people who created it. Canton government seeks to place the people in servitude to the government.

The township will charge you, the present Canton resident, $75 or more to check your home out. The township will not issue a guarantee to the new home owner, but will incur a degree of liability.

The township could become liable if something should be overlooked in the inspection which leads to a serious problem for the new owner. You, the people, will pay with your money for any judgment awarded in that event.

If the building department is to serve you as a part of government, why must you pay every time you ask for service? If your police are here to serve you, why must you pay for every police report? This also is a hidden tax upon the resident. Everything you own is taxed upon purchase and some things are taxed forever such as your home, car, and income.

When will Mr. Yack impose an income tax on the residents of Canton? Now that Mr. Yack has created his new management level in government which will make him earn less than the managers, can his "raise" be long in coming? Mr. Yack seems intent on changing our Canton into his town and we don't like it.

Editor's note: The Plymouth and Canton Observer Newspapers reported the event.

The band deserved coverage

To the editor:

Just really disappointed that your newspaper gave such little coverage to the Plymouth Centennial Marching Band in regard to their performance and achievements in the Grand National Championship in Indianapolis. I imagine there are at least 500 dedicated band members, parents, teachers and other workers that give their hearts and souls all season to accomplish a fantastic performance.

Our band has established a tradition of excellence for taking state championships. In fact, the state of Michigan presented each band member with a "special tribute" at their awards banquet. Thanks to Sen. Geake, Gerald Law and James Kosteva for recognizing their excellence and caring.

We deserve front page coverage more so than Diane Daskalakis. These extracurricular activities will have more of an impact on your people than any questionable topics she brings to your front page.

Heaven forbid if she should object to songs like "Witchcraft" and "That Old Black Magic."

RV owners the vocal minority

To the editor:

Ms. Verla Petrtyl calls the movement to control RV parking in Canton neighborhoods a "burn the witch" attack by a "vocal minority."

The truth of the matter is that Ms. Petrtyl and her 93 members of the RV association constitute the vocal minority and commissioners Cathy Johnson and Vic Gustafson represent the silent majority.

The majority of Canton residents want Canton to be looked on as a desirable place to live because of the value of their homes, the beauty and safety of their neighborhoods, the reputation of their schools and the dependability of township services.

The majority does not want Canton to be compared to some town, in some foothills, with rusting RVs and pickup trucks on the front lawns and washing machines on their front porches. That's a town with no regulation.

The majority sets the standards by which they want their community to develop. The minority can either abide by these standards or move out. There must be some town in some foothills that will welcome them.

Majority defenseless in a nation of wimps

Jack Gladden

I'VE GOT TO get me a cause.

I mean, it's only a couple of weeks until Christmas . . . Oops! Maybe you'd better read that "Winter Holidays" . . . and while I'm sitting around listening to songs about peace on Earth and good will toward men and watching reruns of "It's a Wonderful Life," more concerned folks are out there protesting.

I feel like I'm missing out on the proper spirit of the season.

I tried to get something going last fall.

When hunting season came along, it seemed like a good chance to speak out against the little men with the big guns who go out into the woods and, if they manage not to shoot each other, sometimes come home with a deer or a duck.

But a bunch of activists, who belong to groups like People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, beat me on that crusade. Besides I was just thinking in terms of a column.

I would never have thought of following the hunters into the woods, harassing them, carrying bullhorns and cans of deer repellent and deliberately making enough noise to scare away the intended prey. I guess that shows what I know about ethics.

WITH THE holidays approaching, I started thinking about people who buy fur coats for their significant others and that led me to thoughts of poachers and people who trap fur-bearing animals illegally.

But I was focusing on the legal aspects. It didn't occur to me to harass customers going into stores that sell those fancy wraps, even throwing red paint on their costly pelts to remind them of the blood that was shed to produce that coat. If I had thought about it, I would have been afraid that I'd get punched in the face or sued.

And I wouldn't have come up with the idea of hassling people going into toy stores to make them aware that if they buy "war toys" for their kids, the little brats might not act civilized when they grow up. I guess I'm just not real good at this protest business.

Then I started reading about the Christmas controversy. You know, religion in the schools, church and state, all that stuff.

As I understand it, the people who are against Christmas aren't necessarily against the idea of "Peace on Earth and good will to men." They just don't want the peace and good will to have any connection with religion . . . especially Christianity.

That upsets some Christians and the result is a lot of snarling and growling during this season of brotherly love.

There are plenty of people involved in that cause already, though, so it's not something that I could call my own.

ONE THING I've noticed about all of these protests, however, is that the protesters almost always seem to be in the minority. The hunters outnumber the people who want them to stop; the people who aren't bothered by fur coats and bacon and leather shoes are much more numerous than those who are; more people are buying so-called war toys than are boycotting them; and the people for whom Christmas is not anathema greatly outswell the ranks of those who would abolish it.

That's fine, because this is America and one of the basic precepts of this country is that the majority will not be allowed to trample on the rights of the minority. That's the way it should be. But the reverse is also true.

Socially, if not politically, we're turning into a nation of wimps so filled with collective guilt that if a practice or custom offends even one individual, a call goes out to abolish it.

But just because a small and vocal group doesn't like something does not automatically mean that it's wrong. Maybe it is, but then again, maybe it isn't.

So I think I've got my cause. It'll be called "Protect Majority Rights." That's a group nobody is looking out for.

Telling lies for children's learning

Judith Doner Berne

THERE BUT FOR the grace of God go I.

That's how I felt about Annette Evans-Lee, the mother who faces criminal charges of falsifying documents and obtaining goods and services under false pretenses so her 16-year-old daughter could attend a better school.

If I loved my child, saw his or her potential, was in a deficient, unsafe school system and was blocked by a myriad of things — economics, racism, my own inadequacies — what would I do?

I keep thinking of the scene in the film "Terms of Endearment" when Shirley MacLaine, playing the ever-so-refined mother, changes character completely and shrieks at the nurses in the hospital to give her dying daughter pain-relieving medicine — even if it isn't time.

The Southfield case reiterates loudly and clearly the inequities in our school system, which Michigan's power structure refuses to correct. It shoves our overwhelming "no" votes on Proposals A and B — which didn't have all the answers either — back in our faces. And it tells the Michigan Legislature one more time that the inequities in our schools, which foster and preserve the inequities in life, will come back to haunt us.

NO, ANNETTE Evans-Lee didn't do the right thing; she didn't do a wise thing. But she did a very human thing. She tried to get a better education for her child. By doing so, she may have misrepresented herself and used, without contributing to, Southfield tax dollars.

But hers is a criminal offense in the eyes of the Southfield Public Schools, which for the first time has filed criminal charges in a non-residency case.

"Why are we the only ones being picked on?" said daughter Tara, a junior who was dropped as a student last week. "They've kicked another 100 kids out (for not meeting residency requirements) and nothing else happened to them. Why aren't the other 100 here in court? This is not called for."

Her mother, too, lashed out. "They picked me out because I'm a black person. I have not killed anybody. I'm not a criminal. I am a concerned parent. All I want is for my child to have a good education . . ."

I DON'T BELIEVE Southfield school officials picked Evans-Lee because she is black. Certainly, other parents — black and white — have misrepresented their residency in this and other affluent, suburban school districts. They, too, were trying to give their child the biggest gift, next to love — the gift of a good education.

School district officials maintain this case is different and warrants the criminal charges. They need to prove that — beyond a shadow of a doubt. Because just having their fill of illegal enrollments and deciding to make an example of one isn't good enough.

But, of course, the issue is bigger than Evans-Lee and the Southfield Public Schools.

On homework

Doc Doyle

Q: When I went through high school it seemed that there was not always consistency in homework. That is, some teachers gave a lot of homework, some teachers gave a little homework, many students did homework, some students didn't do their homework. Some of it seemed like a waste of time yet other assignments seemed appropriate. I sometimes wonder if homework helped or hindered. What is the story on homework — most of the time my seventh grade son says he doesn't have any homework.

A. A major five-year study I used in teaching university education classes found that 65 percent of the high school students in a "homework class" (with meaningful homework) would perform and achieve better than high school students in a "no homework class." Yet, it was also found in well organized kindergarten, first and second grade settings that "in class study" with the teacher actively monitoring the learning was superior to assigned homework.

Another aspect of the issue is that elementary students who need to do homework, and are assigned homework, do their homework. High school students who need to do homework often-times don't do their homework. Those who do their homework diligently are obviously the students achieving the better grades.

The less disciplined high school students who are not diligent in homework perform better when the teacher (acting as a surrogate parent) makes them do their homework at the end of the class period.

Further compounding the homework issue is that years ago higher math was taught at the 10th grade level up. Now it is introduced at the elementary level. Most parents can assist their children in their homework through the elementary and often through some middle school classes but the majority of parents are of little help when it gets to advanced algebra, chemistry, physics, foreign language, etc. Therefore, teacher monitoring of student's progress including homework becomes a major responsibility for the caring teacher at the middle school and high school level.

Other findings of the five-year homework study are quite obvious and clear. Homework was proven to make substantial positive gains for the student if the homework was clearly directed to the course objectives, not just busy work — especially for the high achieving middle school and high school students. It has also been my experience that elementary students gain an initial jump on other students in homes where supplementary activities of an enriching experience are made available.

Those home environments in which children study three to four hours a night under the direction of a drill sergeant mentality usually score higher on standardized and classroom tests. However, the other bright students soon catch up "as water finds its level" and many of the drill sergeant's children learn to hate learning.

Indeed, it is not the amount of homework given by teachers but the necessity of and the quality of the homework assignment. In some areas such as math and science there is a propensity to give more frequent homework assignments than in language arts and social studies. Math and science are continually and daily building on sub-skills that need a constant reinforcement through an on-going homework and quiz process. Language arts and social studies are subjects broader in context which requires timely readings but which often-times may take five days to two weeks to cover a topic or unit before the need of a written assignment or quiz. In your particular case, since your student seems capable but is receiving four C(s) and one D, him telling you he doesn't have homework just doesn't "fly." You need to contact his teachers and confront him with the facts.

Winter fun's easy to find

Kids don't have to worry about not having enough to do during the holidays.

Plenty of holiday activities are available for the younger set. These activities will provide holiday fun and keep children occupied until it's time to go back to school. What follows is just a sampling.

● CHRISTMAS CARNIVAL

The Detroit Recreation Department will hold its 30th annual Christmas Carnival through Tuesday, Dec. 19, in the Macomb Hall at Cobo's new Convention Center in Detroit. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, and admission is free of charge.

The carnival fills 150,000 square feet of the convention hall. It features three full-sized playgrounds, 138 puppet shows, and festively decorated Christmas trees. Marching toy soldiers, hard-working elves and dancing wild bears will be on display, and live entertainment will be part of the fun.

Children will be able to climb on the make-believe fire engine, ride the merry-go-round, and go up and down the giant slide. Children's art work is displayed in the Children's Art Gallery. Youngsters will be able to whisper their Christmas wishes in Santa's ear.

● WINTER WONDERLAND

The Detroit Zoo will be transformed into a Winter Wonderland Saturday, Dec. 9, through Saturday, Dec. 23, excluding Mondays and Tuesdays when the zoo is closed. Winter Wonderland hours are 6-9 p.m. The zoo is at 8450 W. 10 Mile, Royal Oak.

Sparkling trees and shrubs will be displayed inside the zoo's front entrance, along with lighted animal sculptures.

A holiday show, choreographed exclusively for Winter Wonderland, will include three nightly performances at 6:30, 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. "Come Follow the Bears," choreographed by Moloney Productions Inc., will feature Raggedy Ann and Andy and a costumed bear family.

Carolers, choirs, dancers and costumed characters will greet visitors. Craft demonstrations and cookie painting will be included, and children will be able to visit with Santa and his helpers in Santa's workshop.

Admission price is $2 for those age 2 and older. Tickets must be bought in advance. Tickets are available at the Detroit Zoo ticket office 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. Those who are interested may send a money order or check with a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Detroit Zoo Winter Wonderland, P.O. Box 39, Royal Oak 48068. (Order should include three date choices for the event.)

Zoo hours will also be extended during the week after Christmas. The zoo will be open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, Dec. 26-30. General admission price is $5 for adults, $3.50 for senior citizens, $2.50 for children ages 5-12, free for children under age 5. Parking is free. For more information, call the zoo's information line, 398-0900.

● ART INSTITUTE

The Detroit Institute of Arts' Youtheatre will present a musical production of "The Wizard of Oz" by its resident company, the Prince Street Players. Holiday performances will be at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, Dec. 26-30, in the DIA Auditorium, 5200 Woodward, Detroit.

The 90-minute production takes Dorothy and her entourage — the Tin Woodsman, Scarecrow and Lion — on a magical journey to the Emerald City. Children must be age 5 or older to attend performances, and all tickets are priced at $5. For more information, call the DIA's ticket office, 833-2323.

Other holiday-time Detroit Youtheatre performances at the DIA include: Saturday, Dec. 9, "Santa's Christmas Party," featuring three holiday puppet stories; Saturday, Dec. 16, "Tom Chapin's Holiday Wish," singing holiday and folk tunes; Saturday, Dec. 23, "A Holly Folly Christmas," featuring elfin Christmas magic. Saturday performances are at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Ticket price is $4, and children under age 3 will not be admitted. For ticket information, call 833-2323.

Santa will be in residence at the DIA's Kresge Court through Saturday, Dec. 23. He will host "Breakfast With Santa" 9:45 a.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays (advance reservations required.) Admission price is $6. Weekend visitors will enjoy "Snacks With Santa" noon to 3:30 p.m. Saturdays.

● CHRISTMAS CAROL

Meadow Brook Theatre will present its eighth annual production of "A Christmas Carol" on the campus of Oakland University near Rochester. Performances will continue through Sunday, Dec. 31.

The yuletide classic will feature actor Booth Colman in the part of the penny-pinching Ebenezer Scrooge. "A Christmas Carol" will be staged by Charles Nolte, who also adapted the Charles Dickens novel for the stage.

Matinee and evening performances are available. Some performances are sold out already, and tickets should be bought as soon as possible.

For tickets, call the box office, 377-3300. Group reservations may be arranged by calling 370-3316. Ticket prices range from $14 to $23, with student, senior and group discounts available.

● FUN AT JCC

The Jewish Community Center of Metropolitan Detroit, 6600 Maple, at Drake in West Bloomfield, has a variety of holiday activities planned.

The JCC will hold its third annual New Year's Eve Sleepover for children in kindergarten through fifth grade. Proof of age is required.

The fun-filled evening will include swimming, gym activities, movies, a kosher dinner and kosher breakfast. Children should be dropped off at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 31, and picked up at 9 a.m. Monday, Jan. 1. They should bring a sleeping bag, swimsuit, towel and change of clothes.

Price is $32 for members, $45 for non-members. (Sibling discount is $5). Limited space is available, and registration must be completed in person by Friday, Dec. 15, in Room 248 at the JCC. No mail-in registrations or late registrations will be accepted. For more information, call 661-1000 Ext. 252.

The JCC will also offer "Winter Days" for kindergarteners through sixth graders. Sessions will be held 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, Dec. 26-29 and Jan. 2-5. Price is $18 per day for members, $23 for non-members. Reservations should be made by Tuesday, Dec. 19. For more information, call 661-1000 Ext. 252.

"Winter Days" will include: Dec. 26 (arts and crafts for kindergarteners and first graders, sports for older children); Dec. 27 (a visit to see "The Wizard of Oz" at the DIA, $3 additional charge); Dec. 28 (roller skating); Dec. 29 (bowling); Jan. 2 (leather crafts); Jan. 3 (wood crafts); Jan. 4 ("Discovery Room Day" in the JCC Discovery Room); and Jan. 5 (sports activities).

● HANDS-ON MUSEUM

The Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum, 219 E. Huron, at North Fifth, has a number of activities planned. The museum, housed in a renovated historic firehouse, provides more than 100 exhibits inviting children to experiment and play.

Regular hours at the museum are 1:30-5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, 1-5 p.m. Sunday. The museum is closed Mondays and major public holidays. Special holiday hours will be 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, Dec. 26-29.

Admission price is $1.50 for children, students and senior citizens, $2.50 for adults, $6 family, free for members. For group reservations, call 995-5439.

The Explore Store at the museum carries toys, science kits, books and other items. Gift certificates are available.

Weekend demonstrations are held at 1 and 3 p.m. Saturdays, 2 and 4 p.m. Sundays. In December, youngsters will learn about paper and papermaking.

Classes and workshops are offered throughout the year. For more information, call 995-KIDS or 995-5439.

● CRANBROOK

"Six Days of Science" will be held in December at the Cranbrook Institute of Science, 500 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills.

Sessions will be held 1-5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, Dec. 26-31. Family members, preschool through adult, will have a chance to explore the world of science. There will be an olympiad of science events to test senses, observation skills, engineering ability and dexterity. Price is included in regular museum admission.

Participants will have an opportunity to practice scientific skills, including math (by tabulating their test scores for some events).

Other events are under way at the Cranbrook Institute of Science. The Planetarium will feature "The Christmas Star" program for those age 5 and older. Price is $1 for non-members. Visitors will pursue possible explanations for the "star of wonder." Sessions will continue through Dec. 31.

"Ornaments" Lasera shows will be held through Dec. 31. Participants will sing along with holiday music coordinated to laser images. Price is $1.50 plus museum admission.

Institute of Science hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 1-5 p.m. Sunday. The institute is closed on major holidays. Admission price is $3 for adults, $2 for senior citizens and children ages 3-17. Admission is free of charge for children under age 3 and for members.

Enrichment classes for children of all ages and adults are offered at the Institute of Science, a division of the Cranbrook Educational Community. For more information, call 645-3200.

● GREENFIELD VILLAGE

Holiday celebrations with "A Vision of Christmas" are planned at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, on Oakwood Boulevard in Dearborn.

Through Jan. 1 (except Christmas Day), visitors will be able to enjoy activities for young and old. A four-story-high Christmas tree towers over the celebrations in Henry Ford Museum.

Just beyond the tree is a gallery for visitors' favorite holiday snapshots. Visitors are encouraged to donate a photo; each yuletide photo will be displayed in a special exhibit throughout December and may become part of the museum archives.

Electric toy trains winding through the streets of a fantasy gingerbread village will keep kids entertained. Younger visitors will be able to visit with Santa at the museum.

A short film, "Toccata for Toy Trains," will entertain children while they wait to see Santa. A display of tin toys — rocking horses, fire engines, a sewing machine, cars, a village, animals and others — is featured.

An intricate model of historic Mount Vernon is on display through Monday, Jan. 1.

The Henry Ford Museum Theatre is presenting "Babes in Toyland," Victor Herbert's 1903 operetta fantasy. The production runs through Saturday, Dec. 30, and reservations are required. For information on ticket prices and performance schedules, call 271-1620.

Dozens of winter/holiday activities are planned for the historic buildings of Greenfield Village. Tales of a master story teller will be told at the Scotch Settlement School. Children of all ages can amuse themselves with a variety of hands-on activities at the Town Hall. Children can play with toys reproduced from those of years gone by at the General Store.

Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village are open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except Thanksgiving and Christmas Day. Parking is free, and separate admission prices apply for the museum and the village (adults $9.50 each, children ages 5-12 $4.75 each, children under 5 admitted free of charge.) For 24-hour information, call 271-1976.

And closer to home . . .

● YULE PARTIES

The Canton Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor two Christmas parties Saturday, Dec. 9, at the Canton Recreation Building, Michigan Avenue at Sheldon, Canton.

The 9:30-10:30 a.m. party is for children ages 3-7, and the 10:45-11:45 a.m. party is for children through age 12. Participation is free of charge for Canton residents. For reservations, call 397-5110. Parties will include games, prizes, a movie, refreshments and a visit with Santa.

Canton's Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor the "Annual Guaranteed White Christmas Contest." To participate, send a postcard with name, address and daytime phone number to: Canton Parks and Recreation, 1150 S. Canton Center, Canton 48188. The drawing will be Tuesday, Dec. 19, and snow delivered Thursday, Dec. 21.

The winner is guaranteed a white Christmas, with an ample supply of snow delivered if snow isn't covering the ground by that date. The winner also will receive a copy of Bing Crosby's "White Christmas" album. Canton residents of all ages can participate.

● PLYMOUTH MUSEUM

Regular hours at the Plymouth Historical Museum, 155 S. Main, are 1-4 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday. The museum will be closed Sundays, Dec. 24 and 31, and open extra hours 1-4 p.m. Fridays, Dec. 29 and Jan. 5.

"The Roaring 20s Christmas" is the theme of the main exhibit, which will continue through Jan. 21. The Main Street area includes shops and offices reminiscent of Plymouth's early days. The "Then and Now" section helps children learn about history through hands-on activities.

For more information, call 455-8940.

● CANTON MUSEUM

The Canton Historical Museum, 1150 S. Canton Center (at Proctor) in Canton, is open 1-3 p.m. Tuesday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday.

The museum is decorated for the holidays, with antique toys among the items on display. For more information, call 397-0088 during museum hours.

The public may attend the 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 14, Christmas open house at the museum. The evening will include musical entertainment and refreshments.

● FIGURE SKATERS

The Plymouth Figure Skating Club will present its annual Christmas show 7-8 p.m Friday, Dec. 15, at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer.

Many area skaters will perform, and preschoolers from Academic Gardens Learning Center in Plymouth will sing.

Tickets, priced at $3, will be sold at the door. Admission to the "I'll Be Home for Christmas" show is free of charge for children age 12 and younger.

Courage, fairness keys for judges, speaker says

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Lawyers don't always get a whole lot of respect.

In the movie "Back to the Future II," two characters travel forward to the year 2015. They learn the criminal justice system of the future is working more effectively — because lawyers have been eliminated.

Jokes about lawyers aren't uncommon.

"Of course, in all of this judges don't totally escape," said Justice Patricia Boyle of the Michigan Supreme Court. Studies show that public confidence in the judiciary is generally higher than confidence in attorneys and other institutions.

Boyle, who has served on the state Supreme Court since 1983, came to Plymouth Thursday, Nov. 30, to speak at a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Colonial Plymouth. During the meeting, at the Mayflower Meeting House, she talked about public perception of how courts works.

Media attention focused on bizarre cases, such as Zsa Zsa Gabor's recent trial in California, doesn't provide a realistic view, she said.

THE WORK of the Michigan Supreme Court isn't as visible, but is important. The seven justices decide rules of law that govern cases related to disposing of waste, paying taxes, hiring teachers and other essential areas.

A hypothetical person on Main Street, if asked what he thought of the state's court system, most likely would respond "I haven't really thought about it."

That man would come up with some concerns after thinking for a while.

"The system takes too long and it's far too complicated," she said. Courts are hearing more and more cases in these litigious times, and coping with increasingly-crowded dockets isn't easy.

"Our system is complex and perhaps necessarily so," Boyle said. Courts are replacing the family, school, church, neighborhood and other institutions in arbitrating disputes.

At one time, a complaint from a child about a mean teacher most likely would result in that child being grilled about what he or she had done wrong. These days, such a complaint may lead to a lawsuit against the teacher and school district.

TECHNOLOGICAL DEVELOPMENTS have made the work of judges increasingly difficult, said Boyle, who served as supervising justice of the Citizens' Commission to Improve Michigan Courts. There's a question, for example, of just how much time an individual exposed to radiation or asbestos should have to file a lawsuit. The effects of such exposure can take years to appear.

Judges don't usually have specialized knowledge in technical fields, Boyle said.

"We're highly informed generalists." Research can go a long way in guaranteeing that court decisions are informed, fair ones.

The Michigan Supreme Court attempts to resolve issues fairly and with all the resources it can bring to bear, she said. That hypothetical Main Street man would most likely accept that the law is complex.

People are troubled by such cases as the one involving a plaintiff who sued claiming that he became a transvestite by virtue of riding his bicycle into the back of a Coca-Cola truck.

What people want from lawyers and judges, Boyle said, is "moral courage and intellectual rigor; the ability to distinguish right from wrong, to identify what is neither right nor wrong and the integrity to do what is right because it is right."

"Let me encourage you to keep the faith," she said.

Boyle told a story involving her colleague, the late G. Mennen Williams, who served as chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court.

ABOUT THREE years ago, court members were assembled in their conference room. They were informed that a Michigan Court of Appeals judge had been arrested on a bribery charge.

The Michigan Supreme Court's immediate task was to determine whether that judge, who later committed suicide, should be asked to step down. Court members were shocked and unable to come to grips with the situation. Williams told his colleagues he'd ask Bronson to step down.

"Mennen Williams was a man of great compassion," Boyle said. "He had done what he had to do, he had done what was right."

Michigan's residents are entitled to judges who are worthy of respect.

"It's the most you ask from us, but the least we can do," she said.

Those attending the luncheon enjoyed Boyle's presentation.

"I thought she did a very good job," said Liz Johnson, a Plymouth attorney. "I was very impressed with her insights and observations."

Johnson was particularly interested in Boyle's comments on the relationship between courts and society.

Plymouth attorney Carol Levitte was "extremely impressed with her concept" of what people look for in attorneys and the court system. Levitte agreed that people expect fairness and integrity; involvement in

Holiday gift choices send children a clear message

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Teacher Lois Santer doesn't think Nintendo's a great holiday gift choice for a child.

Santer teaches first grade at Riegel Elementary School in Plymouth Township. She considers Nintendo games the home equivalent of fill-in-the-blank workbooks, in that they don't encourage children to think.

"You can never, ever substitute expensive toys for a game that gives interaction with an adult," said Santer, a Plymouth resident and mother of four adult children. She wouldn't recommend buying a child a TV set for his or her own room, in that doing so discourages interaction with others.

Santer's colleague, Barb Overholt, teaches second grade at Fiegel. She agrees that some gifts are better for children than others.

"Christmas doesn't have to be expensive, but it has to have involvement," said Overholt, a Plymouth resident and an aunt. "Really, that's the key. All children want to learn."

OVERHOLT RECOMMENDED that parents look for things that are highly manipulative. Lego, blocks, clay and such craft supplies as construction paper and scissors can help children learn while having fun.

"It doesn't have to be expensive to be good for children," she said.

Overholt and Santer know these aren't the easiest of times for parents. TV ads bombard families with messages urging parents to buy expensive toys.

"The child looks at those other things and they're wonderful and glitzy," Santer said. She sees a lot of guilt these days on the part of parents; both parents are working, and they feel guilty about not spending more time with their youngsters.

"These things are instant pleasers, child pleasers," Santer said. That's often short-lived, however, and children quickly move on to other, more challenging games and toys.

Parents shouldn't feel guilty about working, Santer said, but should think about the values they want to instill in their children.

"Their time and their thoughts are irreplaceable. They can't be bought."

A family might consider buying notebooks and starting a family journal, Overholt said. Even very young children can contribute, dictating their thoughts for the journal.

FAMILIES CAN work on jigsaw puzzles, play dominoes together or play with puppets, Overholt said.

"Books, of course, are wonderful," she said. (See related story.) Parents can read books to younger children.

Many toys and games help children develop math skills.

Some computer math games can help children learn sequencing, addition and subtraction. Stringing beads helps younger children learn about repetition and patterning, Overholt said, and weaving looms do that as well.

When Santer's children were younger, they often gave decorated shoeboxes — filled with scissors, paper, glue, tape and other craft items — as gifts. Children enjoy working on arts and crafts projects, creating masterpieces out of ribbons, buttons, paints and other odds and ends.

Clay, paint, colored pencils, "things that make them create and think" are best, Santer said.

Parents should think about the message their gift choices send, she said. Santer doesn't favor children wearing costumes depicting Freddy Krueger and other violent characters at Halloween.

"It's not cute, it's not funny, it's glorifying those things." G.I. Joe toys and monster-like items don't send youngsters a positive message.

Horror stories have been with us for years, but those stories have consisted of printed words and perhaps pictures. These days, we're surrounded by graphic displays of adult interpretations of horror stories, Santer said.

IT'S NOT unheard of even now for a child to abandon an expensive toy on Christmas morning in favor of playing with the toy's box or wrapping paper.

"Absolutely, it's still true," Santer said. A colleague of hers recently bought a refrigerator; that colleague's 3-year-old spent many happy hours playing with the box, using it as a house, a car and a spacecraft.

It's also a good idea for children to learn they can't have everything they want, the educators agree.

"The pattern's got to be set by the parent," Overholt said. A parent could buy a piggy bank for a child, encouraging the youngster to save money and buy his or her own toy.

Love of literature will last a lifetime

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Not all holiday gifts for kids have to be toys or games. Books can provide tremendous enjoyment for children — and books are easy to gift-wrap in the bargain.

"There's just something special about owning your own book," said Judy Teachworth, department head for youth services at the Canton Public Library. "You can read it any time you want to."

Librarians from Plymouth and Canton have some thoughts about what books to buy for children.

"Anything from the classics or the Newbery and Caldecott lists," said Pam Rawlinson, assistant director of the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth. "Those are always definite pluses, high-quality kinds of things."

THE NEWBERY and Caldecott Awards are given annually for excellence in children's literature. The Newbery Award has been given since 1922 and the Caldecott since 1938.

The Dunning-Hough Library and the Canton Public Library have lists available of all the award winners. Parents are welcome to stop by and look over those lists.

Magazine subscriptions make excellent gifts for children, Rawlinson and Teachworth said. Many magazines are edited specifically for children. Sports Illustrated, for example, publishes an edition for kids. Magazines on science, nature, history and other subjects are available.

"It's a good start for some of the younger kids," Rawlinson said. Children enjoy receiving magazines throughout the year.

As with toys and games, books and magazines should be chosen with a child's age and interests in mind. Very young children enjoy board books, Teachworth said.

The "Max" series by Rosemary Wells is popular with young children. Those books involve a bunny named Max. Board books by authors Tana Hoben and Helen Oxenbury are also popular.

Children who are a bit older enjoy picture books, such as "Dr. Seuss" and "The Berenstain Bears" series. The "Madeline" and "Babar" books are perennial favorites, Teachworth said. Many children enjoy reading the "Waldo" books.

BUYING BOOKS for older children can be a bit more difficult, she said. Non-fiction titles, such as books about dinosaurs, are popular with some children. Some dinosaur books include craft projects.

Shel Silverstein's poetry books, "Where the Sidewalk Ends" and others, are popular with children in the middle and upper elementary school grades.

Children enjoy reading the "Guinness Book of World Records" and "Guinness Book of Sports Records," Rawlinson said. "Doubleday's Children's Almanac" is a good choice, as is "Richard Scarry's Storybook Dictionary" or another dictionary for children.

Many series of books are written for elementary school children. "The Sweet Valley Twins" and "The Baby Sitters Club" books are popular with girls in that age group, Teachworth said.

Girls might enjoy reading "The American Girls Collection," she said. Those books tell the story of three girls, Kirsten, Samantha and Molly, who live in different eras, 1854, 1904 and 1944.

Another series, "The Kids of Polk Street," is popular with elementary school kids. Some girls enjoy reading "Anne of Green Gables," which was shown recently on PBS.

'The books are there. Once they get started on them, I think books would certainly hold their own.'
—Pam Rawlinson Dunning-Hough Library

The Canton Public Library has a book by David Macaulay, "The Way Things Work." Although the book is more expensive than some others, Teachworth said, it could be a good choice for a child interested in science and engineering.

RAWLINSON'S FOUND that such classics as "The Velveteen Rabbit" are coming back in style with young readers.

Classic Christmas stories, such as "Twas the Night Before Christmas," are still popular with children. Many youngsters enjoy reading biographies of sports heroes, scientists and others.

"Handicraft books are nice too," Rawlinson said.

Books on tape can be a godsend for children during lengthy car trips, and videos of children's classics are another gift option.

Librarians encourage parents and other gift-givers to consider books as gift choices.

"The books are there," Rawlinson said. "Once they get started on them, I think books would certainly hold their own."

Court's goal: to provide leadership and courage

community affairs and activities can go a long way in making people more aware of the work of lawyers and judges, she said.

"She's very well thought of," Judge John MacDonald of the 35th District Court said of Boyle. He agreed judges and lawyers can take steps to make people understand how courts work.

"I think they're trying to make the courts more user-friendly," said MacDonald, whose court serves the Plymouth-Canton-Northville area.

At the 35th District Court, judges speak regularly to student and senior citizen groups and that helps demystify the court's work, he said.

GOOD NEWS, FEDERAL EMPLOYEES:
You can switch to M-CARE any time. Enrollment is through December 31st. Your insurance continues.

When it's a lot worse than just a scraped knee.

We all hope that nothing serious ever happens to our child, but if it does, the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital at the University of Michigan Medical Center is ready with expert help.

And you get them both with M-CARE, the only HMO that links all the resources of the U of M Medical Center to the personal care of your family doctor and your nearby hospital. M-CARE covers you for office visits, checkups, hospitalization—even emergency helicopter transport.

Of course, with the M-CARE network of hospitals in cities like Royal Oak, Dearborn and Rochester, you don't always have to go to the U of M Medical Center. But isn't it good to know it's there whenever you need it? To find out more, ask your employer. Or call M-CARE at 747-9700.

M-CARE The HMO Choice

Greens

Club sponsors essay contest

The Plymouth-Canton Civitan Club is sponsoring the 12th annual Citizenship Essay Contest. This year's theme is "Celebrating the 200th Anniversary of the Bill of Rights: What Does It Mean to Us Today?"

Competition began in late November and will extend through March 15, 1990. All students enrolled in a high school within the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district are eligible to compete. All entries must be submitted to the contest chairman by midnight March 15.

Contest chairman is Jerry Thompson, Plymouth Canton High School English teacher. The topic is being used as a class theme or writing assignment in several English/social studies classes at Centennial Educational Park.

PARTICIPATING IN the essay contest gives students opportunities to expand and refine their perception of what citizenship means at all levels of society. Contest participants benefit in several ways, including:

- improving skills in the development of a theme topic or concept;
- enhancing organizational skills;
- gaining knowledge through research;
- gaining practical experience in the art of persuasion;
- using correct grammar and spelling.

The three finalists will be awarded cash prizes: first place, $125; second place, $75; and third place, $50. For each additional five entries beyond a minimum of 10, the club will add an additional $25 at each prize level.

For example, when 15 essays are received, the first, second and third place awards will be $150, $100 and $75, respectively. This is done to encourage students to enter the contest.

Students who are interested may obtain contest information at the general offices of Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem high schools. For more information, call Jerry Thompson, 451-6600 Ext. 344, or Joe Henshaw, 453-7569.

weddings and engagements

Smith-McElroy

Susan L. McElroy of Birmingham and Timothy B. Smith of Royal Oak were married Sept. 30 in Port Huron.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. David (Rosalyn) McElroy of Port Huron and Mr. and Mrs. George B. Smith of Plymouth.

The bride, a Michigan State University graduate, is employed as a sales representative with Kennedy & Associates.

Her husband, a Michigan State University graduate, is employed as a branch manager with Republic Bancorp Mortgage Inc. in Bloomfield Hills.

Sister of the bride Lynn McElroy was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were sister of the bride Amy McElroy, Nancy Misra, Lauri Prescott, sister of the bridegroom Barbara Smith and C. Ann Jeffares.

Scott Stinebaugh was the best man. The groomsmen were Mark O'Day, Mark Stubler, brother of the bridegroom Greg Smith, brother of the bridegroom Tom Smith, brother of the bridegroom Dan Smith, and brother of the bride David McElroy.

For her wedding, the bride wore a sheath-style gown adorned with sequins. Her gown had a train, and she carried a bouquet of white gardenias.

A reception was held at the Thomas Edison Inn in Port Huron.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii, the newlyweds are making their home in Royal Oak.

Hallway-Schwartz

Karen Anne Schwartz of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., and Capt. Frederick Xystus Hallway Jr. of Decatur, Ga., were married Sept. 16 at the Air Force Academy Chapel in Colorado Springs, Colo. The Rev. Ted Wuerffel performed the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Werner and Jean Schwartz of Colorado Springs and Fred and Bunny Hallway of Plymouth.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Colorado in Boulder. She is employed as a financial analyst at Eglin Air Force Base in Fort Walton, Fla.

Her husband is a graduate of the Air Force Academy. He is attending graduate school at Georgia Tech in Atlanta, Ga., and will graduate in March of 1990.

Kelly Nickolson was the maid of honor. Lisa Weeks was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Helen Murphy, Sue Sandusky and Anne Levy.

John Buglione was the best man. The groomsmen were Paul Hughes, brother of the bride Larry Schwartz, Jim Simpson and Robin Hamelin.

For her wedding, the bride wore a silk dress with hand-embroidered pearls on the bodice and around the skirt's hem. She carried pink roses with other soft-colored flowers.

A reception was at the Officers Club in Colorado Springs. A open house will be given in the couple's honor Sunday, Dec. 17, at the home of the groom.

The newlyweds have planned a trip to Europe in the spring in 1990.

Calling

Pastor finds his life of service to others rewarding

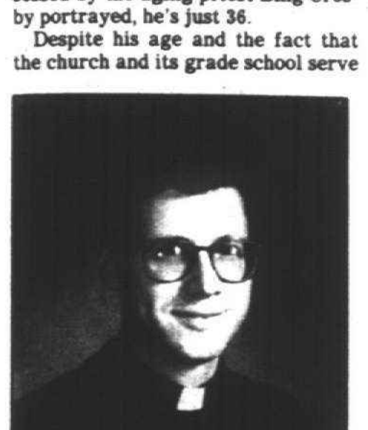
By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

The bells of St. Mary's chime, and, in meeting the pastor for the first time, a visitor expects to see a priest whose decades of service have dealt him a lined face, arthritis and healthy doses of holiness and wisdom.

While the Rev. Ray Bucon, newly-appointed pastor at St. Mary's of Wayne, has all the attributes possessed by the aging priest Bing Crosby portrayed, he's just 36.

Despite his age and the fact that the church and its grade school serve 2,050 registered families in Wayne, Westland, Canton and Inkster, Bucon is the only priest at the parish.

"Most people start out with a little house, fix it up, and then get a bigger house. I've already got the big house," said Bucon, speaking of the church's shortage of priests.



The Rev. Ray Bucon serves as pastor at St. Mary's of Wayne.

AN IRISH immigrant founded St. Mary's while Abraham Lincoln was president, and many parishioners trace their lineage to folks who attended the groundbreaking.

Since his appointment in July, Bucon has forged bonds with many of the old-timers. He's also made time for youth.

Twice a week, he says Mass for them. At lunchtime or at the end of the day, he drops into the school cafeteria or a classroom to say hello.

Taking care of parishioners' and employees' needs, finances, broken boilers, funerals, weddings (about three dozen a year) and assorted crises often relegates days off to the land of fantasy. Nonetheless, Bucon seems happy.

"There's no way the seminary can prepare you for everything you do. But I love it. Every day is different," he said. "This is a great parish. The people are down to earth and tell me what they think. They're my kind of people. There are no pretensions."

Without their six-page Sunday bulletin, members of St. Mary's would have a tough time keeping up with all that's going on.

There are soccer games, blanket collections, Catholic Youth Organization activities, walks with Focus:HOPE, and coffee and doughnut get-togethers. In the works are weekend retreats and a parish baseball team.

To help make ends meet, The Friends of St. Mary sell produce from the Belleville Pumpkin Factory, host raffles and Vegas nights, golf tournaments and 1950s dances.

MANY FUND-RAISING projects benefit from Bucon's unique brand of salesmanship — the citrus sale in particular.

His goal is to sell 2,800 boxes of Florida oranges and grapefruit. To that end, he recently appeared on the city's cable news show, expertly juggling fruit while informing viewers about St. Mary's financial situation.

"I felt like Ollie Fretter."

The parish's needs are many. Parking is inadequate, and parishioners are without an activities building. St. Mary's six basketball teams have used local gyms since structural problems prompted the closing of the parish gymnasium.

Bringing it up to code would cost about $1 million, estimates Bucon. So Bucon schemes and dreams. One of his hopes is to buy the Farmer Jack supermarket next door to the parish.

"We need our own parking and a large place to be able to gather for dances, meetings, recreational activities, bingo, and coffee and doughnuts.

"My dream told me to call the owner and ask him to give us the building. I did, we met, and while it's not free, the property is for sale."

He hasn't given up, nor has Bucon quit thinking. He's noticed a for sale sign at the nearby sandwich shop.

BUCON, A TWIN, is one of three Catholic priests in the National Guard in Michigan.

As chaplain, Bucon drills one weekend a month, usually at the Light Guard Armory on Eight Mile. Four times a year, he reports to Camp Grayling. His duties there often involve tracking down soldiers amid thousands of acres of woodlands to inform him or her about a crisis at home.

"During my week at Camp Grayling in August, I delivered 18 emergency notifications, counseled 27 soldiers, heard three confessions and conducted eight services and Masses. I also made daily visits to those in Restricted Quarters (yes, these quarters are like being in jail)," said Bucon.

The priest also took a helicopter ride, dipping "so close to trees I felt I could reach out and pick the pine cones out of the trees."

"My saddest moment came when, on an evening off after 10 days in the field, a soldier was struck by a car and killed," he said. "The man was a British soldier who was training with us for two weeks. We held a memorial service for him, as part of my duties are to the honor the dead, and I tell you, when the bugler played 'Taps,' there was a lot of emotion in the air. I was reminded of what Jesus said, 'Be ready, for you know not the day nor the hour.' "

SINCE HE WAS a kid in Detroit, Bucon had a desire to help others.

Still, before he committed to the priesthood, Bucon tried a few other things. He drove a hi-lo in a steel mill, worked maintenance in the Rouge plant, helped a doctor research birth defects, did income tax returns and worked in construction.

Bucon was ordained in 1979 after earning his master's in divinity, and served as a deacon at St. William's in Walled Lake. He has served as assistant pastor at St. Anthony in Belleville (where he also was a volunteer firefighter) and St. Raymond's in Detroit, and most recently at St. Valentine in Redford Township.

Of the 70 seminarians in Bucon's freshman class at Sacred Heart Seminary, just two are still priests. Coincidentally, the other, the Rev. Thomas Belczak, is now pastor at St. Val's.

All work and no play would make him a dull guy, so Bucon skis, plays racquetball, and with Outward Bound, goes rock climbing, repelling, canoeing and swimming.

"I took piano lessons for half a year, before I discovered golf," Bucon said. The budding musician is accomplished enough to play hymns on his portable keyboards while saying Mass in the field on National Guard duty.

Celebrating Mass is a part of Bucon's duties with the National Guard in Michigan.

The most challenging aspect of the priesthood is trying to change attitudes, he said.

"It's a long-term challenge. That's why I like working with my hands. I can't see someone change in attitude, but I can see a wooden keyboard case once it's done.

"We spend so much time worrying about things we can't do anything about," he said. "Why don't we worry about the things we can control?"

church bulletin

The church bulletin is published every Thursday in the Observer. Information must be received in the Livonia office by noon the Monday prior to publication.

A second concert is set for 11 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 17. For details, call the church at 525-3664 or 261-9276. Nursery and toddler service will be provided.

● INSTALLATION

The Rev. James W. Simonson will be installed as pastor of Resurrection Lutheran Church at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 10, in the church, on Newburgh in Livonia. The service will be conducted by the Rev. Milton R. Reison, bishop of the Southeast Michigan Synod of the Evagelical Lutheran Church in America.

Simonson was co-pastor of Bethel Lutheran Church of Cedarville and Zion Lutheran Church of Allenville, both in the Upper Peninsula. Serving with him there was his wife, the Rev. Mary T. Olivanti, now on leave for graduate study and special ministries. They have two children, Amy, 7, and Jacqueline, 3 months.

After graduation from Redford High School in Detroit, he attended the University of Notre Dame and the Gregorian University in Rome where he was ordained in the Roman Catholic Church. He later received a doctorate in classical languages and literature from Harvard University. He's served as director of libraries at the University of Notre Dame and the University of Portland in Oregon.

In 1984, he was received into the Lutheran ministry and served for five years in the Northern Great Lakes Synod.

● SACRED MUSIC

A Christmas Collage Concert will be presented at 7 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 10, at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, 39020 Five Mile, Livonia. All of the choral and bell choirs of the congregation, including other instrumentalists and a guest jazz trio, will combine their talents to offer sacred and secular music. There will be a sing-along. Refreshments will be served and baby-sitting provided. The public may attend.

● EVENING CONCERT

A Christmas concert with Richard Allison is set for 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 10, at Faith Convenant Church, 14 Mile at Drake, Farmington Hills. For details, call the church office, 661-9191. Allison, from Minnesota, is well-known in Christian music circles. His talents, once given to a career as actor and musician, are devoted to a full-time ministry as a Christian artist.

Chris Alice and his wife, Denise Zuzow, make a living operating a photo processing shop in Redford. Daughter Hillary joins them in the store every day.

Minding the store

Some folks go it alone

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Who needs big?

Not these business people.

They're not interested in mergers, acquisitions and explosive growth. They work with a spouse or another family member in what once were commonly known as mom-and-pop operations.

They have developed a skill or expertise and are willing to work longer hours than they would as employees to call their own shots or have more control over their economic destiny.

They have some part-time help, but it probably doesn't add up to 40 hours per week.

They are people like:

- Chris Alice and Denise Zuzow, a married couple who own and operate Quick Pix, a photo processing and supply store in Redford.
- Pam and Barbara Bigley, a daughter and mother team who run Birds Eye View and Nature Center in Rochester.
- Skip Rosenthal and Alice McCoy, a married couple who make a go of Books Abound in Farmington.

"SOMETIMES, you wonder why in the hell are you doing this," Chris Alice said. "If you're the kind of person who doesn't adjust well to pressure, if you're not a self starter, it's not good for you.

"If you're a person who doesn't have any goals or dreams in life, I'd say stay away from going into business for yourself."

Chris and Denise have been in business for six years. He was a self-employed commercial photographer before opening the processing shop.

Each works at least of 60 hours per week, he said. Their three young children are often in the store with them.

"It does put a strain on them of one kind, but in other ways, I think, they're sharper than most kids," Alice said. "They know how to behave better, how to operate machines. They know business concepts. We talk about it a lot."

Family vacations, two or three times a year, revolve around business seminars on long weekends "when we can find someone to cover at the store," she said.

Quick Pix's business prospects have brightened recently because K mart isn't processing photos in its stores, and Fotomat has closed Detroit area operations, Alice said.

"Quality and service — those are the two big things in my kind of business," he said. "It's growing, doing very well."

PAM BIGLEY, who earned a degree in wildlife biology, started a wildlife supply store six years ago. Her mother, Barbara, a former elementary school teacher, had been contemplating opening a wildlife gallery.

The two formally became partners last year.

"Now we deal in backyard bird feeding supplies and things relating to nature — fossils, minerals, binoculars, fine art, crafts," Barbara said.

"We stock things of good quality. We think they're teaching tools. You sell the idea that the world is fun, big, beautiful and nice to know about."

Direct deposit urged to save time and cash

By R.J. King
special writer

Since the earliest days of commerce, currency has been represented by rocks, bones, pelts and even chicken feed. But while one of the latest payment instruments, checks, have brought convenience and efficiency, they have also created a flood of paperwork.

As nearly 100 million checks change hands every day, financial institutions, businesses and consumers must pay for the labor: Each check must be printed, then signed and mailed and later retrieved, reconciled and stored.

Federal, state and local economies are wasting millions of dollars each year by not using direct deposit, said William Thornton, president of the Michigan Automated Clearing House Association, which is headquartered in Troy.

"It's really a win-win situation for everyone involved," Thornton said.

"FOR INSTANCE, financial institutions can save money for each paycheck that is converted to direct deposit, while businesses save money because they don't have to process and distribute all those checks.

"In addition, employees save time by not having to visit a financial institution in order to deposit their payroll check. It also give them peace of mind if they happen to be sick, on vacation or out of the office during pay time."

By means of an automated clearinghouse network, which for Michigan is the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago, an employee can authorize his employer to deposit his "paycheck" by computer into an account of his choice.

ONCE THE authorization is processed, the employer's bank handles all accounts it oversees and sends the remaining deposits to the Federal Reserve, which, in turn, sends the payments to the appropriate financial institution, whether it be a bank, thrift or credit union.

Currently, 95 percent of the savings and loan institutions, 84 percent of the banks and 61 percent of the credit unions in the lower peninsula are members of MACHA.

"In most cases, an employee's paycheck is deposited on the morning they are to be paid," said Margaret Kargol, marketing director. "Although we have had rare instances where someone's check might be delayed or misdirected, we've never lost a check because each payment is assigned a trace number all the way down the line."

"Lost" doesn't tell the entire story. "Late" is just as important. If an employee doesn't receive a paper paycheck, he knows who's at fault. When an electronic paycheck is late, he doesn't know who to blame because several institutions may be involved.

ALMOST HALF of all Social Security recipients — more than 18 million — receive benefit payments via the electronic network, according to the federal government, considered to be the most ardent user of direct deposit. Not one payment has been lost to date, it claims.

"We think direct deposit is an excellent service to offer our customers and the quality remains very high," said Tom Craigie, vice president and senior corporate services officer for Manufacturer's Bank of Detroit, which has more than 150 branch offices in Michigan. "It's probably the only employee benefit that a company makes money on."

Financial institutions can save an average of 60 cents for each paycheck that is converted to direct deposit, MACHA says, Costs of 71 cents to $1.49 are charged when a paycheck is deposited at a teller window, while the direct deposit charge usually is three to 11 cents.

BUSINESSES SAVE another 10-23 cents for each payroll check processed via direct deposit, MACHA says. Direct deposit eliminates such problems as keeping payments confidential, getting checks to outlying areas and manual payroll adjustments.

Direct deposit helped strengthen First Federal of Michigan's relationship with clients, said Harold Piotrowski, who was recently elected chairman of the board of MACHA and is first vice president of First Federal.

"In some instances, some of our business clients are now opening checking and savings accounts right on the premises. And if demand warrants, an ATM (automatic teller machine) will be installed on the premises and free ATM access or free checking may be offered."

Perks lure top executives

By Helen Niemiec
staff writer

In the competitive world of hiring executives, what is the most effective lure to attracting a potential mover and shaker? A hefty salary? Pleasant working conditions? Use of the company plane?

Salary and conditions are a given. What increasingly is being used as bait are perquisites — or "perks." While salary basically is a private matter, perks are visible to co-workers and business associates, providing an overt symbol of a person's success.

One personnel consultant called perks "conspicuous consumption," agreeing that some perks are acquired solely for flash and establishing a place in the pecking order.

ONCE A perk becomes common, such as a company car, it no longer is an effective perk, executive search firms say. Once most managers have a car, the status symbol is lost and that perk then becomes just another part of the overall benefits plan.

New IRS rules require that companies charge back a part of the car costs to the individual as an addition to income, said Charles Brooks, vice president and general manager of Executive Personnel Service in Southfield.

"If a company is leasing a car that costs over $15,000, there is a very heavy penalty that the individual has to pay for the company leasing a luxury car. It's not as good a benefit as it used to be."

TRADITIONAL perks, such as stock options and relocation fees, are still part of the negotiations when trying to bring an executive into the Detroit area.

Lucrative retirement and 401(k) packages are becoming an important perk negotiating point along with deferred compensation, said Bob Drake, general manager of Snelling & Snelling in Livonia.

With upper echelon employees, the perks sometimes are more important that the salary, Drake said.

"Once they're in the $100,000-plus salary range, what they do is try to get into more perks rather than negotiate for a higher amount of taxable income."

The more outrageous perks — sometimes referred to as "quirk perks" — such as use of company helicopters, vacation resorts and exotic trips generally are reserved for those at the very top, presidents or chief executive officers, Drake said. Those arrangements are made between the chief officers of the company and the soon-to-be hired executive and never occur between an executive search firm and client.

THERE IS LITTLE agreement among the executive search companies as to whether perks offered must be higher to lure potential executives to the Detroit area.

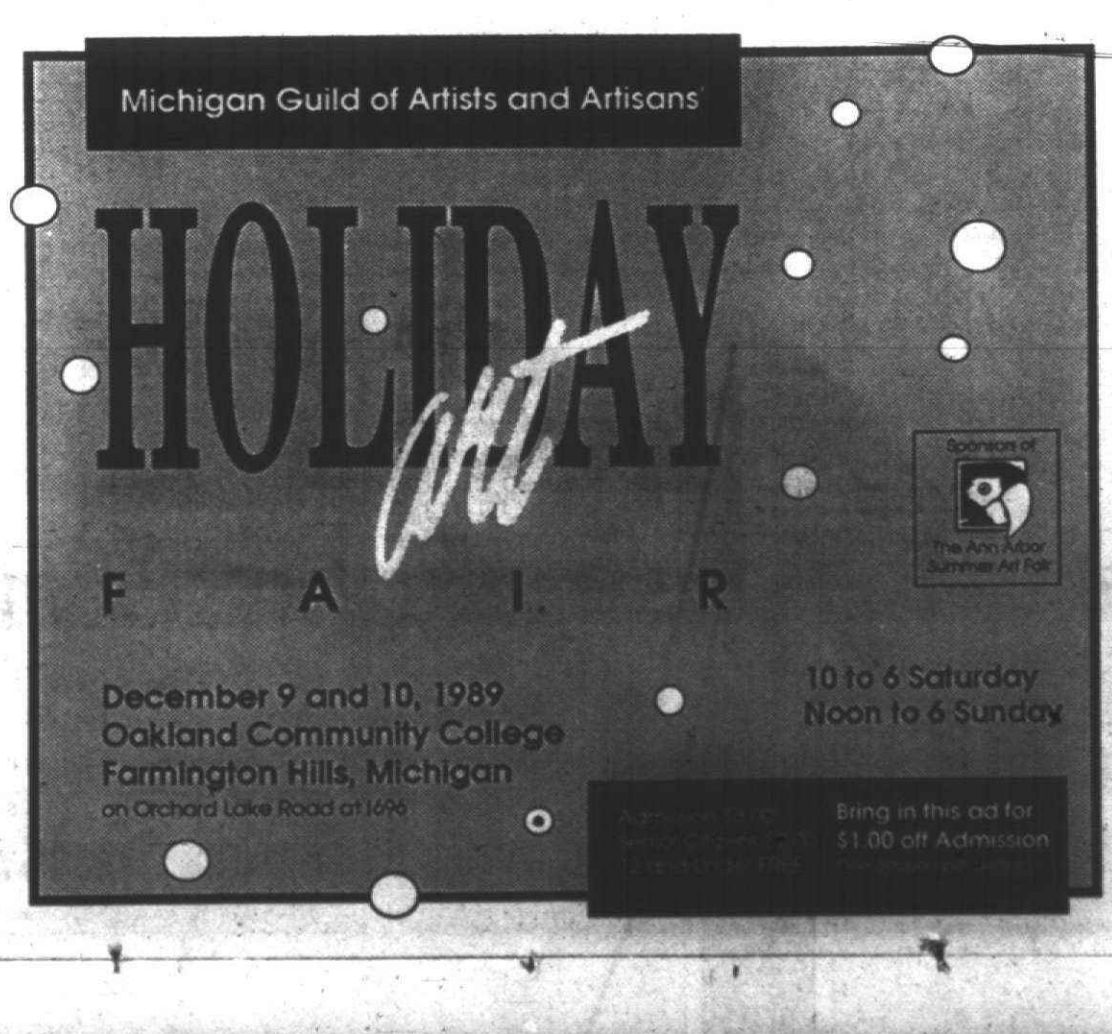
Some believe Detroit has a negative image, making it more difficult to bring in executives. Others contend that as long as automotive headquarters and automotive supplies are in the area, executives will move to the area to be closer to the heartbeat of the industry.

There is still a bias against Detroit and the surrounding area, Brooks said.

"Detroit has enjoyed extremely bad press. So when people hear Detroit, they hang up.

"It's hard to get people to come in for a look. We have to sell heavily to get someone here."

But the area still is attractive to executives because the area is home to so many corporations, Drake said. "The buck still talks."



Direct deposit promoted to save time and money

BUT IF direct deposit is to save millions by the use of cost-efficient cash management technology, MACHA has a long way to go. Currently, just 8 percent of American employees are paid by direct deposit compared to nearly all Japanese and roughly 80 percent of Europeans.

"Right now we're in the process of marketing ourselves better," Kargol said. "For the first 15 years we've been on-line, our time has been spent getting everything down pat. Now we're turning toward educating consumers and employers about the benefits of direct deposit."

MACHA BEGAN its first advertising campaign in September. The campaign consisted of a talking paycheck called "Big Mouth" demanding to be taken to the bank immediately, even though the employee was at a meeting or eating lunch.

The association was still evaluating whether the campaign was successful, Thornton said. The National Automated Clearing House Association, of which MACHA is a member, added 380,000 new accounts after an ad campaign earlier in the year, he said. Just 170,000 new accounts had been expected.

Direct deposit has helped to improve employee time allocation while cutting down on costs, said Don Krupp, corporate cash manager for William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak.

"IT REALLY offers our employees peace of mind because with direct deposit you're not always watching for your check in the mail or trying to trace it down if it never arrives. As for myself, I've been on the system since 1971, and there's never been a problem."

About 35 percent of Beaumont's 8,000 employees use direct deposit. There is the occasional mix-up, but the hospital has never lost a payment through the system, Krupp said.

"Once in a great while there's a glitch in the system or someone enters a wrong number, but those instances are very rare. But overall, direct deposit has offered convenience to our employees while saving some man hours.

"So yes, it has been very beneficial from our perspective."

Lots of small business people just like to do it for themselves

Daughter and mother used their own money and loans to start the business. Both also work a minimum of 60 hours a week tending to their investment.

High-quality products, their knowledge of wildlife and science and unusual products such as a Galileo thermometer attract customers, Barbara said.

The store is profitable, but not generating big money now, Barbara said. But then, there's no desire to grow too big too fast.

She admits to a few surprises since jumping into business for herself.

"For me, everything costs more than I think, takes longer timewise and is more work than I expected. That's OK. I love it," Barbara said.

ROSENTHAL AND McCoy were librarians, he at Henry Ford Community College, she at the Southfield Public Library, until their retirements last summer.

They've had a book store in Farmington for three years and before that for three years in Royal Oak.

"I started collecting books at rummage sales," Rosenthal said. "Pretty soon, I had a houseful, and you start wondering what to do with all these books. So I opened a little store."

Both kept their full-time jobs when launching the business. Initially, they hired a full-time person to help run the operation. Now, several part-timers in aggregate work 20 hours per week, Rosenthal said.

Where in the world are the cars from San Diego?

Dan McCosh

Mexico has been relocated to somewhere south of Toledo, while Sao Paulo, Brazil, has been towed across the Atlantic to West Berlin. Hiroshima is in Flat Rock and Halifax, Nova Scotia, is now somewhere on the edge of the North Sea.

This somewhat fractured picture of international geography is what I get from trying to wade through the U.S. domestic car sales statistics reported in most major newspapers, including the Wall Street Journal and various trade publications, notably Automotive News.

Any fool should know what a foreign car is. (Or a furrin car, or an imported car, depending on the company you keep.) It's one of those funny-looking things made somewhere else that is taking all those American jobs, right?

Well, not exactly.

EVEN WAY back when, when the only imports we were worried about was Volkswagens, the Canadians were pulling a fast one by luring American car companies over and getting them to build auto plants, sticking on their own mud flaps and bug screens and palming them off as "Canadian" cars.

Most of them ended back in the U.S. anyway, where the WSJ et al counted them as U.S. domestic sales.

Even sneakier, Volvo built a small plant in Canada, shipped some of the cars to the United States, where the WSJ etc. counted them as imports from Sweden.

Then Volkswagen began shipping boatloads of parts to Pennsylvania (USA) and assembled them into Rabbits — which is when I lost the big argument.

I WAS working in a car-counting operation at the time (the car business tends to support this kind of thing), and my boss figured that the VWs assembled in the United States should be counted as U.S. sales, sort of in honor of the new plant.

No way, I said. We're going to have millions of these cars in a couple of years, and we will lose all track of which cars are furrin. I lost, but the WSJ agreed, and kept counting U.S.-built Rabbits as imports. For a while, anyway.

If you are bold enough to try to take note of import car sales today, you will note a slight decline, which is because most of the furrin cars sold today are Japanese, and a lot of them are being assembled in U.S. or Canadian plants.

All of these U.S.-assembled Japanese products now are being counted as U.S. car sales by major business publications, including the WSJ, which changed its mind on the subject.

THE JAPANESE are happy, because they can claim they lived up to export restraint agreements, and now the gate is open to flood the U.S. with Japanese exports.

The U.S. government is happy, because several administrations in a row have been arguing that car imports aren't a real national problem; the real problem is socks made in Taiwan. Undercounting auto imports reinforces this notion.

The WSJ (which leans toward the Taiwanese socks point of view anyway) sticks its tongue in its editorial cheek and claims a certain logical consistancy to its methods.

THEN I noticed Mexico had moved. Mexican auto imports today are crowding BMW in sales volume.

But Automotive News is counting Mexican imports as U.S. domestic car sales — apparently because they are sold in U.S. dealerships. Japanese imports sold in U.S. dealers, however, make the import column.

Lets try Brazil, which recently passed up Sweden's SAAB, for example, as an exporter to the United States.

Brazilian exports to the United States end up lumped under cars from Europe in Automotive News, while Mexican cars become American, under a sales reporting system that breaks out U.S. sales into cars from Europe, Japan, Korea and the United States based on the national ownership of the retail sales operation.

WITH MY head still swimming, I noticed a car sales report in Automotive News that carefully sorts out Canadian import sales and Canadian domestic sales.

If there is a single Canadian car company today, I must have missed something. My Canadian friends are quick to tell me all cars sold in Canada today are imports, as far as they are concerned.

Other than an abstract interest in how an important business statistic has become hopelessly confused, the only reason to be concerned about car sales reporting methodology is that the current system drastically underreports the effect of auto imports on the U.S. trade balance by a factor of about 50 percent — by pushing the dollar value of camouflaged imports into the "domestic" column with muddled figures.

It helps keep Washington's mind on those socks.

Look for these 10 signs of job stress and burnout

Do you dread going into your office or place of business? Do you often feel frustrated, out of control and unhappy? Are people in your life becoming more of a burden than a pleasure to spend time with?

These are common symptoms of burnout, one of the end products of stress. It begins with overwork and unrealistic expectations of what you can do or want to accomplish. In its final stages, you may find it difficult to cope both personally and professionally with your present lifestyle.

The following is a list that presents the most common symptoms of personal and professional career burnout. If you agree with five or more of the following statements, the closer you are to suffering it.

focus: small business

Mary DiPaolo

1. I always seem to be tired and become exhausted easily.
2. I am bored with my job or business.
3. It seems as if I get upset or angry more often than I used to in the past.
4. It's difficult for me to say no in response to other people's demands, especially when related to activities or commitments outside the office.
5. I find it easier and more comfortable to keep conversations with others less personal whenever possible.
6. I am increasingly bothered by people who want to share their problems or concerns with me; I have enough of my own to worry about.
7. When I see a job or task through to completion, I tend to focus on what needs to be done next instead of feeling positive about my accomplishment.
8. I believe that the circumstances and people in my life have more control over me than I have over them.
9. People probably perceive me as a pessimist, but I see myself as being very realistic.
10. I often wish I could "disappear" somewhere for a few days or weeks if only to get some rest.

THERE ARE several causes for burnout, but most of them center around two major areas — your work and yourself. Heavy demands, long hours and high expectations are all sources of stress that can contribute to the problem. By recognizing the symptoms of stress early and doing what is necessary to overcome them, burnout can be avoided.

Unfortunately, the overwhelming majority of those who suffer from burnout do not generally seek any form of treatment. Without treatment, a vicious cycle can develop to take the form of broken relationships, frequent job or career changes and unexplained illness.

Even without deduction, IRA can be smart

By Sid Mittra
special writer

If your company provides a pension and you earn too much, any contribution to an IRA is no longer tax deductible.

However, a contribution is still allowed to grow tax-deferred. If you won't get a tax deduction, the question of whether to contribute to an IRA is important.

The difference between the tax-deferred and taxable IRA contributions is significant. At the end of 30 years — assuming 10-percent earnings — tax-free interest is the difference between $360,00 and $260,000. This $100,000 is the excess savings due to tax-free interest and compounding.

OF COURSE, taxes on before-tax IRA contributions would have to be deducted in order to arrive at more accurate excess savings figure.

And the investor will be required to keep plenty of records: income tax forms and a copy of Form 8606 for any year with a non-deductible contribution; Forms 1099-R and W-2P, showing distributions from the IRA, and Form 5498, showing the value of the IRA at the end of each year.

Non-deductible IRA contributions offer economic benefits, but the burden may prove to be onerous.

A tax-deferred annuity may be a better alternative than a non-deductible IRA since you can put as much as you want in an annuity and the money still will grow tax-deferred.

IRA ASSETS must be invested in one of two plans: an individual retirement account that has a bank or other qualified organization as trustee or custodian; or an individual retirement annuity.

An IRA account must be a trust or custodial account, although it may be in a self-directed IRA. The individual's interest in the account must be non-forfeitable.

Unless the contributor becomes disabled or dies, the account must be held exclusively to provide retirement benefits. The IRA benefits can be distributed no sooner than age 59½ unless death or disability intervene. Distribution must begin no later than age 70½.

AN IRA trust may accept only cash. But the cash can be invested in savings accounts, stocks, bonds, mutual funds, real estate, limited partnerships, approved government coins, gold and endowments. However, collectibles such as art and gems are prohibited.

A tax-deferred annuity issued by an insurance company. The investment must be non-transferable, and its distribution must begin by no later than age 70½ of the annuitant.

Moviemaker's art is animated films

By Kevin Lawrence
special writer

'I feel an animated story can entertain both children and adults, at the same time, but on different levels.'
— Don Bluth

ONCE UPON A TIME, but not so very long ago, and in a land not so very far away, one of today's leading animators led a group of disgruntled cartoonists hi-ho-ing out the hallowed doors of the wonderful world of Disney Studios.

The executives running Walt Disney's movieland empire wished this talented group would just disappear into Never-Never Land.

"They don't like competition. But competition was what the industry needed because animation was quickly becoming a dying and non-profitable art," said Don Bluth, interviewed at the Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn, where he was staying. Bluth was in town recently to promote the opening of his new, animated, full-length feature film, "All Dogs Go to Heaven," now showing at Detroit-area theaters.

"After Walt died, the later Disney films changed — the result of Disney Studios becoming very corporate," he said.

"THEY LOST SIGHT of Walt's vision. And in the never-ending search for more profit, the first thing to go was production values. They said, 'Do it for less. Cut back on detail and color.'

"But that's what makes animation come alive. Disney animation eventually became shallow and pale, like someone threw water into the soup because Walt wasn't there watching the over the pot."

Bluth's latest — "All Dogs Go to Heaven" — is a family film for all ages. "The public has come to see animation over the years as something exclusively for kids, for the nursery. And that's simply not true. I feel an animated story can entertain both children and adults, at the same time, but on different levels," he said.

Can an animated feature really entertain adults and kids at the same time?

"Sure," said Bluth. "That's the challenge. It's like writing a book for a 4-year-old and a 35-year-old. Your film has to have enough intellectual depth in it that a 4-year-old will see one thing and an adult another.

"If an event or concept is beyond the understanding of the child, invariably they'll find their own meaning in it and they'll be happy with it. And as the child grows and sees the film again and again — which experience has shown us will happen — he or she will discover new meanings.

"VINTAGE DISNEY is like that — very sophisticated, made for children and adults, and dealt with some very serious issues: 'Pinocchio,' coming of age; and 'Bambi,' for example, losing your mother."

And in keeping with vintage Disney, Bluth believes you can't cut evil or danger out of the story because "if you do, you present an utterly distorted view of life . . . and children, in particular, will suffer."

Bluth began his cartooning career at Disney studios in 1955 when he worked with Jack Lounsbery, one of the "nine old men." Bluth explained that "nine old men" formed a group of veteran animators who were involved in all the original Disney productions, starting with "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" (the world's first full-length animated feature, in 1938).

Just out of high school in 1955, Bluth was an assistant animator on "Sleeping Beauty," for 18 months. He left Disney to become a missionary for the Mormon Church in Argentina. Later, when he returned to the United States, Bluth formed a theater group with his brother in Culver City, Calif. He was back animating in 1968, working on morning cartoons at Filmation Studios before rejoining Disney in 1971.

In his first stint with Disney Studios, working with Lounsbery, Bluth became familiar with the classical animation techniques he believes were later abandoned by Disney and animators in general. These same methods of animating are now at the core of all Bluth's work. And to get back to classical animation basics was the reason Bluth and company left Disney in 1979.

FULL MOVEMENT animation is very different from the limited animation of Saturday morning cartoons, but the two are often confused by the public. Bluth is quick to point out the differences, both technically and, more importantly to the seasoned animator, morally.

"Limited animation is just that — limited. Characters don't move even half as much and visually. They're one-dimensional," he said. "At one point, there was a sincere attempt to develop limited animation as an art — Bullwinkle, Mr. Magoo, for example. But now, limited animation on the whole, is a marketing tool.

"But let's get to the soul of it. The real difference between what I and other feature animators do and Saturday morning cartoons is this. We try to tell a story that will affect our audience, children and adults, both emotionally and intellectually. That you'll somehow be better for the experience, having seen our film."

In Bluth's opinion, Saturday morning cartoons are created solely as a billboard to sell toys and cereal. "They have nothing to offer the young mind. They're not created to entertain or teach or impart any kind of lesson. They're there just to sell, and children are the victims," he said.

"The only reason these cartoons exist is to get the kids' attention so that the networks can break every three to four minutes and advertise a toy. It's really a form of brainwashing. The kids are very attentive, watching every Saturday, and they're being programmed."

HE DECLARED, "The cartoons don't even make sense. They're non sequiturs. They have to be turned out so fast, on a weekly basis, that contentwise, they don't say anything. And kids watch them for hours on end and get very worked up. Saturday morning cartoons are, in a sense, extremely pornographic. I'm very much against them."

"All Dogs Go to Heaven" will be the third hit in a row for Bluth. Two of his previous animated films, the Steven Spielberg presentation of "An American Tale" and the George Lucas/Spielberg presentation for Universal Pictures, "The Land Before Time," were both critical and box office smashes.

"All Dogs Go to Heaven" features the voices of Burt Reynolds as Charlie B. Barkin, a roguish German shepherd; Dom DeLuise as Itchy, the nervous dachshund; Vic Tayback as Carface, the villainous pit bull; Charles Nelson Reilly as Killer, the misnamed, nearsighted mongrel; Loni Anderson as Flo, the beautiful collie, and Melba Moore as the angel-voiced Heavenly Whippet. Music is scored by Academy-Award-winning composer Ralph Burns ("Cabaret," "All That Jazz," "Annie," "Lenny," "A Chorus Line").

Production of "All Dogs Go to Heaven" took 19 months to complete. More than 1.5 million individual drawings were used in the film. Artists drew from a collection of 1,100 different shades of paint to color each character and background.

Although no longer associated with Disney Studios, Don Bluth brings characters to life in the classic Disney tradition. For Bluth's "All Dogs Go to Heaven" the animator has created (clockwise from right) Anne-Marie, Itchy, King Gator, Carface and Charlie B. Barkin.

Anne-Marie listens to a story read by Charlie in "All Dogs Go to Heaven." The film is playing at Detroit-area theaters.

Author: Intermarriage affects more than couple

By Natalie Halpern
special writer

Marriage between Jews and Christians affects more than husbands and wives, said Susan Weidman Schneider, author of "Intermarriage: the Challenge of Living with Differences Between Christians and Jews."

The ripples created extend beyond the couple to both sets of parents, to children and to the community.

Schneider was a featured speaker during the Jewish Community Center's 39th annual Jewish Book Fair recently. She spoke to an audience of more than 400 about the expectations and emotions of partners in Jewish-Christian marriages, viewed against the background of the Jewish community.

In "Intermarriage," Schneider drew from the experiences of diverse couples, clergy, psychologists and sociologists.

In her talk, she pointed to an opportunity to reach out to intermarried couples to solidify them into the Jewish community. The role of parents of the partners, according to Schneider, is to be available, to stay close.

Schneider considered the effect on the family — Christian in-laws may feel theological uneasiness about grandchildren who would not be baptized, experience feelings of alienation or class distinction. Once the marriage takes place, however, there is a high rate of acceptance.

JEWISH IN-LAWS feel pain and guilt — they did too much, they did too little. Their children were "breaking the chain of generations." Their role, Schneider counseled, is "to stay close. Their task may be to provide whatever Jewish content the family will have."

Parents' initial response to the idea of intermarriage is important. "You have to make your feelings clear in a non-judgmental way. If you oppose too strongly, you give the couple the opportunity to bond against you."

One couple reported, "Fighting with my parents was the only glue that held us together."

Schneider focused on the varieties of situations inherent in raising children of interfaith marriages. Where parents say "we'll let the child choose," the child often feels guilt in choosing one parent's religion over another. Adult children of mixed marriages "seem to live their lives in a kind of double vision," she said.

Schneider spoke of the effect on the community: "Jews have to learn the skills to communicate what Judaism means and why it is important. They have to be clear about Jewish identity, reinforced by positive Jewish experiences."

"INTERMARRIAGE" CONTAINS a section on resources for intermarried individuals and interfaith families.

Citing the ever-increasing number of interfaith marriages, Schneider said in the 1950s, 1 percent to 3 percent of Jews intermarried. By the 1980s, 36 percent of Jewish males and 24 percent of Jewish females intermarried in first-time intermarriages. There currently are more than 375,000 interfaith couples in the United States who touch more tens of thousands through their extended families.

The phenomenon is noteworthy for several reasons, according to Schneider: the increase in sheer numbers, the normalization of previously deviant behavior, the decreasing push for conversion. The Jewish partner is reluctant to suggest conversion and the number of Jews who themselves convert is infinitesimal.

An attitudinal change has occurred in which both partners in interfaith couples today want to stay connected with their past. Jewish partners often have difficulty communicating about Jewishness in both religious belief and culture.

Schneider's research indicates one in two intermarriages end in divorce. Remarriages are often interfaith in the belief that this can fix the cause of the first marriage.

The author spoke of the struggle in writing the book to be authentic to both the couples interviewed and to the Jewish community.

How can we stem the tide of intermarriage, she was asked. Schneider believes the quality of early friendships at crucial life stages is important. She said, "The quality of bonding may be more important than the quality of what is taught."

Schneider urged the need to "move from outrage to outreach. We owe it to ourselves to reinforce the Jewish identity of partners in these marriages."

Schneider is also the author of "Jewish and Feminine" and founder and editor of "Lilith," a quarterly Jewish feminist magazine.

She is working on "Hand and Heart," co-authored with Arthur Doache and scheduled for fall 1990 publication. It deals with couple dynamics and cross-cultural issues about money in the lives of women.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit. You make me see everything & show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen.

Tom Noonan plays defense against Trenton's Joe Cesarz in the season opener Tuesday at Salem. Noonan's three-point basket and subsequent steal started the Rocks on their way to a come-from-behind, 53-42 victory.

With Orris back, Rocks stay strong

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The reasons Plymouth Salem could repeat as Western Lakes Activities Association champion in boys swimming begin with Ron Orris.

The 6-foot-5 senior was All-American in three events last year and led the Rocks to a seventh-place finish in the Class A meet.

As he enters his final year of high school competition, Orris not only will make Salem one of the area's best teams but should have another big year personally.

"He's in a position to have a very memorable senior year," Olson said. "He's got everything necessary to do just that.

"He's steadily dropped his times every year he's been swimming, and we look for him to continue that this year."

ORRIS, WHO qualified for the state meet in every event as a junior, has some unfinished business at that level, however.

He was runner-up in the 200-yard freestyle and butterfly, getting nosed out in each event. Orris swam 1:40.44 and 51.27, respectively, but Lansing Eastern's Alec Mull went 1:40.32 in the freestyle and East Lansing's David Klaviter 51.20 in the butterfly.

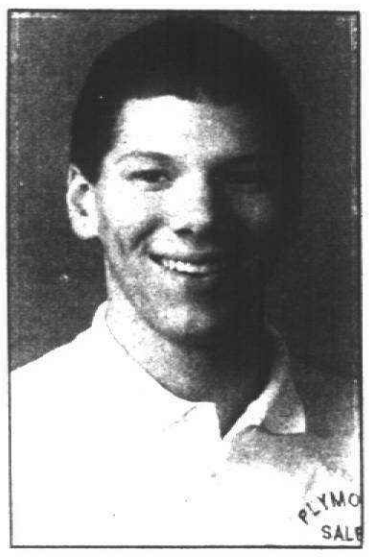
"He hasn't dwelled on last year," Olson said, "but it has crossed his mind that he'd like to rectify that.

"But he understands what his capabilities are and what his goals are, and if he improves his times but someone beats him like last year he can deal with that. That's a very healthy approach for someone his age.

"He's certainly worthy of being a state champion," Olson added. "He's worked hard in the offseason, and he's ready to go fast."

Orris, who earned All-American ratings in the 200 freestyle, individual medley and butterfly, won the IM and 500 freestyle in the WLAA meet and anchored the winning freestyle relay team, enabling the Rocks to edge Plymouth Canton for the championship, 462-454.

THE QUESTION is whether the Rocks, who were 10-2 in all dual meets and 4-1 in the Lakes Division, have the supporting cast for Salem to repeat as league champ and make another strong showing at state.



Ron Orris
All-American swimmer

'(Ron Orris) is in a position to have a very memorable senior year. He's steadily dropped his times every year he's been swimming, and we look for him to continue that this year . . . He's certainly worthy of being a state champion. He's worked hard in the offseason, and he's ready to go fast.'

— Chuck Olson
Salem swimming coach

The Rocks lost standouts Mike Hill, Fred Seidelman, Rick Steshetz and Chris Butzlaff to graduation. Hill was all-area in the 200 freestyle, and he, Seidelman, Steshetz and Orris comprised the top freestyle relay in Obseverland.

In addition to Orris, the other tri-captains are seniors Eric Bunch and Craig Wilsher. At the league meet, Bunch scored in the IM and butterfly and Wilsher in the 200 and 500 freestyles.

Chris Caloia and Matt Wisniewski are other seniors who will play key roles. Caloia was on the WLAA championship freestyle relay team that included Bunch, Steshetz and Orris.

Junior diver Pat McManaman returns as do classmates Joe Pawluszka, Curt Witthoff, Gary Bergman, Mark Erickson, Brett Meik, Brian Keppen and Paul Schryer — all of whom are expected to contribute.

"I'd like to think (the support) is there," Olson said. "They'd certainly like to be considered in that circle of competitors like Hill, Seidelman and Steshetz. We have guys on the team willing do everything they can to make that kind of effort.

"THOSE ARE the ones we're going to look to first. We have a large team and we'll take the help wherever it comes."

Sophomore Brett Petroskey is one of the top young swimmers and seems ready to make a contribution, according to Olson.

"We have quite a few other juniors and sophomores in that position," he said. "It was hard to get a position last year, but they look ready to take some of the load."

With three quarters of the WLAA championship freestyle relay returning, that event looks solid again. Erickson is the lone regular coming back in the medley relay, but the Rocks will have no shortage of possibilities. Bunch, Witthoff, Keppen, Wisniewski, Schryer, Pawluszka and Orris are some of the potential medley members.

Olson is confident Salem has the talent, in addition to Orris, to challenge for the league championship. The Rocks begin the season Saturday when they defend their title at the Belleville Invitational.

"I don't see any reason why it shouldn't be an exciting year for us again," Olson said.

"It's a lot of fun when you have a legitimate chance of being the conference champion and doing well at the state meet. I think we're ready to make another run at it this year."

Salem rallies past Trenton in opener

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Salem's aggressive defense nearly backfired on the boys basketball team in the season opener Tuesday.

In the end, it saved the Rocks, who outscored visiting Trenton 18-2 in the final 4½ minutes and regrouped for a 53-42 victory.

"The defense worked early and it worked late," Salem coach Bob Brodie said, "but there was a time when we were gambling too much."

The Rocks were hustling and flying around the court at the start, and the inspired defense had a positive effect, helping Salem step in front 20-9 early in the second quarter.

But the flow of the game did an about-face, and the Trojans scored the last 10 points of the half, pulling within a point on Eloi Crespo's shot from the corner with one second left.

MUCH OF the second half was a struggle, too, as the Rocks failed to regain the momentum they had early.

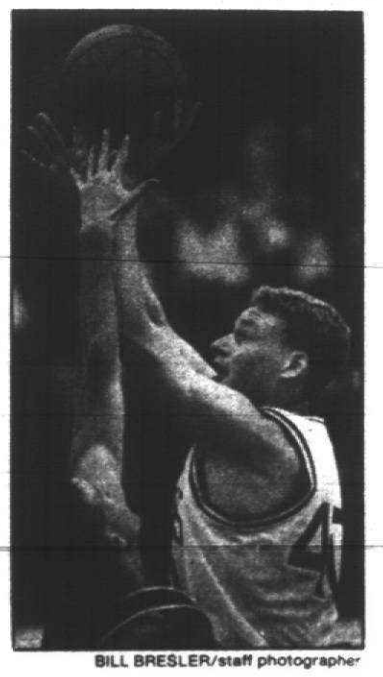
The teams traded baskets in the third quarter, but it was apparent the blowout that once seemed inevitable wasn't going to happen. Chris Mace's three-point play gave Trenton a 34-31 lead at the end of the third period.

"We were scrambling on defense," Brodie said, "and all of a sudden we're gambling too much and they're scoring at the other end.

"At the offensive end, we were shooting too quickly. If you find yourself playing defense all the time you can't score."

Trenton led 40-35 on Mace's driving shot, but Tom Noonan came up with a big sequence that started Salem on its way to a come-from-behind victory.

Junior center Jake Baker scored a game-high 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds for the Rocks. Senior guard Jeff Gold chipped in 10 points, Noonan nine and junior forward K.C. Kirkpatrick, who added nine rebounds, six.



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Jake Baker scored 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead Salem.

NOONAN MADE a triple at 4:21, stole the inbounds pass and was fouled and sank a free throw, cutting Trenton's lead to 40-39. Noonan missed the second free throw, but Kirkpatrick scored off the rebound, putting the Rocks on top 41-40 with 4:10 to play.

The situation snowballed in Salem's favor as the Rocks used a full-court press to rattle the Trojans. Gold made two free throws and Baker a basket for a five-point lead with 3:04 remaining.

"I told them (at the outset of the second half) we had to back off (defensively) a little bit because we were getting burnt," Brodie said, "and we had to turn it on again. I said 'Come on, guys, let's kick it in and get the turnovers like we did early in the game.'

"The thing I liked is that we took a little more time and got the ball inside, and that created a lot of fouling."

Trenton coach Larry Leapley demonstrated his dislike of the game being called by the officials and was given back-to-back technical fouls in the fourth quarter. The Trojans were called for 26 fouls and Salem 12. The Rocks sank 18 of 37 free throws, Trenton 11 of 18.

Jason Welch made Trenton's only basket during the final 4½ minutes (45-42), but Baker made two of the four technical free throws to maintain a five-point margin.

FOLLOWING A Noonan free throw, Salem was assured of winning when Kirkpatrick converted a three-point play to give the Rocks a 51-42 lead with a minute left. Baker added two free throws.

"As the saying goes, it's a victory," Brodie said. "We did the same thing last year against Trenton. We came out of the gates fast, and the kids relax and think it's going to be easy."

The Rocks begin a three-game set in which they play Monroe, Southfield and Ypsilanti on the road between next Tuesday and Friday, Jan. 5.

Mac, Missouri finally hit it off

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Is "Mac" back?

From all indications thus far, John McIntyre is playing like there is no tomorrow for the unbeaten and fourth-ranked University of Missouri basketball squad.

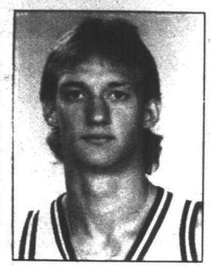
The fifth-year senior guard from Redford Catholic Central High wondered if he'd ever fit into coach Norm Stewart's scheme of things after transferring from the University of Detroit three years ago.

McIntyre, who languished on the bench the past two seasons, apparently has been given new life in the Tigers' program.

It all started at the Maui Classic in Hawaii over Thanksgiving weekend.

McIntyre was told only a half-hour before the tournament opener that he would start against Evansville, but the public address announcer called out the wrong player's name during pre-game introductions.

"I wondered what was going on when they didn't call my number (23) and instead they announced No. 32 (teammate Jamal Coleman)," said McIntyre. "But coach Stewart just told me not to worry about it and just go out there and play."



John McIntyre contributes early

AND THE 6-foot-5 guard responded in a big way, scoring a career-high 14 points in the first half. The Tigers went on to beat Evansville.

McIntyre got the call again as a starter the next two nights.

He went on to distinguish himself in the tournament, adding 12 points in a semifinal win over Louisville and 12 more in the championship victory over North Carolina.

For the tournament, McIntyre hit seven of 10 from three-point range and led the team in steals with six. He also had eight assists and shot 61 percent from the field.

McIntyre's stay on the Pacific island was an enjoyable one, despite suffering a broken nose during a second-half collision with North Carolina freshman George Lynch.

"The nose feels all right, it's been reset and I think I've added more character to my profile," joked McIntyre. "It was really beautiful out there, around 85 degrees. The gym was steaming, but it was nice outside. I went golfing. I was shooting balls over the ocean."

McINTYRE HAS also played well since he's been back on the mainland.

In homecourt victories over Tennessee-Martin and Creighton, McIntyre scored nine and 12 points, respectively.

In Missouri's five victories, McIntyre is averaging 11.7 points per game while shooting 62 percent from the floor.

McIntyre, however, had to wonder if he would ever play for the Tigers — a program loaded with talent — but under NCAA scrutiny for rules violations.

At the guard position, he sat behind Byron Irvin, a No. 1 draft pick of the Portland Trail Blazers, highly touted sophomore Anthony Peeler and Detroiter Lee Coward, a four-year starter.

He also also played alongside forward Derrick Chevious, who is now with the Houston Rockets, and center Gary Leonard, now with the Minnesota Timberwolves.

And if McIntyre wasn't already surrounded by talent, he was shoved way back to the end of the bench last season by interim coach Rich Daly (the main target of the NCAA probe) after Stewart was hospitalized midway through the season.

"COACH STEWART and I had a talk over the summer," McIntyre said. "He told me if I worked twice as hard and get in even better shape, the opportunity would be there.

"On the way back (from Maui) he said he was really happy for me and was pleased with the way I played."

One of six Michigan players on the Missouri roster and one of four in the starting lineup (Doug Smith, Nathan Buntin and Coward also start), McIntyre is hoping he has turned the corner.

"I thought I played well enough in the practices and in the three preseason scrimmages we had," McIntyre said. "I was the third leading scorer and I was shooting 57 percent from the three-point line. Even though I turned my ankle, I thought I had won the position."

McIntyre's position is not a lock, particularly when playing for the highly volatile Stewart. But the early season signs are positive.

Stewart had some encouraging remarks as he addressed the press during the Maui Classic.

"I'M REALLY pleased for John and I'm happy for him because it hasn't been as good for him as it is right now," said the Missouri coach. "You got to learn the value of being a shooter, and with John, that comes from being older. Of all the players, John waited and didn't lose patience.

"He's trying to maintain a little more soundness and if he just keeps battling away, he will be a big factor.

"It has not worked out the way John has wanted, but I've always been enthusiastic about him and always liked him as a person. I've always wanted to see him do well."

McIntyre, who averaged more than 30 points per game his senior year at CC, was ticketed as the savior for the University of Detroit basketball program.

But after a disheartening freshman year under coach Don Sicko, McIntyre became disenchanted with U-D.

First, he planned to transfer to Michigan, but later changed his mind and was set to go to Iowa State, only to have O-D officials ask the NCAA to probe charges of tampering by coach Johnny Orr and his Iowa State staff.

Held up by the NCAA probe, which eventually exonerated Iowa State, McIntyre decided to go with Stewart and Missouri.

WHETHER McIntyre can continue his stellar play at Missouri is all academic.

With the NCAA expected to reveal its findings about the Missouri program in February, McIntyre can only play one game at a time.

He does, however, have another feather in his cap.

Sometime early next spring he will become one of the few Missouri men's basketball players ever to leave the school with a degree.

Racer will coach Madonna softball college sports

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Madonna College will launch a women's intercollegiate softball program for the 1991 season, according to athletic director Ray Summers.

Plymouth Canton High School coach Dave Racer has been named to lead the Crusaders in their first season as members of District 23 in the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

"We've always wanted a women's fast-pitch team here," said Summers. "We tried a trial pilot program last year and we had a good turnout.

"But we were not very successful (0-12 record) because we did it with too much haste involved. We found out we couldn't do it in three months."

With more than a year to prepare, Racer will be given a chance to recruit players.

He already has received a verbal commitment from one of his former Canton High players, Allison Flaskamp, an infielder who plans to transfer from Michigan.

"WE FEEL we have enough in the scholarship fund to get good girls here," said Racer. "We'll start working out (with current students) in January and February. We'll find out what we already have on campus in six weeks."

Racer said he has already hired longtime summer sandlot coach Dick Foster to help in recruiting.

"We're going after the players who don't go to Michigan or Michigan State," Racer said. "That's why we needed a year to get out and recruit."

Summers said plans to build a softball diamond on campus have been discussed seriously by Madonna's administration.

"This is a sport where we can show promise right off the bat," Summers said. "We just need to cultivate the area."

Racer is no stranger to area diamonds.

A native of Richmond, he played minor league baseball in the Baltimore Orioles chain and was a longtime assistant baseball coach to Fred Crissey at Canton.

HE HAS COACHED several sandlot baseball teams, including Hines Park Lincoln/Mercury, which won the regular season title last summer in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League.

Racer said he will continue to coach summer baseball. He plans to stock his team with several players from the Madonna varsity baseball program, which also was launched last season.

He will also coach the Canton girls softball team for one more season. His girls team finished 20-8 overall before being ousted in the district tourney last June.

"We put feelers out, and Dave came to us highly recommended," Summers said. "He has an excellent attitude about coaching."

Racer, who lives in Canton, has run Westland Tree Service along with his son Scott for the past 18 years.

"My son really runs the business now," said the new Madonna coach. "I couldn't coach if it wasn't for him."

New coach takes charge at Canton

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

First-year coach Ray Givens is serious and enthusiastic about the job of reviving the Plymouth Canton wrestling program.

The same is true of his plan for going about it.

Givens, who was a volunteer assistant last year, has a discipline style and explicit rules for his wrestlers to follow.

Swearing in the practice room or fighting at school, for example, means exclusion from competition that week.

Givens had the team scrubbing floors last year after a wrestler rode his bike through the Phase II hallway, putting down a skid mark, and no one owned up to it.

"I WANT them to be gentlemen at all times," Givens said. "The more concerned with them as people. Wrestling is only temporary. I tell them 'Once you get out of school, it's over unless you go to the Olympics.'"

The 35-year-old Givens, a production repairman at General Motors and former Livingston County sheriff's deputy, believes the right perspective on life will benefit his athletes as wrestlers.

The Chiefs, who were eighth in the Western Lakes Activities Association, have already made steps in that direction, according to Givens, who said his wrestlers were committed to out-of-season work.

"Our team will be so much stronger than people thought we would be," said Givens, who had a wrestling career at the University of Iowa cut short by a shoulder injury.

"They've taken the bull by the horns and said 'We're going to be a better and more respectable wrestling team,' and they've done it on their own. This team and program could explode into something fantastic."

Senior tri-captain Nick Purzer is Givens' kind of wrestler. Purzer was fifth in the WLAA at 152 pounds and will compete at that weight again this season.

"HE'S A coach's dream," Givens said. "He's a perfect gentleman, he works hard in practice and he has his head on straight. His priorities are in order."

The middle of the Canton lineup will be its strength. In addition to Purzer, the Chiefs have veteran wrestlers in junior Liam Rentz (140), senior Jim Yack (145) and senior Tim Nardini (152). Yack and Nardini are the other captains.

Rentz was runner-up in the league at 135, and Yack was the consolation winner at 140. Nardini is recovering from a back injury but should be ready to compete Saturday when the Chiefs begin the season in the Belleville Invitational.

"(Rentz) has the potential to be one of the best wrestlers Canton High School has ever seen," Givens said. "He has the ability. It's a matter of bearing down and getting the proper frame of mind.

"Talking about the most improved wrestler, I've never seen a kid come full circle like (Yack) has. He put more time into getting ready for this season."

The 103-pounder is apt to be one of several freshmen. Sophomore Jerry Flynn will be the 112-pounder, and 119-pound junior James Carnes is one who came back more determined, Givens said.

FIRST-YEAR junior Chris Zelek will wrestle at 125, Givens is still looking for someone at 130, and senior Scott Ferguson is the top prospect at 135. Senior Eric Jallad is another improved wrestler and will compete at 171, and senior returnee Matt Centiare will be the 189-pounder.

Junior Wayne Robinson, the center on Canton's successful football team, was forced into action when Mike Kelly was injured last year and returns as the heavyweight.

"When we needed him last year, he came through," Givens said. "I think he understands his position better — the weight class and how he needs to approach it. He's starting to get it all together, and we look for good things from him."

Salem wrestlers seek title repeat

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

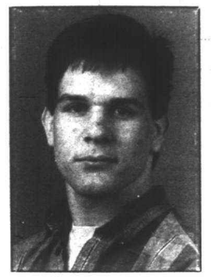
Any team with ideas of unseating Plymouth Salem, the defending Western Lakes Activities Association wrestling champ, should realize that won't be an easy thing to do.

Salem has the makings of another outstanding — if not championship — squad, returning a pair of All-Observer wrestlers and eight regulars.

The Rocks, 23-2 in dual meets, appear to be strongest in the upper weights where they have the Burlison brothers, seniors Steve and Brian. They were two of five Salem wrestlers to win WLAA titles last year.

Steve, who will wrestle at 160 pounds again, was 44-6 and led the team in pins (32). He also was a district champion and regional runner-up, qualifying for state two years in a row. Burlison boasts a career record of 89-30.

Brian, a member of the All-Observer football team as a defensive end, moves up a weight class to 189 after he was 45-7 in the 171-pound division.



Brian Burlison moves up to 189 pounds

Steve Burlison two-time state qualifier

HE ALSO won a district title and qualified for state with a third-place regional finish. Brian, who is recovering from a slight shoulder separation, had 24 pins last season and enters his senior year with 77 career wins.

"We have more than one or two kids who could conceivably do well in the state meet, but Brian and Steve probably have the best shot," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "They've been there and have that experience."

In addition to those two, the Rocks have veteran matmen in seniors Charlie Apigian (152), Pete Israel (171) and heavyweight Scott Breithaupt. Apigian was at 145 and Israel 152 a year ago. Israel was second in the WLAA.

"When we hit 152 in our lineup, if the other team hasn't put us away," Krueger said, "there's a very good chance we'll win the meet."

Apigian is getting better every day and continuing to learn the sport, according to Krueger, and Israel, who was one match away from qualifying for state, could have a big year.

"(Israel) really came on strong last year, and we expect better things from him this year," Krueger said. "I think he has a lot of drive in him and wants to do well."

Breithaupt, who was fourth in the league, is being challenged by veteran heavyweight Ken Coker and Tony Perkins, who placed fourth at 189 in the WLAA meet but was forced to move up because of Brian Burlison's presence at 189.

"ANY OTHER year (Perkins) would be 189 on the varsity," Krueger said. "Because the competition in our room is very good (at heavyweight), whoever we put on the mats will be very good."

In the lower weights, Salem lost three league champs — Craig Richardson, Mike Shumate and Ed Barlage — to graduation but still returns some fine wrestlers.

Seniors Ken Stopa (125) and Julian Sell (130) move up one weight each, with Sell taking over for Shumate. Both were third in the WLAA at 119 and 125, respectively.

"(Stopa) did a real good job and, I think, will be a pleasant surprise," Krueger said. "He's been our hardest worker.

"We're looking for Julian to do a lot this year. He beat some good people in our preseason scrimmage. And he's a good senior leader, not only on the mats but all around."

Krueger added Sell's appearance belies his ferocity in competition, Krueger added.

"HE LOOKS like Clark Kent, but when he gets on the mats he's a holy terror," he said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see him in the state finals."

Sophomore Dan Bonnett was fourth in the WLAA at 103 but goes to 112 this year. The Rocks, however, have another good 112-pounder in Chad Wilson, a transfer from Mount Pleasant.

Sophomores Colin Trombeta and Scott Martin are battling for Bonnett's old position, and junior Kevin Smith is in line to replace Richardson at 119.

Junior Jeff Coleman is the leading candidate at 135, sophomore Jeff Shumate takes over for Barlage at 140 and the situation at 145 is wide open.

The Rocks, who begin the season Saturday in the Temperance Bedford Invitational, have a tough schedule. They will wrestle Lake Orion and Hazel Park in addition to other invitationals at Lansing Eastern and Sexton, Bedford again and Mount Clemens.

"At the end of the year, if we get to our correct weight classes and put the lineup we want out there, we could be tough to beat," Krueger said.

Ocelots ready for league play

Adjustments were necessary, even some Jack Grenan never figured he make. But his Schoolcraft College womens basketball team is getting closer to where he wants them to be as the Eastern Conference season-opener — Saturday against Alpena CC, at SC — approaches.

The Lady Ocelots will enter the league season riding a three-game win streak, thanks to Saturday's 64-50 homecourt romp over Grand Rapids Junior College.

Pinpoint shooting propelled SC to a 39-24 halftime lead, but the Lady Ocelots couldn't sustain it. Grand Rapids closed to within six with seven minutes left, testing both SC's man-to-man defense and Grenan's patience.

After a timeout to "discuss" the lapse, Grenan decided to do something he has rarely — if ever — done during his coaching tenure at SC. He went to a zone defense.

"WE PLAYED zone, of all things," he said, almost in disbelief. "That's the first time we've played zone for more than five minutes in a stretch in as long as I can remember."

But as Grenan noted, "We were alternating our man and zone defenses at first, and Grand Rapids kept scoring against the man. It didn't take a genius to figure out we should just play zone."

It worked well enough. It also helped that the sharp shooting that highlighted the first half — Lisa DePlanche made six-of-eight from the floor, and Ann Hardy and Denise Kokowicz were each three-of-five in the first 20 minutes — made a return appearance later in the second.

DePlanche finished with 23 points (on 10-of-15 shooting). Hardy had 15 (six-of-nine) and Barb Krug contributed 10 points and 18 rebounds, including 10 offensive boards.

Christina Hoffman topped Grand Rapids with 12 points. Sheri Hulst had 10.

The Lady Ocelots improved to 4-2 with the win, its final tune-up for the conference season.

S'craft men reach .500 plateau

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Monday night should have been one of celebration for the Schoolcraft College men's basketball team.

The Ocelots won. Considering records from recent years, that in itself was a rare enough occurrence to be worthy of praise. But this victory had much more significance: It was SC's fourth straight, and when was the last time that happened? It also pushed the Ocelots' record to .500, leveling it at 5-5.

It's been a while since they were even this far into the season, too. The ease of Monday's victory — 108-77 — would seem to indicate all is well, or getting there, where SC men's basketball is concerned.

OK, now for a dose of reality.

The win was against Adrian's junior varsity team, and it was the second time in a week the Ocelots clobbered the Bulldogs. The other two victories in their "streak" came against similar opposition — junior varsity teams from Spring Arbor College and Albion College.

"IT WASN'T a classic," said SC coach Dave Bogataj after Monday's homecourt romp. "It's hard to come back and play a team again after you beat them by 27 a week earlier.

"Offensively, we were OK. Defensively, we were really bad. Really bad. If we do that against a Mott or Delta, we'll be in deep trouble."

But Bogataj would go no further in criticizing any of his recent opponents. "I'll take it. It's a win," he said. "It gets us to .500. It's four in a row.

"When you win, good things happen. It gives us something to build on."

For most of the rout, all SC built on was its score. The game was close for six minutes. After Chris McKenzie popped in a jumper with 14:10 to play in the first half, increasing Adrian's advantage to 13-10, the game belonged to SC.

Tony Rumple started the Ocelots' run with a three-pointer to tie it. Rob Harmon's two free throws gave SC the lead for good 15 seconds later.

The Ocelots outpointed Adrian 13-2 in a two-minute span. The Bulldogs closed to within 31-30 on two Shawn Cotton free throws with 7:00 left, capping a 13-4 run.

BUT SC came right back with a 15-3 streak of its own to go up 46-33 with 3:00 remaining in the opening half. Ed Hudson came off the bench to net seven of the SC points.

Three-pointers by John Moran and Randy Watters and a layup by Ken Fuster, all in the last 45 seconds of the half, increased SC's advantage to 55-38 at the half and left only one question unanswered: Wait would the final margin of victory be?

Hudson made certain there would be no comeback for Adrian by scoring 15 points in the first 8:10 of the second half. He finished with a game-high 29 points. Hudson added 16, Harmon contributed 11 and Watters had 10. Jeff Elliott chipped in nine.

Cotton's 26 topped Adrian. McKenzie had 13 and Jason Hunt and Steve Shephard collected 11 apiece.

"We'll find out in a few weeks just how good we are," said Bogataj soberly. "We play four league games before Cristmas."

Although it won't be against the Eastern Conference's elite, SC opens its league season at home against Alpena Saturday (3 p.m.), then hosts recent conference also-rans St. Clair County CC (Dec. 13) and Henry Ford CC (Dec. 16) before traveling to Delta CC (Dec. 20) — it will be a challenge.

And the next couple of weeks may provide the Ocelots with their best chance to pad their record. It might even be their last.

Ho, ho! Santa gets around at 5K run

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Santa made a list and checked it twice, but it had nothing to do with presents for the little kiddies.

Mr. Claus was making sure he'd packed his gloves, running shoes and warm underclothes for the Max and Erma's Jingle Bell 5K Run Sunday in Farmington Hills.

Santa — who finished the 3.1-mile run in 20:40 without the aid of any reindeer — said he'd got in the night before from the North Pole, where he'd grown accustomed to the cold. But for the 1,000 other runners in the race, wind chills 15 below zero made it a day to r-r-r-r-emember.

Actually, it turned out Santa was an imposter, some guy named Greg McComas from Beverly Hills.

But, thank goodness, the hot chili inside Max and Erma's Restaurant at Orchard Lake Road and Fourteen Mile was for real — plentiful and plenty hot.

The racing was for real, too, never mind the costumes or jingle bells many runners were wearing.

BRIAN OLSEN, 28, a former junior college All-America and later a varsity runner at Oklahoma State, drove in from Jackson because he couldn't find a run closer to home and won going away in 16:10, by four seconds over Rob Rasmussen of Novi.

"My wife's cousin lives near here and I'm going over there to warm up," said Olsen, who took the lead at a half mile, went through the mile in 4:55 and survived a brutal head wind in the second mile (10:13).

Michelle Gay of Orchard Lake did double duty for the women. She won the 5K in 19:07, passing the runner-up with a furious closing sprint, then came back 15 minutes later to win the mile.

Of her 5K win, Gay said: "With a half mile to go, a cop told me I was second. Then I saw her and said, 'It's now or never' and kicked it in."

It was a family affair for the Van Meters of Southfield. Alan won the mile and finished fifth in the 5K. His wife, Lucy, the junior high track coach at Southfield Christian, ran the mile, and their 10-year-old daughter, Bianca, something of a prodigy in local running circles, cruised the 5K in non-race mode then baby-sat while mom and dad did the mile.

Despite the wind, the biting cold and the fact that it was a Sunday and a perfect day for sleeping in, about 300 runners signed up on race day.

THE FIELD included one school principal, Bill Smith of Longacre Elementary in Farmington Hills, one Santa Claus, several Christmas Carols and, by the time the run was over, nearly 1,000 Rudolphs, whose glowing red noses could have lit up the night skies during a power outage.

The field also included one schizophenic. The schizophrenic, Kevin Shrwood of Royal Oak, came dressed as Baby New Year on the back side and Father Time on the front, and for his efforts won the bet-costume division and a trip for two to Tampa, Fla.

Sherwood couldn't make up his mind in the runs, either, and finished third in the male and ran the 5K.

Other local notables included John Springer of Redford, who finished fourth overall in 16:23 and first in the 25-29 age group, and Melba Hitch of Canton, the nationally-ranked master who won the 60-and-over age group.

The Budd Co. won the corporate division, with Plante & Moran second and National Steel third.

S'craft places 5th in national tourney

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Schoolcraft sports

After months of preparation and training, the fate of Schoolcraft College's volleyball team may have been decided in the span of three consecutive plays.

The situation: The Lady Ocelots, seeded sixth entering the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament held at Miami Dade-South Community College Nov. 20-22, had won their first six games in pool play against Haggerstown (Md.) 15-5, 15-5, 15-10 and Chowan (N.C.) 15-1, 15-3, 15-1.

Their third pool-play opponent was Dade, seeded third in the tourney. SC ran its string of consecutive-game wins to seven in the tournament — and to 17 including the NJCAA Regional — with an impressive 15-6 triumph in the first game.

In game No. 2, the Lady Ocelots led 6-4 when the momentum-changing string started. Outside-hitter Kirsten Stelzer had been performing superbly in the match (she would finish with eight kills in 17 attacks in the final two games vs. Dade), so three straight sets went to her.

ON ALL THREE, she did just what SC coach Tom Teeters instructed, blasting her hits crosscourt off the top of the Dade players' blocks.

On all three, the referee ruled the Dade blockers never touched the ball. Point, Dade.

"We were going, 'Great hit!' but the referee was calling it out of bounds," said Teeters. "We all kind of went nuts."

Instead of SC regaining possession on a side-out, Dade scored to take the lead. The Lady Ocelots did not get another point in the game; indeed, they never really regrouped. After losing the second game 15-6, they were flattened in the third 15-5.

"We were just that close," said Teeters. "If we had had (Dade's) path in the final round, I think we could have gone all the way."

SC FINISHED pool play with a 7-2 record in games. Dade was 8-1, and landed one of four top seeds as both teams moved into the tournament's second round Nov. 21. A top seed started the second round of tourney play by playing a No. 2 seed from another pool. SC, a No. 2 seed, started the second round by playing the No. 1-ranked team in the NJCAA, Barton County (Kan.).

In spite of Elena Oparka's nine kills (a .285 kill average), the Lady Ocelots lost 15-11, 15-8 to Barton County. They rallied to defeat Kankakee (Ill.) 15-7, 15-4 in the next round, thanks to an outstanding effort from Stelzer (12 kills, .391), but that's as far as they got. Northwest CC (Wy.) eliminated SC from the double-elimination tourney with a 15-7, 15-9 win.

The Lady Ocelots, NJCAA champs in '88, finished tied for fifth in the tournament. Dade ended up defeating Barton County twice to capture the NJCAA title.

"You can't place all of (our problems) on that one thing," said Teeters, referring to the three points that got away against Dade. "It was just one of those things. They got a break and took advantage of it."

ALTHOUGH SC failed to defend its '88 championship, there was plenty to be proud of in its 46-12 season, said Teeters. "Particularly if you consider what we lost from last year and all the new people we had coming in," he noted. "It's hard to come back when you were first the year before, because you've lost a lot of sophomores.

"We were ranked 16th (in the NJCAA) going into the regional tournament. We were seeded sixth before the nationals and we finished fifth. We did a little better than expected, so I was pleased."

He was also happy that freshman Angellette Love who stands just 5-foot-6, made her move from outside-hitter to middle-blocker a successful one. Love, who had six kills in seven attacks in the first-game victory against Dade, was named to the NJCAA all-tournament team.

In addition, SC moved up from fifth to second on the all-time NJCAA tournament list, a compilation of how schools have performed throughout the tourney's 15-year existence.

The only team ahead of the Lady Ocelots is — you guessed it — Dade. Sounds like the makings of a beautiful rivalry.

● GYMNASTICS STAR

Douglas Stibel of Canton has earned a trip to the United States Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs and a chance to be a member of the U.S. national gymnastics team.

The 14-year-old Stibel qualified during Region V skills testing in Indianapolis at the U.S. Gymnastics Federation National Olympic Training Center. He earned a 49.25 out of a possible 60 points.

Stibel was judged on his skills in all phases of gymnastics: floor exercise, high bar, parallel bars, pommel horse, vault and still rings.

Stibel is a member of Michigan's all-around boys team, which competes against teams from across the state. He was ranked 16th in the nation among junior gymnasts last year.

● COLLEGE HOCKEY

The Eastern Michigan Huron Hockey Club will play host to the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater for a two-game series this weekend.

The Central States Collegiate Hockey League teams will play at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Plymouth Cultural Center and 5 p.m. Saturday at the Westland Arena. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens.

● AAU BASKETBALL

Tryouts for AAU girls basketball teams will be Saturday, Dec. 9, at Novi High School. The assigned times are 2 p.m. for ages 11-13, 3:30 p.m. for 15-16.

There will be additional tryouts on Sunday, Dec. 17, at Walled Lake Western High School for other age groups. The times are 10 a.m. for 13-and-under, noon for 15-under, 2 p.m. for 16-under and 4 p.m. for 11-under.

For information, call Chris Drogosh at 623-1664 or Larry Cupp at 349-7338.

● WINTER BASEBALL CAMP

Eastern Michigan University will stage a baseball clinic (ages 8-16), featuring speakers from the pro ranks, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 9 and 10, at Bowen Field House in Ypsilanti.

Advance registration (by Dec. 7) is $45. Late registration is $55 per commuting student. Enrollment is limited to 90. Registration price includes lunch each day and a camp T-shirt. For information, call 487-0315.

● ELK HUNT

Five Observer & Eccentric area hunters were among the 110 hunters selected by computer to receive a permit for the 1989 Michigan winter elk hunt. The fall season, which began Tuesday and runs through Dec. 12, will be in portions of Cheboygan, Montmorency, Otsego and Presque Isle counties.

Overall, 75 antlerless only permits and 35 hunter's choice permits were issued. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources received more than 42,000 elk permit applications.

Merrill Gottschalk and Peter R. Sferro of Rochester, along with Westland's Richard D. Rocht each received a hunter's choice permit. Eileen M. Grima of Livonia and Walled Lake's Michael Blanchard received antlerless only permits.

During the early hunt, Oct. 17-22, 66 elk were harvested by 80 hunters, which was a new state record.

Gary McCoy of Alma took a bull elk that dressed-out at 790-pounds, setting a new state record for weight.

The DNR hopes to maintain a post-hunt population of 850 elk. The current herd is estimated at 1,020.

● WILDLIFE ART AWARDS

Michael Todoroff of Garden City finished third in the Michigan United Conservation Club's Wildlife Artist of the Year competition with a painting of a great blue heron.

Dietmar Krumrey won the competition with an acrylic rendition of a wild turkey in a winter setting. Krumrey is only the second person in the 10-year history of the competition to win the honor twice. He also won the award in 1984.

This year's competition featured 69 entries submitted by wildlife artists across the state.

MUCC will issue a limited edition of 750 prints of the winning painting — entitled "Morning Call-Wild Turkey". The prints are available from MUCC for $75 apiece plus $9 for tax and shipping. Orders should be sent to: MUCC, P.O. Box 30235, Lansing, 48909.

● TREE THEFTS

A combined law enforcement effort is taking place to combat the theft of Christmas trees and evergreen boughs on state, federal and private lands in Michigan.

According to David Hales, director of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the DNR, Michigan State Police, U.S. Forest Service and the Michigan Sheriff's Association will join forces in an attempt to reduce the number of thefts of our natural resources.

"Theft of our natural resources is inexcusable," Hales said. "We are asking everyone to cooperate by reporting any suspicious tree cutting activity to conservation officers, county sheriffs or state troopers."

About one-percent of Michigan's trees are stolen every year. With this year's holiday crop estimated at 6.5 million, a loss of 65,000 trees will cost the state and its 1,500 commercial Christmas tree growers nearly $1 million.

● NEW PERCH LIMIT

Anglers are reminded that the daily limit for taking yellow perch on Lake Michigan has been raised from 50 to 100.

The daily limit remains at 50 on waters within 10 miles of the entire Upper Penninsula and also on all inland waters, statewide.

A 100-perch daily limit remains on lakes Huron, St. Clair and Erie and the St. Clair and Detroit rivers.

● TURKEY TALK

The Natural Resource Commission recently approved several rules and changes for the spring 1990 wild turkey season.

Three new hunting units will be added — one in the Upper Penninsula and two in mid-Michigan — and seven existing units will be enlarged. This will increase the total square miles available for hunting to 22,047, compared to 18,692 in 1989.

Hunting permits will also be increased from 25,080 last year to 30,575 for the 1990 spring hunt. For detailed information on hunting areas, dates and regulations, contact the DNR's Wildlife Division at: P.O. Box 30028, Lansing, 48909; (517) 373-1263.

● WEALLEYE LIMIT REDUCED

To keep in line with Ontario's and Ohio's walleye and sauger limits, Michigan will reduce the daily walleye and sauger limit on Lake Erie from 10 fish to six.

The 10-fish limit has been in effect since 1985 when a less accessible and under-used fishery existed. The action also eliminates a law enforcement problem in the Detroit River where officers must regulate a six-fish limit in the Detroit River against a 10-fish limit on Lake Erie.

● FISHERIES MANAGEMENT

Fisheries chiefs from the four states bordering Lake Michigan, along with tribal officials and federal representatives have joined together to coordinate fisheries management for the Great Lakes.

"This is the first time since fisheries management began on Lake Michigan that a real effort has been made to concentrate the efforts of all those involved in enhancing fishing opportunities on the lake," said DNR chief David Hales. "This is a great opportunity to make some real headway in sharing and pooling resources."

The group will jointly undertake the following projects:

- Develop and pursue common goals and objectives for the Lake Michigan fishery.
- Finalize a cooperative agreement between the states to closely monitor the numbers of forage fish in the lake.

Clockmaker enjoys having time on hands

By Carolyn DeMarco
staff writer

Does Dan Castner collect clocks? Of course he collects clocks. Silly question.

The licensed horologist has six in the living room, four in the family room, a couple in the dining room and a number down in the basement which aren't working . . . yet.

But the clockmaker, restorer, and repairman for The Time Shop in West Bloomfield hasn't met a clock yet that couldn't be fixed in time, so to speak.

Eight hours a day he works with clocks that gong, strike, whirr and chirp, or rather used to gong, strike, etc., and will again.

No wonder that his agreement with his wife is that the clocks she brings home from estate sales be the silent type.

"We compromise," Castner said. "I prefer the 'time only' clock. I listen to the chimes and strikes all day long. I like it quiet when I get home."

The 37-year-old Castner learned his trade at Bowman Technical School in Lancaster, Pa., in the '70s.

"There aren't many schools of its kind," Castner said. "I was on the waiting list for a whole year." Eight hours a day, five days a week for 13 months he learned the clock business. An additional 15 months were spent on learning watch-making and repair.

Once you learn the trade, Castner said, "you can go anywhere in the world and get a job. It doesn't matter if it's Russia or China, clocks are basically the same. It's a common language. There are certain guidelines whether they're Chinese, Swiss or French."

Castner thought he'd like to ply the trade out west — Denver or Phoenix. His father a Detroit attorney, convinced him Detroit was far enough enough west.

"I moved here and a week later I looked into the phone book for clock shops and started dropping off my resume. This (The Time Shop) was the third place I stopped at. They looked over my resume — it was a Friday — and said 'when can you start?' I started on Monday."

That was 12 years ago. Since then he's seen hundreds of different clocks, some old, some costly, some whose only value is sentimental. He works on smaller clocks in the shop and makes home service calls for grandfather clocks. "They've been making clocks for hundreds of years around the world. You end up seeing a lot of clocks."

Clock problems fall under three categories, Castner said. The clock is out of beat; it's dirty and needs cleaning and oiling, or the parts are worn.

"Most people think the clock will last forever. It's a mechanical device — metal rubbing against metal. Everything has a life expectancy."

When new parts are not available for old clocks, Castner makes his own including plates, gears and screws, and says anything can be fixed, but sometimes it isn't worth the time and money.

Clock repairman. he admits, are a different breed."It's like putting a puzzle back together. You have to have the patience of a snail. Not everybody has the temperament. You have to be very, very patient and meticulous . . . You can't make money if too many hours are put into it. When you spend so much time money doesn't compensate. It becomes a labor of love, not for profit."

Castner's current repair projects include a 19th century German, handmade wooden clock.

"I enjoy working on the unusual," he said. "It gives me a lot of satisfaction restoring it to a running condition."

He is also the man Cranbrook Schools and Institutes turn to when their antiques fail. Most unusual was a 16th century French mantel clock. "When they get that old you can't go out and buy parts. You want to go slowly so that you don't break anything. You don't want to replace too much or you lose the antiquity."

His most unusual request? "When I leave a home my last act is to set the clock. We often get people who want it set two hours fast so they won't be late. One man wanted it set two hours fast."

At home he's constructing a "skeleton clock," one whose entire workings can be seen. With his lathe, milling machine and drill press, he's making all the parts from gears and dial down to the screws.

On vacations he and his wife and stepsons spend some time looking for unusual clocks in second-hand stores and flea markets. "It pays to look in different parts of the country," he said. "Sometimes you find bargains."

And have the stepsons picked up on his interests?

Castner shakes his head. "They're into digital clocks and the Casio watches that do 1,000 things. They're into the space age."

Monthly Allergy Tip

If your child has ear problems, lend an ear to these findings:

Recent studies have shown that allergies in children can contribute to chronic ear problems. Ear problems may cause irritating discomfort, interfere with a child's feeling of well-being, reduce attention span at school, and may influence the state of general health.

If your child suffers from recurring ear problems, it is easy to check if allergies may play a part in the condition. So, for his or her sake, see us. We may be able to help!

Questions should guide foster care choice

Q. I live in Southfield and need a ride to my doctor. I can afford to pay something but cabs get very expensive.

A. The Southfield Senior Adult Advisory Council sponsors the Transportation of Southfield Seniors program that provides medical transportation to Southfield residents 60 years of age or older. TOSS will pick up older adults, at their homes, and take them to doctor's offices, hospitals, pharmacies or for therapy appointments. TOSS has a 4-door passenger car and a lift-equipped van. This service is available Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Service is restricted to within the city of Southfield area.

To help pay for the cost of this service a $1 donation, each way, is suggested for those with an annual income of $12,000. A $2 donation, each way, is suggested for those whose income is over $12,000. Reservations are necessary at least 24 hours in advance. For additional information or to make a reservation, call 356-1500.

Q. Please explain Adult Foster Care Homes.

A. Adult Foster Care Homes are for people 18 and older who do not require constant nursing care but are unable to live independently. Licensed by the Michigan Department of Social Services, these homes provide room, board and supervision 24 hours a day.

The homes specialize in care for the mentally impaired, developmentally disabled and the elderly. The homes will help residents with dressing, bathing and other activities of daily living. Costs vary and may depend on such factors as where the home is located and how many services and activities are offered. Medicare or Medicaid payments are not accepted.

Renee Mahler

In selecting a Foster Care Home, and you should investigate several before you place a family member in one, there are several questions you should ask:

What type of residents does the home provide care for, what kind of privileges are allowed the resident within the home, is there transportation available, what type or educational, recreational or religious programs are offered, what are the house rules and how does the staff interact with the residents, what does the monthly fee include?

While the homes are licensed by the Department of Social Services and must follow specific rules and regulations, this does not guarantee that the home is providing good care. It is up to you to ensure that your family member is receiving the care he or she needs.

For further information concerning Adult Foster Care Homes in southeastern Michigan, call Citizens for Better Care, toll free, 1-800-292-7852, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

Renee Mahler is a gerontologist and the Director of Communications and Admissions at Observer Hills nursing facility. Send your questions to her at Observer & Eccentric, 805 East Maple, Birmingham, MI 4809

RideShare can ease commute

If you've had enough of that suburban commute, hear this.

By sharing rides to and from work, commuters can put money in the bank instead of in the gasoline tank, according to representatives of RideShare — the free, state-of-the-art computer service of SEMCOG, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

In addition to offering commuters a convenient and economical alternative to driving alone, ride sharing helps to conserve gasoline, reduces air pollution and decreases the need for maintenance and repair of roadways.

RideShare locates compatible car pooling partners and available van pool groups for individuals throughout the seven-county Southeast Michigan region.

Interested commuters can call "963-RIDE" — the hot line number posted along area freeways. A RideShare representative can identify potential match-mates immediately and provide the names by telephone or drop the list in the mail.

The matching service is free. Any financial arrangements are worked out between the car pool partners. For example, members have the opportunity to rotate driving responsibilities without exchanging money, or may choose to pay one driver a fee to help cover operating expenses.

CARPOOLERS AND van poolers not only benefit from a reduction in gasoline expenses, but maintenance and repair costs as well as decreased auto wear.

"A commuter who drives just 20 miles round trip can save more than $700 per year by sharing the ride with one other person," according to Anita Ste. Marie, RideShare manager.

Those who opt for van pooling can save even more. Recent figures show the national average for owning and operating a normally equipped midsize car is 29.5 cents per mile versus .09 cents per mile in a van pool.

The most economical commuting option RideShare offers is to become a van pool driver. Drivers of the 15-passenger vans ride free and have use of the vans evenings and weekends. In return, they collect fares and work with RideShare to find and maintain the minimum number of passengers.

Nine or more passengers are needed to form a van pool and receive a fully insured passenger van. The MichiVan Program is coordinated by RideShare, and sponsored by the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Vanpool riders pay for their seat one month in advance. Fares vary depending on gasoline costs, length of commute and the number of passengers. A commuter can expect to pay approximately $60 per month for a van pool carrying 12 passengers traveling a 50 mile round trip. The vans are fully insured and equipped with air-conditioning, AM-FM stereo, power steering, power brakes and automatic transmission.

TRANSPORTATION EXPERTS believe that ride sharing will continue to increase because of our society's propensity for low density living and the difficulty of funding transit. Nationally, 16 million people car pool or van pool, which indicates that ride sharing is already an acceptable commuting mode for a sizable portion of the population.

Still, more than 52 million Americans drive alone — 150 million empty seats representing a huge unused transportation resource.

However, ride sharing programs nationwide are having an impact. In Southeast Michigan, more than 115 million vehicle miles have been saved by existing car and van pools since 1980, which means reduced traffic congestion and highway deterioration.

SEMCOG is a voluntary association of governmental units in Livingston, Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, St. Clair, Washtenaw and Wayne counties. Its principal functions are short- and long-range planning for transportation, environmental quality, economic development, housing, land use and public safety.

SHARON LEMIEUX/staff photographer

Elizabeth Lee (left) of Novi, Jane Graf of Royal Oak and Carol Fenzan of Livonia with the Emily Butterfield painting "Tall Trees" on loan for the exhibit in Lansing from the Alpha Gamma Delta international headquarters in Indianapolis.

Exhibit is tribute to sorority founder

Area college sorority members of Alpha Gamma Delta paused this week to remember one of their own who is being honored for her significant contributions to the Women's Movement.

She is the late Emily Helen Butterfield, artist, architect, writer.

Butterfield will be honored by an exhibit, "The Art of Emily Helen Butterfield," during the remainder of this month and through January in the Belen Gallery, Michigan Women's Studies Association and Women's Hall of Fame Building in Lansing.

The exhibit, assembled by Jane A. Graf of Royal Oak and Elizabeth C. Lee of Novi, contains water color paintings, photos of buildings designer by Butterfield, pen/ink sketches, architectural drawings and copies of her poetry. The gallery is open Sunday, Wednesday, Thurday and Friday afternoons from noon to 5 p.m.

HOLIDAY DECORATIONS both inside and outside of the historic exhibit building — once the Cooley mansion — make a visit in the next few weeks an especially pleasant one, said Carol Fenzan of Livonia, one of several area sorority members who helped with decorations.

Butterfield, a native of Algonac, was among the first women to receive a degree in architecture from Syracuse, N. Y., University in 1907 and is said to be the first woman registered to practice architecture in Michigan. She returned to Detroit in 1907, and her father, Wells D. Butterfield who had practiced architecture in the Detroit area since 1894, added her name to his firm. Butterfield and Butterfield continued as a well-known team until 1930 when both retired.

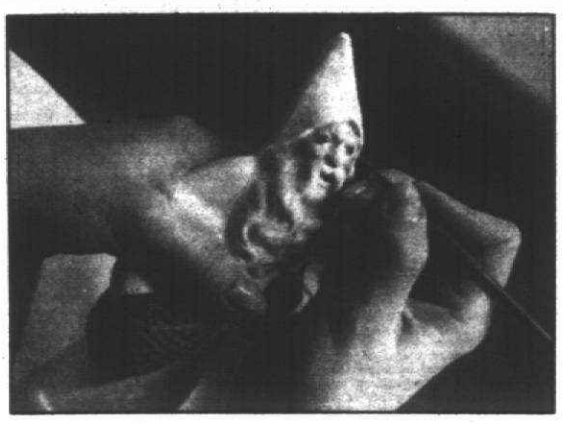
Representative of their buildings are Highland Park High School, Farmington's First United Methodist Church, a group of homes in the Oakland subdivision surrounded by Farmington's Ardmore and Bond streets, the Glen Oaks club house where in 1987 the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission erected a marker declaring the building part of the Farmington Historical District.

Emily Butterfield's artistic skills included painting in water colors and pen/ink sketches. She exhibited frequently in the J. L.Hudson Gallery, and had a one-woman of 40 paintings in the Toledo Artists Club. In 1987 the Detroit Scarab Club in recognition of the First Annual Detroit Festival of the Arts exhibited "Women Artists at the Scarab Club 1914-1987" in which a water color and pen/ink sketch were hung.

THE TYPEWRITER WAS the medium for expressing poems and narratives highlighting Michigan's waterland and woodland. Her interest in heraldry resulted in a book, "College Fraternity Heraldry," and a volume, "Young People's History of Architecture," grew from her pen/ink sketches of architectural details. Her articles about art in home decorating were published in House and Garden and Town and Country.

In addition to her artistic talent, Butterfield was an initiator.In 1904 she was one of 11 Syracuse University women who founded the college sorority Alpha Gamma Delta and in 1912 with two other young professional women in Detroit founded the Detroit Business Women's Study Club which evolved into the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club. Both are currently outstanding worldwide organizations of women.

To these ventures she brought a heritage of "being on the front line." Her great-great and great-grandparents were pioneers settling in Algonac. Wells D. was a charter member of Detroit's Exchange No. 1 and was the first mayor of Farmington.



Molding a tradition

By Linda Lee Sparkman
special writer

IF WE could go back in time, to say 1885, and look into a home, we might see someone painting the finishing touches on a decorative figure they made earlier by pouring wall plaster into a tin chocolate mold, or a pewter ice cream mold from their kitchen.

Today, we might see the same thing in Kathi Bejma's Canton home. But in this case the piece would probably end up in one of over 500 museums and specialty shops across the United States that carry the reproduction chalkware manufactured by her company, Walnut Ridge Primitives.

Bejma (pronounced Bay-ma) made her first chalkware reproduction about five years ago, combining her appreciation of history, artistic ability, and interest in antiques. "I'd seen a lot of chalkware I really liked while I was out antiquing (shopping for antiques), Bejma said. "But they were so totally unaffordable, that it just wasn't feasible to buy one."

Prices on authentic antique chalkwear range from $700 to nearly $10,000 according to Bejma. Another drawback for the collector was that authentic pieces are often cracked or chipped because they are made of simple wall plaster.

IT'S HERE THAT opportunity knocked, although Bejma didn't see it that way at first.

She wanted a piece of chalkware, but couldn't justify spending that much money. So she decided to try to make a piece for herself. Her vision was to craft a chalkwear piece as close to an authentic piece as possible, only a little more durable.

After consulting a number of reference books, locating a mold, paints and other supplies, Bejma went to work. It wasn't easy, and it didn't happen on the first or second try, but, "I was bound and determined," said Bejma. "I was going to do it."

The finish alone took about 20 different tries. "I wanted a very old, dull looking finish, so I just kept trying until I came up with something I liked," she said.

WHEN THE PIECE was finally finished, friends began admiring it and requesting copies for their own collections, and Bejma obliged.

Next Bejma included a few reproduction chalkwear pieces on her display tables at folk-art shows, where she had been selling wood reproductions for the past few years. When those first chalkwear pieces sold, Bejma made a few more. When the second group sold, she made more.

This continued until the fall of 1987, when one day at a folk-art show at Meadowbrook, in Rochester, Barbara Pitt, owner of Country Heritage Wholesale Markets saw Bejma's display.

Pitt recognized the marketability of Bejma's chalkwear pieces and encouraged her to make them available to the wholesale market. "I knew to do that, I was going to have to be able to produce more than I was producing at that time," Bejma said. "I knew I was going to have to find someone to help me."

After six months of searching, Bejma found someone to pour the chalkwear, a precise and time-consuming function.

Bejma took on the wholesale market in Valley Forge, Pa. in June of 1988.

"I really didn't anticipate the response we got," said Bejma. "I just thought, well if we

Community spirit at work

IT'S SLIGHTLY OFF the beaten path, but members of the Garden City Fine Arts Association hope it won't take the general public too long to discover them tucked away in a niche in Sheridan Square Mall.

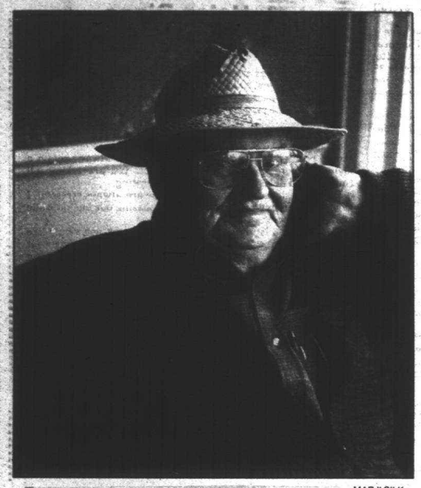
To that end, the association has initiated the holiday season with a juried show that opened last weekend and will continue through Saturday. But long after the show ends, the association hopes to keep the public interest with a variety of art works that will be for sale.

The gallery had its beginnings last summer through the generosity of Garden City resident Robert Sheridan. Sheridan owns the mall where the gallery is located.

Sheridan offered the space to the group rent-free until such time as it can become self-supporting. It was all part of the community spirit being generated to make people more aware of the talents of some of its residents, said Norma McQueen, association president.

Located at 30116 Ford Road, the gallery will be open during the holidays noon to 9 p.m. Thursday-Saturday. Artists interested in exhibiting or those interested in more information can call 565-9676.

Joe Clark: Photography legend



MARJI SILK

Joe Clark, HBSS, (1904-1989) was a masterful storyteller whether using words or a camera.

This will be the second time in 10 years of doing this column that I have written something other than photography advice.

The first was my tribute to Ansel Adams shortly after he died in April of 1984. Today, I want to tell you about another giant in photography, Joe Clark, HBSS, of Farmington, who died early Sunday morning after suffering a heart attack.

I consider myself fortunate to have been acquainted with Ansel Adams, and I've always considered it a special privilege and joy to have had Joe as a friend.

Joe worked overtime giving, sharing and loving others. He was special, not just to his immediate family — son, Junebug, daughter-in-law, Kay, and grandchildren, Wade and Anna, but to everyone he came in contact with.

Joe's two trademarks were his straw hat, which he wore everywhere, and the HBSS after his name, which stood for Hillbilly Snapshooter.

His years of working at Life Magazine and his fame as a poet, notwithstanding, nobody in the history of photography documented life in Appalacha in the '30s and '40s as he did. With that body of work, he carved a niche for himself that will never be equaled.

Joe was a humble, down-to-earth, caring and devoted friend. Just a few days before he died, we were having lunch together at the Buggy Works Restaurant in Farmington.

We were in the Joe Clark, HBSS Room, decorated with many of his magnificent photographs. Some people at the next table recognized him and a conversation ensued.

After we finished our lunch, Joe and I left and as we were walking out to the parking lot, he stopped and went back. He remembered he had forgotten to say goodbye to the people we had been talking to and to tell them how much he had enjoyed meeting them.

Most people would have just left, but not Joe — always the gentleman, always thoughtful and kind. This event may seem trivial, to me it exemplified Joe's warmth, sincerity and genuine love for his fellow men.

Joe lived a full and rewarding life. One of my favorite Joe Clark poems is typical of his zest for life. In a segment from his poem, "I Pledge," Joe wrote,

I pledge to greet each morning joyously,
To sing the livelong day,
To laugh with happy comrades,
To while this life away.

take a few orders, that'll be great. I still had all my regular craft and folk-art shows booked for that fall," she remembers.

What happened was overwhelming. "I had so many orders from the wholesale market, that I had to cancel all the shows," Bejma said. During the first half of 1988 Bejma had made only a few hundred pieces. In the six months after the wholesale market, she filled orders for over 12,000 chalkware reproductions.

"TRYING TO FILL the orders was just terrible," Bejma said. "But, I survived."

Walnut Ridge Primitives now employs 16 people, some of whom work out of their own homes, picking up pieces to paint and returning them to Bejma for the final touches.

Several sales representatives now work throughout the United States representing Bejma's chalkwear.

Bejma has also increased her antique mold collection from the one reproduction mold she originally used, to about 200, 3-to 20-inch molds, including both reproduction molds and authentic antique molds. Characters detailed by the molds include a number of Santas, rabbits, cats, dogs and other animals, all of which are now made into chalkware by Bejma's company.

"This all stems from doing only one wholesale market, twice a year, in the East," said Bejma, who looks forward to sending representatives to other markets this coming year.

If you're wondering, like I did, "How can this all really happen?", Bejma has the answer: "You have to make a decision, and jump in with both feet," she said, which is exactly what she did originally, by deciding to duplicate the antique chalkwear herself, and again when she decided to attend her first wholesale market.

Following are a few area shops that carry Bejma's chalkware.

- The Apple Wreath, 32626 West Seven Mile, Livonia.
- The Pickett Fence, 11 Forest Place, Plymouth.
- Plain and Fancy, 323 Main, Rochester.
- The Country Merchant, 42030 Grand River, Novi.

Some under-$10 art gift suggestions artifacts

David Messing

WELL, HERE it is again . . . December . . . Christmas. Wild-eyed husband shoppers come into my store waving a $50 bill and saying, "I want to spend this on my wife but I don't know what kinda' art she does."

Well, for all of you with artistic loved ones, you need not spend a $50 bill. But then again, you can spend much more . . . but make sure it's something useful.

If you're an artist, make sure you make a mega hint and pin a list to the collar of your potential gift buyer. If you are the non-artist buying a gift, find out, at least, what media your artist uses, i.e. water color, acrylic, oil, pastel etc.

Here's a list of some good stuff at different prices.

First of all, there are a bunch of art items that are useful and under $10. One goodie and not often bought by frugal artists is "B&J Brush Cleaner and Preserver." This is a soap for cleaning and conditioning artists brushes. Usually, if an artist has a choice between another tube of paint and a cake of brush cleaner, he/she will opt for the paint.

- Here's a $12 dollar gift for artists who love more graphic art. A set of eight French curves. I really don't know what is so "French" about them since they are made in Texas. But these are so handy, not used everyday but when you need them, they're great.
- A Rotex is a spinning tray that holds all artist's pens, pencils, markers and etc. The first time you set them up, they look great, but after a month or so they look like a rotating junk drawer. They are about $14 and are a must for every artist.
- Rotring (pronounced ROWtring) makes a 12-piece set of artist inks for about $21. These inks are fade-proof and non-clogging. They can be used in pens, brushes, air brushes and even Tech Pens. This product is similar to Higgins Pigmented Ink.
- Now we're up to $25. Art Bin has a neat new watercolor box full of brush holders, water bottles and paint tube storage.
- If you bought a loved one a drafting table last year and you don't know what to get this year, there are plenty of accessories you can get to add on to the table. Lamps and trays and shelves are around $25.
- A drawing board elevator turns any flat surface into an elevated art table for $28.
- Watercolor easels are great to use and are only $50 . . . Did you notice I said "only?" Fifty bucks is about what a pair of tennis shoes costs.

weeder's guide

Earl Aronson

YOU CAN MAKE your own holiday centerpiece for the table. Basic supplies, which you can buy at a local florist, include some dense plastic foam into which plant materials are inserted; some greening pins (they look like hairpins); and wooden picks to give plant materials a hard point or to lengthen short stems.

A pocketknife is useful. So is puttylike floral adhesive, used to hold the foam in the container. Dried material preservative, a spray, helps hold together brittle dried materials that are likely to shed.

Gather ferns, thistles, milkweed pods, gypsophila, dock, tansy, Queen Anne's lace and other weed seed pods and dried flower heads. Add osage, pine, fir and elder cones, dried garden flowers, rose hips, cattails gathered during the summer and fall, crabapples, yucca and poppy seed pods, corn shocks, cockscomb, sweet gum pods, water lily seed pods, decorative grasses and woods moss.

Cut a piece of florist's foam to fit tightly in the container. It should extend 1¼ inches above the container top. Use white glue or florist's adhesive to hold it in place, and round off foam edges.

Cover foam with damp sheet moss or dried foliage. Hold moss in place with greening pins. Then start arranging to define best shape. Start with taller items, such as cattails, in the center. Then form a circle around it with fairly long items, such as ferns or oak leaves on branches, evenly spaced in the foam. You can set the container on a circle of paper as a guide.

Take other items, cut them about 1 to 1 ½ inches shorter than the first round and insert them into the foam between and above the items in the first round. Repeat this step, placing the third round higher on the foam, at a sharper angle — more toward the vertical — with each item above the space between two items in the next lower row. From the top, the arrangement should now look like a fairly solid ball.

Pastels dispel basement gloominess

Helen Diane Vincent

Q. We want to transform a dark and gloomy basement into a livable area suitable for entertaining. Could you give us some guidelines on the best color and design approach to use?

A. You have a number of options that will transform your basement space effectively if you adhere to certain overall principles:

Make sure most of the materials and colors you use have a high reflectancy value to compensate for the lack of natural daylight and the closed-in look of most basements. Pure white, of course, has the highest reflectancy as a color. It reflects 85 percent of light; while black reflects only 3½ percent. But too much white isn't recommended except for ceilings, because it usually results in a sterile look.

Try to use beiges and light pastels which usually fall into the 50 percent to 70 percent range. Make your darkest color light oak paneling that has a 38 percent reflectancy. If you go down into the typical or cherry finish, you will be in the 17 percent range — and much too dark for your project.

You can select almost any color within a light range, but try to avoid bright yellows and oranges if you think they will convey the impression of a sunny and cheerful day. Unless these colors are particular favorites of yours, they will soon look very contrived and become a source of agitation. This is, in fact why some food chains use these types of colors to keep their customers on the move.

Make sure you have ambient, or overall lighting throughout the basement, but reserve dramatic downlight accents for the bar and perhaps a special gaming table.

Your furniture should be light and open in scale, such as upholstered rattan. Keep the flooring light, but add a bright rug to relieve the monotony.

And finally remember that it will be the contrast of texture as much as the color that will help to enliven and lighten the area. Be bold in the use of contrasting smooth brass, mirror, and glass with the texture of rugs, textiles, and graining in the paneling.

Q. It's been one year since my wife died and I've finally come around to the idea that I should redecorate the interior of our house. It had fallen into disrepair during my wife's long illness. Previously she had always taken care of these matters, and the children are of no help because they want everything left the way it was when she died. Although the furniture is of good quality, even I can recognize the color scheme is out of date. The carpets are in seafoam green, the furniture upholstery is in a rose beige and gold. What do you suggest?

A. I encourage you to redecorate to signal the end of your mourning and the beginning of a new life for you. Your children should be made to understand that you will always retain a loving memory of their mother but now you are taking full control of all decisions, including redecorating.

However, since changes such as these are always stressful, I would recommend proceeding slowly, phasing out the old while adding the new.

The first step is to decide on the overall look you would like without anyone else's influence. Part of this is recognizing what colors you prefer and genuinely dislike. Without quite realizing it, you may have been living in a female environment and that your natural preferences may be unexpectedly different.

If you really prefer to live in soft, greyed colors, then you could build on some of the existing colors, such as the seafoam carpeting. Because the most recent trends are coming full circle to the point where you and your wife had originally decorated, you will soon find variations on your color scheme in the stores, such as golds and the newer rose beiges.

However, if you feel a need for a more substantial change, the best place to start the phase out is with the bedroom, then move on into the living room, leaving the dining room last.

You might want to experiment with the dark, Victorian style look that is very masculine for the bedroom because I'm sure it's in marked contrast to what you've had. Once you've adjusted to the deep reds, blues and greens, you can move on as you hopefully will be doing with your life.

12 REASONS to list your property with COLDWELL BANKER in December . . .

The weather may be cold, but the real estate market is still plenty warm. And don't let anyone tell you differently. There are buyers in every month—in fact, every day of the year. So, if you're ready to sell your home, don't wait.

And here are some good reasons to let Coldwell Banker represent you!

1. December buyers are serious.
2. Homes "show better" decorated for the holidays.
3. There is less competition. (Some people actually believe that there is no December market.)
4. There is plenty of mortgage money available.
5. Lenders aren't as busy and can process loans faster.
6. Job transferees will take holiday vacation days to househunt. (And, we're one of America's largest corporate relocation companies.)
7. Many large corporations move executives during the holidays.
8. The market in December is better than ever.
9. We are planning special promotions throughout December to keep the marketing active on your listing.
10. You'll save money in preparing your home for sale with Coldwell Banker's Best Seller Plan.
11. Our exclusive Best Buyer Plan is attracting more buyers than ever to Coldwell Banker.
12. We want your business and we'll guarantee our services in writing with our exclusive new Best Seller Marketing Services Guarantee.

Call one of our professional sales associates now and wrap up a sale with Coldwell Banker!

The Crossings At Canton.
Apartment living just got better.
We're making The Crossings a better place to live and a better value. You'll feel it in the new hallways and newly refurbished clubhouse. You'll see it in the plush landscaping when you enter the grounds. And that's just the beginning. It's the new look and feel of The Crossings at Canton—and it's for you.
The Crossings at Canton offers 19 different floorplans with 1 to 4 bedrooms. And whether you choose a 2-level townhome or a luxury apartment, the renewed beauty of this charming rental community shines through in every one—the result of our recent "Capital Improvements & Upgrading" program. These apartments and townhomes are the largest in the area, yet are still incredibly affordable.
Discover these features at The Crossings at Canton:
• Dens & Fireplaces
• Fully-appliance Kitchens
• Patios or Balconies
• Central Air Conditioning
• A Clubhouse with sauna, indoor pool, exercise room, a new party room, and more!
Visit The Crossings at Canton today. We're just 20 minutes from Ann Arbor and downtown Detroit, yet comfortably away from it all. From I-275, just exit Arbor Rd. West to Haggerty Rd., follow south to Joy Rd., then east to The Crossings. Open Mon.-Fri., 10-6, Sat. 10-5, Sun. 12-5 Phone 455-2424 today.
*See rental agent for details.

SEMCOG map

Auburn Mills, meet the competition. Map shows the distribution of regional shopping centers within a 10-, 20- and 40-mile radius of the proposed Auburn Mills project. According to SEMCOG's regional impact review, projects such as Auburn Mills tend to draw their customer base from areas well beyond the traditional 10-mile local trade area.

Auburn Mills' scope raises questions on mall's impact

Today's Building Scene explores the proposed Auburn Mills and takes a look at two similar mega-malls, the promises made before they were built and the reality since they opened. Franklin Mills, built in a developed area in Philadelphia, is profiled below. On Page 2, we examine Potomac Mills built in a former pasture outside Washington, D.C., and we examine how several other Mills centers are faring as they move toward construction.

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

How Auburn Mills, the $200-million, 2-million-square-foot manufacturer's retail outlet and entertainment center planned for Auburn Hills at Lake Angelus Road and I-75, will impact the surrounding area is a whopping big question mark.

Only two similar large-scale discount malls, both built and operated by Western Development Corp., exist. With so few examples, local and regional planning officials have difficulty gauging Auburn Mills' potential effects. Two similar developments, Potomac Mills, just outside of Washington, D.C., in Prince William County, opened four years ago, and Franklin Mills, in northeastern Philadelphia, Pa., opened in May 1989. In the Detroit area, the granddaddy of retail malls, though not a discount outlet mall, is Northland with 1.7 million square feet.

Western Development also plans similar malls for Sunrise (suburban Ft. Lauderdale), Fla; Ontario, (suburban Los Angeles), Calif.; and Gurnee (suburban Chicago), Ill.

A "super-regional specialty center" like Auburn Mills is the next evolution in retailing, assembling more than 100 stores that sell merchandise at 20 to 60 percent below manufacturer suggested retail prices, according to Western Development. The mega-malls sport indoor recreational/entertainment complexes with activities like batting cages, miniature golf, roller skating, bowling lanes and arcades.

Western Development is also proposing a 200-room hotel and 375,000 square feet of additional retail space on Auburn Mill's periphery for movie cinemas, health clubs and family convenience and theme restaurants.

Western Development is currently reviewing the project and does not expect the final site plan to be completed for several months. Wetlands mitigation and the exact placement of the structure on the site are still under review.

Auburn Mills has been mired in controversy since it received zoning and preliminary site plan approval last summer.

Three communities opposed to the mall — Southfield, Lake Angelus and Rochester Hills — asked the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) to undertake an unprecedented regional impact study on a private project.

THE NON-BINDING study concluded the mall will impact traffic patterns, the environment, economics and public safety beyond the borders of Auburn Hills, but because the project is unusual, it's difficult to gauge the potential impact.

SEMCOG also found that more than the three communities were

Former race track site of mega-mall

Franklin Mills has been a boon to northeastern Philadelphia, Pa., with the possible exception of added pressure on the police force, according to local officials.

Most officials are enthusiastic about the $200 million mall which opened in May 1989 on the abandoned Liberty Bell horse race track site and is now experiencing the frenzy of its first holiday shopping season.

Robert Heisler, Philadelphia city planner, said Western Development met little resistance to its project. "There were some minor things that people were blowing up, but nothing of real consequence."

Traffic, he said, was probably the main concern, but the developer paid for several minor road improvements to enhance traffic flow. Major repairs, Heisler said, weren't necessary because the roads in the area were underutilized.

THE FRANKLIN MILLS site is bounded by a four-lane residential and six-lane state highway with good access, Heisler said. Local roads haven't experienced much of an impact because most people use the highways.

"We were lucky we had good infrastructure already there because of the race track," Heisler said, adding that if the property had been redeveloped with single-family housing, the impact would have been much greater.

"There has been a strain on the community, but the benefits should far exceed the costs," he said.

According to Mark Kissel, vice president of market research for Western Development, the mall owner, it is difficult to assess Franklin Mills' economic benefits because the mall hasn't been open for an entire year and is only 75 percent occupied.

"We won't have a good handle on it until next year," Kissel said, adding the only figures he has are estimates made in 1986.

According to those estimates, the mall will generate approximately 2,500 jobs and $3.7 million in total tax revenues in its first full year of operation.

Philadelphia's cost for having the mall will be about $1 million.

Favorable reviews greet Potomac Mills

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Officials in Prince William County, Va., give rave reviews to Potomac Mills, a 1.3 million-square-foot manufacturer's outlet retail mall 25 miles south of Washington, D.C.

The mall, built on 198 acres at a cost of about $100 million, opened amid much fanfare in September 1985 on the site of a former cow pasture off I-95.

"I believe people generally view the mall very favorably. All the facts show it's done exactly what it's supposed to do," said John Gessaman, economic development director for Prince William County.

Potomac Mills generated a net $3.6 million in tax revenue last year where $2.8 million had been projected, said Mark Kissel, vice president of market research for Western Development Corp., owner of the mall.

As for jobs, 3,100 have materialized where 3,000 had been projected, Kissel added.

'I believe people generally view the mall very favorably. All the facts show it's done exactly what it's supposed to do.'

— John Gessaman economic development director for Prince William County

NO ORGANIZED opposition surfaced during the mall's planning, which was carefully monitored by the Lake Ridge-Occoquan Civic Association.

"Our group was for the mall," said Jack Kooyoomjian, chairman of the association's planning, environment, land use and transportation committee.

"There were some concerns about signage, traffic, parking and aesthetics," he added. "I wish things were a little improved here and there, but on balance I'd say it's a net benefit to the county."

Prince William County has experienced tremendous growth during the last decade. The current population of 240,000 compares to 140,000 in 1980, Gessaman said. Median annual family income is $50,000.

There were no major shopping centers in the eastern part of the county prior to the opening of Potomac Mills, said James Cox, executive vice president of the Prince William County Chamber of Commerce.

BECAUSE THE land was zoned for commercial or industrial use, local residents couldn't say they were stunned by the mall's construction there, Kooyoomjian said.

County officials agreed to expedite the planning and permit approval processes but offered no economic assistance for the mall, Gessaman said. Tax abatements aren't given in Virginia.

Western Development paid to extend sewers and water lines, make road improvements and build a stormwater retention system at the site.

But due to county growth in general, voters last fall approved a $93 million bond issue for two recreation centers, a pair of libraries, a police/fire training center and roads.

About $66 million of that issue will go toward roads, both new and improvements, Gessaman said. Some $20 million is earmarked specifically for a parkway that services Potomac Mills.

A SPECIAL taxing district, including the mall, will generate additional revenue for area road improvements because those businesses will specifically benefit from the improvements.

That money apparently will be needed.

Consider that Western Development plans to add upwards of 700,000 square feet to Potomac Mills. The next phase is an 180,000-square-foot indoor recreation complex called 49th Street Galleria, Kooyoomjian said.

Two shopping centers, each larger than 100,000-square feet, have opened nearby since the mall's grand opening. Two other shopping centers of at least 100,000 square feet are planned, Gessaman said.

But that's not all.

Upwards of 3 million square feet of office space have been proposed for the area.

Surveys show that only 37 percent of shoppers at Potomac Mills live within the county, Gessaman said. A 150-room Days Inn motel was built nearby to accommodate visitors coming from a distance. Another hotel/motel is likely.

COME SHOPPERS do — about 13 million to, the mall last year — mostly from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, D.C., North Carolina and South Carolina, said Cpl. Jerry Mouser of the Prince William County Police.

Once the shoppers arrive, they're well-behaved.

Crime at Potomac Mills seems astonishingly low. The following figures for 1988 were reported by Mouser:

- Larceny — 258 incidents.
- Shoplifting — 93.
- Auto theft or tampering — 35.
- Vandalism — 52.

For comparison, Troy police recorded 13 auto thefts, 63 shoplifting, 29 larcenies and 12 incidents of vandalism at the Oakland Mall during a 36-day period last Nov. 25 to Dec. 30.

"One thing we feel keeps the figures low is they put police officers in here from when the mall opened," Mouser said.

A contingent of four county officers is permanently assigned to supplement the mall's regular security force of 15.

TRAFFIC ALONG I-95, a major commuter route to D.C., is often bumper to bumper but would be so with or without Potomac Mills, Gessaman said.

Things could be worse because the mall isn't open for business during the morning rush hours and commuters generally aren't headed into the district on weekends, he added.

Potomac Mills houses 32 restaurants, 23 home furnishing stores, 32 gift and service stores, 23 children's clothing and toy stores, 57 women's clothing stores, 43 men's clothing stores and 41 shoe and fashion accessories stores.

Smooth sailing for other malls under development

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Sunrise City (Fla.) residents were amazed at the projected size of the mall and were skeptical that it could be done in their community, but they never opposed the project.

Other discount mega-malls either under construction or proposed by Western Development Corp. are facing less opposition than Auburn Mills.

According to Norman Priest, director of community and economic development in Ontario, which is about 40 miles east of downtown Los Angeles, Ontario Mills has generated little controversy.

"So far it's been very easy," he said.

Ontario Mills, still in the initial planning stages, will be built on the old Ontario Motor Speedway site which closed down in the early 1980s.

Site plans, zoning changes and infrastructure improvements for which the developer will pay a special assessment are still under discussion.

The redevelopment of the speedway will be a boost for the community because of the jobs and tax money it will generate, Priest said.

"WE'RE LOOKING forward to the project," he said. Once completed, Ontario Mills will generate approximately $6 million in sales and property taxes for the local community and schools.

Conventional tax abatements won't be given for the project, but the city gives reimbursements for property and sales taxes in Community Development Facility projects similar to special assessment districts.

Unlike Auburn Hills, southwest California is not experiencing anti-growth sentiment, Priest added. "There's interest in that, but there's not a strong, organized anti-development effort."

The surrounding area has been developed with office, multiple-residential and hotel uses, but there is still vacant land nearby for future development, he said.

SAWGRASS MILLS, located in Sunrise City west of Ft. Lauderdale, is already a year into construction with completion targeted for September 1990.

According to Sunrise City economic development director Bill Duffy, southeast Michigan "is blessed" that Western Development has decided to build Auburn Mills. "The people we've worked with have been tremendous, and the boost to the economic base is outstanding," Duffy said.

When completed, Sawgrass Mills is expected to generate $7 million in property and sales taxes annually in addition to one time fees of $17.5 million, he said.

Sunrise City residents were amazed at the projected size of the mall and were skeptical that it could be done in their community, Duffy said, but they never opposed the project.

Miles Homes opens office

Miles Homes, a Minneapolis-based building company, has opened a regional office in Novi. The company provides house plans, blueprints and financing for the do-it-yourselfer. The financing program provides financing with no down payment on materials, interest-only payments during construction and can provide allowances for professional assistance to help complete the home.

"Our home building program allows them (customers) to determine their level of involvement in the construction process," said Nick Krane, sales operations manager. "They may elect to do almost everything from framing to finishing or have the sub-contractors of their choice build to any stage of completion — shell, semi-finished, completely finished or any point in-between. The level of involvement will likely be a function of their income, time they have to spend on the project and skill level.

R.C. Handley Construction of Drayton Plains has hired Timothy Ruggles as a partner in the firm. Ruggles will serve as project and sales manager of the company's wood deck division. His responsibilities will include client contact and general project management.

Ruggles had owned and managed his own residential services company, Priority Enterprises.

Handley Construction specializes in wood deck and residential construction, commercial and industrial construction and lake-front development

James M. Kral has been appointed branch manager and vice president of Lambrecht Co.'s Livonia residential mortgage branch office. He will oversee all branch activity and originate loans.

Kral is a former loan originator for Transohio Mortgage Co., Birmingham.

Paul B. Avesian Sr. has been named vice president of land sales for Manhattan Co., a Troy-based industrial, office and high-tech real estate brokerage company. Operating as Avesian Assocates for the past 13 years, Avesian has been involved in assembling large vacant tracts of land for development.

The Engineeering Society of Detroit is accepting entries for its 1990 Construction and Design Awards Program. Projects must relate to a building erected in Michigan within that last three years or a historic preservation/adaptive reuse of an existing building or structure.

Only entries submitted by the project architect/engineer, owner or general contractor will be accepted.

All entries will be judged according to seven criteria: land use/environmental consideration; appropriateness or materials; innovation in construction materials; quality of overall design; unique engineering systems features; degree of energy consciousness; and end use/social and economic impact on Michigan.

Deadline is Feb. 16. Winners will receive awards at ESD's annual meeting on June 1.

For a copy of entry rules and guidelines, call Marika Diamond at ESD, 832-5400.

Potomac Mills

"Once people get out of the mall and on the road (I-95), it's not that bad," said Maj. John Sindlinger, operations commander for the county police.

The unemployment rate in Prince William County is about 2 percent, so most workers at Potomac Mills earn considerably more than minimum wage, Cox and Gessaman said.

"Many entry level jobs are in the $5-$5.50 range," Cox said.

"Hardly anyone in our area makes minimum wage," Gessaman said. "McDonald's starts at $5.25 per hour."

A SURVEY taken of Potomac Mills workers in 1987 by Western Development revealed that:

- 90 percent were Prince William County residents.
- 72 percent were women.
- 64 percent were 24 years of age or younger.
- 54 percent worked full time, 46 percent part time.

Several county officials without being prompted pointed out Potomac Mills' involvement in the community.

The mall has co-sponsored a fun run for Special Olympics and allows a portion of its parking area to be used as a commuter collector lot for public transportation.

It built a fence around a local high school when concerns were raised about students leaving the grounds to go to the mall. Potomac Mills also allows fund-raising activities inside.

Kooyoomjian described dialogue between his association and mall officials as cordial.

"It's a good development," Cox said. "It causes no problems. People connected with it participate. You don't find kids hanging out and drug dealing and vandalism in the mall. It's a good, clean operation."

Smooth sailing

URBAN EXPANSION, traffic problems and environmental impacts weren't problems because the mall's location on the city's west side is near a major, underutilized freeway interchange, Duffy said.

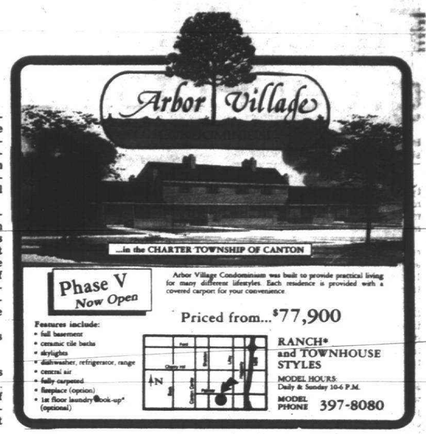
Urban sprawl will not continue, he said, because the land beyond the property is a nature preserve and unsuitable for development.

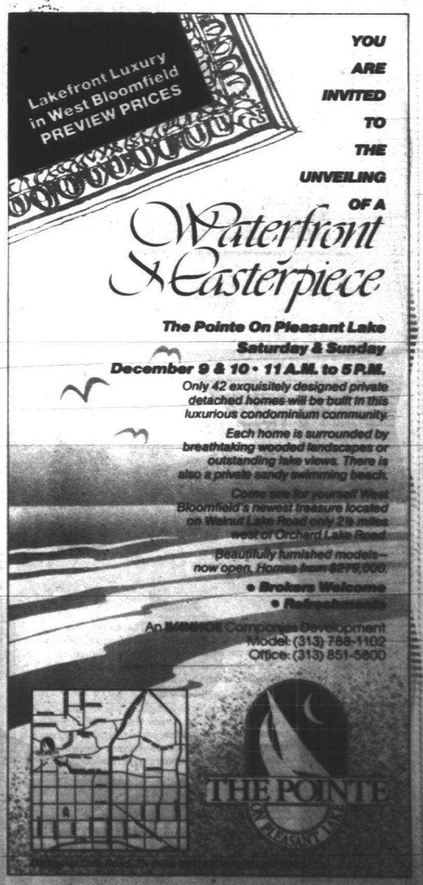
The greatest problem the developer had to overcome was meeting local, state and federal wetlands protection laws because the site is near the lowland Florida Everglades.

"They've done everything we've ever asked them to do and more," Duffy said. "You'll be very happy with them. They're very regional-planning oriented and supported all our efforts."

Florida, he added, is one of the nation's leaders when it comes to regional planning. Approval is needed at the local, county and regional levels, in addition to all of the relevant local, state and federal laws.

"I'm sure that all the people worried about the mall now will be in favor of it, stop at it, and think it's a great project," Duffy said.





Auburn Mills scope

concerned the project might negatively affect the surrounding area.

Lake Orion, Oakland Township and Oak Park, concerned about urban sprawl, traffic, stormwater drainage, and the expenditure of public dollars for a private project, are also opposed. The cities of Auburn Hills and Pontiac — which will gain $1.8 million in property and income taxes — and the Pontiac School District — which will collect $5.5 million in property taxes — have heartily endorsed the Auburn Mills project.

According to SEMCOG director of planning Edward Hustoles, Auburn Mills is being proposed at a time when anti-development pressures are spurring a need for better planning.

"What's important here is this is raising awareness of the need for a major regional growth management study," Hustoles said. "The fact the mall came in at this time is helping to promote the (necessity).

"We tend to act only when things get serious and allow the little crises to continue," Hustoles said. "Florida, Maine, New Jersey and California are the only states with regional planning programs in place."

REGIONAL THINKING is becoming more the norm, Hustoles said. "At one time, people would see a development like this and jump at it for the property taxes. Now they're saying, 'Wait a minute.' "

Mark Kissel, vice president of marketing for Western Development, said the mills-concept malls always generate some controversy because of the enormity of the projects.

Auburn Mills' facts, figures

Developer: Western Development of Washington, D.C.
Architect: Wah Yee Associates of Farmington Hills
Site: 200 acres in Auburn Hills bounded by I-75, Baldwin, Joselyn and Lake Angelus roads

Total mall: 1.925 million square feet
Anchor stores: 1.025 million square feet
Food court: 25,000 square feet
Parking: 11,000 spaces
Groundbreaking: Spring 1990
Opening: Spring 1992

Cost: $200 million
Projected tax revenues: $1.8 million annually for Auburn Hills; $5.5 million in school taxes for Pontiac Schools.
Job projections: 1,400 construction jobs, 5,000 permanent jobs.

Shoppers replace bettors in Philly

Philadelphia gave Western Development a five-year, 100 percent tax abatement on the building, Heisler said, but no abatement on the land. Wetlands preservation and stormwater drainage were not troublesome because the site had been previously developed, Heisler said.

According to Philadelphia 8th Precinct police Capt. Christopher Rodell, the mall has resulted in increased automobile and petty thefts.

The problems are not unexpected, he said. "Pretty much of what has happened is happening where we expected it."

ONE PROBLEM that didn't materialize, Rodell said, is that youths would use the mall as a hangout because of its heavy emphasis on entertainment. Youths shop at Franklin Mills, but loitering hasn't been a problem, he said.

"There are a lot of growing pains that go with a mall like this, but it's much less than we expected," he said. "The perception of the growing pains is worse than it actually is."

Philadelphia must adjust to the mall as well, Rodell said. Additional police officers will be added, he said, once the city has a better grasp of the situation.

Western Development has done a lot to accommodate the city, including incorporating police recommendations into the site plan, building holding cells at the mall, and employing a private security force that works closely with the Philadelphia police, Rodell said.

ROBERT HAAK, a city planner, said the city's experience with the mall has been positive especially in light of the fact that the mall replaced the race track that had been idle for years.

"It was a real boost for the area — Philadelphia is in a win-win situation with Franklin Mills," he said.

The Liberty Bell Park race track folded in 1985 after several years of operating losses due to competition with nearby Atlantic City and the Garden State horse race track in New Jersey, Haak said.

In its place, the 1.8 million-square-foot mall has provided jobs, taxes and retail opportunities in a largely residential area that lacked adequate shopping.

Arthur Keogh, executive director of the Greater Philadelphia area chamber of commerce retail council, said business in the area has been brisk. "I'm not sure if we know at this point what the total impact is yet."

The mall has increased retail competition in the area, Keogh said, but it appears the market has absorbed the addition of the mega-mall.

Other malls have remodeled in anticipation of the increased competition, Keogh said. Shoppers have also benefited from stores competing with one another on a price basis.

The worker has also benefited, Keogh said. With relatively low unemployment — about 5 percent in Philadelphia and 2 percent in surrounding suburbs — employers have to pay workers more than minimum wage.

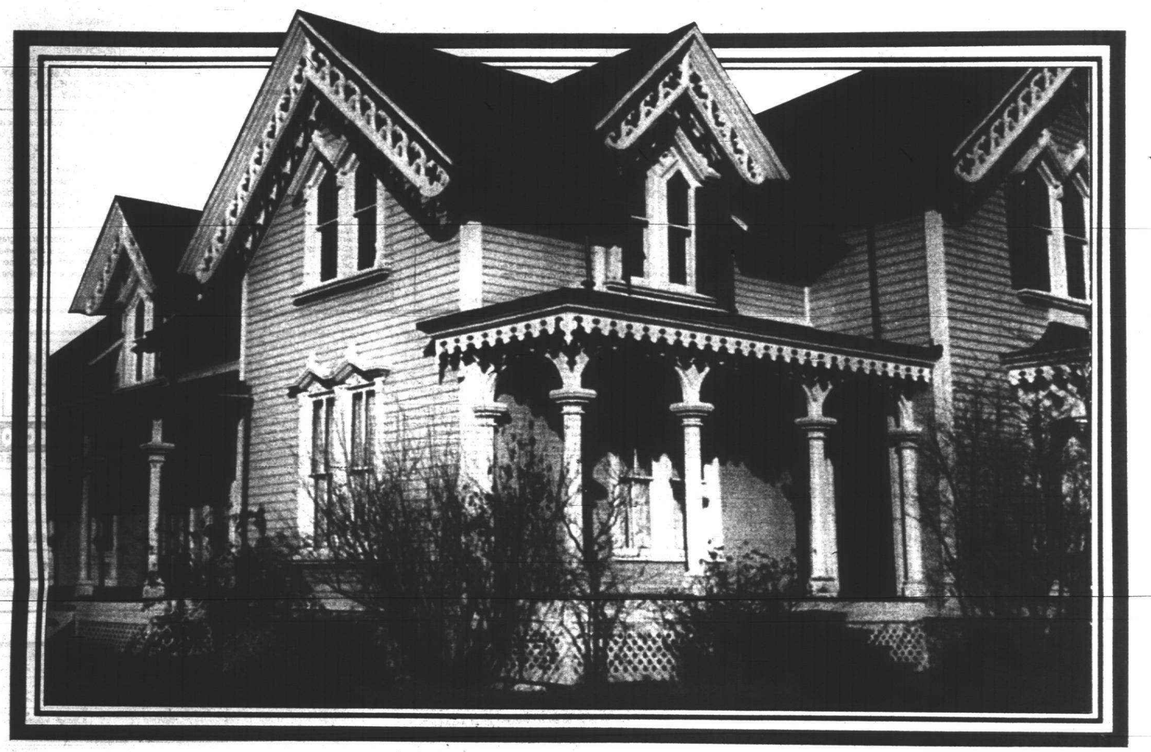
Yes, they do build 'em, like they used to.



Maybe not along the same lines as this historic centerpiece in Mill Race Village, but with equal care and quality.

And when it comes to telling a prestige audience about your current homes for sale, there is no better place than The Observer & Eccentric's Creative Living Real Estate section.

Here is a newspaper section that regularly features the largest selection of suburban real estate ads in Southeastern Michigan.

Published twice each week on Monday and Thursday for an audience of more than 350,000 adult readers in 24 affluent communities, this popular section has been tailored for our satisfied Realtors who continue to be pleased with the results they receive.

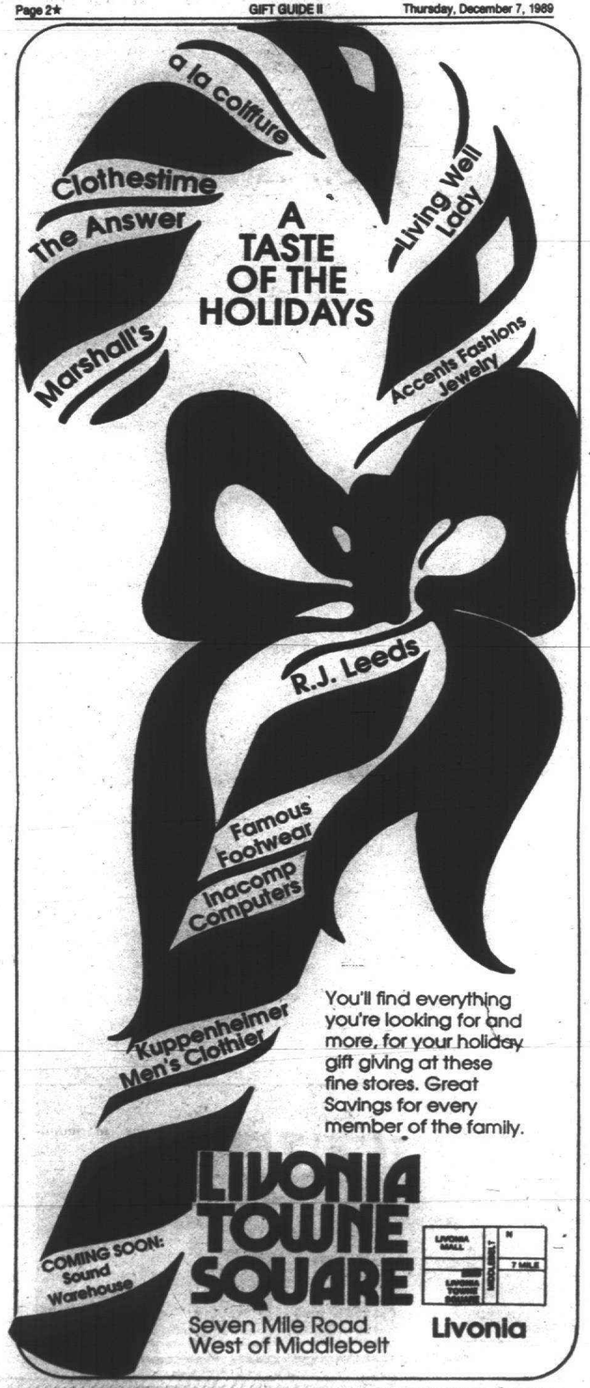
Gifting



Here's history of favorite gifts

(AP) - Game players in Cuba can't play "Monopoly" legally, since Premier Fidel Castro once ordered all known sets seized and destroyed, saying it was 'symbolic of an imperialistic and capitalistic system.'

But Parker Brothers, which has sold over 100 million sets since the game was introduced in 1935, says the Soviet Union, which also banned it, is now letting Russians mortgage little red hotels to their hearts' content. The game, invented by a man named Charles B. Darrow during a spell of unemployment in 1933, now is distributed in 35 countries and in 19 languages.

SILLY PUTTY was invented accidentally in a General Electric Co. lab during World War II, when its scientists were trying to develop synthetic rubber for the war effort.

Besides providing an instant medium for fledgling sculptors, this substance has been used to pick lint, clean typewriter keys, level wobbly furniture, help the Apollo 8 astronauts fasten down tools during weightless flight, and to take hand and foot prints of the gorilla population at the Columbus, Ohio, Zoo. Its manufacturer, Binney & Smith, also says that New England Patriots football team members squeeze Silly Putty to strengthen their hands for catching passes.

ONE OF THE oldest toys is the yo-yo, with origins in a primitive weapon used by prehistoric Filipino hunters. The original version had a sharp piece of flint attached to a long thong. If the hunter's aim was poor, he could retrieve the weapon and try again.

The yo-yo evolved as a court toy in 17th and 18th century France and Spain; a painting of a nobleman holding a yo-yo hangs in the Louvre in Paris.

Playing with the yo-yo is a national sport in the Philippines and is practiced around the world. Over a half a billion yo-yos have been sold in the United States alone since they were introduced commercially in the late 1920s, according to the Flambeau Corporation-Duncan Toys.

THE TEDDY BEAR is a namesake of President Theodore Roosevelt and originated in 1902, when the president refused to kill a bear that his hunting party had captured and tied up for him to shoot. Roosevelt said it would be unsportsmanlike to take advantage of the defenseless animal.

Publicity about the incident inspired a merchant, Morris Michtom, to name two toy bears after the president and display them in his shop window in Brooklyn, N.Y. According to authors Peggy and Alan Bialosky in 'The Teddy Bear Catalog,' Michtom received presidential permission to market the stuffed toys under the name "Teddy's Bears." The resulting success led Michtom to found the Ideal Toy & Novelty Co.

LIKE A TRUE waif, the original Reggedy Ann was a castoff found in an attic and adopted by 8-year-old Marcella Gruelle in 1914.

Her father, John Gruelle, a political cartoonist for the Indianapolis News, drew a face for the stuffed, faceless doll, and her mother, Myrtle, added a candy heart inscribed, 'I love you.'

To entertain his terminally-ill daughter, Gruelle made up stories about Raggedy Ann. After Marcella died, he began writing the stories as a memorial, with the first Raggedy Ann book appearing in 1918. It later inspired the manufactured dolls, books, TV shows, comics, movies and a Broadway musical.

THE GAME OF tossing disks around in the air may go back before history, but the legend of Frisbees is traceable to a story of some Connecticut college students who made a sport of tossing empty pie tins from Mother Frisbie's Pie Factory and yelling 'frisbie' as an alert to the flight of the plates.

An entrepreneur named Fred Morrison took up the idea, selling disks

Looking for the unusual? Consider these

(AP) — Gift-giving, for better or worse, has come a long way since the choice was frankincense and myrrh.

If incense isn't on your list this year, or if frankincense and myrrh are too tough to find, consider some of these unusual ideas:

● Is your car on your gift list? From the people who gave you automotive sunshades comes Sno-Off, to protect a car's windshield from snow, ice and frost.

The cover, with a ski-goggle design, fits across the outside the windshield and secures inside with two suction cups. Auto-Shade manufacturers say it will sell for about $5.

● Elegant Lasso. A new variation on a classic is the Lariat, a strand of pearls with chandeliar crystals at both ends that tie instead of clasp. From the Swarovski Signature Collection, the Lariat was inspired by western neckwear and comes with a tag-booklet to show different ways to wear it — over the shoulder for low-backed evening wear, the traditional front knot, around the waist, or in a double strand. The necklace retails for about $500, and matching drop earrings are about $135 at department and specialty stores.

● You won't have to go far to enjoy holiday lights and music: you can wear them.

'Class in a Glass,' for those who have run dry on unusual gift ideas, is a water-of-the-month club offering subscribers mail order gift packs of bottled water from around the world.

Bonnie Boerer's holiday fashions include a decorated blouse that plays "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" for Christmas and a similar sweater that plays "Auld Lang Syne" for New Year's.

The battery-powered show is operated by a switch hidden underneath the sweater. About $160.

● When asked "what's your sign," you won't have to know the zodiac to answer.

A company called What's Your Sign, in Northfield, Ill., will custom imprint a metal street sign with anything you want, up to 11 characters, plus any abbreviation such as St., Dr., Rd.

● If you suspect a Merlin on your list, he'll probably like "White Lightning," a grown-ups' toy that makes real lightning, enclosed under a glass dome. Controls let the mover and shaker form one or two streaks of lightning or a mini-storm with hundreds of separate bolts. Created by neon artists Larry Albright and made by Rabbit Systems Inc. This conversation-stopper costs about 150 at department and specialty stores.

● A novel solution to the toilet seat battle of the sexes: LidAlert. I plays "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star" if the seat is left up after flushing. Its manufacturer, Kaleidoscope, Huntington Beach, Calif., says it will be priced at about $20.

● For the person in your life who has everything, what's left but the world? You can have the world in your hands — if you have Atlas' hands and can afford to spend at least $36,250.

Rand McNally Map and Travel Stores offer a custom-made globe that weighs more than 500 pounds, with a 325-motor and axis that turns it one full revolution every three minutes. Hand-laminated in fiberglass and epoxy, it's 6 feet in diameter.

● "Class in a Glass," for those who have run dry on unusual gift ideas, is a water-of-the-month club offering subscribers mail order gift packs of bottled waters from around the world. From the Water Centre, Edison, N.J.

● For those who like their books read to them: Random House Audio books on tape, including "My Turn," read by author Nancy Reagan, and "It was On Fire When I Laid Down On It," ready by its author, Robert Fulghum.

● For hair on the go: Jetsetter hair rollers from Helen of Troy Corp., a five-roller set, with cord and clip storage in a zippered travel bag. About $25.

● Diamonds, of course, still fit nicely into holiday stockings.

A new "garden" variety is popular this season, according to Lloyd Jaffe, chairman of the American Diamond Industry Association. He says "marigold" are new cuts that may be seen on engagement rings.

The "flower" cuts maximize some rough diamond's brilliance, color or yield, he says.

The average price for a piece of diamond jewelry in 1988 was $673, Jaffe says.

● A pocket-sized diary from Per Annum Inc. is also a city guide, calendar and reference booklet. Guides to Denver, Miami, Chicago, New York (Manhattan), Los Angeles and Boston are in separate diaries and there is a 14-city Metropolitan City Diary.

Each of the date books includes maps and listings for restaurants, stores and hotels, along with weekly and yearly calendars and a forward planner.

Club Mate is a new portable device that allows golfers to strike each shot during a round with a freshly cleaned club. It mounts easily to either a pull cart (shown here) or a golf car, and works on woods and irons, both left- and right-handed. The jet-action water spray and multi-directional brush in the unit clean the grime from the clubs with no more effort than pressing a couple of times on the bellows pump. Weighs two pounds. For more information, call the U.S. sales office in Palm Desert, Calif. at (616) 568-2002.

Gift giving can soar to new heights with peace climb message

LOOKING for gift-giving suggestions for the upcoming holiday season? Consider sending a message of peace and hope from the top of the world with the Mount Everest Earth Day 20 International Peace Climb.

The landmark expedition led by Jim Whittaker — the first American to climb to the top of Mt. Everest — hopes to place a team of one climber each from the United States, the Soviet Union and China on the summit of Mt. Everest on the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, April 22, 1990, demonstrating that through cooperation and trust the greatest obstacles can be overcome.

All peace messages, which can be in the form of words, photos or drawings, will be recorded on a CD ROM disc and carried by the climbers to the world's highest peak, the 29,028-foot summit of Everest. After the team descends, the messages will be printed out and sent to world leaders.

The climbers, like the expedition's major sponsor and outfitter, L.L. Bean, are committed to a cleaner Earth as well as a more peaceful one. They have pledged to clean up the decades of gear and debris left by previous expeditions.

OFFICIAL EVEREST Peace Climb T-shirts are another way for the public to both support the Peace Climb and solve gift problems. The T-shirts from L.L. Bean feature the Climb logo in vibrant red, blue, yellow and green and the word 'Peace' in English, Russian and Chinese. A donation of $2 on each T-shirt purchase will be made by Bean to the Peace Climb.

Expedition leader Jim Whittaker says, 'To support the Peace Climb with either a T-shirt or a message of peace is to choose a gift that is in the true spirit of the season. All of us participating in this Peace Climb hope that people from all over the world will send peace messages themselves or as a gift for loved ones.'

To send a peace message to the top of the world, mail the message with a minimum donation of $5 to Mt. EVEREST PEACE CLIMB, 221 Middlepoint Road, Port Townsend, WA 98368 by March 31, 1990. All contributions are tax deductible. To order a Peace Climb T-shirt call L.L. Bean toll free at 1-800-221-4221.

Classic Nordic

Celaya hand-knit and hand-washable merino wool Nordic ski design sweaters are a welcome addition to any wardrobe. Bright colors with patterns on front, back and sleeves and textures only hand-knitting can achieve. Sizes to fit the whole family. Available only by calling Cynthia Seidner, 645-6927.

Cookie cutters

CHRISTMAS comes but once a year, so everything about it must be special, from the wreath on the front door to the just-right centerpiece for the dining table.

And decorating the tree is no exception. This year personalize your tree with garlands of dazzling, delightful homemade cookie ornaments, each one unique. They're so easy to make, and perfect for a family project. Or, invite the gang over for an old-fashioned tree-trimming party. Fun is guaranteed when making (and eating) these trim-the-tree cookies.

Cut-out cookies used to be a chore, but now they're a cinch thanks to Wilton's new Roll Along cookie cutter. Six different shapes can be cut at once. Simply attach the cutter shapes to the roller (there are 18 holidays shapes in all) and you're set. The sturdy plastic cutters are easy to clean too.

For convenience, pieces of kitchen twine are affixed to the backs of the cookies prior to baking. When the cookies have baked and cooled, they're ready to decorate. Use simple outlines in bold holiday colors, or more elaborate designs, as you prefer. Then string the popcorn and cranberries, and tie several strands together to make a garland. Each cookie ornament can be tied to the tree branches separately as well.

Grandma's Gingerbread cookie dough is perfect for these tree-trimmers. Spiced just right, the dough is foolproof, providing plenty of cookies for both munching and making the garlands.

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1-1¼ cups unsulphured molasses
2 eggs beaten
cotton kitchen twine
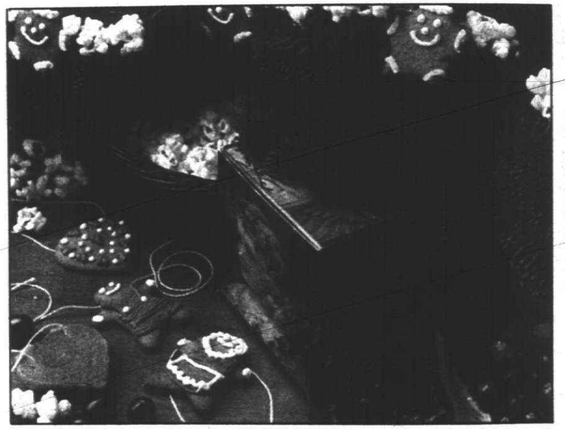
cranberries

Thoroughly mix flour, soda, salt and spices. Heat shortening in large saucepan just until melted. Cool slightly. Add sugar, molasses and eggs; mix well. Add four cups dry ingredients and mix well. Turn mixture onto lightly floured surface. Knead in remaining dry ingredients by hand. Add a little more flour if necessary, to make a firm dough. Roll out onto a lightly floured surface to ⅛-inch thickness. (If dough is not to be used right away, wrap securely in plastic wrap and refrigerate up to one week. Remove dough from refrigerator three hours prior to rolling.)

Using Wilton Roll Along cutter, cut cookies into holiday shapes. Place a 12-inch length of twine across each cookie, leaving equal amounts of twine on each side; place small piece of dough over twine, pressing lightly to seal in twine. Carefully transfer cookies, twine side down, to ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 10-12 minutes or until cookies are done. Cool completely. Decorate as desired. String with popcorn and cranberries, leaving enough twine to tie strands together to form garland.



Cut-out cookies are a cinch with the roll-along cookie cutter. It cuts six shapes at once. Choose from 18 different holiday shapes, all included with the cutter.

SOMETHING for everyone is included in this second Gift Guide appearing today in all editions of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

There's even a Christmas story to enjoy and perhaps read aloud to youngsters you know. Included, too, is a special recipe that accompanies the story. Maybe a family baking project could be the result. Tell us what you think.

The section was coordinated by Marie McGee, special sections editor. Advertising coordinators were GiGi Gondek and Peg Knoespel. The cover was done by Glenna Merillat, creative services supervisor.

Special writers included Liz Mulligan, Geri Rinschler, Chef Larry Janes and Marion Kuclo, aka Gundella.

Photographers were Bill Bresler and Dan Dean.

Any questions or comments should be directed to McGee at 591-2300. Ext. 313.

Copperware caper

Be wary of tinny imitations; heft is everything

By Chef Larry Janes
special writer

chef Larry Janes

THINKING about investing in some copper cookware? Even with today's high-tech assortment of anodized aluminum and megabuck stainless steel, copper cookware is still the choice for the professional cook who demands the precision heating and distribution it offers.

Ah, but precision cooking does come with a price. Copper cookware and bowls, even if purchased separately, will surely make a dent in any cook's wallet. Fortunately, however, good copper cookware will far outlast its price, especially when a quality copper product is chosen.

Copper in its pure form or in such alloys as brass and bronze was the most treasured metal for the cooking vessels of the ancients, and this has not changed much; copper pots are still the discriminating cook's first choice.

This is because copper is almost unsurpassed. Only silver is better at conducting heat, which copper accepts and distributes evenly, without hot spots to cause sticking or burning. Ok, so it's not for everyone — my kids' oatmeal and chicken soup would taste equally as good in Farberware — but I'm talking good food here.

I LOVE COPPER because when you're done cooking, it loses its heat promptly, preventing disasters such as overcooking delicate sauces. Although the metal itself is tough, it does dent, but all dents can be removed. Above all, I love it because it's beautiful. My copper pots and saucepans hang from wallhooks with that warm glow possessed by no other metal.

Now there are copper pans and there are copper pans. Experts advise that copper pots be judged by their weight, not their beauty alone. Avoid thin, tinny pans; although their looks might catch your eye, these overheat easily. Buy as heavy a pot as you can handle comfortably. It is also suggested that you look for good balance when checking out copper.

If a pan has a long handle, test the piece by setting it on a table and pressing the tip of the handle. A good balanced pot will right itself immediately and hardly wobble.

Look for a pan to be well-made and well-finished, with good balance, a well-shaped handle of solid metal firmly fastened to the pot and a hand-tinned lining. Some of the best copperware still hails from France by way of importers such as C.F. Lamalle and B.I.A. Cordon Bleu. Some very good copper is made in the states, but be wary of imitations.

Because copper conducts heat so exceptionally, remember to use low heat when cooking with copper. Tin linings will melt at 449 degrees, so it's dicey to attempt high-temperature frying, roasting or broiling, especially the making of preserves or confections that use very hot sugar.

COPPER NORMALLY acquires a patina — a gradual darkening of its color — as the surface oxidizes. It can also acquire verdigris — a poisonous green substance — when it comes in contact with certain acids and moisture in the air.

Linings of tin, silver or stainless steel make copper pots safe to use. Unlined pots and beating bowls (you won't believe how high your whites will peak) must always be cleaned thoroughly, as must all copper surfaces.

Folks with old copper can have it retinned, and in the processes have most nicks and dents beaten out. For more information on this, contact a good gourmet shop like Kitchen Glamor or Jacobson's for a recommendation on who does the best job at the best prices.

Try these recipes that are just outstanding prepared in copper but still tasty made in just about anything.

CREPES SUZETTE

2 egg yolks
½ cup milk
½ cup water
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons brandy (optional)
1 cup flour
¾ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Place all ingredients in a blender or processor and process till smooth. Heat a good skillet till hot. Brush with clarified butter and add about ¼ cup of the batter will form a thin film over the bottom of the pan. Turn in 15 seconds. Cook for 5 more seconds, remove and repeat.

Her untypical designs stir the emotions

By Liz Mulligan
special writer

SIMPLY stated, art evokes emotion. At least that's what Pennsylvania artist Beth Cameron's Victorian Christmas dolls do wherever they are on display. Currently that is happening at a shop with an unlikely name of Chocolatissimo in West Bloomfield.

Cameron's dolls conjure up warm feelings of Christmases past and because the dolls are posed, they are not toys but collectable treasures to cherish and pass along.

Cameron's dolls are exaggerated and made of different shapes and sizes. They are not the generic, ideal face and body. While she is attracted to the odd and peculiar, which shows in her work, all of her sculptures have a certain dignity. Children show a budding pride. Women convey strength and integrity. Even the most tattered Santa evokes the true spirit of Christmas and the love a parent shows for a child.

THE FACES ON HER sculptures are very real. She uses German sculpting clay which is very reponsive to the artist's touch, and glass eyes for a further touch of realism.

In addition to Christmas sculptures of gentle Santas or gnarled elves, Cameron is working on a Women of the West series, inspired by the play, "Quilters, and several old diaries she has read. These sculptures show women are more than vehicles for pretty clothing.

Dolls depicting children are a new avenue for Cameron, who comes from Oakmont, Pa. The faces are captivating, their costumes old and worn, their poses show them at play.

She is not aspiring to make a perfect representation of the ideal child, Cameron said, but rather she creates children with believable facial features and delicate gesturing.

Prices range from $850 for small dolls of children to $4,800 for a Santa posed in museum-quality furniture.

Chocolatissimo is at 6897 Orchard Lake Road, south of Maple, West Bloomfield.

Liz Mulligan is a free-lance writer who lives in Bloomfield Township.

Gift suggestions for the whole family

(AP) — There are some gifts you can buy for the whole family, including yourself:

● Indoor Birdwatching. "Gone Birding" is a combination board-video game that will help develop bird identification skills for family members of all ages. Actress Jane Alexander narrates the video, which features British comedian-birdwatcher Bill Oddie and author Peter Alden, shown taking nature expeditions across North America. Unscriptioned shots of birds in their natural settings challenge players' bird knowledge, with a handicapping system for older, more experienced members of the family. The game is from Rupicola in a two-hour VHS tape (or Beta by special order) and costs about $80.

● U.S.A. Trivia. What are Abraham Lincoln's hands doing in the famous statue of him in the Lincoln Memorial? And what mineral is mined 1,000 feet below the city of Detroit? These are sample posers from the "U.S.A. Trivia" game from the Games Gang, the makers of the top-selling "Pictionary" game.

The company also is putting out a second edition of "Pictionary," along with a number of spinoffs, including an edition for kids and a portable version for parties. Prices range from about $19 to $35. (Answers to trivia questions: Lincoln is spelling his initials, "A" and "L" in sign language, and Detroit deep-mines salt.)

at state fairs. In the late 1940s, he sold the idea to Wham-O, a toy company.

THAT FASHION plate, Barbie, reached her 30th birthday in 1989.

Since she was introduced in 1959, the Barbie doll has had numerous careers and lifestyles — a model, 'flower child,' doctor and astronaut. Named after the daughter of the inventors, Ruth and Elliot Handler, Barbie is the best-selling and possibly best-known fashion doll in history.

More than 500 million dolls representing Barbie and her clan have been sold, and Mattel Toys, which makes Barbie, says it sells over 20 million Barbie fashions each year.

THE FLEXIBLE Flyer, the classic snow sled for children, is 100-years-old this year — a creation growing out of a business necessity.

A Pennsylvania farm equipment manufacturer, Samuel Leeds Allen, invented it to occupy his factory workers during the off-season months to keep them from leaving for other jobs.

ACCORDING TO market research by Binney & Smith, the smell of Crayola Crayons is among the scents most recognized by American adults, along with coffee and peanut butter.

Their research also indicates that 65 percent of children in the United States ages 2 to 7 color or draw at least once a day, for an average of 27 minutes.

Alice Stead Binney coined the Crayola trade name for her husband Edwin's crayons in 1903. It derives from the French word "craie," for colored chalk, and "oleaginous," for oily.

NOVI ROAD AT TWELVE MILE

A Christmas story for you to savor:

By Marion Kuclo
special writer

DOLLY WITCH was a short, fat witch with a rather green complexion. She really wasn't very pretty, but then she really wasn't very ugly either (as witches go).

Dolly was a jolly witch. She laughed a lot, and when she laughed, she shook all over like a bowl of green jello.

Dolly had a nice little house, a friendly fat cat, and a really fine broom that could fly as fast and as high as any witch broom ever made.

Dolly was a happy witch, but there was one thing that she wanted very much. More than anything else in the whole world, Dolly wanted to fly with Santa on Christmas Eve and help him deliver presents to all the boys and girls.

Year after year Dolly wrote to Santa and offered her help, and year after year Santa wrote back and said, "No, thank you." Santa told Dolly that witches belonged to Halloween, not Christmas, and no way could she help him. Why, that would be as silly as Santa going out trick-or-treating.

One year Dolly Witch decided that she would prove to Santa that a witch could do something Christmasy and then maybe he would let her help him.

"Now, let's see, just what could I do?" thought Dolly. "Maybe I could knit him some mittens," she thought. "No, that would never do." (The last time Dolly tried to knit mittens, they each had five thumbs.)

She thought of singing Christmas carols. But no, that wouldn't do either. Dolly's voice resembled that of a bullfrog trying to sing soprano.

Then Dolly got a wonderful idea. Why hadn't she thought of it before? She would bake Santa a fruitcake! That's what she'd do. Dolly was a very unusual cook. Everyone said so, and all the other witches went wild over her delicious brews.

OF COURSE, DOLLY had never baked a fruitcake before, but it couldn't be too hard. She would just get a good recipe and add her own special touches here and there, and it would surely be a success. So Dolly Witch found a recipe for fruitcake and she followed it very carefully:

Cream ½ cup of butter with ½ cup of sugar and add three well beaten eggs.

Here Dolly Witch stopped for a minute — the book didn't say what kind of eggs to use. Should she use goose eggs, hawk eggs, or buzzard eggs? Turtle eggs were the hardest to come by, and most witches considered them a real delicacy. Dolly just happened to have some on hand, so she used those.

1½ cups of flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder, ½ cup cherry juice . . . Dolly stopped again and thought a minute. She didn't have any cherry juice. What could she use instead? Why, raven's blood, of course! That was just the thing. Oh, this would be a special cake. Where it called for a little bit of this, Dolly threw in a bit of that.

Instead of raisins, she used yew berries; instead of pecans she used hickory nuts, and instead of pineapple, she used chopped earthworms. She added a little hassock, some thistle leaves, a pound of crabs' eyes, some snake root, and a few other of her favorite delicacies to the batter.

After the cake was baked, she glazed it all over with horehound and decorated it with ivy leaves and bright red holly. It was beautiful. Dolly wrapped it up in Christmas paper, and carrying it oh, so carefully, she climbed on her broom and flew up to the North Pole to deliver the cake to Santa.

SHE LANDED WITH a swish right into a snowbank, but luckily, the cake wasn't hurt a bit. Dolly Witch was very proud as she jingled the sleigh bells that hung on Santa's door.

Santa Claus himself came to answer the door. He was quite surprised to see a witch standing there, but then he remembered all the letters he had received from Dolly Witch in the past. He greeted her in a friendly way, but he told her just what he had said in his letters. Witches, even green ones, belong to Halloween, not Christmas.

"But Santa," said Dolly, "I've baked you a Christmas fruitcake. I know when you eat it you'll see that witches can do Christmas-type things, and then you will want me to help you deliver the presents."

Santa took the cake and thanked her. He promised to call Dolly if he needed any help, but he thought to himself that he could really handle Christmas quite well without her. And Dolly went home to wait.

Santa looked at the cake; it did look nice. And come to think of it, he was a bit hungry. Santa poured himself a glass of milk, cut a large slice of Dolly's cake, and sat down to eat it. Yes, he was hungry. He opened his mouth and took a great big bite of the special cake.

SANTA COULDN'T believe his senses. Never, no never, had he tasted anything so awful. He spit and sputtered, and he sputtered and spit. It was positively the worst cake anyone could imagine. He walked to the door, opened it, and threw the cake out into the snow.

Out in the yard, Santa's reindeer were waiting for him to come out and hitch up the sleigh. When Santa threw out the cake, they thought it was a treat for them and they all rushed over and tasted it. It was different from anything they had ever tasted before. But they thought it was rather good, and they ate every last bit of it — even the crumbs.

Inside the house Santa was very busy filling his bag with toys and goodies for the little children. When he was finally ready to leave, he went to the door and whistled for the reindeer. He waited, but the reindeer didn't come. He whistled again. When the reindeer still didn't come, Santa Claus became worried. He walked around the house, and there they were, every last one of them, rolling in the snow, moaning and groaning with terrible stomach aches.

So Dolly found a recipe for fruitcake and she followed it very carefully . . .

Santa called Mrs. Claus to come out and help. She made peppermint tea for the reindeer, and put them all to bed where they belonged. Dolly Witch's cake had made them far too sick to be flying tonight, even if it was Christmas Eve.

"CHRISTMAS EVE," cried Santa. "Christmas Eve and I have no reindeer to pull my sleigh. How can I deliver all the presents to the boys and girls?" Mrs. Claus had never seen Santa so angry. "That Dolly Witch," he shouted, "I wish she were here right now. I'd give her a piece of my mind."

Now, of course you know Santa is magical, just like witches. And when he said "I wish she were here right now," Dolly Witch got the message and knew that he wanted her.

Swish! Dolly landed right in front of Santa. She was smiling a jolly, happy smile because Dolly thought Santa had called her to help him. When she learned that Santa was angry, and that her cake had made his reindeer sick, poor Dolly witch began to cry.

"Oh, Santa, I'm so sorry," she wailed. "Oh, those poor reindeer, and those poor, poor boys and girls who won't find any presents under their tree in the morning."

Then Santa got an idea. "Dolly witch," he said. "tell me, when I wished for you, how did you get here so fast?"

"Why, I flew on my broom, of course," answered Dolly.

"Let me see that broom," said Santa. "Do you think it would hold both of us?"

"Both of us, and a bag of toys, too," she laughed.

Santa and Dolly climbed onto the broom and flew off to deliver the presents. So Dolly Witch finally got her wish. At last she was helping Santa.

That night as they slept in their beds, some people heard the strange pair laughing as they placed the presents under the tree and filled the children's stockings.

Some may have thought Santa's "Ho! Ho! Ho!" sounded more like "Heh! Heh! Heh!" But no one ever knew for sure about the night Santa flew on the witch's broom.

But now you do.

Gundella's fruitcake

In addition to being a short story writer, Marion Kuclo writes a food column, Kitchen Witch, for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers under the name of Gundella. Here is her recipe for a dark fruitcake she says is moist and chewy — and best of all — easy to make.

SIMPLE DARK FRUITCAKE
3 eggs, beaten
1 can sweetened condensed milk
2 cups prepared mincemeat (1 jar)
1 cup chopped dates
1½ cups any candied fruit
1 cup nutmeats
2 cups corn flake crumbs
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup flour

Mix together eggs, milk, mincemeat, nuts, fruit and baking soda. Add corn flake crumbs and flour. Pack into greased, paper lined, pans (loaf or tube). I use non-stick cooking spray instead of grease and paper. Bake at 300 degrees for 1½ to 2½ hours depending on the size of pans.

Glaze top, bottom, and all sides with corn syrup thinned with a few drops of water — use a pastry brush. Cool. Wrap. Store.
