More events added to Challenge Fest

By Mary Washko
staff writer

This year's Canton Challenge Fest will be even more of a challenge with more events and exhibitions to bring residents out.

Russ Courville, festival director, said, "This is for the entire family to get involved with but the bulk of the new activities are for the kids."

The Challenge Fest will begin May 28 and run through June 3. The annual soccer tournament kicks off the festival when it starts May 25.

Bill Joyner, festival promoter, said last year's crowd was about 10,000 and he's expecting 15,000 this year.

Some of the new events include the Flying Pilgrims Model Airplanes, a Kite flying exhibition, and a therapeutic Recreation Fitness Day for the physically impaired.

Also new will be the Van Esley Softball Tournament with a registration fee of $125 a team and the Las Vegas Golf and Tennis Long Drive at the Fellows Creek Golf Course.

An ice cream social, a songfest, a bowl-a-thon and a remote control car competition are also first-time events.

The Canton Arts Council will host a Murder Mystery Dinner Theatre at $50 a couple at Fellows Creek.

At the end of the festival a drawing will be held for a trip for three to Florida. The expenses will be paid by Waste Management Co.

The Challenge Fest replaced the Canton Country Festival last year when difficulties arose for the Country Festival.

Courville said, "The Country Festival just died a natural death."

When the soccer fields behind the township hall had an underground sprinkler system the field was no longer practical for the festival.

The tents and carnival rides could not be built on the field because it would interfere with the underground system and sink.

"When that happened we found there wasn't enough vacant city land to move the events so we decided to keep the location but change the uses," Courville said.

"Money was never the problem."

The Challengefest is put on by the Canton Challenge Fest Committee comprised of volunteers from the township.

The township donates the facilities and money to help fund the programs.

Deer accident

One deer was killed and another injured as the two ran onto I-275 at Ann Arbor Road at 8:10 a.m. Friday in Plymouth Township. The Canton man, 31, driving the car that struck and killed a doe was not injured in the incident, but his Porsche got a dented fender and hood in the collision, Michigan State Police reported. A passing driver who wanted the doe was issued a deer-kill permit by state police, allowing him to take the deer. The driver who struck the second deer continued on without stopping, state police said. The second deer continued up the road side, but was caught and will be treated for injuries. Dave Loukkonen, wildlife biologist for the Department of Natural Resources, said, "One of the things that deer are doing right now are moving out of their wintering areas . . . to alternative feeding areas."

Players get in the swing; Softball Center opens

By Mary Washko
staff writer

"Okay, Joe, get in there and crank that ball! Come on, let's go!" (Smack)

"Atta boy. Way to go!"

As anxious players took the field for the first time this year those were some of the yells that could be heard at the Canton Softball Center last week.

Bernie Goodstein, general manager, said the center has put a lot into preparing the fields for the new season.

"We had to wait for the fields to dry so we were about a week late opening up," Goodstein said.

Workers rolled the outfield grass to remove any lumps, then dragged the infield to smooth it out.

Then, Goodstein said, chalk lines were drawn on all 12 softball diamonds, fences were tightened and finally the bleachers were rolled out.

Goodstein said players couldn't wait to get started this year.

"We had a lot of distraught players when we had to cancel one of our Early Bird Tournaments because of the weather," Goodstein said. "It could be 30 degrees out there and they would still want to play."

Canton Softball Center is one of the largest softball complexes in the country, Goodstein said. Detroit's Softball City is tied with 12 fields.

The $3.5 million complex was started in 1985 by Aaron Jade of West Bloomfield.

Since then the facility has stayed busy with league games and tournaments.

Goodstein said this year he is seeing more corporate-sponsored teams than in the past. The players are also getting younger, he said.

"I saw the players getting older for a while there and I was getting nervous because I didn't see it getting replaced with younger guys," Goodstein said.

"But there are a lot more younger people coming out now," he said. The average age for softball players at the center is about 30, Goodstein said.

The majority of players, he said, are men. Of the 600 league teams, about 40 are women and 55 are co-ed. The rest are men's teams.

For 1990, Goodstein said, of the 600 teams about 90 percent will be corporate sponsored.

Goodstein said one reason the center is popular with business teams is that the management at the center handles everything for them.

"All they have to do is show up and play," he said.

While the center signs up hundreds of league teams for both the summer and fall seasons, Goodstein said they are known for the numerous softball tournaments they host.

"We've been rated the No. 1 tournament complex in the country," he said.

In 1989, the center hosted nearly 1,500 tournaments.

That results not only in revenue for the center but also the surrounding area, Goodstein said.

Estimates in the softball center industry say each player that comes into a community for a tournament spends about $100 a day.

With that in mind, Goodstein said, the center brings between $3 million and $5 million to the area each year from the tournaments.

"The players just love coming out here to play," Goodstein said. "I think if they could do it year round they would."

Bell wins small redress

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Craig Bell, wrongfully convicted in 1986 of murdering his fiancée while stationed in Virginia with the Navy, has been dealt another blow by the Virginia Legislature.

A bill passed in February would have granted $10,000 in restitution to the Canton Township man and $15,000 to his mother, Joan Watson, who suffered a heart attack on the courthouse steps the day her son was found guilty.

But Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder amended the bill, deleting the provision that would have compensated Watson for medical expenses.

The governor felt granting payment to someone other than the wronged individual would have set dangerous precedent, said spokeswoman Laura Dillard.

The amended legislation passed 37-2 in the Senate and 92-3 in the House of Representatives Wednesday.

Bell, 28, and his family say they are dejected and disgusted. Even if legislators had approved $25,000 in total compensation, the family would still be in debt. To pay $57,000 in legal and medical bills, Norm and Joan Watson remortgaged their Canton house and borrowed from family and friends.

THE WATSONS, who have five children, don't know how they're going to pay for their daughter's wedding this summer. They've had to borrow money to send another daughter to college.

"We're just stymied. We just wish someone would help us," said Joan Watson, who works for the Automobile Club of Michigan.

"As far as I'm concerned, Craig is entitled to millions for what he's been put through. He was forced to remain in the state of Virginia for one year waiting for trial, and was incarcerated for almost three months. So the $10,000 doesn't even work out to be minimum wage."

"This could happen again if it is not straightened out and police and prosecutors made accountable for their actions."

One Virginia Beach police officer, under oath, gave three different accounts at three different times concerning the murder, Watson said. "Evidence turned up missing and tapes that could have corroborated what Craig said conveniently malfunctioned."

BELL, sentenced to 20 years for second-degree murder, was freed after the true killer, a 19-year-old minister's son, confessed to fatally stabbing Dee Stroup in the Virginia Beach townhouse she and Bell shared.

"It's unbelievable. We were wronged, and it wasn't of our doing," Bell's stepfather said. "We don't know where to turn. If the legislators knew what went on in that trial, they would not have voted as they did."

Bell could sue the state, but would have to prove malicious prosecution. Then there's the problem of finances. "I understand it would cost $6,000 for the trial transcripts alone. It's chancy throwing good money after bad," said Norm Watson, an area businessman.

Bell wonders why Wilder couldn't have granted the entire $25,000 to him if he was concerned about setting precedent.

Judge sides with stranded travelers

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

When Jeanne Eggenberger of Plymouth Township read about an offer for cheap round-trip airline tickets to Orlando, Fla., and the Bahamas, she thought it was too good to be true.

Apparently, she was right. Eggenberger sent a check for $132 to the National Air Safety Advisory Service in early February, planning to book trips for herself and her boyfriend to either Orlando or Nassau.

THE NEWSPAPER AD she answered said tickets would be forwarded after the customer filled out an air safety questionnaire that would be sent in the mail. Eggenberger received no questionnaire and no tickets, just her canceled check.

"I thought it was really great — getting round trip tickets just by answering a few questions," Eggenberger said. "I thought as soon as I sent money they were going to send the survey. I never got it. I've waited eight weeks."

Debbie Nigbor of the Detroit Better Business Bureau said Eggenberger is one of hundreds of people across the country who've complained about National Air Safety Advisory Service, which advertised locally in the Observer & Eccentric, Detroit Free Press, Dearborn Press and Guide, Flint Journal and the Melius newspapers in January and February.

There's a chance Eggenberger and other would-be travelers will receive refunds. U.S. District Judge Thomas Higgins issued a temporary restraining order Feb. 27 against NASAS, barring the company, which operates out of Washington D.C., Minnesota and Tennessee, from advertising travel services.

HIGGINS ALSO ordered NASAS to pay refunds to consumers who request them.

The restraining order expires May 17, when another hearing is scheduled in U.S. District Court. Consumers desiring refunds should write to National Air Safety Service, 604 S. 14th Street, No. B, Nashville, Tenn. 37205, and send a copy of the request to Assistant U.S. Attorney James Thomason, 879 United States Courthouse, Nashville, Tenn. 37203, Nigbor said.

Consumers who want to file complaints against NASAS may do so by contacting the Nashville Better Business Bureau at (615) 254-5872, said Tamica Shannon of that office.

"Consumers who send in money don't receive tickets from an airline," said Nigbor.

"Instead, purchasers are sent a certificate. They then must make reservations through a designated agent. They must pay up to $1,400 per person in advance for seven days' lodging in a hotel selected by the company in order to receive an airline ticket."

"Reservations must be made at least 45 days in advance and are subject to airline and hotel availability, with travel prohibited during major holidays and at other times designated by the firm," she said.

"Taxes, meals, ground transportation, etc. are extra and must be paid by the certificate purchaser."

NASAS began operating in 1989 as a privately held commercial company not connected with any government agency, Nigbor said.

According to NASAS Nashville attorney, "the individuals connected with this company are Juanita and Wilber Adams, principals; Steve Acker, manager of operations; Steve Workman, operator of the Minnesota office; and John Lewis, previously secretary/treasurer of a Nashville firm engaged in the sale of vacation certificates and giveaway promotions," said Nigbor.

"That company was the subject of numerous inquiries and complaints to the Nashville bureau and has discontinued operations following legal action by federal authorities."

The United States Postal Service also has filed a complaint against NASAS.

BBB reports on NASAS are available by calling the Detroit office at 962-0552.

Group wants to ban MX from area rails

By A. Giralt Bedford
staff writer

Plymouth residents are used to watching passing boxcars when stopped for trains.

But if the Air Force has its way, residents could end up looking at MX missiles.

The Air Force last year announced a $7 billion plan to put 50 MX missiles on railroad cars and move them between seven bases, including Wurtsmith Air Force Base in Oscoda.

Virginia cuts restitution to family

"The answer is the General Assembly thought he ought to be paid $10,000. For the governor to change that amount would be for him to start determining what a day in prison is worth," Dillard said. "The governor could have eliminated the claim all together, but he didn't do that."

"The argument that a relative has

However, that plan is running into local opposition from the Michigan Coalition to Stop the MX. The group last week sought to have the Ann Arbor City Council approve a resolution to oppose the plan. The council, however, took no action.

Jackie Victor, coordinator of the anti-MX group, said Plymouth residents should be concerned because for security reasons, the Air Force would not give the exact route and any potential route is a probable route.

THE POTENTIAL routes show the trains carrying the missiles passing close to homes, schools and businesses, Victor said.

"The concern is about the highly explosive and dangerous propellant fuels," Victor said. "The Air Force's own environmental impact statement talked about one of the components, hydrochloric acid, which could spread in lethal doses to more than a mile and a half from an accident."

The train could pass close to the University of Michigan Stadium, Dillard said. Vasquez's case differs from Bell's in that Vasquez is mildly retarded and his mother is his legal guardian.

The day after Wilder amended the Bell bill, he granted a full pardon to another Virginia man wrongfully convicted of murder. A restitution bill for William Gray, imprisoned for three years, has not been introduced in the Legislature, Dillard said.

'Ryan's tree'

Planting to honor young AIDS victim

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

To honor Ryan White, an AIDS victim who gained national attention for his fight to live as a regular teenager, a tree will be planted Tuesday.

Arbor Day, outside Central Middle School in his name.

A 9:30 a.m. ceremony is scheduled outside the school in memory of White, who contracted AIDS through a blood transfusion in the early '80s and died earlier this month.

The planting was suggested by Ernie Archer of Plymouth, in a letter to City Commissioner Mary Childs.

The commission last week approved the memorial.

"I'VE PLANTED trees before in memory of some of my family members who died. And when I read about Ryan I thought it would be a good thing to do something like that," said Archer, who has lived in Plymouth for 65 of his 74 years.

Archer, a retired General Motors administrative secretary, is offering to pay for the tree and an accompanying plaque.

"I thought it should read 'Ryan's Tree,' and when the teachers and kids walk by, it could start a conversation or something like that," Archer said.

ARCHER ALSO wrote a letter Tuesday to Jeane White, Ryan's mother, to tell her of her of the memorial.

"Planted as a living monument to your beloved Ryan, the tree will enhance the beauty of this particular school district," he wrote.

"It is my prayer that Ryan's Tree will encourage teachers to visit the location with their students and explain the necessity of eliminating persecution of those afflicted with AIDS."

Ken Vogras, superintendent of public works, said the plaque will be set in the ground near the tree.

IN 1984, White's school district in Kokomo, Ind., banned him from classes for fear he would spread AIDS to other students.

While a court reversed the ban, the youth was subjected to taunts at school, and so was his family.

In 1987, the Whites moved 20 miles away to a farm town, Cicero, in hopes he could live a normal life for as long as possible.

He attended high school there where he made friends and had a date for the senior prom when the disease took his life.

Doll lovers dreams come true

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Dolls in tow, they flew in, drove and waited as long as three hours to get into "A Doll Lover's Dream Come True" at the Plymouth Cultural Center Sunday.

The show's biggest attraction was Venezuelan doll designer Yolanda Bello, who autographed nearly 3,000 dolls for patient admirers.

"I've been waiting for two hours," said Lou Najduk of Westland, listening to strolling violinist Freddy Shyer while standing in line. "I hope to get to the front in one more hour. I have nine dolls, and I'm going to have them all signed. They'll probably be worth more money."

ABSENTEE BIDDERS from all 50 states were represented at the auction hosted by International Doll Exhibitions and Auctions Ltd. of Chicago. The biggest sale, made to an absentee bidder from Alabama, was a 1986 Ashton-Drake, Bello-designed "Jason" doll that went for $1,200.

International Doll, Georgia's Gift Gallery of Plymouth and Ashton-Drake of Chicago sponsored the gala. "Auctions have been a way of selling dolls for a century," said Scott

Wolff of International Doll. "It's interesting to see contemporary collectible dolls sold the same way."

A highlight was the baby doll look-alike contest. On stage were infants and toddlers outfitted in clown costumes, baseball uniforms and red velvet dresses with furry white muffs and hats to match.

"ROOKIE of the Year" Joseph Scanlon, 4 months old, went home with a red ribbon. His mom, Pat Scanlon of Plymouth, said she and her son were enjoying themselves. "He's having a good time," she said of her smiling baby.

In the money were Canton's Jennifer Kelly, 4, a ringer for the "Jennifer" doll, and "Michael" doll look-alike Sean Morgan, 10 months, of Garden City.

Shawn King, 2, of Dearborn Heights won for his blue "Jason" doll clown costume.

Plymouth's double-decker bus shuttled show-goers from Georgia's Gift Gallery on Forest to the Cultural Center, where a line snaked out the door.

ENTERTAINING THE collectors was magician Mike Thornton. The tuxedoed Canton resident created balloon animals, made silk handkerchiefs and people's money disappear, and performed the "torn and restored dental floss trick, a classic in magic," according to Thornton.

Sauntering through the crowd, waitresses from Connie's Catering served trays of punch, coffee, appetizers and desserts to browsers and folks busy buying dolls, bassinets and souvenirs.

Strolling violinist Freddy Shyer performed for six hours — "the longest job I ever played." He served up requests including "Someone to Watch Over Me," "Laura's Theme," "Misty" and the Hungarian dance, "Charles."

BUT FOR Bello, the crowds wouldn't have come, Wolff said. "She's the most popular of all the artists. She seems to be a magnet. People are drawn to her — and to her dolls. She's one ball of sunshine."

Yolanda made her mark in doll making because of her realistic — not idealistic — designs. She sculpts realistic faces and poses.

Bello, a sculptor for Ashton-Drake, also owns a doll-making company called Bello Creations. Her contemporary collectible dolls "are the newest thing in doll collecting."

Sean Morgan of Garden City squirms in Yolanda Bello's lap as winners of the baby doll look-alike contest take turns being photographed with the doll artist. The 10 month old took first place for looking most like the "Michael" doll.

Tuning up to native folklore

Band members practice before their parents arrive for the concert.

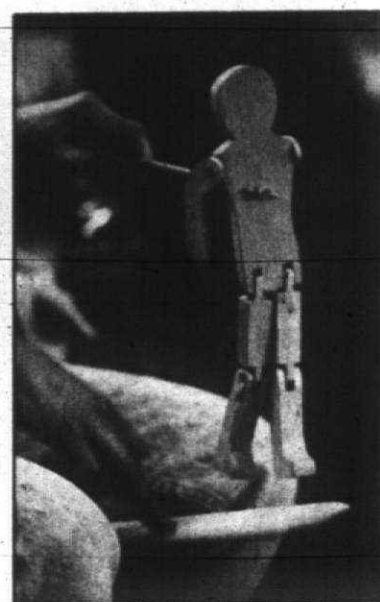

Homemade instruments carry lesson

Youngsters made music with instruments from household appliances and the sounds were patterned after native American folklore last Thursday in Plymouth's Dunning Hough Library.

The program was orchestrated by Margaret Schmidt of Novi, featuring instruments commonly found in old-time mountain towns.

The kids learned how to transform spoons, washboards and washtubs into their own musical instruments.

Limberjacks — toys that look like they are dancing when bounced — make clattering noises.

Incinerator's support weak

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Even before last week's order closing the Detroit incinerator, many suburban leaders had begun moving away from incineration as a major trash reduction option.

Detroit's massive trash burning unit — billed as the largest municipal facility of its kind anywhere in the world — was built with extra capacity to handle suburban waste.

But now, many suburban leaders say their communities are shunning incineration, even if the giant trash burning plant should ever reopen.

"AT ONE time, we all thought the law would eventually require us to become dependent upon the Detroit incinerator," Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen said. "But, ironically, it's gone the other way."

Wayne County's proposed solid waste master plan was redrawn after suburban leaders protested its initially heavy trash reduction requirements as a pro-incineration smoke-screen.

Breen, who has helped oversee solid waste issues for the regional Conference of Western Wayne, said his community is now firmly committed to recycling.

"We're going to start curbside recycling beginning July 1," he said.

Officials in neighboring Canton Township have also turned thumbs down on incineration.

"Our board, at least in an unofficial way, has indicated it would not support incineration," Canton Supervisor Thomas Yack said. "For us, incineration is just not part of the plan."

Canton is currently working on its trash disposal options, Yack said.

"At this point, it doesn't look like we'll be adopting curbside recycling as they have in Plymouth Township and Dearborn," Yack said. "But we hope to have a major announcement on our plans soon."

Local leaders appeared in agreement that Detroit should add the equipment necessary to reduce mercury emissions at its incinerator. But opposition to using the incinerator could be based on economics as much as environmental concerns.

"WE LOOKED at it and, for us, the cost appeared too high," Redford Supervisor James Kelly said. "Plus, we'd be at the mercy of Detroit for rates, just as we now are for water."

Redford, like Plymouth Township, hopes to begin curbside recycling this summer.

"We've ordered the trucks," Kelly said. "We'll begin phasing it in neighborhood by neighborhood. Eventually, we'd like to see something with the Conference of Western Wayne."

Livonia, meanwhile, is expanding the capacity of its volunteer recycling center, though hasn't yet decided whether to adopt a curbside plan.

Despite locals' reluctance to tie into the Detroit unit, incineration isn't exactly a dead issue.

Westland and Garden City both have long standing commitments to the recently reopened Central Wayne incinerator in Inkster. Both cities levy a trash disposal tax to pay for incinerator operations.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara and county Commissioner Milton Mack, who heads the seven-county Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, also deemed incineration necessary, at least as a last resort.

THEIR SENTIMENTS were echoed by Breen, despite his community's commitment to recycling.

"Landfills are getting scarce and we can't recycle everything," Breen said. "So some incineration might be necessary."

But whether it will be enough to satisfy the Detroit incinerator's massive capacity is another story, suburban officials agreed.

Rally planned to mark victims' rights week

A rally for victims' rights is scheduled for 10 a.m. today at Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara's office, 600 Randolph, Detroit.

Members of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the Michigan Head Injury Alliance and Save Our Sons and Daughters are gathering to call attention to National Victims Rights Week, April 22-28.

"We've been involved with this from the beginning, not just with regard to drunk driving," said MADD spokeswoman Carol Nalepka.

"For so long, it seemed crime victims were the forgotten members of society. No one was even telling them court hearings were being held."

Toward that end, MADD was active in the 1988 effort to include a section on crime victims' rights in the state constitution. Voters approved the measure by a 4-to-1 margin in November.

PARTICIPANTS AT this year's rally hope to call attention to the rights of victims of drunk driving, gunshots and head injuries. All three groups said they hoped to call attention to long-term recovery costs and other financial hardships faced by victims.

McNamara will address participants. MADD Wayne County administrator Sandi Wolf and Clementine Barfield, founder of Detroit-based SOSAD, are also expected to be present.

Other events include a candlelight vigil at the state Capitol.

MORE THAN 15,000 violent crimes are committed nationwide each day, group members said, citing U.S. Department of Justice averages.

Slightly more than 12,000 are assault cases, though an average 386 sexual assaults and 55 murders or non-negligent homicides are committed each day as well.

Drunk driving fatalities occur at the rate of 66 per day, the Justice Department Sourcebook on Criminal Justice Statistics said.

Recycling is important

To the editor:

As one who has devoted a lifetime to helping America's youth in the classroom, I was deeply moved by student Jack S. Gatlin's letter in The Observer (Monday, April 2), entitled "Recycling is important for future generations." For his understanding of the urgency for recycling and willingness to do something about it, student Gatlin, his teachers and especially his parents can be proud.

Indeed, it is "frightening that we have lost 25 percent of the world's forests... An average American uses the equivalent of seven trees every year in paper products." What factual information for students and teachers and businesspeople too, to take note.

Perhaps a couple of additional facts need to be called to student Gatlin's attention: Stop excessive use of ditto and Xerox papers. Make sure that every sheet of paper is used on both sides for practice work before discarding. There would be less need for cleaning the mess after leaving the classroom if it were not carelessly made in the first place.

Keep telling "em, Jack Gatlin. Bless you for having the guts to tell it like it is. Not only your younger sisters, brothers and cousins appreciate you for trying to improve the environment, but we all say you are loved for telling us that working together we can make a difference.

Spend money on flood control

To the editor:

At a recent (Canton) board of trustee meeting, the board appropriated money to help in the clean-up of the Rouge River. I think most residents of the township would approve and commend the board for their concern.

However, the residents of the township whose basement or property floods every time we have a hard rain may disagree. If we have money for projects like the Rouge clean-up, then why don't we have money to clean-up the numerous drainage ditches that crisscross the township?

Most of the drainage ditches are clogged up with everything from cattails to trees. Some homeowners have even dammed up some of the drainage ditches to create ponds for the ducks. As the township is so ordinance-happy, why don't they enact an ordinance that would prohibit any blockage of a drainage ditch?

The township seems to have money to buy department cars with air conditioning and power windows, money for beautification projects and money for raises for the board of trustees but never any money for projects that would help the flooding problem. The usual answer is, "it is Wayne County's responsibility" or that it will be tabled to a future meeting.

If the township is serious about retaining the residents and stopping the "revolving door" syndrome, then the board must change its present course and start working on the problems that affect the property owners now, instead of spending money on projects like buying Mettetal Airport, etc.

Special week acknowledges victims of crime

To the editor:

Eight sponsoring national victim organizations will be recognizing April 22 through April 28 as National Victim Rights Week. The purpose of this week, observed in 48 states last year, is to acknowledge the devastation that crime has created across our nation and to underscore our determination to assist its casualties.

By any measure, Americans suffer inordinately from criminal violation — at two, three even four times the violent crime rates of other industrial democracies. Victims of crime face pain, loss, and heartache. Their anguish and suffering often continue for years and, unfortunately, that experience is often compounded by the way they are treated within our criminal justice system.

In 1988, the citizens in Michigan and Florida voted overwhelmingly Reader: Press, not police, has too much power

To the editor:

It is ironic that the person who feels that police departments have too much power (Tim Richard, Observer & Eccentric March 29) is a member of the press, arguably the most powerful institution in America today.

Mr. Richard's complaint read very much like envy — envy that the police departments' powers occasionally exceed those of the media.

Echoing a time-worn O&E platitude, Richard ridicules police departments for acquiring "sophisticated new firearms." Incredibly, the writer feels this criticism is justified because most of these departments have never had a major shootout.

The temptation is strong to imagine Mr. Richard strolling through the O&E plant and wondering why an expensive fire alarm and sprinkler system is maintained. Surely the newspaper has never had a major fire.

But it is his contention that reporters are just "citizens with notebooks" that is Mr. Richard's most ludicrously fatuous statement. Courts have on numerous occasions agreed with the press that reporters in the performance of their duties are immune from many of the laws obeyed by the rest of us. One need only recall a decision on libel to examine one of the most blatant examples of this media immunity.

A court held that the press can only be found guilty of libel if its victim can prove "malicious intent." That is, you must prove the press not only knew it was printing false information but did it with the intention of hurting you. Obviously, this is nearly impossible.

It is unfortunate that, for reasons such as these, most Americans find freedom from the press a more pressing concern than freedom of the press.

Greg S. Renaud
Westland

Editor's Note: The press is no more immune from picking on the "little guy" as "ordinary citizens" since Michigan's law that covers libel also relates to defamation and slander, with which non-media can be accused. Perhaps you're mentioning libel in the sense that newspapers are responsible for writings against government officials or other public officials. In that instance, the courts have given newspapers a wider playing field because it is the newspapers — which the court has called the proxy for the people — that uncover government wrongdoing since it usually is too involved a job for a citizen to undertake. "Regular citizens" have little free time in the day to scour government records, talk to representatives and then alert all constituents of their findings. That's what we're here for.

Donkey game was asinine

To the editor:

A donkey basketball game? The very thought of it is asinine. Reading about it and seeing pictures of it is a respectable newspaper such as the Observer & Eccentric is a disgrace. There are much more intelligent and productive ways to raise money for causes, and there certainly are more important things to devote space to in the newspaper.

It's a joke that such a cruel, moronic and inhumane event was co-sponsored by a community group that calls itself I CARE, and claims to be dedicated to educational excellence. Respectively, the organizers, not hem and haw when things are in the final stages. I welcome Mr. Jaeger, as well as his spirit and enthusiasm, to our community.

What is troubling are the questions asked during the interview. They were in the nature of, "What do you intend to do when you grow up as a city manager?" Do those types of questions deserve an $18,000 price tag?

The city commissioners stressed the importance of hiring and utilizing the firm of Bartell & Bartell. In the end none of those marvelous techniques was used except for the riveting interview questions. Mr. Jaeger was not even in the original field. The commission was able to perform their elected function and find a new manager. I say, shame on them for not attempting to perform the task before throwing away $18,000.

Hopefully Mr. Jaeger can provide the floundering commission with a little guidance and foresight based on his number of years as a city manager. I wish him the best of luck.

A plea for common sense

To the editor:

I can't believe Steve Barnaby's reasoning in his column "Exploiting a tragedy menaces our liberty." He cites "Romeo and Juliet," "The Heart is a Lonely Hunter," and the bible as "must" reading for our children's literary development.

What do these literary works, written for and taught to mature minds, have to do with an 8-year-old, second grader being exposed to a movie which graphically depicts a small boy (8-year-old?) trying to hang himself? Would Mr. Barnaby have us believe that an 8-year-old should be capable of understanding Shakespeare or McCullers, or even the bible?

My outrage is not a cry for censorship. My outrage is a cry for normal intelligence and ordinary common sense.

Mud Day draws a crowd

Mud Day brought about 50 youngsters to the Wayne County Parks last week as boys as girls played in a big mud field near Nankin Mills, Westland.

The county watered down a large open area at the Nankin Mills recreation area, then let the youngsters have at it.

The object, getting as muddy as possible, was best met by Robbie Williams, 7, of Westland and Michelle Zoccoli, 8, of Garden City. They were crowned this year's Mr. and Ms. Mud.

Mud Day, sponsored by the county parks system and a local laundromat, is an annual way for vacationing youngsters to let off some spring break steam.

Andrea Mazeppa, 7, of Westland, left, gets waist deep in the big muddy during Mud Day at the Wayne County Parks.

WHEN SHOULD I HAVE MY KNEE OPERATION?

You should have your knee operation when you are ready for it. Physicians giving you this reply are not being sarcastic or speaking in jest. The point is that surgery is in order when you can no longer tolerate living with increasing pain and decreasing mobility. No one can determine that point in the meantime, you should not rest. Without question, your own knee will last longer if you do not walk. But such lack of activity is harmful to your heart, lungs, muscles, and mind. The availability and reliability of knee replacement means that you should keep active as long as possible and undergo the operation so you can return to activity again.

You should seek out an orthopedic surgeon before you need one. By going to an orthopedist at this point you have the opportunity to speak to several surgeons and to decide in an uninformed way which physician and procedure would seem best for you. Then, when the need for operation comes, you can act without enduring further pain and limitation.

Medical therapy, such as anti-inflammatory drugs and joint fluid aspiration, is valuable. Such treatment often allows you to delay the need for operative intervention for months to years.

Sometimes the Truth Hurts, and there is nothing you can do about it.

BUT IF THE "TOOTH HURTS" PERHAPS YOU SHOULD SEE ME!

Core curriculum plan awaits schools' input

By Tim Richard
Staff writer

Local school districts will soon be commenting on the State Board of Education's core curriculum proposal.

The proposal would be part of a 26-step process aimed at preparing high school graduates for the workplace in a 21st Century world economy and a multi-racial society.

The core curriculum will also help verify that all students have attained necessary educational outcomes in the essential skill areas," said the board statement, approved in a bipartisan 8-0 vote last week.

"Local boards of education will determine the manner in which the core curriculum is delivered," the elected state board said.

WORKING UNDER a new school quality law, Superintendent of Public Instruction Donald Bemis indicated a sharp change in direction — away from specifying hours of study toward testing graduates for work and citizenship skills.

Once the bureaucratic review process is completed, the state board is scheduled in September to approve the model core curriculum and distribute it to every public and non-public school in the state.

In fall, state Department of Education staffers will conduct workshops with county intermediate school improvement specialists and local district curriculum people.

The 26th step, in July of 1991, is for all districts to receive the new core curriculum.

'The core curriculum will also help verify that all students have attained necessary educational outcomes in the essential skill areas.'

—State Board of Education

A KEY GOAL, the state board said, will be to teach "problem solving," "active rather than passive learning" and building skills for a lifetime of learning.

The board picked up language suggested by the Governor's Task Force on Employability Skills — the so-called Iacocca-Fraser Commission: "A Michigan student will be... a competent and productive participant in society... capable of applying knowledge in diverse situations... able to communicate effectively in written and spoken language... capable of learning over a lifetime."

Core curriculum areas, as defined by the state board, are:

• Arts education — "music, visual arts, drama and dance," with emphasis on appreciation.

• Health and physical education — "a healthy life style physically, mentally and emotionally."

• Language arts education — "reading, writing, speaking, listening and literature, with emphasis on using language arts as part of the whole curriculum."

• Mathematics and science education — "quantitative and analytic reasoning and problem solving, scientific literacy and technology."

• World studies — "history, civics, economics, geography and the study of a foreign language, as well as the promotion of values such as personal and social responsibility, the dignity of work, sensitivity to our multicultural society, and the responsibilities of democracy."

with others and the application of the above essential skills." They are:

• Life management — including ethical personal decision making, consumer behavior, family roles, parenthood and nurturing.

• Vocational preparation — employment, leadership, social skills, group problem solving, reasoning and entrepreneurship.

• Employability — academic, personal management and teamwork skills.

• Aesthetic appreciation — use of leisure time, use of community resources, verbal and non-verbal communications.

• Technological — use of technology and "technological literacy."

The State Board of Education was working on the model curriculum even before the state Legislature mandated it in Public Act 25 of 1990, signed last month by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

She has handle on pots

Last month, I had the pleasure of talking with the high holiness of hints, Heloise.

On numerous occasions, I have quoted specific hints to various groups and demonstrations without giving Heloise due credit.

For that I apologize, but, really, sooner or later, most of us have read or heard a nosy neighbor or mother-in-law spew forth righteous suggestions that no doubt came from Heloise herself.

Heloise must have the cleanest wash, the most sparkling windows, the shiniest pots and pans, the sharpest knives and the most dust-free mini-blinds in the world.

Of course, with her traveling schedule, hawking her latest tome ("All New Hints from Heloise, a Household Guide for the '90s," Perigee Books, $9.95), Heloise probably doesn't have the opportunity to go home and really dirty up a bathtub.

BUT WHEN it comes to helpful hints, she knows the difference between shock and sparkle.

Thumbing through her book, I noticed an interesting hint that said aluminum pots and pans can be kept shiny by filling them to the brim with water, adding two tablespoons of cream of tartar, then letting the water boil.

Since I had an old can of cream of tartar on the spice rack, I decided to take my favorite aluminum saucepan and give it a try.

Guess what? Heloise doesn't lie.

It worked so well on the inside of my pot that I ventured down to the fruit cellar and retrieved my big lobster pot and literally boiled my aluminum pots and lids to a shiny sparkle.

Heloise's hints on cast iron, stainless steel and enamelware alone are worth the price of the book.

AN, BUT DOES the queen of quirks know her way around food? Heloise could give Giuliano Bugialli a run for his money in the kitchen.

The book contains helpful hints on the best ways to prepare coffee, tea, spices, herbs, leftovers, fruits, vegetables, grains, dairy products, meat, poultry and seafood.

There's even a whole chapter on wines, champagnes and liquors.

HELOISE CROSSES over to Miss Manners' territory with a complete rundown on socializing and party-planning everything from a pig roast for 50 to a formal sit-down dinner party for 10.

Unfortunately, she doesn't divulge her secrets for dealing with obnoxious friends and relatives. If only they could be eliminated like the spots from my dishwasher.

Here are a few of the more interesting tips from Heloise's book:

• Try adding ¼ to ½ teaspoon instant coffee to spaghetti sauces for a less acid, richer color. Take it from the Janes gang Wednesday.

Spring brings crisp stalks of asparagus

By Larry Janes
special writer

THIS GLORIOUS SPRING is heralding forth a bumper crop of long, slender, crisp and succulent fresh asparagus that will surely send fresh prices plummeting to those that rival canned.

Nothing beats fresh Michigan asparagus. Saute some up and fold inside an omelet. Mashed, pureed and mingled into a cool spring soup, or simply steamed and dressed with a dollop of butter sitting alongside a baked potato and slice of meat loaf, fresh asparagus is the number one choice for fresh spring vegetables in Michigan.

If you have ever seen fresh (or wild) asparagus growing along a country road, in a backyard flower patch or cultivated in neat rows on an asparagus farm, you could probably deduce that asparagus is a member of the lily family. Large, palm-like and bushy fronds make up the leaves and the spears or young shoots come up every spring from the root crowns.

Harvesters will cut the emerging spears on a daily basis, to promote more growth, but as the season dwindles in late spring, the last few emerging spears are allowed to grow to provide nourishment for the roots underground.

ASPARAGUS LIKES to grow best in loose, lightly sanded soil. This makes Michigan's western coast from Benton Harbor all the way up to Traverse City the asparagus production areas of the state. Michigan ranks third, directly behind Washington State and relatively in the lurch, way behind California as leading asparagus-producing state.

During the winter months, fresh asparagus usually graces our supermarket shelves from such faraway locals as Taiwan and Mexico. Of course, travel tacks on the big bucks, bringing winter asparagus to our local supermarkets near the $3-per-pound range.

This time of year, in addition to luscious sweet tendrils of green asparagus, prudent shoppers will notice an occasional appearance of white asparagus. White asparagus appears by hilling up the soil around the newly emerged spears.

This almost doubles the prices because the new, emerging spears are very delicate and the process of hiding the sun and prohibiting photosynthesis must be done by hand.

Folks intent upon acquiring the white asparagus usually end up purchasing a "gourmet brand" that is packaged in jars and imported from Europe. Still packed in water, these jarred brands are not quite as overcooked and mushy as most domestically canned asparagus. Still, nothing beats the tender-crisp crunch of fresh asparagus.

THE BIG QUESTION that faces most asparagus purchasers is whether to purchase fat, plump spears or pencil-thin shoots. Contrary to popular belief, both taste great when fresh. The main difference will be in the pre-production stage when you should peel a small amount of the whitened base from thicker asparagus as it tends to be a bit tough without peeling.

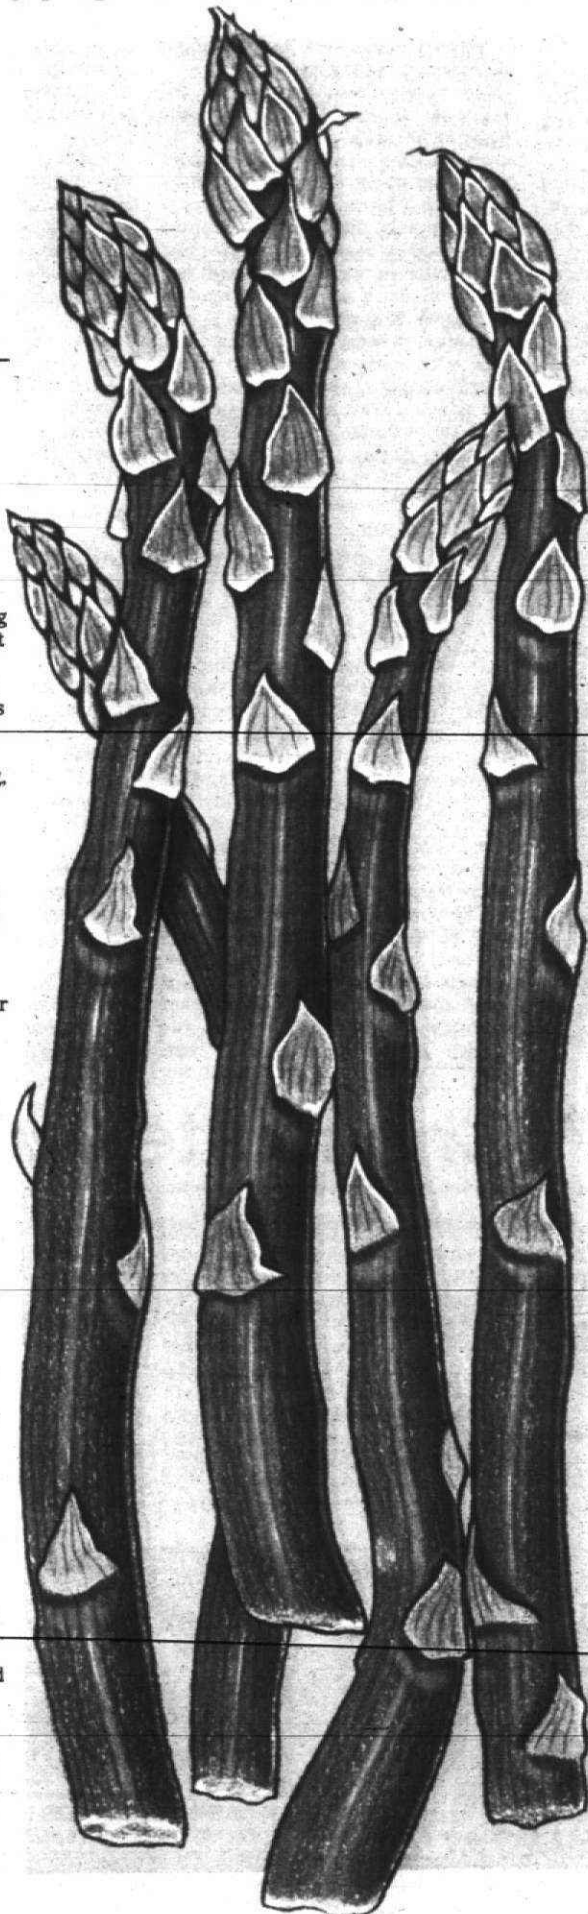

Avid asparagus fanciers should be more concerned with the freshness because asparagus ages rapidly after cutting. After 48 hours, the tips of asparagus will begin to open or spread out. The freshest asparagus will have a closely cropped tip.

If the tops look good, the freshest asparagus also will be brittle and easily punctured. Wilted stalks will bend readily and will not "snap" when broken in half.

Since asparagus loves a well-drained sandy soil, you might want to do a well-deserved soak in a bowl of fresh, cold water, then remove and soak again, making sure the rinse water is as cold as possible. Don't waste your time or money purchasing old asparagus, as angular, flat and open stalks are usually apt to be tough and woody-tasting.

If you're lucky enough to stumble on a roadside stand brimming with baskets of fresh-picked asparagus, here are a few tips you will appreciate when deciding the preparation techniques.

Asparagus can be lightly steamed for a few minutes over simple water, broth or white wine. Thin shoots need no more than three or four minutes with thicker shoots demanding about seven or eight minutes of hearty steaming.

The Janes gang enjoys asparagus when sliced diagonally and stir fried in just a splash of olive oil and maybe a sprinkling of sesame seeds. As far as stir fry cooking times are concerned, the only way to tell when cooked throughout is by sampling and, let's face it, folks, we didn't get fat by eating asparagus.

Frequently, I've seen many folks cut away and discard the whiter stems of asparagus. They think it's the toughest part of the asparagus. Even at under a buck a pound, save the stems for chopping and using in sautes with other vegetables and soups.

You can even microwave fresh asparagus and still enjoy a quality product. The secret here is not mounding up all the stalks in the center of the plate. Use a round plate or platter and take the freshly rinsed stalks and place them spoke-fashion around the rim of the plate. Cover with some paper towel and microwave for five to seven minutes per pound. (Five minutes for more crispy asparagus, seven minutes for more cooked.)

So whether you would like asparagus covered with an artery-hardening hollandaise sauce or simply tossed with a squeeze of fresh lemon juice, this season's crop of asparagus is sure to be one of Michigan's finest.

Crunchy breads baked by Auers

By Geri Rineschler
special writer

Thank goodness, in this "microwaveable," "fax-em, fast-food orders" world of ours, someone still cares about baking a serious, old-fashioned, crunchy loaf of bread.

David Auer, whose shop is nestled in a mini-mall in Southfield, has been baking European-style breads and pastries for nearly six years. Not only does Auer bake a great loaf of bread, but there are 14 old world loaves to choose from. Among the favorites are whole-wheat raisin nut and four-grain dark sourdough made with dark beer.

Auer's culinary career began 10 years ago at the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills. As a graduate of the culinary arts school, Auer continues to train with established pastry chefs in France. He wants to learn more about pastry and bread. He strives to learn more about the classic French baking techniques, which originated during the haute cuisine days in France in the late 19th and early part of the 20th century.

JOHN STORMZAND/staff photographer

Although Auer's professional reputation was founded on his ability to produce exceptional French breads and brioche, his pastries and cakes are quick to follow suit. On an average day, the pastry cases in his shop are lined with classic desserts such as Charlotte Cecile, a cake made with ladyfingers and filled with various combinations of chocolate mousse, raspberry, strawberry or vanilla Bavarian cream, and hazelnut chocolate mousse.

THERE ARE ALSO puff pastry apple tarts, praline cheesecakes, chocolate fudge cakes and lizer tarts made from hazelnut cookie crust and coated with fruit preserves. Generally, the Auers stock 6- and 8-inch cakes and tortes, but all of these may be ordered up to 12 inches in diameter.

For special occasions, Auer and his staff will design unusual, fanciful desserts, such as a 3-foot croquembouche, of mini-cream puffs, covered with spun sugar and decorated with colorful, marzipan flowers.

On the day of the interview, Auer was making a poured-sugar, stained-glass centerpiece for a client's party buffet table. While he was quickly swirling orange and yellow food coloring into the hot sugar mixture, he said, "I enjoy working with poured sugar. It's a technique I developed while studying in Paris last month."

Auer recently returned from training with Joe Bellouet, a well-known French pastry chef, who studied with France's distinguished pastry chef, Gaston Lenotre. He added, "I'm constantly experimenting and improving with new recipes for my pastries and the bread. I'm hoping to also make arrangements to return to France before the end of the year and study bread techniques further."

While in Paris, he spent a lot of time visiting many of the notable boulangeries for ideas and to get a sense of current baking trends.

IN WHATEVER Auer does, he believes in using only the finest ingredients available. Since he supplies many restaurants in metropolitan Detroit with his baked goods, he needs dependable, quality ingredients, and knows where to find them.

Asked if there was any one person who inspired him in his baking endeavors, he replied, "My brother-in-law, Peter Goatley, owner and chef of the Palate Pleaser, gourmet shop in Bloomfield Hills. With his inspiration and advice, and support from my Dad, I was encouraged to go on, and open a retail shop."

Baking by the Auers gives cookie recipes

Baking by the Auers is at 29307 Southfield Road, Southfield. The shop is open Tuesday-Saturday, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. (phone 424-8660).

Since many of the Auers' pastry recipes are complicated, here are two of their classic French cookie recipes to try at home.

CIGARETTES
Makes 1 1/2 pounds.
17 1/2 ounces unsalted butter
17 1/2 ounces confectioners' sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
10 1/4 ounces all-purpose flour
3 1/4 ounces skinless almonds, pulverized and sifted
10 egg whites

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Gradually add egg whites until well blended, then add vanilla. Gently fold in flour, powdered sugar and pulverized almonds, evenly.

Lightly butter and dust cookie sheet with flour. Using a No. 3 pastry tube straight tip, full pastry tube with batter and secure to close top of bag. Make a disc of batter the size of a quarter, spacing each so that there are 4-5 on each cookie sheet. Tap the bottom of each tray before baking.

Bake cookies until the edges are golden brown. Remove them from tray while they are still warm and wrap each around a wooden dowel the size of a pencil, one at a time.

day night spaghetti bash, it works.

• Stir a pinch of finely crumbled rosemary into mashed potatoes.

• When you see delicate leaves sprouting from carrot and radish tops, they didn't just get off the turnip truck yesterday; they're old.

• To make your own wine rack, construct a bookcase by layering blocks with sturdy boards and then stacking bottles, which have been inserted into mailing tubes, on the shelves.

• Store seafood in the fridge on ice. A colander nested into a crisper drawer will keep the fish "fishmarket fresh."

• Is your dishwasher hot enough? Try this test: Fill a tall glass with your hottest tap water. Add a teaspoon of dishwasher detergent. If it doesn't dissolve before it hits bottom, your water is not hot enough.

Soup for supper aids dieters

We still face one of the biggest questions of the day. "What's for supper?" Whether there are one, two, three or more people in the house, the question still remains. Well, what about a simmering pot of homemade soup with stick-to-the-ribs nutritious goodness?

For those of you who have resolved to lose weight, there is some very interesting research being done on soup and weight control. Participants in a weight-loss program at the University of Pennsylvania lost more weight the more often they ate soup.

The researchers, headed by Dr. Henry A. Jordan, showed that the larger role soup played in the dieter's meals the fewer total calories they consumed. The researchers showed that by eating soup as a part of their meals, the dieters consumed calories at a slower rate. A third more calories were consumed per minute in non-soup lunches than in lunches which soup was eaten.

In other words, by starting your meal with soup, which has a lower caloric density than most solid foods and which takes a relatively long while to consume, you are likely to eat less. Eating soup gives your brain time to register that "you're full" before you have over-consumed calories. This makes a great case for a soup supper.

With TODAY'S busy schedule it is sometimes more convenient to start with a commercially made broth. They are usually saltier than the homemade version, but if you are starting with this, adjust the seasoning accordingly.

Soups that are good served alone take on new interest when combined with other kinds. Combine tomato and chicken rice, or cheddar cheese and tomato, or cream of mushroom and tomato, or cream of asparagus and cream of mushroom, for something different.

Making your own tasty broth takes very little effort. The vegetables used to make the stock need not be peeled because you are going to strain the stock and remove the vegetables. To recapture some of the great vegetable flavors, start the stock with the cooking water from vegetables you normally throw away. Use carrot and onion to help deepen the color and add sweetness to the stock.

Never let the liquid boil; simmer slowly. If it does boil, the broth or stock will be cloudy. Remove any scum that may collect on the surface as it simmers.

This is a good time to use a turkey carcass or ham bone that you froze when you didn't have time to make soup. After the bones and vegetables have been simmered until done, either strain it through cheese cloth or a plain sieve. A bulb baster may be used to remove all the surface fat.

Or, the easiest and most effective way is to refrigerate the broth or stock for several hours so the congealed layer of fat may be lifted off. Homemade broth or stock may be refrigerated up to four days. For longer storage, freeze meat stock up to six months and fish stock two months.

THICKEN SOUP with wholesome ingredients such as a few tablespoons of uncooked farina. A grated raw potato may be added into the broth, or instant mashed potatoes into a hearty soup. Use rice, barley or oat flour instead of white flour. Cornmeal or bread crumbs also may be used to thicken the soup. Cheese may be used to thicken, too. Cube or shred the cheese to melt evenly, keeping the heat low so the cheese doesn't become tough and stringy.

Don't forget the garnish for the soup. Try popcorn, crumbled blue cheese, toasted almonds, thin hot dog slices, chopped pickles or browned onion rings. Be creative.

Crisp accompaniments contrast pleasingly with soup. Crusty bread chunks or bread sticks or even garlic toast served with a salad and fresh fruit would be a welcome meal. Doesn't a hot mug of hearty, healthy, homemade soup sound great? A cold soup snack or a hot soup supper sounds very inviting for family or drop-in friends.

Lois Thieleke
home economist, Cooperative Extension Service

What's file powder? Housin sauce?

AP — With thousands of choices on the shelves of the average supermarket, it's no wonder that recipes sometimes call for an ingredient that's unfamiliar. Get acquainted with some of these less familiar fixings.

• FILE POWDER (fee-LAY): The ground form of sassafras leaves. Its subtle flavor tastes like a mild herb. In Cajun and Creole cooking, file is used to thicken and flavor sausage mixtures such as gumbo. Because file gets stringy when cooked, add it just before serving. Despite what you may have heard or read, file powder is perfectly safe to eat.

Safore, a possible carcinogen banned from food use by the Food and Drug Administration, is found only in sassafras bark, not the leaves.

• HOISIN SAUCE: A thick, rich-flavored Oriental seasoning, hoisin sauce is made from soybeans, sugar, garlic, flour, vinegar and spices. Look for it among the Oriental ingredients at your supermarket or at an Oriental market. If you can't find it, soy sauce is the closest substitute.

• JICAMA (HEE kuh muh): A root vegetable that's similar to a potato but has a milder, sweeter flavor and crispier texture than a potato.

Peel it and slice or dice it to use raw in salads or on relish trays. Or, cook as you would potatoes.

• NEUFCHATEL: Looks, tastes and cooks just like cream cheese but is made with 25 percent less fat. It contains 80 calories per ounce compared to 100 for regular cream cheese. Formerly labeled only "Neufchatel," this product now carries the word "light" on the label. You'll find it in 8-ounce packages in the dairy case. It can be substituted for cream cheese in any recipe.

• ORZO or ROSAMARINA: Although it looks like slightly flattened grains of rice, this is a pasta. Cook it in boiling, lightly salted water. Because it's so small, it cooks in just 8 minutes and is a good choice when you want pasta in a hurry.

• SHALLOTS and SCALLIONS: Both are mild-flavored members of the onion family. Shallots are onions that have not yet formed a bulb. They are more commonly called green onions. Shallots, like garlic, grow in clusters joined at the bottom, each covered with a papery skin. Shallots are often used in French cooking, especially in sauces. When a recipe calls for either shallots or scallions, you can substitute green onions. Or use finely chopped mild onion instead of shallots.

Chocolate wins out as favorite flavor

AP — According to a recent Gallup survey, chocolate is America's favorite flavor. It surpassed other leading flavors, including vanilla, by a 3-to-1 ratio.

Eighty-four percent of the households in the United States use chocolate, whether in desserts, snacks or beverages, according to the survey.

The survey results were released by the Chocolate Manufacturers Association of the U.S.A.

More than 50 percent of the women surveyed said chocolate is their favorite flavor. Forty-two percent of the men said they prefer chocolate to other flavors like berry, vanilla, apple, orange and coffee.

The more money Americans make, the more likely they are to choose chocolate as their favorite flavor, the Chocolate Manufacturers Association says.

Younger Americans have a stronger preference for chocolate than older Americans, and people in the western part of the United States are more likely to prefer chocolate than those located in the eastern part of the country.

Survey results are based on telephone interviews with a randomly selected national sample of 1,000 adults, 18 years of age and older.

Working outdoors? Come inside to this

Next to the month of December, I have always found the spring months to be some of the busiest months of the year. And, in fact, there is a lot to do. Lawns need to be raked and fertilized, garden beds need to be cleaned out, flowers need to be bought and planted and even the dreaded garage needs to be cleaned out. It's almost enough to make one wish for a blizzard — or a full-time gardener.

Yet another sure sign of spring is the smell of steaks being cooked on an outside grill. As grills are hauled out, dusted off and fired up after a long winter in the garage, the wonderful smell that wafts through the air reminds me that summer is just around the corner.

Whether you are looking for a delicious but simple dinner to prepare on those days when you are busy working outside, or if you are simply interested in adding yet another great-tasting dinner to your repertoire, this week's Winner Dinner is for you.

Sandy Tomlinson of Beverly Hills submitted recipes for marinated flank steak, applesauce muffins and Oreo Jell-O that are sure to become family-tested winner dinner family favorites at your house as well. The busy mother of two boys, Tomlinson works as her husband's office manager while her children are in school. She makes an effort at planning and organizing her family's meals so that when she comes home from work she can spend time with them.

Tomlinson finds this menu is a easy one to use. She marinates the meat and prepares the dessert in the morning. The muffins only take minutes to whip up, and baked potatoes or steamed vegetables round out the meal.

Besides working, Tomlinson is president of the Detroit North Suburban Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority Alumnae group and is a member of the Cranbrook-Kingswood Middle School Mothers Council. She and her husband actively support their sons' athletic endeavors and, in her spare time, she loves to garden.

Thank you, Sandy Tomlinson, for sharing your time-saving menu and ideas and congratulations on being this week's Winner Dinner Winner. It sure sounds like a great "rake and bake" dinner to me.

Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apocryphal with the words "Winner Dinner Winner on it."

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping, or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clipping in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

New foods designed with healthy appeal

AP — Americans are interested in "healthy" eating — and food manufacturers are responding with new foods, says Food Engineering magazine.

The magazine says the market for cereals that appeal to health-conscious adults now accounts for nearly 20 percent of the $6 billion ready-to-eat cereal category — and is growing. Other trends:

• Rice bran is gaining popularity, with products such as cereals and cookies being introduced.

• Several cheese manufacturers are formulating cheese substitutes using vegetable oils instead of dairy fats.

• Low-fat mayonnaise now represents about 15 percent of the total $600 million mayonnaise market.

Food Engineering says the effort to reduce total fat in the diet has taken several different directions. According to the magazine, Americans are consuming less red meat, butter, whole milk and eggs but are consuming more cheese, frozen desserts, yogurt, sour cream and oil.

Italian wines can go with any kind of meal

Most Italian wines are consumed in restaurants rather than purchased in a retail shop to be enjoyed at home. This fact confirms the idea that most consumers find Italian wines difficult to understand but are willing to try new wines introduced to them by a knowledgeable waiter or sommelier.

Once a consumer gets beyond Chianti in the straw basket, a new world of taste experience is opened. Fortunately, more people are being introduced to this new world of Italian wines in the Italian restaurants that have opened in the metropolitan area in the last several years. Among them are Lepanto (Royal Oak), Oliverio's (Royal Oak), R.I.K.s the restaurant (West Bloomfield), Gratzl and Trattoria Bella Ciao (Ann Arbor), Little Italy (Northville), Cafe Cortina (Farmington Hills), Picano's (Troy), Maria's (West Bloomfield) and Antonio's (Grosse Pointe).

Most Italian wines available in restaurants are also available in better wine shops around town. Italian wines are versatile. They complement all types of cuisine. You can select Italian wines in non-Italian restaurants. Drinking Bordeaux wines does not require a French dinner theme. California cabernet sauvignon is great with a variety of meal preparations, and Italian wines do not demand pasta, olive oil, tomato sauce and garlic.

Most Italian wines found in this area come from the Piedmont, Tuscany, Trentino-Alto Adige or Friuli-Venezia Giulia. Tuscany is known principally for Chianti made from

focus on wine
Eleanor and Ray Heald

the sangiovese grape. Piedmont produces great red wines from the nebbiolo grape, known as Barbaresco and Barolo. There are several northern Italian wine regions (Trentino and Friuli) that produce light, refreshing red and white wines.

SEVERAL ITALIAN producers recently showcased their wines at Gratzl, on Main Street in Ann Arbor, and we had the opportunity to taste and discuss their wines.

Alberto Flavo is owner of Avignonesi, in the Tuscan growing region known as Montepulciano, south of Siena. His 1985 Avignonesi VINO Nobile di Montepulciano ($18) is made principally from a grape called prugnolo gentile, a clone of Chianti's sangiovese. Prugnolo gentile is blended with small portions of mammolo and cabernet sauvignon and aged two years in small oak barrels. It shows a bountiful nose of berries and ripe fruit, with a touch of anise. The generous palate impression is long and lively with an extended finish. This wine will age if you can keep your hands off.

The 1986 Avignonesi "Grifi" ($25) is similar to the VINO Nobile, but with 15 percent cabernet franc; it tends to be fruitier on the palate. It imparts a soft, user-friendly impression of cherries with a touch of cedar.

Alceo di Napoli Rampolla produces wonderfully rich, flavorful Chianti Classico at Castello dei Rampolla. His 1986 Rampolla Chianti Classico ($14) has rich aromas of mushrooms, berries and truffles that introduce a round, silky mouthfeel with a lengthy finish. If you have considered Chianti to be a light, insipid, red liquid with a sharp, tannic edge, you must try this wonderfully designed wine.

Sammarco is the proprietary name for Rampolla's blend of 85 percent cabernet sauvignon and 15 percent sangiovese. If you are familiar with wines like Sassicaia and Antinori's Solala you realize that Italians are planting acres of Bordeaux varieties each year. These wines challenge the great reds of Bordeaux with opulence, concentration and richness. They are well balanced and capable of aging in excess of 10 years.

THE PLETHORA of proprietary wine names from Italy is confusing. Italian producers are using proprietary names because these wines, based on Bordeaux varieties, do not fit within the Italian wine law. They are simply labeled VINO DA TAVOLA.

It is worth learning the names so you will know what to ask for. The cabernet sauvignon that has been the backbone of Sammarco since 1980 formerly went into the great Sassicaia. It is produced only in very good years (Sammarco was not made in 1984 or 1987) and costs as much as a first growth Bordeaux. The 1987 Sammarco (a great vintage in Italy rivals many first growth Bordeaux in years like 1982 and 1986. Produced in limited quantity, it will be a challenge to find.

In Trentino, situated high in Italy's Aldo Adige, Luigi Togn produces delicious white wines at Maso Poli. Togn grows pinot grigio, Muller-Thurgau, pinot bianco and chardonnay for his pleasant, fruity, well-made wines.

The 1988 Maso Poli Pinot Grigio ($13) exhibits aromas of ripe pears followed by a crisp, refreshing palate impression. Fermented entirely in stainless steel tanks, this wine is meant to be drunk young, when fresh, clean and vibrant. Togn recommends his wine with fresh fish and asparagus — a great spring time combination.

Tenuta (farm) Broglia is in the white wine region of Italy's Piedmont known as Gavi. Here the cortese grape is responsible for the fresh, tart wines that go so well with shellfish. The 1988 Broglia Gavi d Gavi "La Meirana" ($15) shows a very flowery aroma and a soft richness balanced by good acidity. It works well as a crisp aperitif or with the Italian seafood salad, Insalata Frutti di Mare.

THE 1987 Broglia Gavi di Gavi "La Fasciola" ($20) is the barrel-aged version. The aromas are rich with fruit and oak accents. The flavors continue the theme introduced by the nose and it continues fresh and full through the finish.

Look for Italian wines when next you are dining or shopping. The above-named producers are among the new generation of Italian wine designers.

Rocks rally to edge DeLaSalle, 9-8

Notre Dame rips Salem in opener

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Warren DeLaSalle picked on the wrong player Thursday afternoon, daring Tom Noonan to hit the ball out of the infield in the final inning.

Noonan did just that, sending a fly ball into right field that scored Steve Mantays and gave host Plymouth Salem a 9-8 win over the Pilots.

The Rocks (2-1) lost to Harper Woods Notre Dame, the defending Class A champion, earlier Thursday in the first game of a double-header, 12-4.

Salem had to rally twice to win the nightcap, the second time coming in the bottom of the seventh with the score tied 8-8.

DeLaSalle, the reigning Catholic League champ, pulled even on Darren Audia's two-run single in the top of the seventh, and the Pilots intentionally walked Scott Rodgers to load the bases with one out in Salem's half.

THAT BROUGHT Noonan, a senior and one of the team veterans, to the plate, and he delivered the game-winning RBI with his sacrifice fly.

"It was probably a pop. It was a little high," said Noonan of the pitch he hit. "I didn't want to pop it up but just hit it hard and keep it out of the infield."

"I knew I didn't have to hit it too far for Steve to score because he runs so fast."

Salem coach John Graylin said the Pilots might have changed their strategy if they had been more familiar with the Salem personnel.

"If DeLaSalle had known who we were and who Tom Noonan was, they never would have walked Scott Rodgers to pitch to him," Graylin said. "He's an all-conference player who made our team go last year."

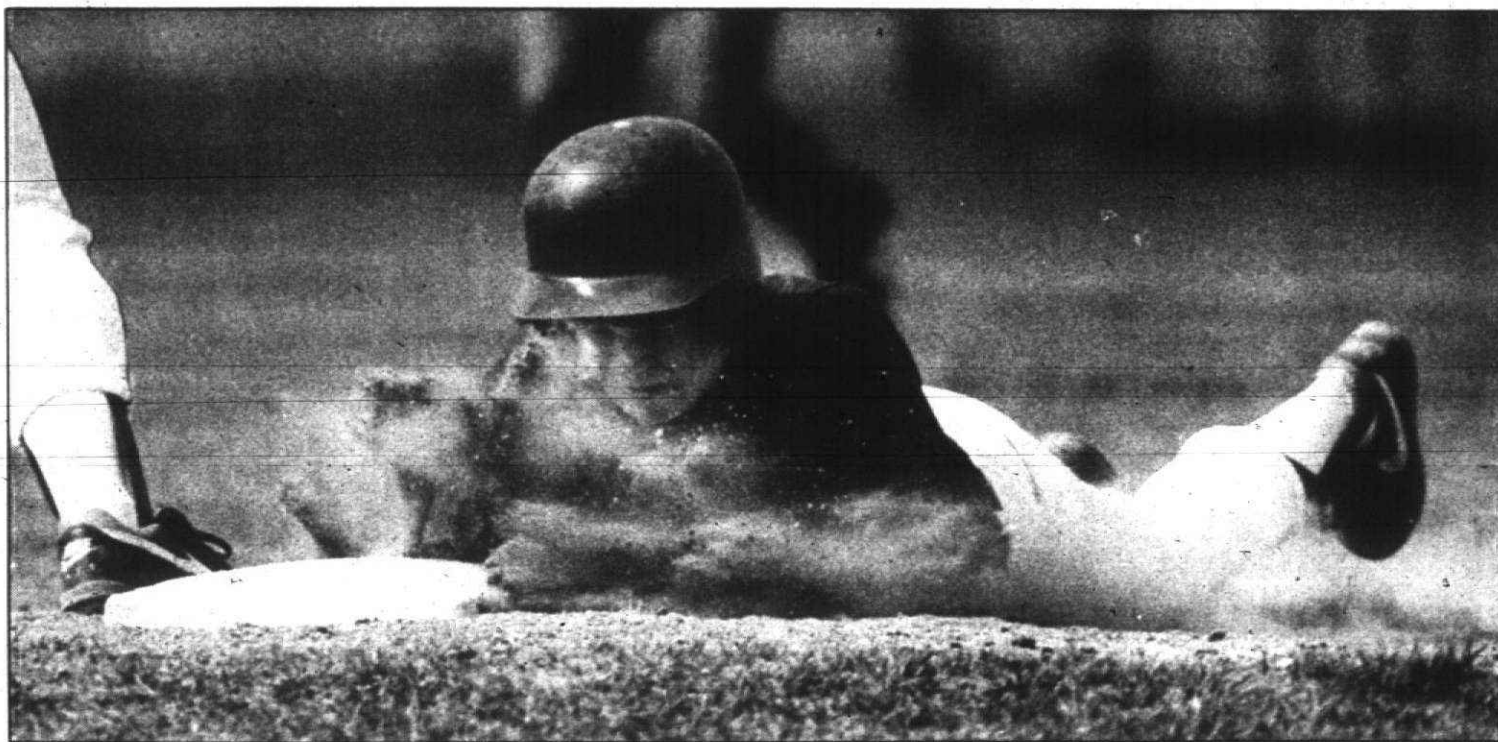

"The walk to Scott Rodgers took away the suicide squeeze more than anything," creating a possible force play at any bag.

Noonan didn't hit the ball deep, but Mantays, who entered the game as a pinch runner for Kevin Craggs, had no trouble scoring on the play. Mantays went to third on Jeff Belisle's double.

"WE'RE REAL fortunate to be able to put in somebody like Steve Mantays, who runs as well as anybody who plays this game," Graylin said. "He wanted to score that run. He ran aggressively."

Rob Kowalski entered the game in the fourth inning in relief of starter Jeff Paluk and worked four complete innings to get the victory.

But it was a win that didn't come without some difficulty. He pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth, and he gave up a run but left two DLS runners stranded in the sixth.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Scott Bright dives back to first base in the DeLaSalle game Thursday. Bright, the Salem leadoff batter, reached base on an error in the first inning and later hit a solo homer in the fourth. It Kowalski's luck couldn't hold, however. The Pilots loaded the bases in the seventh with three hits before Audia got the game-tying fourth.

"I just couldn't find the strike zone," said Kowalski, who pitched a five-hitter and struck out eight in the season opener. "My arm felt better than it did against (Livonia) Stevenson. Maybe I was trying to overpower the ball."

"Even though I wasn't happy with my performance, the team still won and that's the most important part of the game."

The recent cold weather has wreaked havoc on Salem's pitchers, according to Graylin, who said pitching was the biggest disappointment Thursday.

SALEM FELL behind in the first inning in both games, and they faced an immediate 4-0 deficit after DLS got three hits and two walks off Paluk.

was the second time this season Bright has hit the first pitch for a home run. The Rocks lost to Notre Dame 12-4 but defeated the Pilots 9-8.

Rodgers also had a bad start against Notre Dame, giving up five runs in the first inning.

"We were better pitchers two weeks ago than we are today," Graylin said. "The weather has thrown us off so much. This is probably the only time I'm going to make excuses for them."

Chad Johnson, hitting in the No. 9 position, was the key to keeping Salem, which trailed 5-0 after 1½ innings, in the game early and overtaking the Pilots later, hitting a pair of two-run homers.

His first made it 5-2 in the bottom of the second, and the next one was part of a game-changing, four-run fourth for the Rocks, who were out 15-9.

Chris Robinson of Canton stays close to the bag at first base in the second half of Thursday's double-header in which the Chiefs played defending Class A champion Harper Woods Notre baseball

The Plymouth Canton baseball team had its work cut out for it Thursday afternoon against nationally-ranked Harper Woods Notre Dame.

The Fighting Irish, rated No. 17 in the nation by the USA Today, edged the host Chiefs 3-2, thanks to a solid pitching performance from junior right-hander Ryan Grathen.

"Ryan pitched well for us," Notre Dame coach Tony Mardirosian said. "It was a tough game and he came through."

Grathen hurled six innings, striking out three and walking none. He surrendered six hits.

The Fighting Irish improve their record to 6-2, while the Chiefs, who defeated Warren DeLaSalle in the first game of a double-header 7-3, suffered their first loss in five games.

NOTRE DAME scored first in the fourth inning as Canton made an error, allowing Jeff Miller on base. He moved to third on a single by Ray Ricken and scored on a sacrifice fly by Eugene Gunnery. Miller would later score on an error.

With the Fighting Irish leading 2-0 in the sixth inning, Matt Ziolkowski scored on an RBI single by Matt Sokol, giving Notre Dame a 3-0 lead entering the seventh inning.

"I thought we played competitively for the first four innings," Canton coach Fred Crissey said. "Against a good team like Notre Dame, we want to play competitive baseball."

"Our whole program isn't about winning or losing. It's about playing competitively. Today we competed. It's too bad we couldn't hit the ball."

Canton did manage to rally in the bottom of the seventh when Dave Makara and Jason Crain got hits to begin the inning. That made Mardirosian go to his bullpen in favor of Marc Gunn, a hard-throwing right-hander.

"To tell you the truth, Marc Gunn was the only fresh arm I had left,"

Weightlifters compete for national titles

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

For the second time in four years, Observerland will be host for the United States Weightlifting Federation National Championships next month.

The Mercy Center of Farmington Hills will be the site of this year's event, scheduled for the weekend of May 4-5-6. The 1987 championships took place at Eddie Edgar Arena in Livonia.

This time around the women's competition will be conducted in conjunction with the men's. The meet serves as the official tryout for Olympic Sports Fest, the Goodwill Games and the World Championships.

"It's the most important meet we hold, because it's the men's and women's nationals," said Bud Charniga of Livonia, a member of the Weightlifting USA board of trustees.

The women will have their World Championships in late May in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, the men in November in Budapest, Hungary. Only the top four lifters in each of the heaviest weight classes (220 pounds, 242 and 242-plus) will go to the Goodwill Games in the Soviet Union this summer.

IN THE WORLD Championships and Goodwill Games, the U.S. will continue to fight an uphill battle against the more successful East European lifters, according to Charniga, a former lifter himself who was second in the 100-kilogram class (220 pounds) at the 1981 nationals.

"There was a time when American weightlifters were the best in the world," he said, adding it's difficult to pin down a reason for the shift.

"In the '40s and '50s when we were big, Europe was recovering from the war and Russia had lost all those people," Charniga said. "They got organized, they got the best people in the sport and they left us behind because they were paying their athletes to do it."

"We do have good people, but we do it as a hobby. We have to make a living and find a place to train."

Championship meet in Farmington Hills

Charniga added most of the training and lifting techniques come from the Soviets and the Bulgarians, the nations most successful in the sport.

"The Soviet approach is long term, work your way up until the body is ready for it," he said. "Don't force your strength gains."

"THE BULGARIAN program is very intense, rapid rise, either survive or blow apart. You become a world champion or get out of the sport. In their system, guys train five to six hours a day, six days a week."

Charniga favors the Soviet style, adding their weightlifters resemble thoroughbred athletes more than the Bulgarians do and have athletic abilities in common with National Football League players, for instance.

He recalled a recent Junior National meet in which a Bulgarian lifter constantly wore the same sweat pants and lifting shoes.

"Either that's the best thing he's got to wear," Charniga said, "or he never knows when they're going to make him train."

Charniga expects many of the past U.S. stars to attend this year's national meet, as well as most of the 1988 Olympic team.

Norbert Schemansky, now in his 60s, is a former world and Olympic champion. At age 40, he won a bronze medal at the Tokyo Olympics. Others expected to compete are Tommy Kono, an eight-time world champion and two-time Olympic winner, and Issac Berger, who won three Olympic medals, including one gold.

"FOR SOME reason, when we have a national meet in the Detroit area, we have guys come out of the woodwork," Charniga said, "guys we haven't seen in 30 years."

Livonia's Todd Lyons has a good chance to win and make the Goodwill team, Charniga said. The 24-year-old Lyons, originally from Waterloo, Iowa, will compete in the 110-kilo class and previously has been on the National Junior team and taken part in the Olympic Fest.

Some of the best women lifters probably won't compete here, because there was a special tryout for the World Championships last month in Minnesota.

"This meet is a secondary tryout," Charniga said. "The ones who have locked in a position won't come, because it's too close to the World Championships."

One he expects will compete is Annette Bohach, a Grand Rapids fireperson. She has lifted 187 pounds in the snatch and 270 in the clean and jerk, and she outdid nine men at the meet in which she lifted that weight.

Bohach, when she tried out for the fire department, was among 50 people (split nearly even between men and women) taking the rigorous physical test, and she finished second overall, according to Charniga.

Northwest Airlines and Toledo Scales are helping to sponsor the National Championships, and spectators, for the $3 admission price, will have a chance to win a pair of tickets to anywhere Northwest flies in the contiguous 48 states and Canada.

The women will lift at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Friday, 12:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The men compete at 12:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

WOULDN'T YOU ALSO AGREE THAT BETWEEN 30,000 AND 50,000 MILES A CAR MAY NEED TIRES, SHOCKS, BRAKES, EXHAUST SYSTEM, TUNE-UP OR EVEN AN ALIGNMENT? IF THESE REPAIRS DID TAKE PLACE, YOU MAY SPEND AS MUCH AS $1200-1400 IN THE THIRD AND FOURTH YEARS OF OWNERSHIP!

UPSIDE DOWN? FORD DETERMINES THE GUARANTEED FUTURE VALUE OF A CAR, THEN YOU PAY TRADE IN ON THE DIFFERENCE. ALL PAYMENTS INCLUDE MUCH MORE THAN THE CAR IS WORTH? IF YOU HAVE, YOU'RE NOT ALONE! THIS IS TERMED "UPSIDE DOWN" IN YOUR TRADE.

Nuts for Nintendo

The hoopla has died down and the winners now are wearing out their game controls, revving up for the finals. Nintendo came and conquered metro Detroit. From "Super Mario Bros." to soon-to-be-released games, Nintendo was king. But who turned out for the video gamesmanship? Street Scene took a look and guess what? Turn to Page 6D to find out.

Detroit Institute of Art conservator Barbara Heller examines and X-ray of a painting that scheduled to be restored.

Brushing up on art

By Anahid Derbabian
special writer

"One must never alter an artist's intent of what the artwork was meant to be. To change the original is to change history."

As head conservator at the Detroit Institute of Arts, Barbara Heller's goal is to "preserve the integrity of the art as left by the artist." Every piece she touches surrenders an entire world of history, ethics and tender detail.

Few people are aware of what goes into preparing works of art for exhibition or simple for their conservation. Like the audience of a play, people are oblivious to the behind-the-scenes design, costuming, production and direction staff which busily works to make the actors and actresses look good.

Heller is a painting conservator by profession. A graduate of Olivet College where she majored in art, art history and French, she headed for Italy to help restore flood-damaged books after finishing her schooling.

AN ARCHEOLOGICAL dig in that country brought her experience in pottery before she tackled painting conservation for eight years at the Pitti Palace in Florence. For the last 14 years, she has been at the DIA.

"Art conservation is a combination of art history, studio art and chemistry," Heller said. Conservation differs from restoration in that art can never be restored to what it used to be.

"It has aged; it has altered; cracks have appeared," she said. "Cracks stay there permanently. We just want to stabilize them."

Conservators abide by an extremely strict code of ethics in terms of what they can and cannot do and the documentation that is needed. They must "remain faithful to the artist's original intent." In the DIA's conservation department, employees don't alter what the artist has left and limit their work to areas of damage, Heller said.

Once a painting, a portrait of a woman attributed possibly to El Greco, came to the DIA. When it didn't look right to a professional in the field, some tests were done. The X-ray revealed a painting of a madonna and child.

Someone had painted over the child and sold it as a portrait of a lady, making it a more salable piece, and it was the conservation department's job to restore the portrait of madonna and child as El Greco had intended, Heller said.

The conservation department restores the beauty of the art during its cleaning and restoration process, which "allows you to reveal what the artist actually left," Heller said.

NUMEROUS TOOLS and equipment are used to analyze and restore the artwork to good condition. For example, investigating a painting may involve an infra-red camera for viewing the artists underdrawing, ultra-violet for observation of retouches, repairs and type of varnish used and X-rays to show the painter's brush strokes and application of the painting's groundwork.

"You take a Van Gogh and another painting that on the surface looks the same and X-ray them," Heller said. "The way Van Gogh built up his colors is absolutely impossible for somebody to fake."

The department also does conservation related to the acquisition of new artwork, requests from art historians who may have a question about a piece of art and attempts by scholars to identify anonymous artworks.

The conservation department does authentication, determining if the materials used by the artist are consistent with the style of the period. If 20th century pigments are found in a painting dated as the 17th century, it could be an indication of a fake, Heller said.

But "a fake is only a fake if it was intended to deceive," Heller said. Some paintings are produced by artists purposely to study an artist from an earlier period and as a result create works that resemble other artists, she said.

The conservation department has a file on every work of art at the DIA. The file is a history of each piece from its condition to every treatment received dating back to 1927.

HELLER WORKS with a staff of 15 full-time and 10 temporary employees whose expertise include art history, conservation, analytical chemistry, science and photography. There also two interns as part of an endowment program for the advanced training of conservators.

Paintings, paper, textiles and objects from the 12th century on are restored by Heller and her team. DIA's art loans and exhibitions come first with its state and university collections and historical societies as the next priority.

Works of art survive various aging challenges. Paintings may undergo varnish discoloration, peeling and cracking. All art pieces may develop dirt, grime, scratches and cracks, Heller said.

In the early days, gas lighting led to soot and dirt accumulation on artwork. The 20th century brought on pollution from industry and automobiles. Presently, outdoor buildings and sculptures, along with indoor artwork, experience the effects of dirt and dust which accumulate over time.

MOVING PICTURES

‘Blues:’ Barely passable

Film producers continue to revel in gross exhibitions of violence and the “Miami Blues” (C-, R, 97 minutes) crowd is no exception. The grade is C- despite my distaste for the film’s offensive qualities because it is a well-acted, well-produced cop show, albeit the details of the plot leave much to be desired.

The fact that there is anything to be said for this movie may be the most disturbing element of all.

A mysterious stranger, Frederick J. Frenger Jr. (Alec Baldwin), hits town with violence. The town is Miami and the violence begins with a hapless airport Hari Krishna named Ravindra (Edward Saxon).

His death is never explained and it seems doubtful that Junior Frenger was the direct cause. Nonetheless it sets up the confrontation between Junior and the homicide detective, Sgt. Hoke Moseley (Fred Ward), assigned to investigate Ravindra’s death.

Junior attacks Moseley, steals his gun and badge and uses them to steal from thieves. Prior to assaulting Hoke, Junior hired a part-time hooker, Susie Waggoner (Jennifer Jason Leigh). She’s really a nice girl but has to do something to meet her college tuition bills. Honest, that’s what writer/director George Armitage would have us believe.

YOU’RE OBVIOUSLY paying attention if it occurs to you that this is a decadent film. Junior and Susie settle down to domestic bliss, their relationship sealed after he helps her write haiku for a poetry class. Besides decadence, there’s a fairly high level of questionable plot devices.

The film portrays Junior as lovable and hip, a modern Robin Hood and we’re supposed to overlook the fact that he forgets the “and give to the poor” part of Robin Hood’s modus operandi. Actually, Junior Frenger is a cruel psychopath.

“Miami Blues” has high level of graphic violence is offensive. Far worse, however, is the movie’s pretense that Junior is a human being.

that he deserves our interest, and that Susie is a nice girl who deserves our sympathy. He ate everything I put in front of him and he never hit me.”

“Miami Blues” is well-acted so considerable tension and excitement build and the bottom line is that audiences perceive psychotic, aberrant behavior as attractive.

As a matter of fact, Junior reflects the worst of violent behavior in our culture and Susie is a sad and tarnished portrait of the American Dream gone sour.

SHE SUMS it up in describing Junior to Moseley: “There’s something good to be said. He ate everything I put in front of him and he never hit me.”

One of the Oscar nominees for best foreign film, “Camille Claudel” (R), opened last Friday at the Maple Theatre for another run. The story of Auguste Rodin’s mistress, an accomplished sculptress in her own right, stars Isabelle Adjani, Gerard Depardieu and Laurent Grevill. Adjani was nominated as best actress for this role.

“Overexposed” (C-, R) is about a starlet being stalked by an obsessed fan who wants an autograph in blood.

“The Hunt for Red October” (C-) (PG) 135 minutes.

Compelling, but structurally flawed futuristic tale of American goes to Russia with permissiveness, pollution and radiation.

FEAR & LOAFING

Hurts
so good

Karl Nilsson

Masochism lives. It's been proven that we Americans love to inflict pain on ourselves and will pay good money to do it.

Advertisers know this and target our weak spots with ads that make us feel guilty. In the old days, that simply meant running diet ads around dinner time.

Today, the guilt trip is far more sophisticated. The marketing boys have teamed up with the computer nerds to create a TV that can actually smell snack foods! Thirty seconds after you crack the lid on a deep dish pizza, special sensors in the set trigger a series of commercials designed to add 50 pounds to your psyche.

Two minutes in length, these hard sell pitches all share the same basic plot: Scene one opens with a pair of human dirgibles frowning at themselves in the mirror. Love, life and laughter are passing them by.

Then, by dialing the toll-free number on the screen they find a no-risk, money-back shortcut to fun, fitness and romance! The next shot shows them using a Miracle Exerciser with self-confidence, I'm-taking-charge-of-my-own-life smiles.

The final scene shows the newly transformed hard-body couple in action: The camera zooms on the oh so petite yet oh so busy housewife tumbling and frolicking inside the giant pantleg of the very outfit she herself wore just a few short weeks ago!

AS THE music swells, she gazes lovingly at her muscular myke casually lifting the couch overhead as he vacuums under it.

That most of the ads have such striking similarity is no accident. These "guilt ads" are strictly regulated by the Taiwan Import Council and must, by law, feature double-jointed teenagers in Spandex outfits doing contortions that automatically kill anyone over 19 years old.

To make normal viewers feel out of shape, overweight and disgusting to look at, each actor must have all body fat removed surgically before demonstrating the product. Finally, all equipment must not be available in stores at any price and must include a free set of Gin-su knives, if you order before midnight.

Over the years, the various instruments of self-torture offered on TV have relied on springs, cables and rubber straps to pull hair, pinch fingers and mash toes in the name of fitness. Mercifully, these mechanical devices usually broke down after remaining just one or two family members.

But the most hateful, hurtful and, of course, most popular mail-order exerciser of them all is no moving parts! I'm talking about the little plastic bucket seat device that looks like a tortoise shell with handles and costs 13 cents to manufacture.

DESIGNED BY a chiropractor who has been seen breathing concentrated doses of liniment, the "flab crunching, gut burning" scientific breakthrough promises to reduce flab by helping you perform a modified sit-up.

The directions sound simple: Lay back in the contoured seat. Grab the handles. Try to hit your chin with your knees. Any fat cells that get in the way better take the first stage out of town.

The problem is, you have to already be in Olympic condition before you can even do the exercise. The kind of average guy who could perform this "easy rocking motion" shown on TV could also pull a loco-motive with his teeth. The only way I could reduce my waist with this gadget would be to saw it up and eat it instead of food.

Both the original item and a flurry of knock-offs sold for around 20 bucks plus shipping and handling. As garage sale season heats up, I predict you'll see hundreds of these plastic slabs for under $2.

I suggest you buy one for several reasons: First, it makes a great little sled for your kids. Secondly, it makes a handy snack tray for you. And finally, it's cheaper and less messy than thumb screws.

Property it is

Dear Barbara, I am a 35-year-old woman who is contemplating going to law school. My marriage is making me quite unhappy and I know that I need to find new avenues in which I can feel good.

I have been accepted at a law school. A friend of mine told me that she heard that if I ever get a divorce that my degree will be considered like money and that I will have to give my husband some of my future earnings.

We have been married nine years and one daughter is eight. He is a school teacher.

Is it true? Will I have to give him this money? Is there anything I can do?

Future Attorney

Dear Future Attorney, There are many considerations when the judge, lawyers and the estranged spouses make a property settlement in a divorce. With the scenario you present, there are some circumstances under which you would have to pay your husband a portion of future earnings.

Michigan, along with New York and Ohio, are the states in which a professional license obtained during a marriage or a practice begun during a marriage is classified as marital property. As such, the untitled spouse can lay claim to it. Your future law degree and practice falls within this designation.

Added to this problem is the reality that neither prenuptial agreements nor post-marital agreements are legal in Michigan when they are made in contemplation of divorce.

So, your girlfriend is right. In Michigan, protecting yourself from your husband's future claims may not be possible. This would not be true in many other states.

Are you now grumbling to yourself like "isn't there anything I can do?" You can hire attorneys and draw up a post-marital agreement with the intent of a mutually agreeable property division in case of death. These agreements are legal and may be considered by a judge as guidelines in the event of a divorce.

Both of you must be represented by legal counsel in such proceedings and full disclosure of your holdings must be made. Of course, even in the best of scenarios, future earnings could not be protected in this situation either.

On a more optimistic note, the entire family law section is currently under review in Michigan. More and more states have accepted the legality of prenuptial and post-marital agreements. It is possible that Michigan will, in the near future, too.

One more thought: Is it possible that your husband might deserve some of your future earnings if you are to divorce in the future? Is he the one putting you through law school? Would you expect some compensation if you had paid his way through professional school?

Even feminists can become very traditional when deciding a property settlement. Most women who are in the situation that you contemplate agree that it is better to be rid of their unwanted husbands at whatever cost.

Nintendo Mania

By Pat Schutte
staff writer

The line stretched through the Cobo Hall concourse like 'Hands Across America,' only at times eight to 10 people thick. Thousands upon thousands of them, all waiting in line to do one of two things . . . play the latest Nintendo games or watch — patiently — as their children played them.

When the doors opened, it was if a dam broke. Kids blew through the doors like millions of gallons of water rushing through a couple of cracks. Parents tagged along.

"Rad!" "Awesome!" "Yeah!" seemed to be the brunt of the diction used by those playing the games. Sometimes you'd hear a "This one stinks, let's go," but that was rare.

They came to slay dragons and thugs, race cars, run a small Italian man through an obstacle course, drop rectangles into slots and take on whatever else the minds of Nintendo and its subsidiaries could throw at them.

"I'd rather they do this than watch TV," said Ralph Greenberg of West Bloomfield, who's son Eric and friend David Adler, both eight, were busy working-out on the latest in home video games. "These games teach them to read and think for themselves, not to mention enhancing hand-eye coordination."

The Nintendo World Championships resembled a cross between a Van Halen concert and a set from "Lost in Space." Sections of silver piping linked everything together like a massive space ship. The staff was dressed in bright orange jumpsuits and always on the move with their walkie-talkies.

THERE WERE satellite dishes, giant inflatable figures like Bugs Bunny, RoboCop, Batman and a ninja. There were even life-sized versions of the "Super Mario Bros." stumbling around in their huge-head costumes.

And there was noise. Buzzers, beepers, screamers, whistlers, bonkers, boinkers, doinkers and boomers. Never before had so many different noises been assembled under one roof.

The Nintendo show was strewn across three football fields worth of Cobo Hall. It took 13 semi-trucks (Janet Jackson only uses seven) and a crew of 33 people to haul and assemble the giant touring video game.

There are around 500 video screens. And at 34 hours of playing time over the course of the weekend — that's five minutes per game — Nintendo fans would play more than 200,000 games. At an arcade, at 25 cents a crack, that would come out to about $50,000 in tokens.

Luckily, for the 30,000 in attendance, there was a flat rate charged.

The Nintendo World Championships expects to draw more than a million people to its 30-city tour that criss-crosses the United States and Canada. The jist of the show, besides Nintendo's sub-contractors showing off their latest games in a section of the show called "Power Walk," is the competition.

"IDIOTS," AS they are affectionately known, will try to put up the highest score in their age group on a triathlon-like video game that combines the games "Super Mario Bros.," "Rad Racer" and "Tetris."

The winners at the Detroit show were Shaun Joyce of Dearborn, with a score of 990,175 in the 11 and under class, John Wyman of Milan with 1,243,065 points in the 12-17 age group, and Chris Dillard with 199,175 in the 18 and over class. They will advance to the finals in Orlando, Fla., this fall in hopes of winning, among other things, a car.

Along with the kids were the parents. A few had caught the video game bug themselves; others didn't really know what to make of it. And most felt that the games were a great idea as long as their kids didn't spend too much time in front of the television set.

"Some of the easier games are pretty neat, but I don't like to see the kids spend their whole afternoon in front of the TV," said Linda Hart of Plymouth, who was there with her son Scott and a bunch of his friends. "I did manage to beat Scott in 'Volleyball' before."

"The games are great for strategy skills, especially in teaching the kids to plan ahead," said Erin Kreis of Redford, who brought her son Steven to the show. "One time, when we first got the game, after Steven went to bed, I played it until late in the morning . . . I couldn't put it away. I like the easy games, but I don't like the violent ones."

"THE KIDS love it, but I don't really know that much about it," said Lee Taylor of Farmington Hills who had brought his daughter Kelly to the show. "It seems that back when we were growing up we'd be out on our bicycles or playing football or baseball or something . . . not sitting in front of a TV screen all day."

The kids defended themselves, saying that home video games are a viable tool for stress reduction. Oh yeah, and that they're "AWESOME!"

"The games give you something to do, a way to relax from the homework scene," said Mike Gunchak, 12, of Plymouth.

"This is great, I've never seen so many games before in my life," said Josh Duerr, 13, of Plymouth. "Awesome!"

One of the more popular games on hand was Nintendo's "Game Boy," a hand-held version of the home video system.

"It's great for school," joked Chris Weidman, 13, of Plymouth.

Finding out about the strategies involved in mastering the games was a task in itself. Answers like "After you get here, make sure you get this (bink, boink, dweebil, bonk, sounds the game), then after you do that, make sure that you're here."

When the screen finally faded on the Nintendo World Championships stop in Detroit, Julie Parise, public relations director for Olympia Arenas Inc., put it best: "Hey, what this really is is a trade show for kids . . . kind of like the Detroit Auto Show, but for children."

Sharon Zatkun of Farmington Hills and her son Eric, 4½, found the floor was the best place to sit to work the Nintendo controls.

As a result, "we do a lot of preventative (work)," Heller said. One of the things her department does is try to offer a more ideal setting for art.

"We have a controlled situation where we have air filters and also try very carefully to maintain climate conditions to make relative humidity and temperature very constant," Heller said.

Dramatic changes in temperature and humidity can damage art, so the DIA keeps its temperature around 68 degrees with the relative humidity around 45 percent in the summer and 35 percent in the winter.

IN ADDITION, the DIA utilizes controlled lighting. Ultraviolet light, which fades, damages and degrades art, is filtered out, Heller said. Paper, photographs and textiles are still exhibited only two or three months a year due to their sensitivity to the harmful effects of light, she added.

Plans are being developed for building renovation and expansion of the DIA which will allow for "ultimate climate and lighting conditions," Heller said.

"We have outgrown this facility," she said. "We have only 8 percent of our collection on exhibit and we're the fifth or sixth largest museum in the country."

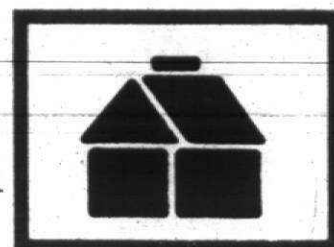

"The collection is here because of our forefathers. We would like to have many, many generations beyond us be able to see the same things in the same condition as we have been fortunate enough to see."

Be conscious of waste reduction

Q. You recently wrote about recycling office paper but did nothing on home recycling. How do you start doing that?

A. I have a confession: I've been procrastinating. In recognition and support of Earth Day, however, I'll bite the bullet and just Do It!

Why have I put off writing about home recycling? I'm afraid of encouraging "savers" who already have an affinity for hanging around stuff to add yet another reason to save things. The problem is not saving — the problem is getting around to delivering the items to a recycling center. I exhort readers to set up home recycling systems, but don't start saving unless you'll follow through. As they say, "The road to hell is paved with good intentions."

Waste reduction begins with source reduction, so be waste conscious while shopping. Select products and packaging 1) made of recycled materials and/or which are du-table, repairable, recyclable or reusable — not disposable, 2) in large or bulk sizes, and 3) which avoid excess or unnecessary packaging. The American Paper Institute has developed this symbol to mark recycled packaging. A gray color on the inside of boxes is also a sign that packaging is made of recycled paper.

Tin cans and glass jars and bottles are recyclable, but not window glass. Clean aluminum food trays and other aluminum containers items are also acceptable. (Cleaning is easy in the dishwasher.) Plastic bottles 64 ounce (half-gallon) or larger from milk, laundry detergent, bleach, etc. are accepted. On smaller bottles, watch for the PETE or HDPE logos on the bottom that tell you they are recyclable.

PETE or HDPE

To prepare items for recycling, rinse all items well and remove metal or plastic tops or rings. Labels usually do not have to be removed from bottles but the ends and paper labels of tin cans should be flattened. Plastic bottles should be flattened. (Don't revert to the old "I don't have time" cop-out; these actions take only seconds.)

Sorting of green, brown and clear glass, plastics, aluminum, metals, etc. can be done in different ways. Cardboard boxes or trash bags can be established for each type of item. Some people find it easier to create a single collection container for everything under their sink, for instance, and sort them later either in the garage or at the recycling center. If storage is a problem, don't overlook hollow or "mid-air" space. Try hanging handled grocery bags organizing

from a hook or rod in an open area of a broom closet, garage, etc.

Used car oil and small household batteries, as well as cordless appliances with rechargeable batteries, should also be recycled. A few retailers, including some Damman Hardware stores, will accept used household batteries. Car oil will be taken by some Meijer and other service stations.

The final key to successful waste reclamation is making routine trips to the recycling centers. If you don't do that, you will quickly be in trouble.

Spring plant sale plans unearthed

Two area garden beauty spots will be holding spring plant sales.

Fresh off a successful full-scale garden show, Friends of Matthaei Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor will hold a sale Saturday and Sunday at the gardens.

Located at 1800 N. Dixboro Road, sale hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The event is open to the public. Over 25,000 perennials, rock garden plants, wildflowers, ferns, herbs, ornamental grasses, hanging baskets and — new this year — old-fashioned roses will be available.

Because perennials are favorites of many gardeners, they will be highlighted at the show.

Included are:

- Iris — a handsome complement to any garden. The colors are diverse and striking and there are many varieties to choose from. One is the Crested Iris, a diminutive late spring or early summer bloomer.

- Wild Geranium — a truly classic plant that fits nicely in the middle of a planting bed because of its height (12-20 inches).

- Hostas — excellent for shady borders. These large-leaved dense perennials are easy to establish.

- Delphiniums — stately flowers that grace the finest gardens in England and the U.S. as well.

- Clematis — a graceful climbing vine that never grows too heavy to do harm to plants or structures. The flowers are showy and the plant is very hardy.

- Ornamental grasses — becoming much more popular. Although they lack a color flower, they have very attractive foliage and make excellent borders or screening. Several different genera of grasses will be offered.

- Trillium — planted in a grouping, will create a luminous white floral effect. A number of varieties will be available.

- Bellflower — several variations in height and habit for this reliable, trouble-free perennial and white is available in some species.

- Old-fashioned roses — making a comeback are these fragrant and relatively carefree beauties. The gardens will be offering 25 old roses, five per variety at the sale. One of the selected group is Gallica Roses. The oldest of all garden roses, they are known for their ability to thrive in poor soil and typically will form a bushy compact shrub, almost thornless with dark green foliage.

THE SECOND SALE will be that of Cranbrook Gardens and will take place May 16-17 at the Cranbrook

Greenhouse, 380 Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Hills.

Rare house plants, orchids, ferns, perennials, geraniums, and wildflowers are only a few of the many varieties of plants which will be available for purchase at reasonable prices.

A special feature of the sale this year will be unusual craft items which will be available for purchase.

Sponsored by Cranbrook Gardens Auxiliary, the sale will be open to the public at no charge. Hours are: Wednesday, May 16, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Thursday, May 17, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Free parking is available across Lone Pine Road in the Christ Church Cranbrook parking lot. A shuttle bus will be available to take people to the greenhouse. For more information, call 645-3149.

Dishing up stunning restaurant decors

God does not play dice with the universe.

— Albert Einstein

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

And restaurateurs do not play dice with their establishments.

Imagine Jacques Demers in Southfield in country decor or Nicky's in Troy in French provincial. How about the Whitney in Detroit with picnic tables?

Dining out is not just food — mood and decor can be critical to a restaurant's success.

John Bodag, an associate with Catallo Associates Inc. in Birmingham, said restaurant designs must create a mood and atmosphere different from the every day environment.

Catallo Associates did the interior design at Pegasus and OpusOne, both in Detroit, and La Rotisserie at the Hyatt-Regency in Dearborn.

"It's hard to say how important a restaurant's interior design is," Bodag said. "It's very important, but more important than food? Probably not. There are little places all over Detroit that are ready to collapse, but the food is great."

When designing a restaurant, Ron Rea of Peterhansrea in Birmingham said it's important to remember that "since they are public places, people have to like them — you have to make them so people will enjoy them."

Peterhansrea was hired to do the interior design in — among others — Nicky's in Troy, the Beverly Hills Grill in Birmingham, and the Metropolitan Music Cafe in Royal Oak.

WHILE AN interior is important, Rea said it isn't the most important thing.

"I don't like to place too much importance on design — a lot of people think that's all you need and that's dead wrong," Rea said.

A restaurant's interior design is a backdrop for the food and service — it helps to add charm and personality, but it can't carry a restaurant, Rea said.

"There are a lot of good looking, but empty restaurants — there are a lot of full ugly ones."

Catallo Associate's Bodag said a designer needs to be sensitive to his client's needs.

"The decor should serve as a backdrop to the menu and the style of service — everything works together."

But while input from the owner is critical, an interior designer must also try to guide the client, he said.

Most (restaurateurs) don't know the difference between interior design and interior decorator, Bodag said. "Interior design is interior architecture — there's a world of difference."

Someone starting a restaurant is sinking a lot of money into a venture and shouldn't take chances on a hit or a miss, Bodag said. "I don't think it's wise at all (for a restaurateur to do his own interior design)."

Some restaurant owners have had successes, he said, but it takes a special talent to design well consistently.

Peterhansrea's Rea said he doesn't believe everyone needs an interior designer.

"IF AN owner has taste and a some knowledge he can do it," Rea said.

But it's a mistake to believe just anyone can or should design a restaurant, Rea said. "It is not a crap shoot — in a restaurant, the most important thing is everything."

Interior design is not decoration. "It is much, much more. It's designing space, it's establishing an attitude, it's working with existing architecture. It is not just putting a color on a wall."

Greg Goodman, the owner of Cafe Bon Homme in Plymouth, is one of those restaurateurs who decided to open a restaurant without the aid of an interior designer — but that doesn't mean the design job was done by amateurs.

Goodman and his wife, Susan, also had a hand in the interior design at MacKinnon's in Northville before opening shop in Plymouth.

"I think you can make a case for (a restaurateur) doing it himself," Goodman said.

The restaurateur, after all, is the one who knows what the restaurant is about, he said.

"It helps to have a keen interest in what you're doing, but I have to admit there was some flying by the seat of the pants," he said of his experiences with restaurant design.

Designing a restaurant is not an easy task, Goodman added.

"The key, I think, is to reduce it down to what it is — to find its heartbeat."

When designing a restaurant's interior, the designer should concentrate on making a design compatible with existing architecture and staying away from fad designs, Catallo Associate's Bodag said.

IN MOST cases, interior designers are limited by the current architecture because many restaurants are put in existing buildings, he said. "You have to be sensitive to what's there."

Color, lighting, decor and noise, each play an important part in a restaurant's overall atmosphere. If even one factor is missing, a night out can be a nightmare, Bodag said.

"You have to see the restaurant as a customer sees it," he said. "I try to imagine sitting in every chair in the restaurant."

Rea of Peterhansrea said a restaurant's design should convey a sense of what the restaurant is trying to be.

"Make sure that what you do tells the customer what you are," Rea said.

If an establishment is formal and requires a tie, for example, the interior design should tell a person they need a tie when they walk in the door because the surroundings should convey that, Rea said.

Wrestling over colors, material choices, lighting, and overall image can at times be daunting, said Goodman of Bon Homme. "You try not to project a trendy image, but a timeless image."

Many aspects of design, Goodman said, are dictated by the overall objective and existing architecture.

"It's more or less take a good long look at what you have and then go from there," Goodman said. "In some respects, it would be easier to build up from nothing, just take your ideas and go, but most restaurants are started in older buildings."

Four things are important to a restaurant's success, Goodman said. Food, service and atmosphere are important, but achieving a balance between them is essential.

"You want it so the customer doesn't know exactly what hit them, but that the experience was inviting — all they know is they like the way it feels," Goodman said.

Owners Greg and Susan Goodman opted for a light, open traditional look with a touch of class at their restaurant Cafe Bon Homme in Plymouth.

Seminar for 1st-time mortgagees

A free seminar explaining the process of buying a house will be sponsored by the Western Wayne Oakland County Board of Realtors Tuesday, May 1.

The seminar, which lasts about two hours, begins at 7 p.m. in the Holiday Inn-Livonia West, 17123 Laurel Park Drive. Advanced registration is requested by calling the Western Wayne/Oakland board at 478-1700.

"This is strictly an information and education session with no selling involved," said Douglas G. Courtney, board president.

Those who attend the free seminar are asked to bring a canned food item which will be forwarded to the Salvation Army.

Who checks for radon?

condo queries

Robert M. Melsner

Our board is pondering whether the association has any responsibility for dealing with radon gas. There also is the question of who has responsibility to inspect for radon gas. Can you elaborate?

This is a difficult question because we are not totally familiar, scientifically, with respect to all aspects of the cause and source of radon gas. Apparently though, it comes from the ground through cracks in the concrete of the basement.

Generally the land is a common element of a condominium project and is the responsibility of the association. The question becomes whether it is unreasonable for the association to have to maintain hairline cracks in the basement through which radon gas may seep.

Additionally, who should bear the responsibility for ascertaining whether there is radon gas — the owner or the association.

Finally, who should bear the responsibility of making repairs in connection with radon gas.

It would appear under simplistic terms, the association — if it is responsible for the basement walls as well as the land under the walls — may have some direct responsibility if it has reason to believe that there is radon gas, although each particular case must be determined on its own circumstances.

Perhaps the association can ask each co-owner to test their own unit for gas and supply the apparatus for testing to the co-owner. You should consult with your attorney regarding an opinion on your particular condominium project.

The president of our condominium association is plain "tight." He just has come on board and now wants to reduce the assessments because he thinks we have too much in reserves. I am concerned that
