Yearbook an 'Annual' class task

Each spring, Lauren Pearson of Plymouth Salem High School goes recruiting. Not for football players, not for soccer standouts, cross country runners or basketball players — but for yearbook staffers.

"Yearbook isn't a class you just sign up for," said Pearson, advisor for the Annual staff who also teaches public speaking, acting and advanced composition.

"I INTERVIEW kids before they sign up. I talk to their teachers and see how they're doing in their classes, because there's a lot of responsibility involved managing money, editing and writing. You need strong skills, and you need kids who understand what hard work and leadership are."

The Annual is printed by Walsworth Publishing Co. of Marceline, Mo. The nation's largest independently owned yearbook publisher, Walsworth publishes 3,500 yearbooks for high schools, colleges and cruise ships in the United States and abroad.

Because Centennial Educational Park's Annual is the yearbook for the 4,500 students attending both Plymouth Canton and Salem High Schools, it totals more than 400 pages every year.

"That's one big book. It's on the top side of the largest books we do," said George Kurten, Walsworth spokesman. CEP staffers have received numerous awards, among them Walsworth and Columbia University honors.

"We've enjoyed working with the people who've helped produce the Annual. They know what they're doing," he said.

'I interview kids before they sign up. I talk to their teachers and see how they're doing in their classes, because there's a lot of responsibility involved managing money, editing and writing.'
— Lauren Pearson

School has just begun, but you wouldn't know it visiting with the 24 students in Pearson's two yearbook classes. At "yearbook camp" at the Holidome in Livonia, Annual staffers began working on their 1991-92 cover. By Oct. 7, that big decision will have been made; and 45 pages — many of them on last year's spring sports — will be finished and sent off to the printer.

AFTER THAT, there'll be deadlines every month through March 2. In addition, students are required to sell a minimum of two ads, which are priced anywhere from $30 for an eighth of a page to $150 for a full page.

Pearson says she's lucked out with a good staff again this year.

"They're all excellent hard workers, and very dedicated," said Pearson, a graduate of Canton High School and Northern Michigan University.

Several Annual editors are beginning their third year on staff. Editor-in-chief Becky Heneveld describes her job as fun, hectic and worthwhile.

Police arrest 2 suspects in 'rooftop' heists

By Diane Gale
and Todd Schneider

Eric James Goss, 27, of Saline and Terrance Nelson Gurney, 19; stood mute Monday during their arraignments before 16th District Judge James R. McCann.

Two men were arrested Saturday in connection with 55 rooftop breakins of businesses in at least nine communities, including Canton, Livonia, Garden City and Westland.

Police in Wayne, Oakland, Washtenaw and Monroe counties were searching this summer for thieves breaking into businesses by tearing open roof vents or air conditioning vents and entering the buildings to rob the stores.

Oftentimes the stores were in strip malls and the thieves would go from business to business through the roofs.

Eric James Goss, 27, of Saline and Terrance Nelson Gurney, 19, stood mute Monday during their arraignments before 16th District Judge James R. McCann.

McCann entered not-guilty pleas for Goss and Gurney to three counts of breaking and entering and set a $10,000 bond for each.

PRELIMINARY examination on the charges was set for 9 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 19.

If convicted, they face a maximum 10-year prison sentence.

The investigation took a turn last weekend when Michigan State Police, assisted by Livonia Police, arrested Goss and Gurney following an early morning break-in at Flowers from Joe's, Seven Mile east of Farmington Road.

The two were arrested in the park-

Fest entertainment gets good reviews

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The turnout for the Plymouth Fall Festival compared with the largest ever crowds for the festival, organizers say.

"Personally, I thought we had some of the biggest crowds on Thursday night and Friday than we've ever had," said festival manager Joe Bida.

Assistant city manager Paul Sincock said that while there was a substantial crowd on Friday, "The crowds were a little less than might have been anticipated, considering fair weather throughout the festival.

"We had pretty good sized crowds," he said, and estimated 60,000 to 70,000 turned out for the four-day festival. "The weather was just outstanding," Sincock said.

Sincock, a Rotary member, said about 12,000 barbecue dinners were sold by Sunday evening, the number Rotary organizers had anticipated.

Bida said the crowd on Sunday "was the largest I've ever seen. There were no empty chairs in the park at all."

Bida said the scheduling of some new entertainment at the Fall Festival stage in Kellogg Park drew compliments from some festival goers.

GROUPS OPERATING food booths along Main Street reported varying degrees of success. "Some of them did well, some said they didn't," Bida said.

He said organizers of the crafts show at Central Middle School and the antique show at the cultural center reported a good turnout.

The final reports of money raised in various festival events are scheduled for the next Fall Festival board meeting, in October.

Firm with Canton ties looking for tax break

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

Moeller Manufacturing Co. is headed for Plymouth Township, even if government officials don't give them a tax break.

The Livonia firm asked the Livonia City Council last week for permission to move to Plymouth Township. It's a requirement under state law if Moeller plans on seeking a tax break from Plymouth Township.

The Livonia Council hasn't made a decision on the firm's request.

But even without a tax abatement from Plymouth Township, the firm would save $100,000 by moving from Livonia, according to Joe Baker, Moeller controller. The firm would save $200,000 with a Plymouth Township tax break.

Baker said the company is under time constraints because it's seeking $7 million in state bonds to finance the move.

"My recommendation is that we move to the site with or without the abatement," Baker said.

Special skills, dedication needed for yearbook class

"My first year I was kind of laid back. Last year, I did a lot, and I was kind of stressed out at times. But I've enjoyed the last few years," said Heneveld, who with Pearson and other staffers has spent many an evening, weekend and vacation day working on the yearbook.

"I like the people in the class, and our teacher," said the Canton senior. "She's awesome; she's really good." What makes all the hard work worth it?

"I think you learn to communicate with other people, and deal with other people. You learn about deadlines. Stuff has to go out on that day — you're responsible. You also learn how to work by yourself at your own pace. You learn a lot of things I will take to college with me," said Heneveld, who plans to major at Hope College in English.

CANTON SENIOR Sandy Miller is organizations and events editor, responsible for making sure everything from the Rockettes to the Chiefettes to the Fall Festival and Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular are allocated space in the yearbook.

Miller's experience has prompted her to consider a career in publishing. "I like to write, but I don't know that I'd necessarily make it as an author. I like to be creative, and this gives you an opportunity to be creative within guidelines. It's a lot of fun."

Rob Theisen is a computer specialist on the annual staff responsible with two others for typing all the copy into Apple II computers.

"We have to do a lot of editing, and we have to train new people this year, which isn't fun, but it has to be done," said Theisen.

"The class is a lot of fun. Our advisors are always really, really nice; they help you not only with yearbook stuff, but other things too. I've met a lot of good friends."

One of the not-so-good aspects of working on the Annual is the criticisms the staff receives when the yearbook is published.

"Usually, we hear all the complaints. We take time out of our day to do this, and then people who aren't involved complain, but don't get involved," he said.

The job has been rewarding for Pearson. "This will be my first full year," said Pearson, who replaced the retired Jim Stevens.

"I graduated from Canton; I guess I was never meant to leave," she Pearson, who rewards her students with a banquet and scholarships.

Coming back to CEP to pursue her career has been a good move, she added.

"I have great kids, and the administrators here have been fabulous."

Festival fare fares only fair for some

"Maybe some of the meals got a little too high for a small-town family affair," Bida suggested.

Bida said several festival goers stopped by the chamber of commerce office. "They wanted to thank us, and said it was the nicest fall festival we've ever had. You couldn't ask for nicer weather," he said.

Planning for the 1992 festival begins in October.

"We have to decide how big do they get or how small we want to get," Bida said.

He reported some complaints on some city streets being blocked off as early as Wednesday, considering the official start is 5 p.m. Friday for the festival.

When streets are closed Wednesday through Sunday, "That's a long time," Bida said.

Bida's son John takes over as festival chairman in 1992. "I'll be 70 next year," Bida said.

Firm moving from Livonia with or without tax break

MOELLER, WHICH makes punches and dies for metal stamping, is eyeing a Plymouth Township site because it needs to expand, said David Moellering, company president.

"We have a 20,000-square-foot building. We've expanded several times over the years," he said.

The plant is on Market near Plymouth and Levan roads, but it also operates a plant in Canton Township. About one-third of the company's 233 employees work at the Livonia plant.

Moellering said the company has looked for other sites in Livonia, but was unsuccessful.

Councilman Robert Bishop questioned the company's motivation in seeking the resolution and whether the move to Plymouth Township was "a done deal."

MOELLERING SAID the company has completed verbal negotiations over the new site, but hasn't closed on the property.

Tom Martin, an attorney representing Moeller, said the company had worked with several realtors and made offers on two Livonia sites, including one city-owned property, in the last six months.

The city was apparently unwilling to sell its property, he said.

The other site, part of the Jonna development west of the I-275 expressway between Six and Seven Mile, was too expensive, Martin said.

ing lot of an apartment complex behind the business.

Police are questioning the defendants about several other Livonia burglaries, including three on Aug. 26 and 27 at the Stark Plaza, Plymouth Road at Stark.

Employees at three Stark Plaza stores reported $410 stolen and more than $1,000 in damages as a result of the burglaries.

POLICE IN Garden City, Westland, Brighton, Ann Arbor and Van Buren Township and at least four other communities are investigating the men in connection with at least 55 breaking and enterings in Wayne, Oakland, Monroe and Washtenaw counties, Davis said.

In Canton, seven stores at the Harvard Square shopping mall at Ford and Sheldon roads, were reportedly broken into by acrobatic thieves who got into the businesses in early August.

Canton police are linking the men to those break-ins.

Later last month, stores in Canton's Golden Gate shopping mall were broken into by the same means.

Sunday fun fest marks SC's 30th anniversary

A free family fun fest celebrating the 30th anniversary of Schoolcraft College will be held noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The event will be on the community college's main campus, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

Attractions include games of skill, including a gunny sack race, ring toss, three-legged race for youngsters.

There will also be a tennis clinic and social and a display of classic Jaguar automobiles.

A family fun run and walk begins at noon.

Participants can register by calling 462-4448.

A Health Fair, sponsored by the Metro Medical Group, will be conducted throughout the festival.

Keeping with 1960s spirit, refreshments at the Schoolcraft celebration will be at 1961 prices.

Hot dogs will be 50 cents. Drinks will be a quarter; popcorn will sell for a dime.

Police to share info on carjackings

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Carjacking — how likely is it to happen to you?

Even area law enforcement officials aren't sure. But they believe they could soon know.

As of this week, Wayne County police departments began sharing information about armed auto theft.

The goal is to find out who is most vulnerable to having their car taken at gunpoint, Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano said.

"We should be able to pick up patterns and tell what kind of people are being victimized," said Ficano, who organized the information-sharing program.

Standard forms, listing details of area carjacking incidents, have been sent to all area police departments. Reports will then be monitored by the sheriff's department.

Information also will be shared with the Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw and Monroe sheriff's departments, Ficano said.

Though carjackings have been reported in several suburban communities, including Farmington Hills and Redford, most incidents have occurred in Detroit.

"IN MY experience it is not — thank God — a problem in the suburbs," said Lt. Sandy Miller, director of the Western Wayne County Auto Theft Team. "But that doesn't mean suburbanites don't go to Detroit."

Participation by Detroit police is considered a key to the information-sharing program's success.

Though Detroit officers weren't present at last week's kickoff press conference, Ficano said he was assured the city will participate.

"They are on board," he said.

Southfield police have created a special carjacking patrol, using police officers as decoys, but western Wayne departments generally haven't followed suit.

"Using decoys is difficult with a crime like this," said Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry, speaking on behalf of the county chiefs association. "With decoys, the objective is for the officer to become a victim. But a crime like this is so random, there's no guarantee that would happen."

Nonetheless, police said they are making progress against carjackers.

"What's heartening is that people have been getting caught and judges have been setting high bonds and issuing stiff sentences," Ficano said.

Bond was recently set at more than $1 million for a suspect being held in a string of carjackings in Livingston County and Redford.

To that, Wayne County Prosecutor's chief of operations Richard Padzieski says: "Hooray".

"A STANDARD is being set," he said. "One, that we're taking this crime very seriously and, two, if you're caught and convicted, you aren't going to get off with a slap on the wrist."

Miller took exception to media speculation armed car thefts were a response to the new, sophisticated alarms and anti-theft devices available to car owners.

"I wish they hadn't said that," she said. "We recommend people use anti-theft devices."

But despite police action and widespread availability of anti-theft devices, car theft remains a large Wayne County problem.

There were 39,805 automobiles stolen in Wayne County in 1990 — one for every 35 registered vehicles — according to Michigan State Police statistics.

In Oakland County, there were 5,140 reported thefts — roughly one for every 171 registered vehicles.

Statistics can be misleading, Miller said.

"What we've found is that there are people who use their cars as collateral to get drugs at crack houses then report the cars stolen," she said.

Whatever its source, car theft keeps insurance rates high, according to the American Automobile Association.

"We don't have a breakout for armed auto thefts, but we keep track of auto thefts generally," AAA spokesman Tom Freel said. "If there is a large increase in thefts in an area, rates will go up."

Even though there have been more than 145 carjacking arrests to date, law enforcement officials said the carjacking crisis is far from over.

"OBVIOUSLY, WE aren't telling people to carry a gun — that's illegal unless you have a concealed weapon permit," Ficano said. "But there's a lot of common sense things people can do — starting with keeping their car doors locked."

Miller, a Michigan State Police officer, said her department advises drivers be especially aware when approaching an automatic teller machine or fast food takeout line.

"For an auto teller, it might be best if they took someone with them," she said. "And believe it or not, these crimes do occur at fast food restaurants."

If something looks suspicious, law enforcement officials said, its best to drive away.

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF PLYMOUTH NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Plymouth will hold a Public Hearing on September 24, 1991, at 7:30 p.m. in the Township Offices, in the Meeting Room, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, Michigan, on levying in 1991 of an additional proposed millage rate of 0.174 mills.

The Charter Township's Board of Trustees has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its authorized millage rate of 5.00 mills. The Charter Township of Plymouth levied 3.3492 mills for operating purposes in 1990.

Michigan Public Act 5 of 1982 requires the Township to determine a new base millage rate which will result in an increased millage rate based on the increase in State Equalized Value in the Charter Township of Plymouth. The base millage rate pursuant to Public Act 5 of 1982 is 3.2224 mills compared to the actual 1990 levy of 3.3492 mills. Because the rate necessary to provide Township services exceeds the new base millage rate, the Act requires a public hearing to be held prior to adopting the new levy.

The Board of Trustees is proposing to levy 3.3964 mills for 1991. This proposal results in a rate of .174 mills in excess of the base millage rate. The proposed operating millage rate of 3.3964 mills would result in 5.4% additional operating property tax revenue.

Public comments, oral or written, are welcome at this hearing. This notice is given pursuant to Public Act 5 of 1982.

Sweet Adelines hosts open house

Winter is on the horizon, but for, those who like to sing, it's always spring.

Spirit of Detroit Chapter of Sweet Adelines International will welcome prospective new members to an open house at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 1, at the VFW Hall on I-96 just east of Inkster in Redford Township.

Women of all ages who enjoy singing four-part harmony are eligible to join the chorus.

It's not necessary to be able to read music; just be able to carry a tune and you'll be in on hours of music and camaraderie.

Spirit of Detroit consists of 80 women from 41 communities in and around metropolitan Detroit.

Founded in 1943, Sweet Adelines now has 634 chapters in 12 countries. Choruses are busy year-round performing a variety of traditional and contemporary music for public and private functions. Yearly competition is held in 27 regions with the winners in each region going on to international competition. Spirit of Detroit will represent this area at the 1992 international competition in Baltimore, Md.

During the open house, newcomers will be entertained by the 80-women chorus and refreshments will be served.

Reservations are not essential, but persons interested in more information may call 861-0417 or 534-4468 for more information.

Historical exhibit set

The Plymouth Historical Museum has opened a new special exhibit focusing on the educational heritage of the Plymputh community and surrounding areas.

Special attractions include a recreation of a country school interior, including antique school desks, coal burning stove and even a "dunce."

Other school-related memorabilia includes extensive collections of antique pencil boxes, ink wells, kerosene lamps, chalk boards, slates and fountain pens.

Also included is a special section dedicated to the restoration of Geer School. The Plymouth Historical Museum is open to the public 1-4 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the Museum is $1.50 for adults, 50-cents for students (5-17), under age 5 are free and there is a family rate of $4.

Canton road projects set

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton is on the road to paving more thoroughfares.

Burgeoning development on Canton's western frontier sparked the need for more roads to be paved, according Canton Engineer Tom Casari. The logic is that motorists will gravitate toward the newly paved roads and relieve traffic from the over congested ones, like Ford Road.

ROADS THAT that will be paved include the following:

- Beck Road, from Warren to Ford roads. Two developers, the county and Canton are contributing one-quarter of the cost each. The goal is to funnel traffic to Ford and M-14.
- Beck/Joy paving. One hundred percent of the cost will be covered by the county. Again the idea is to help motorists going to M-14 get there more easily.
- Denton Road overlay to fix the deteriorated roadway. This should be completed by mid-September 1991.
- Align Haggerty north to Plymouth and pave the last most southern stretch of Haggerty.
- Koppernick Road east of I-275. This will be the second paved access into and out of Holiday Park subdivision.
- Lilley from Michigan to Palmer. Pave the north and south stretch. It will funnel traffic to Michigan and relieve traffic from Ford.
- Michigan reconstruction. Widen and reconstruct the entire stretch of the state highway from I-275 to the Ypsilanti limits.
- Palmer paving. Property owners are paying for the road construction in order to develop the area between Lotz and Hannon roads.
- Warren Road paving east of I-275. This will complete the last stretch of Warren. This should relieve traffic from the east/west roads, especially Ford Road.
- Warren from Beck to Ridge. Property owners are paying for road construction in order order to develop the land.

Casari said his staff is working on identifying areas in the township where the road jogs and improvements need to be made.

Other future projects that will be considered, Casari said, are Beck Road, from Michigan to Cherry Hill; Hanford Road, Canton Center, both east and west to the existing pavement; Lilley Road, north of Ford; the Sheldon/Joy intersection; Morton Taylor, north of Ford and Napier between Warren and Ann Arbor.

Lawmakers give Engler school plan mixed reviews

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Everyone saw something different to applaud or criticize in Gov. John Engler's "Michigan 2000" plan for achieving excellence in the $8 billion public school system.

"It is a plan that gives people — parents, students and educators — the freedom, the power and the options to achieve excellence," the Republican governor told the Legislature and State Board of Education Wednesday.

Engler's most-used words: "teachers" and "parents." His least used: "administrators."

DOROTHY BEARDMORE, R-Rochester, president of the State Board of Education, "liked his focus on parenting" and "the recognition that children need to be ready for school." She praised Engler's emphasis on teacher development and tenure reform.

Annetta Miller, D-Huntington Woods, 20-year member of the State Board, found nothing new. "I'm personally not sure the 'charter school' can work," she said of Engler's plan, borrowed from Minnesota, to let local school boards grant charters to a certified faculty that would determine curriculum.

Rep. Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills, liked tutoring for at-risk kids in early grades and extended kindergarten hours. "They need to read before they leave the primary grades. But I'm still concerned about how we're going to pay for it."

"I agree 100 percent with his emphasis on parents and teachers," said Rep. Barbara Dobb, R-West Bloomfield."

"I liked his emphasis on early education. That's my bias," said Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, a former elementary teacher. "This is very, very do-able."

ENGLER'S EMPHASIS on new kinds of publicly funded, competitive schools was criticized by Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills. He called charter schools and federally funded "new American schools" just "a proliferation and expansion of an already inefficient system." He blistered Engler's failure to advocate consolidation of the smaller of Michigan's 562 districts.

But Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, said charter schools "are probably the most dramatic idea and could do a lot for low-income areas of the state, though they wouldn't do much for western Wayne County."

Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City and House Education Committee chairman, was "delighted" with the governor's emphasis on education but didn't see much new. "What he's proposing is either in the state school aid bill, at least the concepts, or it has been around for awhile."

Serving her first day in office, Rep. Georgina Goss, R-Northville, whose districts includes Plymouth and part of Canton Township, said "charter schools sends alarm bells ringing . . . It's such a new concept that I'd have to see more." Scholarships for potential teachers are "a wonderful idea."

Engler underscored his values not by introducing an outstanding scholar, or favorite teacher, as his predecessor, James Blanchard, might have done, but by introducing "two very special teachers — my mom and dad."

He covered five main areas:

- Quality — optional new schools, countywide schools of choice and 200-day school years in pilot districts.
- Equity — tax base sharing by richer districts — extremely unpopular among most area lawmakers except Keith, its architect.
- Teacher improvement — doubling aid for professional development, bonuses, easier certification for professionals with non-teaching backgrounds.
- Job skills — guarantees to employers of graduates' competence, school-employer partnerships with state aid to businesses who promise to provide jobs to graduates, more math and science centers.
- Preschool — tutoring and extended kindergarten hours for at-risk youngsters.

Arts foundation may seek new role

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Arts Foundation of Michigan, the state's largest private arts group, has taken a low profile in the debate over state support for the arts.

That, however, could soon change.

"We've kept relatively quiet, we still don't know how it's all going to fall out," said Kim Adams, Arts Foundation of Michigan executive director. "But we're still looking at taking a wider role."

The Detroit-based agency raises and distributes money statewide.

"We're the ones who pay the playwrights to write the plays — who pay the choreographers to create the dances," she said.

Founded 25 years ago to supplement state arts funding, Adams said members now realize they must play a greater role.

The machinery is there, she said, for the foundation to serve as a United Way-type umbrella agency for the arts.

"Really, that's been our goal all along," the Oakland County resident said.

If that is to happen, the $250,000 raised last year won't be nearly enough. In the past, the agency raised some $500,000 to establish the state Art Train program.

"I LOOK at what happened as an opportunity for us," Adams said.

The foundation's new role, she added, will be determined by its members — most of whom support state arts funding.

"I think there is an important role for the state to play," Adams said. "But we have been raising our profile."

A greater fund-raising role could force changes in foundation operations.

Foundation members pride themselves on using most of the money they raise to finance art programs, not fund-raising campaigns.

"I'd say about 79 percent of what we raise goes directly to art programs," Adams said.

While money is generally given directly to foundation-commissioned artists, regional arts groups — including Paint Creek Center for the Arts in Rochester — have received foundation grants.

The foundations seeks to finance innovative, original works.

"We're not going to give money to a local symphony that's going to perform Handel's "Messiah." That's been done before," Adams said. "But we will support a composer that's creating a new work, provided, of course, that it will be performed."

The foundation grew out of a 1960s citizen study commissioned by then Gov. George Romney.

Initially known as the Michigan Fine Arts Society, then the Michigan Foundation for the Arts, it adopted its current name to avoid confusion with the state-sponsored Michigan Council for the Arts. It is the state agency's future that is in question.

"Whatever happens, we'll still be around," Adams said.

Arts Foundation of Michigan maintains offices at the David Whitney Building, Detroit. Those interested in joining, or in making a contribution, can call 964-2244, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Mental health agency transfer worries local parents

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Plans to transfer a local mental health agency from state to county control have touched off a flurry of concern and protest in Wayne and Oakland counties.

Fears are growing that area group homes could face budget cuts, or new community resistance, say representatives of group home parents organizations.

In Wayne County, controversy surrounds the transfer of the Wayne Community Living Service from state jurisdiction to control by the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board.

Despite assurance the new, non-profit controlling board will maintain all current services to developmentally disabled Wayne County residents, family members say they're worried that won't be the case.

"OUR BIGGEST concern is whether the money will be there after the transfer," said Alice Saules of the Plymouth Association for Retarded Citizens.

In Oakland County, there is concern the Macomb Oakland Regional Center will be the next agency transferred from state to county control.

"We're concerned there will be more pressure not to have group homes," said Henry Widrich of Southfield, president of his county's ARC chapter. County mental health officials have already agreed to a moratorium on group homes, Widrich said.

Both WCLS and MORC currently report directly to the state. ARC groups serve the needs of families of those in WCLS or MORC group homes.

State officials say the Wayne County transfer is part of a long-standing policy to give local officials more say over mental health activities.

"The philosophy is that local communities are better able to meet needs that a centralized state bureaucracy," state department of mental health spokesman Tom DeLoach said.

The changes, he added, are conducted under a state mental health code drafted as long ago as 1974.

While the state "is in the process" of transferring Wayne Community Living Services to the county board, DeLoach said there are no immediate plans concerning MORC.

A meeting last Thursday between ARC members and new state mental health director James Haveman failed to answer all concerns, Saules said.

"There were so many questions and so little time, not everything was addressed," she said.

More questions are expected to be asked during a Sept. 17 public hearing in downtown Detroit.

Despite the hearing, the WCLS transfer could be complete by Oct. 1.

WCLS, based in Northville, supervises a $65 million budget and has 2,245 employees.

"We don't make transfers unless the local agency indicates it's ready and the Detroit-Wayne county board has indicated it's ready," DeLoach said.

Parents group members, however, want assurance the county board is ready.

"We want a guarantee the money will be there, not transferred out," Sales said. "To assure that, we'd like to see the state monitor the budget for at least three years."

The public hearing on state mental health care plans concerning WCLS will begin 10 a.m. to noon Tuesday, Sept. 17, in the 13th floor conference room of the Book building in downtown Detroit. Comments may also be submitted in writing to: WCLS Hearing, Michigan Department of Mental Health, Bureau of Community Mental Health Services, 6th Floor, Lewis Cass Building, Lansing, 48913.

IN BRIEF

ALL CANTON residents are invited to the Third Annual Canton Community Foundation Birthday Breakfast, Sept. 19. An annual report of community events and activities will be discussed at the breakfast.

"Each year, in September, we report on the activities of the previous year, and outline our plans for the upcoming year," said Bill Myers, Canton community foundation president.

"This year we are honored to have the unveiling of the 'Storyteller,' a sculpture designed by Canton artist Joe DeLauro. After a tour of the sculpture to the elementary schools we hope to arrange a permanent home in the Canton Public Library," he said.

The foundation, working with its sponsored group, the Canton Arts Council, commissioned the sculpture one year ago.

This year the breakfast will be held at the Geneva Presbyterian Church, 5835 N. Sheldon Road. Any resident wishing to attend the free breakfast should call the foundation office, 454-5427. Doors open at 7:30 a.m. and breakfast is served at 7:45 a.m.

In addition to the "Storyteller," the foundation in the past year has contributed over $1,500 in scholarships, $5,000 to Plymouth Family Services and $1.000 to the Literary Council.

Fall water bills

Canton's water department officials are reminding customers again that they should be looking for their next water bill in an envelope instead of a post card, because additional information is included with the bill.

The letter explains the new water and sewer rate increase approved by the board of trustees, as well as the responsibilities of residents to compare their inside water meter for consistency with their outside remote.

Water billing has provided a prestamped postcard for residents to complete and send back indicating their meter readings.

Chambers to connect

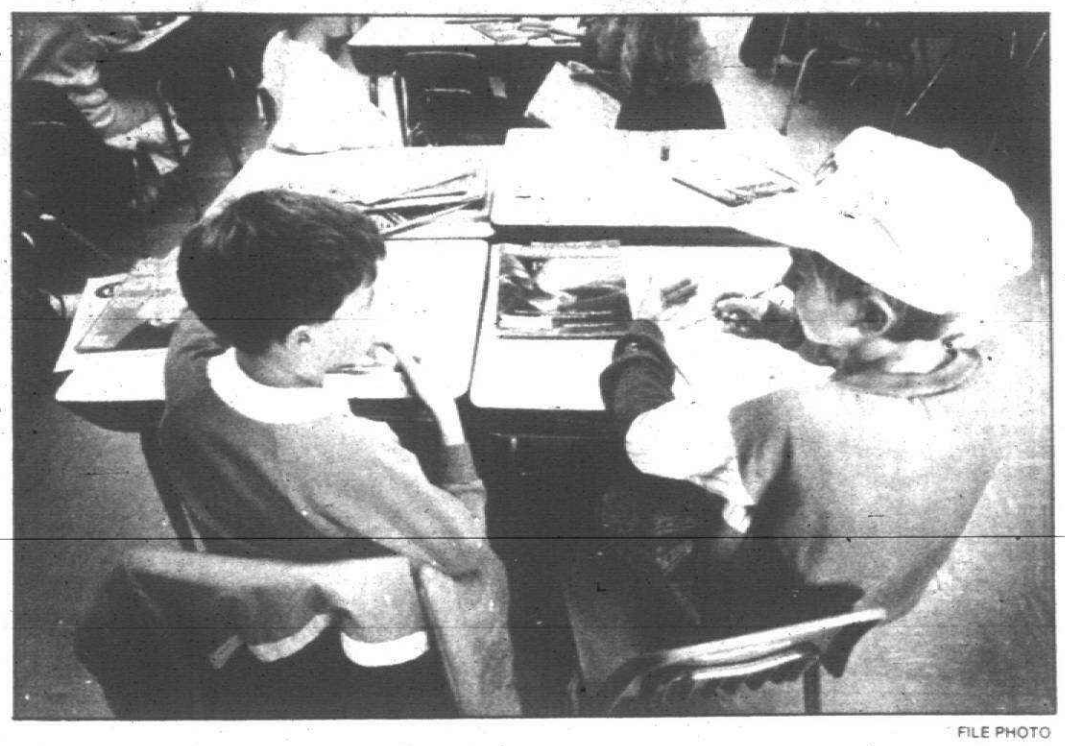
The Canton Chamber of Commerce and the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce will jointly host an After Hours Connection 5-7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 8, at the Italian Cucina, 39500 Ann Arbor Road, east of I-275.

The chamber hosts these socials as a way for business people in the community to meet and socialize with chamber members and to offer a means for the two business communities to network.

Refreshments will be served, and attendees are invited to participate in a 50/50 drawing. The cost is $5 per chamber member and $10 per non-member. The affair is open to any area business, and registration is required. Please call the chamber office at 453-4040 to register.

Longer school year on educators' agenda

By Arlene Funke
staff writer



Schools in metro Detroit are keeping kids in the classrooms year around. Plymouth Canton schools tried it, but scrapped the program. Above, two students at Fiegel School in Canton discuss their work.

FILE PHOTO

Each fall, Johnny and Susie spend several weeks 'catching up' on last year's school work.

Larry Miller, principal of Field Elementary School in Canton, estimates the full month of September is devoted to reviewing past material forgotten during the long summer break.

'It takes a little time to pick up the routine and skills you may have allowed to lay in your brain,' Miller said.

According to the Associated Press, several school districts, including Troy, Farmington and Birmingham, are considering year-round programs in an effort to help children retain information. Those districts might consider looking at the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools experience from 1975-82.

Faced with skyrocketing growth, the Plymouth-Canton district had year-round schooling for several schools. Half of the district's elementary schools and one middle school were on an extended school year.

The extended school year spread 180 days of instruction over a 12-month period, allowing the district to absorb the growing enrollment.

Students, who were assigned to "tracks," or schedules, attended classes for 45 days, followed by a 15-day break. While those students were on break other pupils were using the classrooms.

Although there are no current plans to bring back the extended school year, Plymouth-Canton school officials see educational benefits of year-round schooling.

"There is less forgetting," said Dr. Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction. "It's three weeks off, versus three months."

The concept drew mixed reactions from both parents and teachers, Homes said.

"In the main, the community was cooperative," Homes said. "Generally the community saw the need."

The overwhelming number of school districts are based on a nine-month calendar, with a break during the summer months. This reflects America's rural past, when farming families relied on their youngsters to help tend the crops.

Support is growing for year-round schooling. More than one million students in 23 states are on such schedules.

The plan generally calls for 10 weeks of instruction, followed by a break of two or three weeks. Summer recess is four to six weeks long. In Michigan, the Flint, Waterford and Huron Valley school districts have year-round programs.

SUPPORTERS SAY shorter summer breaks would mean sharper retention for students. Opponents cite tradition, lack of air-conditioning in schools and the need for teens to hold summer jobs.

A 45-day track gives teachers and students the opportunity for a concentrated, in-depth study unit with a clean break before and after, said Janice Brown, coordinator of the school improvement office, Michigan Department of Education in Lansing.

"It's a good way to integrate different subject areas," Brown said.

Changing needs call for more creative approaches, according to Homes.

During the 1970s and '80s thousands of new families flocked to the Plymouth and Canton communities. At its peak, in the early 1980s, the student count was around 17,300. Existing schools couldn't keep up with the rapid growth.

The extended school year was introduced in 1975. Three elementary schools — Field, Ericksson and Hulsing — opened in 1977 on the program.

Field, which now has 670 students, was serving around 1,000 students during the longer school year.

"IT WAS very difficult," Miller said. "It was difficult to follow the concept to the middle school. Parents had kids on three different schedules."

Miller believes that the shorter break benefited marginal students.

But the year-round concept brought such extra costs as air-conditioning of schools, increased maintenance of buses in constant use and custodial and food service expenses.

Chuck Portelli, president of the Plymouth-Canton Education Association, the bargaining unit representing the teachers, taught at Hulsing Elementary during the last three years of the longer school year.

"As a teacher, it was very exhausting," Portelli said.

With track changes, teachers had to take down and put up displays several times a year. They rotated classrooms. Storage space was limited.

"It was interesting, it was exhausting," Portelli said. "Some people liked it. Some didn't. Educationally there were some benefits. You didn't have to review so often."

Over the years, several issues contributed to the demise of the longer school year. These include a dip in enrollment levels, rising costs and contractual concerns with teachers, according to Homes.

CROWDING WAS eased when portable units were added to some schools.

The program was discontinued in 1982. Current enrollment is a little more than 15,000 students.

It "served its purpose and served it well," Homes said. A new school, Hoben Elementary, was constructed in the mid-1980s.

Another concept, virtually untapped in the United States, is expanding the school year beyond the current 180 days standard. Oregon has a year of 190 days.

School officials note that many other countries have far longer school years. Homes cited a 220-day school year in Japan.

Hospice seeks volunteers, training programs set

Hospice of Southeastern Michigan has scheduled volunteer training sessions during the fall. Volunteers may attend two four-hour sessions during the week, or one eight-hour session on a Saturday.

Training sessions for volunteers in south Oakland County will be held the weeks of Sept. 30 and Dec. 1. North Oakland County classes will be held the week of Nov. 17. Training for Macomb County volunteers for suburban Wayne County will be the week of Nov. 4. Classes for volunteers in the city of Detroit are yet to be scheduled.

Volunteers help Hospice of Southeastern Michigan provide compassionate care to the dying.

- Patient care volunteers help patients and their families by running errands, lending support and being a friend. Some may perform simple patient care tasks such as giving baths, transferring patients and changing linen.

Volunteers also participate in the Hospice bereavement program, making calls and visits to families after a patient's death and helping with bereavement support groups.

- On-call volunteers are willing to be called whenever a patient or family has a need for their special skills or talents. Services include driving, barbering and hairdressing, lawn care, snow shoveling and simple home maintenance.
- Office volunteers provide clerical support. Volunteers with computer operation or medical transcription skills are in great demand.
- Speaker bureau volunteers tell the Hospice story to groups in the community.

Anyone over age 16 is welcome to volunteer. Many assignments are for evening and weekend work so students and people who work during the day shouldn't hesitate to volunteer.

Volunteers are asked to work at least two to four hours a week and to commit to working for a year.

Hospice of Southeastern Michigan, the first licensed hospice in Michigan, opened in November 1980 to provide a compassionate setting in which terminally ill individuals can die with dignity. Hospice is committed to providing care and comfort for the ill and support for their families. More than 2,000 patients received services each year.

For more information on volunteer opportunities call a volunteer coordinator at Hospice of Southeastern Michigan.

Madonna plans LPN seminar

Licensed practical nurses interested in earning a bachelor of science degree in nursing or becoming a registered nurse can attend Madonna University's LPN/BSN information session at 9:30 a.m. or 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 3.

Madonna's degree completion program for LPNs offers an individualized plan of study for part-time students with the option to challenge up to 11 credits for previous education or experience.

A part-time pursuit of study also includes experience reduced clinical time for maternal-child and medical-surgical nursing with completion of the nursing course sequence in 2½ years.

An individualized study plan can be developed to provide a balance of responsibilities for home, work and school.

For more information, call the nursing admission office at 591-8321.

NOW plans Lansing rally

A pro-choice rally sponsored by the Michigan Conference of the National Organization for Women will be held noon Saturday, Sept. 14, at the state Capitol in Lansing.

The rally protests Michigan Senate Bill 141 which imposes a 24-hour waiting period on women seeking an abortion.

Speakers are scheduled to include the Rev. Teresa Cooley of the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights; Carol King, executive director of the Michigan Abortion Rights Action League;and state Rep. Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills.

Additional information on the rally is available by calling Michigan NOW, 517-485-9687.

UM-D series features top-rated films

It could be the best film buy in town — better then second run movie houses, better than cable, better even than VCR.

That's because the University of Michigan-Dearborn fall film series is offering its movies for free.

And it's not a mix of flops and forgotten oldies, either.

Instead, the college Student Activities Board hand-picked such recent blockbusters as "Robin Hood, Pricne of Thieves," "The Silence of the Lambs" and "Terminator II", with a sprinkling of such perennials as "Citizen Kane" and "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" to fill out the bill. "Not only did we pick films students would be interested in, but we wanted to reach out to the community, too," program coordinator Daniel Lascu said.

Hollywood is increasingly making hit movies available for campus use, Lascu said, and UM-D students eagerly sought to take advantage of the offer.

The series began earlier this month and concludes with "Doc Hollywood" on Dec. 11-12.

The series doesn't duck controversy. "Boyz n the Hood," a film which recently drew as much publicity for theater violence as praise for its realistic portrayal of city life among black youth, is scheudled for a November showing.

"There was some thought that went into it, but this is a film we feel very strongly about presenting," Lascu said. "People now realize what it's about and can view it in a relaxed setting."

Movies will be shown in the campus Recreation and Organization Center, Evergreen road, between Ford and Michigan avenues, Dearborn.

All films are at 7:30 p.m. Films are shown Wednesday and Thursday, unless noted.

The full schedule, with film ratings and principal actors, includes:

- Sept. 18-19 — "The Silence of the Lambs," R, Jodie Foster, Anthony Hopkins, Scott Glenn.
- Sept. 25-26 — "What About Bob?" PG, Bill Murray, Richard Dreyfuss.
- Oct. 2-3 — "Backdraft," R, Kurt Russell, William Baldwin, Robert DeNiro.
- Oct. 9-10 — "Rocketeer," PG, Timothy Dalton, Bill Campbell.
- Monday, Oct. 14 and Tuesday, Oct. 15 — "Citizen Kane," no rating, Orson Welles, Joseph Cotton.
- Oct. 16-17 — "City Slickers," PG, Billy Crystal, Daniel Stern, Bruno Kirby, Jack Palance.
- Oct. 23-24 — "Jungle Fever," R, Wesley Snipes, Annabella Sciorra.
- Oct. 30 — "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," R, Tim Curry, Susan Sarandon, Barry Bostwick.
- Friday, Nov. 1 and Saturday, Nov. 2 — "Terminator 2: Judgment Day," R, Arnold Schwarzeneggar, Linda Hamilton.
- Nov. 6-7 — "Robin Hood, Prince of Thieves," PG-13, Kevin Costner, Morgan Freeman.
- Nov. 13-14 — "Boyz n the Hood," R, Larry Fishburne, Ice Cube.
- Saturday, Nov. 16 and Sunday Nov. 17 — "101 Dalmations," G, Walt Disney Studios Cartoon.
- Nov. 20-21 — "The Doctor," PG-13, William Hurt.
- Dec. 4-5 — "Mobsters," R, Christian Slater, Richard Grieco, Patrick Dempsey, Costas Mandelar.
- Dec. 11-12 — "Doc Hollywood," PG-13, Michael J. Fox, Woody Harrelson.

Bond issue

Yes vote urged on Sept. 24

VOTERS IN CANTON TOWNSHIP will head to the polls on Tuesday, Sept. 24, to decide the fate of a $59.7 million bond issue for Plymouth Canton Community Schools.

The money raised will be used to build two new elementary schools in Canton Township, add classroom space to Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton high schools and put high tech equipment in the schools.

We agree 100 percent with the bond issue and its goals.

There has been no organized opposition to the bond issue, and we hope none materializes.

But while we're behind the bond issue, we have some reservations about the policy seemingly etched in stone that weds the district to continuing to expand the high schools.

Adding 12 classrooms and expanding the cafeteria at Salem High School is fine, but if the area continues to grow, a new high school will be needed. And that concerns us. We wonder if the present site can support another high school.

But while we question the school district's building policy, we don't have any reservations about the way it looks at technology. The school district is going in the right direction on that one.

Superintendent John Hoben is a great believer in technology in the classroom. He envisions classrooms linked to computers and each with the capability to use video tapes.

IF WE'RE SERIOUS about training our children to function in the 21st century, then we're going to need to teach them how to function in a high tech world, where even telephones have become computerized. It seems as though schools too often are teaching kids how to cope with the 1980s and not the next century.

The only criticism usually leveled against bond issues is the cost. It's there, but we don't think it's one that can't be carried by the community.

If we're serious about training our children to function in the 21st century, then we're going to need to teach them how to function in a high tech world, where even telephones have become computerized. It seems as though schools too often are teaching kids how to cope with the 1980s and not the next century.

Here's the bond issue in dollars and cents, according to the school district:

- The district's existing debt would be paid off in the year 2000. If the bond issue passes, the schools' debt will be paid by 2018.
- The schools levy two millage taxes, an operating millage and debt retirement. The operating millage is around 35 mills, or $35 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. The debt retirement is 2.3 mills, or $2.30 per $1,000 of assessed valuation..
- The bond issue can be handled by the district without any change in the debt retirement of 2.3 mills.

We acknowledge there is a cost to the bond issue. However, it won't increase property taxes. The bonds will be financed by anticipated increases in taxes.

There are some who would argue that taxes could be reduced earlier without a bond issue. We don't buy that line of thinking. We doubt if school taxes will ever be reduced.

But that's another swamp. We think that schools must be concerned about students' futures.

And one way we can help ensure that they do have a future is by voting yes on the bond issue on Sept. 24.

Take action

CARJACKING.

A word that wasn't in our vocabulary six months ago has become the most talked-about crime in recent memory. City and suburbs alike, drivers are pulling up to traffic lights and looking suspiciously at the people in the car next to them.

It's a hard problem for responsible people. Instinct says fight back; reason dictates a more prudent approach. It's a hard problem because there is no easy, correct solution.

That means, to us, that the solution lies in a combination of actions, starting with something we've advocated all along: greater cooperation between the city of Detroit and our suburbs. Carjackers certainly aren't worrying about which side of Eight Mile they hit.

IF THERE is to be a task force culled from suburban and city law enforcement departments, then it needs to become active immediately, not only to halt carjackings, but to let residents know that someone is responding to this problem.

Additionally, courts can cooperate with one another and agree on a substantial, regional sentence for convicted carjackers. That way carjackers would find the sentence would be the same, regardless of where the crime took place.

Before laying all the responsibility in the lap of law enforcement, we also would call on the area's large corporations — car insurance companies, for example — to lend a little muscle to this fight. Let's veer off course for a minute.

Do you know why you didn't hear about the death toll on the road this past Labor Day weekend? It's because the car insurance companies have been so effective in their pitch for safe driving that the death toll now is pretty much the same on holiday weekends as it is on any other weekend.

That's clout, and insurance companies have a vested interest in seeing carjacking stop. If they have to pay out too much on too many claims, then redlining will increase, premiums will follow suit and residents will howl more than they already are about mandating a rollback and then capping premium rates.

Courts can cooperate with one another and agree on a substantial, regional sentence for convicted carjackers. That way carjackers would find the sentence would be the same, regardless of where the crime took place.

BACK ON the law enforcement end, anyone in the suburbs who drives the freeways to work has seen police, waiting to nail anyone going over the speed limit. With such a serious problem as carjacking upon us, it would be worthwhile to get those police cars out on the roads, patrolling.

There's also the spinoff effect of all this. In some suburban areas, it's pretty common to see white police officers pulling over and questioning black drivers. Sometimes it seems as though they rarely pull over white drivers. If carjacking persists, everyone is going to get edgier than they already are, which eventually could materialize in the form of escalating incidents of harrassment. No one needs that.

So let's get this taken care of and prove two things: that we can eradicate carjacking by making the certainty of punishment so great that no one will want to take the risk; and that when it's important, we can band together and solve a common problem.

Freshman legislator opens up way to women's right to vote

Harry Burns did it for his mother.

Nearly half the adult population of the United States had been denied the right to vote from the time of the country's founding.

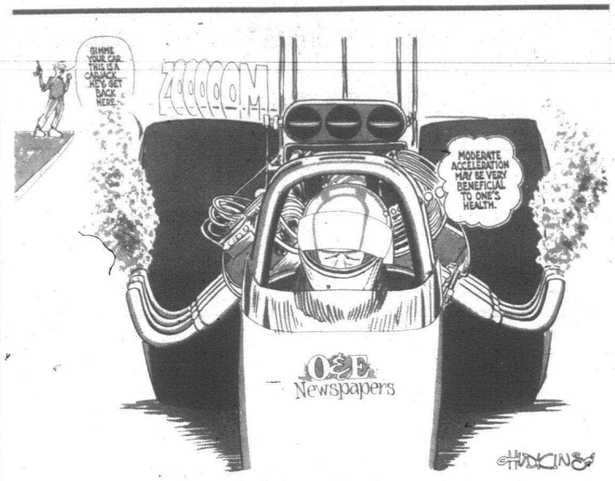
The framers of the Constitution had neatly side-stepped the question by leaving voting qualifications to the states. Few states gave women the vote.

The women's rights movement began to take shape at the Seneca Falls Convention in 1848 under the leadership of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott. By a narrow margin convention delegates passed a resolution favoring women's suffrage.

But the day was far from coming. The 19th Amendment passed the House in 1918 and the Senate in 1919. Carrie Chapman Catt led the fight for state ratification.

The final showdown focused on Tennessee and a 24-year-old freshman legislator. Harry Burns voted for the amendment because his mother asked him to "be a good boy and help Mrs. Catt." He also helped give the franchise to 26,000,000 Americans when ratification was concluded on Aug. 26, 1920.

This is another in a continuing series marking the anniversary of the Bill of Rights.



Fear of change deters year-round school idea

Philip Power

A RITUAL in our house is taking a picture of my son, Nathan, as he boards the first bus of the new school year. Nathan, 9, will be a fourth grader for the 180 days that Michigan children attend school.

Nathan's counterparts in Scotland attend school 200 days a year, in Israel 215, South Korea 220, in Japan 243 — two full months longer than American kids.

It isn't surprising that children who go to school longer than Americans learn more. Most tests comparing school achievement show our kids lagging behind those of our international economic competitors.

WHY NOT increase the number of days of school from Michigan's currently mandated 180 days?

Habit, for one reason. Schools resist change.

Cost, for another. According to Beverly Wolkow, executive director of the Michigan Education Association, our biggest teachers' union, the average teacher in Michigan makes around $38,000 per year — $210 a day. Paying 80,000 teachers for five extra days would cost $84 million.

Admittedly, there's a big argument about extra pay for those extra days. Some say teachers are paid an annual salary; working extra days is just part of the job. Wolkow says that's not fair.

Let's compromise: $100 a day for five more days, or $40 million — not peanuts.

NOT UNTIL you realize that total local and state spending for Michigan K-12 schools is nearly $6.5 billion a year. So $40 million is only a 0.6 percent increase in the total.

There are other costs: bus drivers, custodians, administrators, utilities, materials, wear and tear on the buildings.

Who's to say five more days of school — a 2.7 percent increase in the total school year — aren't worth a 1 percent increase in spending?

Political reality, that's who. Gov. John Engler asked for $150,000 for six pilot districts to bump school days from 180 to 200. There's bipartisan legislative support for much the same thing.

But with the state facing a $300 million revenue shortfall and legislators from both parties preoccupied with survival after reapportionment, don't hold your breath waiting for a 200-day school year.

HUGH JARVIS, president of the Michigan Federation of Teachers (the smaller union), is pushing consideration of a year-round school calendar.

"Research has shown conclusively that students, especially in lower grades, lose much of what was learned during the school year over the traditional two-and-a-half months summer vacation," Jarvis said.

A brief, pre-bus preview of the multiplication tables with my son validates Jarvis' point.

A few districts are trying a year-round calendar — 45 days of class, 15 days vacation, repeated through the year. Huron Valley School District, around Milford in western Oakland County, was on such a plan when superintendent James Doyle arrived eight years ago.

"People like it," said Doyle of the optional year-round program. He estimated only 5 percent of district children enroll — "mostly because of tradition . . . families like taking the summer off."

Any learning improvements? "Statistically, you can't find much evidence in test scores, but you get the impression that they retain more," he said.

Added costs? "No big ones, although you'd probably have to air-condition all the buildings."

A good idea hangs in the air, one that doesn't cost much and just maybe would helps kids learn. On the other side are tradition, inertia, fear of change.

When will we ever learn?

Growth is questioned in Canton

To the editor:

In the article, "Canton OKs suit to stop airport buy," (Aug. 26, 1991, Canton Observer), one resolution point approving the law suit struck me as rather hypocritical:

"The Canton community is best served when the future of its land is determined by the people in Canton, rather than outside communities or outside agencies;"

Over 100 residents of western Canton protested rezoning of a partial from R1, to R2. During the hearing, the planning commission agreed with the following observations . . .

- With a declining overall population in southeast Michigan, additional housing is not required.
- New residents and businesses would have to be drawn from older communities reducing their tax base and forcing increased taxes on those remaining. Their county, state and federal taxes would also have to be increased to pay for subsidized suburban expansion.
- Canton residents who do not want their environment destroyed, will pay higher taxes to subsidize new developments in order to keep them marketable.

After they agreed to the above, the only conclusions that could be drawn were:

It is not in the best interest of current Canton residents to continue subsidizing growth. The net effect will be increased property taxes, reduced relative market values, and destroyed living environments.

The only interests served, along with the local governing body that feeds on a growing tax base, are of outside investors, developers and builders.

When asked to confirm these conclusions, the planning commission remained silent. Under pretense "You can't stop progress," rezoning was approved.

"The Canton community is best served" by protecting current living environments and tax levels. Requiring new developments bear the full tax burden of increased demands on infrastructure and governmental/educational services would discourage unneeded suburban sprawl.

Instead of protecting community interests, our leaders seem to be motivated by a drive for more power generated by a greater tax base at their disposal.

Adoption is an option to abortion

To the editor:

I have always been one to believe in pro choice, but certain circumstances have made me look into this more deeply. Lisa Alcock's letter to the editor (8/22) did make some sense.

But there are some things that are more important than a woman's right. That is the right of that unborn child.

The woman who has an abortion is once in a while a victim of rape or incest, but most of the time it is someone that just didn't take precautions or just wasn't careful enough.

The woman may say, "Well I don't have the money to have a child." Maybe she should have thought about that before. In that case there are many people who would love to have children but can't. Let those people have a chance instead of being selfish because of an inconvenience that was caused by you in the first place. Abortion is not a form of birth control, but these days that's the way most people feel about it.

Words fail him — and court

Tim Richard

AMBROSE BIERCE (1842-1913), the journalistic and literary misanthrope, summed up the Michigan legal scene far better than any modern story in one of his "Fantastic Fables." It goes:

"A Man in a Hurry, whose watch was at his lawyer's, asked a Grave Person the time of day.

"I heard you ask that Party Over There the same question," said the Grave Person. "What answer did he give you?"

"He said it was about 3 o'clock," replied the Man in a Hurry; "but he did not look at his watch, and as the sun is nearly down I think it is later."

"The fact that the sun is nearly down," the Grave Person said, "is immaterial, but the fact that he did not consult his timepiece and make answer after due deliberation and consideration is fatal. The answer given," continued the Grave Person, consulting his own timepiece, "is of no effect, invalid and void."

"What, then," said the Man in a Hurry eagerly, "is the time of day?"

"The question is remanded to the Party Over There for a new answer," replied the Grave Person, returning his watch to his pocket and moving away with great dignity.

He was a judge of an Appellate Court.

FIVE GRAVE persons on the Michigan Supreme Court wouldn't give the time of day to Irving A. August, who at age 60 would like his law license back.

After a felony conviction in 1983, August lost his license and did 10 months time. He waited the mandatory five years and applied for reinstatement in the State Bar on Oct. 28, 1988 — three years ago.

Consider the steps he has been through:

- He went to a Wayne County hearing panel and was turned down.
- He appealed to an Attorney Discipline Board, and here he began to get the Party Over There treatment. The board said August had established his eligibility and would have reinstated him, but it apparently failed to determine that August had proven he warranted it.
- The State Bar grievance administrator appealed the discipline board's decision to the Supreme Court, which heard oral arguments April 2. Justices admitted "the ultimate power to regulate and discipline members of the bar rests with the Supreme Court." But then they pulled the Grave Person's trick: They looked at their timepieces, refused to give the Man in a Hurry an answer, and remanded the case to the Attorney Discipline Board.

Voting for remand were Justices Patricia Boyle (who wrote the opinion), James Brickley, Dorothy Riley, Robert Griffin and Conrad Mallett Jr.

(To their credit, two justices were ready to make a decision: Michael Cavanagh against August, Charles Levin for.)

- Whether August has the patience, time and legal expenses to pursue his case back to the Attorney Discipline Board remains to be seen.

THIS IS NOT to make a case for Irving August, a man I met once outside the Supreme Court's chamber.

It's disappointing that five people making more than $100,000 a year needed 90 minutes of oral arguments, a couple hundred pages of written briefs and almost five months to move away with great dignity without answering the question.

Words fail me, so let's consult the thesaurus:

"Delay always breeds danger, and to protract a great design is often to ruin it." Cervantes, Don Quixote.

"We were always getting ready to live, but never living." Emerson, Journals.

"One of these days is none of these days." English proverb.

"There is a time when the word 'eventually' has the soothing effect of a promise, and a time when the word evokes in us bitterness and scorn." Hoffer, The Passionate State of Mind.

"Between saying and doing, many a pair of shoes is worn out." Italian proverb.

Take a few lessons from school planner

John Telford

FOR SEVEN YEARS as his top assistant, I watched school Superintendent John Schultz of Rochester do one whale of a job.

I have worked for superintendents Mike Hoben of Plymouth/Canton, George Garver, late of Walled Lake and Livonia, and Bill Keane of Berkley and the Oakland Intermediate District.

I am also closely acquainted with other highly knowledgeable CEO's like Bob Docking of Bloomfield Hills, Terry Follbaum of Centerline, George DePillo of Warren and former superintendents Art Jefferson of Detroit, Lew Schulman of Farmington and the hard-driving Sam Flam of Berkley.

The best superintendents routinely work 80-hour weeks, and they share an eclectic expertise in budgeting, curriculum, personnel deployment and strategic planning. It is in the latter category that Dr. Schultz boasts a near-legendary reputation. His intricate long-range planning model has received national attention.

THE ROCHESTER schools were no different than most other bureaucracies when he became superintendent. Each department carried out its own plans minus any coordination with other departments. The predictable result: chaos. Schultz and his new leadership team set out to develop procedures for long-range analysis based on corporate methods.

Throughout the winter we surveyed the key players in the district and analyzed the findings. In November we looked at changes in the community; in December the staff underwent scrutiny; in January the topic was enrollment projections, followed by student "profiles" and financial assessments in February and March.

Then we developed likely scenarios if nothing happened to change current trends. Finally, we studied each scenario in terms of SWOTS (strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, threats). From this we established long-range goals, concrete objectives and strategies for meeting them.

Annually, we repeated and refined the process. All of this required an intense investment in time and resources that discourages most other districts from even attempting such an indepth venture.

IT IS A heightened misfortune that last year with little warning there came forth from Lansing a political expediency called "categorical recapture" which slashed school reimbursements by millions of dollars (and incidentally caused me to decide to retire to save the jobs of some of my younger staff).

This recapture was accomplished by reduced allocations to districts with high state-equalized property evaluation per pupil. These "out-of-formula" districts are no longer reimbursed for some things such as special education, driver education and student transportation.

Rochester alone lost millions of dollars from this, as well as additional millions for 1991 through the recently enacted residential property tax freeze. Adding to that large and growing district's difficulties is a desperate need to pass a $31 million bond to renovate deteriorated buildings and purchase land for a bus facility.

Any hope for visionary school planning goes up in smoke when our state government imposes such seat-of-the-pants legislation that cuts the tall trees in the forest without appreciably nourishing the short ones. In doing this, it had no inkling of the cruel impact on school employees' livelihoods and children's learning environments.

Maybe our governor and legislature could use some long-range planning lessons from John Schultz.

John Telford, a Rochester Hills resident, most recently was an assistant superintendent in the Rochester School District. He previously was executive director for secondary education in the Plymouth Canton district.

Art makes changes in quality of life

Corinne Abatt

The thought of leaving the position of Creative Living editor after more than 15 years produces a rush of conflicting emotions.

There will be more time for getting the muscles and the golf swing back in shape — more time to walk and swim, polish the photography skills, do research in the library and take a couple of investment and decorative arts (I never said I knew it all) classes. Course I'm looking forward to more leisurely visits with the kids and grandson — are they gonna be thrilled or what? Yes, these good things and some possible new career directions bring a smile of anticipation.

But, right along with these comes a tinge of sadness. Friends, on their third, fourth or 10th million, are prone to try to comfort me about my lack of extreme, vulgar, financial success by remarking how lucky I am to have met so many interesting people.

That's my consolation prize. They say it to be nice, but it happens to be true — in spades. Many of the people I've interviewed have been artists — painters, musicians, sculptors, authors and occasionally interior designers, architects, gardeners and builders.

With the artists, particularly, the act of creating — producing something that has never been seen, heard or printed before — is in a sense a birthing or life-giving process, and as such, it can be intoxicating. What a joy to play even a minor role in all this, especially since the quality of art coming out of this part of Michigan continues to improve.

How can anyone call the teaching of arts in the schools frills? The act of creation involves innovative thinking and problem solving and carried forward to the respectable amateur or professional level involves math, science, history, philosophy and possibly even biology, botany and cultural studies.

Arts in Michigan have flourished in the last decade or so. Thank the now defunct Michigan Council for the Arts, regional art centers, determined, dedicated community art councils, orchestras and artists groups for that.

And now that the arts have fallen on hard times in Michigan, bet your last dime, they're not gonna lie down and play dead. I love that quality about people in the arts, so many are doggedly persistent and innovative in approach at the same time. They'll find a way, they always have. It's just that sometimes it gets harder and harder to be a visionary or a seer, to point out the foibles of our society, to make the environment more beautiful, more interesting, more challenging or more exciting.

Sure, nobody ever promised these people a rose garden, but to all whom I've worked with and written about and to the many I've missed — here's a long-stemmed rose from me for your valiant and heart-warming efforts. We're talkin' about quality of life — you really do make a difference.

SC men still kicking despite going winless

It wasn't what Schoolcraft College men's soccer coach Van Dimitriou hoped for. Starting the season by going winless in a two-game tournament can hardly be termed a successful start.

But it was no disaster, either. The Ocelots, playing in the Triton College Tournament in Chicago last weekend, suffered a 3-1 loss to Rosary College, a local four-year school, on Saturday.

On Sunday, SC rallied to tie Lewis and Clark Community College to go 0-1-1 in the tourney.

Although the record wasn't impressive, the tournament served its purpose, according to Dimitriou. "Every game we're looking for a little bit of improvement," he said. "And it looks like we're getting it.

"We now basically have a set team in regards to positions. We've established who is who on the team."

ONE NOTABLE "who" for the Ocelots last weekend was sophomore forward Jeff VanDemergel. Of the three SC goals, he scored two and assisted on the third.

Sophomore midfielder Chris Crawford, who was just returning from an ankle injury, had his moments, too; he assisted on each of VanDemergel's scores.

But the rest of the offense continued to sputter, said Dimitriou. "We're getting some support at the point of the attack, but not enough."

There were defensive breakdowns as well. Against Rosary, the Ocelots found themselves down 2-0 25 minutes into the match. "We were playing them well, but not as a unit," said Dimitriou.

SC turned it around in the second half. VanDemergel scored with 14 minutes gone on a cross from Crawford to make it 2-1, but Rosary countered five minutes later to regain their two-goal edge. SC had chances afterward, the best on a penalty kick with 10 minutes left after VanDemergel was hauled down. But Dave Hebestreit's attempt was stopped.

AGAINST LEWIS and Clark, the Ocelots got a few breaks — notably when Lewis and Clark missed a penalty kick early in the match.

The game's first goal came with 20 minutes elapsed. VanDemergel looped a pass on a restart to Bob Hayes, who headed it home to make it 1-0, SC.

But 12 minutes later, a miscommunication led to a defensive breakdown and resulted in an easy goal for Lewis and Clark. Fourteen minutes into the second half, Lewis and Clark took a 2-1 lead when a shot was chipped over SC keeper Scott Hauman.

Again, SC missed chances to take control. Hayes flicked a pass from Crawford over an open net with 25 minutes left, but 10 minutes later the Ocelots got the tying goal when Crawford angled a pass from the left side to VanDemergel on the right, and he tucked it in.

Salem hopes to 3-peat as Lakes champ

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Salem hopes to have another season like it did last year in boys cross country, and the first dual-meet results indicate the Rocks are headed in the right direction.

Salem opened the season Saturday with a 13th-place finish in Division III of the West Bloomfield Invitational and defeated Plymouth Canton 25-30 Tuesday at Cass Benton Park.

The Rocks won the Lakes Division title for the second straight year, were second in the Western Lakes Activities Association, won a regional championship and finished 21st in the state meet last season.

"We feel we have another good team," seventh-year coach Geoff Baker said. "When it comes down to the league and regional meets, we'll be out there shooting for our best times and trying to show the other teams we have to be reckoned with."

The Rocks lost three excellent runners in John Thomas, Mike Patterson and Andy Hellmers, but they return four varsity veterans in seniors Jayson McDonald, Matt Cifaldi and Steve Boudreau and junior Derek Cudini.

JUNIORS JAMIE Miller and Matt Erickson and sophomore Jon Mickevicius gained experience on the JV team last year. Junior Justin Richardson is a top newcomer.

Cudini was the top runner in the dual meet with a 17:35 time. McDonald was second (18:19), Mickevicius fifth (18:43), Richardson seventh (18:51) and Cifaldi 10th (18:59). Boudreau was 11th (18:59) and Miller 14th (19:19) in non-scoring roles.

"We ran well Saturday and we ran better today," Baker said. "The times should keep falling as the guys get more confidence in themselves."

Defending WLAA champ Walled Lake Western has one of the state's best teams, "but I think we can place second again," Baker said. "That's a pretty realistic goal, I believe. I think the division is within our grasp again."

As for defending their regional crown, the Rocks will have to compete with Western, Redford Catholic Central, Ann Arbor Pioneer, Novi and Ann Arbor Huron.

"It will probably be the best regional in the state," Baker said. "It's a shame only three will get out. Six teams could place in the top 15 in the state.

"All we can do is stay healthy and hope we run our best that day."

Scoring for Canton in the dual meet were Chris Burns, third (18:31); Shawn McNamara, fourth (18:40); Tim Czerniawski, sixth (18:50); Dave Yack, eighth (18:52); and Casey Moothart, ninth (18:52). The Chiefs won the JV meet 24-35.

Catholic League teams tough on Salem cagers

Plymouth Salem is seeing good competition but taking its lumps from the Catholic League Central Division girls basketball powers.

The Rocks have lost their last two games to Farmington Hills Mercy and Birmingham Marian, 36-28 and 54-41, respectively. Salem will be host to Harper Woods Regina on Saturday night.

Salem (1-3) trailed 29-22 at halftime Tuesday at Marian and was outscored 23-11 in the third quarter and fell behind 52-33.

"That was critical for us," Salem coach Fred Thomann said. "Marian did a great job of making shots, and we got stymied just a bit."

The Rocks cut down on their turnovers from the Mercy game but have been trying to regroup and re-adjust their lineup, Thomann said, after point guard Kelly Austin re-injured a knee in the win over Waterford Kettering.

AUSTIN, WHO missed all of last season after having knee surgery, was to have arthroscopic surgery performed on the knee today.

Senior forward Michele Coughlin scored 16 points to lead the Mustangs (2-1), including 10 in the third quarter. Tara Walsh chipped in 12 points, and junior guard Stephanie Storen had 11 points, six rebounds, four assists and four steals.

Senior center Darcie Miller played an outstanding game for Salem, scoring a game-high 21 points, grabbing 12 rebounds and blocking eight shots. Leslie Gotts added eight points for the Rocks.

In the Mercy game Saturday, the visiting Marlins regrouped in the second half to overcome a 10-point halftime deficit and defeat Salem.

Mercy was behind 11-2 in the first quarter and trailed 22-12 at halftime, but it held the Rocks to just six points in the second half while increasing its offensive production.

Senior center Laure DeMattia scored 12 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Mercy outscored the Rocks 13-4 in the third quarter and 11-2 in the finale.

"BELIEVE IT or not, it was a high-tempo game; we attempted to run the break," Mercy coach Larry Baker said. "We defensed the heck out of each other."

The Marlins struggled against Salem's zone defense in the first quarter but had the Rocks "tied up in knots with our pressure" in the second half, according to Baker.

"We mounted a tremendous effort in the fourth quarter," he said. "It was a grinding type of game. Our conditioning paid off."

Seven was a good number for Mercy senior guard Kathleen Berrigan, who had seven points, seven assists and seven steals. The Marlins (3-1) shot 25 percent from the floor (13-53) but made 10 of 19 free throws.

Salem was led by Cyndi Platter's 10 points and Miller's six. The Rocks were only 1-of-2 at the free throw line.

"Mercy's defense was very aggressive," Thomann said. "We just didn't close out our scoring opportunities very well."

Moore leads PCA victory

Senior center Jennifer Moore scored 21 points and pulled in 12 rebounds Tuesday as host Plymouth Christian Academy romped past Taylor Light and Life 56-8 in girls basketball.

Senior forward Christin Thomason chipped in 10 points and 11 rebounds for the Eagles, 2-0. Plymouth Christian led 37-6 at halftime.

Moore is averaging 23 points and 16 rebounds in the two games.

The boys soccer season is barely two weeks old, and Plymouth Christian Academy has already matched its success level of a year ago.

The Eagles were 2-12 but have started the new year 2-1-1, and that has second-year coach Kyle Mavin feeling good about his team's outlook for the rest of the 1991 campaign.

PCA has defeated Dexter 5-2 and Saline Christian 7-0, lost to Rochester Hills Christian 4-1 and tied Lutheran Westland 2-2 Tuesday.

In the latter contest, senior Paul Backman scored on a penalty kick, and freshman Ryan Thomason scored off a pass from sophomore Jeff Nielson. The Eagles led 1-0 and 2-1.

Mavin has six returning players on his 15-player roster, including Backman and Nielson. The others are seniors Matt Cronan, Matt Ockerman and Jeff Hess and junior Lynn Stephenson.

JUNIOR RYAN Calvin and sophomore Mike Barna are first-year players, and Mavin speaks highly of a talented freshman class that consists of Thomason, Andy Roose, Aaron Jones, Shannon Mayer (the only girl on the team), Art Partain, Todd Burrell and Dan House.

"All of them are very strong players," said Mavin of the freshmen. "They know the game very well."

Backman, who has five goals and three assists already, Hess (two goals and six assists) and Roose are the forwards.

"They run the give-and-go very well," Mavin said. "Hess is a natural left-footer and can change fields easily."

Playing the halfback positions are Thomason, Nielson and House. All are good playmakers, Mavin said. That is evidenced by Thomason's four goals and four assists and Nielson's six assists.

The defenders are Partain and Barna at the fullbacks, Stephenson at stopper and Ockerman at sweeper. Cronan is a third-year varsity player who begins his second year as the starting goalkeeper.

"He's starting to come out and challenge people instead of letting them take shots at him," said Mavin of Cronan.

The Eagles will be host to Huron Valley Lutheran and Trinity on Friday and Tuesday before traveling to Warren for a game with defending Michigan Independent Athletic Conference champ Bethesda Christian on Friday, Sept. 20.

Hawks battle rested Rocks

By Dan O'Meara and Brad Emons staff writers

Farmington Hills Harrison played one of the biggest games in the history of Michigan high school football Saturday when it met Birmingham Brother Rice in the Silverdome.

But the Hawks have no time to relax or bask in the afterglow of their stunning, 32-0 victory.

Harrison has another big game on its schedule this weekend. The Hawks will be host to Plymouth Salem in what could be a preview of the Western Lakes Activities Association final Saturday afternoon.

Harrison is a three-time defending champion in the WLAA. Salem, which has never won the Lakes Division and played for the league title, is expected to be a strong contender for that opportunity this year.

The weekend lineup also features a match-up between defending Class AA champ Redford Catholic Central and Class AA playoff qualifier Detroit Mumford.

In the friendly prediction race, we have an early leader. Dan O'Meara went 13-2 in the first full week of action and jumped ahead of Brad Emons, who was 9-6. O'Meara is 15-2 overall, Emons 11-6.

For insight into the games this week and a chance to compare picks with the supposed experts, check out the following:

grid predictions

FRIDAY'S GAMES
(all games at 7:30 p.m.)

Westland Glenn at Liv. Churchill: The Rockets and Churchill have one thing in common: the final scores in their first games. The difference is Glenn was on the winning end of a 26-6 outcome against Highland Park on Aug. 30, and the Chargers lost to Class A playoff qualifier Dearborn by that score Friday. The Rockets had an extra week to rest and prepare for this game, too. PICKS: Is a British prime minister more powerful than a U.S. senator? Politics won't matter on the football field where Glenn has more clout, both agree.

Farmington at W.L. Western: The Warriors expect to have a good year, and they got started the right way Friday by beating always-tough Novi 10-7. The Falcons are hoping for good things, too, but lost their opener 20-8 at West Bloomfield. PICKS: The edge goes to Western, both agree.

N. Farmington at Ply. Canton: Records don't matter in this game. North is 0-1 but lost by a touchdown (21-14) to Pontiac Northern — possibly the best Class AA team in Oakland County and one of the best in the state. The Raiders were leading 14-13 until Northern scored with 1:14 remaining. Canton made a successful debut Friday by beating host Monroe 18-6 as sophomore Kevin Shankle made his first start at quarterback. The Chiefs should have another fine year and could qualify again for the playoffs. PICKS: Emons likes the Raiders, while O'Meara thinks Canton has an edge on its home field.

Harper Woods at Liv. Clarenceville: Both teams enter Metro Conference play 0-1. The Trojans were beaten 17-7 by Center Line St. Clement, and Harper Woods was pounded 27-0 by Grosse Pointe University-Liggett. Despite that setback, Clarenceville was 6-3 last season and has the potential for another good year. PICKS: The Trojan horse trick won't work for Harper Woods. Clarenceville produces a victory, both agree.

Garden City at Romulus: Coach Dan Henry saw the host Eagles off with a victory in the new season, winning 13-8 over Taylor Truman. Garden City is smarting after a 28-12 loss to Dearborn Heights Crestwood. PICKS: Nobody should count out the Cougars, but both like Romulus in this one.

Redford Union at Wat. Kettering: Things were going well for RU last week, leading 14-0 over Livonia Stevenson. That was true until the Spartans rallied for 39 consecutive points and a one-sided victory. Can they rebound this week? They face an opponent that is coming off a big win. Kettering ripped Milford Lakeland 41-0. PICKS: The Captains could earn a promotion with another win like that. Kettering is the favorite, both agree.

Wayne Memorial at Trenton: Wayne squeaked by an Adrian team expected to be pretty good this year, 20-19. For the second year in a row, the Zebras won it in the final minute — this time stopping an attempted two-point conversion. Trenton had an extra week off after losing 14-0 to Plymouth Salem Aug. 30. The Trojans were 0-9 last year and are rebuilding under first-year coach Bob Czarnecki. PICKS: Wayne wins its Wolverine A Conference opener, both agree.

Bishop Borgess at Ionia: The Spartans (1-0) are headed for central Michigan and O'Meara's old stomping grounds where he spent several years as sports editor of The Daily News in Greenville. Ionia and Greenville are old rivals, and the Bulldogs defeated their Class A opponent 21-13 last week. Ionia is one of the largest Class BB schools in the state, but so is Bridgeport. Borgess beat the Bearcats 8-0 on the road last week and had two TDs called back because of penalties. Ionia plays in the rugged Mid-Michigan B League with Chesaning, Corunna, St. John's and Alma, but the Bulldogs could have trouble with Borgess backs Lionel Kennedy and John Valentine, who combined for 230 yards rushing against Bridgeport. PICKS: Emons likes Ionia, but O'Meara goes with Borgess for another week.

SATURDAY'S GAMES
(all games at 1 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Stevenson at Liv. Franklin: Livonia football got a needed shot-in-the-arm last week with the performances of these teams. Both had impressive wins — Stevenson coming back to trounce RU and Franklin upsetting a traditional power in Lake Orion 14-3. It looks like a toss-up with both teams having a good running back in Chris Lehti for the Spartans and Aaron Shakarian for the Patriots. PICKS: Franklin has the home-field edge, but Stevenson comes out ahead, both agree.

Ply. Salem at Farm. Harrison: The first-time meeting between these teams (both 1-0) should be quite a game. Harrison is No. 1 in Class BB, Salem No. 5 in Class AA. Both feature possible all-state running backs in Roy Granger of Harrison (195 yards and four TDs against Rice) and Leon Hister of Salem. Salem coach Tom Moshimer was unable to scout Saturday's Harrison-Rice game because he attended the wedding of Rich Hewlett, arguably the greatest football player in Salem history. The teams did exchange game films, however. What he saw was Granger running wild and a bone-crushing defense, which held Rice to 17 yards rushing. But Salem also has a tradition for playing great defense, and that should help to make this game interesting. While many were understandably awed by Harrison's win over the Warriors, Moshimer might remind his players: Northville could have beaten Rice in the Class A semifinals last year, and the Rocks had beaten Northville when the teams met in an eighth-game rematch. PICKS: Don't expect Salem to be routed, too, but Harrison's size and strength on the line combined with the speed of Granger makes it hard to envision a loss for the Hawks. Both agree, it's Harrison.

D.H. Crestwood at Red. Thurston: The Thurston Eagles will probably have their fill of Dearborn Heights teams. They opened with a 32-2 loss to defending Class B champ Robichaud and this week face Crestwood, which defeated Garden City 28-14. The Eagles must figure a way to stop running back Chuck Reynolds, who ran through the Garden City defense for 284 yards and two TDs. PICKS: The Chargers win another game at Thurston's expense, both agree.

St. Alphonsus at Luth. Westland: Both teams enjoyed successful openers, Lutheran Westland beating Cardinal Mooney 28-13 and St. Al's knocking off Holy Redeemer 13-6. Lutheran Westland is fast becoming a respectable football school under coach Dennis Tuomi, if it hasn't already. Lutheran Westland was 5-4 last year and shows signs of being even better. PICKS: The Warriors will be the undefeated team after this game, both agree.

Redford CC vs. Det. Mumford at Clarenceville, 7:30 p.m.: Mumford should be another tough opponent on the Shamrocks' rugged schedule. CC whipped Temperance Bedford 24-6 in the opener, but the special teams accounted for 18 of the points. Under ordinary circumstances, that would be a big concern. But the Shamrocks have been successful for years with just enough offense and a rock-solid defense. And the CC defense looks pretty good. Mumford lost a close game to Southfield in the playoffs last year and opened this year with an 18-14 win over Detroit Cooley. PICKS: CC can't afford to look past the Mustangs to next week's rematch of the Class AA final at Detroit King. The Shamrocks won't let that happen, both agree. –

St. Agatha vs. G.P. University-Liggett at RU's Kraft Field, 7:30 p.m.: Following a pair of clashes between neighborhood rivals, the Aggies will travel across town to Grosse Pointe. The Class C teams are 1-0 after St. Agatha defeated Redford St. Mary's 14-6 and U-Liggett whipped Harper Woods 27-0. PICKS: The Aggies fall short, both agree.

Steelers win pair of football games

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers won two of three football games Sunday, with the JV and varsity teams winning season openers against the host Ann Arbor East Eagles.

Kevin Grim scored touchdowns on runs of 6 and 35 yards to pace the varsity in its 23-13 defeat of the Eagles.

Following a fumble recovery by Justin Hoff, Shaun Dyer of the Steelers started the scoring with an 18-yard run. Dan McKian booted the first of two two-point kicks for an 8-0 lead.

Jeremy Swanagan's 20-yard pass reception set up Grim's first score. Grim ran for his second TD in the third quarter after Brandon Helchowski recovered a fumble at the Ann Arbor 45. Jason Hoban ran for the conversion and a 23-0 lead.

Kevin Salla scored a pair of TDs to lead the JV team to an 18-6 victory.

The Steelers led 12-0 after a 4-yard run by Salla and a 2-yard bootleg keep by quarterback Nathan Gray. Randy Mack's rush of 20 yards led to Gray's score.

In the third quarter, Salla scored again from 3 yards following a 30-yard run by Ian Sereey. Bob Johnson stopped a late Eagles drive with an interception.

The Plymouth-Canton freshman team lost 25-7. Jason Carson scored the team's lone TD on a 15-yard run. Andy Kocoloski added a conversion run.

Lions freshmen; varsity gain wins

The Canton Lions football team opened its 1991 season with varsity and freshman victories Sunday over the Northville Colts.

The varsity ran up a 22-0 score in the second quarter behind the work of its first-string offense and coasted to a 53-0 victory.

Ken Seadek returned the opening kickoff 52 yards for a touchdown, John Stopera scored two TDs, Alex Ponce accounted for one TD and Robert Ujkaj added two extra-point kicks (four points total).

Scott Gocaj and Jason Radziszewski scored second-quarter TDs, and Kevin Costantino's fumble recovery set up a third-quarter score by Joe Krall. In the fourth quarter, the running of Adam Bradley put the Lions in position for Seadeek to score again.

The freshmen won 19-12 as quarterback Bradley Volas ran for two TDs and passed for another.

His first scoring run and Archie Kinney's extra point gave the Lions a first-quarter lead. Volas completed a 14-yard touchdown pass to Grant Grayer in the second period, and Volas crossed the opposing goal line again in the third.

John Rieger recovered a fumble for the Lions, and Michael Hoelscher, Ben Roller, Gordon Perrin and William Wanniger also were cited for their play on defense.

The JV lost 26-6. Quarterback Kurt Larson passed for 75 yards and scored the team's only touchdown.

Bowlers should beware of pitfalls

BOWLERS BEWARE!

The beginning of the regular season can have a few pitfalls.

Most experienced players know if you start the season after a long summer layoff, you could be in for a painful elbow, wrist, shoulder, thumb or back if you tend to overdo it.

For the first few weeks at least, all bowlers should warmup with a few mild stretching exercises before bowling. This will help prevent soreness in the muscles and back. Suggested: rotate the shoulders and stretch the arms out as far as possible, bend the back in all directions and flex the knees and hips.

Try not to overthrow at first. There is always a tendency for some bowlers to throw too hard, and this is especially true at the start of the season. The old truism, "Let the ball do the work," is a good point to use.

The weight of the ball at the backswing will usually provide enough power and speed without having to "muscle" the ball. Pay particular attenion to the thumb and fingers at this time as well.

It is very easy to acquire an unwanted blister or sore from the holes. It might just be worth a trip to the pro shop at this time to re-check the fit of your ball. There can be slight physical changes that can happen without realizing it, which could actually change the way your ball fits your hand.

Most pro shops will be glad to provide this service to any bowler as a courtesy. This is also a good time to check out the equipment and personal supplies.

The shoes are the main object of attention, and it is most important to see that they are in good shape. See if the sliding sole is soft; it may be necessary to go over it with a wire brush or steel wool. Check out the laces. If worn, replace now rather than when you are in a hurry to bowl.

Check the overall condition of the shoes, and if necessary, replace.

Next in order of importance after the ball, the shoes are vital to your game. Perhaps more so than in any other sport, the ability of the shoes to perform properly has more effect on the success of the player. If you do have to buy new shoes, remember to put comfort and performance ahead of vanity.

Better to have ugly shoes that perform well than great looking ones that are not comfortable or do not slide properly.

Other items to "gear up" with and carry along in the bag: extra pair of shoe laces; small towel; "Nu-skin" kit; rosin bag or other grip aids; "easy-slide" or similar product if you have a tendency to stick on the approach; small wire brush (or steel wool) to clean the shoe bottoms. Do not use talcum powder on the approaches under any circumstances.

Have I forgotten anything?

Or better yet, have you forgotten anything? Hope not, and good luck on the lanes this season!

• It looks like the "Patriot" bowling ball will become a popular item on the local lanes. Bob Chamberlain just rolled a 300 game with it, a week after Lou Ivancik did the trick with the same style ball in the All-Stars.

• Watch for the upcoming 2nd-annual "Tail-Waggers Bowl." This is a fun-draiser for the Michigan Humane Society based in Westland. Registration forms and pledge sheets will be out on Sept. 21, and they will have a lot of fun and prizes. Everyone is welcome, even non-bowlers.

This will be a nine-pin "no-tap" event to raise money for the Cruelty Investigation/Rescue Division. The date is Nov. 9 at Woodland Lanes in Livonia.

For details, call Laura Zain, event coordinator, at 261-3077.

• The "Support Team USA Bowling Program" will consist of a tournament at 2 p.m. on Oct. 26 at Satellite Bowl. Amateur bowlers will pair with members of "Team USA" and the members of the Detroit area's "All-City Teams." For a $35 entry fee participants will receive a new bowling bag, courtesy of Brunswick and be eligible for the cash prizes.

All proceeds from the tournament will benefit the Team USA which represents the United States in international competition. For more information, call 773-6350.

CC soccer team kicks rival Rice

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Redford Catholic Central senior forward Mario Scicluna didn't start Tuesday's soccer game against Birmingham Brother Rice, but he helped get things started for the Shamrocks.

And then he finished off Rice.

Scicluna scored CC's first and third goals as the Shamrocks opened the Catholic League Central Division schedule with a 3-0 win over Rice at Bell Creek Park. Senior midfielder Kerry Zavagnin, a more familiar face, sandwiched a goal in between Scicluna's two tallies.

Scicluna played on the junior varsity last year but his play of late has given coach Phil LaJoy reason to consider leaving a spot for him in the starting lineup.

"FOR A WHILE there I started to get worried about playing time, but I go in, bust my butt and have played pretty good," said Scicluna, who has three goals on the year. "If we get our stuff together I think we can be a top contender for the (Class A) state (title)."

Said LaJoy: "Mario has worked hard and he's a digger — and you need that."

The win makes CC 3-0 overall, but Tuesday's lineup hardly resembled the one that's been on the field the first two games. CC controlled the midfield despite playing without three key players for various reasons.

Missing were junior midfielders Clayton Campbell (who was ill) and Rob Harkins (who had a knee injury) and senior midfielder Scott Larner, who had to sit out because of two yellow cards he received in an earlier game.

LaJOY MOVED senior co-captain Matt McIntosh from his stopper position to center-midfield, next to Zavagnin, the other senior co-captain. Junior John Andreoli was moved from outside fullback to stopper and LaJoy inserted junior Jason Parent and senior Brian Maahs into the starting lineup as fullbacks.

Zavagnin, McIntosh, Matt Kopmeyer and Steve Heitert each collected assists for the Shamrocks.

"Rice gave us a good game and you can't take anything from them, but I thought we controlled play pretty well," LaJoy said. "They all did a very good job."

Goalkeeper Aaron Angeli suffered the loss for Rice and had to be replaced late in the game by Chris Timlin after Angeli was accidentally kicked in the stomach on Scicluna's second goal.

CC's Jeff Sawicki and Tim Bober shared the shutout and neither was tested by Rice's top scorer, Ryan Townsend, who had six goals coming into the contest.

One of the best scoring opportunities Rice had came in the second half when defender Scott Elton missed a chance to challenge CC from the side of the net off a direct kick.

"CC certainly came into the season as one of the top teams in the state — on paper," said Rice coach Jay Louis-Prescott, whose team fell to 4-3-1 overall and 0-1 in the Central Division. "Our offense didn't play well enough to have scoring opportunities and our midfield buildup was poor, but I thought Angeli made some big saves and played pretty well."

ZAVAGNIN, ONE of the top-rated players in the state, always draws attention with his dribbling skills and playmaking ability. But the Warriors also were bothered by a ring Zavagnin wore on his right hand. After the Rice coaching staff complained about it to the officials, the ring had to come off in the second half.

Players are not allowed to wear any kind of jewelry and Louis-Prescott thought Zavagnin was using the ring to his advantage by "jabbing" Rice players in the back with it while the referees weren't looking.

Zavagnin and LaJoy each denied the accusations.

"He (Louis-Prescott) has a right to say whatever he wants, but I don't think there's anything to that," LaJoy said.

"I don't see how it (the ring) hurts the game; I'm not going after anyone with it," Zavagnin said. "When their assistant coach brought it up (to the official) it seemed he was just trying to get me off my game. I don't know what the big deal was."

Salem golfers 2nd in tourney

Medalists Mark Peterson and Ryan Gusick combined for a 2-over 72 Tuesday, leading Livonia Stevenson to the team title in the 21st Annual Plymouth Best-Ball Invitational at Hilltop Golf Course.

The Spartans won the 18-team tourney with a 147 total. Mark Magnusson and Ryan Fawkes, who won a sudden death playoff for fourth place, combined for a 75 to figure in the team scoring.

Host Plymouth Salem finished second with a 152 total.

The Rocks were led by Jeff Hopson and Jeff Kotlarczyk, both seniors, who finished second overall with a 73. (Dave Weaver and Brian Botwinski combined for a 79 to complete the Salem scoring.)

Redford Thurston finished third overall with a team total of 153. Adam Stern and John Walsh led the Eagles with a 74, good enough for third among the two-man teams.

Rounding out the team scoring: Dearborn, 154; Northville, 157; Plymouth Canton, 159; Ypsilanti, 162; Belleville and Dearborn Edsel Ford, 166 each; Westland John Glenn, 167; Livonia Franklin and Allen Park, 168 each; Walled Lake Central and Trenton, 170 each; Redford Union, 177; Walled Lake Western and Garden City, 184 each; and Dearborn Heights Crestwood, 207.

Franklin's Jason Lamar and Mike Modreski combined for an 82, while teammates Joe Huber and Greg Kanowski carded an 86.

Redford Catholic Central, led by medalist Dave McNeil (even-par 35), defeated Central Division foe University of Detroit-Jesuit in a match Monday at Bros Burn in Plymouth, 152-165. CC is now 2-0.

Other CC scorers included Pat Casey and Dave Hermann, 37 each; Mike Arlen and Chris Ferry, 43 each.

Andy Baron had a 39 for U-D (0-3).

Rocks top Chiefs, end losing streak

A changing of the guard took place in girls cross country Tuesday when Plymouth Salem defeated rival Plymouth Canton for the first time in five years.

Canton had the top runner in Lana Boroditsch (21:08), but the Rocks captured the next six places to win 20-42 at Cass Benton Park.

"We're pretty inexperienced, and Salem is a powerhouse," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "They have one heckuva team."

Corey Gulkewicz was Salem's top runner and second overall at 21:47. She was followed by teammates Stacey Witthoff (21:55), Emily Farrell (21:58), Julie Cutting (22:10), Stacy Moore (22:17) and Kelly Morante (22:54). Jill Czaplicki of Salem was ninth (23:30).

The Chiefs put only three runners in the top 10, the others being Anne Dibble (23:18) in eighth place and Lara Antczak (23:58) in 10th.

North Farmington is fast emerging as a power in girls cross country. The Raiders have routed all of their dual-meet opponents thus far and Saturday won the Division II championship at the West Bloomfield Invitational.

North junior Emily Shively has become a legitimate star in the sport, too. Her first-place finish helped spark the Raiders to the title.

Shively finished the race in 20:05.3 and well ahead of runner-up Wyandotte Roosevelt's Becky Caldwell (20:43.3).

"Emily ran by herself for the last mile," North coach Bill Pinnell Jr. said. "No one could keep up with her."

North put four runners in the top 20, and all five of its individual scorers were in the top 30.

Sophomore Keegan Keefover was ninth (21:43), senior Jenny Web 14th (22:10), senior Lisa Wantuck 19th (22:18) and sophomore Alicia Crossland 30th (22:44).

North had 73 team points and won easily over runner-up Holly (102).

Kearney's 7th goal paces Canton win

Plymouth Canton improved to 5-1 overall in boys soccer Monday after blanking Farmington 2-0.

Canton outshot the visiting Falcons 29-7 as Ryan Henkel and Jim Bradley combined for the shutout. Farmington fell to 1-2.

Brett Kearney scored his seventh goal of the year off a pass from Chris Hayes to give the Chiefs a 1-0 lead. Kearney fed Mike Hayes later in the half, and Hayes who booted his fifth goal of the season.

"We played real well," Canton coach Don Smith said. "Farmington has a pretty decent team, and they played hard to the end. We outshot them but the only ones that count are the ones that go in."

A pair of goals from Chris Hayes lifted Canton to a 3-2 victory over visiting Brighton (1-1-3) Saturday.

Jason Ripp tallied one goal, raising his season total to four, and Joe Sisko and Graham Wilk had one assist each for the Chiefs.

Lady Ocelots stay short on players

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

There's something all-too-painfully familiar about the Schoolcraft College women's soccer team.

Once again, a numbers game faces the Lady Ocelots.

A year ago, when they finished third in the National Junior College Athletic Association Tournament, they did it with the bare minimum. Cindy Bowman, who had been one of SC's top scorers, was in goal throughout the season-ending tourney simply because there was no one else.

Literally. There were just 11 team members at the end of the season.

While the talent in some aspects is improved — including goal, where Farmington grad Kim Owczarzak takes over — there are still holes to fill.

The bench is, once again, one of them.

When defender Jennifer Marshall opted against returning for her sophomore season, it left coach Nick O'Shea with a problem. All of the defense, save Livonia Franklin grad Jennifer Whitfield, has departed.

AND THERE is little to choose from. O'Shea opened practice last Monday with just 10 players. He has since increased his roster to 12, and had some other contacts.

But the latecomers may not be able to contribute too much, too soon.

Why the problems in recruiting? "I really think it's the '73 birth year," answered O'Shea, who has guided SC to the NJCAA Tournament in three of his four seasons and coached the Ocelots to a national title in '87. "They had a hard time in age group soccer and a lot of them quit then.

Schoolcraft sports

"There just weren't many seniors last year in high school."

The hometowns of O'Shea's signees indicate he has had to go to greater lengths to find players. Among his recruits are Becky Dinverno from Milford-Lakeland, Carol Pietila from South Lyon and Stacey Hilgendorf from St. Clair Shores South Lake.

STILL, IF O'Shea can find enough bodies, his team should fare well again. The offense is impressive, with Nikki Johnson (from Livonia Churchill) returning from last season's squad and Shannon Meath (Plymouth Canton) back after taking a year off. Meath was an all-American in '89.

Joining them will be Lori Place (Churchill), a strong inside player who started for O'Shea's Churchill team for four years.

The midfield should be more than adequate, too. Sarah Hayes (Plymouth Salem), who played both midfield and forward last season, returns. Nancy Pulice (Churchill), Dinverno and Pietila will join her there.

Of Dinverno, O'Shea said: "She's been a pleasant surprise. She has a real hard shot and works hard. I've been impressed by her so far.

"It's the same thing (with Pietila). Neither one is from a traditionally strong program, but they have looked good."

ON DEFENSE, O'Shea has Colleen O'Connor (Farmington Hills Mercy) slated as stopper and Amy Krajewski (Salem) to fill in at sweeper. Whitfield will be at one outside defender and Hilgendorf is expected to be the other.

Such a thin — actually, almost non-existant — bench creates so many questions. "If these 12 stay healthy, if we have them going into nationals, we'll do well," O'Shea predicted, "because they can play."

And yet, he admitted, "the defense right now is the question mark. If I have to rob from my midfield or offense for my defense, it will hurt."

The Lady Ocelots will be tested during their regular season, facing many of the top teams in the NJCAA. Included on their schedule are two trips to New York, the first this weekend for the Monroe CC Invitational. SC plays two games at Farmingdale CC (N.Y.) Sept. 27-28, a week after a trip to St. Louis (Sept. 20-21) for games against Central College (Kan.) and Florissant Valley CC.

The Lady Ocelots and Florissant Valley square off again at the SC Invitational Oct. 19-20. On the second day, SC plays Meramec CC.

If O'Shea can keep a team on the field, it could be another banner season.

Meath's goal salvages win for SC

Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team opened its season last weekend at the Monroe Community College Invitional in Rochester, N.Y., short on players but — according to coach Nick O'Shea — not on effort.

The Lady Ocelots lost their opener Saturday to the host Monroe team, 3-1. SC, which currently has just 12 players on its roster, was playing without sophomore defender Jennifer Whitfield, who was out with a muscle pull.

On Sunday, the Ocelots went against Champlain College (of Burlington, Vt.) and battled back for a 3-2 victory. Shannon Meath got the game-winning goal with 10 minutes left.

"In both games the girls really played hard," said O'Shea. "In the first game we had hard luck. We were pushing forward when we gave up the third goal, and still no one quit. They kept trying to score.

"That showed a lot of character."

Whitfield was back for the Champlain game, which helped. Still, it took some time for SC to adjust and attack properly.

"THEIR TEAM was backing off and our through balls were ineffective," explained O'Shea. "So we had to rely on Shannon and Nikki (Johnson), dribbling through the midfield."

The adjustment worked. Johnson twice forced Champlain defenders to make decisions to try and stop her. When they did, she fed the ball to Becky Diverno, and Diverno cashed in for two goals.

"She made brilliant runs out of the midfield," O'Shea said of Johnson's play, "just like we were asking on both."

Outrageous opera
Believable situation makes show funny

Performances of the Birmingham Theatre production of "Lend Me a Tenor" continue through Nov. 3. For ticket information, call the box office at 644-3533.

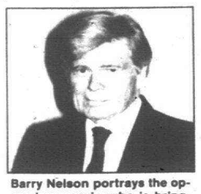
By Barbara Michals
special writer

AFTER 40 WEEKS, and 275 performances in 50 cities with the national tour of "Lend Me a Tenor," stars Barry Nelson and Ron Holgate are still freshly enthusiastic about the Birmingham Theatre production opening this week.

Holgate plays Tito, a flamboyant Italian tenor, who is about to make his American debut with a Cleveland opera company. His sudden, accidental incapacitation sets off a chain of hilarious complications. Nelson portrays Saunders, the distraught impresario trying to cope with it all.

BOTH ACTORS cite the show's fine writing as the reason for its enormous success.

"The genius of the play is that the situation is so believable. This is the most important day in the lives of these characters. The writing sets the situation up so that it makes sense and never seems forced," said Holgate who also directs this production. "Tenor" is a farce "of classical proportions" with eight players, one set, and six doors in frequent use.



Barry Nelson portrays the opera impresario who is bringing an internationally renowned opera star to Cleveland for his American debut in the zany comedy "Lend Me a Tenor" at the Birmingham Theatre.

"The comedy comes from the inter-relationships of these very volatile, colorful characters. The humor is not dependent on one-liners. In addition, the show has lots of visual appeal, with lots of movement plus a lush set and wonderful costumes," said Nelson.

All that movement proved hazardous when the show was rehearsing in Baltimore pre-Broadway, Holgate recalled. The much-used doors had sharp steel edges, and the performers all had bandaged knuckles and even a few stitches.

HOLGATE ORIGINATED the role of Tito when "Tenor" was first performed at the American Theater Festival and performed it in the London and Broadway productions as well. Yet he says he still finds new possibilities for comic nuances each time around.

Directing the show at the same time he is performing has some obvious difficulties. "It helps that I know the show so well," he said, "but sometimes it is like trying to be in two places at once, I must rely on others' eyes when I'm on stage myself."

With his shock of gray hair and sparkling dark eyes, the tall and handsome Holgate looks like a dazzling opera star even when he's relaxing between rehearsals in jeans and a hot pink polo shirt.

Though best known for his work in musicals ("A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "1776," and "The Grand Tour" on Broadway plus the national companies of "Annie," "42nd St.," and 'Can Can"), the affable South Dakota native began his career as an opera singer after theater training at Northwestern University and extensive voice training.

NELSON, INTERVIEWED in his comfortable dressing room, is the charming, genial antithesis of the high-strung impresario he plays. Has he ever worked for anyone like Saunders?

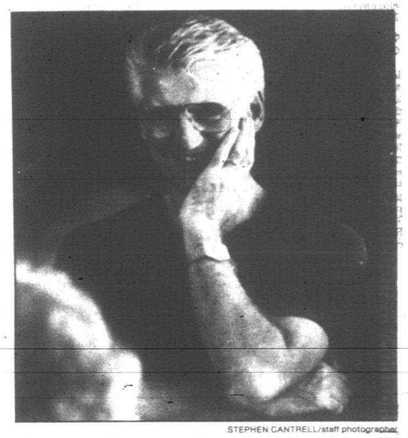
"David Merrick," he said, "for whom I did 'Cactus Flower' on Broadway and '42nd Street' on tour. There aren't many colorful impresarios around any more; producers are businessmen now."

He spoke fondly of the weeks on tour with "Tenor." He loves to travel, and has done so extensively in Europe and Asia. "This gave me a good chance to discover the U.S." he said. "I rented a car and drove between cities. I loved seeing the countryside, the old houses, stopping off for dinner at some old mill. I hope another chance to tour comes up."

Nelson has had a long, varied career encompassing comedy, drama, and musicals, with a heavy emphasis on comedy that goes back to his costarring in the very popular television series 'My Favorite Husband' for 103 live performances in the mid-'50s.

HE BEGAN his career starring in "Macbeth" at the University of California, but switched to comedy "because I want to get paid," he joked with a warm grin.

Reminiscing about the pressures of live television, Nelson explained, "It was far from glamorous; it was a lousy life. you went to work when it was still dark out and returned home in the dark to learn the lines for the next day, and there were no residuals from those days."



STEPHEN CANTRELL/staff photographer

Ron Holgate watches opera fans sing for free tickets to the show "Lend Me a Tenor," which opened Tuesday at the Birmingham Theatre. Holgate stars as Tito Merelli, known to his fans as "Il Stupendo," an international opera star.

Nelson has the distinction of being the first actor to portray James Bond, this was in a live telecast of "Casino Royale" with Peter Lorre as the villain, pre-dating the movie Bonds. "The pressure was great with live television. The orchestra was in a room next-door. If your timing was off, the orchestra would be playing to underscore the action at just the wrong time."

SHAKING HIS great mass of red hair, Nelson expressed no desire to return to television work regularly.

Nelson said he believes the Birmingham production of "Lend Me a Tenor" benefits from all the careful polishing the show has had since its inception. He stresses though, that he does Saunders in his own style, not a clone of what previous actors have done. He sees the character as having "many colors, not just one-note comedy. There's a lot of dry humor that makes his explosions more meaningful."

After long involvements with the show, both Holgate and Nelson continue to speak of "Lend Me a Tenor" with a deep affection and respect.

Real life drama plays a role in director's career

Performances of the Attic Theatre's production of "Laughing Wild" continue through Sept. 15 at the Attic Theatre in Detroit. For ticket information call 875-8284.

By Keely Wygonik
staff writer

It sounds like an unusual combination, social work and theater, but Annette Madias of Farmington Hills has shaped her career to accommodate both.

"One gives me a lot of material for the other," said Madias, producer/director of "Laughing Wild," an outrageous comedy by Christopher Durand, Sept. 13-15 at the Attic Theatre in Detroit.

She works the midnight shift at a suicide prevention center in Detroit and runs drama therapy workshops for adult survivors of incest. She's also an artistic associate and faculty member at the Actors Alliance Conservatory in Southfield, and a directing staff member at Crossroads Productions in Redford.

Madias has directed a number of shows for area theater groups including the Actors Alliance Theatre Company, Somerset Dinner Theatre and The Theatre Company. She's also won awards for work as a producer, director and production assistant.

A graduate of Harrison High School in Farmington Hills, Madias started out as a pre-law/sociology major at the University of Detroit. She started taking theater classes and liked it.

"I took a couple of classes on a lark, and ended up changing my major to fine arts, theater directing," she said.

"Laughing Wild" is about a man and woman coping with life in the 90s. These two off-the-wall strangers come together in a number of ways which lead them into a roller-coaster relationship with angry, sexy, terrifying and hilarious experiences are the result.

"It sounds very heavy, but it's done in a funny stand-up comedy sort of way," said Madias.

The production touches on some of today's topics — AIDS, the environment, therapy and New Age religion are only a few.

When the woman encounters the man and his new-age friends meditating, she joins in "Ohhmmm," they moan together, until she gets bored and pretends to be a car alarm instead.

Said to be an entertainment poised oddly between Samuel Beckett, Spalding Gray, Monty Python and Saturday Night Live, "Laughing Wild" was first presented at Playwrights' Horizons in New York City in 1987.

Tickets are $13 and $15. The Attic Theatre is at 7339 Third West Grand Boulevard. Secure, lighted parking is available across the street from the theater.

Folk music makes a comeback

By Stewart Francke
special writer

Claudia Schmidt

Although difficult to categorize, folk music, American and otherwise, is enjoying a popularity comparable to its 1960s heyday.

Falling into the continuum of the Renaissance era troubadour — a traveling poet/musician who chronicles the life of everyman — folk musicians today, in the face of MTV, Madonna and heavy metal, can seem an anachronism.

Yet, audiences are responding with great enthusiasm to the sparse, personal delivery of the folk genre. In fact, there is so much activity in this area that it is difficult to summarize all of it. Here is a partial wrap up of folk music around here.

THE FOLKTOWN Coffeehouse, chosen by the Metro Times as the area's "best Coffeehouse" is entering its 12th season of presenting the best in folk and acoustic music. Beginning 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14, the series will showcase a performer each Saturday until Dec. 7.

Opening the series will be the Michigan natives Claudia Schmidt and Sally Rogers. This performance marks the reappearance of Schmidt, one of the series most popular performers, after many years. She will bring a melange of communication skills — anecdotes, poetry, blues, jazz, folk — to complement her guitar and lap dulcimer playing.

Both Schmidt and Rogers performed on Garrison Keeler's "A Prairie Home Companion" radio program. Between them they have recorded 15 record albums. Tickets are $12 and available at the door until sold out, or in advance via TicketMaster 645-6666. The concert will be in Room 115 of the Parks & Recreation Building of the Southfield Civic Center, on the east side of Evergreen at Civic Center Drive (10½ Mile).

OTHER FOLKTOWN shows will feature the guitarist Ray Kamalay, songwriter Dick Siegel, Joel Mabus and two "Mediterranean Nights," which will celebrate the music and culture of the Sepherad (the Jews in medieval Spain) and Greece.

A similar event is the Paint Creek Folklore Society-sponsored "House Concert," featuring Jane Keefer and WDET-FM's Matt Watroba. This concert, held in the same spirit as David Brogren's Birmingham La Casa series, will be staged in the Rochester Hills home of Phil and Althea Doolittle. Watroba, the host of the Saturday "Folks Like Us" program, will play songs in the traditional style of Woody Guthrie or Tom Paxton. The date is 7 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 15. The price is $6. Call 375-2513 or 644-5496 for more information.

THE FIRST La Casa Folk Festival at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20, at the Birmingham Unitarian Church, 651 N. Woodward, features David Halley, guitar player for Jimmie Dale Gilmore and Nancy Griffith, Tom Pacheco from Dublin, Ireland, Richard Dobson and his band, State of the Heart, and Kathy Moffat. Tickets are $10. Call 540-9031 for information.

And while folk music is generally thought to have rural American roots, much of it is a vigorous hybrid of European cultural expression.

Renaissance musician Owain Phyfe, also known as Owen Fite, is proving that the highly romanticized compositions of the Renaissance period — roughly 1400 to the mid 1600s — can transcend the centuries and provide inspiring narratives to a late 20th century crowd.

PHYFE, WHO is just completing a run of weekend performances at the Michigan Renaissance Festival, also plays guest sets at the Four Green Fields Tavern in Royal Oak. Phyfe took an intense interest in this early music more than five years ago. He then went to the University of Michigan library to dig up rare sheet music to play.

Phyfe sings and plays the vihuela, a large, ornate progenitor of the modern acoustic six-string guitar. Phyfe is also a member of the New World Renaissance Band. Copies of his cassette, "Voice and Vihuela," are available at the Harmony House Classical Store.

Townsend Hotel

Bulga caviar, brie and fresh fruit, Gershwin and Porter on the baby grand piano, champagne and flambe coffees. All of these elements will create an atmosphere of romance and elegance in the Townsend Hotel's lobby 8 p.m. to 12 midnight, every Thursday, Friday and Saturday beginning Sept. 19. To accompany the evening entertainment, a new lobby dining menu has been added, featuring lite fare entrees and appetizers, assorted desserts, flambe coffees and cordials. The Townsend Hotel is at 100 Townsend Street in Birmingham.

Tea for Two

Guests at afternoon tea at the Townsend Hotel 3-5 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20, could be served tea from a teapot collection valued at up to $10,000. The teapots will be used as part of a special preview of the "Tea for Two" teapot exhibit to appear at the Birmingham Arianna Gallery. Guests at the preview tea will be served loose leaf tea and a wealth of tea sandwiches, scones and pastries. To make reservations, call Pauline Palazzolo at 642-7900. Traditional English afternoon tea is served at the Townsend, 3-5 p.m. Tuesday to Saturday, in the hotel lobby.

Garlic bread

In response to customer demand, Maria's Italian Restaurant, 19220 Grand River in Detroit, is mass producing their popular garlic bread. "It has been a trademark of Maria's Restaurant for 10 years. Our customers kept asking us to put it on the market so they could serve it at home," said owners Joan and Carl Orlando. It is now available locally at Holiday Market in Detroit, Shopping Center Markets, 25155 Greenfield, Southfield, 6433 Orchard Lake Rd., West Bloomfield Township, and Food Emporium 37399 Six Mile in Livonia. A 5 ounce loaf retails at $2.99.

Rattlesnake Club

Bradley Ogden will introduce his new cookbook 6:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 13 at the Rattlesnake Club in Detroit. Menu includes grilled salmon with corn spoonbread and roasted chervil tomato broth, or grilled lamb chops with scalloped turnips, potatoes and roasted vegetables. Dinner $65 per person or $115 per couple includes one signed copy of "Bradley Ogden's Breakfast Lunch & Dinner" cookbook. Call 567-4843 for reservations.

The Lark

A wood-grilled Brazilian barbecue dinner will be featured 7 p.m., Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 23-24. Menu includes barbecued beef chorizo sausage, barbecued pork sausage with herbs, giant shrimp, ribs, banana cashew nut torte and other delights. Your waiter will present each barbecued offering on a sword-like skewer and slice off as much as you wish. It's a crazy evening which seems a perfect way to take full advantage of the outdoor grill before autumn's arrival. The price is $67.50 per person. The last date for cancellation of reservations without charge is Sept. 14. Call 661-4466 for information.

Manufacturer advises on getting competitive

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

The ability of U.S. businesses to compete — particularly manufacturers — has been weakened, but it has not degraded so much that it cannot rebound.

And although there is a long way to go, the groundwork for a return to manufacturing competitiveness — if not dominance — has already been laid.

So says Eric Middelstadt, president and chief executive officer of GMFanuc Robotics Corp. in Auburn Hills.

Middelstadt spoke to the Birmingham Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce Tuesday about the need for enhanced competition on part of U.S. manufacturers.

Middelstadt said much of the debate on industrial competitiveness has focused — wrongly — on how the United States has slipped from being the main exporter of manufacturing knowhow and technology.

Regaining that competitive edge, he said, is far more important. "We may have won the war in the skies over Iraq, but we're losing the war in the factories in America."

Without industrial modernization — meaning robotics and technology as well as new techniques and strategies — the United States will not only become more dependent on other nations, but its people will lose high-paying jobs and will have fewer choices in the market place, he said.

"Everyone wants one answer (and) don't tell me about the nitty gritty to fix our problems," Middelstadt said. "The greatest obstacle to becoming more competitive is the mindset of everyone wanting the big hit."

THE UNITED States' lack of competitiveness is a complex issue that needs to be addressed on many levels with forward thinking, Middelstadt said.

"We should all be concerned — we are all consumers. If we're competitive, we get more and better products for our dollar."

There are other benefits, too. One of the misconceptions about industrial modernization is that it costs jobs, Middelstadt said. Actually, modernization means more job security and better jobs.

"Without it, you may have more jobs for two or three years, but you won't have a company in four years," he said. There is actually less resistance to modernization from the workers than most people might realize.

Therefore, he said, improvements to the industrial infrastructure mean more competitive companies with brighter futures.

Besides being concerned about a need for industrial competitiveness, Middelstadt said, it is everyone's job to increase awareness and educate the public — and the decision-makers in government — about the problem.

"Without dramatic improvement, we as a nation face chronic joblessness and debilitating import duties, he said. Apathy about an inability to compete means not only failing businesses, but much more.

"We should not be intimidated by the GMs and the Fords or someone who spends millions of dollars (to make people aware of the need for better competition) because we all have to do it. We must push every button we can."

PART OF THE thinking needed to address the inability of this country to compete is to begin educating young people about the sciences, he said. "In the United States, we graduate 10 lawyers for every one engineer; in Japan, they graduate 10 engineers for every lawyer. Somewhere along the way, the sciences and manufacturing got a bad name.

"We must make it a point to make our young people comfortable with the sciences," Middelstadt said.

Mike Barry, a teacher in Bloomfield Schools and a guest at the chamber luncheon, said much of what Middelstadt said has relevance — particularly when he addressed the need for making young people more comfortable with science.

"It's encouraging to hear someone talk like that," Barry said, adding that he attends speeches and presentations like the one given by Middelstadt for the express purpose of bringing ideas back to his students. Barry said that students are much more enthusiastic about the sciences then they once were — mainly because science and engineering plays an important role in their lives.

"I think what he's saying is coming around," he said. When he was younger, science was further removed than it is today. "When I was a student, science was something in the laboratories or in skylab; today, it's in the classroom and a part of their daily lives." Computers, portable radios, hand-held video games — all of these expose young people to the sciences much earlier.

BARRY ALSO pointed to the growing interest among young people in the environment and ways to address the problems of today as well as fixing the problems of the past.

William Hicks, vice president for deposit management at First of America Bank, said Middelstadt's emphasis on the need for forward thinking and planning is right on the mark. "There are no quick fixes," he said.

Whether the United States will focus on trading with Mexico, Canada or Europe will require a lot of preparation and won't just happen.

"We must prepare ourselves and our young people," he said. "Manufacturing and engineering are positive things, not negative.

"I don't know how (the sciences and manufacturing) got a bad reputation."

For years, people have labored under the false impression that the future is in the service area of the economy, but if the United States is to be independent and strong, there is a need for a balance, he said.

Bank touts benefits of switching from S&L status

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Franklin Savings Bank always kept its eyes on the prize.

Headquartered in Southfield, Franklin — with branches in Birmingham, Southfield and Grosse Pointe Woods — becomes the first savings and loan in Michigan and one of the first in the country to emerge from the ashes of the S&L fiasco.

On Sept. 1, Frankin Savings Bank attained a commercial bank charter — a goal it set for itself in December 1990 — and became Franklin Bank N.A.

CONVERTING from a S&L to a bank means several benefits for shareholders and customers, said Read P. Dunn, president and chief executive officer of the bank.

Shareholders gain increased value almost immediately. "Savings and loans, whether they are successful or not, have been trading at half the value of commercial banks," he said.

Conservatively, Dunn said, the conversion almost doubles the value of Franklin Bank's stock. "Buying stock in a thrift that turns into a bank is going to be a good investment."

CUSTOMERS BENEFIT, too. "First, we are now a bank," Dunn said. The stability and peace of mind that depositors get from placing their money in a bank is one of the main reasons Franklin sought conversion.

But there are other more significant benefits — new products. As a bank, Franklin will be allowed to offer corporate banking, checking accounts for small and medium business and annuities, to name a few services.

Finally, Franklin Bank — with assets at roughly $400 million — will be the only commercial bank in Michigan with assets between $300 million and $1 billion. "There's a niche there to be filled."

Borrowers will benefit from a wider pool of competing institutions offering loans — especially when one of those competitors is an aggressive financial institution like Franklin Savings that has its eyes set on steady growth in the coming years, Dunn said.

"WE HAVE the capital to compete with larger banks but are small enough to offer small bank services." Institutions with reserved growth strategies would be hard pressed to build assets of more than $400 million in the seven years Franklin has been in existence.

And finally, employees benefit by having the burden of extensive reporting and regulations removed, Dunn said. "As we saw it, if we were going to have (basically) the same requirements as banks, we ought to operate as a bank."

The move will also mean a tremendous boost in employee moral, Dunn said. "That's a big part of it, too."

IRONICALLY, FRANKLIN Savings Bank promoted itself as a product of deregulation after incorporating as an S&L in 1983. At the time deregulated thrifts offered great opportunities, but times change.

Today, there really aren't any benefits to being an S&L, Dunn said.

As long as the S&L debacle hangs over the industry, Dunn said, S&Ls will face public perception problems and increased regulations.

Dunn granted the thrift industry in Michigan has been relatively healthy, but the public may not make that distinction.

"There remains a perception that the savings and loans are tarnished — that image won't disappear for decades to come."

BUT A MORE important reason, Dunn said, is that a bank has fewer restrictions on what types of services it is able to offer.

"The main reason for the conversion is that banks are allowed to be more diversified in loans and investments."

When the savings and loan scandal broke nearly three years ago, regulators were already cracking down on thrifts and making the position on savings and loans untenable.

Franklin had to overcome numerous obstacles to achieve its new status — not the least of which was the novelty of a savings and loan institution changing over to a bank, Dunn said.

THE FINANCIAL Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1988 — which set up the procedure for bailing out the failing thrifts — makes little mention of the conversion process.

Know what options you have regarding insurance policies

Last in a series.

By Sid Mittra
special writer

Recently, an insurance policyholder received an alarming phone call from a person identifying himself as a "successful" financial planner.

"I have just learned that the company from which you bought the annuity policy several years ago has been rated a D," he said. "To put it bluntly, your company is going to hell, and you had better switch to someone more solid before it's too late."

The policyholder settled the issue by seeking competent advice and discovering the so-called financial planner was incorrect. But insurance customers have become so sensitive to bad news and pressure tactics that many are rushing to alter their plans. Here are some suggestions for handing the situation.

The action you should take to safeguard your insurance funds is directly a function of the type of policy you hold. In the accompanying article, there is a brief review of six types of policies. Of these, you are almost never allowed to alter the immediate annuity, the defined benefit plan, the defined contribution plan and the guaranteed investment contract.

Also, it may not be worth the effort to cancel a term life contract. That leaves a number of other policies that can be transferred to other insurance companies with good records of safety.

Before switching the policies you are allowed to switch, you should take into account the following drawbacks:

- Your account may be front-loaded — a year or two of above-average rates, followed by years of below-average rates.
- A stiff surrender charge and interest-rate penalty may be levied if you switch.
- There is a 10-percent tax penalty for cashing out an annuity earlier than age 59½.
- You have a two-tier annuity. It pays a high rate to savers who stay with the company for life. If you want to cash out, your rate may drop drastically, dating back to the inception on the contract.
- If you die within two years of taking out a new policy, the insurer can investigate whether you misrepresented medical information. Your beneficiaries could wind up with no benefits.

Sid Mittra is a professor of finance at Oakland University and the owner of Coordinated Financial Planning. If you wish to know the ratings of your insurance company by the companies mentioned in this article or would like to know if the type of plan you have lends itself to a transfer or diversification, mail a copy (not an original) of your policy with a self-addressed, stamped envelope and daytime phone number to: Dr. Sid Mittra, 3250 W. Big Beaver, Suite 540, Troy 48084.

Insurance serves different purposes

Here are types of insurance policies available.

- Annuities pay income at fixed intervals for a set number of years or for the life of the insured person. Fixed annuities periodically re-establish interest rates. Variable annuities invest premiums in stocks, bonds or other assets, so how much you receive depends on how well the investments have performed. Immediate annuities are bought with a lump sum and provide income immediately following the purchase of the annuity. Deferred annuities are bought in advance of retirement and premium payments accumulate tax-free.
- Deferred-benefit plans pay retirees a fixed income based on years of service and salary. Participants make no investment decisions. Employers are obligated to finance the plan to pay projected benefits.
- Defined-contribution plans are retirement plans, to which employees often contribute, that give participants an active role in managing their money. Return is based on how well the chosen investments do. This category includes 401(k) savings, profit sharing and employee stock ownership plans.
- Guaranteed investment contracts are a 401(k) option and are contracts between an employer and an insurance company. They pay a fixed rate of return for a set number of years, after which capital is returned or the GIC renewed.
- Term life insurance pays a death benefit if the policyholder dies while the policy is in force. It can be compared to car insurance in that you are paying only for protection, not investment.
- Whole life policies have a fixed premium. Any excess over than amount needed to cover the death benefit is channeled into a savings or investment account that grows tax-deferred. Variable life policies also have fixed premiums but put the cash value in a separate account that is allocated among various mutual funds. Universal life allows you to alter premium payments by amount or time period, so you can change the level of the death benefit or cash value.

Retirement won't mean idle days for literacy booster

By Julie Brown
staff writer

BEFORE TOO long, Carolyn Burns will have more time for one of her favorite leisure-time activities, reading.

"I definitely will do that," said Burns, who'll retire Oct. 1 as director of the local Community Literacy Council. "To sit in the sun and do some reading sounds delightful."

Burns, a Canton resident, began her involvement in literacy programs as a volunteer. She'd become interested in literacy through work with the Lutheran Church Women.

The Community Literacy Council, formed in 1985, provides one-on-one tutoring help. Volunteer tutors work with adults who are learning to read or working to improve their reading skills.

THE COUNCIL assisted more than 100 students during the 1990-91 school year. Tutoring help is also provided for English as a second language students, including children, teens and adults. More than 85 volunteer tutors helped out during the past school year, and training for new tutors is being offered this month.

Burns enjoyed "watching the program grow. It was important to me, and to find it to be important to other people has been exciting."

Her volunteer role evolved into a part-time paid position as grants and other financial support became available. Burns has worked with Plymouth-Canton Community Education staffers at Starkweather Center in Plymouth.

"This is just a wonderful place to work," said Burns, who had nothing but praise for her colleagues. "They've become friends. That doesn't always happen, but I've been very fortunate."

Burns has helped to coordinate the council's activities and to provide tutor training.

"Carolyn has forgotten more about adult literacy than I've ever known," said Mary Kay Frey, adult education coordinator for Plymouth-Canton Community Education. "We're definitely going to miss her."

BURNS HAD done some tutoring in the past through her church group. She became interested in literacy a number of years ago when her son had some difficulty learning to read.

He didn't have a learning disability, but did have some trouble with reading in early elementary school. He's now grown, has graduated from college and is working.

"Reading is so important. It's vital." Burns was surprised to learn that some of her fellow Americans had somehow slipped through the cracks of the educational system and never learned to read.

"That's a shame, it really is. We should be ashamed of that." Rather than just remain disappointed, Burns chose to take action.

She's enjoyed working with motivated students and dedicated volunteers. "Watching the change in the students is exciting."

Her husband, Lowell Burns, is retiring from the Ford Motor Co. They bought a home three years ago on Old Mission Peninsula in northern Lower Michigan, planning to retire and live in the Traverse City area.

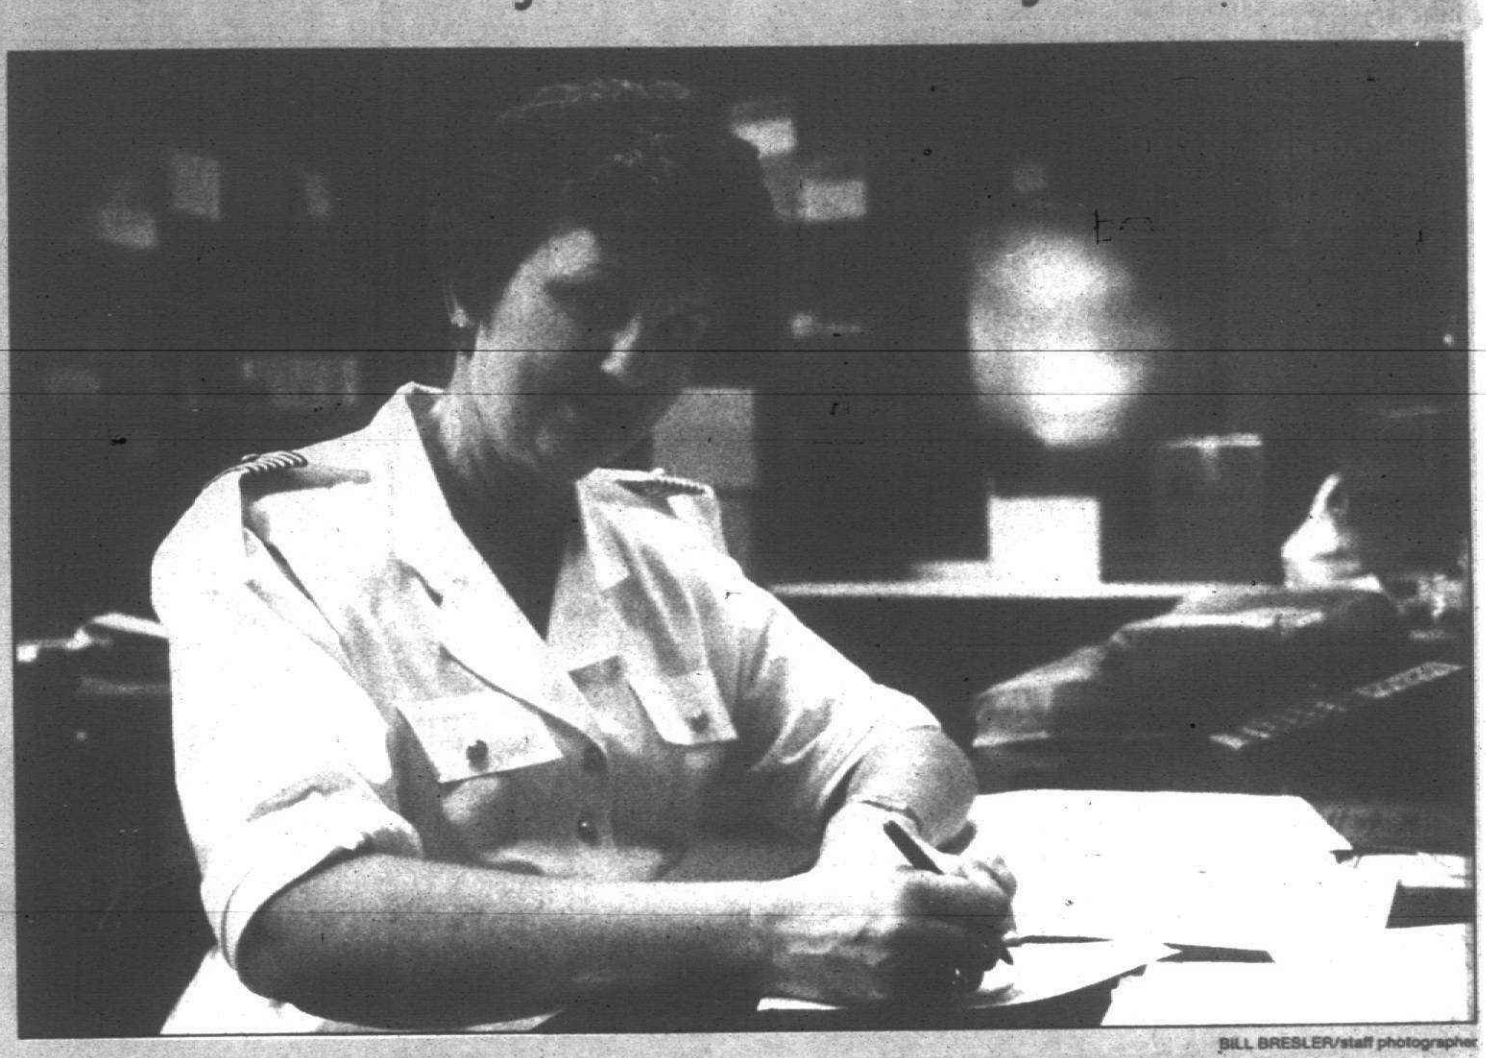
A search is under way for her successor at the Community Literacy Council. The new director's first priority will be establishing financial independence for the council, Burns said.

The council has a grant through the Plymouth Dunning-Hough Library that is scheduled to expire June 30 of next year. The council has received grant support through the Canton Public Library in the past. Council leaders would like to see the organization achieve financial independence and move on from there, Burns said.

BURNS AND her husband have two grown children, a son in Plymouth and a daughter in Canton. They also have a grandson, and plan to return to the Plymouth-Canton community often to visit family and friends.

Burns intends to take some time to get settled in and acquainted with the Traverse City area. She and others in her family have been there in the past as vacationers, but becoming permanent residents will be a new experience.

Traverse City also has a literacy council, but Burns isn't sure she'll volunteer there.



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Carolyn Burns of Canton will retire Oct. 1 as director of the local Community Literacy Council. She and her husband, Lowell, will move to the Traverse City area.

"I have a lot of hobbies I enjoy. There has to be a balance. You can't relax all the time," she said.

Burns plays the piano and has taught piano in the past. She also enjoys counted cross stitch and sewing. After moving up north, she may just find the time to organize the family's extensive collection of photographs.

"I might even cook. Maybe," she said with a smile.

She's been involved in a number of community activities through the years. Burns, who has lived in Canton 14 years, was on the Plymouth Symphony League board for five years and served a term as president.

"That was a pleasure. I enjoyed the people that I had an opportunity to work with."

She was also involved in her children's activities when they were growing up.

Adjusting to life up north won't be all that difficult, she said.

"I don't think so because Traverse City is large and we're not far from town at all. I look forward to it."

She's also looking forward to having friends visit, although she hopes they won't all drop in at the same time.

Burns will keep in touch through phone calls, letters and visits. She plans to return for the Plymouth Fall Festival, the adult spelling bee sponsored by the Canton Rotary Literacy Committee and other special occasions.

She hopes some of the adult students who've recently learned to read will send her letters. Burns would be more than happy to answer those letters.

"And they could read it. That's exciting," she said.

Time at Camp Civitan provides lifelong memories

By Julie Brown
staff writer

At age 61, Joe Henshaw probably doesn't fit the stereotyped image of a camp counselor.

Henshaw did, however, spend part of the summer as a counselor at Camp Civitan in Michigan's Irish Hills area. He and other Civitan Club volunteers worked at the camp, held Aug. 4-10 in Onsted, Mich.

"I found it one of the most rewarding experiences in my life, actually," said Henshaw, a retired Plymouth Canton High School biology teacher. "A tremendous amount of giving and receiving. Very moving."

This year's camp was a pilot project for Civitan Clubs in Michigan. Henshaw's the outgoing president of the Plymouth-Canton Civitan Club, a service club for men and women age 18 and older.

THE CAMP was for teenagers and young adults with physical, mental and emotional disabilities. More than 25 campers from throughout Michigan participated.

"This is our very first camp of this nature on the state level," said Henshaw, a Plymouth Township resident. The Civitans have for many years helped disadvantaged people by supporting Special Olympics and other activities.

They decided to hold this summer's session at the Judson Collins United Methodist Camp, which wasn't being used at the time. Several Michigan clubs, including the Westland Civitans and Plymouth-Canton Civitans, helped to organize Camp Civitan.

The cost of summer camp was covered by local clubs and private donors, making it affordable for many families.

Activities at Camp Civitan included swimming, boating, hiking and field trips. Campers enjoyed building campfires, singing and doing crafts projects.

Camp wasn't particularly regimented, and there was plenty of time for campers to get to know each other. Many hadn't been away from home more than one night up to that point, Henshaw said, so going to camp helped them become more independent and self-disciplined.

"They have the benefit of associating with other kids."

THE CAMP wasn't available to those who use wheelchairs, as the facility wasn't designed to accommodate their needs. Campers had a variety of disabilities. Some had Down syndrome or epilepsy, while others had diabetes or had undergone heart surgery.

Henshaw wasn't the only family member involved in Camp Civitan activities. His daughter, 24-year-old Kim Grulke of Lansing, also worked as a camp counselor. Grulke, a 1985 Plymouth Canton High School graduate and former Junior Civitan, is a graduate student at Central Michigan University where she's working on her special education endorsement.

"Oh, I thought it was great. It really came together," said Grulke, a substitute teacher who has worked with disabled students. She was impressed with how smoothly things went with the pilot project.

"I thought it was a great experience. The kids certainly seemed to enjoy themselves," Grulke said. "I think it's an excellent experience for them."

Her cabin included young women in their late teens and 20s. The campers kept busy, Grulke said, and didn't mind not having a TV nearby.

"They were totally engrossed in what we were doing," she said. "In fact, I didn't even miss it."

The counselors, who lived in cabins with the campers, had a 24-hour a day job. The work was demanding and they were tired at the end of each day, "but it was a good tired, rewarding," Henshaw said.

HE AND OTHER counselors found they tended to forget about campers' disabilities as the time passed. Campers and counselors were able to focus on what they have in common.

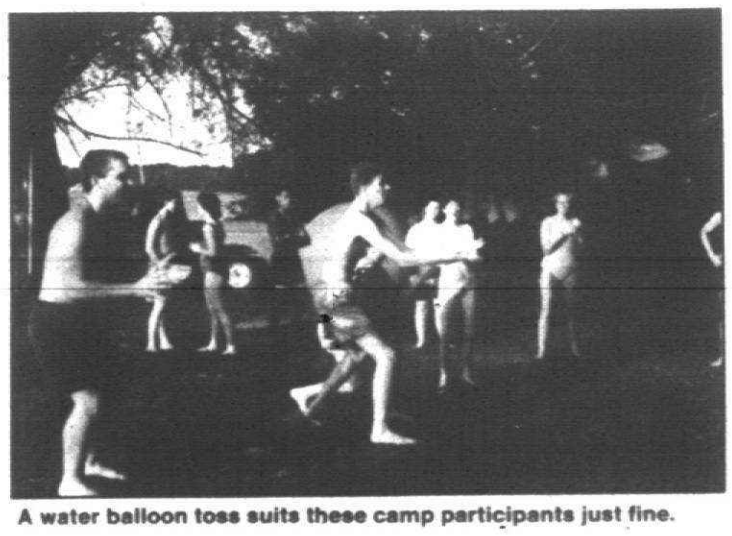
Civitan Club members plan to offer the camp again next summer, most likely at the same Lenawee County site. They're working on spreading the word about Camp Civitan.

"If we can expand it, that's what it's all about, reach more people," Henshaw said. "We would like to fill that need as much as our funds permit."

His strongest memory of camp is "how quickly some 29 strangers, basically, got to know one another and became closer and closer in spirit and fellowship." There weren't many dry eyes when camp ended.

"But they all wanted to come back," he said.

For information on Camp Civitan, call Joe Henshaw, 453-7569.



A water balloon toss suits these camp participants just fine.

Campers and counselors enjoy the time spent on a field trip.

'I found it one of the most rewarding experiences in my life, actually. A tremendous amount of giving and receiving. Very moving.'

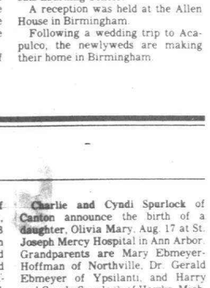
A late February 1992 wedding is planned at St. Kenneth Church, Plymouth.

Budden-Antaya



Joan Marie Antaya of Birmingham and Douglas Arthur Budden of Pontiac were married Aug. 2 in an outdoor ceremony at the Allen House in Birmingham. The Rev. Mark Ramsey performed the ceremony.
Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Antaya of Plymouth and Dr. and Mrs. M. Arthur Budden of Okemos, Mich.
The bride is a graduate of the University of Michigan, where she earned her undergraduate degree, and of Wayne State University, where she attended graduate school and earned her master's degree. She is employed as a manager in the planning and research area of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan.
Her husband is a graduate of Western Michigan University. He is one of the owners of Rainbow Rascals Learning Center.
A reception was held at the Allen House in Birmingham.
Following a wedding trip to Acapulco, the newlyweds are making their home in Birmingham.

Graham-Fuhriman

William S. Graham and Bonnie S. Graham of Plymouth announce the engagement of their daughter, Catherine R. Graham of Ogden, Utah, to Jed R. Fuhriman of Ogden. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Lynn R. Fuhriman and Mae R. Fuhriman of Ogden.
The bride-elect is a graduate of Plymouth Salem High School and of Michigan State University, where she earned a degree in finance. She is employed as a buyer with Thiokol Corp./Strategic Operations in Brigham City, Utah.
Her fiance is a graduate of Weber High School and of Weber State University, where he earned a degree in business administration. He is also employed as a buyer with Thiokol Corp.
A late November wedding is planned at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth.

Former local Salvation Army commanders plan a return visit

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Some special visitors will arrive soon at the Plymouth Salvation Army corps.

Commissioner William Roberts and his wife, Ivy, the Salvation Army's local commanders from 1947 to 1953, will arrive Sunday, Sept. 29, for a visit.

"I'm excited because I can learn so much from him," said Lt. Jeffrey Beachum, who serves with his wife, Lt. Aleta Beachum, as the current commander. At the same time, Beachum's a bit apprehensive because the Robertses have such widespread experience and knowledge.

"They're really wonderful people and he's a magnificent speaker. Basically, we brought him back because it's helpful for the people of Plymouth to see what they've started," Beachum said.

Roberts and his wife led the local Salvation Army during a time of growth and change. Since leaving the Plymouth-Canton community in 1953, they have served in a number of capacities within the Salvation Army both in the U.S. and overseas.

THEY RETIRED from active service in 1988, but haven't taken it easy since that time. They've continued to travel and to speak and preach. The Robertses have spent recent summers at a camp for disadvantaged youngsters in Chicago, "hugging and listening to kids."

Their days entail everything from meeting world dignitaries to working with children from low-income families. "And they feel comfortable with all of it," said Beachum, a Canton resident who has been corps commander in Plymouth for two years and two months.

The Robertses who live in Warsaw, Ind., will have a busy schedule during their visit. He will preach at the 11 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 29, worship service at the Salvation Army corps, 9451 S. Main in Plymouth Township.

That Sunday will also feature a 4 p.m. concert in Kellogg Park, Ann Arbor Trail and Main in downtown Plymouth. A Salvation Army brass band and a vocalist will perform. The Robertses will be introduced and he will speak briefly.

Refreshments will be served at the Salvation Army corps following the concert, and Roberts will preach 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 29, at a service at the corps facility.

"It is going to be neat, almost like a celebration to have him come back," said Beachum, who invited the Robertses to visit.

THROUGHOUT THE visit, Roberts will preach from the Book of Colossians. He will preach 7 p.m. Monday, Sept. 30, through Wednesday, Oct. 2, at the Salvation Army corps. Children's meetings will be offered during all the worship services.

The local Salvation Army serves residents of the Plymouth-Canton-Northville communities. A variety of social service programs are provided, along with recreational activities and worship services.

The local corps has been housed in several locations since its beginnings in the late 1920s. The current facility, on Main south of Ann Arbor Road, has been used since 1983.

The Robertses were instrumental in moving the Salvation Army to a location on Fairground in Plymouth. "He was actually out there with a hammer and nails," Beachum said.

That facility opened in 1953 and remained in use for many years.

The Robertses don't live too far away, and have been back to visit through the years. Roberts was in the Plymouth Rotary Club during his time here, and has been active in other Rotary Clubs in the U.S., and overseas.

The Robertses have five children, two of whom serve as Salvation Army officers.

THE THEME of the upcoming visit is "Come Alive in Christ," Beachum and other Salvation Army leaders are encouraging people from the community to participate.

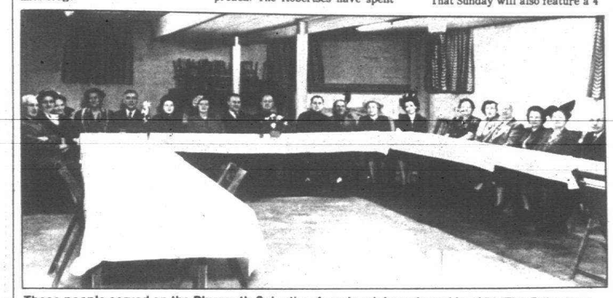
"Really, it's more open to the general public than just our congregation," he said.

Such activities help to make people more aware of the Salvation Army. Some see the red kettles at Christmas time, and don't know much about the international Christian organization beyond that.

The motivation for the upcoming meetings and all other activities offered comes from the love for Christ and the wish to share it with others.

"That's the only reason we do all the other work we do," Beachum said.

For more information, call the Salvation Army, 453-5464.



These people served on the Plymouth Salvation Army's advisory board in 1951. The Robertses are among those seated at the table.

Commissioner William Roberts and his wife, Ivy, will visit the Plymouth-Canton community later this month. They served as commanders of the local Salvation Army corps from 1947 to 1953.

One-woman play brings spirit, faith of late activist Dorothy Day to life

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Dorothy Day believed in and fought for the poor.

Such a simplistic statement doesn't sum up the convictions of a woman whose faith and spirit outlasted her mortal life, which ended with her death in 1980 at age 83.

"Haunted by God" is a one-hour, one-woman play about Dorothy Day, an activist and humanitarian who was the co-founder of the Catholic Worker movement.

A performance of the critically acclaimed play will take place 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 13, at St. Edith Catholic Church, 15089 Newburgh, between Schoolcraft and Five Mile, Livonia. Admission price is $5.

The program is sponsored by the Peace and Justice Committee of St. Edith Church.

"I don't know even in our own religious community how well-informed they are about Dorothy Day and what she stood for," said Cynthia Hirami, who is a member of the nine-person committee.

"Part of this is we want action, but a lot of it boils down to education. You have to continually educate so people are aware of the many things that need to be done."

DOROTHY DAY sought to inform and change stereotypes people had about the homeless. They weren't society's misfits to be ignored or shoved aside. To her, they had hearts and souls and deserved God's mercy.

Day worked as a journalist on underground leftist newspapers in New York and Chicago before she was baptized a Catholic at age 30. Her socialist views tempered by Christianity still found their way into her beliefs and work as a writer. She met radical Peter Maurin and formed the Catholic Worker movement in 1932. The Catholic Worker newspaper still sells for a penny today.

The zeal in which she trumpeted the needs of the poor was only met by her unfettered devotion to pacifism. No war was a just war in Day's mind.

"Haunted by God" attempts to bring to life the spirit and drive that has led others to carry on Day's cause. Her legacy can be seen in places such as the Day House in Detroit, a temporary shelter for the homeless.

The play is produced by Call to Action Performing Arts Ministry and features graduate student Dodie Holstrom in the role of Day.

"I think what impressed me the most was God was a reality to her," said Holstrom, 36, who is working on a master's degree in theater at Roosevelt University. "It wasn't just something to do . . . It was a real thing to her. It was the way she lived her life.

"I think she had a deep need to help people and bring God's love into their lives."

THE SEPT. 13 performance at St. Edith's will mark Holstrom's debut in the play. Until recently, she worked as an understudy to the play's co-writer, Lisa Marie Wagner.

Holstrom's experience in theater includes writing, directing and performing. She's also involved in a children's program through Spirit of God, a non-denominational church in the Chicago area, which does sketches designed to teach and entertain kids.

Originally, "Haunted by God" was a two-hour production focusing primarily on the chronological events in Day's life. The play has since been whittled to slightly more than an hour, exploring more of the activist's personality and her vigor.

"I'm still in the process of discovering that," Holstrom said. "There's a lot of nuances involved. I can relate to a lot of the things she was speaking about and then my emotions come into play."

Hirami hopes such emotions lead to activism among audience members. Already the membership of St. Edith's Church is involved in helping with a soup kitchen at St. Dominic's Church in Detroit once a month and is a base for Active Friends of the Homeless.

Still, there is always more to be done.

"It's (the play) supposed to challenge us to come up with our own ideas," Hirami said. "There's so many ways to take social action."

Earth's orbit, tilt determine start of autumn

Raymond E. Bullock

Autumn officially begins at 8:48 a.m. on Sept. 23.

But what is it that determines that precise moment? It's a combination of the earth's orbit and its tilt.

Earth is divided into a northern hemisphere and a southern hemisphere by an imaginary line called the equator. If this equator is extended out into space it cuts the sky into a northern and southern hemisphere, but now the imaginary line is called the celestial equator.

Because our earth is tilted 23.5 degrees, the sun can appear to be 23.5 degrees above the celestial equator or 23.5 degrees below it. When the sun is at its highest point in the sky north of the celestial equator, in June when the days are long and warm, we have summer. When the sun is at its lowest, in December when the days are short and cold, we have winter.

Obviously there are two points where the sun must cross over the celestial equator. Once when going from above the equator to below, and another going from below to above.

The precise moment of the crossover, going from north to south, is when autumn officially begins for the northern hemisphere. A person standing on Earth's equator at local noon would see the sun directly overhead on the celestial equator.

The sun will rise due east and set due west. The length of the day and length of night are about equal, so this is called the equinox.

THE FULL moon that occurs at 6:40 p.m. on Sept. 23 is a very special one. It's called the Harvest Moon. We have full moons every month throughout the year; what makes this one so special?

Because the moon is in orbit around the earth, it appears in different parts of the sky from night to night. Generally the moon will rise about one hour later each night. But in autumn the full moon is located at the part of its orbit that has the least tilt with respect to Earth's horizon line. The moon seems to skim along the horizon, rising at about the same time each evening, in about the same part of the sky. In fact, for the four evenings starting with the 22nd, each moon rise occurs within 24 minutes of the previous night's.

The light scattered by the full moon was a help to farmers, allowing them to continue their harvesting after sunset, hence it was called the Harvest Moon. The full moon that follows the Harvest Moon was said to be a help to hunters, and you can probably figure out what that full moon is called.

Notice Venus, Regulus and Jupiter in the morning sky on the 28th. (Mercury is long gone.) Venus is at its brightest this morning. The only other night time object brighter than Venus is the moon. You can actually see Venus in daylight, if you know where to look. The easiest way to do that is to locate Venus before sunrise, and then keep track of it as the sun rises.

Venus goes through phases like the moon. The phases are clearly seen through binoculars and are best observed when the sky is not completely dark. (The contrast between a dark sky and brilliant Venus is too great.)

Navajo art to come alive at Native West

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

THE ANCIENT art of Navajo sand painting will be demonstrated by award-winning artists Chester Begay and Alberta Tsosie of New Mexico during a special exhibition "Navajo Sand Painting Art" Friday-Sunday, Sept. 13-15, at Native West, 863 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

While the Southwestern artists create sand paintings in the gallery, Native American art collector and trader Vince Ferrari of Farmington, N. M., will interpret the stories, the art relays through inherent symbolism as well as describe the traditional Navajo ceremony in which sand painting originated.

"It's an exciting art, a very affordable form of art," said Becky Dodson, co-owner of Native West gallery with husband Doug. "It's of true cultural significance. The Navajo use sand paintings in healing ceremonies."

Navajo sand painting art is the permanent form of ceremonial paintings created with sacred-colored sand by a Shaman (Medicine Man) to restore health and harmony in an individual. For more than 300 years, the Navajo have used herbs, chants and sand paintings to heal their people.

UNTIL 25 years ago, the ceremonial symbols were not recorded due to a dictum that a painting must be destroyed the day of the ceremony; its secret powers cast to the wind along with the illness before the sun sets.

Hidden from outsiders, the sacred designs were revealed for the first time in 1890 when a Navajo woman used a ceremonial design in a rug, exchanging it for goods with a trader.

Ceremonial sand paintings are drawn by a Shaman on a dirt floor inside the ailing person's hogan. Casting sand of sacred colors on Mother Earth, he creates an eastern opening in the painting that mirrors the direction of the hogan's door. This prevents evil from entering.

The Shaman uses five sacred colors ground by hand from rocks, sandstone and minerals to create a symbolic ceremonial design; white obtained from gypsum; blue from criscola; black from the volcanic substance, magnatite; yellow from sulphur or uranium oxide; and red from sandstone or clay.

After completing the painting, the Shaman touches a specific figure in the painting, then touches the person now sitting in the middle of it, thus transferring its powerful medicine.

THE PAINTING is then swept onto a blanket with a sacred feather and carried out of the hogan where the Shaman casts the sand painting into the wind.

The Navajo sand painting of "Coyote Stealing Fire" is priced at $95. The sand-painted wedding vase is $28, the oval jewelry box $14.50 and the decorative vase $42.

To balance nature is the message of "Storm and Lightning," a sandpainting by Begay and Tsosie. The white box represents spring and dawn; the blue, summer and midday; the gold, fall and evening; the black, winter and night. In the center is the sun, around which all things revolve. In the corners are the sacred plants — corn, squash, beans and tobacco. The sand painting is priced at $620.

"There's more than a thousand ceremonial sand paintings. Only in the last 25 years have sand paintings become permanent. Unless they're recorded, they'll be lost when these (medicine) men die," Dodson said.

Also relayed through sand painting are Navajo legends and folklore such as the Creation story, "Coyote Stealing Fire."

Landscapes

Watercolors showcase nature

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

Watercolor landscapes of subjects ranging from the Grand Canyon to the seaboard make up a Livonia Arts Commission-sponsored exhibition of traditional and abstract paintings by Dearborn artist Lily Dudgeon.

The show runs through Sept. 27 in the lobby of Livonia City Hall, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Dudgeon has exhibited work in group shows at the Scarab Club in Detroit, Paint Creek Gallery in Rochester, Detroit Artists Market, Farmington Artists Club, Kendall School of Design in Grand Rapids, Michigan State Law Library in Lansing, Michigan Watercolor Society and Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association.

HER WATERCOLORS have graced three covers of the Michigan Bar Journal. The most recent was in August when "Ren Cen at Twilight" lured viewers in for a closer look at the layers of sky, alternating midnight blue and pink. The painting and cover are both on display in Livonia. "Ren Cen at Twilight" is priced at $375.

"Tern-a-fishing-goes" is a dynamic seascape that catches the lyrical movement of the sea and a bird on the wing. It's priced at $295.

Alexander Blue House restoration: a labor of love

Bob Sklar

COMPLETION IS at least three years away.

But the Alexander Blue House at Livonia's Greenmead Historical Village is taking shape as a setting for conferences, meetings and parties, thanks to a devoted group of history buffs.

David Koskela is preparing architectural plans for phased interior restoration of the 141-year-old house, once home to a Livonia Township civic leader. The Livonia architect has done both volunteer and paid work on the Blue House project.

The Livonia Historical Society hopes to see the two-story, 11-room house used not only as a conference and meeting center but also a reception hall for Newburg Church at Greenmead. Period furnishings will reflect 1880s Livonia Township.

"The idea is for the house to be income-producing — self-supporting," said Sue Daniel, who chairs the Blue House restoration committee.

Livonia's largest preservation effort, the Blue House is a fitting beneficiary of the historical society's annual progressive dinner, coming up again Saturday.

"The house came from the historically significant Elm Station area of Livonia, and it's the only building at Greenmead that's Italianate," said Marian Lynch, society president.

The first five progressive dinners netted $15,000 toward the $250,000 needed to restore the Blue House. Overall fund-raising has generated $56,000. Top donors include the society, the city, the Friends of Greenmead and the Sauk Trail Questers.

IN 1967, the white clapboard house was moved from the American Retirement Residence site, Middlebelt north of Schoolcraft, to Greenmead. The move was paid for in part by a $25,000 donation from Livonia's 16th District Court.

Today, the former home of Alexander Blue sports fresh paint, a graded lot and repairs to the roof and chimney. A new furnace and basement floor are next, courtesy of the Friends of Greenmead.

"We need to find some really good fund-raiser," Daniel said.

One idea is to host a decorators' showcase at the Blue House. Furniture stores would adopt a room and furnish it. The public would be invited to tour the dressed-up house for a small donation.

Alexander Blue was a New York native. He came to Michigan with his parents at 15 in 1832, five years before statehood.

He bought 80 acres to farm and later built the house now at Greenmead. A former county auditor and township supervisor, he served as a Livonia justice of the peace for 28 years starting in 1846.

"We've sent paint samples to a lab in Philadelphia to help us determine when certain parts of his house were put on," Daniel said.

GREENMEAD BOOSTERS will devote more time to the Blue House as other village restoration projects move along.

By the end of the year, the turn-of-the-century Geer bungalow will be restored at a cost of $56,000.

Restoration will continue another 2-3 years on the Alexander Blue Office, moved from Middlebelt in 1979, and the Quaker Meeting House, moved from Seven Mile in 1981. Both will be restored to 1850s vintage.

The Alexander Blue Office, a small, single-story building with clapboard siding, was used as farm outbuilding in later years.

The city acquired the Quaker Meeting House in 1962. It later served as a historical museum and a meeting place for historians.

Meanwhile, the Livonia Historical Commission has unveiled plans to stabilize 10 buildings at Greenmead's Simmons/Hill farm complex. An 11th building, a ramshackle carriage house, will be dismantled and rebuilt with original materials.

Detroit architect Mike Kirk, who is noted for historical preservation, has drawn up plans for the $70,000 phased stabilization project.

As for the Blue House, make no mistake: Its future hinges on a test of nerves.

As Daniel put it: "There's no doubt we can put even more effort in the Blue House — if we all don't wear out first."

Bob Sklar is assistant managing editor for special projects.

Navajo artists Begay and Tsosie will demonstrate traditional sand painting during the three-day exhibition at Native West. Their secrets passed down verbally through the generations, Tsosie at age 14 learned ceremonial sand painting from her father.

The husband and wife painting team recently began to enter their work in competition. They took first place and Best of Category at the 1991 O'odham Tash Celebration and third place at the 1990 Inter-Tribal Ceremonial in Gallup.

Created in a southwestern palette of turquoise, sand and black, "Storm and Lightning" features a finely sketched design that relays the message: to balance nature.

The eagles take prayers from man to the Great Spirit. Stars in the black box represent the North Star and the Milky Way. Feathers surround the painting to protect it, each feather counting as a prayer.

WHILE THE couple is painting, Vince Ferrari of Arroyo Trading Co. will explain the symbols used in the ceremonially designed works.

"Vince knows everything about sand painting. He's very colorful and knowledgeable. He's the biggest wholesaler and retailer of sand paintings in the country," Dodson said.

The sand paintings on exhibit at Native West contain sacred colors that sooth and quiet the soul. Because the paintings are made of natural elements from the Earth, sun can not harm or bleach them. They require very little care; a simple dusting is all that's necessary.

"Vince will be bringings hundreds of sand paintings for the show in every price range from $5 to $5,000. He'll have sand paintings for someone who'd like to add a Native American accent to their home, up to the person who's a serious collector," Dodson said.

The sand paintings range in size from 3 by 6 inches to 24 by 24 inches. Lamps, pottery and jewelry boxes decorated with sand paintings will also be displayed.

"Vince will also be taking orders, if someone would like a different color or size sand painting," Dodson said.

SAND PAINTINGS by Navajo artists other than traditional are included in the special exhibition. Jerald Sherman, one of the most talented creators of modern sand art, will also have work in the show.

Sherman uses modern still lifes and shading techniques to create light within a composition. His paintings are mixed media, incorporating sand, oil and acrylic.

The Navajo see the the universe as a delicately balanced environment filled with powerful forces that have a potential for good or evil.

Native West hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Saturday and until 8 p.m. Thursday. Sunday hours are 1-5 p.m. Call the gallery at 455-8838.

DIA opens museum shop at mall

The Founders Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts opened a suburban satellite museum shop at Twelve Oaks Mall, Novi.

The retail store is the product of the successful operation of the museum shop at the DIA. It is the first such satellite with the DIA signature.

The shop was designed by Jon Greenberg & Associates of Farmington Hills to capture the architectural essence of the Detroit Cultural Center landmark.

THE 1,450-SQUARE-FOOT, glass-front store features colors, textures and visual presentations reminiscent of those found in the museum.

Natural limestone-colored flooring, in keeping with the DIA's exterior finish, will lead visitors through a colonnade of custom-crafted arches and columns designed to match the pattern created in 1927 by the DIA's original architect, Paul Cret.

Visitors will pass through columns adorned with capitals. To further accentuate the design, the architect created a wall of mahogany as well as mahogany display cases and fixtures. Taupe-colored carpeting complements the flooring.

MERCHANDISE IS presented in a museum-like manner. Three-dimensional pieces appear on pedestals and under glass. Jewelry and other accessories are displayed within glass cases. Posters, prints, notecards and books have a prominent setting.

Among the merchandise are sculptural reproductions of museum masterpieces, high-tech architecture for the tabletop, reproductions of African and pre-Colombian art, items from Detroit's Pewabic Pottery, jewelry based on museum reproductions, and a children's section that includes creative games and toys.

The shop also offers boxed notecards, T-shirts, posters and framed prints based on the DIA's collection.

IN DEVELOPING products based on works found within the museum, the shop is able to provide greater exposure to the DIA and serves as an educational extension for all age groups.

The Founders Society, a non-profit corporation, as the private sector support organization of the municipally owned Detroit Institute of Arts, owns and operates the new shop.

"Visibility and access to DIA exhibitions and products is an important part of our educational mission. We expect the Twelve Oaks museum shop to add many new members to the museum family and encourage thousands of others to visit the DIA in Detroit's University Cultural Center," said Joseph Blanco Jr., Founders Society Detroit Institute of Arts executive vice president.

The DIA museum shop is along the Twelve Oaks Mall upper level and is visible from the mall's center court. Twelve Oaks is at Novi Road and 12 Mile, Novi. Call 380-8050.

Art class' focus: abstract painting

Artist Leslie Masters will share her talents and teaching expertise with students in a new class, Abstract Painting, at Schoolcraft College beginning Thursday, Sept. 19.

The classes will meet 7-10 p.m. for 11 weeks. For registration information, call Schoolcraft College, Continuing Education Services, 462-4448. Schoolcraft College is af 18600 Haggerty Road (just south of Seven Mile), Livonia.

This hands-on, studio class will study the roots of modern art starting with the breakup of realistic painting in the late 19th century. The fall sessions review the line quality of Matisse. Using a still life set-up, students will learn contour drawing and gradually abstract objects with line.

Students will also "take a line for a walk" by using a continuous line to express various movements such as running, walking, jumping and emotions such as anger and joy.

MASTERS REVIEWS the influence of Franz Kline, a source of study of the expressionist abstract stroke. Students will experiment with lines using a large brush and black and white paint.

The class will study the Fauve movement, creating bright landscapes with colored line; Van Gogh's brush stroke, creating self portraits; and Kandinsky's "Point Line and Plane" theory, with students creating abstract geometric paintings.

Oil and acrylic painters will explore line with all of these exercises. Painting skills are helpful, but not necessary to take this class.

Masters has taught for the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association, the Ann Arbor Art Association and Mercy College in Detroit, where she was design director.

She was assistant director for the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association for 11 years and design and color theory instructor at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit for five years.

Masters has had many one-person shows of her own work, as well as group shows both locally (Rubiner Gallery in West Blomfield, Detroit Institute of Art and Detroit Artists Market) and nationally.

Don't lose heads in photo composition

Have you ever picked up your prints from your photo-finisher only to discover that the top of grandma's head has been chopped off? Or perhaps you inadvertently cut off in the viewfinder one of the petals in that shot of your prized orchid.

If guilty, you're not alone. Too many amateur photographers don't pay close enough attention to the edge of the frame when they compose their shots.

Taking "a second, hard look through the viewfinder and making necessary adjustments will eliminate the elementary mistakes such as cutting off heads. But how should you decide to crop or frame the picture in the viewfinder with respect to the edge of the frame?

A good way to begin is to move your camera closer to or farther from the subject, perhaps even change the angle of view.

The best way to test this method is to choose a static subject such as a building or statue. Try verticle or horizontal.

ASK YOURSELF which way looks strongest and works best? Are you allowing enough breathing room at the top of the structure? Are you backing up too far so that distracting elements may be entering the veiwfinder?

If taking a portrait, is your background what you want and is there enough framing edge around the face? Sometimes you may want to crop severely, perhaps placing the edge of the frame right through your subject's forehead. This method is fine for a dramatic portrait. Fashion photographers often use this technique.

I've seen many pictures of flowers and churches where the tip of a petal or the top of the steeple just touches the edge of the frame. Doing so adds a degree of tension to the shot. So either crop in tightly or back off to achieve a more comfortable edge to the frame.

I paid a lot of attention to the edge of the frame in the environmental portrait shown here. In fact, I spent many minutes studying the composition and the frame edging before I asked this charming and agreeable Greek woman to step in the doorway.

I WANTED her at the extreme right side of the composition framed by the doorway with the entire edge of the picture framed by the whitewash of her house. Notice how important the window and flower pots are to the overall impact of the shot.

Don't forget, a finished print can often be improved by altering the edge of the frame.

A photo of a long, thin subject, for example, benefits by being trimmed to this shape. Look at your finished prints and see what improvements can be made by imaginative edge trimming. All it takes is a pair of scissors.

Monte Nagler is a professional photographer based in Farmington Hills.

Monte Nagler paid careful attention to the edges of his composition in this environmental portrait taken recently in a village, Amari, in Crete.

• The Giant Used Camera Show and Model Shoot — Photorama USA — is scheduled 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 15, at the Dearborn Civic Center, 15801 Michigan Ave. at Greenfield. Admission is $5. For more information, call 884-2242.

More than 100 dealers will display a variety of photo equipment and antique and collectable photography items. Most of the dealers will be prepared to buy, sell or trade equipment. Also featured will be free workshops on model photography, in which the public may participate, and a free shutter check.

• Monte Nagler's fall photography classes will take place Tuesday, Sept. 24, at the Community Center of Farmington/Farmington Hills (call 477-8404 for information) and Wednesday, Sept. 25, at the Birmingham Community House (644-5832).

Architect drawings cataloged

Cranbrook Educational Community will begin cataloging nearly 10,000 architectural, engineering and landscape architecture drawings with the support of a $45,000 grant from the Getty Grant Program of the J. Paul Getty Trust, said Mark Coir, Cranbrook archives director.

The Bloomfield Hillscollection includes drawings and renderings by noted Finnish architects Eliel and Eero Saarinen, Albert Kahn, Samuel Yellin and other architects and designers associated with the development of Cranbrook.

Most of the drawings were produced by Eliel Saarinen and draftsmen working under him in the Cranbrook Architectural Office, established in 1926. The collection was assembled from the late 1920s through the early 1940s.

The drawings will be cataloged on Cranbrook Educational Community's QUIXIS system, computer software designed specifically for itemizing museum collections. After cataloging, the drawings will be stored in acid-free folders in the Cranbrook Archives vault. Long range plans call for transferring the documents to microfilm for easier access.

The plans have been invaluable to architects and contractors working on the Cranbrook property. The Archives receive several requests for specific plans each month from museum curators, campus planners, landscape architects, historians and students.

Cranbrook's designation as a National Historic Landmark adds to the significance of this project. Cataloging the collection is expected to take one year.

Restaurateur serves up arts fund-raiser

By Bob Sklar
staff writer

In the wake of Gov. John Engler's deep cuts in state arts funding, a Bloomfield Hills restaurateur has unveiled a novel idea to help support cultural jewels like Cranbrook Academy of Art.

Jim Kokas' Opus One, at 565 E. Larned in downtown Detroit's Bricktown, will mix fine dining with entertainment and special exhibits in a bid to raise $10,000 to $20,000 weekly for the arts over the next five weeks.

He and his partners also will donate 50 percent of food revenue from a la carte weekday dinners during the five-week drive to a different arts institution.

At least $10,000 was raised for the arts at the $100 a person kickoff dinner, "Opus for the Arts," Friday.

Hoping to deepen allegiance to the cultural enrichment provided by the arts, Kokas told 230 dinner-goers, many from the Observer & Eccentric area: "It is up to each of us as individuals and our community as a whole to support the arts in every way possible."

"OPUS FOR the Arts" will benefit:

- Sept. 9-13 — Center for Creative Studies (students will display musical and artistic talents).
- Sept. 16-20 — Detroit Institute of Arts (posters from DIA exhibits will adorn the walls).
- Sept. 23-27 — Detroit Symphony Orchestra (DSO sounds will fill the restaurant).
- Sept. 30-Oct. 4 — Cranbrook Academy of Art (works by academy artists and students will be displayed).
- Oct. 7-11 — Michigan Opera Theatre (MOT singers will perform opera sets and show tunes).

"This shows incredible initiative," said Roy Slade, president of Cranbrook Academy of Art, a Bloomfield Hills graduate school of art, architecture and design founded in 1932 by Eliel Saarinen.

"We plan to come down the Monday of our week with a contingent from the Cranbrook Educational Community Board of Governors, including chairman Pat Hartmann — dutch treat for all."

THIS YEAR, the Academy, which includes a contemporary visual arts museum, drew $133,800 in state support, 60 percent of its anticipated grant of $223,000. The $223,000 represents 10 percent of the Academy budget.

Slade hopes to draw at least $100,000 next year. "One of our concerns," he said, "is how abrupt the government budget cut was. We had hoped for time to seek alternative sources of funding."

State funding goes into public outreach and education — exhibits, lectures, tours and brochures at the museum and student scholarships at the Academy.

Eight corporate sponsors have agreed to match one-fifth ($2,000 to $4,000) of all weekly restaurant donations during "Opus for the Arts:" Blue Cross and Blue Shield, Comerica, Coopers & Lybrand, Cross Wrock, Detroit Edison, J. Walter Thompson, Kowalski Sausage and Universal Standard Medical Laboratories.

Calling the arts a community pillar, Slade urged Oakland County businesses to follow the example set by Kokas and partners Ed Mandziara of Sterling Heights, George Bletsas of Grosse Ile and Gus Kokas of Dearborn.

OPUS ONE patrons Friday included Ron and Deb Muratore of Farmington Hills. "We're losing a valuable part of our cultural heritage through the arts cuts," Ron said. "I don't feel future generations should have less of that heritage than we have."

"We just think it's appropriate for private enterprise and individuals to pick up where the public sector leaves off so we'll be able to appreciate and teach the arts in future generations," said Livonia resident Richard Halseth, attending with his wife, Judith.

Architects hosting house tour

Birmingham will be on display in a special way Sunday as the Detroit Chapter of the American Institute of Architects presents its seventh annual house tour.

The tour features samples of the work of a few of the AIA members. The complexity and varying designs of the houses have stimulated controversy.

The tour will leave by motorcoach/shuttle from Seaholm High School at Cranbrook Road (Evergreen) and Lincoln (14½ Mile). The houses will be open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Motorcoach/shuttle service will be provided until 2:30 p.m.

Tickets for the tour, $15 per person, are available at these locations:

- Orthogonality, 205 N. Woodward, Birmingham
- Arkitektura Showrooms Inc., 800 N. Woodward, Birmingham
- Englander's/Roche Bobois, 501 E. Maple, Birmingham
- Expressions Custom Furniture Inc., 950 S. Woodward, Birmingham
- Luckenbach-Ziegelman & Partners Inc., 115 W. Brown, Birmingham
- Bright Ideas, 220 S. Main, Royal Oak
- Englander's Other Place, 818 N. Woodward, Royal Oak
- Gorman's, 29145 Telegraph, Southfield
- AIA/Detroit Chapter Headquarters, 553 E. Jefferson, Detroit.

A limited supply of tickets will be available on the day of the tour. For more information, call 965-4104, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The houses on the tour are the Merrill Park Townhouses and Trepeck residence, both by Victor Saroki & Associates of Birmingham; the Shacket and Williams residences, both by Bryce & Palazzola of West Bloomfield; the Raymond residence, by Larry Raymond of Bloomfield Township; and the Ventimiglia/Herman residence, by Jon L. Sarkesian of Royal Oak.

Revenue from the house tour is used by the AIA/Detroit Chapter for scholarships and to support public awareness programs in the community.

● ART CLASSES

Plymouth Community Arts Council begins its fall schedule of art classes for children and adults this week.

Qualified art instructors teach the classes. They include a variety of media: pottery, sculpture, painting, cartooning and photography.

For class details and to register, visit the council office at 332 S. Main, Plymouth, from 9 a.m. to noon weekdays. Or call 455-5260.

● FIGURINES SPOTLIGHTED

The creator of Sarah's Attic figurines, Sarah Schultz, will make a special appearance from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14, at Country Charm, 884 Penniman, Plymouth.

Schultz owns Sarah's Attic, a Chesaning company that produces handpainted figurines recycled from crushed pecan shells. The company makes 21 lines of figurines, including the Daisy, Cottontail, Santas of the Month and Black Heritage collections.

Schultz began the company on a dining room table in 1983. She now employs 175. Each figurine is signed with the registered trademark of Sarah's Attic — a heart.

County Charm is a Plymouth shop specializing in fine arts and decorative accessories. Call Country Charm at 455-8884.

● ROSY ENCOUNTER

Detroit Rose Society's fall rose show will be Saturday-Sunday, Sept. 14-15, at Laurel Park Place Mall, Six Mile at Newburgh, Livonia.

● HOME DECORATIONS

Schoolcraft College will help you decorate your home with style with Interior Design II, a course where emphasis is placed on using proper design elements, planning room layouts, and selecting furniture to suit individual needs.

The class will meet for 12 weeks, 6-8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 16. The fee is $59.

Techniques for choosing quality furniture, drawing interior architecture, working within a budget and measuring for wallpaper and window treatments will be presented.

To enroll or receive further information, contact the office of Continuing Services at 462-4448. Schoolcraft College is at 18600 Haggerty, between Six and Seven Mile, Livonia.

● FEATURE WRITING

Feature writing is the subject of a new class offering at Schoolcraft College.

Corinne Abatt of Beverly Hills, who just retired as Creative Living editor for the Observer & Eccentric's Oakland County editions, will teach the 12-week class 6-8 p.m. Tuesdays starting Tuesday, Sept. 17.

For registration information, call Schoolcraft Continuing Education Services, 462-4448.

"We are pleased and proud to be able to offer the expertise of Co Abatt to our students," said a Schoolcraft representative. "She brings a wealth of experience to share with aspiring writers, those who want to polish their writing skills and others who want to learn more about the feature writing genre."

For the past 15 years, Abatt has been Creative Living editor for the Observer & Eccentric. Last year, she was awarded the Governor's Medal Honor Roll Award (Concerned Citizens for the Arts).

Abatt has awards from the Detroit Press Club, Michigan Press Association and the National Newspaper Association.

She has had freelance work published in the Detroit Free Press, the Detroit News, Michigan Motorist, Redbook, Antiques Monthly, Yankee Magazine, Points Magazine, Fiber Arts, Michigan Bell Magazine and others.

Class work will cover identifying the soft story as opposed to the breaking or hard news story; interview techniques — preparing questions, style and approach; work pictures; viewpoint — first person versus third person and more.

Student assignments will include reading, discussing, interviewing, writing and other practical learning experiences that focus on feature writing.

● HOLIDAY GATHERINGS

If you're planning a holiday-season event, we'd like to hear about it so we can consider it as a calendar item in our Gift Guide.

That annual special section comes out on Thanksgiving Day.

The listing should include the kind of activity or event, who's hosting it, the date, time and location, the admission charge, and the name of a contact person and phone number.

Mail listing information to: Special Sections Editor, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

The deadline is Oct. 1.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Glamour of sales positions belies hard work

By Doug Funke
staff writer

There's always room in the real estate business for agents who produce results. But if you believe anyone can just walk in and mine a fortune with little preparation or effort, think again.

It takes time to prepare for the state licensing exam — at least 40 hours of classroom instruction — then maybe another couple months to learn the ropes and close that first deal, established professionals say.

The income statement may initially show a big zero or even a loss considering that virtually all agents are self-employed, responsible for their own expenses and are paid only on commission after a sale.

One million dollars in annual sales today would put you at the poverty level, at least one veteran said.

A theoretical example illustrates. An agent sells 10 houses each valued at $100,000. The agent is also the listing agent for five. A 6-percent commission on each sale would yield $22,500 to the agent. Commisions are divided among listing agents and realty firms.

NOW CONSIDER all the time an agent spends trying to match buyer with seller. Hosting weekend open houses. On call virtually around the clock to show houses, present offers, expedite paperwork.

And expenses. Pre-licensing classes offered by realty firms, community colleges and adult education programs can cost upwards of $120. Board entry fees also will cost several hundred dollars and multi-list fees can run up to $70 month.

So don't bother, right?

Wrong. Just know what you're getting into. And know that brokers and managers are always looking for enthusiastic people willing to learn.

"I think you have to be very much a self-starter, strongly motivated," said Bette Ball, assistant manager of the Birmingham office for Chamberlain Realtors.

"There are so many details you have to take care of. No one is going to prompt you to do the details yourself."

Paul Koepke, a broker and general manager at the West Bloomfield office of Weir, Manuel, Snyder and Ranke, picked up on Ball's train of thought.

"FIRST OF all, we look for someone who lives in the area they're servicing. We look for people who are well educated, established in the community, have tie-ins with various clubs, organizations, churches, synagogues."

Tom Lewarne, sales manager at Century 21 Today in Livonia, described what he looks for when interviewing prospective agents.

"We try to determine if they have self-motivation, a good feel for working with the general public. They must be able to be flexible with people," he said.

Most firms won't work with agents until they pass the state exam. Then, many make in-house training available at no extra charge.

"What we teach people in offices and new people is how to list, how to prepare a purchase agreement, host open houses, farm an area, telephone techniques," Ball said.

The lure of unlimited income potential is what draws many to sales work generally, and real estate specifically. But sometimes, expectations exceed reality.

"THEY THINK it will be real easy money," Lewarne said. "Once they find out what's involved, the processing that goes into effect, it's not easy money but money earned."

The days of dabbling in real estate on a part-time basis are pretty much over, professionals agree.

But teachers, engineers, nurses, police officers and people in other sales fields all have successfully made the transition.

So what separates the wheat from the chaff?

"Work hard, a lot of hours," Koepke said. "It also requires people skills, a lot of sensitivity, a lot of empathetic understanding for what the process is and what people go through moving from one area to another."

Responded Lewarne: "The ability to be personable . . . to have enthusiasm to make people happy."

That, in turn, leads to referrals — the key to success, he said. "You make one couple happy, they'll send you two or three more."

"Be willing to put in a lot of time and work hard and, you will be successful," Ball said. "I guess that's true of many professions."

Association fails to impress judge with parking issue

condo queries

Robert M. Meisner

I am the president of our condominium association and have recently had an experience in circuit court in behalf of the association. We sued to enforce a parking restriction. The judge did not sympathize with the association's position, thinking that we were involved in a petty item. He did not award us any attorney fees and seemed to shrug off the whole proceeding. How can we make it clear to judges that the conduct of condominium business is serious and needs the help of the courts to enforce the documents?

One of the ways that is problem can be limited is by bringing it to the attention of the bar and bench as you have done by submitting this question. Unfortunately, some judges do not consider community association problems to be of the magnitude and severity that would require their undivided attention and concern as opposed to other pressing matters that they have on their docket.

While condominium problems may not be of the magnitude of criminal violations, obviously they are of a serious nature in regard to the manner in which community relations between persons can be fostered. If the courts do not recognize the right of the association to enforce the documents by providing for relief for community associations as well as reimbursement of its costs and attorney fees, the viability of the community association in terms of its success will be severely challenged. I hope that as more and more community associations and condominiums become developed, judges will become more concerned. When the next judicial election occurs, invite the candidates to attend your association meeting.

I am interested in developing a motel condominium in a resort area of northern Michigan. Can you tell me what your experience has been in developing these types of condominium projects in terms of their viability in this area?

Motel condominiums have been successful in various tourist areas such as Florida and California. But as is the case with any other type of recreational condominium, tight restrictions must be imposed with respect to the use and occupancy of the units.

Sufficient studies should be undertaken to determine whether a motel condominium can be sold similar to a time-share in the sale of weeks as opposed to the right to use the condominium motel over a period of months or years. The documents should retain sufficient flexibility to convert part of the motel into another type of rental property without necessarily encumbering the entire project as a condominium. These aspects of planning should be carefully thought about before the condominium project is established.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

Smart House nears reality

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A Troy builder figures that smart buyers who can afford it will want to live in a brand new Smart House at some point in their lives.

And Donald L. Pratt, president of Wake-Pratt in Troy, doesn't want to wait 10 or 15 years for demand to catch up with the technology.

Pratt intends to build a demonstration model now to showcase the innovative wiring system that can provide automatic activation of home appliances, utilities and security systems.

Groundbreaking at an Oakland Township site is planned for this month or next, the grand opening for May.

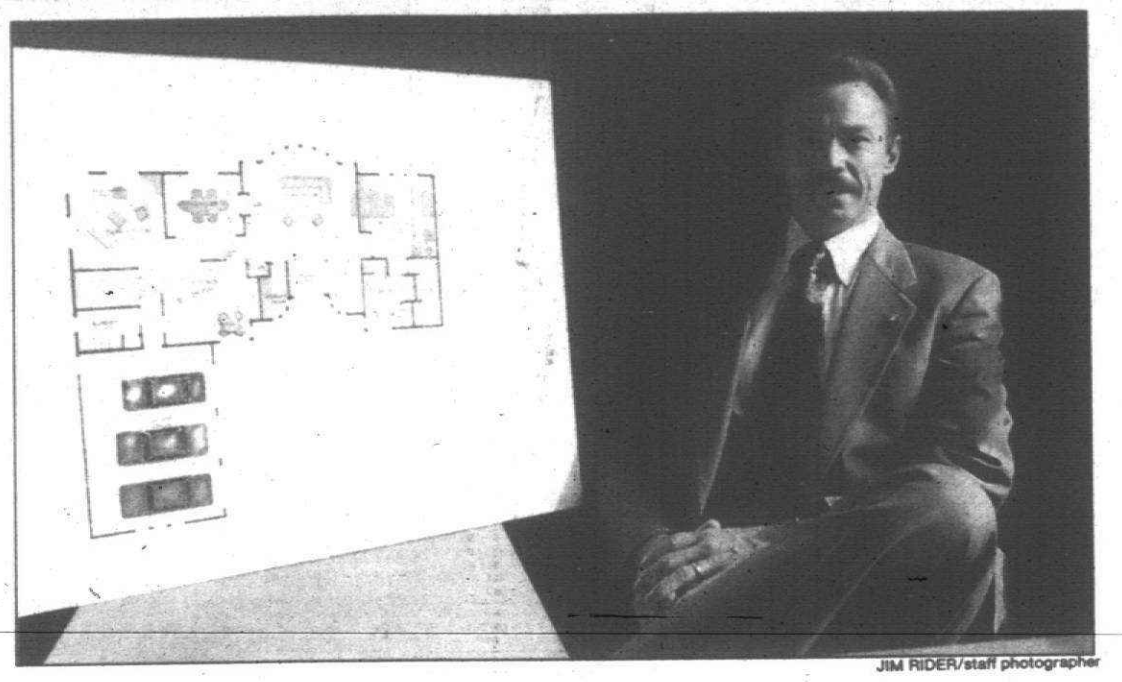
"I think people are looking for ways of living more comfortably and living a more enjoyable lifestyle," Pratt said. "Yuppies are demanding more than when we were growing up."

Floor plans for Pratt's demonstration model — a story and a half of 3,300 square feet with a lower walkout level — show a living room/family room, dining room, kitchen, half bath, foyer and master suite on the first floor, three bedrooms and two full baths on the second.

Plus a three-car garage.

THE WALKOUT area will be used as a presentation center and sales office during the two months that Pratt has exclusive rights to showcase the Smart House in Detroit Edison's service area.

People familiar with Smart House capabilities will be at several spots in the home and in the presentation center to point out special features and answer questions. Visitors will be able to play with mock systems to get a feel for the concept.



JIM RIDER/staff photographer

Donald L. Pratt, a Troy builder, intends to have the first Smart House demonstration model in the metro area ready by next spring.

"If they don't understand what they're looking at, touching, feeling, they won't understand what it's all about," Pratt said.

The model will be priced for sale at $350,000-$400,000, he said.

Special Smart House wiring, a combination of low-voltage and traditional electrical lines, provides numerous automating capabilities for a house.

"It integrates in such a way you can control any portion of the house from any other portion," Pratt said. "This is all done through computers. You can lock doors, monitor the baby's room, turn lights on and off, lock out appliances."

Cable TV and telephone service could be available at any outlet in the house. Appliances like ovens, microwaves and clothes dryers could be activated from anywhere inside or outside of the house with a push button telephone.

"IT GIVES better opportunity to manage (electrical) usage," said William J. Steele, builder/developer liaison for Detroit Edison.

The basic wiring of a Smart House now costs about $5,000 more than to wire a house the traditional way, Pratt said. Customers would spend another $10,000-$40,000 on controls for specific conveniences they want.

"Eventually, the same thing that happened to calculators will happen to Smart House — it will become more economical after we get all the bugs out," Pratt said.

Progress has been slow but steady.

The specialized wiring system took several years to develop. Code approvals were obtained. Only a couple of manufacturers make the wiring now.

Investors in Smart House products are gradually introducing the concept in different parts of the country so that the process goes smoothly.

Pratt, president of the Michigan Association of Home Builders, jumped on the bandwagon about five years ago. His uncle, Ted Pratt, a founder of the building company, was an early investor on the national scene.

"It's not that we want to be pioneers," Don Pratt said. "We believe in it. It's something we feel is going to be used. We want to have the technology to be a front-runner."

Detroit Edison, which has limited exclusive promotional rights to Smart House due to its involvement on the Smart House advisory board, selected Wake-Pratt from among seven area applicants as its builder.

"We looked at number of years as a builder, type of house built, involvement with the national, state and local association," Steele said.

Deck the halls for Homearama; December date set

By Doug Funke
staff writer

The Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan is taking a gamble by scheduling its annual Homearama — a showcase of idea homes — for Dec. 6-22.

In previous years, the show has been held in spring or early in the fall. The weather in December can be dicey, and people get busy with seasonal activities.

But organizers say they're anxious to see how visitors respond when walking through 13 new detached site condominiums decorated for the holidays in the Riverbridge Subdivision of Novi.

"We're just trying different times of the year to see what best fits the public's needs and our needs," said Dennis Dickstein, chairman of Homearama and owner of Ralph Manuel Associates, Birmingham. "Having it become darker earlier we feel is a benefit — the light of the houses . . . and holiday decorations will only add to the ambiance," he added. "We'll try it. If it doesn't work out, we'll try it at a different time next year."

Dickstein said he's hoping for an attendance of 65,000-75,000.

Some 65,000 turned out last spring for a Homearama in Shelby Township and 50,000 for a fall Homearama in Brighton, a spokesman for the builder's association said.

"THE OVERALL purpose is to promote the building industry and the image builders have . . . and to let people be aware of innovations and products available," Dickstein said of the show.

All 13 Homearama units are now under construction and on schedule, said Herbert Lawson, developer of the property.

"We thought it was a unique opportunity to do something really different," he said of the timetable. "Minneapolis had a successful winter Homearama. We wanted to try it.

"At that time of the year (December), there's not a lot of excitement in building and real estate. We're going to be doing a holiday theme with various decorations. It certainly should be something quite unique," Lawson said.

This year's Homearama will have another interesting twist.

The builders selected to participate were strongly encouraged to keep their listing prices including construction, lot and landscaping to $250,000 or less, Lawson said.

Houses in recent Homearamas have exceeded $500,000.

"WE WANTED to get more into a saleable price range rather than just an elite range," Dickstein said.

"Our site has 55 home sites," Lawson said. "We're surrounded by a river, a creek and a large berm. There are a lot of large trees. It has sort of an up-north feel to it."

Six of the 10 builders selected for Homearama are in Observer & Eccentric communities.

They include Fairway Construction, Southfield; BBC Group, Farmington Hills; Soave Building Co., Livonia; Michigan Custom Home Builders Group, Livonia; D&J Property Development, Canton; and Cohen Associates, West Bloomfield.

The other builders are Biondo Designers and Builders in Northville; Cornerstone Building Inc., Novi; and Pulte Homes of Michigan, Royal Oak.

Partners split to form separate companies

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

One of the area's most successful longtime residential building teams has gone separate ways.

Nosan/Cohen Associates of West Bloomfield is no more. The replacement companies are Nosan Enterprises and Cohen Associates, both in West Bloomfield.

The parting was amicable.

Working in a partnership was both productive and lucrative for the Nosan/Cohen team, but it was also restrictive, both said.

Lawrence Cohen, president of Cohen Associates, said that the idea of going separate ways probably began earlier this year — either late winter or early spring.

They didn't actually split up until near the end of June, after they had worked out how existing projects like Stonebridge in West Bloomfield and Woods of Novi in Novi would be handled.

Other Nosan/Cohen residential projects are Sable Pointe in West Bloomfield and Maple Woods in Novi. They also built the Novi Professional Village and Maple Park Office Center, also in Novi.

"Everything that we've done together that's in progress, we'll still have a shared interest in," Cohen said. That includes their projects as well as joint ventures with other builders.

"We wanted to make sure people (in earlier projects) won't have to worry about whether we're still going to be here."

Both he and Nosan value their reputations in the building industry and don't want to jeopardize that name — individually or as a building team, he said.

'Everything that we've done together that's in progress, we'll still have a shared interest in.'

— Lawrence Cohen

COHEN SAID the two dissolved their partnership because each wished to do different things. "Things won't change much for me," he said.

Cohen Associates in West Bloomfield will focus its energies on production housing much as Nosan/Cohen did, Cohen said. Whether that will include buying and developing property for his own subdivisions or purchasing lots in pre-developed subdivisions will depend on the property.

But production housing isn't all Cohen will be doing.

Cohen has also started a new venture with Great Lakes Prudential vice president Charles Sower. The venture purchases lakefront property and builds homes based on successful Nosan/Cohen models of the past.

The idea is to provide custom quality homes at substantial savings to homeowners — basically bringing the $1 million lakefront home into the $500,000 price range.

TERRY NOSAN, president of Nosan Enterprises in West Bloomfield, said that while he enjoyed his time spent as a partner in Nosan/Cohen Associates, the time had come to move on and try different things — things that might not have worked in a partnership.

Things will be much different for Nosan, who is virtually starting from scratch.

"When I left, all I took with me was me."

Nosan said he will be focusing his efforts on custom, more expensive homes where there is more contact between he and the buyer. "That was something I missed (while working with Nosan/Cohen)."

Nosan said that while he and Cohen were accessible to home buyers, most of the customer interaction was handled by sales and construction people.

Now that he's starting over, there will be a lot more one-on-one, hands-on interaction with buyers, brokers and architects.

"I enjoy that sort of thing."

Nosan said he isn't ruling out partnerships in the future, but they will be partnerships for individual projects.

"I like deal partnerships — where you work with another builder, another developer or even a non-builder for one job."

Nosan said he is also interested in a more controlled environment. Under the partnership he wasn't always able to play things as fast and as loose as he hopes he will in the future.

One other area Nosan said he will be exploring is land acquisition, rezoning and development. Once the property is ready, he will sell lots, but it's unlikely he will build subdivision homes for a while. "I might do some site condos that look like houses, but that's about it."

"You could do all this (within the bounds of a partnership), but it's hard to value what your contribution is," he said. While working together, each would come up with ideas for projects that really didn't fit the Nosan/Cohen Associates mold.

That meant not doing projects that the two didn't agree on, he said. "If I had a whim or something he might perceive as a screwy idea — or if he had an idea I didn't agree with — in fairness to the partnership, neither of us could do it.

"Now, I can say, 'Hey, I'll do it anyway,'" he said.

"I'm actually enjoying the idea that I don't have a program," Nosan added. "I think it will be healthy for both of us."

Builders referral guide written for house hunters

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

One of the problems with house hunting is that there isn't a comprehensive way to find out what builders are doing out there.

Radio, television and newspaper ads are successful in some instances — particularly when hunting by location — but what about the homeowner who searches by builder?

That's where the builders referral file comes in.

Available from the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, the builders referral file — which will be updated monthly — lists houses and building sites by builder.

Sharon Joseph, administrative assistant at the builders association, said the referral file is a service for members. "It's a way to promote themselves."

Many builders in file build custom houses and also have projects of their own, she said.

Joseph said the option of being included in the referral file is available to both new and old members. New members receive an application form with their welcome to the association literature, and existing members receive application forms periodically in association newsletters.

"I've even taken submissions over the phone," she said.

Currently, the referral file is divided by county and subdivided by builder.

UNDER EACH builder heading are the specific projects, the communities in which he or she has homes, price ranges, square footage, number and placement of bedrooms and baths, style and design, school district and other information.

Features, such as barrier-free design, use of allergy-sensitive construction materials, special warranties and whether a builder will construct on a homeowners's lot.

"The whole idea is still new," Joseph said. "We're still working on the format."

All builders listed in the directory are professionally licensed and members in good standing with the association, but buyers are encouraged to check references and previous workmanship in prospective builders, she said.

JOHN HUGHES, owner of New England Development in Westland, said although he wasn't aware of his inclusion in the builders referral file he is supportive of the idea.

"Anything that gets my product out there is good," he said.

New England Development is developing a single-family homes development in Westland on Palmer Road between Hix and Newburgh with houses starting at $89,900.

JOSEPH REBH, owner of Homestead Builders in Farmington Hills, said builders are constantly looking for ways to attract buyers.

"If I get anything out of being in it, that would be great, but I don't have any expectations," Rebh said.

Rebh is building colonials in Commerce and Waterford townships starting from $145,900.

Rebh said most people shop for houses by price and location, so it's difficult to ascertain how much help a builder referral file offers — unless a buyer is looking for a custom builder. Then, reputation and referrals are more helpful.

To obtain a copy of the directory, call the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan offices at 737-4477 between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Tenants signed for Livonia's Victor V

Three businesses have signed lease agreements at Victor Corporate Park, Livonia. The law firm of Helmkamp, Ellis and Abraham, Century 21 Today and Interstate Title will be the first three tenants to occupy Victor V, one of nine buildings to be developed.

Finsilver/Friedman Management Corp. of Farmington Hills has been named property manager for Commerce Drive Industrial Park, Madison Heights, a five-building, high-tech complex of 110,000 square feet.

Both Wayne and Oakland counties reported strong growth in the building of new residential units in July compared to June.

Wayne County more than doubled the number of units started in July — 461 — compared to June's 224. Oakland's July totals were 589 units compared to 422 in June for an increase of 39.6 perceant. But both counties' housing starts for the year lag 1990's by about 25 percent.

Statewide building was up 27 percent in July from June and down 16 percent for the year.

Vicount Industries of Farmington Hills is adding an 8,000-square-foot addition, nearly doubling its existing shop space. The company builds dies for the auto industry. General contractor is Pegersen/Plenda of Brighton.

"What Spare Time?"
That's what I said when I was asked to spend some spare time with Girl Scouts. Then I remembered...I didn't have much self-confidence as a young girl. It wasn't until I joined Girl Scouts that I really began to feel good about myself. The support of my Girl Scout leader was really important. Girls today need support, too. They need the Girl Scouts and they need you! Call your local Girl Scout council and volunteer.

Architects work to help seniors "age in place"

By Janice Bruneon
staff writer

Aging in place, a new concept based on a long tradition, helps people who are growing older to remain in their own homes for as long as possible by tailoring home environments to meet the needs of the elderly.

The concept, a response to people living longer than ever before, is a timeless practice with a snappy new name and a slight difference.

Housing is remodeled or built new with features that make independent living easier for those who have such diminished physical capacities such as reduced hearing or less endurance.

"By the year 2000, 25 percent of our population is going to be over age 65. The fastest growing segment is 80-year-olds," said J. Robert Gillette, president of American House Retirement Residences, a network of homes for "frail" older people in such communities as Rochester Hills, Birmingham, Farmington Hills, Livonia and Westland.

Expansion at the Rochester Hills facility highlights aging-in-place features for residents who, while physically restricted, are mentally alert, Gillette said.

THE EXPANSION includes 22 new apartments, each at ground level with an enclosed patio. The protected patio area permits outdoor living free of wind, sun and other harsh elements that pose problems for many elderly people, Gillette said.

All carpeting permits easier mobility for people using wheelchairs or walkers. "Those things are part of the aging process. We welcome them."

Carpet, walls and cabinets contrast in color. Color schemes include blue-gray carpet, white walls and wood or brown cabinets.

Other modifications include cabinets lower than normal and counter tops higher than normal, electrical plugs higher than normal and light switches lower than normal.

Freedom Square, a Housing Development project by Piper Realty in Farmington Hills, is "affordable" housing for the physically impaired people or people older than 61. The project is expected to be ready for occupancy by mid-October.

Of the 112 units arranged in clusters, 10 percent are barrier free to accommodate wheelchairs, walkers and similar devices. Each unit has an emergency call system in both the bathroom and bedroom, a washer and dryer and a private patio.

"THEY'RE LIKE condominiums. People seem to like them. We've had quite a bit of success with this style," said Robert Bessert of Piper Realty. Freedom Square is the firm's fourth housing development for senior living.

Forty-six more units in the project are in a two-story apartment building. The second floor is accessible by elevator. A small market provides basic on-site shopping.

Freedom Square and American House are examples of housing especially designed to accommodate older people. Similar results may also be obtained by remodeling existing houses in which older people already live.

"A Comprehensive Guide to Retrofitting Homes for a Lifetime," published by the National Association of Home Builders' Research Center in Maryland, offers remodeling tips based on studies of transformed housing in Tucson, Miami and Winston-Salem, N.C., said Lenny Rickman of the research center's special-needs housing program.

The center is in the forefront of remodeling tips, Rickman said.

"The most important areas to modify, the best places to start, are the kitchen and bathroom. They are the areas most important to safety and comfort," Rickman said.

The biggest improvement, he added, are support bars in the bathroom, both by the tub or shower and the toilet. Installation may be minor or major, depending upon wall support systems.

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS are flexible shower hoses and heads that can be manipulated by hand, sinks with single-handle faucet systems and stoves with controls at the front so the user doesn't have to reach over hot burners or a heated oven.

Hartford House, a traveling exhibit designed by the Hartford Insurance Group, is meant to increase awareness about how physical environment can be modified to accommodate the changing needs of an aging population.

"It's all about the longevity revolution," said Sandra Sharr, spokeswoman for Hartford Insurance. One-fourth of today's population is older than 50, she said.

"In practical terms, living longer means people stay in their home longer. When planning home improvements then, we should think not only of our needs today, but our future needs," noted a booklet that accompanies the Hartford House exhibit.

Get the most use from energy dollar

An energy audit of your house is one of the best ways to ensure that you're getting the most out of your heating dollars.

Your local utility company can assist you in tracking down energy wasters, but there are many items you can check yourself. Here are some important check points and additional energy saving tips.

One way to check for wall insulation from the indoor living area is to remove a switch plate or an exterior wall. Shine a flashlight around the switch box to see if there is insulation present. Better yet, make a small hole in an exterior wall (in a closet or other hidden location) and measure the insulation. Then patch the hole.

ADDING INSULATION to the walls of an existing house is costly and difficult to do thoroughly. A contractor uses special equipment to blow in insulation from holes bored in the walls. However, if you plan to re-side your house, installing rigid board insulation before applying siding is cost effective.

Insulation on the foundation of the house, whether you have a basement, crawl space or slab foundation, is often overlooked. Insulation applied on the house exterior to cover the exposed foundation and to extend one foot below ground level is effective.

OTHER ENERGY conservation measures for the foundation include caulking the sill plate where the sill meets the foundation blocks in a basement, and insulating the header above the sill plate.

If your basement is unheated, insulating the ceiling would make the floor of the first story much warmer, reduce heat loss and conserve fuel. If you do this, you must also insulate any heat or water pipes in the basement.

The energy efficiency of your house depends to a large extent on efficiently operating heating and cooling systems. In winter you should keep the thermostat constant at 68 degrees Fahrenheit during the day and 60 degrees at night.

But older people, infants and people who are ill will require higher temperatures. A clock thermostat, which automatically lowers the heat when you're in bed and raises it prior to your rising in the morning, aids in your comfort and convenience. Check radiators or registers to see that they are free of dust and not obstructed.

IF YOU have gas-fired heating equipment, have the unit cleaned every two to three years by a service technician.

From time to time you should check the burner plates to see if the unit is firing properly because gas ports can become clogged with rust or dust. If you have a furnace, clean or replace air filters once a month during heating season.

If you have oil-fired equipment, you should have the equipment tuned up and its efficiency checked annually. If the burner is not a flame-retention head burner, consider replacing it. You should periodically inspect the burner for oil leaks.

Have your water heater — the second largest energy consumer in the home — drained periodically to remove built-up sediment. Insulate the hot water pipes and the water tank. On gas and oil water heaters, be sure to keep insulation away from the pilot light and controls. Repair faucet leaks as soon as they occur.
