Use of basic skills tests delayed 1 year

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Plymouth-Canton sophomores who didn't achieve minimal scores on a state standardized test can breathe a sigh of relief.

State lawmakers are delaying for a year a requirement that 10th-graders achieve basic proficiency levels on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program to receive "state-endorsed" diplomas.

Students are being given a chance to retake the test.

The 1991 school aid act required sophomores to show minimum proficiency in basic skills on the MEAP in order to graduate with the endorsed diplomas. Also, state aid was contingent upon students reaching minimal achievement levels.

Almost 55 percent of Plymouth-Canton sophomores met the requirement in both reading and math, according to William L. Brown, educational research consultant for test administration for the state education department.

IN MICHIGAN, 58,000 students are in need of retesting, according to the Michigan Association of Secondary School Principals.

"We are in the process of postponing the law for one year, in large part due to the fact that there was relatively little time between the initiation of the law and the time to implement it," said state Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton. Kosteva sits on both the House K-12 education committee and the colleges and universities committee.

The law was to go into effect beginning with the class of 1994. Districts may, if they wish, launch the program in 1994, but must do so with the class of 1995 under the House amendment, yet to be passed by the Senate.

"Educators across the state felt they didn't necesarily have the proper amount of time to prepare students properly for the test."

Students will not need a state-endorsed diploma to be accepted into state colleges and universities, said Kosteva, adding that under the amendment, the endorsement will appear on transcripts, not on diplomas.

Not receiving the endorsement "won't necessarily bar students from holding jobs or from acceptance to college; it's just another piece of information that will be available about that student for the prospective employer or prospective school evaluating that student," said Kosteva.

"We're talking about a 10th-grade level. We all want our students to meet that level of performance by the time they graduate from school."

Brown said the requirement for endorsed dipomas — a score of 50 percent — "isn't exactly a high standard. We would hope over the years that schools begin to make changes in the curriculum and begin to move to higher standards.

"This is really testing 9th-grade skills. To say graduates who have half of 9th grade skills are ready for the workplace is stretching it a little bit. In some school districts where extremely small percentages have reached requirements, they're scrambling to improve the curriculum and to provide opportunities beyond what they've been doing."

The idea, said Kosteva, "is to try to bring some accountability into the school systems across the state. People are obviously concerned about the amount of money being spent on education. In exchange, they're asking for some degree of accountability.

"This type of assessment testing obviously has its detractors, but it's the best means we have available of making some kind of strides."

Salem High School counselor Bill Heath is among those who see problems with the MEAP. He expressed his views at a recent school board workshop attended by Kosteva, state Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, and state Rep. Georgina Goss, R-Northville.

The MEAP, and its link to the state-endorsed diploma, is fraught with problems, he said. For starters, the test wasn't administered to all Michigan 10th-graders, he said.

Man receives new heart

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

For two years, Jerry Pawlus' heart was weakening, the result of a fatal disease called cardiomyopathy.

Now, the 59-year-old Canton resident's heart is breaking; breaking because he's overcome in the aftermath of his heart transplant three weeks ago.

"How do you thank someone for their son's heart?" he said, his eyes filling with tears as he sat in his private room at Ann Arbor's University Hospital last week.

Pawlus' heart, under attack by a virus, was enlarged to twice the normal size and able to pump with only 10 percent efficiency. Pawlus was so weak and short of breath he had to severely limit his activity, a difficult thing to do given his job as owner of two funeral homes in Canton and Belleville.

Doctors estimated he had just months to live. They theorize that he caught the virus from a body.

AFTER A TWO-YEAR wait, Pawlus received the heart of a 17-year-old swimmer from Oakland County who died April 7. Pawlus was at work when the call came from the hospital.

"He was at our Canton location when he received the call," said his daughter, Shelley Pawlus. "He said he just dropped the phone and panicked, upset. I wasn't around to console him; no one was really around. He had to go to the hospital, right then and there."

Pawlus remembers entering the hospital and hearing the helicopter landing. "I knew the heart was being flown in; I could hear police talking," said Pawlus, who was operated on by a team of 15 doctors and nurses for 12 hours.

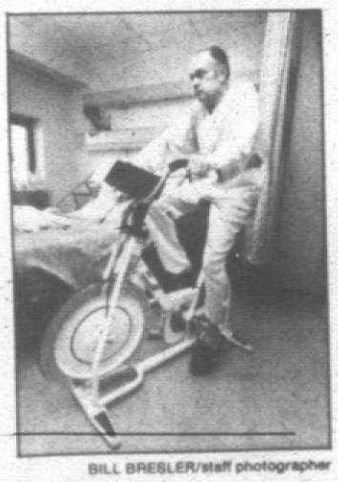

"It was a roller coaster for a while," said Shelley Pawlus. "My dad's lungs filled with fluid. But all other indications were good. His feet and hands were warm, which showed the blood was circulating."

Pawlus regained consciousness the next day and was out of intensive care in four. There have been no signs of the heart being rejected.

"When I came back, I wanted to get out of here. I got up and I was walking out," said Pawlus, who has 25 staples in a foot-long incision through his breastbone.

By last Thursday, Pawlus wasn't feeling disoriented or weak anymore. In fact, he was working out on his exercise bike, climbing stairs, walking and taking in the Tiger game on radio.

Too few are willing to donate organs

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

"The most precious gift you can give someone is the gift of life itself. That's exactly what you do by becoming an organ and tissue donor. Yet the simple truth is that there are not enough people who are making this life-giving choice," says Betty Buckley, education director for the Organ Procurement Agency of Michigan.

OPAM is the only organ procurement agency in Michigan. It works in conjunction with the Michigan Eye Bank and handles the procurement of kidneys, hearts, lungs, livers, pancreases, skin and bone.

The need for donated organs and tissue is staggering, said Buckley. More than 1,400 Michigan residents and 25,000 people nationwide are waiting for an organ transplant — an all-time high.

"Every 30 minutes, someone new is added to the waiting list," she said. "Unless we can inform our communities and our health care professionals of the need to donate organs and tissues, people will not be given the chance to receive the gift of life."

CURRENTLY, 930 PEOPLE in Michigan are waiting for a kidney. One-hundred eighteen are waiting

Here's when students can re-take the tests

Plymouth-Canton 10th-graders who need to retake the state standardized Michigan Educational Assessment Program test may do so from 6-9 p.m. Thursday, April 30 in Room C201 of Canton High School, and from 9 a.m.-noon Saturday, May 2 in the same location. The reading retests will be offered then.

Math retests will be given from 6-9 p.m., Thursday, April 30 in Room S2510 of Salem High School and again from 9 a.m.-noon Saturday, May 2 in Room C246 of Canton High School.

Beginning with this year's sophomore class, the Michgian Legislature is granting state-endorsed diplomas to graduating seniors who obtain minimum scores on the MEAP test.

The retests are being given for the benefit of 10th-graders who didn't reach the minimum score.

More than half of the school districts in Michigan have ordered retesting materials, according to Richard Egli, Plymouth-Canton schools' community relations director.

Meetings to be taped

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The first TV taping of a Plymouth Township board of trustees meeting should happen Tuesday, says a trustee candidate — even though a current trustee wants broadcasts shown live, not on tape.

At the last board meeting on April 14, trustee Abe Munfakh and trustee candidate K.C. Mueller agreed to talk about how board meetings could be televised. That was after Mueller and others said they wanted meetings shown on local cable TV.

Munfakh met with Mueller, township clerk Esther Hulsing, some Plymouth Concerned Citizens members and representatives of the cable TV company, Omnicom on April 20, he wrote in a memo to other trustees.

CABLE COMPANY representatives said a tape-delayed broadcast aired the week of the taping would be the way to go, as a live broadcast would involve paying employees to do a remote broadcast.

Still, Munfakh said, "It is my opinion that it is preferable to broadcast our meetings live to the community."

"This will encourage an open dialogue with members of the community. After all, if the meetings are to be broadcast a day or two later, there will be little input from citizens concerning items being discussed," he said.

Munfukh suggested that the board appoint a committee to figure out how to have meetings shown live, "which would present the citizens with a better idea of the items being discussed, and provide cable television subscribers the ability to come to township hall to discuss issues with the board before a decision is made, and not a day or so after."

"It boils down to a stall tactic," Mueller responded. "I think he's trying to ask for something he knows Omnicom can't do."

To show taped meetings, an interested person is trained by Omnicom, picks up the video equipment from the cable company's Canton office, tapes the meeting, then returns the tape and camera.

David McCarthy, husband of supervisor candidate Kathleen Keen McCarthy, has volunteered to take the training in time for Tuesday's meeting.

"We're going to be there," Mueller said. "I'd like to have the board's blessings; I don't know what objections they would have," Mueller said.

Mueller rejected Munfakh's contention that live meetings would encourage more participation.

"Would you expect the people at home to hop into their cars and race down to the meeting?" she said, adding the item would likely be voted on before the citizen arrived.

"Why don't we get on with it and stop stalling and see if it works; let's keep it simple," she said.

Skills tests delayed

"I DON'T THINK educators were consulted. A lot of money was poured into this without much thought."

The requirement became law two weeks after the class of 1994 took its sophomore test, and students were unaware the MEAP test would affect their diploma. Also, guidelines on aspects of the program still haven't been issued by the Department of Education.

Kosteva said the changes might be held up in the Senate. "Senate legislative leaders and the governor appear to believe that the 1994 deadline gives school districts enough time to implement this program," he said.

Action won't be taken by the Senate until after the spring recess.

New heart extends life

HE WAS DUE TO leave the hospital Sunday with doctor's orders to rest for six months and to avoid being near cigarette smoke and flowers. Because Pawlus' residence is attached to the funeral home, he plans to rent an apartment for awhile.

"I can't believe how quickly he is recovering," said his nurse, Tammy Malyszek. Pawlus was on 20 medications. He's down to just 10 anti-rejection, anti-fungal and blood pressure medicines, his nurse said.

Actually, said Malyszek, heart transplants aren't that risky an operation any more. And while the life expectancy of a transplant patient is 10-15 years, it's increasing all the time.

Cardiomyopathy seems to attack people under stress, she added.

'What was important yesterday isn't important today.'
— Jerry Pawlus

"We see high school football players who catch the virus playing in the cold, rain and snow. We also see a lot of women during pregnancy get it. Their new babies are home and they're in the hospital getting a transplant. Stress appears to make it come on. The virus just attacks the heart."

Receiving a heart transplant has changed his life, Pawlus said.

"It's just like being an alcoholic. You don't know what it's like until you become one.

"What was important yesterday isn't important today. Being in the funeral business 30 years, that's not important to me anymore.

"IT'S CLOUDY AND rainy out, but I'm elated. Smell the roses, the flowers. You just can't express the feeling. It's unbelievable."

Pawlus said he realizes now what a huge need there is for organ donors.

"People should be alerted more about the need for transplants and donations. We aren't educated enough," he said. "Any chance I get to speak, I will. I'll be more than glad. It's the least I can do." Pawlus said he wants to do something to thank the donor's family. He's contemplating establishing a scholarship in the young man's name.

Pawlus turns 60 May 7. "He got quite a birthday present," said his daughter.

Expert: More doners needed

for hearts. Fifty-six patients need livers. Fourteen are awaiting a pancreas transplant. Waiting for lungs are 16 people. One patient needs a heart and lung transplant. Almost 300 are waiting for cornea transplants.

OPAM designated last week as Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week with hopes of increasing donations.

"One organ, if everything can be taken, can help up to 75 people," said Leanne Lesko, transplant coordinator.

"We can harvest the major organs, but also the skin, bone and the eyes. The eyes can go into two different individuals. The skin can help severe burn victims by covering up the burn and protecting against infection. The bone, once it is processed into granular form, can help people with orthopaedic problems.

"The heart, if not taken for transplant, can be used for a heart valve transplant."

Knowing that a part of them-

— Betty Buckley education director

selves or a loved one could be walking around in someone else bothers some people to the point where they elect not to donate. But the families of donors have experienced a rewarding phenomenon, Lesko said.

SHE SAID THE case of Jerry Pawlus of Canton, who recently received the heart of a 17-year-old Oakland County youth, is a case in point.

"The family of the young gentleman who donated has benefited so many from their loss. That has given them so much comfort and peace, knowing they've bettered someone else's life after the life of their loved one has ended."

PEOPLE CAN MAKE things easy on their families by making their wishes regarding organ donation known, said Lesko.

"Your wishes should be known, if you are pro or con. Don't leave your family with this horrible, devastating thing."

Available at the Secretary of State's Office are labels, which after being filled out and signed by two witnesses, can be used at the time of death to discern which organs may be harvested. Conversely, individuals who don't want to donate their organs can simplify things for health care providers by making that fact known.

OPAM is willing to speak to "any community group," said Lesko. "We will talk anywhere, to anyone — ladies' socials, the Boy Scouts — we do it all."

Tissues and organs may be recovered from anyone up to 75 years of age. There is no charge. A surgical proecedure is used that has no affect on customary funeral arrangements. It doesn't alter body appearance in any way.

The Hometown and Observer and Eccentric "Creative Living" section has the largest selection of suburban display real estate ads in the metro area.

World's biggest

Mobile train display steams into Plymouth

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The world's biggest mobile model train display rolled into Plymouth last week, and before it rolls back out on Wednesday, thousands were expected to see it.

"We had this display last January in the city of Taylor, 15,000 people came to see it in two days," recalled Bob Reckinger.

Reckinger, owner of Plymouth Yard and Hobbies in Old Village, arranged for the appearance of "The Magical World of Lionel Trains" display to coincide with a major expansion of his business.

He recently bought, remodeled and opened the former passenger depot and Plymouth yard passenger train office in Old Vilage, just across the tracks from his long time store on Starkweather in the former Plymouth freight house.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for kids under 12.

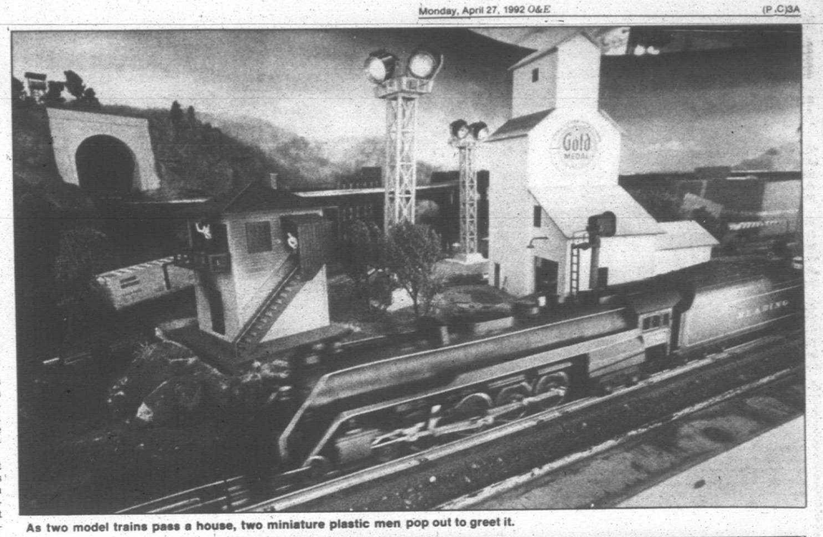

BESIDES THE LIONEL-sponsored display, the grand opening celebration of the store expansion also features a train ride for kids, railroad related gifts, food and drink.

"And of course the real trains are always in action on the CSX Railroad's mainline," Reckinger said, which runs between the two stores.

The model train display is powered by enough electricity to run two big houses and includes theatrical lighting and sound effects. Viewers can push buttons to animate cranes, control towers and other devices along the track.

Jon Player tours with the exhibit and operates the eight model trains along 500 feet of track. "As it (a train) goes along, it travels throughout the country, from the east coast to the west coast, from the mountains to the desert," he said, motioning to the scenery depicted in the display.

"The train will go by and a man will pop out of a station, there's more than trains just running in circles," Reckinger said.

As two model trains pass a house, two miniature plastic men pop out to greet it.

Staff photos by Bill Bresler

Plastic people "wait" near a replica of a train depot along one section of the 500 feet of track in the Lionel-sponsored exhibit appearing in Plymouth.

THAT'S FOR sure. Along the track are figures including a child flying a kite, occupants of a Thunderbird and Cadillac standing outside their cars after a fender-bender, city streets and old '60s Buicks and Chevy's angle-parked downtown, and a painted sunset.

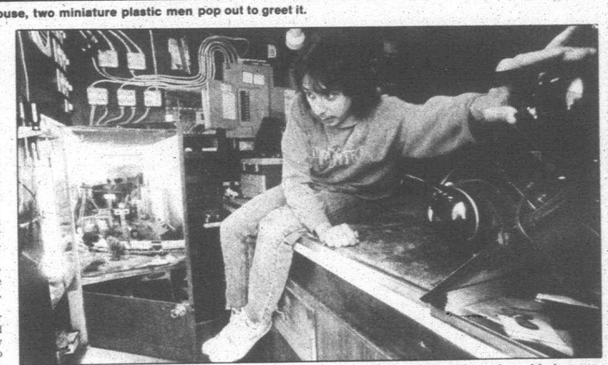

Walk around the other side of the trailer, and there's a train exiting from a mountain tunnel onto a trestle and through a rural scene, complete with a rowboat lake and a Mail Pouch tobacco ad painted on a barn.

The 46-foot trailer doubles as a display case as its side and rear doors are opened to show the glass-enclosed railroad set.

After the display is shown in various locations, "People say they'd like to build their own," Reckinger said, adding, "It's not that easy."

A three-dimensional "sky" over the display with twinkling stars and meteor shower was designed by G&B Optics, lighting consultants to Epcot Disney.

The exhibit runs through Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day.

Jon Player, who travels with the mobile train exhibit, operates controls that send eight model trains over trestles, through molded mountains and past model downtowns.

Plymouth all dolled up

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Elvis and JFK are coming to Plymouth.

They're scheduled to appear at the Plymouth Cultural Center on Sunday, May 3, along with Clark Gable.

No, it's not a conspiracy-theory tabloid-lover's dream. Rather, it's a major regional sale of contemporary collectible dolls.

Among the dolls offered are likenesses of the former president and Elvis. The dolls are created by doll artists well known by enthusiasts.

"We will have people coming in from all over the country, West Virginia, Washington D.C. and Minnesota," said Michele Suttle of Georgia's Gift Gallery, a co-sponsor of the event.

MOST FOLKS MAY know of these dolls through advertisements in Sunday newspaper magazine supplements, Suttle said.

Of collectors, she said, "A lot of older ladies do it; their children are grown.

"And once they get hooked on it, it's like eating potato chips, you can't stop."

Collectors typically dress the dolls, especially those depicting babies, in different outfits and display them in varying ways.

Among the dolls to be auctioned is "Jason," from artist Yolanda Bello's Picture Perfect Babies collection.

"She will be at the cultural center to autograph the dolls," Suttle said, and so will doll artist Sandra Kuck.

Originally issued for $48 in 1986 in a limited edition, "Jason" is expected to generate bids of $825 to $1,100 as this edition doll has done around the country.

The auction begins at 1 p.m. and is conducted by International Doll Exhibitions Ltd. of Morton Grove, Ill.

Also to be auctioned are 27 modern dolls valued at about $6,000. Baby, celebrity, fashion and character dolls are among those available for bidding. Estimated bids range from $50 to $1,100.

Included in the character dolls are Gable as Rhett Butler and Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara.

Dolls will be displayed at the cultural center for inspection by bidders from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Expected to be bid at $400-$600 is the "Platinum and Gold Elvis" doll. It comes with gold lame jumpsuit with metallic braid trim and ivory satin insets, white sleeveless shirt, silky turquoise scarf, gold vinyl boots, gold-plated medallion and monogram buckle.

And don't forget the microphone.

DNR probes former landfill

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

A former Westland airport — the site of an old landfill — has been cited as a toxic dump, but state officials don't believe there's an imminent health threat to nearby residents.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources has notified city officials of the contaminated site, roughly bounded by Ford Road to the north, Hix Road to the east, Florence Street to the south and Lotz in Canton Township to the west.

DNR officials have found indications of heavy metals around the Willow Creek drain that crosses the site, said Edward Novak, environmental quality analyst at the DNR's southeast Michigan office in Livonia. Numerous barrels containing paints and paint sludges also have been removed from the land, he said.

The latest contamination report comes on the heels of a highly public toxic landfill problem at Westland's Cooper Elementary School, on Ann Arbor Trail between Middlebelt and Inkster Road in the Livonia school district. Officials are still assessing the problem there.

At the former airport, officials won't begin to grasp the extent of the problem until an investigation is begun, possibly later this year, Novak said.

"We don't really know what's there," he said. "There may not be a major problem there, but we do know there's a potential problem."

'There may not be a major problem there, but we do know there's a potential problem.'
— Edward Novak DNR, Livonia office

The site isn't considered an immediate threat and doesn't rank high on the state's priority list, he said. Although the Willow Creek drain could be contaminated, Novak said, "There doesn't appear to be an imminent human threat."

Much of the land is vacant, although some residences, industries and businesses are located there. Municipal water lines serve the area, averting potential threats that could have been posed by underground wells, Novak said.

"There's been nothing found yet that would be a direct hazard to anybody," he said. "The ground water could be contaminated, but we can't really say."

THE DNR initially learned of barrels on the site in 1987 and removed them. But the state only notified the city of the contamination in recent weeks, city attorney C. Charles Bokos said last week.

The city council has discussed the situation in closed session, but decided last week to make it public.

"We didn't want it to look like we were covering it up," Bokos said, even though city officials themselves had only sketchy details.

Officials plan to locate as many former and current owners of the site as possible. The DNR is requiring the city to develop a cleanup plan. Already, the DNR has identified 14 "potentially responsible parties" to the contamination.

The DNR has received affidavits that the former Nankin Township, now Westland, and Ford Motor Co. dumped at the site, Novak said. The DNR has asked for the disposal records of the 3-M Corp. It's believed that many surrounding communities used the landfill in the '50s and '60s, he said.

WESTLAND OFFICIALS will try to determine the various polluters, Bokos said. Those responsible for the contamination would be asked to help pay for the cleanup costs, which Bokos said could be "staggering."

On Friday, Novak said it's too early to say for certain when the cleanup might occur. The state has numerous other projects that are more serious and have received higher priority.

A map shown by Novak indicated that the DNR removed the barrels in 1987 from areas near the Westland-Canton Township border and just west of Hix Road.

"We don't know who put them there or how long they were there," he said.

The dump site is one of 3,000 in Michigan — and one of 300 in Wayne County — targeted for investigation.

Youth charged in paintball shooting

By Susan Buck
staff writer

The orange paintball that hit Kroger striker Nancy Lang behind her right ear Tuesday afternoon rendered her unconscious for a few minutes.

Even after the paint was cleaned from the Livonia resident's face and hair, Lang's co-workers had to help her remove the plastic from the paintball casing, which embedded itself in her skin.

A 15-year-old Farmington Hills youth, charged with felonious assault for shooting Lang, rode as a backseat passenger in the 1987 Chevy Nova driven by a 16-year-old charged with the same offense.

Both the driver and the alleged shooter were released Wednesday to their parents on $3,000 or 10-percent bond.

The black, 24-inch gun — a Crossman P68 caliber paintball airgun — apparently used in this incident is just one example of the growing number of "look-alike" guns police are seeing, said Farmington Hills officer Duane Fox, a school liaison officer.

"They (paintball guns) pack one hell of a wallop, being quite up front with you," Fox said.

This gun looked like a handgun, Fox said. "It looks like a .40-caliber," Fox said.

THE DANGER of paintball guns, viewed as toys by many, is underestimated.

In fact, the owner manuals accompanying these guns clearly state "This is not a toy," said Carl Douglas, manager at Harry's Army Surplus on Telegraph in Dearborn Heights. "This is not a Super Soaker (water gun) that you buy at Kmart."

In a similar incident in Dearborn Heights, a youth unknowingly shot at an undercover police officer.

Anyone using these guns in areas other than in supervised, regulated fields designed specifically for their use should be arrested and charged, Douglas said.

Although Harry's Army Surplus does not sell the model used in the Hills incident, similar models are sold there. Youths must be accompanied by an adult 18 years or older, preferably a parent, who must present his driver's license.

The store then records the information from the license and issues a stern warning that the buyer, not the store, will assume liability for the gun from then on.

The box which holds the Splatmaster Marking Pistol, the cheapest, simplest variety which costs about $70, carries warnings on all sides.

ONE WARNING reads: "To be used by adults only. Misuse or careless use may cause serious injury, blindness or death. Appropriate eye protection must be worn at all times for safe use. May be dangerous up to 250 yards."

Paintballs fired from guns like the Crossman P68 model can reach a velocity of 280 feet per second, according to Keith Carbary, manager of Surplus City in Berkley. However, gun owners sometimes alter the gun springs to increase velocity, he said.

Bleeding skin welts can result when shot, Carbary said.

"You know when you are shot."

Canton's first liberty fest coming together

It's more than two months away, but an organizer says Canton's first Liberty Fest is coming together.

The bands are booked, the volunteers are ready and the ponds are filled with water.

"Right now, as of today, things are pretty much set," said Bob Dates, Canton's recreation supervisor. He is chairman of the inaugural event, scheduled for June 26-28 at the 50-acre Canton Recreation Complex, near township hall.

There will be music, an auto show, a chicken barbecue, children's activities and a fireworks show to end the weekend.

The music will be varied and constant, Dates said. It includes country and western, jazz, and pop. The 50s doo-wop band, The Laraedos, will open the event Friday evening. All the acts will perform in the township's new amphitheater, which is ready except for the grass. Grass has been planted so the area surrounding the new structure won't be barren.

Dates said township officials hope eventually to add space to the amphitheater backstage.

THE LIBERTY FEST IS successor to Canton's Challenge and Country festivals. All have been summer events organized by the township. Lagging attendance and the fact that events were in different locations were major reasons for the name and theme change. Dates said the Liberty Festival will be family oriented.

Court says check lanes violate state constitution

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Sobriety check lanes may not violate the U.S. Constitution, but a state Court of Appeals panel says they violate the Michigan Constitution.

"In addition to finding the checkpoints only minimally effective in curbing drunk driving, the trial court found the overall intrusiveness of the road blocks to the citizens to be great," said the 2-1 opinion.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving asked state attorney general Frank Kelley to appeal to the state Supreme Court.

THE UNITED States Supreme Court upheld vehicle check lanes under the fourth amendment ("search and seizure") to the U.S. Constitution. But the justices kicked the issue of the Michigan Constitution back to the state courts.

It was the second time in a year a state Court of Appeals panel reached such a conclusion. Another panel said a woman's right to a state-funded abortion was guaranteed by the "equal benefit" sentence of the Michigan Constitution.

In 1986 Gov. James Blanchard made sobriety check lanes an issue in his successful bid for re-election, but his stand was challenged by then-state Rep. Rick Sitz, D-Taylor.

SITZ WON a declaratory judgment from Wayne Circuit Judge Michael Stacey that the police practice of stopping every driver was unconstitutional. Defendants were Michigan State Police and local agencies.

The challenge arose after Saginaw County sheriff's deputies one May night stopped 126 vehicles in an hour, checked only three drivers and made just two arrests.

Stacey and the appeals panel agreed "there is a grave and legitimate state interest in curbing drunk driving, (but) the sobriety checkpoint program did not significantly further that interest and subjectively intruded on individual liberties."

The appeals judges added: "We believe compelling reason exists to interpret the Michigan Constitution as affording greater rights than those found in the federal Constitution."

THE OPINION was signed by, appellate Judges Gary McDonald and Donald Holbrook.

Dissenting was Judge Roman S. Gribbs, a former Wayne County sheriff and mayor of Detroit.

"Neither the parties nor the majority have pointed to textual differences or to a contrary purpose on the part of our (state) Constitution's framers," Gribbs said.

The U.S. Constitution's fourth amendment says: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable search and seizure, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probably cause, supported by an oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be described."

Art. I Sec. 11 of the Michigan Constitution says: "The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation."

Talking taxes

SMART eyes sales tax boost

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Metro Detroiters will likely be asked to approve a .25-cent sales tax increase to finance mass transit sometime within the next 18 months.

Even though a ballot proposal has yet to be drafted, SMART chairman Matt Wirgau of Troy is already campaigning for the regional sales tax increase.

"We think this is something voters will approve," Wirgau said after a Friday appearance before New Detroit Inc.

The regional increase would raise the sales tax to 4¼ cents per dollar, or 90 cents on a $20 purchase. Of that 90 cents, 5 cents would go to mass transit.

The proposed tax increase is expected to raise $65 million per year for regional bus service.

Polls have shown support for a regional transportation tax.

Though the proposal could appear before voters as soon as November, a 1993 vote is also being considered. SMART — the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation — has enough money to keep operating into 1994, Wirgau said.

The sales tax proposal would appear on the ballot in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. Voters in Monroe and St. Clair counties could also cast ballots, depending upon whether those counties seek to begin major daily bus routes.

Approval would be based on a simple regional majority, Wirgau said, regardless of whether the tax passed or failed in any individual county.

Taxes would be collected by the state and distributed to the regional mass transit board that would replace suburban-based SMART and the Detroit Department of Transportation.

The proposal's fate will probably depend on whether it can withstand an expected legal challenge and whether SMART can arrange a merger with D-DOT.

A court challenge is considered likely because the state constitution limits the sales tax to 4 percent.

Acting SMART general manager Michael Duggan and former deputy state treasurer Jay Rising are already preparing legal arguments, Wirgau said. Arguments are expected to be based upon a transportation tax levied in Wisconsin.

A MERGER WITH D-DOT is still being pursued, though the parties haven't met recently.

Detroit officials are adamant that suburbs must directly pay for mass transit. D-DOT is financed through the city operating budget. SMART receives no direct contributions from any community.

Controversy has also flared over representation on the proposed governing body. While some suburban officials propose giving the city as little as one-quarter of all delegates — based on overall regional population — city officials want the figure to more closely match ridership. D-DOT carries more than four times as many daily passengers as SMART.

There also hasn't been agreement on how state and federal transportation grant money would be spent.

Detroit has also expressed interest in building light rail lines in the Woodward and Gratiot corridors, and possibly along Michigan Avenue as well.

SMART isn't ruling out a light rail system, Wirgau said, but sees that strictly as a long-term project.

"We think we should first get a viable bus system and replace some of our older buses," he said. "Rails could be somewhere down the road."

It isn't the first time a sales tax increase has been proposed for mass transit. A 1988 SEMCOG plan called for a 1-cent sales tax increase, which would have raised an estimated $200 million a year. That plan also included two light rail lines.

Wirgau and acting D-DOT director Chris Walton appeared before New Detroit members Friday at a session officially closed to the press. Walton declined comment afterward.

And that's not all.

According to the 1991 Belden newspaper readership study, SPRING reaches more of the affluent suburban shoppers who have more to spend—and who spend more.

- ▶ 182,800 more suburban homeowners than the daily News (88,500 more than the Free Press).
- ▶ 171,000 more suburban Do-It-Yourselfers than The News (89,400 more than the Free Press).
- ▶ 100,600 (and 52,800) more suburban linen and bedding buyers.
- ▶ 64,400 (and 31,000) more suburban buyers of major appliances.

Simply put, one order in SPRING delivers more.

KIDS supporters say plan provides equal opportunity

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Michigan's ballot isn't quite full — at least according to the people backing the so-called "Kids Proposal."

Petitions are circulating statewide, seeking to amend the state constitution by promising equality of opportunity for all public school children.

Backers hope to place the proposal on the November ballot.

"The proposal establishes equality of educational opportunity as a fundamental right," said Carole Sorenson of KIDS, the Ypsilanti-based group promoting the proposal.

Unlike the governor's "cut and cap" proposal, or the pending Democratic alternative, the Kids Proposal wouldn't itself alter the way schools are financed.

But backers hope the guarantee of equal opportunity will translate to more state money, especially for those districts that need it most.

"WE'VE BEEN so heavily dependent on the local property tax that we've forgotten the state has to contribute, too," Sorenson said.

In western Wayne, as throughout the state, support is greatest among area in-formula school districts: those that receive state aid for standard school expenses.

Petitions are being widely circulated in the Garden City and Wayne-Westland schools, Sorenson said. They're less heavily circulated in Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, South Redford and other out-of-formula districts that receive aid only for specially mandated state programs.

Local supporters include the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency.

RESA board members approved the Kids Proposal earlier this month, after rejecting the governor's proposal and Democratic alternative.

"The feeling was that in each (of the others) education wouldn't be helped," RESA spokesman Don Manthe said.

RESA supervises special education and other regional programs on behalf of the county's 34 public school districts.

THE STATE Parent Teacher Organization, Association of School Boards and Association of School Administrators have all endorsed the proposal.

The proposal needs 257,000 signatures by the end of June to appear on the fall ballot.

Backers aren't commenting on how many signatures have been obtained so far, giving fuel to rumors the proposal is in trouble.

Sorenson said she remained confident the deadline would be met.

"There are over 100,000 petitions circulating," she said.

KIDS — Knowledge is Democracy's Safeguard — is billed as a grassroots organization that began in the Ypsilanti public schools.

Gov. Engler's property tax plan was approved by the Board of State Canvassers last week and will appear on the November ballot.

The proposal would cut school operating taxes 30 percent over a five year period. Operating taxes make up roughly one-third of all property taxes, but exclude school bond issues.

THE ENGLER proposal would also limit yearly assessment increases to 3 percent of the rate of inflation, if lower. Assesments would rise to current market value upon sale of the property.

School districts would be reimbursed for losses through expected growth in state revenue. First year taxpayer savings are estimated at $630 million for homeowners and businesses.

Ballot certification for the Democratic alternative was held up pending a challenge from the Michigan Chamber of Commerce.

The Democratic plan would exempt $30,000 of a home's market value from school operating taxes. For current tax purposes, a home's market value is divided in half, then multiplied against the local millage rate.

SC board chair announces candidacy for circuit court

Jeanne Stempien seeks court seat

Jeanne Stempien of Northville Township has announced her candidacy for the Wayne County Circuit Court.

Stempien is chairwoman of the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees.

She is a partner with her husband, Gregory Stempien, in Stempien and Stempien, a Livonia-based law firm. The couple has two children.

She is a special assistant attorney general, serving as trial counsel for the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Stempien has been an attorney since 1980.

She is a magna cum laude graduate of the Detroit College of Law. She also holds a bachelor's degree, cum laude, from the University of Michigan. Stempien taught two years in the Taylor Public Schools before becoming an attorney.

A Schoolcraft trustee since 1986, Stempien was elected to a six-year term in June 1991 and was the leading vote-getter in the three-candidate race. She has been board chairwoman since July.

She also serves on the board of directors of Youth Living Centers, an agency housing abused children.

Stempien is also a member of the Northville 2000 Committee, helping plan the community's future.

FAA to hear jet noise complaints

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Revised flight patterns for Detroit Metro Airport are too little, too late, for area residents calling for an entirely new plan.

FAA officials will be in town April 30 to hear comments on last summer's 180-day test patterns.

Those patterns — including a fanning out of flights — received generally good reviews from Livonia/Dearborn-area residents. But they drew fire from those living south of the airport. Huron Township officials already are suing the Federal Aviation Administration because of the increased flights placed over their community.

Rather than backing last summer's plans, residents are calling for a return to flight patterns in effect before November 1989.

"I'D SAY we're all in agreement those flight patterns are in everyone's best interest," said Tom Bailey of Livonia, a member of Citizens Against Aircraft Noise-North, an affiliate of the Dearborn-based group that first protested jet noise.

Citing safety concerns, the FAA in 1989 eliminated many flights over I-94 and replaced them with flights over Dearborn and the Middlebelt corridor.

That increased flights over Bailey's southeastern Livonia neighborhood, as well as nearby neighborhoods in Garden City and Westland. Except for the 180-day trial, noise complaints have continued since then.

Bailey has received "20 or 30" calls already this year.

While the FAA is open to suggestions, an agency spokesman couldn't say whether the 1989 flight patterns could return.

"We have been working with Wayne County for over a year to mitigate noise," said environmental officer Carl Ball of the FAA's Chicago-area regional office. "There was a report published after the 180-day test and it's available in most public libraries in the area."

The plan calls for changes in runway use and night flight patterns, in addition to fanning out flights over a greater number of communities.

Bailey and his fellow group members have seen the report and are disappointed.

"IT LOOKS like all the recommendations were watered down," he said. "It looks like flight patterns are going to change only on perfectly sunny days with tail winds at a certain level."

FAA officials said they're going into the hearing with open minds.

"We're here to develop a plan," Ball said. "That's what the hearing is for."

The hearing is required under the federal Environmental Protection Act.

The public hearing meets 3-8 p.m. at the Ramada Inn Metro Airport, 8270 Wickham, Romulus.

Speakers can reserve a time during the first half hour of each hour by calling 942-3792. Speakers may deliver comments during the second half hour of each hour on a first-come, first serve basis.

FAA and county officials will also review the proposal in a workshop setting.

Written comments are also being accepted through Friday, May 15. Comments should be sent to: Douglas Powers, manager, systems management Branch, AGL-530, Federal Aviation Administration; 2300 E. Devon, Des Plaines, Ill. 60018.

Ficano to run again

Robert Ficano seeks new term

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano will announce his bid for re-election Tuesday in Livonia.

Ficano, 39, has been sheriff since 1983. His most recent term has been marked by battles with Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara.

The executive's office gained greater control over jail operations in a 1989 Wayne Circuit Court ruling ordering appointment of a county jail administrator.

This year Ficano retained the right to fill vacancies on the department's administrative staff in a county budget dispute.

Ficano has also expanded department drug enforcement programs during his past four years in office.

Most recently he has petitioned the county court to make jail space available to pre-trial defendants charged with gun-related offenses.

Ficano easily outdistanced two challengers in the 1988 Democratic primary. He faced no Republican opposition that fall.

He faces one announced Democratic challenger, county Commissioner Kevin Kelley, D-Redford, this year. Taylor resident Daniel Tackett of the Tisch Independent Citizens Party has also declared himself a candidate.

A Livonia resident, Ficano was graduated from Livonia Stevenson High School in 1970. He is a magna cum laude graduate of Michigan State University and holds a law degree from the Univeristy of Detroit-Mercy.

He and his wife, Rosemarie, a special education teacher in the Garden City Schools, are the parents of two.

Auditions planned for SC honors recital

The Schoolcraft College Honors Recital Division of the Department of Music will hold auditions for its first annual string, classical guitar and voice honors recital/competition Saturday, May 2, in the college's forum building.

Auditions are open to all junior and senior high school students (grades 7-12). More than $1,000 in cash prizes will be awarded among the top winners in each division.

The purpose of the event is to encourage excellence in solo performance and ensemble playing, as well as provide students with an opportunity to be instructed by world renowned pianist and chamber music coach Eugene Bossart, artist-in-residence at Schoolcraft College.

String and classical guitar repertoire must be from standard literature and must be performed from memory. No more than two pieces may be performed. If two pieces are programmed they must be from different historical periods. Playing time for junior high is five minutes; senior high is eight minutes.

Voice repertoire is open to senior high students only, and must be appropriate for this age group. Selections must consist of two contrasting pieces (for example — one 20th century selection by an American or British composer sung in English and one song or aria including German Lieder, French songs or Italian arts songs.) Pieces must be performed from memory. No music theater. Performance time is three minutes.

All contestants in string, guitar or voice repertoire must provide their own pianist, if needed.

Judges will select a winner from each division and cash prizes will be awarded as follows: strings, junior high, $150; senior high, $250; classical guitar, junior high, $150; senior high, $250; voice, senior high, 250.

All winners will participate in an open master class with Bossart from 2-4:30 p.m. Sunday, May 10. In addition, the winners will perform in an honor recital at 5 p.m. Sunday, May 17, in the Forum Building Recital Hall at Schoolcraft.

Entry/registration is $15 per student and is nonrefundable. To obtain an application or more information, call Donald Mlorelock, honors recital competition director at 462-4400, Ext. 5218, or 5225.

Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty, between Six and Seven Mile roads.

TREATING CHEST WALL PAIN
You may have chest wall pain in which your doctor found no evidence for heart disease or heartburn. He may refer you to a rheumatologist to confirm the diagnosis of chest wall strain and distinguish it from other arthritic chest conditions.
Chest wall strain occurs when there is stress on the rib muscles. The problem usually includes both sides of the chest with the heavier most anterior rib musculature most involved. Pain often comes on with activities such as labored breathing or increased effort.
These precipitating events are similar to what causes angina. Thus, when chest pain occurs, family or friends may mistakenly believe you have a heart attack, and urge you to seek physician or hospital help immediately.
Often you can differentiate chest wall strain from angina by applying a cold pack over the anterior chest where aching is most intense. If the pain comes from angina, this maneuver will not diminish your discomfort. If the problem is chest wall strain, the cold, acting as a counter stimulus, substantially decreases your ache.
The treatment for arthritis related chest pain is not medicine or injections, but involves medical advice and your response. Such therapy is inexpensive and promotes your personal control.

Neither side guides meaning of life, death

Jeff Counts

Both sides of the abortion issue are equally crazy. One waves fetuses in the air and the other side coat hangers. Neither is very appealing and solves nothing for us. We end up pondering the meaning of life and death on our own.

Both sides are in a frenzy. The pro-choice people act as though every child should be aborted, while the pro-life folks are not only intent on banning abortion, but also birth control.

They're unhappy people, intent on inflicting their our personal misery on the the rest of us. It's pick your poison on this one. It's what we expect from reformers and folks who want to tell other people what to do.

Usually I can't even watch abortion stories, either pro or anti, on the tube. The coat hanger vs. fetus showdown makes a hockey game look like a Baptist picnic. However, the other night I ventured a peek. It was some guy saying that male-dominated legislatures shouldn't be deciding what women should be doing with their bodies. It was worse than the hanger vs. fetus battle.

THE GUY was a wimp, probably trying to keep his job as a high-priced lobbyist for the feminists. Feminism is rotten at its core because it's based on the assumption men don't care about women. It assumes a Seattle housewife or Washington lobbyist cares more about your mother, sister, wife or daughter than you as a man do.

And the feminists have flopped down into the abortion issue like pigs in mud. It's time to clean them off and send them squealing to market.

The same is true of the pro-life folks, most of whom would rather live in a religious painting than deal with the realities of life.

There is no compromise for either side. That means it's up to us, the sane folks in the middle to do something about the abortion issue.

Politicians will never make a decision on it. As it turns out, about 8 percent of the voters on each side make a voting decision based on the abortion issue. That means no matter which way a politician goes on it, he or she alienates an equal number of people.

BUT THEN maybe that's the way it should be. If somebody wants eight kids, it's their business. The same holds true of those who want an abortion.

The idea of having lawyers and judges deciding when life starts is scary. Most lawyers would re-write a stop sign, if given the chance. God knows what would happen when deciding on when life starts.

Both sides are in a frenzy. The pro-choice people act as though every child should be aborted, while the pro-life folks are not only intent on banning abortion, but also birth control.

It's time to put the abortion issue back where it belongs, in the living room. And let's make sure it isn't crowded with feminists, pro-life zealots and lawyers.

Life and death decisions are tough enough to make alone, much less with pressure from crazy folks.

'Too short' principal stands tall among his peers

John Telford

I HAVE LONG known that Gary Faber was the best principal in the state. Now the state knows it, too. The Michigan Association of Secondary School Principals has just said so. MASSP will recognize him as its High School Principal of the Year at its annual banquet in Traverse City on Dec. 2.

Piloting West Bloomfield High to national recognition as one of America's 10 top high schools is just one of Faber's many stellar accomplishments. Earlier this month, I was privileged to visit Troy High School on the occasion of its being evaluated by a team of educators representing the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. This is a process all high schools are required to undergo every seven years.

The team was composed of outside specialists in the academic areas, administrative and budgetary techniques, school plant structure and essential programs such as athletics, the performing arts, media technology and multi-culturalism.

Troy principal Larry Boehms and his multi-cultural committee are doing a good job of addressing the latter issue with staff awareness sessions and student interaction forums. Troy High's five-year outcomes-accreditation plan is an ambitious piece of work, and the school has committed itself to be monitored by the NNNCA team for that period of time. I have no doubt that Troy will ultimately pass the NCA test with flying colors.

NOR WILL this be a small accomplishment. Troy is being subjected to the scrutiny of a star-studded team whose members number among the very best in their fields. I found during my visit that I know several of these stars, all of whom donate their time to this vital process. I've worked with some of them on NCA teams myself, or even more closely as their colleague in one school district or another during my multiple professional wanderings.

Beverly Stone, formerly one of my two top lieutenants in Rochester and my successor as assistant superintendent there, was on the team. So were my ex-boss Michael Homes, assistant superintendent in Plymouth/Canton; James Clatworthy, my colleague at Oakland University; Elana Izraeli, my former colleague in Rochester and now director of West Bloomfield's learning laboratory; Michael Yocum of the Oakland Intermediate District; and Jack MacDonald, retired executive director from Livonia.

And who was the captain of this champion team? None other than the best high school principal in Michigan.

"While I make my contribution to the profession every time I head up an NCA team," said Faber, "I also bring fresh ideas back to West Bloomfield. So even though the process is time-consuming, it benefits not only the evaluated school but the evaluator's school, too."

This is from the man who, when I promoted him to Plymouth Canton's Lowell Middle School principalship in 1981, a board member protested that he was "too short."

Actually, Gary Faber stands taller than any principal around. It takes the best to lead the best. No wonder West Bloomfield has one of America's 10 top high schools — it has him.

John Telford, a Rochester Hills resident, most recently was assistant superintendent in the Rochester School District. He previously was executive director for secondary education in the Plymouth Canton District.

Column ploy to spark responses

To the editor:

I have a hunch that the ludicrous comments of Jeff Counts are a ploy to generate work for the folks in the newspaper mailroom. Thereby, he statistically justifies his questionable worth to the paper by number of responses received. If so, then I have regretfully contributed to a very unworthy cause.

On the other hand, if this guy is for real, then the Observer does an injustice by continuing to pollute our community with this brand of drivel. Mr. Counts' current ramblings, "Fishing, hunting would eliminate welfare," reveals a mentality that belongs right where his myopic definition of "real art" began, in caves. I would hope that I raise my voice in concert with more civilized people to offer this resounding reply: Hey Jeff, Go Fish!

Reader says column was idiotic

To the editor:

Ah, Jeff, you make me proud to be an American. Your editorial (Fishing, hunting would eliminate welfare) has restored my faith in our democracy, which lets all kinds of people have a voice, no matter how idiotic their opinions may seem to me.

Don't get me wrong — the hunting and fishing part is fine; what's idiotic is believing that the vast number of poor people in our society could possibly be fed with the meager natural resources left to us by developers and polluters.

Perhaps your idea could be applied to other concerns, however. How about requiring newspaper editors to go out in the woods, cut down trees, reduce them to pulp, and make the paper to print opinions on? My guess is, we'd see a lot less paper spent on fact-free musings about what other people should do.

As attractive as that seems, I can't advocate it. I believe in the American idea that there are all kinds of people in our society, and democracy only works when they all have a voice. So, on the whole, I approve of making it easy to print opinions — even the opinions of caveman-wannabees.

So, I say, "Write on! This is America!" — even though your editorials support the alarming argument that we are devolving into a society with only two kinds of people in it: People who believe that others are allowed to have a different opinion, and people who won't tolerate that kind of liberal nonsense.

Listen to voice of experience

When I graduated from Gabriel Richard High School in Riverview back in 1969, boys never took home economics. I don't think there was ever a rule against it, other than momma saying "God forbid!"

Of course, if memory serves me correctly, momma said the same thing when I announced I was going to pursue a cooking career.

Back then, "culinary arts" was nothing more than a glorified chocolate chip baking class with a week of Wilton cake decorating thrown in.

Home ec has long since been replaced by classes now called "life management," and I often wonder how my life would have have been changed learning about nutrition, home management and budgeting had I not learned it from life's famous "school of hard knocks" and momma's famous "I told you-so's".

EXPERIENCE HAS taught me how to figure square yards after visiting numerous floor covering shops and wallpaper stores and asking for assistance while covering an area "about the size of a full-sized Chevy."

Experience has also taught me about EER's and quick recovery heaters after wondering why I always ran out of hot water during my shower while the dishwasher was running.

Sure, I now use coupons and save almost enough money to make my car insurance payments, but true kitchen economics goes way beyond saving $20 a week for necessities. Budgeting? Hardly.

One of life's major disappointments was revealed to me last summer when I bought my first "new" set of major kitchen appliances.

Never having owned an automatic ice maker, I was shocked to learn that after installation, my usable freezer space was decreased by almost 40 percent.

Realize now that I'm not a major meat eater, but after everything was installed, I was hard placed to find enough room in the freezer for anything more than a few packages of puff pastry dough, a few Zip Lock bags of frozen fruit and vegetables and the ice pack from a portable beer cooler.

I can't imagine where a family of four could squeeze in some ice cream, orange juice, a loaf of bread and a turkey knowing it would never fit in my freezer.

FURTHERMORE, WHERE does it say in the book of life that a white kitchen floor shows every drop of pasta sauce and loose cat food "crunchy" that it happens to come in contact with? Little did I know that my kitchen counter required a special cleaner, as do my kitchen cabinets.

As far as I'm concerned, stainless steel sinks belong in a restaurant where they can afford to pay a dishwasher $4 an hour keep them clean.

If there's anyone out there who's thinking about writing a book on kitchen economics, in addition to the above mentioned, here are a few questions that, if answered, would make me want to buy it.

What can you do with five extra servings of cooked rice? Can you freeze leftover pasta? How can you get those bits of paper labels out of the thingy that twirls around in the dishwaster?

Is it really cheaper just to buy another set of mini blinds rather than clean the ones you have?

And finally, what can you make with a bag of shrunken carrots that have been sitting behind a six pack of beer for two months.

I certainly don't have all the answers, but I can offer a few recipe tips for that leftover rice and pasta.

What's cooking in high school

Students learn lessons in home economizing

Editor's note: Our series on weathering the recession concludes with a peek into a high school cooking class.

By Keely Wygonik
staff writer

Even though she's still in high school, Donna Morris knows a lot about planning meals and buying groceries.

"The prices are really high, you learn how to make sacrifices. You can't always have what you want. We wanted fresh pineapple, we couldn't have it, we used canned instead."

MORRIS, A senior at Stevenson High School in Livonia, learned about grocery shopping and meal planning by doing it in Sheila Garvey's Foods III class.

There are six kitchens in Garvey's classroom. Five students are assigned to each kitchen. They share cooking, cleaning up and serving responsibilities. Each class period is 55 minutes long; students usually cook three of the five days they are in class.

Garvey teaches five food classes a day, on three different levels. One third of the students are boys.

Recently, Garvey gave each kitchen in her Foods III class $10, and told them to plan, shop for and cook brunch for eight. She supplied staples like flour and milk.

"WE HAD to find something everyone usually likes, and choose foods from the four main food groups," said Karen Whitmarsh, sophomore, who wants to be a pastry chef.

Whitmarsh and her classmates served chicken stir-fry with vegetables over rice, and homemade almond cookies.

"We did better than we thought," said Angie Ciuffetelli, a sophomore. "We had 53 cents left over. Pea pods were expensive, $2.99 a pound, so we counted them out to get the amount we needed. We took our time shopping and looked for bargains.

"We bought the store brand rice, found red peppers marked down, and got boneless chicken breasts on special for $1.99 a pound. We went to two different stores to get what we needed."

IN AN age of microwave dinners, fast foods, and eating on the run, planning meals and cooking is becoming a lost art.

"A lot of parents don't know how to make food," said Garvey. "The dinner conversation at home is often 'what did you learn in foods class today?' The parents are learning too."

Garvey doesn't use any mixes or prepared foods in her classes. Pots of oregano, rosemary, basil, chives and thyme line the front of her desk. The basil was almost picked clean. Last week the students made pasta sauce and used it. She also teaches students how to freeze and can fruits and vegetables.

"We live off our canning all year. In the spring we'll make strawberry jam, in the fall we'll make grape jelly and can tomatoes, pears or peaches."

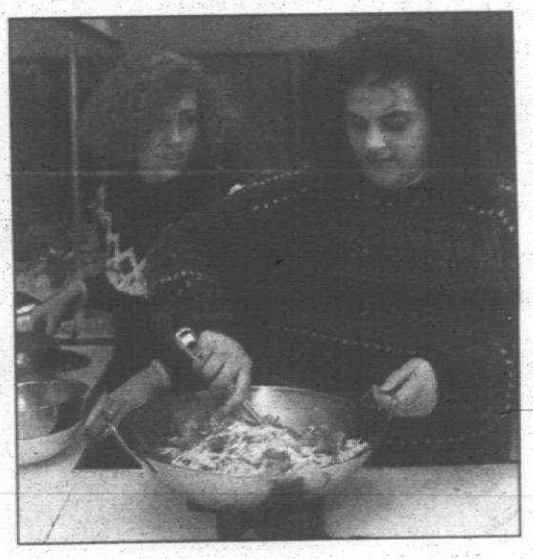

COOKING CLASS isn't a piece of cake, students in Garvey's classes words. "I have high expectations, and I expect perfection," she said. Students have homework assignments. "They have to make white bread and a pie crust at home."

In Foods I students learn how to make chocolate chip cookies, quick breads, casseroles and pizza. Foods II features cooking with herbs and spices, canning and a field trip to Food Emporium on Six Mile in Livonia where they learn about meat. Foods III students learn about cooking with appliances and foods from foreign countries.

Students also learn from guest chefs like Steve Smith who showed them how to use a pasta machine.

"I stress home cooking," said Garvey. "I tell them to cook for people you love, and that love you, and you will do a better job."

Finger foods appeal to kids family tested winner dinner

Betsy Brethen

Having just survived a move from one house to another, I feel a bit out of breath as I begin this week's column.

Actually, it could almost be considered a minor miracle that this column exists at all, considering the fact that a bit of searching had to be done before all the parts to my word processor were found.

Thankfully, despite the tumultuous upheaval and ordeal that moving entails, life is slowly returning to normal. It is as if each box unpacked is a new root being put down, ensuring that our transplanted family will thrive and flourish in its new location.

THE OLD expression, "Home is where the heart is," is ever so true, and as our possessions are being gradually refitted into place, home is also becoming, in the vernacular of our three sons, "sweet" as well.

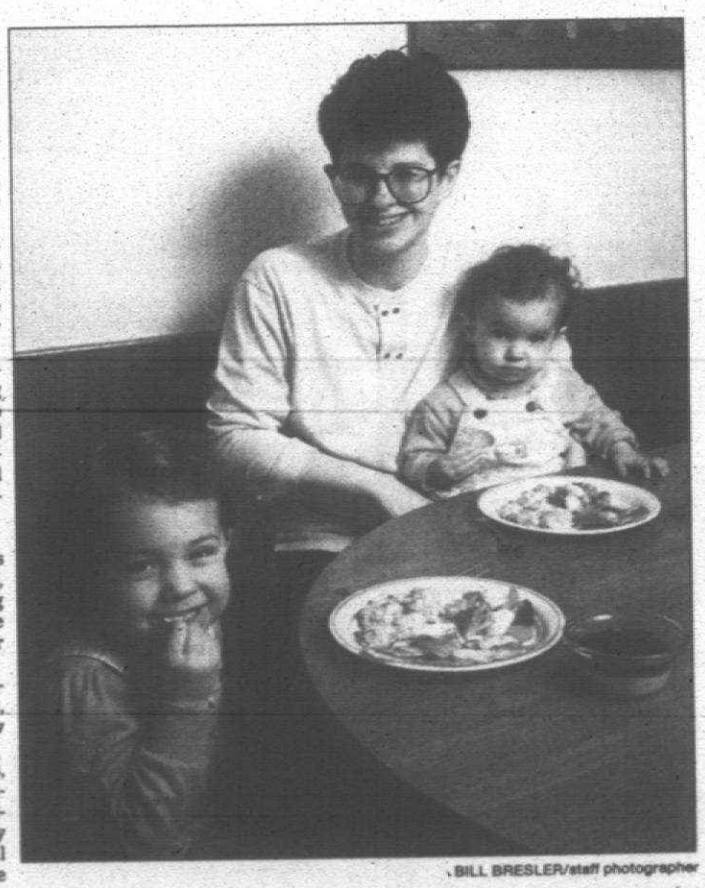

This week's Winner Dinner, submitted by Kim Forster of Plymouth, is a meal that is guaranteed to draw rave notices.

Featuring crunch chicken nuggets, homemade potato chips, a marinated vegetable salad and vanilla pudding, this menu is quickly and easily put together. It has special appeal for young eaters as most of it can be eaten with fingers.

Forster is married and the mother of two young daughters. Originally from Rockwood, Michigan, a small town near Monroe, Forster and her husband Mike, have lived in Plymouth for five years.

A graduate of Eastern Michigan University with a degree in nursing, Forster has worked as an obstetrics nurse at Garden City Hospital for five years.

SHE IS putting her training to good use at home as she cares for her own young family and awaits the birth of a third child in August.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Kim Forster and her daughters, Elisabeth, 18 months, and Kaitlin, 3½ enjoy their Winner Dinner.

Forster enjoys cooking and often plans meals that her children can help her prepare. As well as being a good learning experience for her daughters, Forster has found that they tend to eat a better dinner when they have had a hand in preparing it.

Thank you, Kim Forster, for sharing your delicious recipes with us, and congratulations on being selected this week's Winner Dinner Winner. Your support of this column is much appreciated. Best wishes are extended to you and your expanding family.

On a parting note, this column will be appearing every other week throughout the summer this year. If you have a super summer supper that you would like to share, please send it to me as soon as possible.

WINNER DINNER

Recipes

FAVORITE CHICKEN NUGGETS

Easy to make, these crunchy nuggets are full of flavor and take only minutes to prepare.

Because chicken breasts vary in size, this recipe makes enough coating for 12-14 nuggets.

3 tablespoons margarine, melted
2 whole chicken breasts, skinned, boned and cut into chunks
1½ cups coarsely crushed saltine cracker crumbs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ package dry ranch dressing mix honey or ketchup for dipping

Dip chicken in melted margarine and toss to coat.

In a plastic bag, combine cracker crumbs, Parmesan cheese and ranch dressing.

Place a few chicken pieces at a time into the bag, close the bag tightly and shake firmy to coat well.

Place the chicken pieces in a single layer on a lightly greased baking sheet.

Bake in a 450 degree oven for 7-9 minutes or until the chicken is no longer pink.

HOMEMADE POTATO CHIPS

Scrub clean and thinly slice medium baking potatoes.

In a deep frying pan or sabce pan, heat 2 cups vegetable oil and fry one sliced potato at a time for 5-6 minutes or until the slices are crisp and golden brown.

Remove them with a slotted spoon and place on paper towels to drain. Season lightly with salt.

MARINATED VEGETABLE SALAD

1 cup broccoli, cut into bite-sized pieces
1 cup cauliflower, cut into bite-sized pieces
1 cup carrots, sliced
bottled Italian salad dressing

Marinate the vegetables in salad dressing two hours or more.

Refrigerate and serve chilled. For vegetables that are slightly softer and a little bit easier to eat, either microwave them for five minutes or steam them until they are crunchy-tender.

VANILLA PUDDING

1 cup sugar
4 tablespoons flour
2 eggs, beaten
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon margarine

Mix together flour, sugar and milk.

Microwave for 4-5 minutes until thickened and bubbly. Gradually add the eggs and stir. Cook 1-2 minutes more. Stir in margarine and vanilla.

Follow the same steps if you make the pudding on a stove.

As a variation, grind up some oreo cookies, sprinkle the crumbs on top of the pudding and rename it "Dirt Pudding."

Recycle leftover pasta and rice into tasty dishes

See Larry Janes' column on Taste front.

FRIED RICE
6 tablespoons oil
3 eggs, beaten
dash salt
1 medium onion, chopped
½ cup sliced mushrooms
6 cups cooked rice
1 tablespoon soy sauce

Heat 1 tablespoon of oil in a large skillet. Add eggs and salt. Cook until eggs are firm, chopping as you stir to break up the chunks. Remove eggs to a plate. Heat remaining oil in the skillet and saute the onion until tender, about 3 minutes. Add mushrooms and rice. Stir in egg, season with soy sauce. Serves 4.

For the uninitiated, cooked pasta should not be frozen; however, make it into a casserole and freeze the casserole (if you have room in the freezer!)

ALMOND NOODLE CASSEROLE
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup mushrooms, thinly sliced
½ small onion, minced
½ teaspoon salt
4 cups cooked noodles
1 ½ cups chicken broth or consomme
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup slivered almonds
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Melt 2 tablespoons of butter or margarine in a skillet. Add onions and cook for 1 minute. Add mushrooms and salt and cook for an additional minute. Combine noodles with sauted onions and mushrooms. Pour into a 1½ quart buttered casserole. Pour chicken broth over the top and refrigerate until 30 minutes before serving time. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Cover casserole and bake for 25 minutes. Combine 4 tablespoons of butter or margarine with flour in a small sauce pot with almonds. Heat over medium heat and stir until sauce becomes dark brown, about 5 minutes. Pour over casserole and toss gently. Sprinkle with parsley and serve. Serves 4.

I can remember simple dinners of cornbread and soup while growing up in Wyandotte. Here's momma's famous cornbread recipe: (we called it Johnnycake!)

CORNBREAD
1 cup flour
1 cup yellow cornmeal
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 eggs
1 ½ cup melted butter or margarine
1 cup buttermilk

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Grease an 8x8 baking dish and set aside. In a large bowl, combine the dry ingredients and mix well. Add wet ingredients as listed and mix well. Pour into prepared pan and bake for 25-30 minutes or until golden.

Cooking teacher shares favorite casserole recipes

See related story on Taste front. Livonia Stevenson High School foods teacher Sheila Garvey shared these recipes for some of her favorite casseroles. "I have former students coming back all the time for recipes," she said. "They remember it worked in class."

STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS
6 large green peppers
1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 16-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
½ cup long grain rice
½ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 cup shredded American cheese (4 ounces)

Cut tops from green peppers; discard seeds and membranes. Chop enough of the tops to make ¼ cup; set aside. Cook the whole green peppers, uncovered, in boiling water for 5 minutes; invert to drain well. Sprinkle insides of peppers lightly with salt. In a skillet cook ground beef, onion, and the ¼ cup chopped green pepper 'til meat is browned and vegetables are tender. Drain off excess fat. Add undrained tomatoes, uncooked rice, water, salt, Worcestershire, and dash pepper. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 15 to 18 minutes or 'til rice is tender. Stir in cheese. Stuff peppers with meat mixture. Place in a 10 x 6 x 2-inch baking dish. Bake, covered, in a 350 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Serves 6.

TUNA-NOODLE CASSEROLE
6 ounces (about 3 cups) medium noodles
One 6½-, 7-, or 9¼-ounce can tuna, drained
½ cup mayonnaise
1 cup sliced celery
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup diced green pepper
¼ cup pimiento
1 teaspoon salt
1 can cream of celery soup
½ cup milk
1 cup (¼ pound) shredded sharp process cheese
½ cup slivered blanched almonds, toasted (optional)

Cook noodles in boiling salted water 'til tender; drain. Combine noodles, tuna, mayonnaise, vegetables and salt.

Blend together soup and milk, heat through. Add cheese; beat and stir 'til cheese melts. Add to noodle mixture.

Turn into ungreased 1½-quart casserole. Sprinkle with toasted almonds. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) about 20 minutes or until bubbly. Makes 6 servings.

HAM AND POTATO SCALLOP
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup milk
dash pepper
5 cups thinly sliced pared potatoes (about 5 medium potatoes)
1 pound cooked or canned smoked ham, cut in ½-inch cubes (about 2 cups)
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Blend soup, milk and pepper. Add potatoes, diced ham, onion and green pepper. Mix. Turn into ungreased 2-quart casserole. Dot top with butter or margarine.

Bake uncovered in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 1 hour. Cover and continue baking 45 minutes or 'til potatoes are done. Trim top of casserole with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Le Gala de Cuisine showcases area chefs tidbits

Keely Wygonik

Everyone wants to know where Frank's bar in downtown Wyandotte is. I received lots of calls this week from readers after Larry Janes mentioned it in his column on April 20.

Frank's is a neighborhood bar that looks like a little white house at 602 Forest St. on the corner of Sixth St. in Wyandotte. Fish is served 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Fridays. Frank's is known for its pan-fried lake perch and shrimp; smelt is not being served at this time. For information, call 281-8964.

When you're hungry for smelt, lake perch or pickerel, where do you go? I love hearing from readers about their favorite restaurants and markets. Call me at 953-2105.

MARK YOUR calendars. Cranbrook Schools will celebrate spring by presenting for the 14th consecutive year, Le Gala de Cuisine, 3-7 p.m. Sunday, May 3, in the school's Eliel Saarinen-designed Quadrangle, 520 Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Hills.

More than 40 of metro Detroit's finest chefs will perform gastronomic feats amid thousands of spring flowers and colorful plants. Included in admission, $125 (friend); $150 (patron); and $200 (benefactor) are a cookbook featuring recipes from participating chefs and Le Gala De Cuisine '92 poster.

Event proceeds go to faculty enrichment, scholarships and school restoration. For ticket information, call 258-8885 or 647-2847. For general information, call 645-9068 or 851-7725.

Here's one of the recipes featured in the cookbook, Curried Chicken by Chef Jim Kardoosh of Alban's Bottle & Basket in Birmingham. Kardoosh has been with Alban's for two years. He graduated from the Culinary Institute of America and New York. Many of his recipes emphasize heart healthy cooking.

CURRIED CHICKEN
1 lb. boneless chicken breast, skinned
1 oz. olive oil, (2 tablespoons)
½ medium Spanish onion, large dice
¼ cup white wine (preferably Chablis)
¾ cup heavy cream
1 oz. honey (2 tablespoons)
2 teaspoons ground curry
¼ teaspoons ground cumin
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 cups white rice

Rinse chicken and pat dry. Cut into bite-size pieces. Cut onion into large pieces. Heat oil in skillet over high heat. Add chicken pieces and onion and cook approximately one minute.

Pour wine into pan to deglaze and release flavors. Allow liquid to reduce to approximately half. Add cream, cumin, curry and honey. Reduce liquids to desired consistency. Add parsley, reserving small amount of garnish. Serve over hot white rice. Serves 2.

WORD OF Mouth Foods/Porterhouse Meats is holding a benefit barbecue, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 9, at Porterhouse Meats, 1058 S. Main in Plymouth, 455-6770. Event proceeds will help SCAMP, a non-profit organization, provide a summer day camp experience for special education youth.

"Free-will donations will be accepted at the barbecue, and will go directly to SCAMP," said Jack and Kristin Trabue, owners of Porterhouse Meats and Word of Mouth Foods.

Sample homemade hand-stuffed sausages hot off the grill, bratwurst, Italian sausage, fresh Polish, Cajun sausage and smoked kielbasa. Sample Word of Mouth's new barbecue sauce, "Call it Spicey."

Betty Crocker tip of the week: To reduce bitterness in eggplant, lightly salt slices. Place salted eggplant in a drainer over a large bowl. Set another large dish over eggplant and let it drain for about 30 minutes. When you rinse eggplant with cold water, much of the saltiness will wash away. Pat dry and use as directed in recipe. Salt will also minimize eggplant darkening. For a slightly bittersweet flavor, sprinkle sugar over eggplant. Or, you can cover eggplant cubes or slices with hot water and let stand for five minutes. Then, pat dry and use as desired.

Forget tube time, go for the games

(This column is dedicated to the memory of William Beckwith, my uncle, who died in a plane crash. He was 48 years old and one hep dude.)

Well, it's April so it's probably raining or snowing outside and, for some reason, watching the sit-coms on Channel 50 doesn't sound as interesting as it usually does. So what are you going to do with yourself?

Have some fun, of course. And, being the vigilant amusement pursuer that I am, I've gone to great trouble of previewing some diversions for all of you music-loving media children out there. Here are three vaguely music-related pursuits that you might want to check out:

Play It By Ear — The First CD Game: This game is the "Trivial Pursuit" of the 1990s and for good reason. It's a heck of a lot like "Trivial Pursuit."

As the name implies, the game has something to do with CDs. Instead of reading clues from a card, you hear the clues on a CD filled with sound clips from movies, news broadcasts, animal noises, musical instruments and the like. You answer questions that range from the obvious to ridiculously obscure.

If trivia's not your bag, there's also tongue twisters, short-term memory tests and maddeningly detailed short stories for listen comprehension. If it sounds a bit SAT-ish to you, fear not. It really isn't and it's a lot of fun.

Next time out they should make a game with video clues.

"Hit Men" (Fredric Dannen, Vintage Books, 1990): If you've ever wondered how in the heck a song like "I Wanna Be a Cowboy" (by Boys Don't Cry, if you're a trivia buff) ever became a big hit, let alone even made it to the airwaves, you'll find all the answers in this revealing little book. The answer in a word — payola.

"Hit Men" is a behind-the-scenes look at the seedier inner workings of the music business. Dannen explains how record companies have huge budgets set up to pay the folks who can make sure certain songs get played on the radio.

In the past, it was as simple as that — pay for play. But since the publication of the book, things are looking up. Radio is no longer the only force to be reckoned with and the payola tradition may die a natural death.

Hits by radio-shunned artists like Enya, Metallica and Nirvana may shake things up enough so the people will finally get to choose what makes it and what doesn't.

"All You Need to Know About the Music Business" (Donald S. Passman, Prentice Hall Press, 1991): This book is a must for fledgling musicians and a good read for people who are interested in the music biz.

Passman, an entertainment attorney, focuses on the legal side of the business and talk about the various ways that record companies can weasel money out of their artists.

For example, guess who pays for those glitzy record company record release parties? The artist. The expensive catered food backstage? The artist.

You get the idea. Armed with this primer, you'll be ready to negotiate with style in no time.

These Are a Few of My Favorite Things: Last month we inadvertently omitted an invitation for you to submit a list of your most hated bothersome practices, so this month you get another chance. This time, we'll be a bit cheerier and offer you another topic to ponder — favorite things.

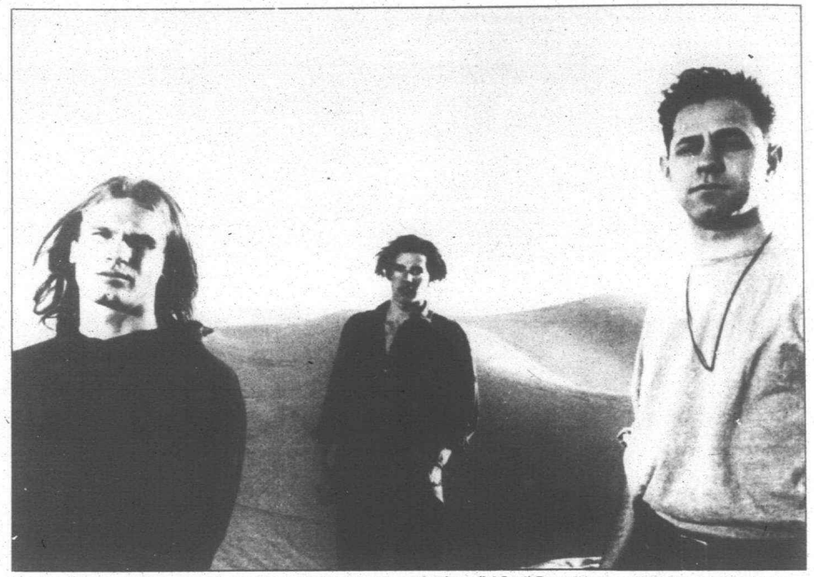

So, you have two choices — to send a list of (1) things that float your boat and make life worth living or (2) things that make you steaming mad to Left of Center, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

If your list is somewhat coherent, I'll print it. If it's really splendid, I'll send you an as-of-yet undetermined CD. Here's my own list to give you an idea.

Jerry Brown . . . free videos at the library . . . Matt Groening . . . Ren and Stimpy . . . comedian Jake Johansen . . . surrealism . . . Woody Allen . . . MTV News . . . Utne Reader . . . parks . . . Albert Brooks . . . street musicians . . . middle-aged hippies . . . Sinead O'Connor . . . old couples who still hold hands . . .

Creating the sounds that are solely Machines of Loving Grace are lead vocalist Scott Benzel, keyboardist Mike Fisher and guitarist Stuart Kupers.

Machines mix techno, emotion

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

On their self-titled debut album, Machines of Loving Grace cut a swath through the genres of hard-core techno, thumping funk and pastoral acoustic guitar pieces.

In their wake, lead vocalist Scott Benzel wants to meld a sound from debris left behind.

"This record was an experimental process from the beginning," Benzel said. "Essentially, it was Mike (Fisher, keyboardist), Stuart (Kupers, guitarist) myself in the studio trying to define our sound."

They're bored, quite frankly.

At least with the direction industrial music has taken in the last few years. Electronically driven bands such as Skinny Puppy and Nine-Inch Nails are veering off into their own domain while those left behind are myopically mass-producing repetitive, multi-beat dirges.

Machines of Loving Grace obviously refuse to get caught in the vortex. Their direction continually spins like a weather vane during a dust storm.

If a common thread does pierce the band's nine-song course on Mammoth Records it's Machines of Loving Grace's way of turning cold, hard rhythms into sensual, glowing numbers.

This reveals itself in overt fashion on the shimmering acoustic guitar piece "Ciccolina" or amorously driven funk of "Rite of Shiva."

YET THE sampling in number "Content" and the drum machine beats in "Terminal City" don't construct electronic impenetrable walls of sound. Instead, technotronics offer an uneasy bridge between machine precision and human fallibility.

> 'There's always a tension occurring between the two. We like electronics a lot obviously and we want to incorporate them into the songs.'
> — Scott Benzel

"There's always a tension occurring between the two," Benzel said. "We like electronics a lot obviously and we want to incorporate them into the songs. On the other hand, a lot of hard techno stuff is pretty devoid of human intellect and emotion.

"What we try to do is add those things."

On this tour, Machines of Loving Grace has added drummer Brad Kemp and bassist Andrew Stewart to accentuate the human element of the their music. The band's sound has always contained an amiable personality, though.

Kupers' guitar playing can be psychedelic to plaintive while Fisher's keyboards circulate through the whole body of music rather than bludgeoning it through the ground.

Then there's Benzel's vocals, which can reveal fascination and vulnerability, as opposed to uttering chants to march in cadence to.

Lyrically, Benzel said he's inspired by lines from a novel or a movie. "Rite of Shiva," for example, was derived from a passage in a Robert Anton Wilson novel about a cult ritual.

THE SONG caught the attention of Nine-Inch Nails creator Trent Reznor, who might produce the band's next album. In the interim, Reznor remixed Machine's of Loving Grace's "Burn Like Brilliant Trash (At Jackie's Funeral)," a rather ornery lament about the death of the American dream inspired by John F. Kennedy's Camelot.

Reznor's four versions of the same number radiate the anger, creating a visceral tombstone for the vision lived in the '60s.

"You'll notice the chorus is really stripped down compared to our version," Benzel said. "He just stripped it down and strengthened it a lot. He got some harder sounds in theirs, they've got some drum riffs going. He also added a keyboard bit to it that is subtle but adds a nice feel to it. We feel it fit the core of the song."

As for the song, "Rite of Shiva," that initially attracted Reznor to Machine's of Loving Grace?

"I don't why he liked it," Benzel said. "Maybe he thought it was demented."

Machines of Loving Grace will perform Saturday, May 2, at St. Andrew's Hall,431 E. Congress, Detroit. For information, call 961-MELT.

Grazing in tuneful 'pasture'

By Larry O'Connor

The Holy Cows are very much a Midwestern band. What, you ask, constitutes such as distinction?

Well, a Midwest address helps for starters. From there, it's open to interpretation really.

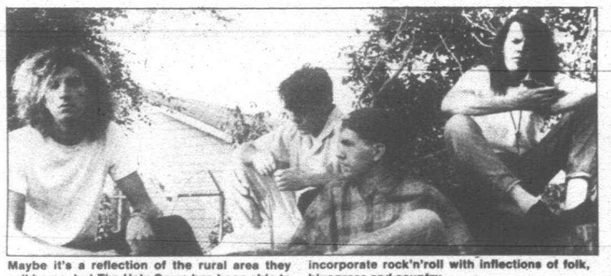

"We grew up in a rural area and we listened to a variety of music," said vocalist and bassist Michael Feeney, whose band calls Chelsea, Mich., home, "and we wear flannel shirts."

In the Holy Cows' case, though, there's more to it than just wearing fashions appropriate for the cover of Farm Boy Monthly. Perhaps it's the manner that the band tackles its craft on the album "Get Along" (Picnic Horn) in blistering, yeomanlike fashion.

Maybe it's the Holy Cows' sound, which incorporates seminal rock'n'roll plundering with inflections of folk, bluegrass and country.

Then there's the way the band writes songs, taking the seeds of an idea and cultivating them over an extended period of time in their garage studio and then shucking them back to their exposed richness.

Trust us, this is a Midwestern band.

Maybe it's a reflection of the rural area they call home, but The Holy Cows has been able to incorporate rock'n'roll with inflections of folk, bluegrass and country.

THEIR SECOND nationwide release, a nine-song offering, is an expedition down a dirt road, creating a timeless and pastoral mood. The title track "Get Along" thumps along languidly and speaks to the heart of a broken relationship.

Feeney, who writes the lyrics for the Holy Cows, said the three-minute number is his favorite on the album.

"I wrote it while going through a difficult period of getting over a difficult relationship," Feeney said. "It was one of those turbulent things where you can't understand why it happened . . . It (the song) made it easier to understand what I couldn't understand."

Which was?

"Really what it boiled down to is we didn't get along. You can't attribute it to anyone particular circumstance. It's just a fact itself.

"I don't think it's going to replace Plato or anything."

The Holy Cows didn't set out nearly five years ago to replace Greek philosophy. Rather, the band simply wanted to play unadorned rock'n'roll passionately and forcefully.

Initially, drummer Mike Popovich said the Replacements were an influence — but not anymore.

"They've gotten worse," Popovich said. "We've gotten better."

THE HOLY COWS of late have become somewhat enthralled with the '70s Southern rock of the Allman Brothers and Lynyrd Skynyrd as well as roots music, such as bluegrass and country, according to Popovich.

Only in the number "We Never Waltz," a country twang-drenched number, do those influences fully reveal themselves.

The Holy Cows perform Monday, May 4, at The Ritz, 17580 Frazho Road, Roseville. For information, call 778-8150.

Altman stabs Hollywood in his brilliant 'Player'

tickets please
John Monaghan

Taking jabs at the crassness of Hollywood has always been like shooting fish in a barrel. Ever since Columbia's Harry Cohn in the 1930s, the studio mogul has been typified as a cigar-chomping dictator with absolutely no taste or integrity.

"The Player," the latest from Robert Altman, brilliantly updates the Tinseltown story. Here, Tim Robbins plays Griffin Mill, a senior vice president of production at a major studio. Tall, slightly boyish in his expensive tailored suits, he is wise to all the angles, including rumors that someone is after his job.

To make matters worse, a disgruntled writer has been sending threatening postcards to Mill. Sifting through records of the hundreds of writers he brushes off every month, he narrows the names down to one and cagily confronts him at a screening of "The Bicycle Thief."

From here, "The Player" takes an audience on so many surprising twists and turns that it would be a sin to reveal much more about the plot. It opens this weekend at the Maple, although word is already out following a nearly sold-out benefit screening at the Michigan Theatre in Ann Arbor.

It's certainly no secret that countless big-name actors and actresses have walk-ons in the film. They practically stood in line to work with Altman when they heard that his next project would tackle the studios.

At restaurants, parties, bars, and studio offices, you'll see such familiar faces as Susan Sarandon, Cher, Nick Nolte, Anjelica Huston, Bruce Willis, Jack Lemmon, Peter Falk, Lily Tomlin, John Cusack, Harry Belafonte and Julia Roberts, just to name a few.

MORE THAN just name-dropping, they provide a realistic element that takes you so close to the business of making movies that you'll completely forget that you're watching one.

Many have the chance to take their own pokes at the type of studio executive represented by Mill. Malcolm McDowell corners Mill in a hotel lobby. Burt Reynolds greets him congenially and then talks about him behind his back.

Other character actors take on roles, including Dean Stockwell as one in a series of pushy writers. Whoopi Goldberg is a police detective and Fred Ward is the head of studio security. Recording artist Lyle Lovett makes his film debut as a mysterious man who may be on the executive's trail.

Peter Gallagher, the faithless husband from "sex, lies, and videotape," has the best in a string of memorable lines. As the up-and-coming young exec hot for Mill's job, he's on his way to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting.

"I didn't know you were an alcoholic," Mill says.

"I'm not," the young player replies. "But that's where all the best deals are getting made lately."

Perhaps the biggest star in "The Player" is Michael Tolkin. You may not recognize his cameo as a young writer with yet another pitch for Mill, but he wrote the brilliant screenplay for this film, based on his novel. He has a perfect ear for Hollywood-speak.

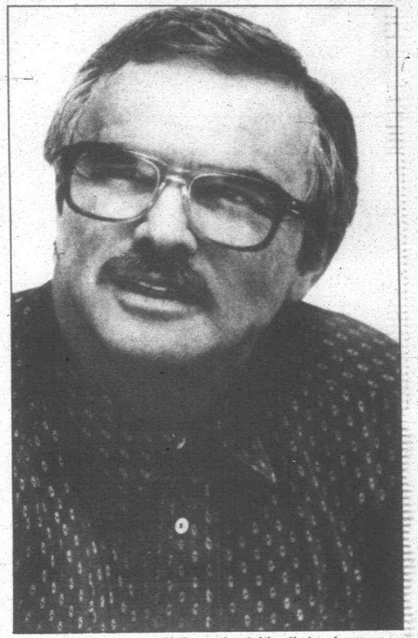

TOLKIN WAS determined not to deliver yet another story of a young writer struggling to hold onto his integrity in the studio system (see "Barton Fink" and "City of Angels"). The picture he paints is full of gray areas, especially concerning Mill, who has at least two moments where he can be likable despite all the cut-throat wheeling and dealing.

Director Altman, meanwhile, adds clever homages to films' past. The opening scene, which lasts several minutes in one continuous shot, recalls Orson Welles' opening from "Touch of Evil." One of the characters even makes a reference to it.

When the plot thickens and you don't know who is after Mill, the camera lingers on a photograph of Alfred Hitchcock.

Since his early successes with "M.A.S.H." and "Nashville" in the 1970s, Robert Altman has had a love-hate relationship with Hollywood. His films have been made outside the studio system whenever possible and, until now, have failed to attract wide audiences.

"The Player" has the potential to make more money than all of his other films put together. It will appeal to both fans of the director's work and those hooked on the inside scoop dished out nightly on "Entertainment Tonight." Whatever category you fall into, see this film soon before you hear too much more about it.

Burt Reynolds is among Hollywood notables that make cameo appearances in Robert Altman's "The Player."

'Object of Beauty' is disappointment

pass the popcorn
LeAnne Rogers

Sitting in a crowded upscale London restaurant, the well-dressed man makes the sign of the cross over his credit card before he hands his plastic to the waiter. That scene opens "The Object of Beauty" a rather disappointing social commentary directed and written by Michael Lindsay-Hogg.

John Malkovich plays the man, who argues that there must have been a computer error after his card is rejected at the restaurant. Most likely the personal check he convinced the restaurant to take will bounce like a rubber ball. It seems Malkovich is financially overextended, all of his money being tied up in cocoa that can't get out of Sierra Leone thanks to a strike by local dock workers.

That hasn't stopped Malkovich and his girlfriend, played by Andie MacDowell, from continuing to live in the high style to which they are accustomed. Ensconced in a luxury hotel suite they can't afford, the pair's credo is, "When it comes to food, shoes and sex, money is no object."

BUT MONEY is increasingly the object as the hotel starts discreetly pressing for its money, credit cards reach their limit and the cocoa starts getting tossed into the ocean by those angry dock workers in Sierra Leone.

The more obvious courses of action, like cutting expenses or getting a job, never occur to this couple.

Instead, they focus on a small bronze Henry Moore statue MacDowell received as a gift from her husband, played in a couple brief scenes by Peter Riegert. MacDowell suggests stashing her statue with a friend and reporting it stolen, giving their cash flow a jump start with an insurance settlement.

Malkovich proposes selling the "Object of Beauty" to raise some money but MacDowell doesn't want to part with it. When the statue mysteriously disappears, the couple start suspecting each other.

As a comedy, the film has a few humorous moments, most supplied by Bill Paterson as the hotel detective trying to locate the statue. There are a few glimpses that Malkovich's character realizes his own shallowness and the superficialness of his life, but it's never really developed.

The couple is unremittently self-centered and manipulative, even to the point of Malkovich romancing MacDowell's best friend after he thinks she has hidden the statue.

THE FILM really doesn't work at all as a mystery since its immediately clear who took the statue and why. The most genuine character and performance comes from Rudi Davies, a pale sad-faced deaf mute who works at the hotel as a maid. She lives in a small run-down flat with a brother. Perhaps the only comment Lindsay-Hogg successfully makes with the film is on the true value of beauty and art.

Malkovich sees the statue as a source of cash; MacDowell has a sentimental attachment. The brother and his small time criminal cronies don't see any value in the work until the insurance company offers a reward.

As for the maid, her reaction speaks to the essential quality of art and beauty.

Georgia's PEACH

Savannah's elegance blooms out of swampland

By Peter Applebome
New York Times Syndicate

Early spring, when the azalea and wisteria embroider the elegant grid of downtown squares of Savannah, Ga., may be the best season to visit one of the South's most historic cities.

Founded in 1733, Savannah began as a rather audacious vision — an attempt to create a vibrant urban environment built around a symmetrical network of urban squares out of Georgia swampland.

Today the city is still a work in progress. It has not gone as far as neighboring Charleston in putting all the pieces together, but its inviting urban geometry, rich sense of history and compact downtown make it an exceptionally inviting place.

This is a good time of year, before the summer heat really sets in, to explore Savannah on foot.

There are at least four focal points for visitors: the restored waterfront, scene of music and arts exhibits the first Saturday of each month; the leafy grid of squares full of intriguing architecture and history; the restored City Market, where old warehouses have been restored into restaurants and shops; and Tybee Island, 18 miles east of downtown Savannah, which offers beaches, fishing and boating for those who have had their fill of downtown.

For a city its size, Savannah has an extraordinarily rich selection of inns and hotels to choose from. Repeat visitors who have liked where they've stayed in the past would do well to take a chance on another place they might like even more.

EVENTS

One of the best sunset views can be found as part of the Candle Lantern Tour of the Tybee Lighthouse, at 30 Meddin Drive. Held May 1 and the first Friday of June, July and August, the tour goes to the top of Georgia's oldest (1773) and tallest (15 feet) lighthouse.

The tour is $3, $2 for children aged 6 to 12. The lighthouse is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; closed Tuesday. Admission is $1.50; 50 cents for children. For more information call (912) 786-5801.

The waterfront is the focus for a number of events all year. On May 2, and the first Saturday of every month, the First Saturday Festival offers food and crafts booths from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

On May 9 and 10 is the annual Arts on the River Festival with music by arts organizations and groups throughout the city, ranging from classical to jazz and folk. There is no charge for either.

Also downtown is the annual free Shakespeare on the Square. This year the City Lights Theater is presenting "The Comedy of Errors" May 1 to 3 on Telfair Square.

At the Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences, at 121 Barnard St., "The Fine Arts in America" — selections from the academy's collection of American paintings, drawings, prints and sculpture — continues to June 21.

Until June 14, the museum will display "The Cutting Edge: Contemporary American Folk Art," a collection of work by 20 folk artists. For more information call (912) 232-1177.

SIGHTSEEING

You don't need a tour guide to see Savannah. All you need is a sturdy pair of walking shoes and a good guidebook. For the latter the best source for reading material on the city is E. Shaver, Bookseller, at 326 Bull St., on Madison Square. Call (912) 234-7257.

The best way to wander around is to view each square as a discrete community with its own personality. Johnson Square is the city's commercial center, with symbols of power ranging from the major banks to the commanding Christ Church.

Madison Square may be the most vibrant, full of students from the Savannah College of Art and Design. Troup Square feels the most like a friendly neighborhood park.

Be sure to meander over to Forsyth Park, with its moss-draped oaks and riot of spring color, and to Colonial Park Cemetery, Oglethorpe Avenue and Abercorn Street, with its weathered headstones and monuments dating to Colonial days.

For those interested in a tour, one of the most popular is the two-hour excursion along the waterfront and historic district with Green Trolley Tours. The price is $8.50; $5 for children under 12. For more information call (912) 233-0083.

Square Routes offers intimate, sophisticated looks at historic Savannah, including a breakfast walking tour ($16), an afternoon architecture and gardens tour ($12), and an evening haunted house tour ($13, $11 for those under 12). For more information call (800) 868-6867.

For a more grand experience there is a cruise on the Savannah River Queen, a 325-passenger reproduction of a historic riverboat. Tours range from one-hour daytime cruises, $7.50, to a two-hour dinner special, $27.95. For more information call (912) 232-6404.

Among the buildings particularly worth seeing downtown is the Isaiah Davenport House, at 324 East State St. Admission is $4. Its restoration in 1955 gave birth to Savannah's historic preservation movement. For more information call (912) 236-8097.

The Owens-Thomas House, at 124 Abercorn St., is considered one of the finest examples of Regency architecture in America. Admission is $5. For more information call (912) 233-9743.

The King-Tisdell Cottage, at 514 East Huntingdon St. is now a museum of African-American history of Savannah and the Sea Islands. Admission is $1.75. For more information call (912) 234-8000.

Most people gravitate toward the waterfront, but better shopping and browsing can be found at the City Market on Ellis Square, which offers antique and crafts shops, art galleries, a sports cafe, Hard-Hearted Hannah's jazz club and three restaurants. For more information on Ellis Square call (912) 232-3470.

Travel between the pages of a new guide

Shopping Around

Summer is the busiest time of the year in the travel business. So it's no surprise to find a new crop of travel guides waiting for eager readers.

Here's a selection of the best:

A series called the Access Travel Guides has long been distinguished for succinct writing and a savvy insider's grasp of locale.

The new "Florence/Venice/Milan Access" by Dwight V. Gast (HarperPerennial, 1991, $17) is an admirable entry in the series. Gast is a New York writer who is a former resident of Italy. He knows his history, art and trattorias.

This book reports on gelato parlors, Renaissance churches and Milan's chic boutiques.

Two other entries of note: "Miami & South Florid. Access" by M.M. Cloutier, et. al. (HarperPerennial, 1992, $17) and "Northern California Wine Country Access" by S. Irene Virbila (HarperPerennial, 1992, $17).

Fodor's Affordables is a brand-new series. Aimed at cost-conscious travelers who aren't quite ready to return to youth hostels and backpacks, the first three titles cover France, Germany and Great Britain.

"Fodor's 1992 Affordable Great Britain" (Fodor's Travel Publications, 1992, $14) is typical of the group. It is written by a team of authors and incorporates pertinent information from Fodor's standard travel guide to the country.

What is different is the expanded range of moderate- and low-priced hotels and restaurants.

For London, for example, where it's difficult to find a room for less than $200 a night, the guide lists hotels and guest houses ranging from about $52 to $163 per night.

There is also detailed information on public transportation for travel within cities and for day trips, on the assumption that rental cars will not be used.

Anglophiles should also note "Cottages, B&Bs and Country Inns of England and Wales" by Elizabeth Gundrey (Fodor's Travel Publications, 1992, $15).

Published in England as "Staying Off The Beaten Path," this popular guide to more than 500 properties is in its 11th edition in England and has now been published for the first time in the United States.

If the new series of Berlitz Travelers Guide books seems familiar, it's because the entire group was originally published as the Penguin Travel Guides.

Last year Berlitz bought the series from Penguin and brought along general editor Alan Tucker. While the covers have changed, the books continue to be written by a committee of writers who really know their destinations.

The first nine titles include New York City, Mexico, Hawaii and the Caribbean. They range from $10.95 to $14.95 per book.

Just in time for the summer Olympics is "Slow Walks in Barcelona: A Visitor's Companion" by Michael Leitch (HarperPerennial 1992, $13), a series of 16 detailed walks throughout the city.

They include strolls to Antonio Gaudi's Sagrada Familia church, to the Miro and Picasso museums and to the bird, flower and food markets of the Ramblas.

Those who love the outdoors will enjoy "Exploring Colorado's Wild Areas" by Scott S. Warren (The Mountaineers, 1992, $14.95). This guide introduces readers to 65 backcountry areas. Each area is assessed for hiking, cross-country skiing, canoeing and kayaking.

"Best Hikes with Children: San Francisco's North Bay" by Bill McMillion, with Kevin McMillion (The Mountaineers, 1992, $12.95) is the latest entry in that popular series. It lists 90 day hikes that encompass such places as Mount Tamalpais and Point Reyes National Seashore.

The Lonely Planet travel series has a mission to cover the planet. These books appeal to youthful, adventurous and budget-minded travelers. One of the latest entries is "Zimbabwe, Botswana and Namibia" by Deanna Swaney and Myra Shackley (Lonely Planet, 1991, $16.95).

For the traveler who has always dreamed of going to Victoria Falls, meeting the "bush people" of Kalahari and seeing African wildlife without an organized safari, this is the guide.

A 32-page section of color photographs and illustrations of wildlife is especially helpful.

Shel Levine of Southfield and the Total Rehabilitation and Athletic Conditioning Center in Farmington Hills demonstrates a stretching exercise senior citizens can do prior to playing golf.

Flexibility key for seniors

Stretching necessary for golfers

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

A disciplined routine of stretching is the most important factor in enabling senior-citizen golfers to avoid injuries and enjoy their sport more completely.

About 60 people, most of them seniors, heard a three-man panel of medical and golf experts offer that advice and other knowledge Thursday evening at the Farmington Area YMCA.

The program was sponsored by the Total Rehabilitation and Athletic Conditioning Center in conjunction with ElderMed at Botsford General Hospital in Farmington Hills.

Shel Levine of TRACC, Dr. Stephen Goldman and retired PGA golfer Bob Szilagyi shared their individual expertise, with the need for proper conditioning being central to each of their talks.

Levine, who holds a master's degree in clinical exercise physiology, asked 'How many people think golf is good exercise?' About two-thirds raised their hands. 'How many ride a cart?' A handful raised their hands again.

Bob Szilagyi of Plymouth and Salem Hills Golf Club shows his audience the proper technique for swinging a golf club.

"GOLF IS GOOD exercise if you walk," he said. "Age is no roadblock to get in shape. Everyone can do some type of aerobic exercise."

The principle of being in shape and loose applies to all age groups but is especially important for seniors and can actually slow down the aging process, according to Goldman, a specialist in sports and osteopathic medicine at Botsford.

As people get older, muscles begin to change at age 25, the heart beat at peak exercise level decreases a little each year, blood pressure goes up before peaking around 70, there is less water in the body and it takes longer to warm up and cool down after physical activity.

Most golfers go to the putting green to "warm up," Levine said, but their warm-up routine should involve walking around the putting green instead.

An aerobic activity and static stretching — holding the stretch for 20-30 seconds at a time — are advised. Stretching can take care of a lot of joint aches and pain, according to Goldman.

Levine demonstrated several exercises golfers can do to loosen their muscles in the neck, arms, torso and lower back. They should be done the year round and not just before golfing, he said.

"Get in condition for your sport; don't use your sport to get in condition," Levine said. "Good cardiovascular conditioning will help you finish nine holes."

DEHYDRATION during a round of golf also is very common, according to Levine, and seniors need to be especially careful.

The signs of dehydration are profuse sweating, pale and clammy skin, elevated body temperature, loss of motor coordination and faintness. If a person feels dehydrated, he/she should find shade, lie down, elevate the feet and drink cold liquid.

Levine and Goldman cautioned their listeners not to drink alcohol before or while playing golf, adding a caffeinated drink like coffee can be just as bad. To prevent dehydration, golfers should also drink a lot of water before going out and either avoid hot days or get acclimated to them.

"Drinking alcohol is the worst thing you can do on a 90-degree day," Levine said.

Elbow pain and low-back strain are common ailments that afflict golfers, Goldman said. The former is an inflammation of the inside of the arm caused by striking the ground with the club, usually resulting in a large divot.

"The jamming sensation causes problems with the neck and shoulder," Goldman said, adding the latter is often caused by overswinging.

Most of the aches and pains golfers have can be treated at home. If a problem persists for more than a week, the individual should have it checked unless swelling and excessive pain require immediate care.

OTHERWISE, ICE should be applied for three days. Goldman was emphatic about his Three-Day Rule. Never use anything but ice to treat a sore area during the first three days. Moist heat can be used after that.

"Ice and stretching will get you out of 99 percent of all problems you have," Goldman said, adding golfers can avoid injuries by paying attention to the mechanics of their swing.

Szilagyi, now the teaching pro at Salem Hills Golf Club in Washtenaw County, demonstrated proper technique and its role in preventing injuries.

"You're less prone to injury by using the legs in the golf swing," he said. "Most golfers want to use their arms and shoulders because that's what they're used to doing relative to other activities. You want to use your whole body but in the right sequence.

"People use their legs but use them too late. Most don't get enough shoulder turn and then won't use their legs. If you don't get the weight back, how are you going to get it forward properly? If you leave the weight forward and don't get it back, you have no power."

Szilagyi added tempo is important in executing the backswing, the knees should be flexed to use the legs in generating power and the grip should be light as a feather.

Tackett among leading hitters despite injury

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

softball

Denice Tackett postponed knee reconstructive surgery in order to continue her softball career at the University of Detroit-Mercy.

Tackett, playing in her final year of college eligibility, hasn't let a knee brace slow her down.

The 1987 Plymouth Salem graduate is rated among the top three in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference in hitting (.397), RBI (17), doubles (five) and triples (one) for the Titans, who are 17-4 overall and 5-3 in the MCC.

Tackett could have had surgery prior to the season but chose to wait until the summer after hearing it might require a nine-month rehabilitation period.

TACKETT, A first-team MCC choice last year, blew out the interior cruciate of her knee as a sophomore in 1989. She had scope surgery then, was red-shirted and earned a fifth year of eligibility.

Tackett calls herself the "sole survivor" of the '87 recruiting class, since the other five either left U-D-Mercy early or ran out of eligibility. One of the '87 recruits, Jackie Pitts, ended her career last year as one of the nation's stolen base leaders.

"It's pretty sad (ending a career) and been kind of a disappointing year because I'm used to playing so many more games," said Tackett, referring to the several games postponed because of bad weather. "The knee is sore and it slows me down a lot, but I feel I can still compete at the same level. It's going to be different not playing. I've been there five years and I've seen the team go through tremendous changes."

Tackett was a member of the MCC champion in '88 and '89 and last year she played on a second-place team. The Titans are playing for first-year coach Laura Mueller, who took over for Nick Stanns, fired despite being MCC coach of the year in '91.

TACKETT SAID she enjoyed playing for Stann but the change was for the better. Stann had only one losing season in eight years.

Linda Jarvey and Kim Wiseman are the current assistant coaches.

"It's an improvement over last year because the team is more comfortable around the coaches," Tackett said. "The coaches last year were very hard on us, discipline-wise. I feel the team will improve through the years and have a shot at the NCAA Tournament. Our goal now is to win the MCC again."

The MCC tournament is being held May 12-13 in Indianapolis and the Titans figure to challenge for the championship along with Notre Dame, the defending champ. The Titans have one of the better defenses in the MCC to go with pitcher Teresa Emery (0.00 ERA in her first seven games), but they are aware of the league's continued improvement.

"In the MCC there are no teams you can say you're definitely going to beat them," Tackett said. "The teams seem to be getting tougher every year. Before there was not enough competition. Everything is laid out on the line in the tournament. You either win or you don't."

Tackett, who carries a 2.8 grade point average while majoring in physical education and minoring in health education, will graduate next December after student teaching.

Recruits improve Madonna outlook

By Brad Emons
staff writer

On the verge of winning his first District 23 title, Madonna University volleyball coach Jerry Abraham has added four new gems to an already polished stone.

Wayne Memorial's Laura Fisher is among four new recruits for the 1992 season as the Lady Crusaders' draw closer to a berth in the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association tournament.

"These girls will add depth," said Abraham, who in his fifth season guided Madonna to a 43-12 overall record and a runner-up finish (to Northwood Institute) in the District 23 finals last November. "All four are good all-around players and are outstanding students in the classroom.

"They'll make every position competitive. From player to player, this should be the strongest team we've had."

Fisher, a two-time first-team All-Observer setter, will be joined at Madonna next fall by the Davison High duo of Marci Laurencelle and Annette Schramski. Also in the fold is White Lake-Lakeland's Tiffaney Joseph.

The four recruits hope to pick up the slack for three starters lost to graduation. Gone is defensive specialist Jenny Sladewski, a Livonia Stevenson High product; middle hitter Kristy McFadden from Redford Bishop Borgess and setter Penny Baker.

FISHER should be able to lend depth at the setting position.

"She's a very experienced player with a great work ethic," Abraham said. "She will be counted on as a backup to Mazie Pilut (Borgess), but has the ability to play."

The 5-foot-5 Fisher helped Wayne reach the state Class A quarterfinals in 1991 and the two-time All-Region pick led the Zebras to the 1992 Wolverine A League crown.

"I chose Madonna because it has a great volleyball team as well as a great academic program," said Fisher, a 3.2 student who plans to major in Education. "Madonna is a relative small school with the status of a university. To me it's like having the best of both worlds."

Davison's Laurencelle, a 5-11 outside and middle hitter, was selected first-team All-Big Nine Conference and All-Region.

"She's a very strong, dominant-type player," said the Madonna coach. "She has a wide variety of offensive skills and will challenge for a starting position."

Laurencelle plans to major in Elementary Education.

"I chose Madonna because I feel it's better for me to attend a small college," said the Davison standout. "I also feel that Madonna has a very good volleyball program that I fit into well."

SCHRAMSKI, a 5-10 outside hitter, also made first-team All-Big Nine and All-Region for the Davison Cardinals.

She carries a 3.73 grade-point average.

"Annette is a very talented all-around athlete," Abraham said. "She's a good offensive and defensive player and has the ability to challenge for a starting position.

"We expect both (Laurencelle and Schramski) to contribute and be valuable additions to our program. They both came from a successful high school program."

Joseph, a 5-10 outside hitter, was Lakeland's co-captain and made All-Kensington Valley Conference.

"Offensively she's a strong outside hitter, but also a solid defensive player," Abraham said. "Like the others, she plays with tremendous work ethic and a lot of enthusiasm." A 3.5 student, Joseph was named to the Kesington Valley All-Academic squad two straight years.

"I like the small campus, it feels more comfortable to me," Joseph said. "Another factor I considered was the Elementary Education program. I like that fact that students get to work with kids in certain areas of study."

With the four recruits and 10 scheduled returnees, led by first-team NAIA All-American Dana Hicks-Finley, it appears Madonna is ready to shine bright in '92.

Bad weather problem for Crusaders

This much can be said of the final week of games on Madonna University's softball schedule: They're as certain as the weather.

In other words, don't count on it. It'll change in an hour.

Going into last Thursday's doubleheader with Grand Rapids Baptist, the Lady Crusaders had played exactly half of their NAIA District 23 games — or six of 12. That meant they had to play the rest, canceled by inclement weather, by yesterday.

Considering Madonna was already scheduled to play in the Albion Tournament last Friday and Saturday, there was little time remaining for make-ups. With their opponents having an equally difficult time finding available scheduling slots, it added up to a giant headache.

But by Thursday evening, Madonna coach Dave Racer could sigh and say, "We've finally got it finalized." The schedule was set: A doubleheader make-up against Siena Heights Friday morning before the Albion Tournament, another doubleheader make-up at Northwood Institute Sunday, and a single game make-up against Grand Rapids Baptist today.

THE BAPTIST make-up, caused when Thursday's second game was rained out, was allowed for today because the Comets don't play on Sundays. Everything was situated.

Until Friday, when the rains came again.

Anyway, Madonna did get in the first game Thursday and did insure itself of a district playoff berth by trouncing Baptist 9-0. Freshman Tracy Vachon was the winner, tossing a three-hit shutout; she walked three and struck out five. The win raised her record to 10-6. Nicci Stahl was the loser; she allowed nine runs on 11 hits and three walks.

Holly Jondro led the Crusader attack with three hits in three trips, collecting three runs batted in, scoring two more and stealing two bases. Kay Lee Davis went 4-for-4 and scored four runs. Megan Armstrong added two hits.

THE CRUSADERS got a run in the second inning on singles by Davis and Jondro, Davis scoring on a Kristen Wasil fielder's choice. They added two more in the third, loading the bases on singles by Kim Supron, Davis and Armstrong. One run scored on a Jondro sacrifice fly and another came home when Wasil's fly ball was dropped.

A pair of three-run innings in the fifth and sixth insured Madonna's victory. Jondro followed Davis and Armstrong's fifth-inning singles with a run-scoring base hit, then Wasil's grounder was booted and two more runs crossed the plate.

In the sixth, Armstrong's sacrifice bunt scored one run, Jondro's double brought in a second, and Karen Sangregorio's sacrifice fly delivered a third.

The win raised Madonna's overall record to 19-13; the Crusaders are 6-1 in the district, in second place. Baptist fell to 3-8 in the district.

LCC golfers win tourney

Poor weather forced an early conclusion to the Schoolcraft College Golf Invitational Friday, limiting competition to nine holes. Lansing Community College was the victor, carding a 152 team score at the par-36 University of Michigan Golf Course in Ann Arbor.

Oakland CC finished second with a 169, with host SC third at 171. Next was St. Clair County CC at 175, Kellogg CC at 176, Mott CC at 177, Macomb CC at 180 and Henry Ford CC at 185.

Schoolcraft Rick Quinn shot a 38 to finish third individually. Tony DeKroub (36) and Paul Hughes (37) placed first and second for Lansing CC.

Other SC scorers were Dennis Alcock, 42; Darrin Kent, 45; Troy Denomme, 46; and Scott Sandusky, 48.

"It was just a horrible day," said SC coach Carolyn Steffen. "We canceled it after nine holes because there was standing water on the greens. To shoot par (which DeKroub did) in weather like that is really remarkable."

SC was scheduled to play in the Eastern Conference Championship Sunday and today at Alpena Country Club, weather permitting. The Ocelots will travel to the Lansing CC Invitational at Timber Ridge Golf Course in East Lansing Wednesday.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)
Don't vent your anger on friends and loved ones. They care for you, but will not accept abusive treatment. Look for good news soon.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)
A problem may resolve itself in your favor. Job opportunities will open for you; but don't jump at the first thing to come your way.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)
You may wonder where your sense of humor has gone. Find the humor around you and don't take yourself so seriously.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22)
A work-related issue or problem could snowball if not handled carefully. Take a break, even if it's just 15 minutes long. Relax now or pay later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)
You'll be running the gamut of emotions. Things that usually anger you will bring you joy instead. Try to appreciate this temporary change.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
You could be ready to express your innovative ideas to a friend, boss or co-worker. Be prepared for several surprises, especially from relatives.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)

Another TV season ends:

Series change, switch networks, say farewell

By Steven Alan McGaw

For television critics, the constant influx of hype is a little deadening. Whether it's a "groundbreaking new drama series" or an "innovative comedy concept," it seems it's all been said before.

Yet the end of this season, and its implications for the next, deserves to stand out in the mind of viewer and pundit alike. It is surely unprecedented for a single season's passing to bring so many changes, adjustments and ends.

Many didn't believe Bill Cosby when he declared this would be the last season for the still highly rated "Cosby Show," but end it did, taking a final, exultant bow on Thursday, April 30, with son Theo Huxtable's college graduation. Just five days earlier, ABC bid farewell to three of its prime-time mainstays: "Growing Pains," "Who's the Boss?" and "MacGyver." Each of the formentioned series leaves a noticeable hole in the schedule, but none more so than "Cosby," which had never strayed from its Thursday night opening berth, even when challenged by Fox's "The Simpsons" in later years.

This Saturday marks the conclusion of another NBC staple and one long regarded as the linchpin of that network's comedic domination of Saturday night: "The Golden Girls." In the final episode, Dorothy (Bea Arthur) decides to play a joke on her roommates and feign romance with a handsome widower (Leslie Nielsen). The plan backfires when real love sets in and the couple decides to marry.

But the story won't stop as the honeymoon starts. Next season, Rue McClanahan, Betty White and Estelle Getty will re-create their characters in a new show on another network. Titled "Golden Palace," the CBS series will have the ladies installed as proprietors of a hotel. Word is that Arthur will visit from time to time.

Also jumping from NBC (after being dropped by that network) to CBS is Carroll O'Connor's "In the Heat of the Night," but the format is unclear; originally announced as six two-hour movies, it now appears "Heat" will show up in a regular weekly berth. Another hit waving goodbye to the Peacock network is "Matlock," which relocates to ABC. Star Andy Griffith has been openly resentful of his former employers' claims that he didn't draw younger viewers in sufficient numbers and equally grateful for the new lease on network life.

At least two spin-offs are penciled in for next season. "Melrose Place" is a new address from the producers of Fox's "Beverly Hills, 90210," who are this time aiming for a slightly older audience. (In other words, "90210" fans who've received their diplomas.) Grant Show stars as Jake Hanson, a construction worker who lives in the same apartment complex as many of his "twentysomething" friends. On CBS, Nell Carter will star as a no-nonsense bail bondswoman in an as-yet-unnamed comedy spin-off from "Jake and the Fatman." That series, incidentally, is also leaving the air, reportedly because stars William Conrad and Joe Penny aren't interested in returning.

CBS' popular "Designing Women" will be back next year but without Julia Duffy, whose whining Allison proved unpopular with viewers. Rumor has it that former regular Jean Smart, who left the series to spend more time with her children, may return for periodic visits, and Jackee will come aboard the show late this year as Meshach Taylor's new love interest. Jackee also has a regular role on CBS' "The Royal Family" but if that series fails, she could join "Women" full time.

So what does it all mean? When so many popular series are judged to have run their course, are there replacements with genuine potential waiting in the wings? Will those replacements break new ground and bypass the cliches that plagues prime time, or will they be palid imitations of the programs they replace? And when next season comes, with so many new shows on the schedule, will the programming execs be more inclined to give those new entries a fighting chance? As the song says, "...see you in September."

LET'S TALK

Kentucky senior loves country singer Vince Gill

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I am a 73-year-old lady. I love that Vince Gill. I would like to have a picture of him. His song "When I Call Your Name" is my favorite. My sister is crazy about him, too. We watch him on TV when we can. —Jessie Thurman and Hazel Cox, Bardstown, Ky.

A: Write Gill in care of MCA Records, 1514 South Street, Nashville, Tenn., 37212.

Q: I think James Spader is a very talented young actor and would like to write him if you have an address. —Patsy Bowman, High Point, N.C.

A: The actor, best known for the movie sex, lies and videotape and his role as a drug dealer in Less Than Zero, can be reached in care of ICM, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90048.

Q: Bob Barker is one of our favorites! How long was he married and how long has he been a widower? Did they have any children? —M. Banks, Red Wing, Minn.

A: Barker's agent, Henri Bollinger, says the host of The Price is Right was married about 35 years, and has been a widower for 10 years. The couple had no children. Barker fills his time away from the game show with karate, reading, traveling and studying the Civil War. He also makes time for the animal-rights movement, of which he is one of its most eloquent proponents. He claims he also excels at lying in the sun doing absolutely nothing. It's hard to believe he has time to do nothing!

Q: I would like to have Bob Hope's address to tell him my cousin, who used to be his M.C., died and let him know about the details. —Blaine Dunblazier, Wadena, Minn.

A: Write to Hope Enterprises, 3808 Riverside Drive, Suite 100, Burbank, Calif., 91505.

Q: On a recent episode of* Hot Country Nights *which Reba McEntire hosted, there was a clip of her singing. It appeared she was wearing some kind of hearing device in both ears. Does she have a hearing problem? —Lisa Johnson, Zumbrota, Minn.

A: As far as I know, the singer does not have a hearing problem. Many vocalists use a headset while performing on stage so that they can clearly hear the mix of their voice with the music of the rest of the band, which is difficult when standing between those concert-sized speakers.

Vince Gill

Q: I am a big fan of Don Mattingly, the first baseman for the New York Yankees. I want some information on him. How old is he? When was he born? I would love to have his address. What are his favorite foods and television shows? What kind of car does he drive? Who does he think was the hardest team they played last year? —Josh Brinkley, Nashville, Tenn.

A: Mattingly was born in Evansville, Ind., on April 20, 1961. Mattingly, his wife, Kim, and his three children (Taylor Patrick, Preston Michael and Jordon William) have two homes, one in Evansville, Ind., and one in Tenafly, N.J. In high school, Mattingly was involved in baseball, basketball and football. In his spare time, Mattingly enjoys playing racquetball. In 1987, Mattingly and his wife opened a restaurant in Evansville called Mattingly's 23 (his number is 23). For each home run Mattingly makes, he donates $1,000 to help underprivileged children in New York City get the medical care they need. I don't know what kind of car he drives or his favorite food or his favorite television show. You can ask him when you write to him in care of the New York Yankees, Yankee Stadium, Bronx, N.Y., 10451.

BITS AND PIECES

More half-baked ideas; Bible becomes miniseries

Taking the show on the road seems to be the hot idea for fall, at least according to a list of possible new series in development for the networks. ABC may send Robert Urich packing as a deputy district attorney who travels cross-country by motorcycle with his delinquent son in C.C. Rider, while CBS views life from a Winnebago in Johnny Bago. NBC counters with Pierce Brosnan as a gonzo journalist who's Running Wilde and hedges its bet with an update of the '60s road series Route 66.

Some big names not normally associated with network prime time will be taking shots at new series. NBC is working up a sitcom starring singer Patti LaBelle as a blues diva, and CBS will take a chance with Dudley Moore in his first U.S. series, Dudley. And Robert De Niro's production company is producing Tribeca, a one-hour drama anthology for Fox.

Pierce Brosnan

Giving the other guy a chance. Twentieth TV has dealt a package of Fox theatrical films to CBS instead of Fox Broadcasting Co., another arm of Twentieth Century Fox. The 11-film package includes Die Hard 2, Sleeping With the Enemy, For the Boys, The War of the Roses, Edward Scissorhands, Young Guns 2, Only the Lonely, Pacific Heights and Dutch.

It helps to have good source material. Dino De Laurentis has agreed to produce a miniseries adaptation of The Bible for future broadcast on CBS. Focusing on pivotal stories from the Old Testament such as that of Samson and Delilah, the miniseries will employ different writers and directors for each episode.

Writers already on board are Anthony Burgess (A Clockwork Orange) and Alison Cross (Roe vs. Wade). Directors who have expressed interest in the project include Paul Verhoeven (Basic Instinct) and Jonathan Demme (The Silence of the Lambs).

Friday on PBS, American Masters looks at the life and career of screenwriter Waldo Salt.

Kristy McNichol and Richard Mulligan star in the season finale of Empty Nest, airing Saturday on NBC.

STAR NOTES

Tritt takes awards hype in stride

By Candy Clark

"Call someone who'll listen and might give a .... Here's a quarter, call someone who cares." So sings country crooner Travis Tritt. He and others like him — namely Garth Brooks and Clint Black — have made the world stand up and take notice of country music and in the process accumulated millions of new fans.

With Black and Lorrie Morgan, Tritt is co-host of The 27th Annual Academy of Country Music Awards, airing Wednesday, April 29, on NBC. While most performers would be at least a little bit nervous, Tritt isn't.

"I really enjoy working with Clint and Lorrie and they are a lot like me," he says. "They like to have fun and cut up and don't take it all too seriously. I think we've got a good chemistry between the three of us."

Amazing as it seems, Tritt really doesn't take all the hoopla seriously. He doesn't even know which four awards he has been nominated for.

"I can't keep up with all this stuff anymore," says Tritt. "They call me and give me everything in one lump sum. They told me I had some nominations for the Grammys, ACM awards, Music City News ... and it seems like there is an awards show on every other week."

Tritt appreciates being recognized for his work, though. "It's a dream come true," he says of his success in country music. "I look around and I pinch myself a lot."

SOAP TALK

Music, kisses too noisy on soaps

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I wear a hearing aid, and I like to watch several soaps, but there is so much background music on As the World Turns I can't hear what the people are saying. I know this affects a lot of people who wear hearing aids. Do you know how I can get in touch with the people who put this program on? —Bernice Olson, Saint James, Minn.

Dear Reader: You are correct in that you are not the only one who has this problem. You might check into a device called a closed-captioning decoder, which prints the words on the bottom of the screen.

You can write to As the World Turns c/o CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Dear Candace: Is anyone else out there made ill by the two characters who play Linc and Marcy on As the World Turns? Every time they kiss, I swear the microphone is tied to their tonsils! They sound like a couple of cows chewing their cud. Could they please turn off the sound when these two kiss? No one else makes noises like they do. They should win some kind of award for "Disgusting Noises Made By Humans."

I love the show otherwise, except one more thing: How can Barbara think Gavin is handsome? —R. Meissner, Plymouth, Mich.

Dear Reader: Linc has got to be one of the stupidest men in soaps not to see through Marcy's machinations. The whole thing is rather dull.

Barbara doesn't think Gavin is so great, especially now that he is blackmailing her.

Dear Candace: I am so appalled that Lorna and Matt are together on Another World. I actually get sick when I watch them together. I also wonder if Paulina will ever realize that Jake loves her? —L.K., Marinette, Wis.

Dear Reader: It looks like you don't want to see Matt and Lorna reach super couple status. Matt's moving out of Lorna's apartment is definitely going to change things. He might even find a new love interest. Paulina will soon be torn between her feelings for Jake and what she knows is right for her.
