Hunter Safety program for 1990 will be offered to residents in two sessions this summer.

The first session, on Aug. 5 and Aug. 12, will be held in the Canton administration building, 1150 S. Canton Center Road. The classes begin at 8 a.m. and end at 2 p.m.

The second session, Sept. 2 and Sept. 9, also will be held in the administration building. Classes are held at the same time.

Classes are free of charge and open to the first 100 people who arrive. There is no registration.

Students are asked to bring a pencil and lunch. McDonald's of Canton will provide the refreshments.

Home grown

Canton's farmer's market will offer food shoppers fresh tastes from local farms beginning July 28 in the parking lot of New Towne Plaza (K mart) at Ford and Sheldon roads.

Farmers will set up stands every Wednesday, from 3-7 p.m., and every Saturday, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., through Oct. 27.

You have to be a Canton farmer to be involved.

Papers delivered

A paper called, "War" (White Aryan Resistance) was delivered to Canton residents' homes recently.

Although there was rumblings of discontent about the paper by some residents, no one filed police complaints, according to Canton police information officer Pat Nemecek.

Calls from the Observer to a phone number on the paper were not returned.

Cops cleared in man's shooting

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Three Canton police officers involved in the May 21 shooting of a Canton man during a standoff with police were cleared Friday of any wrongdoing by the Wayne County Prosecutor's office.

The officers acted reasonably when they shot Paul Vachher, who was armed with knives during the confrontation, according to assistant prosecuting attorney Richard Padjeski.

"Basically it is our understanding that Mr. Vachher was armed with knives," Padjeski said. Vachher came out of the house and threatened officers, who told him to drop the knives.

He "lunged at the officers," Padjeski said.

CANTON PUBLIC safety director John Santomauro said, "I really did not have much question in my mind based on the preliminary investigation in the matter that the officers acted on good faith and took the action necessary."

Canton officers Brian Darow, Eddie Tanner and Dave Boljesic who have been off duty with pay since the incident are expected to return to work today.

The standoff started on May 20, when Vachher allegedly threatened his family. His parents flagged down a police car and asked for help.

Vachher, a recent medical school graduate, was taking anti-depressant medication prior to the confrontation and had recently broken up with his girlfriend, police said.

Clarence Constan, the Vachher family attorney, said he would likely ask Wayne County prosecutor John O'Hare and/or the FBI to review the case.

CONSTAN SAID police denied Vachher his civil rights, because he was on his own property during the confrontation and he was "not seriously armed."

"They (police) should have waited him out," Constan said. "They should have told him to drop the little knives and if he had thrown one, he wouldn't have pierced their shirt."

Santomauro said that from the perspective of the officers it's irrelevant whether it was a machete or knife attack. "It's life threatening," he said.

Vachher remained in good condition at St. Joseph Hospital, Friday a hospital spokeswoman said.

Santomauro asked the state police to conduct an investigation of the case, because Canton police were involved.

"WHEN THESE situations arise we have a definite policy from our Musicians Pat Lowery and Fran Norton tune their instruments before playing for Saturday morning patrons of Plymouth's 10th annual Art in the Park festival. The two-day event attracted crowds despite clouds and light rain.

The two met at Jaeger's office for about 15 minutes. Jaeger said a second meeting on the subject has not been set, but added he and Yack would likely discuss the subject further.

Supervisors mull joint police, fire

Joining Plymouth and Canton's police and fire departments was the subject when Plymouth City Manager Gordon Jaeger and Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack met Wednesday.

Jaeger stressed that this was the first time the subject was raised, adding no actual plans are in the works to join police and fire services in Plymouth and Canton.

But such a move could benefit Plymouth, Jaeger said, as, "The city is going through some financial problems."

The two met at Jaeger's office for about 15 minutes. Jaeger said a second meeting on the subject has not been set, but added he and Yack would likely discuss the subject further.

"They (Canton) have to explore it on their end," he said, to see if such a move would benefit Canton.

Yack was out of town Friday and unavailable for comment on the possibility of joining police and fire services.

Jaeger said Plymouth Township officials were not in on the discussion.

Some city and Plymouth Township officials have said in recent months that combining police dispatch operations — or combining the police and fire departments in Plymouth and Plymouth Township — could save taxes paid by residents for those services.

Fight continues in Kurtz case

By Diane Gale
staff writer

After seven and a half years of legal wars, Central Middle School teacher Scott Kurtz continues to fight a school board decision to suspend him without pay after a fight with a student in 1982.

And the legal confrontations haven't ended yet.

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled earlier this month that Kurtz's constitutional rights were not violated by an alleged conflict of interest between two attorneys.

The school board's hearing officer, Dennis Pollard, and school superintendent John Hobbs' attorney, Bill Albertson, worked in the same Birmingham law firm.

Kurtz will ask the Supreme Court to reconsider the decision, according to his attorney, Steve Amberg. "We regret that it is taking this long, but it will probably take additional time," he said.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court returned to the state Tenure Commission the question of whether Kurtz will receive back pay.

The legal battle began when the Plymouth-Canton school board held a hearing shortly after the 1982 incident. The case went to the Tenure Commission, which decided the board hearing was tainted by a conflict of interest between the attorneys. It ordered Kurtz reinstated with back pay.

The Ingham County Circuit Court agreed with the Tenure Commission.

However, the Court of Appeals reversed the decision and Kurtz appealed to the Supreme Court and lost.

Kurtz's suspension was based on an October 1982 incident involving a teenaged student, John James of Plymouth.

James reportedly entered Kurtz's classroom without permission while Kurtz was out of the room. When Kurtz returned, James failed to answer his questions about why he was in the room and they began to fight.

Kurtz used a karate-like chop to cause James to hit the floor and then "struck his (James') head on the floor several times," according to the school board's ruling. Kurtz denied that he hit the student's head against the floor.

The board ruled that because of Kurtz's actions, James suffered bruises on his right side and bumps

Area eateries 'pretty clean'

Editor's note: This package of stories on restaurant inspections is the first in a series. We will look at restaurants in Plymouth and Canton Townships in the future.

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Ever wonder what goes on behind closed doors in the restaurants you frequent? Afraid to ask?

In Plymouth, you needn't be, according to Nancy Workman, public health sanitarian whose territory includes Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township.

The food licenses of three of the 25 restaurants in the city of Plymouth are being held because of excessive violations, Workman said. They are the A&W, Cloverdale and Mayflower Hotel.

But overall "restaurants in the Plymouth area are pretty clean and well-run. I've had the area three or four years, and I'm pretty confident in the restaurants," said Workman, who's inspected all the listed Plymouth restaurants within the last year.

The health department checks restaurants on an impromptu basis, monitoring such things as food quality, employee hygiene and the condition of equipment and utensils, plumbing, refuse disposal, ventilation and lighting.

Points are subtracted from a perfect score of 100 for each violation on a checklist of 44 items. For the majority of violations, one or two points are lost.

Four or five points are subtracted for each "critical" violation.

Critical violations include such things as keeping food at improper temperatures; allowing employees with infections or poor hygiene to handle food; washing dishes in an unsanitary way; using an unsafe water source or water that isn't the proper temperature under pressure; and improper storage of toxic materials.

There is no designated "passing grade." Some restaurants without food licenses have scored higher than licensed establishments.

Excluding church halls, schools, pizza and ice cream outlets, there are 25 eating establishments in Plymouth. The average score of Plymouth restaurants is 80.

"There are no problems at all with the city's church halls and schools," said Workman.

Mayflower remodels to earn food license

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

The Mayflower Hotel has operated without a food license for more than two years, according to the Wayne County Health Department.

"Their 1988 and 1989 food licenses were never approved because their kitchen wasn't approved," said Nancy Workman, public health sanitarian who inspects Plymouth restaurants for the county.

The hotel's 1990 license is being withheld pending a complete kitchen remodeling to include the pantry, bakery, downstairs bar, Steak House, dining room and the Roundtable Club, Workman said.

"It's going to be wonderful when they're through. I'm looking forward to it. They were just so out-of-code it was time it be brought up to code. It's a very old building. The struc-

Fake doctor reports death of suspect in theft

A Meijer employee, believed to have stolen $380 last week, apparently had an accomplice pose as a doctor and inform a store manager that he had died, police said.

The employee was assigned to work as a cashier in the store's party pantry. The employee took lunch at 8:30 a.m. and never returned. At 9:30 p.m. a store manager received a phone call from someone who identified himself as Dr. Laurel from Boyer Hospital, police said.

The caller said the suspect had died as a result of injuries from a car accident. The caller hung up when the manager started to ask questions, police said.

When employees tallied receipts it was learned that $382 was missing, police said.

The box is forced weekly. There were no signs of forced entry. Only K mart employees and the owner of the ride have keys, police said.

A similar incident occurred two weeks earlier at another K mart store.

JEWELRY HEIST: A Canton resident, who recently returned from Ocho Rios, told police that jewelry was missing from his luggage. There were no values listed on the items missing, however, the goods were insured and their values would be listed on reports.

The resident reported these items missing: a wedding band, two charms, four chains, five rings and two bracelets.

THREE BEAR SYNDROME: A Canton resident reported that while the family was gone last week someone broke into the house through a rear bedroom window by sliding a window open and removing the screen, police said. The intruder slept in their beds, ordered pizzas, used phones, took showers, used dishes, took food out of the cupboard, partied on the deck, moved a clock radio, left beer cans in a bedroom and used tools in the garage.

A neighbor told police that he saw people at the house all weekend and didn't think there was anything unusual, because he had seen the suspects at the home before.

LOST ROCKS: A Canton woman, who was in the hospital for surgery, had given her husband two rings, a $2,250 diamond and a $1,000 sapphire. The woman's sister was staying in their Canton house baby-sitting her children.

The woman told police that she asked her sister to make sure the rings were in the jewelry box. The sister confirmed that they were, the woman told police. However, when she returned home from the hospital the rings were missing.

Afterward, the woman said her sister changed her story and said she wasn't sure if the rings were in the jewelry box as she had previously said.

PURSE PILFERED: A Plymouth resident, who parked her 1987 Ford Escort at the Plymouth-Canton High School parking lot to attend swimming classes, told police her purse was stolen from her car, last week.

A purse, valued at $30 and miscellaneous items in the purse valued at $150, were taken.

A car window was broken to gain access.

Self-help program cultivates inner strength, creativity

Ryan got involved with PRH several years ago and was amazed at the results.

It helped her with parenting as well as with her role as a political wife, she said. Ryan's husband is Judge James Ryan, who sits on the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

"PRH helps us explore our fears and to get rid of them. You get to the root of the fear, let it live, and it goes away."

Unlike traditional therapy that involves regular sessions, PRH gives individuals the writing tools to help themselves for a lifetime, said Ryan, who leads PRH groups in Cincinnati as well as in the Detroit area.

"If you learn the tools yourself, you can heal yourself in a much, much faster period," she said.

And unlike Dale Carnegie-type courses, PRH doesn't deal with just exterior behavior.

"With PRH, you go deep within to find out what's inside," said Ryan. PRH has helped Ryan "feel confident in my own skin. Being a political wife, I don't need to pretend. I'm just me; take me or leave me. One of the biggest threats to growth is worry, worrying about what other people think."

Ryan also noticed immediate improvement in her relationships.

"It unleashed a lot of love and good feelings," she said. "It taught me to be more open and honest with my kids. It taught me I was a controlling person."

After 10 PRH sessions and more than 500 hours of training, Ryan became one of Michigan's five PRH animators.

Her next session is July 23-27, from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. in Redford. Cost is $120. To register, call 534-7859.

ED STARRETT of Redford and Lisa Schneider of Dearborn Heights can't say enough about the PRH sessions they took with Ryan.

positive gifts," she said.

"PRH was a little bit like a retreat, because I got away from my business," said Starrett, a retired teacher working as a registrar at Sacred Heart Seminary.

"But unlike a retreat, where you're told to reflect on charity or something else, you are in the driver's seat with PRH. You are going where you have to go, or where your feelings take you."

Through the sharing, I learned my problems weren't that bad," Starrett said. "It's amazing. There is something you get just from listening. It's a very gentle way of getting at certain things."

Starrett was elated to realize after the session that "a problem that had been bugging me for a long time, something I'd get buried, was gone. It was like getting a load off my back. You end up stronger; more at peace with yourself."

"For me, the world is a better place to live in," Ryan said. "Actually, the world is what you make it anyway. When you're carrying around a lot of junk in your mind, the world's a pretty lousy place. When you look at positive traits, the world is a better place. You are what you think you are."

RYAN CAN RELATE dozens of success stories. Many deal with people who've gone back to school to pursue interests squelched years before.

Clean as a whistle

On a scale of 100, these eateries are tops

If you're looking for Plymouth's cleanest restaurants, the Sweet Afton Tea Room and Connie's Catering are right up there.

The Sweet Afton Tea Room, which received a score of 99 on the Wayne County Health Department's 100-point scale, is spotless.

"It's wonderful," said Nancy Workman, public health sanitarian who inspects Plymouth restaurants for the county.

"They do a very nice job there and it shows."

Connie's Catering also received a 99 when last inspected.

"It's a very well-run and clean operation," Workman said.

Maya's Deli was rated 98. The only flaws concerned a kitchen wall, the corner of which was chipped and peeling, and a sink. The sink needs to be equipped with an "indirect waste system" to prevent potential backflow into the water lines, Workman said.

The Plymouth Manor, with a score of 84, does such a good job Workman would recommend it for your wedding reception. Everything is brand-new and up to code.

handle of a broom or mop."

McDonald's on Ann Arbor Road received a score of 92.

"They are very clean. They know food handling. We never have a problem with McDonald's."

A broken nozzle in the sink was about the only thing Workman found amiss.

THE SIDE STREET Pub scored 89 when last inspected.

Workman has "had to do a little pushing" there, she said.

"They just had a lot of repeat items (violations). The problems are pretty much repeated, however, they need to provide a sink in the kitchen for hand washing."

"They also need to conspicuously place a thermometer in the cooling units so they can test food temperatures."

The Box Bar & Grill earned an 87.

"The Box has good management, and good food handling and cleaning practices. They seem to know what the law is."

It was recommended that the Box get lids for ice bins and store raw meat on the bottom shelves of coolers, not on upper shelves, as drippings can potentially contaminate other food.

keep food covered in coolers; to paint all wooden shelving; to clean inside the coolers; and to hang up mops not in use.

HARDEE'S AT 150 Plymouth Road scored 84.

"Overall, they're good. The only critical violation was improper storage of toxic cleaning items."

"The Cozy Café really good. They have a pretty nice operation there. They know what they're doing. They had just one critical — not keeping the hand wash sink in the kitchen available at all times. There was a mop in the way when I was there."

The Plymouth Cultural Center also scored in the 80s.

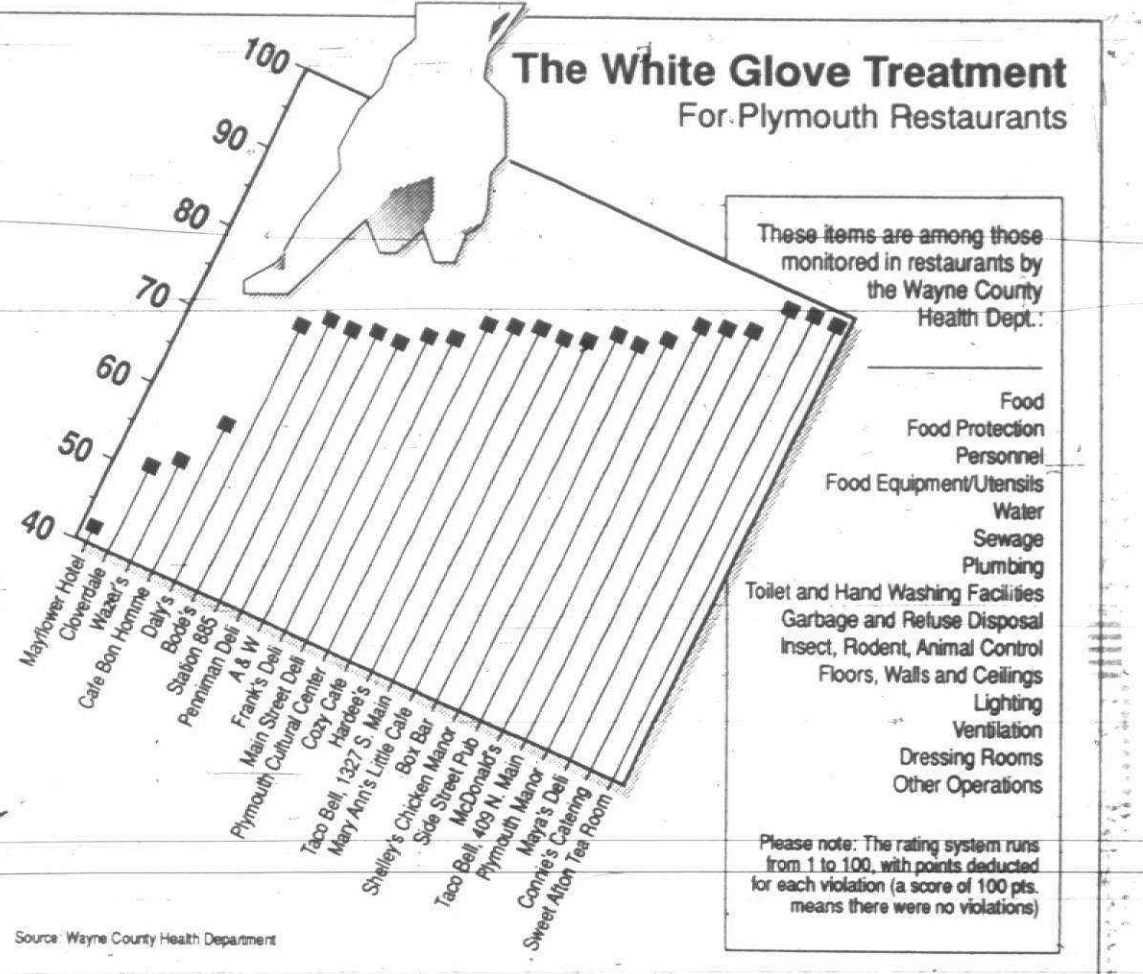

"They got an 82 for their snack bar and kitchen operation. They keep it up pretty nice in there."

THE MAIN STREET Deli was rated 79.

"Their problem is too much equipment in a small area. That presents a cleaning problem. Also, employees were smoking in the back kitchen area. Being so small, there shouldn't be smoking back there at all."

"The back screen door needs to be self-closing and latching. If it's ajar, insects and mice can get in."

Frank's Deli at 696 Mill, formerly The Old Village Sausage Shop, received a 78. It's in the midst of remodeling, adding equipment including a grill with a convection oven, Workman said.

THE TACO BELL at 409 N. Main Street at Mill scored 93. On her last inspection, Workman found no critical violations.

"They just need more space. There's too much in there and it creates a cleaning problem."

The other Taco Bell, at 1327 S. Main, was rated 84. Space is a problem there, too.

"They needed a hand wash sink in there, and they need to keep the ice covered."

The restaurant also needs to provide a shield for the lights "to prevent glass from shattering all over in case the light gets hit with the SHELLEY'S CHICKEN MANOR at Farmer and Starkweather also scored 87.

"They've always done a pretty good job."

The Manor was told to label food containers; repair rubber lining in coolers; fix leaking or plugged condensate lines; and to store pans up side down.

Mary Ann's Little Cafe, which was informed of this, and they brought it up to code to where we like it."

Penman's problems are due to its structure.

"The walls are old, and they need recovering and painting where they're marked up."

The back door has been fixed so it closes properly, and employees now go out front to smoke, Workman said.

COCKROACHES ARE a problem being addressed at Bode's Coffee House, which received a score of 75 when last inspected, Workman said.

"The basement is stoneflooded," which contributes to the problem, she said.

"They've done a lot of work on the basement, it gets sprayed. They're working with it, and our working relationship is really good."

"We're working now on changes we'd like to see as far as bringing the equipment and ventilation systems up to code. That's all you can ask; it can't be cleaned up overnight."

Bode's needs to install a three-compartment sink so there'll be a place to wash pans if the dish machine breaks down. Also, Bode's needs to install a hand wash sink in the food preparation area. Right now there are sinks in the dishroom and restrooms only.

STATION 885, hampered by a lack of space in the past, just enlarged its kitchen, Workman said.

"Now it's just wonderful. There are just some basics that need correcting; otherwise everything looks pretty good in there," said Workman, who gave Station 885 a 75.

Station 885 was advised to cool and heat food more quickly.

"When you cool or heat, it has to be done rapidly" to cut down on bacterial growth, Workman said.

The restaurant also was told to store meat on a lower shelf so that meat drippings can't contaminate other food stored in coolers.

DALY'S RECEIVED a score of 73.

"It's an older building that's kept up nicely. The people and conditions have always been very nice."

When Workman last inspected Daly's, whole raw eggs were being kept on the counter, which is a violation.

"Eggs have to be kept hot or cold, because they're considered potentially hazardous."

Donna Stein, Daly's general manager, said a problem with the restaurant's slop sink area has been fixed, which should bring up the restaurant's score.

"Most of our inspections have been in the 80s and 90s," she said.

"I feel that sometimes, they look for things. They come in, and if they can't find anything wrong with the temperature of the food, they look for nickel and dime items. But I think we need the health department. They help us stay on our toes."

partment. "That would only happen if we got no effort from them," said Workman. "We usually don't hold licenses like that, but we've been working with them for two or three years, so we slacked off on threats of closure."

ALEX'S ON Telegraph in Dearborn Heights is the only restaurant closed by the health department in recent years. Alex's was padlocked after no effort was made to correct repeated violations over a period of more than a year, Workman said.

The Mayflower was asked to submit remodeling plans in April 1989.

The health department told the hotel last November that it "strongly recommended that a professional food service consultant be obtained to help plan and initiate a remodeling project."

In December, Randy Lorenz of the Mayflower told the health department that even though the hotel was "as anxious as ever to update our facilities, our future planning is at a standstill as a result of problems we are experiencing with Amoco Oil at the Meeting House. Until that is resolved, we are unable" to go forward.

"We feel they have a job to do. When they say jump, we say how high? We consider our kitchen to be quite functional. It is certainly going to be even more so when we're finished."

— Randy Lorenz

The Mayflower is involved in litigation with Amoco Oil over the seepage of petroleum products into groundwater and soil under the Mayflower Meeting House from tanks at the Amoco service station at Ann Arbor Trail and Main.

The health department rejected Lorenz's request for a delay, informing the hotel that "you are required to submit to this office two sets of plans by March 15. Failure will result in denial of your 1990 food license."

PLANS were submitted recently, and remodeling is under way, Workman said.

"I will be in and out of there frequently, inspecting different stages of their remodeling," she said.

The hotel has until mid-July of 1991 to complete the job.

Whether the Mayflower will receive a food license before then is "something we have to discuss. It's possible they could receive one, then again, they can't get a license until a six-month inspection" is done, Workman said.

"It all depends."

Lorenz says he has no problem with the health department, and would have remodeled eventually anyway.

"We feel they have a job to do," he said. "When they say jump, we say how high? We consider our kitchen to be quite functional. It is certainly going to be even more so when we're finished."

"The health department has been very fair in dealing with us," added Lorenz. "We have no problems dealing with the health department."

Sports writer off base on soccer game

To the editor:
C. J. Risak's July 9 sports editorial regarding this summer's World Cup soccer tournament reminded me of a story that my father once told about his first experience with watching a baseball game.

My father had just immigrated to this country in the early 1950s from his homeland of Italy. He was standing on a street corner in New York City along with hundreds of baseball fans, looking at a store television that was showing the now-famous World Series match in which Don Larsen threw his perfect game.

"I was watching the game, and the Yankee pitcher kept throwing the ball, and nobody was hitting it. Everybody was glued to the TV set, and nobody was doing a damn thing!"

It took my dad a few years to realize what everyone was making such a fuss about during that afternoon in New York, but he eventually learned to appreciate the many subtleties and inherent beauty behind the game of baseball. It is unfortunate, however, that a journalist such as Mr. Risak has chosen to voice similarly ignorant comments, to thousands of Observerland readers, about the equally beautiful game of soccer.

Soccer is a sport that Mr. Risak seems to know little or nothing about. Sure, it has an occasional dud game like any other sport (look at last week's All-Star Game or the past Super Bowl for an example), but don't tell me that the World Cup had "very little drama" to it. The Cameroon-England quarterfinal match and England-West Germany semifinal contest were two hard-fought nail-biters where the hopes and dreams of an entire nation were riding on the outcome. If that isn't drama, then I challenge Mr. Risak to define the term.

And as for his statement that soccer players "are always falling down and rolling around in the grass," has Mr. Risak ever stopped to think why they might be rolling around? Has he ever felt what it is like to have someone trip you with a swift kick in the ankle while you are running at full speed? I didn't think so.

Maybe during the next few years Mr. Risak will learn to appreciate the amazing amount of individual athleticism and overall team discipline needed to successfully compete in the sport of soccer. Believe it or not, the game is much more intricate than simply consisting of 11 guys playing "a zone-like defense surrounding their own goal" or "endless minutes of mindless probing by the team with the ball." These statements make it clear that Mr. Risak has a long way to go before he picks up on the subtle beauty of this challenging sport.

My faith in Mr. Risak is not entirely lost, however. The World Cup is coming to the United States in 1994, along with a major professional league, so Mr. Risak will have to put up with soccer whether he likes it or not. Hopefully between now and then he will get a chance to see what soccer is really all about. Heck, if my Italian father can learn how to watch a baseball game, then Mr. Risak can certainly grow to appreciate the world's most popular sport.

EMS workers are heroes

To the editor:
Reading Diane Gale's article on June 18, 1990 concerning the American Legion honoring Fire Chief Mel Paulsen's brave and heroic rescue of two-year-old Scott Allen Kittle reminded me of some other heroes serving our community that many of us go unnoticed — the EMS units of Canton.

Many times I have seen these well-trained professionals giving everything they have in attempting to save lives and prevent physical and mental damage from occurring as they are being thrown around in the back of these units while rushing to a hospital. There are many people that have these fast-acting professionals to thank for their lives.

If something ever happened to me or my family where a Canton EMS Unit responded, I know we would be in the hands of professionals that never think of themselves this way, but truly are "heroes."

Slow group a problem for parade

To the editor:
I attended a parade today in Plymouth to celebrate our country's independence. The parade was good. The variety of the units and placement, no musical groups right next to musical groups, was well planned. What was not well planned was the placement of a slow moving group second to the last in the parade just ahead of the Plymouth Fire and Drum Corp. The slow moving group, Plymouth/Canton Chiefties caused a mile long gap in the parade. Roughly about 25 percent of the viewers south of the reviewing stand on Main Street and on Hartwood left because they thought the parade was over. Some people stayed because they knew the Fire and Drum Corp would be coming.

For future reference I would recommend that the slow moving groups be advised to do their short program, if they are flexible. If they aren't flexible or haven't trained to march at a faster pace, they could be placed behind faster moving groups, perhaps at the end of the parade where the Chiefties finished.

Environmental groups praise vote on bill

To the editor:
Recently the Michigan Senate held an important vote on SB 375, a bill that would force polluters to pay for cleanup of contaminated sites. There were votes on two versions of the bill. One was a strong bill, backed by the environmental community that would make polluters pay their fair share for toxic waste cleanup and would have resulted in faster cleanups.

The other had been so severely weakened that it was worse than no bill at all. Both were defeated.

The Senate will have a chance to consider these and similar bills again.

On behalf of our members and their other constituents, we would like to thank Sens. William Faust, D-Westland; Arthur Miller, D-Warren; and Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, for showing their true commitment to the environment. Each voted for the strong bill and against the weakened version.

Keep up the good work.

Recycling is worth the effort

To the editor:
Recycle: A word for the '90s. Finally, awareness has risen concerning the increasing problem of waste. Nationwide, we're advised to invest in recycling companies and to buy recycled products. Locally, recycling centers have sprung up in many surrounding communities. Communities such as Southfield, beginning voluntary recycling, and Dearborn, beginning mandatory recycling, have recognized the need for action. Our neighborhood school began recycling products taken in by students. Now Plymouth is investigating a bag and tag program for its residents.

Let's keep the wheel turning. Find acceptable land for composting. Begin recycling pick-up in all communities, and refuse pick-up of certain large items, thereby, forcing residents to dispose of these items in other appropriate ways.

People from Southfield and Dearborn who were interviewed on television expressed positive feelings toward helping the environment. No one described the recycling efforts as a burden. As a "recycler" myself, I have reduced curbside waste from three bags to one bag. Much of what I used to throw away is recyclable.

We have all worked together for other causes and I am sure we can continue to show support for this serious problem.

Cable viewers are asked to air gripes

To the editor:

City Commissioner John F. Vos III would like all cable television users in the Plymouth-Canton community who are experiencing service and/or reception problems with Omnicom Cablevision to contact him immediately. The Plymouth City Commission will be reviewing the contract between Omnicom Cablevision and the Plymouth area community to ascertain if the vendor is living up to its side of the contract in terms of both quality service and quality television reception.

There have been a number of public complaints regarding the reception on Omnicom Cablevision channel 22 (local WJBK-TV, CBS-TV affiliate) as well as other channels. A petition is being circulated at the present time to be filed with the Plymouth City Commission by some citizens regarding their complaints in this regard.

Please leave a telephone message for him at 433-1234 or correspond to the following address: John F. Vos III, Plymouth City Commission; c/o Plymouth City Hall, 201 S. Main Street, Plymouth, Mich. 48170.

Canton is a nice change

To the editor:

I was intrigued by the "Look at Suburban Crime" in the June 28th edition.

However, I do not agree with the assertion that "our communities more closely resemble the major city they straddle than the rural towns they once were."

I moved to Canton one year ago, after living in Detroit all my life. I can tell you that Canton is no way resembles Detroit. Plain and simple, Detroit is a jungle. One cannot safely walk down a Detroit street, even in the so-called "good sections." Neighbors watch each other's homes constantly to prevent burglaries. The elderly are being robbed and beaten on city streets and in bank parking lots on State Security days.

Living in Canton is a relief. I can leave my car unlocked in front of my home during the day. I can take walks, both in the daytime and evening. I no longer fear sitting outside in the evening. In short, I can live in Canton. I merely existed in Detroit.

It is a shame that our beautiful community cannot be crime-free. However, I can honestly tell you that Canton is a pleasant change from Detroit.

Batteries can be recycled

To the editor:

I read a news feature in the O & E regarding the Plymouth recycling center and how it is unable to handle lead-acid storage batteries. The article suggests that the consumer try an auto service center or a retailer of new batteries.

I do not know what kind of background research O & E reporters do for news features, however, the West-Northwest Yellow Pages carries many advertisements for companies that buy batteries under the listings of scrap metal and batteries.

At this point I should add that I am a buyer for Haggerty Metals. We have bought since our opening all types of lead-acid storage batteries. Occasionally we advertise in the O & E classifieds and draw an excellent response when we mention batteries in our advertisements.

Now that I think about it, no O & E reporters or city officials have inquired about car batteries so they probably do not read the classified advertisements.

Drawing a crowd?

There's room to roam at Ann Arbor art fair

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

There are certain myths about the Ann Arbor art fair, say organizers. "One of the myths is it gets bigger and more crowded every year," said Susan Froelich.

The former Plymouth Community Arts Council director handles public relations for the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair at South and East University, scheduled Wednesday through Sunday.

That fair, founded in 1960, is joined by two other fairs — the State Street Area Art Fair on North University, William, Maynard, Liberty and Thompson streets, and the Summer Art Fair on Main, Liberty and State streets.

The attraction of the annual art fair — the state's biggest — includes a variety of arts and crafts for sale, and people-watching as an estimated 300,000 to 400,000 usually show for

Mall shows signs of recycling

Laurel Park Place in Livonia is displaying signage through the mall listing the locations of area recycling centers.

The informational signage, produced in cooperation with the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, list the site addresses and phone numbers for recycling centers in Canton, Plymouth, Livonia, Northville, Birmingham, Farmington Hills, Lathrup Village, Southfield, Troy, Northville Township, Novi, Waterford Township, and West Bloomfield Township.

"As concerned members of the community, we are very pleased to provide this valuable information to our shoppers," said Katie Haywood, Laurel Park Place general manager.

The complete list of recycling centers is available in the management office or can be received by calling 462-1100 from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Laurel Park Place is west of Newburgh on the north side of Six Mile.

the fairs "depending on the weather," Froelich said.

"People come back for their favorites (artists). They want to know ahead of time is this or that artist in the fair this year," Froelich said.

How is the original Ann Arbor Street Art Fair distinguished from the other two fairs?

"We probably make a stronger attempt to be more heavily into the fine arts," Froelich said, including drawing, print making and photography.

Of the 120 artists invited to the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, 80 are typically invited back from the previous year.

"During every fair, a committee provides a score for each artist," Froelich said. Other artists — around 1,400 — apply for the remaining 40 spots.

"Some standout artists invited to this year's fair, Froelich names Jerry Birds of Grand Rapids, who makes miniature ceramic replicas of diners, and Daniel Roache, who creates aluminum wall sculptures.

"We don't have the pristine atmosphere of a gallery," Froelich said, as artists are assigned to 10-by-10-foot booths. "But we also make a stronger attempt to educate people," she said, as 20 artists give demonstrations of how their work is created.

That makes it easier for people to talk to the artist, and the artists seem to like that. They like the feedback, and talking to people to see how they're responding to their work."

As to profits the artists take home after the festival, "I guess the general public assumes they make a lot of money," Froelich said. While she said a small percentage will make $8,000 to $12,000, she said most artists probably make around $600.

"And there are always a few people that don't sell anything," she said. "Because street parking is limited, the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority offers shuttle buses to fair sites, from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday from the Briarwood Mall and Pioneer High School at Main and Stadium.

Froelich said the largest crowds are usually on Wednesday morning and Saturday.

'Madonna U' is considered

By C. L. Rugenstein
staff writer

Form follows function.

In the case of Livonia's Madonna College, officials believe the college has been functioning as a university for years. That form could soon be reflected in a change of status — and name.

"We've broadened beyond this campus," said Sister Mary Francilene, president of Madonna, which seeks university status.

The scope of program offerings we have, the size of the student population and the level of preparation of our faculty is very similar to that of a university. It encourages us to recognize the (institutional) level Madonna has achieved."

Reaction to the change has been favorable so far, according to a preliminary survey of the faculty by the college's University Study Task Force.

"The results were positive — it was a way of introducing the change, and if (the faculty) had any concerns or wanted to produce input, to do so," said Sister Francilene.

A more comprehensive survey will be sent to 14,000 alumni, friends and benefactors in the August issue of the school's quarterly report, "Madonna Now." That's the one the task force will be looking for.

Results from that and their recommendations on the change will be presented to the board of trustees in January 1991.

"WE'VE HAD several meetings so far," said the Rev. John Sajdak, task force member and assistant professor of philosophy at Madonna. "The main question was: 'What is the difference? between a college and a university?'"

The differences between a college and a university are not formally nailed down, Sajdak said. "It seems to be extremely fluid," he said.

It depends on the accrediting association to which a college belongs, he added.

Generally, universities are considered to be broader in scope, offering several areas of study, master's degrees and three doctorate degree programs.

Universities must also have a certain percentage of faculty with doctorate degrees.

A university can consist of several colleges. Madonna's five major divisions could become individual colleges — of nursing, business, humanities, science and technology and social sciences — with a change to university status. In all, Madonna offers 50 different programs including one for the handicapped, within the five divisions.

Colleges generally offer only a baccalaureate degree, with no post graduate programs.

According to information gathered by the task force, a lot of colleges call themselves universities despite that distinction, said Sajdak.

The main cause of concern for some faculty members was the perception of universities as primarily research institutions.

Said Dr. Leon Levitt, chairman of the management, marketing and economics department, "I think their fears are groundless. Our philosophy as a teaching institution would not change."

Sr. Francilene said they would request faculty members to do more research but, "it would be subservient" to teaching and liberal arts.

Greater prestige and the opportunity for wider support are among the advantages of changing from college to university status said Sr. Francilene.

It would also give the school higher visibility to attract more students, nationally and internationally.

"Most foreign countries define 'college' as being more a vocational school, and a two-year school in form."

Madonna currently has an exchange program with Lansdowne College in London, England, and is looking to expand its international outreach.

"IN THE graduating class this year we recognized we had students graduating from 15 other nations," including India, Cameroon, Tanzania and Nigeria, said Sr. Rose Marie.

Another characteristic of universities is that they write a lot of grants for funding.

Last year the college won a grant over 12 other colleges to provide an on-site bachelor of science degree program at Michigan Bell in Southfield. Madonna faculty travel to the site where 300 people are enrolled in the program.

They just won a Title III Strengthening Institutions Programs grant from the U.S. Department of Education to subsidize doctoral studies by faculty members.

A disadvantage of the change is concern that the school would be lost in bureaucracy and become impersonal, said Sr. Francilene.

"We want to continue with the staff, faculty and students working closely together," to maintain the intimate campus atmosphere.

If the board of trustees approves the status change in January, the school will have to apply to two other sources: the state board of education, and the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools, the national accrediting organization for this region. Both must also approve the change of status.

"MOST PEOPLE seem to be in favor (of the change) as long as it doesn't mean some sort of radical change from what we've been doing," Sajdak said. "The feeling is we've been doing the work of a university, all we have to do is change the name."

Sr. Francilene added, "People say Madonna is one of the best-kept secrets around. Well, it's time for the secret to be out."

Governor talks taxes, schools

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Gov. James Blanchard stressed his property tax reform package Friday, in an appearance before local city and township leaders.

But it was the "other" part of the plan — a proposal for giving more state money to less wealthy school districts — that caused the most concern.

Blanchard said his plan, limiting school property taxes to the rate of inflation, was the most responsible of the numerous tax-limiting plans under discussion in the state Capitol.

"This is a very substantial proposal," Blanchard said.

In other comments, the governor said he would lean toward an equity plan that would take away increases in state money already given to wealthier, out-of-formula school districts and distribute it among less-financially secure in-formula districts.

In-formula districts don't receive state aid for direct classroom expenses, but they do receive money for 29 "categorical" programs.

"I'VE ALWAYS felt the idea of cutting distributions (altogether) would be a mistake," Blanchard said.

Cutting increases means that wealthier districts, like Livonia, South Redford and Plymouth-Canton, could lose additional state aid for employees' Social Security benefits and pensions, as well as other select programs.

Losing any or all of that aid is a concern for those districts.

"I'm really in a quandary," said state Rep. Justine Barnes, D-Westland, whose district includes portions of the out-of-formula Livonia and in-formula Wayne-Westland schools.

"LIVONIA SAYS don't take away from us but give them (Wayne-Westland) more from someplace else," Barnes said. "But where do you find that money?"

Barnes, like Blanchard, addressed the Conference of Western Wayne legislative forum Friday in Dearborn. Livonia, Westland, Redford, Garden City, Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton are conference members.

In other comments, Blanchard continued to boost a state constitutional amendment that would dedicate lottery money to schools.

Though lottery money already goes to schools, the governor said, mandating it through a constitutional amendment would restore taxpayer confidence in the lottery system.

TRAVELING

If you have arthritis and are traveling this summer, reconsider precepts of home care; they may not be sensible abroad.

For instance, take the use of wheelchairs. The rule is that you should walk whenever possible. However, when traveling, often the reverse is better practice.

In airports, wheelchairs allow you to keep up with your companions and carry your personal luggage without undue strain. Advice that you can make up for extra effort with the prolonged sitting that accompanies flying, is in error. Seating is cramped, and airport chairs are too low to offer a respite from joint discomfort and fatigue.

If you travel by plane, ask to board first so you will not be forced to hurry on board. Plan to depart last so you will not be hurried by impatient exiting passengers. Try to arrange an aisle seat. Then, if flying conditions permit, you can walk the aisle every 30-40 minutes with no disturbance to others.

The same is true for tours. If you are to enjoy museums, churches or famous buildings, you must be spared the strain and ache that can accompany you when walking. If possible, go on the tour by wheelchair. You are not bringing attention to your impairment; but are showing that you can accommodate, but not give in to your limitations.

Tiny, tea sandwich not wimpy

To quote Andy Warhol, "Everyone is famous for 15 minutes." Quite frequently I will be standing in line at the grocery store or walking through a mall and get stopped by folks like you who usually say, "You don't look at all like the picture that runs every Monday."

Being almost six foot seven, with weight apportioned to height, I get noticed. Come to think of it, it's kind of hard not to get noticed when you're my size. Yes it is true that I get paid to eat. It's a tough assignment, but somebody has to do it.

But you don't have to be a card-carrying, 98-pound wimp to enjoy tea sandwiches. You know what I'm talking about. Those frilly little sandwiches that used to have their crusts removed and were spread with the likes of watercress, cream cheese, avocado and other tasty fillings and were more commonly enjoyed during Gatsby-era garden parties.

Tea sandwiches are experiencing a rebirth and once again are finding their way to the trays of experienced hosts and hostesses around metro Detroit. At one time only reserved for serving with tea, these demure little sandwiches are now making headway in upscale picnic baskets and coolers all over town. But forget the boiled ham slices and olive loaf — these sandwiches are being stuffed with unusual mixtures that will please the palates of 8 to 80-year-olds.

THE FILLINGS have pretty much stayed the same, with the usual watercress and pate-like ground meats. What has taken on a noticeable change are the wrappings.

Gone are the days of Wonder bread slices trimmed of their crusts. Instead we have stone ground wheats, fortified ryes that could accompany a hearty winter soup, delicate sourdoughs and crusted French baguettes. Pita bread triangles closed with frilly elongated wooden toothpicks and soft corn and flour tortillas are presently the rage — not to be outdone by footlong sub-type sandwiches that have the eater slicing off a desired wedge with a wooden-handled, serrated bread knife.

Pair these little finger sandwiches with a bag of chilled grapes and a few slices of imported cheese, and today's kitchen culinarian can wrap up a tasty luncheon or light dinner with minimal exertion and maximum raves from any who partake. You don't have to be Upper-East-Side Manhattanish and supply china cups and plates. A few bottles of trendy German beers or wine coolers or a randomly picked assortment of sparkling waters can do for these sandwiches what $60 per pound tea would do.

The Janes Gang got pretty tired of ironing out red and white checked damask picnic tablecloth and instead switched to a brightly colored flat sheet on which to spread the repast. To keep the picnic basket as light as possible for traveling, the sandwiches can either be stacked in plastic containers lined with lettuce leaf or, for a little added presentation, wrapped in pastel-colored tissue and tied with thin matching ribbons.

WHEN IT COMES to fillings for the assortment of breads, it's best to remember that anything that travels should not have mayonnaise or salad dressing, which spoils easily. Always remember to "keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold."

For a zesty alternative to mayonnaise, try a blend of four parts imported mustard to one part olive oil. This will act as a stabilizer when trying to hold chopped meats and poultry inside a sandwich.

If you think that all tea sandwiches belong on silver platters served only by white-gloved butlers at 4 in the afternoon, let me squelch all previous rumors. Even us big guys eat 'em — and love 'em.

Keep cool with cold salmon

Poached fish a summer treat

By Geri Rinschler
special writer

JAMES BEARD ONCE said, "The ultimate in summer dining is cold salmon." Although there are more than 200 edible species of fish in American waters, none of them share the culinary splendor of the cold-poached salmon.

Yet other finned friends like the haddock, whitefish, trout and red snapper are equally as delectable when poached whole. According to many food historians, the coastal Indians used salmon as a mainstay for their diet. The whole fish was salted, dried, smoked or baked but never poached, at least as far as we can tell.

Poaching fish is not as complicated as you may think. It's the best method to use for preserving the delicate flavor and texture of fish. To master the art of poaching, all you will need are a few basic tools, a foolproof recipe and a couple of guidelines for cooking and checking for doneness.

To complete the menu, add a simple mixed green salad (oak leaf lettuce, red leaf lettuce, arugula and radicchio) and a vegetable accompaniment. In less than 60 minutes, you will have transformed a "quick cook" meal into a dinner designed to serve grand chefs the likes of Escoffier.

Simply, a whole fish or fish fillets are poached by submerging them into a flavored liquid. Bring the liquid to a quick boil, then reduce the temperature to a lower heat. The liquid can be plain water or sea water. Most often the liquid is a mixture of water, vinegar, wine or milk, seasoned with herbs or vegetables, commonly known in the culinary world as a court bouillon.

FOR DECADES, the classic French chefs recommended adding fish bones and trimmings to the court bouillon, which then becomes a fish fumet.

The reason was that the strong-flavored liquid could be strained after poaching and used as a base to make an aspic or a sauce to glaze the chilled fish. Many of the "young" chefs of the '90s prefer to season the court bouillon with a variety of flavors, depending on the variety of fish.

Some, like those at R.L.K.'s Total Cuisine in Bloomfield Township, will poach a salmon or salmon fillet in chicken stock with water and wine and mixed vegetables.

Elwin Greenwald of Elwin's, Tu-Go, opening early August in downtown Royal Oak, poaches tuna for a tuna Nicoise in a mixture of fish stock, lemon juice, white wine, chopped shallots, parsley and bay leaf. Sometimes to give it a special flavor or a hint of Provence, France, he adds a pinch of lavender tea leaves. After poaching, "I reduce the poaching liquid and use it as a base for making a vinaigrette," says Greenwald. This is tossed over the vegetables when the tuna Nicoise is served.

No matter which court bouillon recipe you choose, always simmer the liquid first and allow it to cool before submerging the fish. Immersing a whole fish in court bouillon will cause the skin to rupture. But you may submerge chunks or fish steaks into the hot liquid.

The key ingredient, of course, is to select a very fresh, firm-fleshed fish. Very fat fish such as mackerel or herring or soft fish such as a bluefish are not good candidates for poaching because they tend to fall apart when cooked in a liquid.

IF YOU OWN a heavy-gauge fish poacher, by all means use it. Be careful that the fish you select fits comfortably on the poaching rack. If you don't own a fish poacher, whole fish can be prepared in a long or oblong, covered roasting pan fitted with a removable rack.

Ideally, when preparing the fish for poaching, the head and tail should be intact, and evisceration should be done through the gills. Most of the time, fish markets open the abdominal cavity completely. In that case, you will need to wrap the fish in two layers of rinsed cheesecloth.

Once the fish is wrapped, set it on the fitted rack and lower into the cold court bouillon. Place the poacher over medium-low heat, making sure the pan is centered on the front and rear burner on top of the stove. Bring the liquid to a boil. As soon as the liquid begins to boil, reduce the temperature. It is best to keep the temperature of the poaching liquid between 180 and 200 degrees.

There are three techniques to use when judging the doneness of the fish. I like to use all three in combination. The standard test was developed by the Canadian Department of Fisheries. It recommends measuring the thickness of the fish before cooking at the thickest point. Allow 10 minutes of cooking time for every inch. The perfect internal temperature of cooked fish should measure 140 degrees.

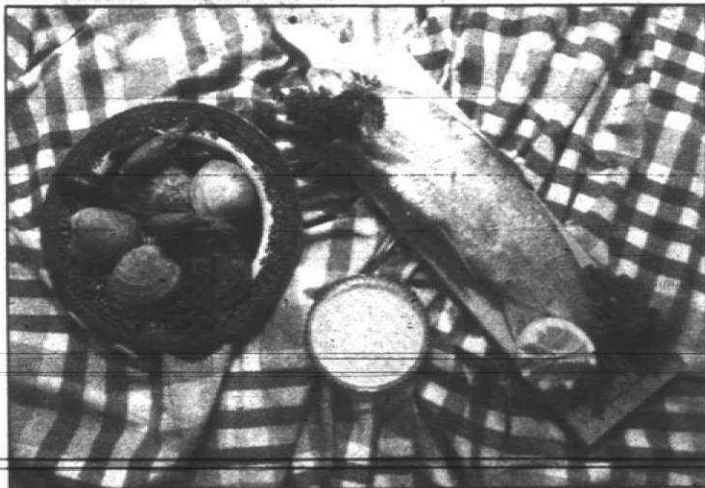

A small, instant meat thermometer works well, without puncturing a large section. Any fish, whether poached or baked, should barely flake when pricked with a fork. Gen-

Lowering the whole salmon into the fish poacher. Or, fish can be prepared in long roasting pan with removable rack.

Whole, poached, chilled salmon comes to table on serving board. Garnish is Italian and regular parsley with lemon.

In less than 60 minutes you will have transformed a "quick cook" meal into a dinner designed to serve grand chefs the likes of Escoffier.

Frozen yogurt: Choices keep growing

By Larry Janes
special writer

Remember the old saying, "I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream?" Well, that might have been the norm years back, but with the proliferation of yogurt shops sprouting up faster than summer weeds, move over ice cream, here comes something a little healthier and with a lot less fat.

Unless you've been living in the boonies with your head stuck in a cool Michigan foundation basement, you must have tried frozen yogurt. While a trip to the ice cream store of yesteryear offered a choice of chocolate, vanilla, strawberry and an occasional blue moon hand-dipped ice cream in a funnel-shaped, creamy yellow cone for just pocket change, today's ice cream shops are changing fast.

Most ice cream shops offer choices of hand-dipped ice cream, soft-serve ice cream, frozen yogurt and, now, even new nonfat frozen yogurt. Before, it was shoved into a cone or plopped into a shiny, stainless steel, bleached white-paper-cup-lined bowl. Period. Now it can be a plain cone, sugar cone, waffle cone, bowl, flurried, avalanched, dipped and drizzled with everything from caramelized walnuts to crushed Oreos. And the list keeps growing.

Take, for example, Sandro Scopone and his newly opened Polo Yogurt and Cafe on Seven Mile Road just west of Farmington Road in Livonia. Forget about the megabucks that went into the sleek contemporary decor, Scopone wants his shop to feature what he thinks is the best frozen yogurt money can buy, Honey Hill Farms.

BEFORE OPENING, Scopone and his partner, Tony D'Orazio, spent a weekend in Grand Rapids sampling 30 to 40 different brands of yogurt (some of us have it rough, eh?) only to decide on the Honey Hill Farms brand because of its rich taste, creamy texture and tasty sugar-free offerings. Knowing that man does not live by ice cream and frozen yogurt alone, Scopone also imported a classic espresso/cappuccino machine direct from Italy for what has to be the finest demitasse cup of imported coffee in town. All of this is in addition to the 12 flavor options of Guernsey Dairy hand-packed ice cream.

The flavors at Polo Yogurt change weekly but there's always the standard chocolate, vanilla and two more flavors in addition to two sugar-free frozen yogurt options. Rumor has it that soon Polo also will branch out to light deli offerings and homemade soups.

But what's really new in frozen yogurt offerings? Alan Bell, sales manager for Frosty Yogurt Products in Troy, says that the future holds some interesting twists. With the introduction of Olestra and Simplex, fat substitutes without the fat, coupled with Nutra Sweet, consumers can look for healthier options with reduced calories and better taste.

Health-conscious consumers soon will be able to partake of soft-serve frozen yogurt containing only 10 calories an ounce. That works out to a 50-calorie cone in flavors that would have Mae West asking for more. In addition, Bell claims the hottest item in frozen yogurt on the West Coast is soft-serve ice cream and frozen yogurt shops. Self-serve is already flourishing in many grocery stores. Customers soon will be able to serve themselves, get just what they wanted and pay by the pound, contrasted to being served by a pony-tailed teen.

Always looking over his shoulder and trying to keep up with customer requests is Evans Spyros, owner of Hagley's, in Orchard Place mall just south of 14 Mile on Orchard Lake

Ask food questions when you dine out

When eating at the local ethnic restaurant, don't let your good food sense fly out the window. If a dish listed on the menu is unfamiliar to you, make sure you ask how it is prepared and how large is the serving. Request a "people" bag to take leftovers home for the next day's lunch.

Following are some tips for ethnic eating so you don't have to let out your belt another notch.

CHINESE FOOD generally has a low-calorie reputation. However, it can be high in fat because of the amount of oil used for stir-frying or deep-frying.

Starting your meal with a good low-fat soup will also help curb your appetite.

Ask for sauces on the side and ask about the preparation method. Soy sauce is a standard ingredient in Japanese cooking. At 343 milligrams per teaspoon, go easy.

Indian food is an exotic, vegetarian delight. The exotic spices turn these dishes into tempting treats with limited calories.

However, steer clear of coconut milk and opt for yogurt rather than cream-based dishes. Indian Mulligatawny (vegetable soup) is a great way to start the meal.

MEXICAN FOOD is not off limits to a dieter, but keep it simple. Try rice and beans. They are high in fiber, low in fat and a great vegetable protein.

Many Mexican dishes use whole grains such as tortillas, which are made from corn. Make sure they are baked and not fried.

Request cheese, sour cream and guacamole served on the side so you can control the amount.

Good choices are chicken tacos, burritos and enchiladas. Eat as much lettuce, tomato and salsa topping as your stomach can handle. Fried beans are sometimes fried in lard, so ask the server about the preparation.

Try to pass up the fried ice cream dessert, or share this dessert with your dinner companion.

PASTA, TYPICAL Italian fare, can be great for low-fat diets as long as you limit the cheese, meat, butter and cream sauces.

Even though olive oil is used for

Salmon is cool, uncomplicated

erally, eight minutes per pound is allowed when cooking salmon, bass, red snapper, cod or haddock. A four to five-pound fish should serve six people.

AS SOON AS the fish is cooked, remove the pan from the source of heat. When serving the fish cold, allow it to cool completely in the court low to cool completely in the court bouillon. Transfer the fish to a long platter or board. Carefully remove the cheesecloth. You may wish to remove the skin before serving. The fish can be garnished with a multitude of thin lemon slices and bouquets of fresh herbs. Chill until serving.

At serving time, remove the skin if you haven't done so and divide the top fillet with a long, thin knife along the length of the fish. Evenly divide the fillet into manageable sections. To serve the lower fillet, pull the tail forward to remove the backbone. Divide the lower fillet into equal portions.

I like to serve cold fish with at least two chilled sauces. Generally, a simple chilled herb butter and a chilled garlic-herb mayonnaise. I have included a few recipes for sauces and for poaching liquids. Once you have mastered the technique, feel free to improvise your ingredients.

SIMPLE WINE COURT BOUILLON

1 quart water
1/4 cup dry white wine
1 sprig parsley
3 whole allspice berries
1 garlic clove, sliced
1 small onion, sliced
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 thin slice fresh ginger, cut on diagonal fore adding fish. There should be enough liquid to just cover the fish. If not, add a bit of cold water or cold white wine. Makes 1 quart or enough to poach one large fish, 4 to 5 pounds.

HERB BUTTER

15 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup fresh, rinsed tarragon or basil leaves, trimmed

1 cup watercress leaves
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup plain yogurt
1/2 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon dried basil, tarragon or dill leaves
Ground black pepper is manufactured by Smuckers and is the equivalent of one fruit exchange, according to the standards set by the American Diabetes Association. Hugley's also offers soups, sandwiches and a wide assortment of homemade muffins and cookies.

Another favorite hangout of the James gang is Scoops and More, conveniently located in Meadowbrook Village Mall in Rochester Hills. Serving up an assortment of non-fat frozen yogurts, in addition to Melody Farms' Prestige hard-pack ice cream, Scott and Alice Leifer make sure that the northwest suburbs' affection for frozen yogurt never goes unheeded.

Move over ice cream. With the emergence of frozen yogurt on the horizon, expect the ice cream manufacturers to begin introducing healthier and more gourmet products soon.

Seafood and berries make meal special

Although Mrs. Paul's Fish Sticks were frequent finger food fare when my sons were younger, today they are still a bit of a kitchen staple. While lobster, shrimp and anything they catch are sure to be happily and quickly consumed, there are other kinds of fish that they simply don't touch. Anything served with skin is immediately suspect, and if the entire head is still on, forget it.

family-tested winner dinner

Betsy Brethen

This week's Winner Dinner features a recipe for Seafood Fettuccine that is made with scallops, shrimp and pasta. Submitted by Gail Silverman of West Bloomfield, it is one of her favorite meals as it is easily put together at the last minute, and her three children love the mild taste of the seafood mixed in with the pasta.

Served with a mock Caesar salad, crescent rolls and strawberry shortcake, this dinner promises to be a swimming success for you and your family as well.

A trained medical assistant, Silverman works in a pediatrician's office one day a week. During the school year, she does a lot of volunteer work at her children's school, Green Elementary. Her boys recently finished their baseball season, which kept their family busy four nights a week. They are now enjoying a slower, more relaxed pace as they swing into summer.

Like so many women today, Silverman finds that her days are full and busy ones, and keep her on the go with little time to cook. Her husband periodically pitches in, though, and takes over the kitchen, creating wonderful stir-fried creations and more than a few dirty pots and pans. Thank you, Gail Silverman, for being our Winner Dinner winner of the week. Wishing you and your family all the best. I hope that you have a super summer.

AS A LAST note, just as there is a "Live-Aid," "First-Aid," and "Farm-Aid," it is my sincere hope that you might consider this column to be a kind of "Meal-Aid" for those nights when dinner is still nothing but a figment of your imagination at 5 o'clock.

So please be a sport and donate your family's favorite Winner Dinner to the cause. I'm especially looking for tasty pasta salad recipes. You, too, could help save a "wife."

Grilled foods and wine easy to put together

Summer meal planning usually means light, refreshing menus to take advantage of the outdoors.

Evening cookouts that allow you and your guests to kick back and bask in the waning rays of sun call for light, crisp, well-chilled wines that emphasize bright fruit flavors.

Grilling on the deck is fun and low-key because food preparation is simple and may be shared by friends and family. It is comforting to know that wine selection is also easy because there are few bad matches when pairing grilled foods and wine.

There are a few things to remember, since it is easy for the selected wine to be overwhelmed by the intense flavors of grilled meats and vegetables.

ALWAYS TRY TO balance both the weight and texture of wine and food.

Serve white and light red wines cool. Chilled wines are more refreshing and tend to contrast well with smoky, grilled fare. Select white wines that show some spice and red wines with low tannin. Light red wines are fruity and refreshing when lightly chilled. This is not the time to serve a big red wine at room temperature.

White wine suggestions include dry, Alsace riesling, pinot blanc or gewurztraminer, as well as the trocken orhalb-trocken styles from Germany. Sauvignon blanc from Sancerre in France's Loire Valley or California have the acidity needed to cut through most flavors from the grill.

Chardonnays emphasizing fresh fruit and high acidity are less expensive and more versatile than their oaky, barrel-fermented counterparts. We suggest chardonnays from France (Macon or Chablis), California or Michigan. Do not spend megabucks on a reserve-style chardonnay for a barbecue.

Red wines that can be chilled emphasize fruit rather than tannin. Included are French Beaujolais or Cotes du Rhone, Italian Dolcetto or Barbera, and California pinot noir, gamay beaujolais or merlot, plus lighter-style cabernet sauvignon and zinfandel.

focus on wine

Eleanor and Ray Heald

THE TEXTURE AND smokiness of grilled tuna, swordfish or salmon make great companions for fruity red wines with good acidity like Beaujolais, pinot noir or merlot, even when seasoned with herbs like basil, fennel or fresh cilantro. Yes, you read that correctly — red wine with fish.

Sauvignon blanc is a particular favorite for summertime entertaining. It has plenty of flavor and a palate-cleansing acidity that make it great for grilled breast of chicken. Because sauvignon blanc has a natural herbal note, it can handle fresh herb seasoning. A fruity-style sauvignon blanc is fabulous with grilled chicken salad garnished with melon and fresh cilantro.

Grilled chicken, seafood, turkey and game birds make attractive contrasts for dry riesling, pinot blanc and gewurztraminer from Alsace. These wines show good acidity and attractive floral and spice aromatics. Even salty or sweet and sour dishes make it with these bracing white wines.

When grilling, try a little guacamole on the side. Avocado intensifies the flavor of the wine, while the wine's acidity cuts through the avocado's richness.

Some wines are best with simply prepared meats without fancy marinades or sauces. Grilled steaks or lamb chops work well with a young cabernet sauvignon or Cotes-du-Rhone Villages, since the fat in the meat tames the tannin of the wine. Older reds work best with roasted

WINE SELECTION OF THE WEEK

1988 Zind-Humbrecht Pinot d'Alsace ($11) is produced from pinot blanc grapes. It's fresh and alive with multi-dimensional aromas and flavors that will enhance grilled or smoked foods. The finish is long, crisp and clean. Simply delicious.

1988 Beringer Fume Blanc ($9) is a ringer for a Sancerre from the Loire Valley. In a true French style, it sports lime citrus and herbal aromas with generous tropical fruit on the palate. It's drinking excellently now.

rather than grilled meats, so this is not the time to raid the cellar.

CHARDONNAY SHOULD be your selection with foods that feature understated flavors and seasonings. Fruity chardonnays harmonize best with simple dishes that enhance the wine's flavor rather than distract.

Try a grilled rock cornish game hen, lightly seasoned, with the William Hill Silver Label Chardonnay or a crisp Macon-Villages.

If your menu includes barbecued pork or beef ribs, with a spicy sauce or a roast with rosemary, theme or garlic, you need a red wine. California zinfandel, Italian Dolcetto or French Rhone wines offer earth, spice and fruit to handle more complex preparations. If pork, veal or lighter meats get to the grill, select a lighter red like the Clos du Bois Merlot or a Saintsbury Pinot Noir.

Don't forget that vegetables are easily prepared. Try grilling onions, zucchini, mushrooms, peppers, tomatoes, eggplant or sweet corn. If you are planning a vegetarian meal, select a variety of whites, light reds and roses. These may include a Simi Rose of Cabernet, Dry Creek Fume Blanc or the Beringer Gamay Beaujolais.

Whatever you plan, don't be afraid to experiment. You may discover the wine and food combination "to die for."

A few tips for storing concentrated juices

AP — The Florida Department of Citrus has the following tips for storing frozen concentrated orange and grapefruit juices:

- Place frozen citrus products in the freezer immediately and keep frozen at 0 degrees until ready to use. Citrus will store at this temperature for about 1 year.

- Keep frozen concentrated juice in its frozen state until ready to use.

If the freezer fails and the juice thaws, reconstitute immediately.

- To reconstitute frozen juice, place the unopened can in the refrigerator. Do not thaw completely. For best flavor, prepare juice according to instructions but allow the concentrate to continue to thaw in the juice pitcher or container.

- Shake or stir before serving to bring out peak flavor. Store in the refrigerator.

Mantle baseball

Curt Singleton pitches in relief Thursday for the Plymouth Salem Mickey Mantle baseball team. The game, however, didn't have a happy outcome for the Rocks. Salem had a four-game winning streak snapped by a 17-4 loss to visiting New Boston Huron. Four first-inning errors put the Rocks behind from the start. See story on Page 2C.

Prep skipper shares views on athletics

By Brad Emons
staff writer

JACK ROBERTS, it appears, is beginning to get a handle on things. Now in his fourth year as executive director of the Michigan High School Athletic Association, Roberts has been able to mesh some of his agenda with a diverse group of 712 member schools.

Roberts hasn't been able to push all his ideas upon the member schools — and realizes that's nearly impossible — leaving the job to the 18-member Representative Council.

However, he can help regulate and enforce the rules of the MHSAA, offer training programs for officials and coaches, raise the consciousness of sportsmanship, and enlighten its members about educational abuses.

Roberts, who met with the Observer and Eccentric sports staff Thursday, covered a variety of topics: Transfer rules, expansion of the football playoffs, travel restrictions, state championship venues (such as The Palace), drug testing, out-of-season activities, sportsmanship and reporting violations.

Roberts may be conservative in his approach but progressive in his thinking about the way high school sports are conducted.

Following is a look at all the topics he discussed:

- The transfer rule had been challenged severely during his first few years, but the MHSAA has withstood those challenges in litigation, he said.

- Another problem, however, cropped up recently about so-called "foreign exchange" students, but according to Roberts, "we've tightened some of those things up."

- Travel restrictions have also come up, for instance the staging of the "Big Michigan Shootout," a holiday basketball tournament at The Palace.

Promoters of the game have entertained thoughts of bringing teams in beyond the 600-mile (round trip) travel restriction limit, many from states other than those bordering Michigan (Wisconsin, Indiana and Ohio).

"The more travel, the more television, the larger the trophies, the more excessively the program is treated," said Roberts, "the more likely people are to break rules regarding recruiting, regarding season limitations, and the more likely individuals are to specialize in a sport, which studies say are not good for kids."

Holzer Ford improves LCBL standing

Tom Holzer Ford made a move to get out of the cellar in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League last week, winning back-to-back games.

Holzer blanked Total Travel Values 3-0 on Wednesday, a day after beating second-place Walter's Home Appliance 5-4 in a makeup game Tuesday.

Andrew Margolick tossed a four-hitter and pitched a complete game against Total Travel. He limited the walks to three and struck out two.

A two-run single by Brian Daniels in the first inning was the winning hit, and Steve Ross added an RBI single in the sixth. Jim Izzo had two hits for Holzer Ford.

Rick Rachner pitched 5½ innings for Total Travel, giving up all seven Holzer hits and three walks. He fanned three.

HOLZER FORD rallied from a 4-0 deficit to beat Walter's, winning the game with a four-run seventh inning.

Daniels, who was 3-for-3 and scored Holzer's first run, started the last-inning rally with a single. After walks to Rob Baumgartel and Chris Bronis, Greg Hysell hit a two-run single.

Hysell tagged up and went to second on Ross' fly ball to center field, and Bronis scored the tying run when Izzo hit a ball of pitcher Chad Wrona's hand. John Frazzini followed with a single off reliever Steve Owens that knocked in Hysell with the winning run.

Ross went the distance for Holzer, allowing seven hits and three walks. Wrona, who entered in the fifth inning, was the loser.

John Gotts had a two-run single and Jerry Koester two hits for Walter's.

David Houghtby remained an undefeated pitcher Wednesday when he hurled a two-hitter in Walter's 5-0 defeat of Little Caesars. Houghtby pitched no-hit ball over the last four innings, struck out five and walked four.

JEFF PENDELL was 3-for-4. His two-run double gave Walter's a 3-0 lead in the third inning, and he added an RBI single in the sixth. Koester had one RBI with a groundout.

Rich Roy also went the distance for Caesars, giving up six hits and issuing nine walks. He struck out one.

In another Wednesday game, Wendy's of Ann Arbor defeated Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury 11-6.

Beau knows best route to Mile win

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

The local favorite outdueled the odds-on favorite Saturday at the 42nd annual Michigan Mile at Ladbroke DRC.

Beau Genius, a horse trained by DRC's own Gerry Bennett, edged heavily favored Opening Verse in one of the most thrilling Miles in recent memory.

Making a strong run down the backstretch, Beau Genius beat Opening Verse by a nose and gave the 11,493 fans in attendance reason to smile — even if their money was on another horse.

The win was the seventh straight for the Canadian horse, who is making his owners (Dr. Brian Davidson and Joseph Shiewitz) and Bennett very proud. The guaranteed $300,000 purse included $180,000 for the winner.

"This is unbelievable. I'm very horse racing

pleased and have no words to describe it," said Bennett, DRC's leading trainer. "This is the greatest thrill of my life. No money can buy a thrill like this. This was a win for everyone in Michigan, not just for our jockey (Ricardo Lopez) or the trainer and owners."

BEAU GENIUS, with odds of 9-2, paid $15.20 to win, $4.80 to place and $2.60 to show. His time for the 1¼-mile course was 1:48.8.

Opening Verse, considered one of the finest handicap horses in North America, also had an advantage in jockey Angel Cordero Jr., a Hall of Fame rider. But Lopez, a native of Panama City, Panama, showed he was ready for the challenge.

Lopez, who won the 1985 Michigan Mile with horse Badwagon Harry, is used to the Winner's Circle, having won his 1,000th U.S. race at DRC in 1988. None of the previous victories, however, compared to this one.

Known as the Midwest's best sprinter, Beau Genius put any doubts to rest about his ability to race longer distances. In contention the entire way, Beau Genius took the lead for good with about one-sixteenth of the course remaining. Coming in a distant third was Western Playboy, ridden by jockey Randy Romero.

The sloppy course, muddied by heavy rains earlier in the day, might have affected some of the horses. Not Beau Genius, Bennett said.

"THIS HORSE don't mind tough situations," Bennett said. "He's never been beaten in the mud and he loves the mud. He's the best horse I've ever had and outside of today, I've never asked a horse to run as hard as he did. He had to run all-out to win today."

He also had kind words for Lopez. "Ricardo is right there with all the best riders," said Bennett. "He's very intelligent and a very strong finisher. Very few jockeys can outrun him, horse to horse, down to the wire."

The second-place finish disappointed Cordero, a 47-year-old in his 30th year of racing. He ranks third on the all-time list with 4,478 wins, trailing only Bill Shoemaker and Laffit Pincay Jr. But on Saturday, he had to take a back seat to Lopez,

1990 MICHIGAN MILE Final Results
1. Beau Genius (1:48.8, paid $15.20 to win);	2. Opening Verse; 3. Western Playboy; 4. Clever Trevor; 5. Tritemrit; 6. Mercedes Won; 7. Matthew's Moment.
Last year's winner was Present Value, a long shot who paid $100.60 to win.

who weighed in at 116 pounds — six pounds lighter than Cordero.

Cordero believes his added weight had something to do with his second-place finish.

"The difference in the weight made a difference in the race," said Cordero. "The winner did a helluva job, though, and I don't want to take anything away from him. It was pretty tight coming down the stretch."

"THE WINNER was running best at the end. Coming back to Michigan was OK. We won one race (The Livonia Stakes earlier in the day) and came in second in another one. Opening Verse is a very nice horse and I'm proud to be his rider."

Bob Raymond, public relations director for DRC, called Saturday's Mile the best he's seen since he started the job in 1985.

The rain, which fell most of the early morning hours Saturday, didn't have an adverse effect on the turnout at the gate, Raymond said. The betting handle for the Mile of $309,990 topped last year's on-track betting total by nearly $100,000, Raymond said.

He estimated that the day's 12 races could attract more than $2,000,000 in bets.

"I think we're very happy with the attendance, considering the weather conditions," Raymond said. "The betting is going very well, and we're on par to having a record handle, as far as our on-track and off-track betting is considered."

The stretch duel between Beau Genius (right) and Opening Verse (3) went right down to the wire before Beau nosed ahead for the Michigan Mile win.

Pro bowlers plan visit to Westland

MARK ROTH AND Amleto Monacelli, two of the top stars in professional bowling, will be in the area for personal appearances Saturday, Aug. 18, at Oak Lanes in Westland.

The event is the grand re-opening of the newly expanded and remodeled bowling center. The center has expanded from the original 34 lanes to 50 and has incorporated the new Brunswick System 2000, the ultimate in pinsetting equipment.

Roth, the all-time, leading money winner on the pro tour, has long been established as one of the all-time great professionals.

Monacelli, a young pro from Venezuela, was selected as the Pro Bowler of the Year last season and is regarded as one of the top competitors on the pro circuit.

Their appearances will be from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 8-11 p.m. Roth and Monacelli will be signing autographs and answering bowling questions.

On the same day, youth registration for fall leagues at Oak Lanes will be held. Come register the kids and spend time with some of the sports finest performers.

Tony Camerella of Westland has been bringing rights with bowling, thanks to a high mark of 298 rolled back in 1982. Earlier this month, Camerella went one step better when he recorded a hole-in-one on the 142-yard fourth hole at Independence Green Golf Course in Farmington Hills.

Camerella used a six iron, and perhaps you will be able to register that elusive 300 game next season in the Bel Aire Senior House League in Farmington Hills.

Bowling Digest is a fine bowling publication available on newsstands. There is a wealth of interesting reading for all bowling enthusiasts.

The most recent edition features an article about a local bowler, Tony Stipak of Redford. Stipak has been one of the fine classic bowlers in the area and is currently on Team USA bowling in international competition.

The Stipaks are a real bowling family. With wife Cheryl, a fine women's league competitor, who once carried a 20 average.

The same edition contains an article about bowling professional Brian Vos. Written by Chris Warren, the article explains how a 115-pound bowler, standing 5'4, can generate a powerful throw just to beat out competitors twice his size.

Hawks win N.J. title

The Michigan Hawks under-16 girls soccer team won the championship of the Jersey Area Girls Soccer Tournament last weekend in Princeton, N.J.

The Hawks, champions in Michigan, defeated the Beechmont Blitz, the Ohio camp, 2-0 in the final of the second largest all-girls tournament in the country.

The Hawks reached the semifinals after beating a Connecticut team and two New Jersey teams. The Livonia-based team whipped the Ohio runner-up, Hammer P.C., 4-0 in the semifinal.

Seven players scored goals during the tournament. Kara Nance, Shannon Wilkinson, Julie Dwyer, Natalie Neaton, Dana Pososki, Ragen Corpe and Molly Ferguson. Other team members are Kim Popik, Tracy Morrell, Lisa Thomas, Kristen Westveer, Aimee Cousino, Patty Shea, Kristi McCough, Kim Phillips and Lisa Grace, who didn't play in the final New Jersey tournament because of an injury.

Mantle team stumbles

Plymouth Salem won its fourth consecutive Mickey Mantle baseball game Tuesday, but the win streak fell apart Thursday.

After beating host Redford Union earlier in the week 12-7, Salem was dealt a 17-4 setback by visiting New Boston Blues.

Tom Davey pitched only a third of an inning Thursday, allowing eight runs on four hits.

Salem's defense, however, made errors on three straight ground balls. The Rocks made four of their five errors in that inning.

Jeff Belisle drove in a RBI single and Salem scored its other runs on passed balls.

ON TUESDAY, a five-run fifth inning gave Redford Union a 7-6 lead, but Salem rallied with three runs in the sixth and seventh innings.

Belisle smashed a two-run homer in the sixth, and Chris Tomas followed Ted Gundry's double with an RBI single.

Tomas was the winning pitcher in the game.

Roberts leads MHSA into '90s

"I look at those attention grabbing things, I'm looking at the big picture and it's not good for kids."

• The expanded state football playoffs has also been a hot topic. The expansion from four to eight classes gives more schools a chance to qualify, which has been well received by members of the coaches association.

"Personally I was not for expansion," Roberts said. "And at some upper administration levels it's not as well received, but it gives some of the smaller schools a chance to proceed. There's less enthusiasm out-state, but in places like Macomb County it's been received very well."

Having enough venues for an expanded playoff format has also become a concern, but Roberts said all semifinal sites will be played on artificial surfaces with the first and second round sites being hosted by the top point getters.

Roberts also said that Friday night semifinal games have been eliminated in favor of Saturday afternoon games. Last November, Roberts was well aware of the criticism he received for allowing a game between Farmington Hills and East Grand Rapids to be played under inclement conditions at Flint's Atwood Stadium.

"We will double up twice on Saturday, 11:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. if necessary," said the MHSA director.

• Roberts was posed a question regarding the issue of drug testing for athletes in the Melvindale Schools.

"Right to Life — Lifespan of Metro Detroit" is having a bowling fund raiser Sunday, July 29 at Woodland Lanes in Livonia. Participants must have a pledge sheet which can be obtained by calling 422-4330 or 274-1435.

• The "Good Old Days" are back again as bowling centers are returning this year with bargain rates for bowling and refreshments, beginning Aug. 3. Rates and times may vary, so check with your local establishments.

Country Lanes (Farmington Hills): Monday Night — Kelly Bennett, 275. Bud Bogarty, 268. Clifford Wells, 268. Tuesday — Nick Waininger, 300 and 1,076 (four games).

Super Bowl (Canton) — Battle of the Series League vs. Leveaux, 253. Dave Bird, 246. Mark Monaghan, 247. Dave Kowalski, 693.

After taking first place away from the Lakes with an 8-7 victory earlier in the week, the Bulldogs edged the Wildcats 5-4 and remained the only unbeaten team in the league with a 4-0-1 record.

The Hawks stayed atop the Eagle Conference by a slim margin despite suffering their first setback in an 8-5 loss to the Falcons, who climbed to within a half game of the Huskies.

The Bakes Conference standings are: 1. Bulldogs, 4-0-1; 2. Spartans, 2-1-3; 3. Lakers, 2-1-2; 4. Wildcats, 0-0-0. The Eagle Conference standings are: 1. Huskies, 3-1-1; 2. Falcons, 3-1-0; 3. Wolverines, 1-2-2; 4. Broncos, 0-3-1.

Jack Roberts
MHSA executive director

The MHSA chief has been made aware of studies revealing that eight percent of high school students have used steroids.

"It seems inappropriate to test just athletes because those figures are no greater than the average student," he said. "Drug testing is expensive and philosophically I have difficulty with it. It's no greater problem for the athlete than the general student population. What I was surprised about is that study said girls used steroids just as much and that surprised me."

• Perhaps the most touchy subject Roberts has faced is out-of-season sports activities, primarily summer basketball.

Roberts has advocated a blackout period in the month of July, but the Representative Council has differed, urging individual conferences and leagues to examine the policy.

"What a lot of school districts object to and I object to is a group of players and their coaches going as a unit to play 25 or 30 games in the summer, that destroys the integrity of it and what interscholastic sports is meant to be," Roberts said. "It requires specialization that I was talking about before. Those youngsters don't have the choice to choose something else in the summer. Some do have talents and needs in other areas than basketball."

"Some people benefit from that rigorous schedule, but large numbers do not. Some schools want our office to lead the charge to eliminate those things. We're not in position to lead the charge. We're looking to the leagues and conferences to lead that charge."

"As for sportsmanship, Roberts said he's raised the idea and 'a lot of schools have responded very well by taking the initiative.'"

"The schools have taken on the charge better than I anticipated," he said. "We've seen some positive results. We don't get any less reports about poor sportsmanship, but we're getting less reports about less significant acts now, to me, that's progress. The standard of what we tolerate is a lot less than what we did tolerate two years ago."

• As far as officials, Roberts would like to see the MHSA strengthen its evaluation and certification standards during the '90s, as well as educate coaches.

But for now, Roberts says his staff does not have the resources to properly get the job done.

Concerning rules enforcement, Roberts' principal investigator (besides himself) is Jerry Cywog, an assistant director and former football athletic director and principal from Escanaba. Of the 10 violations that occurred last year, nine of the schools reported themselves, a good sign according to Roberts.

As for the future, Roberts is looking ahead to the '90-91 school year.

"We have to remind our schools that regulation and control is OK," he said. "We were created, the MHSA and all other state associations around the country, not to run tournaments or to do sportsmanship campaigns, but the main reason we were created was to control, to limit the interscholastic program in an educational framework, to eliminate excesses of inter-state and limit national competition that occurred back in the '20s."

"I have to keep reminding myself of that, but that's OK. Aggressive coaches, parents, and booster clubs and the media, they'll all promote the program, but the unique function is to control the program and keep it in the proper framework. And I don't apologize for that. Even with the corporate sponsors for our tournaments, we have to keep reminding myself. That's my biggest challenge facing us this decade. But somebody's got to do it. That's our rudder. That's why we were created, to limit the excesses. Bigger is not better."

Don Massey Cadillac

"#1 LEASING CADILLAC DEALER IN THE WORLD"

"Now, there's a new Cadillac in your future"

$398

a month/36 months*

It's a great time to improve your driving. Because you can get a 36-month lease on a new Sedan de Ville—America's most spacious front-drive sedan—for just $398 a month.

Up to a $2,000 cash bonus. You can receive a $2,000 cash bonus direct from Cadillac when you purchase a new Cadillac Seville or Eldorado. Or a $1,500 cash bonus direct from Cadillac on a new Cadillac Fleetwood, De Ville or Brougham. See your dealer for details.

Whichever of these Cadillacs you choose, your investment is protected by 24-hour Cadillac Roadside Service® and backed by Cadillac's 4-year/50,000-mile Gold Key Bumper to Bumper Warranty.

But act promptly. Because the selection of these luxurious Cadillacs continues to diminish. And you don't have to be Arnold Palmer to appreciate outstanding drives like these.

*You must take retail delivery out of dealer stock. Tax, license, title fees and insurance extra. Mileage charge of 10 cents per mile over 45,000. Payments may be slightly higher in Alabama, Arkansas and Texas. Lessee pays for excessive wear and use. GMAC must approve lease. Example: Sedan de Ville, $29,635 MSRP. Includes destination charge. Total of monthly payments is $14,328. First month's lease payment, $400 refundable security deposit, $6,490 dealer/customer capitalized cost reduction for a total of $7,246 due at lease signing.

Option to purchase at lease end for $13,040. Purchase option price is fixed at lease signing and varies by vehicle model, equipment level, usage and length of lease. See your participating dealer for qualification details.

See your dealer for terms of this limited warranty.

Making a 'Drive' for a 'three-peat'

By Pat Schutte
special writer

They shuck and jive, throw bombs from the shotgun, juke, hit, snap and boot field goals.

Football . . . America's most explosive team sport.

And what's usually reserved for the fall is at an arena near you.

Arena football. They call it the "indoor war." They could have called it "microwave football."

The eight-on-eight energy game is compacted onto a field not much larger than the surface of a hockey rink and contained at both ends with huge nets that keep the ball in play on kicks and passes. Arena football puts the fans right on top of the action — football in your lap.

"This is excellent," shouted Scott

Hall, 18, of Detroit, who was the proud recipient of a brand new Arena football that missed its mark on the field and found its way to his seat in the seventh row at Joe Louis Arena.

Arena football, better known as Arenaball, was the brainchild of Jim Foster, who, while watching an indoor soccer game at Madison Square Garden, came up with the idea for the hybrid-of-American football.

The league has been in existence since 1987, starting up with four teams. It averaged 11,279 in attendance for the 12-game regular season, a record for first-year arena sports.

The abridged version of American football caught the attention of Red Wings owner Mike Ilitch, who put together a team for the 1988 season.

Winning their 12 regular season games, the Detroit Drive went on to capture the Arenaball championship trophy with a 24-13 victory over the Chicago Bruisers.

LAST YEAR, the Drive won its second Arenaball championship with a 39-26 victory over the Pittsburgh Gladiators in front of 12,046 fans at Joe Louis Arena. These days, the Drive averages 10,516 fans a game, well above the league average of 7,535.

So the Detroit Pistons aren't the only team that has a chance for a "three-peat."

They go all out to make the whole evening as entertaining as possible. Beginning with a truck pull-type announcer's introduction of the players, one by one they sprint out of a tunnel and billowing fog and race down a strobe-lit gauntlet as "Fanfare for the Common Man" by Emerson, Lake and Palmer charges up the fans.

"Introducing the starting lineup for your Detroit Drive," shouts the announcer just as if "Bigfoot" was going to crush some junk cars.

"Yeah, Yeah," responds the crowd.

A spotlight picks up each player as he exits the tunnel and follows him across the darkened floor, where he meets his fellow teammates with a round of high fives. Shades of the old indoor soccer league and the Detroit Lightning's amazing disco ball and laser show.

When the curtains are drawn on the theatrical opening, fans are treated to some real football. Although you may compare Arenaball to the NFL, much in the same way the CBA is compared to the NBA (like the minor leagues or something), the hitting, athletic ability and intensity is at the same level as the NFL. And you get to see more scoring.

end zones and the padded walls that line the field, no more than a couple of feet from the boundaries, the game showcases another interesting feature that you don't see in the NFL. Most of the athletes play offense and defense.

"You have to make a lot of adjustments," said Greg Orton, a University of Nebraska graduate in his third year with the Drive. He plays both the offensive and defensive line.

"Defense is always attack, attack, attack, while offense is much more passive," he said. "It's kind of like high school, when a lot of us played both ways. You have to be in a lot better shape to keep up."

Teammate Robert Banks of Ann Arbor and Adrian College agreed.

"You don't see the big 300-pound plus players playing Arena football like you would see in college and the NFL," he said. "You see much more versatile athletes playing this game."

Many of the players hold college degrees and play Arenaball pretty much as a hobby. (You won't find mega-buck contracts here. All players make $500 per game.) Others use it as a chance to be noticed by the NFL or scouts for the stagnant International Football League.

The main draw for these players, though, is their love of competition and the game of football.

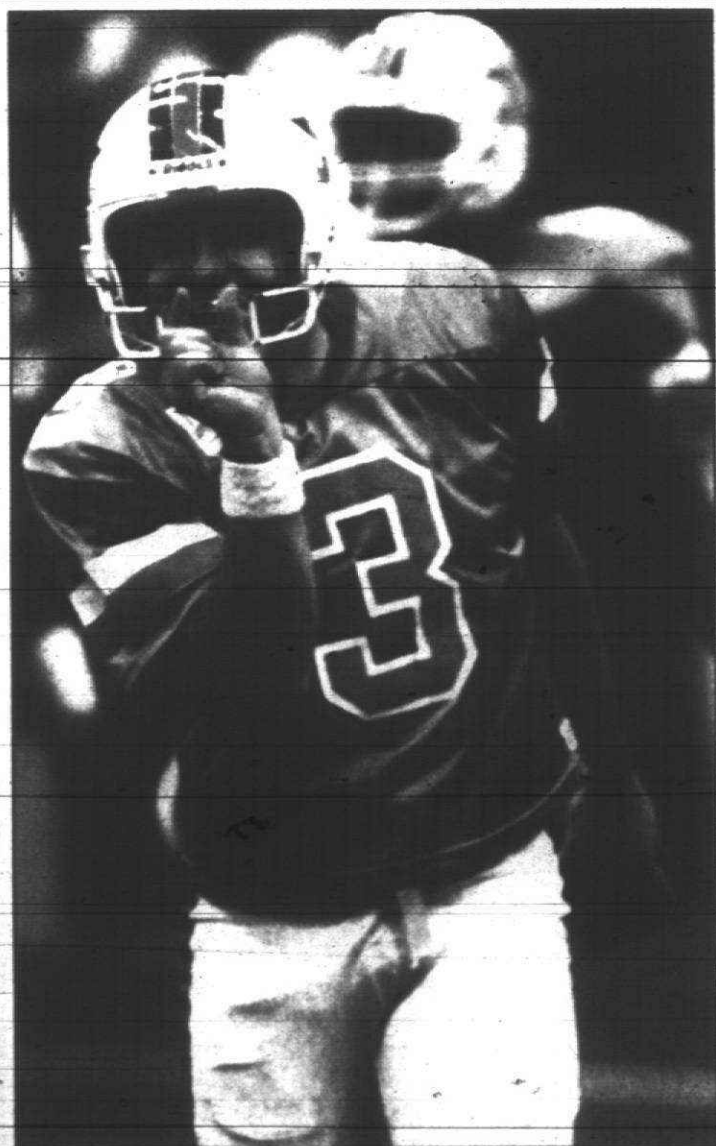

ASKED WHETHER or not he had aspirations for making the NFL, veteran Detroit Drive and USFL Michigan Panther place kicker Novo Bojovic said no. Football provides him with "special feelings that keep the memories alive," he said.

Arenaball. "The Indoor War." If you can't wait for the Lions, Wolverines or Spartans to begin their seasons, you may want to score some seats at Joe Louis Arena on Friday, July 20, for an 8 p.m. plastic-poppin' showdown with the Albany Firebirds.

Just the facts . . .

At a glance, here's the differences between the National Football League style of football Americans are used to seeing each weekend during the fall and Arenaball that's played during the summer.

The Field: In the NFL, players traverse a field 100 yards long and 160 feet wide. In Arenaball, it's 50 yards by 85 feet.

Scoring: Scoring is the same in both leagues except Arenaball allows two-point conversions by pass, run or drop kick.

Field Goals: Arenaball field goal attempts are the same as in the NFL except the ball is still alive if it rebounds off one of the nets on either side of the goal post.

Kickoffs: Kickoffs in the NFL are from the 35-yard line and from the goal line in Arenaball.

Punting: Allowed in the NFL, but a no-no in Arenaball.

Game Clock: Unlike the NFL, the clock doesn't stop for out of bounds plays in Arenaball or for incomplete passes unless in the last two minutes of play each half.

Game Time: Both leagues have four 15-minute quarters.

Game Length: While NFL games take about three hours, Arenaball games usually last just over two hours.

Line-Up: NFL teams have 11 men on the field per team, while Arenaball teams have only eight men.

Rosters: There's 47 on a normal NFL sideline and just 18, including two reserve players, for Arenaball.

Players: NFL players specialize in one discipline while Arenaball players (except for the kicker and quarterback) must be able to play offense and defense.

Defense: Only man-to-man defense can be played in Arenaball, while the NFL can also play zone defense.

Nets: Rebound nets on each of the Arenaball goal line are eight feet high and 30 feet wide and keep the ball in play. The NFL has no such nets.

Sidelines: NFL players simply run off the field when going out of bounds, while Arena players hit a four-foot high barrier.

Turf: All Arenaball games are on artificial turf. Half of the NFL teams still play on natural grass.

'You don't see the big 300-pound plus players playing Arena football like you would see in college and the NFL. You see much more versatile athletes playing this game.'

MOVING PICTURES

Sam Wheat (Patrick Swayze) is a ghost who realizes that he can be heard by psychic Oda Mae Brown (Whoopi Goldberg) in "Ghost."

'Ghost': It's the sleeper movie of summer 1990

According to the smart money, the movie to beat this summer is Jeff Daniels and John Goodman's "Arachnophobia" (B-, PG-13, 95 minutes). That's hard to believe given the $82 million box-office for "Dick Tracy" after only 24 days. "Arachnophobia" isn't bad but let's nominate "Ghost" (A-, PG-13, 105 minutes) as the sleeper of the summer.

Sam Wheat (Patrick Swayze) is a New York banker, living with — and loving — artist Molly (Demi Moore). Friend and business associate, Carl Bruner (Tony Goldwyn), help Sam and Molly refurbish a loft (rather rapidly and effortlessly) in very high style.

Tragedy strikes as an unknown assailant kills Sam during a street robbery. But Sam's spirit remains on earth to protect Molly who, it turns out, is in great danger. "Ghost" is attractive, amusing, entertaining, an intelligent film that defies easy categorization.

It's warm and inspiring, portraying the very best kind of romance, as Molly and Sam's love transcends physical boundaries. His unfinished business in this world is twofold — to warn Molly of the danger she faces and tell her he loves her, something he's failed to do properly while still alive.

BOTH ARE important tasks, and the film's sensitive interpretation of these emotions touches our hearts with good feelings, particularly when Sam achieves that second goal.

Sam's struggle to contact Molly generates some excellent comedy as he enlists the help of a charlatan, Oda Mae Brown (Whoopi Goldberg), a medium who doesn't realize she has the power — and an attitude. Goldberg's performance is finely tuned comedy and one of her best screen roles.

Keeping the comedy flowing, West Bloomfield resident Brenda Rubin, mother of scenarist Bruce Rubin, makes a cameo appearance as a nun. But, beyond the laughter and romance, there's a serious thriller.

The mysterious danger that killed Sam proves to be a real threat to Molly. While that is an important thread in the film, the main task of "Ghost" sets for itself is representing the difficulty of communication between physical and spiritual. With excellent production values, the film evolves as a sensitive metaphor for the pain and ultimate acceptance in the loss of a loved one.

As well, scenarist Rubin was inspired by the challenge of translating into 20th Century idiom the dilemmas faced by Hamlet when he saw his father's ghost and learned of the tragic crime that ended the king's life.

THIS INTRIGUING comedy/romance/thriller/ghost story ought to attract a wide audience. "Ghost" is emotional, entertaining and literate, with fine performances by the principals and excellent special effects. That, after all, is what movies are supposed to be.

What could be more refreshing for world-weary urbanites than the rustic pleasures of Cananda, Calif., a relaxed, small-town north of San Francisco? Nothing, thinks young Doctor Jennings (Jeff Daniels) and his wife, Molly (Haley Jane Kinsel), a stockbroker, who have had it with big city pressures in "Arachnophobia."

To they move to Cananda and buy an old farm to live in rustic pleasure with their two children.

Boy were they wrong! The coffin of Jerry Manley (Mark L. Taylor), a local photographer who died in Venezuela, contains more than Manley's earthly remains.

Are you ready for that? It's the spider from hell, an extremely venomous creature that seems set on destroying the world. In the tradition of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "Lost World" and "King Kong," people missing around in isolated environments are liable to bring trouble back to civilized climes that don't deal with such strange threats until an unlikely hero appears.

That's essentially the story here. Our hero, Dr. Jennings, is scared silly of spiders. Boy, has he got his work cut out for him to save the town. "Arachnophobia" has terrific spider sequences, but the edge is taken off the horror with comic relief by the town's exterminator, Delbert McClintock (John Goodman), a very funny "Rambo" style bug-killer.

"ARACHNOPHOBIA" is an elaborate production, although one wonders if it is worth all the effort (see related story) for the excitement generated? Certainly, fans of "creature from hell movies" will not be disappointed. Nor will they notice that the terrible spider kills everyone on contact — except for the hero. Jeff Daniels wrestles with that big bug for 10 minutes ... and wins.

Andrew Dice Clay has made a name for himself as a foul-mouthed, sexist, standup comic. Now he's trying to broaden his repertoire with a '50s style comic thriller, "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane" (F, R, 90 minutes).

Both he and the film are miserable failures. "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane" has only one value. It confirms Clay's reputation as a rude, vulgar, egomaniac who can't act. No one else would appear in such unpleasant, childish drivel.

Whoever dreamed up this poorly edited, offensive failure to meld the hardboiled, private eye genre with rock'n'roll films deserves a robust condemnation. Vote with your dollars and don't let this Ford be in your future.

AN UNUSUAL gang — Grimm (Bill Murray), Phyllis (Geena Davis) and Loomis (Randy Quaid) — pull off a clever bank robbery, netting $1 million despite the resources of New York Police Chief Rotanger (Jason Robards).

The gang makes a "Quick Change" (C-, R, 85 minutes) but can't make a quick getaway as New York City cops manage to trap them — as only New York can.

The Disney Company continues its successful series of re-releases with the 1967, animated feature "The Jungle Book" (A, G, 78 minutes).

"Mowgli" stories, "The Jungle Book" was the last film personally produced by Walt Disney. It features the voices of Phil Harris, Sebastian Cabot, Louis Prima, George Sanders and Sterling Holloway, among others.

STILL PLAYING:
"The Adventures of Milo and Otis" (G). A curious kitten (Milo) and his puppy friend (Otis) embark on numerous live-action adventures. Narrated by Dudley Moore.

"Another 48 Hrs." (C-, R, 90 minutes). Murky plot and lots of violence, but by and large this Nolte-Murphy reunion is unsatisfying.

"Back to the Future Part III" (A, PG, 105 minutes). This time, Doc and Marty are back to the past in an extremely entertaining adventure in the old west.

Betsy's Wedding" (A, R, 90 minutes). Fine comedy, nicely synthesized American ethnic diversity, family values and the problems of being an individual in today's mass culture.

"Bird on a Wire" (A-, PG-13, 105 minutes). Mel Gibson and Goldie Hawn on thrilling cross-country search for nasty character trying to murder Gibson.

"Cadillac Man" (B-, R, 94 minutes). Slow start detracts from Robin Williams fine comic performance as Cadillac salesman under pressure.

"Camille Claudel" (B). Oscar-nominated (best actress and foreign film) story of Auguste Rodin's mistress, a sculptress in her own right.

"Channa Paradise" (A-, 120 minutes). Excellent story of Alfredo (Philippe Noiret), the projectonist in a small Sicilian town just after World War II.

"Days of Thunder" (A-, PG-13, 118 minutes). Made to order for Cruise fans as Tom coquers machines (race cars), pretty girl (Nicole Kidman) and himself.

"Dick Tracy" (A-, PG, 105 minutes). Just the right mix of "slam-bang" cartoon characters, '30s nostalgia and warm human relationships.

"Die Hard 2" (B+, R, 100 minutes). A successful, high style sequel. This time Lt. John McClane (Bruce Willis) is wiser.

'Ben-Hur:' Enduring spectacle

By John Monaghan
special writer

Seeing the chariot race in "Ben-Hur" (1959) on the big screen remains for most filmgoers the greatest moment of pure action ever put on film. The thundering hooves of the chariots roaring nine times around the no-rules arena is a danzling mix of editing, sound, color and raw emotion.

Such an epic requires an epic build-up. And for all its obvious overblown pretensions, "Ben-Hur" — the entire package, not just the chariot race — is surprisingly powerful today.

Of all the films that have unraveled on the big screen of the Fox Theatre, "Ben-Hur" is perhaps the film that needs the grandiose surroundings most. Everything is big in this tale of a peaceful man thrown into hatred of the Roman Empire during the time of Christ.

Judah Ben-Hur, a respected and wealthy Jew wrongly accused of trying to assassinate a Roman governor, is sentenced to life imprison-Granted, sometimes just getting a record deal with a major label is enough to satisfy many upstart bands. Not Second Self.

"Mood Ring" (EMI) is a strong major label debut by this Detroit-area quartet and provides hints of potential yet to be tapped. Second Self does this in several ways by proving itself a hard-rocking foursome in the style while showing a gentler, melodic side as well.

Out of all this, though, comes a side of Second Self never revealed before: This band has soul. The setting of Muscle Shoals Studios in Birmingham, Ala., obviously didn't hurt.

One can easily suss out the street-corner harmonics on "Aunt Jenny (Bless My Soul)" or Greg Glamp's gritty, rhythmic and blues guitar stylings on "Trapped Beneath the Stone" as evidence. Like sincerity at the funeral service of a mass murderer, soul cannot be faked.

Ted's credit, Second Self's music comes straight from the gut, honest, though years of dogged touring and unfettered persistence to succeed.

Add to succeed, one obviously needs a hit. Certainly, "Red October" is reliable to even the most cynical AOR programmer. This number has it all — atmospheric guitar, uplifting lyrics, scintillating

STREET BEATS

Tuned in to a town

They get name, sound from . . . Pontiac

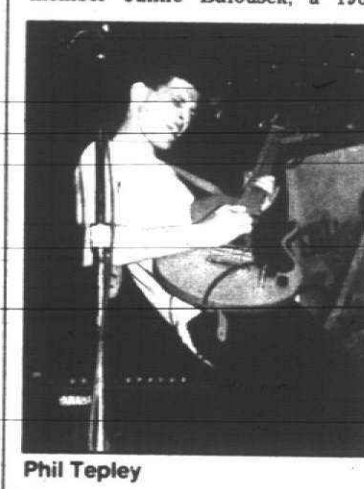

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

They can be loud. They can get melancholy. But the band Pontiac can't be a torch carrier for underground music.

Some members can't even name the contemporaries in the alternative scene. Sonic Youth? Might as well be new competition for Up With People. Buck Pets? Could be rabbits in need of braces for all they know.

Just wants to be a rock'n'roll band. On all accounts, the group passes. The sound is as raw as someone's knees after breakdancing on gravel.

"Some people like it because it's not Top 40ish or new music and we don't try to tone it down," said band member Jamie Balousek, a 1988 graduate of Bloomfield Hills Lahser. "Some people don't like it for the same reasons."

Phil Tepley

"We're not out to please anybody. We're out to play for ourselves."

Pontiac has taken the back alley to the local music scene. The three-man outfit learned its chops, performing at numerous house parties around the Ann Arbor area before they recorded a demo tape and entered the club scene.

In a short time, Pontiac has performed with the likes of Groovey Stress Merchants, Big Fun and Mol Trifid around the Ann Arbor area. Drummer Scott Mast and vocalist/guitarist Phil Tepley have attended the University of Michigan, explaining Pontiac's Ann Arbor roots.

THE BAND would like to eventually break out into different areas, possibly playing closer to home in the Detroit area since they're all Lahser grads.

In the meantime, Pontiac will perform tonight at the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor.

Pontiac has gained a reputation as a high-energy act on stage. Limbs flail about as the group churns out some hard, hard-rock that borders on becoming heavy metal.

"Just playing gives it (energy) to us," Balousek said. "We love playing so much. When we're on and playing good together — we just love it."

The live set, though, includes a few curves. Quite often Pontiac strums some acoustical numbers to offset the onslaught of sound.

Many of the acoustical numbers are rough drafts of future songs that will end up as hard rock numbers.

Pontiac has learned flexibility out of necessity. Performing at house parties, audiences are not always intent on listening to music.

"It's like you're in one room and they're in your face," said Mast, 20, a 1988 graduate of Lahser.

"People like to try to say things on the mike during the show," Balousek added.

One person who attended their shows would spend the entire time sleeping on the couch. Another well-placed individual grabbed the microphone and began belting out "Silent Night."

OF COURSE, Pontiac is anything but silent. Except this band believes the image of the hard rocker who wears leather, drinks beer out of a bottle and whose number of tattoos is only exceeded by that of his girlfriend.

These three guys look like straight-laced, suburbanites from Bloomfield Hills. Give them guitars and a drum kit and the personality changes.

In the noise assault, the band doesn't betray their influences. One can detect, though, in the plodding acoustic numbers that Neil Young is a favorite.

"There's no image or anything," Mast said. "It's just rock'n'roll."

Pontiac will perform on Monday, July 16, at the Blind Pig, 208 S. First, Ann Arbor. For information, call 996-8555.

"Robocop 2" (F, R, 115 minutes)

Grossly violent and stylistically empty sequel.

"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" (PG)

You guessed it. Lean, green and on the screen.

"The Me Up, The Me Down" (A-, unrated but sexually explicit, 95 minutes)

Farical structure and satiric tone in an unusual retelling of the obsessed male and the unwilling girl of his desire. Entertaining and significant commentary on human nature.

Safety marriage outweighs infidelity

Dear Barbara,

I read the Observer quite regularly and can't help but notice your column. (Mainly because of the ridiculous pose you strike in your picture. Wasn't there any furniture in the photography studio?)

Anyway... Your response to "Betrayed" (June 4) was the height of irresponsibility and, might I add, brevity. She writes that a best friend told her that her husband was having an affair. She also received a letter telling her the same thing. You then proceed to give her an answer that you must have spent all of five seconds thinking about.

Were you late for a deadline? "Don't truck the boat" was your best effort? There is clearly something going on with her husband. Since when is "not making trouble" a prerequisite to staying married?

I think you did the woman a real disservice by your flip answer. Honesty is crucial in any relationship. You essentially told "Betrayed" to "shut up" and be a good little girl.

Sincerely,
Surprised and Disappointed

Dear Surprised and Disappointed, Thank you for your honest letter. Your objection to the picture above the column is a valid one. I've never really been pleased with it, but it seemed like a good idea at the time I started this column. Rest assured, the picture will be changed.

Now, let us focus on your reaction to the letter by "Betrayed." You extracted the part where a friend told her that her husband was having an affair and that she also received a letter telling her the same thing.

Fortunately, I spent much more than five seconds thinking about this letter and the plight of the writer. Included in the contents of this letter were the very important sentences which you seemed to ignore. "Betrayed" wrote that she loved her husband and didn't want a divorce, and in effect, implied that she would rather accept the present situation than take a chance on losing her husband.

You write "since when is 'not making trouble' a prerequisite for staying married?" In my clinical experience, there have been instances where well meaning people, such as yourself, have influenced the wife to talk to her husband about infidelity despite her feelings to the contrary.

The resultant unwanted divorce created a patient who came in, in a depression, because of having lost what she wanted. Some, perhaps many, women feel safer in a marriage even when there is infidelity. I can assure you that I consider each letter very seriously and operate on a well-founded maxim, "If you can't help someone, at least don't do them any harm."

I hope that all is forgiven and that we continue as friends.
Barbara

P.S. I was recently informed of a letter, similar to yours, that appeared on the editorial page of this paper. I hope that that reader will see this response.

'Ben-Hur' lives on as a 1950s' epic

ment aboard ship. He vows to return someday to seek revenge on a former friend — now a Roman ruler — who doomed his mother and sister to a life of chains and leprosy.

IN ONE of the best executed — and most grueling — sequences, a Roman leader (Jack Hawkins) has the prisoners test their mettle. The thumping drum and cracking whips are accented by Miklos Rozsa's score, which remains consistently effective without becoming bombastic.

Director William Wyler, who already had epic tales like "Wuthering Heights" (1939) and "The Best Years of Our Lives" (1946) under his belt, brought a personal touch to all the pomp and circumstance. He established a bitter relationship between the two former friends — Messala (Stephen Boyd) and Judah — that lasts even beyond their chariot duel.

And, of course, there's a considerable presence of Charlton Heston, at the time fresh from playing Moses in "The Ten Commandments" (1956). He approached his roles with such conviction that even a dog food label would sound meaningful from his lips.

Perhaps the most amazing thing about "Ben-Hur" — and what sets it apart from other Biblical epics of the '50s — is its relatively subtle handling of the life of Christ. Jesus is shown powerfully but peripherally, usually from behind. He first meets Judah, a slave, on the road and offers him water. Judah later returns the favor during Christ's walk with the cross.

More than 50,000 extras were employed for the 1959 "Ben-Hur." The massive sets required more than a million pounds of plaster and a million feet of lumber. The chariot race alone took more than three months to shoot. These numbers were only

STREET CRACKS

Schneider 'cashes' in on Elvis

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Whether it's Elvis impersonations or his spontaneous comedy routines, Rob Schneider has them all shook up.

The San Francisco-raised comedian has graduated from performing in small clubs as an underage laugh bound to writing skills for "Saturday Night Live." He's even dabbling in acting, recently seen as a nerdy history student in a "Coach" episode with Craig T. Nelson.

Sure, those are all fine entries on the comedy resume. Of the latter, though, Schneider was more thrilled to work with Shelley Fabares, who had starred in several Elvis films.

To Schneider, stories about The King are like flies to a frog. He can't snap up enough of them.

"She told me that when she saw him he was the most beautiful person she had ever seen," said Schneider, who bears a resemblance to Elvis Presley. "She said he was a porcelain doll."

In his travels, Schneider came across a woman who lived with Elvis and received a ring and a gun from the rock'n'roll legend. Another person he met knew someone who worked in the office where they prepared his body for burial and related how they couldn't fit a shirt on him because of his girth.

IN HIS stage act, Schneider has been known to pull out a copy of "Elvis and Me" by Priscilla Presley and read passages.

"One time, someone come up to me afterward and said 'Schneider in a southern drawl.' You're pretty funny, but you shouldn't make fun of the King like that," Schneider said. "He was serious."

Schneider got his blue suede shoes in a knot over Elvis when he was in high school. Because of his likeness to the rock'n'roll icon, he did an impersonation in a talent show and the audience loved it.

His career in comedy was already in gear. At 15, he performed a stand-up routine in one nightclub in San Francisco for $30 a night. He decided to hang around after his routine, but was physically removed because he was under age.

Otherwise, the city has been a gateway of comedy for him. "The audiences are great," he said. "That's why comedians seem to come from there."

"When you're starting out, that's important because you're trying to gain their confidence. They give you a little creative space. They tend to want to see something different."

Schneider didn't jump into comedy full-time until 1984. His career quickly took off, performing stand-up on "Late Night With David Letterman," "HBO Young Comedians Special" and "Evening at the Improv."

Lately, Schneider has been writing skits for "Saturday Night Live." Though the show in summer hiatus, he's been coming up with ideas for next season. One bit is a parody commercial for the "Esophagizer," a takeoff on the Adomizer that is designed to "firm up those flabby spots around the neck."

Last season, Schneider worked on five SNL shows. He wrote one sketch on a homophobic convention for the controversial show that featured comedy's foul-mouthed Andrew Dice Clay. The Dice Man declined to do it.

WITH THE cast unsettled for next season, Schneider obviously wouldn't mind stepping in as a regular member. "The audiences are great," he

"Lorne Michaels told me, 'I hired Chevy Chase as a writer. I hired Garret (Morris) as a writer,' " Schneider said. "It just evolved from there. I'm just happy to be writing."

Elvis still rears his head occasionally in Schneider's stand-up set. But, for the most part, it's a steady stream of comedic consciousness as he's been known to develop new skills right on stage.

He enjoys the writing aspect of comedy. The real fun, though, comes on stage when he can act out his material.

"I think if an audience is giving me their confidence I can take it farther — and I will," Schneider said. "If they continue going with me, you don't know how far it will go."

"You have to give a little bit. I'm not going to hit you over the head with it. You have to go with me a bit and get lost with it."

Rob Schneider will perform Friday and Saturday, July 20-21, at the MainStreet Comedy Showcase, 314 E. Liberty, Ann Arbor. For information, call 996-9080.

Rob Schneider has made a name for himself with two things — his Elvis impersonations and or his spontaneous comedy routines.

Architecture: an Indian Village lure

This is the second of a three-part series on residents in Detroit's historic Indian Village.

By Joan Boram
special writer

RON AND Sandy Phillips were lucky.

The Georgian Colonial house they bought on Iroquois had been carefully tended since it was built in 1917, so they were spared the restoration work that other Indian Village residents in Detroit have so often encountered.

"The house was designed by architect William Stratton, the husband of Mary Chase Stratton, who founded Pewabic Pottery," Sandy said.

"It was commissioned by Detroit businessman Allan Sheldon, and is a pretty close copy of Carter Hall, in Williamsburg, Va. Sheldon had been stationed in Washington during World War I, and while there, developed an appreciation for Williamsburg's architecture."

Phillips, who is just a smidgen over 5 feet tall, does her own decorating.

To realize the implications behind this statement, consider that when they moved from Orchard Lake to their present house, her husband gave her a set of industrial ladders

'We had 27 people stay overnight for a family reunion last summer, and you'd hardly have known they were here.'

—Sandy Phillips

as a housewarming gift.

The formal dining room is 26 by 22 feet, with 11-foot ceilings. The dramatic foyer, easily the size of a small house, is two stories high.

PERCHED ON her ladders like Michelangelo in the Sistine Chapel, Phillips, who has a fine arts background, applied Williamsburg colors bought at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn.

The foyer is old rose. In the dining room, traditional furniture and a collection of antique pewter plates are set off by stunning dark green walls and rich, cream crown moldings and woodwork.

The living room, considerably larger than the dining room, is paneled in pecan wood, and is practically care-free.

"I just wipe with a dust mop once in a while to get rid of cobwebs.

"Pecan wood has a kind of golden glow all its own. There's no need to polish it — luckily, it's in perfect shape."

The house also incorporates five fireplaces, 12 bedrooms (five for servants), a butler's kitchen complete with silver vault, a kitchen, a sun room, a library, and a patio with a swimming pool.

YOU COULD easily have 100 for cocktails on that patio, and the Phillips often do just that.

"We had 27 people stay overnight for a family reunion last summer, and you'd hardly have known they were here."

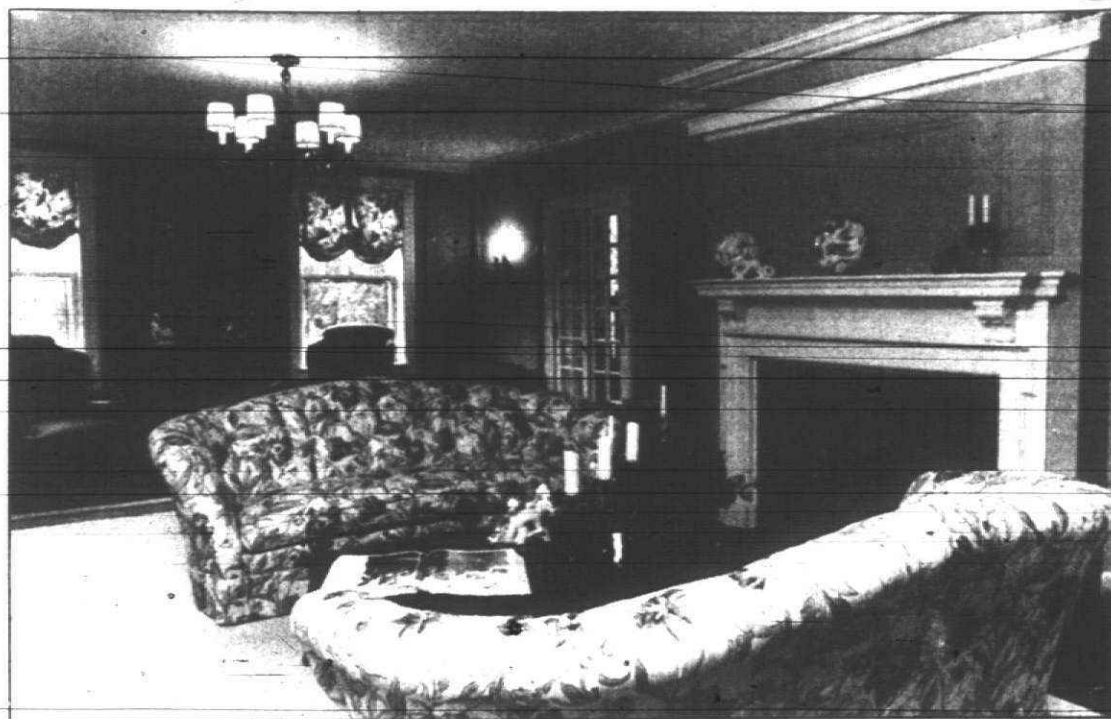

"One of the problems with a house of this vintage, though, is that standard dimensions have changed over the last half-century."

"For example, we needed awnings for 40-odd windows. They all had to be custom-made."

SANDY IS known in the community as the "cheerleader of Indian Village," and it's easy to see why. Her enthusiasm is contagious.

"It's a true neighborhood, a real community, not a suburb."

"We're an eclectic group, but we have in common an appreciation of the village and its significant architecture, and a dedication to preserving them as a vibrant community."

Street fair boasts 212 artists

The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, the granddaddy of three concurrent juried art fairs in downtown Ann Arbor, runs Wednesday-Saturday along S. University, E. University and Church Street.

Hours for the 31-year-old original fair are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday-Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The fair will feature 212 artists, 72 of whom are new to this festival. Artists will come from 30 states.

Twenty specially selected artists who work with clay, fiber, drawing, painting, printing, photography and mixed media will join the Potters Guild in demonstrating their art at their respective booths.

Two outside jurors will view all the art on Wednesday and select 10 artists as recipients of cash awards for superior excellence and originality.

BOOTH SPACE also has been given to the local Senior Citizens Guild and selected University of Michigan art students.

Children may do supervised art projects in a booth run by the Ann Arbor Y at Church, north of S. University.

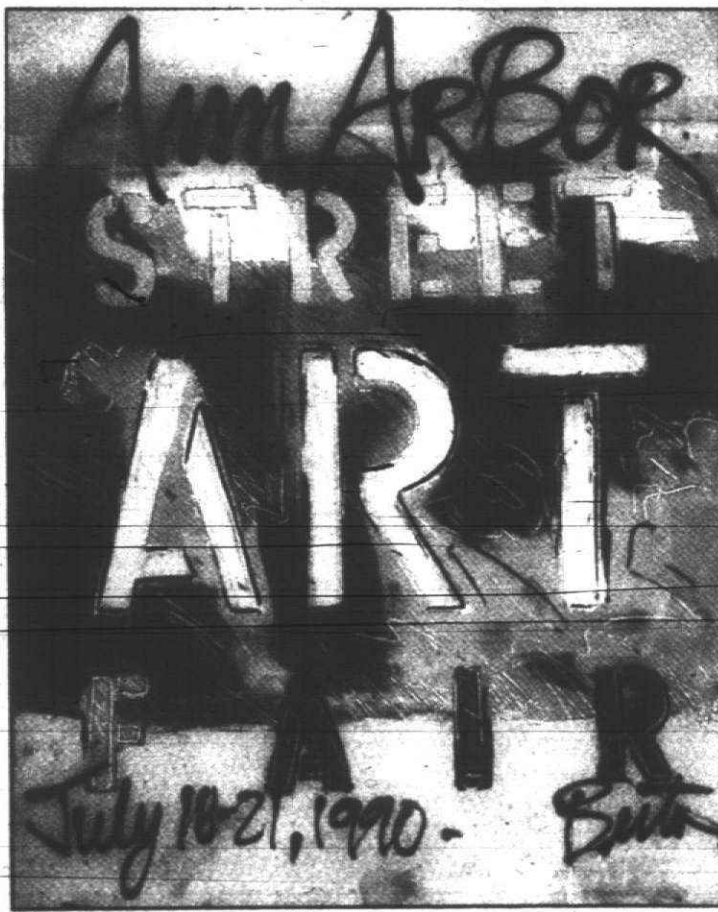

The Washtenaw Council for the Arts has scheduled entertainment at the Graceful Arch Stage at S. University and E. University and at other performing arts stages.

Concurrent fairs include the 23-year-old State Street Area Art Fair on N. University, William, Maynard, Liberty and Thompson and the 20-year-old Summer Art Fair on Main, Liberty and State.

Some of the media represented at the three fairs are painting, printmaking, clay, photography, jewelry, woodworking, glass and sculpture.

Non-profit groups will distribute free information from spaces on Liberty, between Fourth and Division.

T-shirts and souvenir posters will be available. They along with paper shopping bags will display the artwork of Rockford, Mich., artist Jerry Berta of "Diner" fame. The Diner Store is a Rockford art gallery housed in a restored formica-and-neon diner from the '50s.

Here's a sampler of time savers

DEAR READERS: Although this is not usually a "tips" column, last week I promised to print some time-saving ideas written to me. Thanks to Mary Sue Livingston of Troy for an impressive list:

- "Rather than take time away from sightseeing and fun vacation activities, I type address labels in advance and take them along as well as stamps for postcards I wish to send to friends on a trip."

(Columnist's note: When my brother went to Europe years ago, many friends exclaimed, "Send me a card from there." With his unique sense of humor, he took a long a rubberstamp made in advance, which said, "Having a wonderful time. Wish you were here. Bob.")

- "Organizing and remembering everything to take along on a camping trip is a lengthy process. Rather than repeat that effort for each outing, I made a master checklist, ran off duplicates of it and use a new copy, which I cross off and discard after each trip."

- "I try to take and make telephone calls in the kitchen (or on a portable phone to take me there), where I can combine lengthy conversations and being put on 'hold' with boring tasks — cleaning the stove is a favorite."

- "I make sure I have a good videotape to watch while ironing.

- "One can spend lots of time figuring out exactly which items have been "used up" and need to be included on the shopping list. The family is trained that whoever takes the last container of something adds it to an ongoing list kept in a central location."

- "Our family draws names for holiday gift-giving. To avoid the last-minute rush, we exchange names in the summer so that we can take advantage of summer art fairs and seasonal sales."

- "Another time-consuming chore is figuring out how many annuals to plant in the garden each season. Why not keep track of how many flats of which flowers were purchased from season to season to serve as a point of reference?

- "Nagging isn't pleasant for either the nagger or the naggee. Save repeating yourself and keep a running list of household chores to be done posted on the refrigerator or some other spot where it is a reminder."

- "Don't just sit there waiting for a movie or concert to begin. Bring a magazine to read while waiting."

Builders look to rental agencies to fill apartments

Your landlord has raised the rent again, and this time it's the last straw. Maybe you're ready to move up to fancier digs but you're not in a position to buy.

Perhaps you're a transferee looking for a nice rental or you just want a new place to hang your hat.

For whatever reason, you need an apartment and you need one now. What you don't want to do is spend a lot of time looking.

Welcome to the world of locator services.

They can work in a couple of different ways, but the service is always free to tenants.

In some cases, service providers, like Apartments Unlimited, work with apartment owners on a commission basis. In others, like Central Leasing Center, the owner of several properties will set up an office to represent all of his holdings at one location.

THEN THERE are specialty directories like Apartment Shoppers Guide, essentially a book of advertisements offered free to consumers.

Convenience is the big attraction for tenants.

"They can go through papers, make phone calls, do all the driving around, or we can show them all the properties," said Kathy Staub, a sales manager for Apartments Unlimited in Canton. "It's going to save them time and money."

Apartments Unlimited also has area offices in Southfield and Troy. "It's kind of a matchmaking operation, if you will," said Tom Sweeten, an owner of the company.

"We list apartment buildings in our system, a computerized data base coupled with laser disc photographs of properties. People (employees) here have visited properties, they're familiar with properties."

After filling out a brief questionnaire of needs, tenants get a computer printout of several prospects, a look at pictures and several appointments.

Apartments Unlimited gets a commission from the landlord — about 70 percent of one month's rent — for the referral if a tenant leases.

R&T Management, a subsidiary of Rosin & Co., intends to close its Central Leasing Center which opened just over two years, said Barbara Katz, a property manager for the firm.

While each of Rosin's seven complexes has a manager's office, the centralized leasing center was established so no potential tenants would be missed, Katz said.

A problem recently developed in that would-be tenants made it to the Central Leasing Center but not always to one of the complexes to which they had been referred, she said.

"IT WAS something that seemed to be the mode of the future," Katz said of the center's launching. "If one wasn't getting traffic, the leasing center would direct to that particular complex."

So why don't more multi-complex owners have a central leasing center? "It's expensive," Katz said. "You're running an office out of another office. It's an around the clock service Monday through Sunday."

Relocation Assistance in West Bloomfield finds housing for out-of-town transferees as part of a broader mission to settle newcomers in the metro area.

Its fee is paid by corporations. Some apartment owners also may pay commissions to Relocation Assistance for a referral if tenants sign.

"We don't work for apartments. We work for corporations," said Ilene Chait, owner of Relocation Assistance.

"Some (clients) prefer a narrow set of choices, some like to exhaust anything possible," said Thelma Stalburg, manager of the apartment division for Relocation Assistance. "We discuss with them what their needs are. We save them a lot of time in the course of interviewing them and introducing them to the area," she said.

Staff members are familiar with several hundred complexes in the area, Chait said. About half of their clients end up in houses, half renting apartments.

Even newly-constructed apartments show up in locator services.

"Any new property normally advertises quite a bit," said Susan Deakins, associate publisher of Apartment Shoppers Guide in Southfield. "Most have large set-up advertising budgets."

NEW PROJECTS advertised in her shopper's guide include Citation Club in Farmington Hills by Bertak, River Oaks West in Novi by The Solomon Group, Westbury Village in Auburn Hills by Kaftan Enterprises and Village Green of Madison Heights by Holtzman/Silverman, Deakins said.

About 22 percent of the listings in the monthly guide are for new complexes, she estimated.

Sweeten reported that upwards of 20 percent of tenants who go through Apartments Unlimited are looking for brand new living quarters.

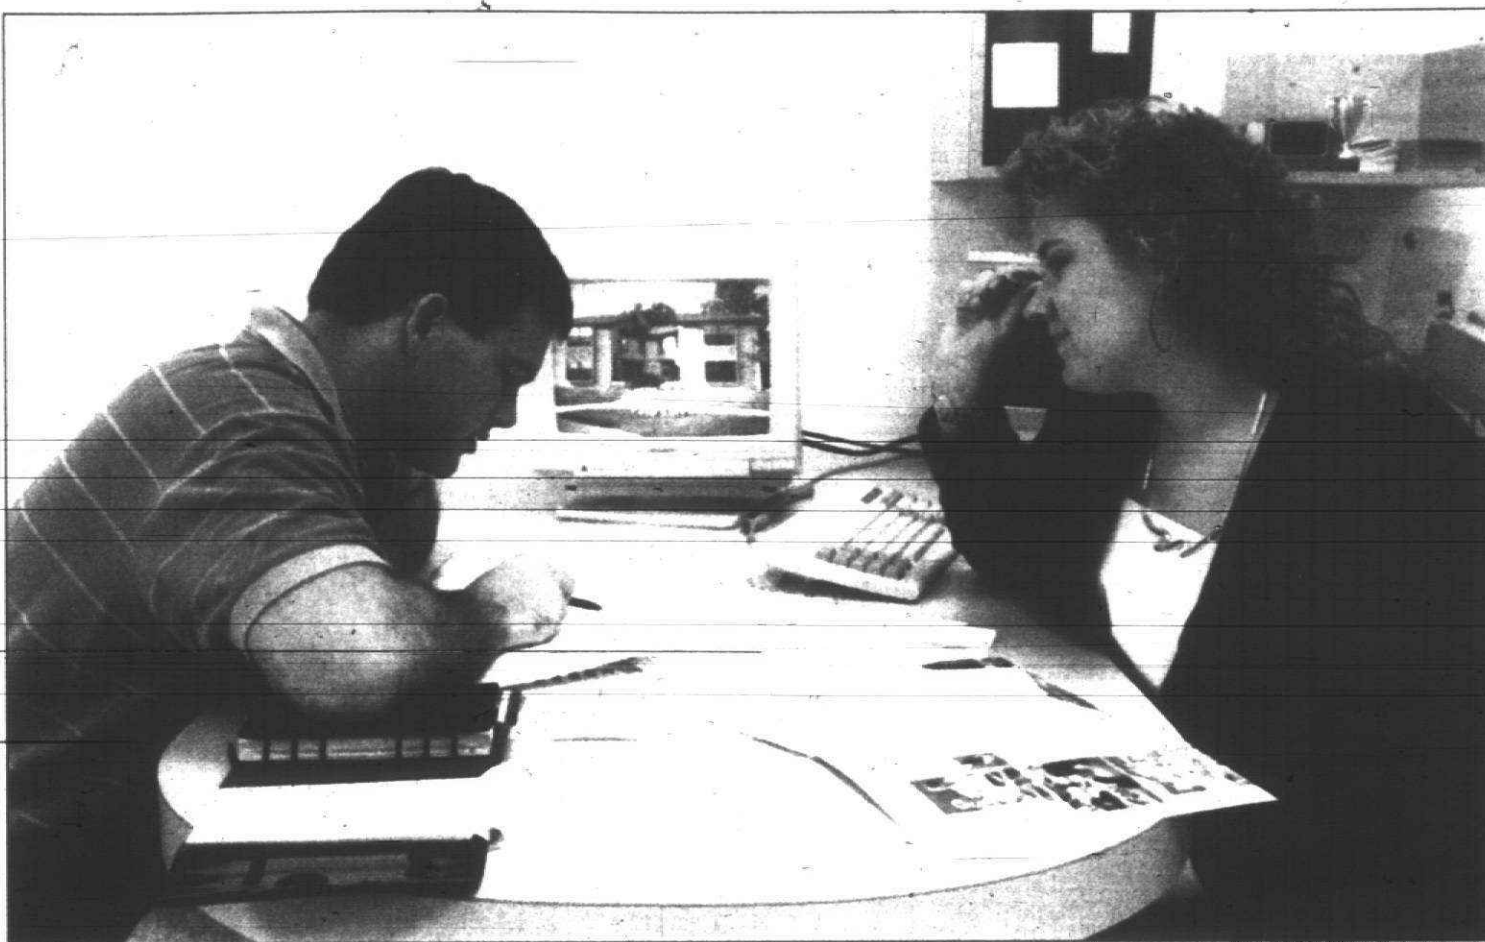

"Right now, there's certainly more apartments than people to occupy them," he said. "Generally, location is the most important factor. Most want to be close to where they want to work or play. Next is economics — what can I afford in this area."

The Fourmidable Group of Farmington Hills and The Solomon Group of Troy are among owners of new complexes which have a working relationship with Apartments Unlimited, Sweeten said.

Newness doesn't seem to be a top priority for transferees with whom she deals, Stalburg said.

"The difference (in demand) between one five years old and brand new isn't that great," she said. "Most of it centers around proximity to the work place, the money they want to spend and amenities."

"What they're looking for is a good looking attractive building. If it's newer, that's a plus," Stalburg said.

Patrick Parks, who is moving here from Montgomery, Ala., discusses leasing possibilities with Gina Taylor, a rental consultant for Apartments Unlimited.

Roof assessment seems inconsistent

I own a condo in a development that has four sizes of condos. Monthly charges are based on the footage of the units. My size condo pays $60 more than most. My grounds are no larger and the driveways are the same. But when it was painted and the roof was replaced, charges were prorated the same for everyone. Is this the rule for most condos? I protest every year. They say that's the way it is in the bylaws and can't be changed.

It is my assumption that the assessment for the roofs was allocated among all the co-owners equally, even though the percentages of value are different and the co-owners are paying different assessments on a normal basis for the units. There would appear to be an inconsistency in the manner in which the association levied the additional or special assessment. I would consult with legal counsel to review your documents and the assessment policies of the association. In addition, to the extent that the documents are 17 years old, it may be next to impossible to amend the documents, depending on the policy of the association regarding recent changes to the Condominium Act, as they relate to the amendment of condominium documents. You should consult with an attorney regarding these issues or, at least, encourage your board of directors to do so to determine the viability of such changes.

The developer is responsible for numerous construction defects and deficiencies at our condominium and refuses to realistically talk with us. We are considering retaining legal counsel to start a lawsuit against him. We have gotten nowhere with condo queries

the township, but we understand that it may assist us in regard to his future projects in the township. What is the best course of action in terms of dealing with the developer at this time?

If you have made every reasonable effort to present your claim as documented to the developer and have been unsuccessful, you should consider the various legal remedies you have available, including the institution of legal proceedings. While the township may be helpful to the extent that it is willing to deprive the developer of the right to develop additional phases until the problems are corrected at your project, generally speaking, that does not result in a permanent and satisfactory resolution for the association. The township is not in the position, normally, to satisfy the needs of the association in this type of problem. Oftentimes, developers respond to the association if they realize that it is serious in pursuing them, and that is has both the legal and financial wherewithal to do so. Oftentimes, developers are impressed with the quality of the consultants, experts and legal counsel, which has been retained by the association to pursue the developer. Many times that results in the developer coming to the bargaining table to forthrightly meet its responsibilities.

Have job, will travel

Job transfers mark the number one reason people move, according to a survey by Century 21 Great Lakes. Rounding out the top reasons are:

- 2. Upgrade. With economic success, a family is ready for a bigger or more elegant home.
- 3. Divorce. This often leaves both parties looking for new residences.
- 4. Death in the family. When a loved one dies, the needs of a family or spouse can change, and often emotions help dictate a move.

- 5. More room. As families grow so do their needs for more bedrooms, bathrooms and storage.
- 6. Retirement. The dream of many Americans is to save money until the day when they are financially secure and can move to their dream home.
- 7. Health reasons. In many cases, people are advised by their doctors to move to a different section of the country for warm, dry weather.
