Trees fell early, legally

Subdivision residents were told what led to developers prematurely cutting trees in a planned neighborhood in southern Canton. The facts didn't make them happy, but township officials have pledged to monitor portions of the project under their jurisdiction.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Township officials admitted it was their fault trees were prematurely cleared on acreage planned for a subdivision in southern Canton.

But the subdivision's developers, who failed to obtain a state Department of Natural Resources permit to work in a conservation easement, must reforest the area cleared for water and sewer connection opposite Hadley Court in Canton Country Acres subdivision.

"The trees that were cut are under DNR concern. The DNR is talking with them (developers) about replanting," said Tom Casari, township engineer. "We are not a party to the conservation easement."

Homeowners in Canton Country Acres and Forest Brook subdivisions — which abut the planned Parkview Estates — met with township staff Wednesday to learn about what happened on the 40.5 acres that includes wetlands. Rosemary Ayres of the DNR land and water management division was invited to the meeting but did not attend.

More than two weeks ago, homeowners were surprised to find trees cleared on the acreage south of Palmer, east of Sheldon. MV Building Co. of West Bloomfield plans to build 97 houses on the wooded acreage. The developers' crews cleared along a conservation easement for water and sewer connections in Canton Country Acres.

Casari told homeowners that the township was in error when it gave developers the OK to clear trees because the project's final preliminary plat has not been completed or approved. The error was an oversight when staff read ordinance requirements.

"Trees need only be replaced in the conservation easement. The others just came down prematurely," said Jeff Goulet, township planner.

Tribute opens festival

Fest fun, 3A

Drizzle and a multi-colored rainbow were the perfect solemn and bright backdrop to dedicate the military memorial in Canton's Heritage Park Friday night, kicking off a weekend of Liberty Festival events.

A brick path introduces an eagle on a pillar in front a monument representing each branch of the military.

"People were shell-shocked when they saw it," said Dale Luebke, a Canton Veterans Memorial board of director.

An elaborate ceremony included color and honor guards, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Vietnam Veterans of America posts, the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps, Revolutionary War and Civil War reenactment groups, and the Plymouth-Canton and Plymouth-Salem High School marching band performing for more than 250 people.

The Canton Veterans Memorial Association has to raise at least $20,000 more to pay for landscaping, bricks, flag poles and other amenities. Anyone interested in buying a brick honoring a veteran or to make any other type of donation should call Tim LaGrow, of the Canton veterans' group, at 981-2848.

The sun glistened brightly off the rose panel memorial Saturday during the first full day of the festival.

Jim Lee, with his children, Grace, 10, and Victor, 6, were at the festival Friday to hear a concert, were back on Saturday afternoon, and planned to return for the fireworks that night.

"We enjoy it very much," he said. The children agreed they liked the singing with constant performances at the amphitheater and gazebo.

Tracy Barchardt accompanied her daughter Kristen, 11, and her friend Nichole Barrett, 11, both Spiriters Baton and Cheerleaders performing Saturday. Tracy Barchardt called the festival a success: "This year turned out real nice. There's a lot more variety and a lot more things to do for the kids."

Energetic festivalgoers took to paddle boats and canoe rides in one of the three park ponds. Antique and classic cars were parked along the perimeter.

It was the perfect setting for Christine Kelly, Mary Keenmon and Phyllis Candiano, all of Canton, to take a snack break.

"It's a lot more crowded than we thought it would be," Kelly said.

A shopping mecca was offered in the arts and crafts tents.

Joy Cox, of Belleville, reviewed the wares.

"It's a lot better than when they started these (festivals)," Cox said.

Suspect in syringe report case arraigned

A Plymouth Township woman was arraigned in federal court Wednesday on a charge of falsifying a report of finding a syringe in a Pepsi can.

Lynette Louise King, 43, was arraigned in U.S. District Court before magistrate Thomas Carlson on a charge of knowingly communicating false information that a product had been tampered with.

Court officials were unavailable for comment Friday on how King pleaded before the court.

Sam Hutchings, spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office, said that upon questioning by federal investigators, "she admitted she placed a syringe in a Diet Pepsi can to show her son things like this could happen to him, but she also called the police."

U.S. Food and Drug Administration investigators said in an affidavit that she recanted an earlier story of finding the syringe.

There have been at least three reports in Michigan and reports of people in 23 states filing questionable reports of finding syringes in Pepsi cans.

The maximum penalty for being found guilty on such a charge is five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

New priest gets first assignment at local church

One of the first reserves retires

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Looking ahead: Myron Pryor is retiring after 14 years with the Canton Reserve Officers Program. The Garden City resident has been with the program since its beginnings in 1979.

Myron Pryor doesn't expect he'll be any less busy now that he's retired from the Canton Police Department as one of the original reserve officers.

'I'll probably be playing more golf," said the Garden City resident.

Pryor, who has been with the Canton Reserve Officers Program since its beginnings in 1979, was honored June 22 by fellow police officers and township officials.

"We wanted you to remember us because we will certainly remember you," said Canton Public Safety Director John Santomauro, as he presented Pryor with a plaque for his years of service to the department.

Pryor is credited with helping develop Canton's reserve program, which is a group of volunteer officers who provide additional service to the department when necessary and for special events and activities.

Before arriving in Canton, he served with the Garden City reserve program.

"Myron was instrumental in providing leadership at the outset, of that program," said Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack. In his years with the program, Pryor served 1,400 hours. Eight hours per month is the minimum requirement.

Pryor admits that he never had thoughts of becoming a full-time police officer. He joined the reserve program as he was retiring from General Motors.

"There's a lot of instinct in that job," Pryor said of the reserve program. "I found instinct I didn't know I had."

No doubt Pryor has seen a lot in his years on the reserve force. Santomauro spoke of the difficulties of the job, particularly an incident in which Pryor came to the aid of a fellow officer who was under fire and seriously wounded.

"It's not all fun and games," Santomauro added.

Pryor began his stint in Canton when the township had just 18 officers. He recalls riding with Lt. Larry Stewart, who is now in charge of the reserve program. "Sometimes there was only one car on the road," he said.

Santomauro lauded Pryor's work and dedication. "I don't know of a community service that a citizen can be involved in that is more trying. It is very trying, and it is traumatic."

Santomauro also recognized Pryor's wife, Mary, and other family members, for their sacrifice. "This plaque is not just for Myron, but for his wife."

Pryor said he has no doubt he will be busy, despite his retirement from the reserves. His rental properties continue to keep him on the run. But he says he'll miss the Canton department and its high standards.

"I have been associated with other departments. Canton has one of the finest police departments in this whole area — I wouldn't be surprised if in the whole state. You have to come from my perspective," Pryor said.

SUPERMARKET SHOPPING - part 2

Last week's column noted the difficulties attendant on supermarket shopping: walking the aisles is wearing and dangerous. Reaching jars is at best a chore if not impossible. Waiting in the check-out line may become a torment for your joints. The adventure does not end until you bring groceries from the shopping cart to refrigerator shelf.

What strategies may reduced this strain?

At the checkout counter ask for bags with handles as they permit you to carry the load at your side. Do not place bags on the car floor or in the trunk, but on the seat. The less you lift the more the relief for your arms.

Have the bagger put a few items into many bags rather than using a few. Experience indicates that arthritic joints tolerate light freight with repeated trips better than a heavy burden pulled with a struggle.

Always use a shopping cart rather than an arm basket. You never know when you will be caught at the check-out line and will need the cart to double as a walker.

Whenever feasible, bring someone with you who can assist. Extra help gives the best chance to read labels and to reach the goods you want.

Supermarket shopping with arthritis is in keeping with other undertakings: your nimble ingenuity must offset your awkward joints.

Children got their thrills on the midway.

Car buffs appreciated the sleek curves and old-time designs at the classic and antique car show surrounding a glistening blue pond.

People of all tastes were treated to the arts and crafts, fine arts and children's crafts tents.

Shoppers could choose from art pieces that ranged from $1.50 to $1,500 and in some cases have a chance to watch the artist at work.

Paddle boat rides offered a resort-area activity.

And more food and beverages were available at this year's Canton Liberty Fest than ever before.

For those who wanted to sit and relax there was non-stop entertainment that varied from children's programs to Canton Seniors Kitchen Band at the amphitheater and gazebo located on opposite ends of the festival area.

Performances included the Ronald McDonald Show, the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps, Mr. Balloono, the Unity Island Band, the Sweet Adelines, Dixieland Band, a barbershop quartet, Earth Angels and the Sun Messengers.

The Liberty Fest was in full gear Saturday with people of all ages and interests finding something they enjoyed —— even if it was just to walk the picturesque 105-acre Heritage Park with three ponds behind the Canton Township administration building.

The event took a serious tone, for a short time, during the Canton Veterans Memorial dedication Friday night.

Police and fire displays gave viewers crime prevention tips and close-up looks at fire rigs.

Also, a "Picnic in the Park" was to be held Sunday with profits going to D.A.R.E., Drug Abuse Resistance Education. The food was provided by Outback Steakhouse in Canton.

Festival organizers lauded the 45-minute fireworks display as the centerpiece of the yearly Canton extravaganza.

The weekend activities closed with the announcement of the winner of the communitywide raffla. Ticket holders tried their luck at a four-day Bahamas cruise for two, inlcuding airfare. Twenty other prizes included a weekend getaway and a party at Skatin' Station.

I used to wear glasses and contacts...

until I had RK (Radial Keratotomy) at the Vision Institute of Michigan!

Meet Michelle of Lake Orion.

Like many other people, Michelle used to wear glasses and contact lenses to correct her nearsightedness. Then she discovered RK -- a brief (3 -5 minute) office surgery which permanently eliminated her dependence on corrective lenses.

Michelle chose to have her RK at the Vision Institute of Michigan. She liked the success rate -- 96.4% of patients reach vision of 20/40 or better.* And she liked the fact that Dr. Novetsky, his wife, mother, brother, and many of the Vision Institute staff have all had RK.

"Dr. Novetsky having the surgery really impressed me. I figured if he had it, he'd be really sensitive to my feelings. The staff was wonderful, too. Going to the Vision Institute of Michigan for my RK was the best thing I've ever done!"

Developers also are not now in violation of the township's tree ordinance. Developers have obtained a permit as required. The ordinance allows 20 percent of trees to be cut without replacement.

"We were able to determine they weren't going to remove more than 20 percent," Casari said, referring to devlopers' plans.

Developers may not apply for final preliminary plat approval until engineering plans are complete and correct permits for water and sewer connections, for example, are obtained. Work cannot continue on the project until that approval is obtained, Goulet said.

"All the trees removed were done based on the plat and based on a verbal approval of the township," said attorney Jeffrey Leib, who represents the developers. "There wasn't one tree removed unnecessarily."

Casari told residents that the township would prefer work crews to use a Morton Taylor right-of-way off Michigan Avenue to gain access to the construction site rather than on subdivision streets in Forest Brook and Canton Country Acres.

"I can't guarantee you there won't be any pickup trucks," Casari said, referring to subdivision streets where single-axle trucks will be allowed.

Developer Walter Masciulli said if Morton Taylor is used as access, trucks will enter on Lancelot and not Hadley Court. The issue is still under debate.

Tree cutting, development annoy neighbors

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Homeowners in the Forest Brook and Canton Country Acres subdivisions are unhappy — for a lot of reasons.

Annoyance probably best describes residents' reaction to Canton Township's mistake in letting the MV Building Co. of West Bloomfield begin clearing trees for a 97-home subdivision south of Palmer Road.

To that equation, add anger toward the project's developers, as well as the state Department of Natural Resources. The DNR took a week — after many phone calls from township staff and residents — to stop by the site where trees were cleared.

"You're acting like the rules are new," said Susan Weisbrod of Canton Country Acres. "Why are you not working with the DNR to know what they are doing?"

The resident's comments followed an explanation by Tom Casari, township engineer, that the DNR — not the township — is in control of a conservation easement opposite Hadley Court where trees were cut in violation of DNR rules. "We don't know what the DNR is doing," Casari said.

Residents also are concerned about dust from construction in the planned subdivision, as well as work crews' cleanup with chippers of trees already cut down. Dirty roads from construction trucks also have rattled some neighbors.

"My dog was all sawdusted in the eyes," said a resident whose home sits behind where crews were chipping wood.

Casari told residents to contact the township when problems arise with cleanup, dust or messy roads. Damage to streets is Wayne County's concern.

"The county having responsibility does not give us a lot of comfort," said a resident who refused to identify himself.

Some residents chided township staff because they believe the developer has been given too much leeway.

"Who are you trying to appease, the developer or the existing residents? Where is your loyalty?" an unidentified woman asked. "It seems the standard operation is do — and then get the permits. Who's representing us.?"

Casari told residents that the goal is to work with the developer. "It's to everybody's benefit to work things out."

Yet some residents made it clear they are fed up, not only with the developer, but the township, or at least how the township does or doesn't do things.

"We need to enforce you," said Forest Brook resident David McClenaghan.

Residents also complained about what they believe are inexpensive homes — $120,000-$145,000 — to be built in Parkview. "If they go fast, we'll raise the prices," said developer Walter Masciulli.

New eatery on menu

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

A new specialty restaurant is joining the menu in Canton.

"I think there's just not enough options in Canton," said Mark Goff, an owner of T.C. Gators, which is expected to move into the Canton Corners shopping center on Ford Road sometime in September.

Goff wants to fill what he feels is a gap in Canton between fast food restaurants and the more expensive eateries. "I want people to bring in the kids and be comfortable."

The 3,200-square-foot restaurant will move into the space formerly occupied by Veena's Cards & Gifts, east of Kid Kingdom. Canton Corners currently offers Outback Steakhouse and Plato's Palace restaurants.

The Canton Township Board of Trustees Tuesday approved Goff's request for a Class C liquor license. The restaurant will be reasonably priced with the average per person check in the $6 range, Goff said.

The restaurant is named after imaginary character, Too Cool Gator, an alligator who returned to Michigan after a stint in Florida, where he learned to cook and surf, Goff said.

One-third of the menu will offer a variety of seafood, including oysters, clams, shrimp and crab legs. T.C. Gator's speciality, however, is chicken wings — cajun, naked or breaded. Sandwiches and burgers also will be offered.

"This will be fun eating," Goff said. "The decor will be eclectic. Fun with a novelty beach flair."

In the background will play music of the '60s, '70s and '80s. "The music won't be loud but it will be present," Goff said. Adult and children's games will be offered in certain areas of the restaurant.

The restaurant will feature an open kitchen with a nearby bar and seating for about 175 patrons. Goff expects to hire about 50-60 employees.

"I think we're going to be high volume," he said, adding the restaurant will be open for lunch and dinner.

Goff wants to draw families, business people and young people who want to meet and talk with others. "I want everything to be a lot of energy. I want an energy that is fun and upbeat."

TV monitors will be installed but the restaurant will not have a sports bar feeling, Goff added.

By no means is T.C. Gators the only new restaurant or business moving into Canton.

Also on the list is Mountain Jacks, which will move into the former Ponderosa building on Haggerty, south of Ford Road. Applebee's restaurant plans to build a restaurant just east of Target on Ford Road.

Home Depot, a home improvement chain, plans to build on about 15 of the 30 vacant acres at Ford and Lotz roads. Approximately 100,000 square feet will be devoted to retail, while 28,000 will be designated a garden center.

Ground was broken for a new 17,000 square-foot funeral home on Ford Road, west of Lilley.

Center gets name

Canton officials have selected "Summit on the Park" as the name for the township's new 83,000-square-foot community center.

The name highlights the center's location in Heritage Park and the architectural design of the building, which features a tower reaching approximately 70 feet into the sky and large expanses of glass, which will light up at night.

"Naming of the center creates an identity and takes us one more step toward making this project a reality," said recreation superintendent Michael Gouin. "We are pleased to be moving along with the process."

Construction on the $13-million project is scheduled to begin in the spring of 1994, with a grand opening planned for the following spring. It will be paid for through state and federal grant money and tipping fees from two landfills. No local property tax money will be used.

"Summit on the Park" was selected from a lengthy list of names suggested during the past few months as plans for the center progressed. The selection process included both informal discussions and formal brainstorming sessions.

The final decision-making team was composed of Supervisor Thomas Yack, Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter and Clerk Loren Bennett, who all agreed the name would be appropriate for the multitude of activities at the center. A logo has also been designed for use with the name.

Township officials plan to meet with architects later this month to firm up design details for the center, which boasts space for recreation, social and cultural activities and a full-service banquet facility. This month, architects worked on engineering and planning details and have begun fine-tuning plans for specific uses of interior space.

Tentative annual membership rates for Summit on the Park have also been set. Canton residents will pay $350 for a family and $150 for an individual. Nonresident fees are estimated at $600 and $350 respectively.

Those using the Summit facilities may choose to pay a daily fee ranging between $2 and $3 for residents and $4 and $5 for non-residents instead of paying an annual membership fee.

Operation of the facility will be paid for through these memberships and daily fees, plus Recreation Department program fees, income from the banquet and meeting facilities and proceeds from the township-owned Pheasant Run and Fellows Creek golf facilities.

Treasuring the hunt

Summer seems the perfect time to while away an afternoon browsing through antique store. Everyone loves a treasure hunt. The anticipation of discovering the unexpected is surpassed only by the excitement of procuring that long sought-after collectible.

Antique buffs can spend hours poking through jam-packed nooks and crannies, searching for something that has a special, personal appeal. It's often an emotional quest, a stirring of forgotten memories.

This shopping phenomenon, likened to a scavenger hunt, is embarked upon by two distinct types of individuals — those who seek specific items for wise investments and those who let their hearts do the shopping, ignoring trends and unearthing jewels that only they can fully appreciate.

Nostalgia seems to be driving many of today's collectors.

"People are looking for the things they grew up with," said Angela Mifsud of Memory Lane Antiques, 12 Forest Place in Plymouth. That explains the popularity of merchandise manufactured in the '40s and '50s. Notable is the rise in value of Duncan Phyfe reproduction mahogany furniture, sewing accessories, Weiss and Miriam B. Haskell rhinestone jewelry and colorful pottery from Hall, Roseville, Hull and McCoy.

Prints from past

My favorite collectibles are the cheerfully printed cloths that were draped over kitchen tables in the '30s and '40s. These sturdy cotton textiles exhibit fruit and floral patterns in bright and pastel hues. I've transformed the vintage fabrics into window treatments and pillows, but they really enliven the table and look particularly pretty on a patio or deck. Expect to pay between $12 and $40 and don't expect to find a wide selection at any one store. That just makes the hunt more fun.

Josephine Watson of Northville, a longtime antique collector, cited English bone china and Victorian furniture as two of her favorites. She also looks for cranberry glass and hallmarked silver. Many collectors have a passion for pitchers and most would agree that the pictured Henriot Quimper design is a true find ($145). This artful early 20th century piece from the famous French company is an example of the eclectic mix of beautifully displayed antiquities at L'Esprit, 336 E. Maple in Birmingham.

Ed Throckmorton guided me through his shop, which features a cosmopolitan melange of French, American, English and German furniture and accessories. Star and moon motifs are still hot, according to Throckmorton, as are unusual examples of ironwork and architecturals.

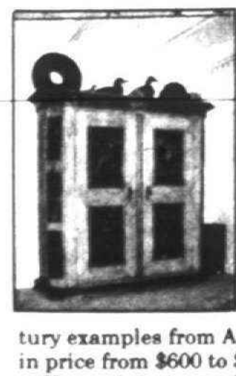
Collectibles count

Sharon Hood, owner of Bits and Pieces in Plymouth's historic Old Village district, finds that people are looking for collectibles this summer, not true antiques. People "ooh and aah" over the Civil War-era gown, for instance, but they're not buying.

"I'm just about out of oak furniture," she said. "And good cut glass, not pressed, is popular." She also has a hard time holding onto sports memorabilia, especially vintage golfing gear. In addition, her rainbow-colored Fiesta, Vistosa and LuRay tableware is literally selling out of the window.

Carol Butgusaim, visiting from Minneapolis, is always on the lookout for Fiesta ware, and was lured by Hood's window display.

"I also collect Depression glass," she said. "The pressed patterns are easiest to find." Her friend, Madeline Tracht of Plymouth, sets a vibrant table with her inherited set of Fiesta ware. She loves to mix and match all of the colors. "I'm continually searching for the divided serving dishes," she said. It's fun to scout around for inexpensive little collectibles, but occasionally you want a centerpiece, like the pictured armoire from Watch Hill Antiques, 330 E. Maple in Birmingham. Open just four months in the downtown location, this shop features exquisite painted European country furniture, virtual conversation pieces around which to decorate a room. Most are late 18th to mid-19th century examples from Austria and Germany, ranging in price from $600 to $9,000.



Happy hunting and don't forget to listen to your heart — buy what you love.

Second-hand style: Vikki Keehm owner of Regeneration in downtown Plymouth says her customers often ask her why her prices are so low. "They don't realize this is a resale shop," she laughed.

Resale shops on rise

"I got it at a thrift shop!" one woman proclaimed with pride. The age of recycling and value con sciousness has brought secondhand stores into the '90s.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

A back-to-basics movement with eyes on the environment has given secondhand shops a new reason-to-be.

Several local consignment shops have moved into larger quarters recently, reporting that more people than ever before are stopping in to sell suits, dresses and children's wear that deserve a second chance with a new owner.

"The frivolousness of the '80s is gone," said Kathy Newton, owner of "Lots for Tots" at Livernois and Walton in Rochester Hills. "Then it was not socially acceptable to visit secondhand stores. Now, neighbors go out shopping together and it's considered prudent to use and recycle durable goods."

Newton started her children's resale shop several years ago in a small Walnut Street basement in downtown Rochester.

"We just blew out of there in no time," she said, "moving to larger and larger locations. In fact, we just opened a franchise store in Madison Heights, the demand is so great."

By controlling the quality of items for resale and designing the interiors to be shopper-friendly, today's suburban resale shops are pretty, airy and almost sophisticated. Items are clearly tagged, displayed according to category and size, and there are also amenities such as seating for the weary, cartoon monitors for children, and Victorian, full-length mirrors.

Some shops even hold clearance sales where markdowns are taken on merchandise that is not moving.

Business is 'steady'

At "Regeneration" in downtown Plymouth in the Westchester Mall, business is steady, according to owner Vikki Keehm.

"Last year, our first year in business, we paid out over $14,000 in consignments," she said. "Customers like the store because it's set up like a boutique, not a resale shop. We look at 'Regeneration' as a service, providing the opportunity for women to own a $150 Leslie Fay dress for just $25. You might think our customers are low-income, but this is not the case. Our customers are anyone with an eye on value who loves a good bargain."

"Regeneration," like many other resale shops, offers clients a 50/50 split on the sale price of the garment. The price is set by the owner with input from Keehm. Garments are kept for a few months and then the owner has the opportunity to reclaim or donate the item.

"The store name comes from a suit, framed and hanging on a wall in the store, worn 50 years ago by my husband and recently by my grandson," she said. "It could still be worn by somebody else."

To recycle the unsold items, Keehm works with area churches and homes for the aged.

Tips help shoppers avoid 'lemons'

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

A "find" at a secondhand shop is only a bargain if it is wearable, comfortable and cleanable.

To ensure that your bargains aren't busts, shop owners and savvy second-time-around shoppers offer the following tips:

- Don't pay more than a third of a garment's original shop price.
- Charity shops are a gold mine for vintage footwear.
- Unless you are an expert seamstress, don't buy anything that needs drastic altering. Modern dry-cleaning methods will ruin ancient, delicate fabrics.
- Avoid buying anything that is badly stained. Even if your aunt is Heloise, you probably won't be able to remove set stains.
- A key to the age of the garment is the shoulder cut. Clothing manufactured prior to the 1980s did not have relaxed shoulders or padding.
- Evening wear bargains come in nostalgic or dramatic shapes from the past and assure that you don't meet your double.
- Before you buy, check for stains,

Mary Shook, owner of the 18-year-old "The Clothes Horse" in Troy, said the notion that resale shopping is "hush-hush" is "pooh-pooh."

"Resale shopping is smart shopping," she said. "My customers are working women who need the suit and blouse but can't afford the department store prices."

Shook sells designer and name brand women's apparel in a lovely boutique on South Boulevard and Crooks. She recently moved from a smaller shop on Square Lake, leaving the spot to "The Kids Kloset," a new resale shop for infants and toddlers. Ellie Vanderleden of Troy said she has made some wonderful purchases at "The Clothes Horse" and other area resale shops.

Her routine

"It's part of my routine to once a month visit several secondhand shops in the area," she said. "I make a day of it. You'd be surprised how far $50 goes when you're not shopping in a mall."

In March, a new kind of resale shop for children opened on Rochester Road between Big Beaver and Wattles in Troy. Owner Kim Lammers buys her secondhand inventory directly from the previous owners and passes the savings on to a growing list of clientele.

"Wear It Again Kids" on Middlebelt in Farmington Hills operates the same way.

'Kids outgrow their clothes before the clothes show signs of wear," said Margaret Brennan of Troy, browsing through the racks in search of a bathing suit for her 2-year-old daughter. "Why should I pay $12 at a department store when I can pick up a cute hardly-worn suit for $2? She'll only be in it for three months anyway. I'm saving my dollars for her teens when she wants a designer suit."

It's hard to recall any disadvantages to secondhand shopping with a spotless, hand-smocked, gingham blue Polly Flinders party dress priced at $16 hanging on a rack.

Ruth Butler of Troy snatched it up without blinking for her granddaughter's fifth birthday.

"My 12 grandchildren have a very clever grandmother," she said with a wink. "I never forget their birthdays, giving gifts that are always within my budget."

On Woodward north of 14 Mile Road in Birmingham two secondhand shops have steadily built a customer base for more than 10 years. "Valerie Taylor" sells designer accessories and clothing for women at one-fourth the original price.

"Our Coach and Chanel bags are gone as soon as they're in," the manager said. "Lucky shoppers can find the likes of Claude Montana, Chanel, Escada and Anne Klein II on the racks, but merchandise moves fast."

Close by, "The Treasure Trunk" mixes home accessories with secondhand women's clothing. The store features a lot of skirts and handbags, with everything, clean, pressed and tear-free.

In Southfield, "New To You" owner Lee Better said business last year and this year is very good. Her nine-year-old shop also resells designer apparel on a consignment basis. "New To You" is located on Southfield Road between 12 Mile and 13 Mile.

Not all resale shops target women and children. "The Garden City Exchange" at Ford Road and Venoy sells used electronic equipment and previously owned musical instruments.

"The Great Exchange," on Greenfield south of Nine Mile in Southfield, sells furniture and home accessories on a consignment basis.

"We're the biggest furniture resaler in Michigan," said owner Fred Brooks. "In addition to offering merchandise from estate sales, we have factory over-runs and canceled special orders."

Most secondhand shops are closed Mondays and Sundays. Many require an appointment for consignment appraisals.

tears and moth holes and judge the amount of life left in the fabric.

- Replace missing buttons from the correct period that match the style of the dress or suit.
- Lace purchases take well to dyes, which give them a new look.
- Don't overlook the accessory counters that often contain purses, collars and crocheted shawls that add a nostalgic touch to contemporary looks.

bate and, coupled with recent scandals, it doesn't make for real good morale sometimes."

Also, he added, priests are overworked. Dwindling numbers mean existing priests have to take on more duties with less support.

"I think priests feel sometimes that they get it from all sides," said Maus, who was most recently a Riverview resident. "They have to support church teachings and be sympathetic to the people."

Maus, though, is hopeful about his new vocation. He took the long route to becoming a priest, going to college, getting a degree in business, working as a pension consultant and employee representative at Vickers in Troy, and finally deciding the priesthood was for him.

Being a longtime west-sider, growing up in Dearborn Heights, Maus said, he's happy about his first assignment at St. John Neumann, because Canton is a "new, growing and vibrant area with young families, and I liked that."

He was a young boy when he first thought about being a priest.

"I had always thought about it," said Maus.

"When I hit junior high, puberty and hormones, I put the idea aside," said Maus, 35.

He went through a rebellious stage and left the church the last two years of high school.

Working as a short-order cook from the second year of high school through the first two years at Henry Ford Community College, Maus said he really didn't have time to attend Mass. Beside the busy schedule, he was going through a lot of personal trials including his parents' divorce.

Events fell into place that would lead him to the priesthood while Maus was a senior at Michigan State University.

"It was springtime and early one Sunday morning, it was a beautiful day and I was enjoying the weather and the trees and the new flowers," Maus said.

He spotted 10 kids and started to follow them. They walked into a Catholic church and Maus decided to stay.

The priest related his own experience to the gospel "and that got me thinking about it in a whole new way. I started reading more about the faith and after college I thought I'd enter the seminary," he said.

After working four years on a business degree, Maus thought it would be a good idea to try out a job in his field and then go into the seminary for six years.

"At times I questioned if that was really what God wanted me to do and if I could do it," Maus said. "When I came down to it the last year or two, I'm more at peace with the decision and the way of life."

Regarding recent sex controversies surrounding priests, Maus said the morale in many areas is low. He points to steps taken by the church to correct problems.

"I think finally there's been some real positive actions by the church so that these situations don't happen anymore," he said, referring to recent church actions specifying guidelines and procedures as to what would happen if a priest were found guilty of sexual misconduct.

He also pointed to guidelines by the Detroit Archdiocese to take the priest out of the parish once an incident has taken place.

Mobile home broken into and vandalized

A Westland man told Canton police last week that he found his brother's mobile home, in Sherwood Park, had been broken into and vandalized.

He said he arrived at the home on Michigan Avenue and found the front door kicked in, walls had holes and the windows were left open causing rain damage.

He reported the following items as stolen: a $400 refrigerator; $500 washer; $300 dryer and $200 wall divider. Damage inside and outside the mobile home was estimated at $2,000.

Larceny reported

The owner of a 1987 Ford van told police a VCR was stolen from the back of the vehicle June 22. She told police she was taking the machine in for repair and had left it in the back.

Woman says she was robbed

A Canton woman told police she was robbed by a man on her way home from Meijer at 2:45 a.m. June 24 as she walked down Canton Center at Saltz.

The woman told police she believed a car was tailing her and suddenly a man jumped out of the bushes at Saltz, pointed to her check book and demanded all her money.

The man reportedly took a gold necklace from her neck, a $35 bathing suit and a $100 personal stereo.

Notice: Public Participation for Regional Long Range Transportation Plan
From: SEMCOG, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments

The Southeast Michigan Region is federally mandated to revise its Long Range Transportation Plan (LRTP) as a result of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act. The LRTP looks ahead 20 years at the transportation needs of Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, St. Clair, Monroe, Livingston and Washtenaw Counties.

This plan is being revised with input from federal, state and local government levels and must be completed by October 1, 1993. Local elected officials will make decisions about how to prioritize spending of transportation dollars for road reconstruction, road improvements and the building of new roads. Policy decisions must also be made about other forms of transportation - buses, airports, bicycles and trains - for example. In addition, the 1990 Clean Air Act identifies Southeast Michigan as a moderate non-attainment area. The LRTP must support efforts to reduce regional hydrocarbon emissions by 15% by 1996 as required by the Clean Air Act.

Public participation is a vital ingredient in the revision of the LRTP. Elected officials must have some sense of the public will if a comprehensive plan is to be developed that addresses regional transportation needs.

A public information meeting will be held to provide an opportunity to comment on roadway deficiencies. The meeting will be held:

- Thursday, July 1, 1993, 1:30 p.m., at the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments office, 660 Plaza Drive, Suite 1900, Detroit. For additional information contact John Rempala, at 313-961-4266.

Written comments are also welcome.

MUSIC NOTES

New Model Army is ready to rebuild its American following now that it's signed with a new label, Epic Records.

"(Previously) it all went horribly wrong for us in the United States," said guitarist/vocalist Justin Sullivan.

What aided in that mess, Sullivan said, was the lack of support by its former label, Capital Records.

Because of that, New Model Army decided to concentrate on its European fans. They're now selling out venues that seat 3,000-10,000. The group played at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit June 23, in support of its first Epic release and sixth overall, "The Love of Hopeless Causes."

Despite the business problems, Sullivan has always enjoyed playing here.

"Motown is the home of the greatest pop music ever made," he said. "The minds of the West came together when Barry Gordy left Detroit and went to L.A."

Are members of Radiohead creeps like their hit implies?

"Yes and it's a good thing," said lead guitarist/keyboardist Jonny Greenwood during a phone conversation from Amsterdam.

Actually, the dreary song isn't really that depressing, he said.

"People think we're saying, 'I'm a creep and I don't want to be.' It's a self-realization; it's realizing what you are."

Greenwood, who's a little jaded by his band's success, doesn't mind answering the "creep question," but he's sick of telling how he makes his guitar crack before the chorus.

He and the rest of his band will play St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit on Thursday, July 1 — fireworks night. Call 961-MELT for more information.

17 Reasons Why won $1,000 or an equal value of Yamaha equipment at "Soundcheck," the Yamaha music showcase June 15 at the State Theatre in Detroit. Bent Lucy, Blue Nation, Psycho Cafe and The Rainbirds also competed.

The group will now compete in the regional showcase, also to be held in Detroit in mid-summer. Regional winners will get $5,000 or an equal value of Yamaha equipment and an all-expense paid trip to the national showcase. The national winner will receive $25,000 or an equal value of Yamaha equipment and an all-expense paid trip to Japan to represent the United States in the international showcase, "MusicQuest."

The Detroit area plays a prominent part in "Details" magazine's annual music issue, which hit the stands earlier this month. The photo of Tom Jones accompanying an interview with him was shot near the giant Uniroyal Tire on I-94. George Clinton's Brooklyn, Mich., home is profiled in the "Crib Notes" section.

In the flow chart of "ambient music," Derrick May and Detroit techo are cuddled between Brian Eno and "armchair techno" acts like Biosphere and Irresistible Force.

According to "Details" the local bands The Charm Farm, Goober and the Peas, Brotherhood Recipee and The Del-Kats are the hip bands in town. A lot more Detroit club scene treasures are buried in the July issue of the magazine.

Previously influenced by Sly, Clinton and Marley, they now add Coltrane, Zorn and the Butthole Surfers to their list. A bit angry: Turning their personal angst into a winning musical sound is HAL — keyboardist/bassist Justin Mysza (left), vocalist Myk Willis, guitarist/vocalist Michael Madill, drummer Ken Wilson and keyboardist Robert McCarroll.

HAL puts its anger to music

Getting dumped by their girlfriends may have hurt, but it gave Michael Madill and Robert McCarroll a focus. They formed a band and used their music to say the things they couldn't say to former girlfriends.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

When Michael Madill and Robert McCarroll got dumped by their long-time girlfriends a year ago, they didn't let themselves seep into depression or a self-destructive path.

Instead they started a band — quite an angry one at that.

"We both got dumped from 3-, 4-year relationships; we had nowhere else to go," said guitarist/vocalist Madill. "With all the lyrics, we get to say all the things we couldn't say to her (before)."

Now that they're in more satisfying relationships, HAL is finding it tough to stay angry.

"We just have to stay angry. I wanted to go through my girlfriend's journals, so I could read about old guys and be jealous and bash the keyboards, but she wouldn't let me," said McCarroll with a laugh.

That intense anger has led HAL to become one of the most animated, energetic industrial bands in the area. The band's shows are strengthened by a massive video screen backdrop which accompanies HAL to most shows. It's been a "member" since HAL's first show in September 1992.

"We played without it once at Paycheck's; it was really strange," said McCarroll, a Roeper High School graduate.

The film has evolved from a "loop of flashing yellow lights and a bucket of dry ice" to high-tension wires and newsreels from wars, said the band's "image artist" Kevin Leeser.

"Anything that's disturbing . . . anything that doesn't look pretty," he explained.

Recently, all this earned the Rochester-based band the $1,000 top prize in the Modern Rock Jam held at the State Theatre in Detroit. With the money they won, they recorded their debut CD at the Tempermill studio in Ferndale.

In describing themselves, the group is adamant about its selfishness. HAL doesn't sing about their entire world, just its own. "The band is selfish. It's not to change the world. It's not that we're anti-world," said vocalist Myk Willis.

The tall, hefty Madill and the average-built Willis share vocal duties — Madill does all the rapping and Willis performs the melodic parts. Ken Wilson plays drums.

McCarroll, who does all of the computer programming, shares keyboard duties with bassist Justin Mysza.

"Bob does more of the rhythm-oriented programming. I would be more textural chords and loops and samples. Bob's samples are more rhythm oriented," Mysza said.

McCarroll has a different explanation.

"Justin does the smooth and icing on the cake stuff, the glossy stuff. I do all the grunge and the beats . . . all the muddy dirgy stuff. Anything that's distorted, that's me."

The lyrics are written by Madill, who recently graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in English.

"He (Robert) like spits out these elementary grade school things," Madill said.

"And he makes them smart, evil and brilliant," said Wilson.

HAL performs on Friday, July 2, at Paycheck's Lounge, 2932 Caniff, Hamtramck. For more information, call 874-0909. The group will also perform Friday, Aug. 13, at Freedom Hill in Sterling Heights with Majesty Crush and Surge to Union.

Brothers searching for a kinder planet

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Brothers From Another Planet is tired of being misunderstood.

They're not militant, rap, techno or funk rock.

"We're ghetto metal; we announce it at every other show. We're not rock 'n' roll. We're not thrash. (Ghetto metal) has nothing to do with our ethnic background," said vocalist James Page.

"We just tell the truth," added bassist Gordon Spencer. "We don't preach about anything. We talk about racism - black against white, white against white, white against black, black against black. A lot of people get mad. The truth hurts."

To them, the truth is Brothers From Another Planet can't play many shows in this area due to local club owners' poor treatment of the band.

"That hurts me more than the backstabbing," said Page, an Ann Arbor resident. "We can go 30 minutes away and get the red carpet treatment."

Here, the band is paid poorly.

"The bar owners don't want to pay anything. If you want to pay the money for a quality car, you'll get a quality car. If you want to pay $100 for a clunker, that's what you'll get," said Spencer, an Oak Park resident.

"I would rather wait for the big bucks than burn myself out for the itty bitty dimes," Page said.

The "big bucks" they say are found in areas like Ann Arbor, Grand Rapids, Ohio, New York and Europe, where they'll trek to in August.

To help with their cause, group members joined the Black Rock Coalition, an organization founded by Vernon Reid of Living Colour.

"It helps out a lot . . . It's about being able to play clubs no matter what you look like; it's about the music," Spencer said.

The organization is helping them get bigger shows out of state. To succeed outside the area, the group needed to strengthen its professionalism

'Menace' depicts roots of violence

MOVIES

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
STAFF WRITER

Another movie about L.A. teenagers totin' guns and talkin' trash to a noisy rap-music soundtrack? Maybe that's why it took me over a month to see "Menace II Society," the impressive new urban melodrama currently making a splash both at local theaters and on the editorial page.

Directed by a pair of former Detroiters, twin brothers Allen and Albert Hughes, this ranks next to "Boyz 'n the Hood" as a movie that opens your eyes to the causes of violence and frustration in any inner city.

The brothers have cited Scorsese's "Goodfellas" as a major influence, and it shows from frame one. It's the late 1970s when five-year-old Caine sees his drug dealer father shoot a man in their living room. In voice-over narration, Caine notes, "It wouldn't be the last."

1993 — Caine (Tyrin Turner) has just finished high school. His grandparents, who now raise him, talk about honest jobs and religion, but Caine is already making plenty of cash dealing drugs on the street. When the old man asks Caine if he cares whether he lives or dies, Caine replies honestly, "I really don't know."

It's this attitude that dominates the teenage psyche in "Menace II Society" and makes the film so fascinating. Much more vicious than Caine, O-Dog (Larenz Tate) doesn't care who he smokes — old ladies, kids — and repeatedly watches a videotape in which he shoots a young Korean in a party store robbery.

Caine's role model is Pernell, a big brother figure who gave Caine his first taste of alcohol and guns. The movie shows the vicious cycle when Caine takes Pernell's son Anthony under his wing. Ronnie (Jada Pinkett), the boy's mother, doesn't like it one bit.

Visually, the movie is very accomplished, especially in its effective use of color. Purple, bright pink and green lights glow from various rooms at a house party where Caine, in one continuous shot from behind, wends his way through the front door and eventually into the backyard.

While prominent black actors Bill Duke, Charles S. Dutton and Samuel L. Jackson appear, the movie is populated by newcomers to the big screen. Turner's complex Caine shows a spark of humanity despite the wrong decisions he makes time and time again.

Only Pinkett's single mother Ronnie is one-dimensional and far too perfect in a film that otherwise scores high points for reality.

The movie has essentially the same message as "Boyz," spoken through the male role model that both films see as a key element missing for African-American teenagers. Mr. Butler (Charles S. Dutton), the father of a friend, talks about his son's interest in the Muslim faith. He doesn't personally worship Allah but agrees that it has saved his son from getting mixed up with drugs. "Whatever it takes," he says, as long as it helps you survive.

That same philosophy applies to the directors. The 20-year-old Hughes brothers grew up in Detroit's inner city. Their mother, a woman apparently very much like Ronnie, bought them a video camera to help keep them off the streets.

The movie has been criticized for not offering solutions, but this seems a pretty strong one to me. If you're looking for role models, look no further than the Hughes brothers, who join John Singleton and a growing number of talented young filmmakers making themselves heard in the film industry.

Hope is one thing 'City of Hope' lacks

VIDEO

BY LEANNE ROGERS
STAFF WRITER

Say you are a decent, hard-working guy trying to make a living and take care of your family with your construction business. There are things you accept — like the phantom workers who only show up on the payroll — just to keep guys with juice at the city and union halls happy, so you can still get contracts and permits.

Does that make you corrupt, or are you just realistically working a system you can't change? What if you have to go a bit further, maybe stopping maintenance at an apartment building which is in the way of new development?

That is the kind of issue director John Sayles considers in "City of Hope," an ironically titled film about corruption and politics in a decaying inner city on the east coast. There is a large cast featuring familiar faces from previous films, some in brief scenes aimed at catching the panorama of a large city and sketching in many of the intertwined relationships. Thanks to the finely tuned script and deft performances, we get a thumbnail sketch.

Among the characters receiving more attention are the harried construction company owner, played by Tony Lo Bianco, and his son, played by Vincent Spano, who abruptly quits his "job." He shows up at the construction site but doesn't work.

Nearly 30, the son is much younger in appearance and behavior, almost stuck in late adolescence. He drinks, does some drugs, gambles and aimlessly hangs out with a bad crowd.

A former African-American college professor, now serving on the city council, finds himself pressured from many sides. Played by Joe Morton, the council member tries to leverage jobs from the largely white politicals. When he visits his constituents, he is attacked by poor inner city blacks as an "Oreo."

Opportunists abound in "City of Hope," with most people not considering any ethical questions about their actions. Morton gradually joins the fold, grabbing an opportunity to get some power by capitalizing on a media circus over an assault complaint. The means don't matter, only the end.

A lot of the scenes are familiar from real life. Citizens refuse to pay more for schools; they already pay too much in taxes and the students receive a poor education.

Sayles, who takes the part of a sleazy garage owner, doesn't offer any answers. He does offer a couple of glimpses of hopeful touches toward the end of a film in which characters seem powerless against their fates.

Callers share good and bad experiences

STREET SENSE

BARBARA SCHIFF

These letters are in response to the June 7 column about a woman who reported her recovery from sexual abuse. Even though her first therapist told her she was lying because she wanted the therapist to molest her, she went on to find another therapist, and eventual peace of mind.

Message from Voice Mail:
Barbara,

I read your column June 7 and I really did enjoy it. I had a similar experience. A therapist helped me, too. So, I just wanted to say that I agree with you, that professional help is needed.

Dear Caller,

Thanks for taking the time to add your voice to this important subject. The more we hear from people like you, those who are successful, the more others will think it is possible for them.

Barbara

Barbara,

I read your column of June 7. I, too, had a similar experience, but without the happy ending your caller reports. When I was a teenager, I saw a therapist and told him that my father abused me. The therapist said things to me similar to those your caller reported were said to her. I was horrified to think that I wanted my father, or my therapist, to do all those things to me.

I was confused then, and I am confused now. I am 15 years older but no wiser, or happier. I do not want ever to go to another therapist; I do not want to be more confused than I am already.

Your caller is better because she found a good therapist, but what if the second one was as bad as the first one. She could be worse off than she was before she found any therapist.

My choice is to make it on my own rather than to give someone control over me like the control my father had.

Dear Caller,

It is a sad truth of my profession, and of others, that there are some bad practitioners as well as good ones. Many patients' experiences in therapy are healing, but for some, a bad experience like yours can make them worse.

Theoretically, all of us, including you, can defend ourselves from unintentional or intentional abuse. We do so by taking responsibility for our choice of a therapist, doctor, lawyer or any other person we hire to be our adviser. Thinking people learn to recognize if someone is good for them or not, they do not sheep-like follow anyone.

It is a damning statement for you to say you are "15 years older but no wiser." Do you mean you haven't learned anything in 15 years? Why not?

Going to a therapist is not giving up control of oneself to the therapist. One must be an active participant for counseling to work. In all areas of health, current books on healing emphasize the importance of individual responsibility. Even for treatment of physical problems, always the province of the doctor, progressive thinkers stress the necessity of patient involvement.

In this paradigm, the doctor and patient work together to define a healthy lifestyle. It is based on each person's genetics and inclinations, not on the doctor's prescription. Good psychological therapy reflects the essence of this kind of relationship.

The caller to whom you refer presents such a scenario. She knew her first therapist was bad for her, and she was responsible for not staying with him. Then, she was responsible for finding someone else, who could help her learn. She is actively involved in her treatment. That is the ideal. It is true, however, that many who enter therapy do so because they are not responsible for themselves. Then, as you express, they are unable also to help themselves.

As I said in the June 7 column, I believe professional help is needed for recovery to take place. Your call confirms that because you say you remain confused. Your choice is to remain as you are rather than learn from your bad experience. I hope, someday, you will be strong enough to try again.

Barbara

Locating Huntington's gene becomes a miracle

TIM RICHARD

The news out of Ann Arbor was stunning. Tom Rice in Northville was elated. The religious right, however, didn't seem to notice.

My friends in the religious right, a nickname for those who hold the Bible is scientific as well as religious truth, insist Charles Darwin's theory of evolution is unproven. Not even our nation's space shots have shaken their belief that the stars are embedded in a firmament (Genesis 1: 6-8 and 14-17) rather than drifting in deep space.

Darwin demonstrated that evolution indeed occurred, but he didn't know how. That step was taken by a Catholic priest in Austria named Gregor Mendel (1822-84). Working in a cloister garden, Mendel gave us the idea of genes, teensy-weensy units of heredity. Darwin died (1882) without learning of Mendel's work.

Tom Rice operates the Gitfiddler shop on Northville's Main Street. I met him when I acquired my banjo. Each summer he organizes a Folk and Bluegrass Festival with some of the biggest names in the country. It's a benefit for the fight against Huntington's disease.

Rice's sister, Donna Jarski, died in 1974 at 31 of Huntington's disease, an inherited, incurable and fatal disorder of the nervous system that usually strikes people between ages 30 and 50. A folk music hero, Woody Guthrie, died of Huntington's. It affects about 30,000 Americans.

The scary thing about Huntington's is that one person in 12,000 carries the gene, but doesn't know whether it will affect his or her children. Donna's three kids don't know if they're carriers.

The Bluegrass Festival this year will be Sunday, July 25, at Northville's Ford Field. Watch the entertainment pages for times, details and ticket information.

University of Michigan scientists are part of a six-laboratory consortium in the United States, England and Wales doing genetic research. Headline in the current Michigan Alumnus magazine: "Scientists Finally Snare Elusive Huntington's Gene." Out of 100,000 genes in the human body, they spotted the one that causes Huntington's. It was "the most difficult gene hunt yet," said Francis C. Collins, the internationally famed leader of the U-M team.

"It's a great relief," said Rice.

Probable result: Scientists will be able to predict the onset of Huntington's — "we'll be looking into a crystal ball with clarity never before provided," said Collins.

Meanwhile, Time magazine (May 31) reported on the "first attempts to cure a disease by gene therapy." Cure!

It seems they can insert genes into babies to treat genetic diseases, but now they're talking about replacing defective genes with beneficial genes.

Rice is hopeful that within a few years a genetic cure will be found for Huntington's.

There are religious footnotes to this tale. According to the Michigan Alumnus magazine, "Some scientists think that some of the Salem witches may have suffered from Huntington's."

Laurie Jarski, Donna's college student daughter, recalls that the onset of her mother's illness started in her 20s, and that people at first thought Donna was mentally ill. Donna's father died of a similar disorder that people associated with the devil. It was all genetic.

Will this be enough to shake the religious right out of badmouthing Darwin, evolution and genetics and insisting on the scientific status for creationism? Let us pray it does.

If the Bible is unreliable on genetics, it's still a marvelous guide in other areas. I like Exodus 20, St. Matthew 7:12 and St. Luke 10:25-37.

On July 25, join us in Northville to practice Psalm 100: "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

'50s high school studies had priorities in order

JACK GLADDEN

In the mid-1950s I was a member of the Roswell (New Mexico) High School Marching Band. I played first chair alto saxophone. The only reason I sat in that distinguished seat was because the other two alto players were even worse than I was.

The whole band, for that matter, was pretty bad. Discordant would have been a kind way to describe our sound. But none of us planned musical careers. I had signed up for band because it was either that or phys ed, and my athletic prowess was worse than my musical ability. The same was true for most of my young colleagues. And we got to parade on the football field during home games. It was the 1950s and band was fun.

Then there was the football team. There were basically two types of football players: the bruisers, who were less than academic geniuses but who liked to get out on the field and kick butt, and the BMOCs (that stood for Big Men on Campus).

The bruisers usually had part-time jobs at filling stations and hung out at the drive-in. The BMOCs, in addition to being the star quarterbacks or halfbacks or receivers, were also the class presidents, the leads in the class plays, the presidents of the student council and the homecoming kings (the counterparts to the homecoming queens who were always either cheerleaders or baton twirlers).

After graduation the bruisers dropped out of sight or turned their part-time service station jobs into full-time jobs as mechanics. The BMOCs and the band and chorus members went to college to study engineering, pre-law, teaching, physics, journalism or geography.

High schools were not farm clubs for colleges, which were not farm clubs for NFL and NBA teams. And band and chorus were not activities whose primary function was to win awards for the schools and provide scholarships for the participants. Not then anyway. It was the 1950s and those extracurricular activities were just fun.

I didn't know anyone who graduated with a football scholarship and the only one I knew who got a band scholarship was — ultimate irony — me! (I forfeited it after a couple of weeks in college when I dropped out of band.)

There were no groups calling for a "return to basics" in the curriculum. Our curriculum was already pretty basic. There were drama clubs but no drama classes. School plays were directed by teachers who coached the drama clubs on their own time.

The school paper was put out by students working after school with a teacher-adviser working on her own time. There were no journalism classes.

There were no full-time counselors, no reading specialists, no social workers or media specialists, no crisis intervention programs.

No sex education programs and no concerned citizens groups demanding that the sex education programs be stopped.

There were no band parent organizations. No athletic boosters. No parent committees drumming up support for school millage votes. There were no superintendents threatening to shut down all extracurricular activities if voters didn't approve a tax increase and no school board candidates threatening to hold their breath and turn blue if the superintendent didn't resign.

There was no teachers union urging voters to approve higher taxes to keep school programs intact but refusing to make any concessions themselves to achieve the same purpose. Teachers didn't make a lot of money, but it was enough, and they enjoyed their jobs.

Students who wanted to learn got a decent education. Those who didn't care fell through the cracks, and there was no government commission demanding to know how this could have been allowed to happen.

It was the 1950s and everyone involved with the public school system — students, teachers, administrators and parents — seemed to have their priorities pretty much in order. What happened?

Colonies were cooking without handy gadgets

For well over three centuries, Virginia has been famed for its good food and hospitality.

By 1699, when Williamsburg was founded, Virginians were enjoying a bill of fare that was probably unrivaled.

The Tidewater, with its forests and waterways, was a primeval paradise of fish and game.

Domestic farm animals, brought over from England, thrived in the new climate, and so did English vegetables and fruit along with native American corn.

Early cookbooks

If you were a housewife in Virginia, placed handily beside the hearth were sure to be copies of these popular 18th century cookbooks — "The Art of Cookery Made Plain and Easy" by Mrs. Hannah Glasse and "The Complete Housewife" by Mrs. E. Smith.

"The Complete Housewife" was the first published cookbook in colonial America. Mrs. Mary Randolph, in her day reputed to be the best cook in Richmond, authored the first printed Southern cookbook, "The Virginia Housewife," in 1824.

These books included recipes for chowders, fried chicken, spoon bread and corn sticks, pecan pie and Tidewater specialties — Virginia ham and Sally Lunn tea cake.

Ah, what a grand old time they must have had in the kitchens of yesteryear. Nary the sign of a can opener or even a plug for a Cuisinart. Colonial cooks were guided by light from the hearth or the glow of a candle.

Temperatures were deciphered simply by the touch of a finger against the side of a pot. Eggs as fresh as the new day's sun, and cream rising to the top of the milk can, must have been part of a sinfully delicious cake.

Poultry, still warm to the touch from its recent slaughter, filled Dutch ovens while the scent of bay leaves, drying on the mantle, permeated the air.

Simpler times

There were no department stores where blushing brides could register for the latest in cookware and appliances. You simply visited the local blacksmith and bartered for a cast iron fry pan or hand hammered copper bowls.

Those were the days when food was treated with dignity, and people ate to live rather than lived to eat.

Nowadays, we don't even have to venture out to a mall to get what we need for the kitchen. Cookware, cutlery and grain-fed steaks are as close as our phone, a charge card and overnight air freight.

One thing is for certain, I probably would have weighed a lot less back in those days, simply because if you didn't hunt, you didn't eat. Since beef cattle roamed until they were lean and tough, veal and pork were by far the most popular domestic meats in the 18th century. Grain-fed beef didn't become part of the diets of early settlers until the 1890s.

Local game

If you did indeed hunt, you probably went after pigs and wild turkeys. I know for certain that's how the famed Virginia ham got its name.

If you were lucky enough to live near the shore, colonial cooks found that fish and shellfish were plentiful.

So here it is, nearing Independence Day 1993, and as I page through old cookbooks and stories of how it was living in colonial times, I find myself giving thanks for all that I have.

I can't imagine life without my Kitchen Aid, Braun Handi-mixer and non-stick pans. I think not only of the colonists who cooked over an open hearth and produced Thanksgiving dinners beyond belief but also of my grandparents who had to fire up the old Detroit behemoth of a stove with wood chopped from the farm just to be able to cook.

My thoughts are of happier times when an ice cream cone was simply a scoop of fresh fallen snow drizzled with some homemade maple syrup.

I sit here amazed that all I have to do to make dinner is to flick a switch after a walk through an air conditioned market that stocks peppercorns from the Far East and other culinary bounties from all over the world.

But when you think about it, cooking hasn't changed that much throughout the years.

Chefs still struggle to make the perfect, lump-free gravy. We work hard for the money that buys life's little luxuries.

And to end, I leave you with Mrs. Mary Randolph's instructions for melting butter as the first step in making a sauce. She warned "Nothing is done more simple than this process, and nothing so generally done badly."

I'm glad I have a great saucepan, some instant Wondra flour, and a stainless steel whisk that makes the job a breeze, and one Mrs. Randolph would have been proud of. Bon Appetit!

Heritage desserts: Monica Riesner (left), Jennifer Barr and Norma Salerno of Greenfield Village's Firestone Farm in Dearborn, dressed in costumes appropriate to this 1880s rural site, sample "Aunt Kate's Cookies," made from an original Firestone family recipe.

Your family will get a "bang" out of Aunt Kate's Cookies, Louisa May Alcott's Apple Slump and other American heritage desserts on the Fourth of July. Declare your independence from the usual ice cream and cake. Serve a dessert that's truly American.

BY JOAN BORAM
SPECIAL WRITER

Considering that the names given to ice cream flavors these days are not much different from names given to perfumes, desserts with names like "duff," "grunt," "slump," and "flummery" sound like words our mothers wouldn't allow us to use at the table.

But, 100 or more years ago, these were the desserts of the moment. Many of them were based on recipes brought from the old country, especially England.

Duff is pudding originally made with dried fruit and cooked in a double boiler. Grunt, a fruit pudding similar to cobbler, is cooked in a skillet on the stove top, not in the oven. Slump is a New England pudding similar to grunt. Sweetened fruit is topped with a soft biscuit dough and steamed in a covered pan rather than baked. Flummery is stewed and thickened fruit, usually berries, served with cream. The British thicken their flummeries with oats.

Other American heritage desserts like pumpkin pie or Indian pudding, which was based on corn meal, used foods native to the new world. Key lime pie was inspired by the introduction of condensed milk in 1858.

"Many people think of puddings when they think of traditional American desserts," said Marion Lynch, president of the Livonia Historical Society. And there's no question that puddings were a very important dietary staple in America's early days. "For one thing, puddings require long cooking, so they could be put on the back of the fireplace for several hours while the housewife went about her business. When wood stoves were introduced, they could be put on the back of the stove as well."

Puddings are versatile. They're thought of as desserts, but there are hearty main-course puddings as well. Thomas Jefferson served macaroni and cheese pudding at a White House dinner in 1802. Hominy pudding was a popular breakfast item in the South. It was popular with Native Americans, and quickly adopted by the pioneers. It's simply hulled corn — the pioneers removed the hulls by soaking the grains of corn in a weak wood lye. Hominy was often served in place of potatoes. And don't forget that English staple, Yorkshire pudding.

Lynch collects cookbooks of all kinds as well as related items, such as Jell-O molds. In a facsimile edition of the first American cookbook, compiled in 1796 by Amelia Simmons, there are recipes for rice pudding, bread, flour, potato, apple, squash, tapioca and Indian, puddings.

"One of the basic appeals of puddings is that the pioneer housewife could use almost any ingredients she had on hand," said Lynch. "She certainly didn't run down to the store to pick up a box of tapioca."

Four days a week Lynn Kalil lives the life of a mid-19th century farm woman, baking on a wood stove, canning and preserving, tending the kitchen garden, and cooking up a big farm lunch for the "hands" on the Firestone Farm in Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

"We're really like a family," said lead interpreter Kalil, who's been a "temp" in the 19th century for six years. "There's a generational span from seniors to college students. We milk cows and shear the Marino sheep, and run the farm exactly the way Harvey Firestone's family did for 150 years. (The farm was moved brick-by-brick to Greenfield Village from 1982 to 1985.) Often visitors ask us if we really live here, and that makes us happy, because we know we look authentic."

A few years ago, Kalil and others from the farm visited Columbiana, Ohio, the farm's original site, to track down information about the farm. And, of course, they hoped to find recipes.

"We visited a senior citizens' center and there was a woman who had three or four hand-written recipes. She had gotten them from her mother-in-law, whose mother, Aunt Kate, had also been Harvey Firestone's mother!" said Kalil.

Recently, Kalil and her family took a four-day weekend trip to Wisconsin. Did they eat in fine restaurants? No, they were participants in a Civil WAr assemblage, and Kalil cooked over an open campfire.

Low-fat substitutions cut fat quick in quiche

LAURA LETOBAR

Cooking elaborate, heavy meals is usually last on everyone's list of things to do on a hot day. But we still need to eat well. So summer is usually the time when fast, easy-to-prepare recipes are in great demand, For that reason, I've chosen Crustless Vegetable Quiche for this month's recipe makeover. It comes from my mother-in-law, Joan Letobar. She and her family have lived in Livonia for eight years. She is from Westland.

Because high cholesterol runs in the family, she is very conscientious of the amount of fat in the diets of family members. She enthusiastically seeks out new low-fat and fat-free products to try, and loves testing new recipes.

Her husband, Russ, and daughter, Kristie, are always being treated to a variety of new meal ideas. Joan also has many tried and true low-fat dishes she enjoys preparing for her family.

She is very creative when it comes to cooking, and has taught me a great deal. When she prepared this recipe one evening I was amazed at how wonderful it tasted.

This crustless quiche recipe is loaded with vegetables and protein. It is very healthy, and reheats very well making it great for families.

Here ares some hints from Joan: Always use non-stick pans to help eliminate excess fat. Substituting reduced-fat products for high-fat products will greatly reduce the amount of fat in a recipe.

Her "madeover" recipe proves it. By making easy substitutions, we eliminated 8.5 grams of fat per serving, or a total of 67.8 grams of fat for this recipe!

Joan suggests serving Ore-Ida hash brown potato shreds as a side dish. Brown them in a non-stick skillet without any added fat. Be sure to read labels carefully, because some brands are loaded with fat.

This recipe can be made in one 10-inch quiche dish, but it cooks more evenly when done in two 8-inch dishes.

The American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society recommend that we eat five servings of fruits and vegetables daily. Recipes like Joan's quiche are wonderful because they incorporate different food groups into the same recipe.

Pioneer a July 4 tradition, make some heritage desserts

If you're interested in learning more about American Heritage foods, plan to attend the Taste of History at Greenfield Village in Dearborn, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, July 24 and July 25.

The two-day event will feature a sampling of 200 centuries of American cooking. For more information, call 271-1620.

Lynn Kalil, lead interpreter at the Firestone Farm at Greenfield Village, and her staff will be preparing three recipes in the Firestone Farm kitchen.

"They're all authentic 1880s recipes," said Kalil. "One, a White Mountain Cake is from 'The Buckeye Cookbook,' which has recently been reprinted and is available in the gift shop. Another is a lemon-potato pie, and the third is Aunt Kate's molasses cookies, Harvey Firestone's mother's favorite.

"We're not allowed to sell food on the farm, but all three of these desserts will be available in the tasting tents on the grounds."

Here are some American Heritage desserts to try.

The original instructions for this syllabub, which dates from 1800, called for the bowl to be filled with warm milk straight from the cow. If desired, 2 cups of white wine can be substituted for the mixture of port and sherry.

SYLLABUB

1 ¼ cups port
1 ¼ cups medium-dry sherry
2½ cups milk
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Pour the port and sherry into a 1¾-quart glass or pottery bowl. The bowl should be about ⅓ full. Stir in the sugar according to taste. Add the milk and stir a little. Leave to stand for about 20 minutes, or until the curd of the milk separates from the wine. Pour the syllabub into individual glasses, spooning the curd on top, and put a spoonful of whipped cream on each serving.

LEMON POTATO PIE

One medium unpeeled boiling potato
One lemon
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
2 pie crusts

Grate one medium unpeeled boiling potato. Grate one lemon, peel and all, saving the juice that runs off. Remove seeds.

Mix potato, lemon, sugar and water. Pour into a pie crust and put top crust in place.

Bake in a hot (about 375 degree) oven until done. At the Firestone Farm they insert a knife to test for doneness.

When it's thick enough to cling to the knife, it's done. Keep in mind that baking wasn't an exact science in the 1880s. The stoves didn't have thermometers, so cooks relied on instinct and experience.

AUNT KATE'S COOKIES

2 cups molasses
1 cup brown sugar
⅔ cup lard or shortening
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons baking soda dissolved in 1 cup warm water
2 eggs
6 cups flour

In large bowl, combine brown sugar and lard or shortening. Mix until creamy. Stir in eggs and molasses. Add dry ingredients, alternating with warm water/soda mixture.

Mix until smooth. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheets and bake in a 400 degree oven for about 10 minutes.

Note these cookies are enhanced by a touch of butter icing.

GOOSEBERRY FOOL

1 quart ripe gooseberries, strawberries, blackberries, or raspberries
1 cup sugar
1½ cups grated lemon rind
1½ cups heavy cream
½ cup crumbled macaroons

Combine the berries with ¼ cup water in a saucepan. Cook over a low heat until fruit is extremely tender. Remove from heat and work through a sieve to make a smooth puree. While hot, stir in sugar and lemon rind. Set aside to cool. Whip cream until it holds a shape, then fold into the cool fruit puree.

Spoon into a serving bowl, sprinkle with macaroon crumbs, and chill thoroughly. Serves 6.

The author of "Little Women" was so fond of the New England dessert called slump that she named her house in Concord, Mass. "Apple Slump."

LOUISA MAY ALCOTT'S APPLE SLUMP

6 cups apples, pared, cored and sliced
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup water
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup milk

Combine apple slices, sugar, cinnamon, and water in a saucepan with a tight-fitting lid. Heat to the boiling point. Sift together flour, salt, and baking powder. Stir in enough milk to make a soft dough.

Drop dough from a tablespoon onto apple mixture. Cover tightly and cook over a low heat for 30 minutes. Serve warm with New England Nutmeg Sauce, or rich cream.

This dessert can be made with various berries as well.

NEW ENGLAND NUTMEG SAUCE

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Mix together sugar and flour. Stir in boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce bubbles and thickens slightly. Add butter and simmer gently for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in 1 teaspoon nutmeg. Serve hot.

OHIO PUDDING

4 eggs, well beaten
¼ cup brown sugar
½ cup each mashed cooked sweet potatoes and carrots or squash
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 quart milk or light cream
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine the beaten eggs with brown sugar, mashed vegetables, salt, crumbs, milk, and vanilla. Pour into a well-greased 2-quart baking dish. Bake in 350 degree oven 1 hour, 15 minutes, or until a silver knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Eat warm with cold pudding sauce, or when partially cool sprinkle with granulated sugar. Makes about 8 servings.

COLD PUDDING SAUCE

¼ pound of butter or margarine (½ cup)
1 to 1½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon lemon juice or 1 teaspoon grated rind

Beat the butter. Add the sugar, cream and lemon and beat.

dessert, we are well on our way to achieving this goal.

I'll bet you didn't know that whole milk, skim milk and evaporated skim milk have the same amount of calcium.

Here are some guidelines for healthy eating from the American Heart Association:

- Brown meats by broiling or cooking in non-stick pans with little or no oil.
- Chill soups, stews and sauces before serving. Lift off congealed fat. Reheat.
- Use water-packed canned fish.
- For sauces and dressings, use low-calorie bases — vinegar, mustard, tomato juice, fat-free bouillon instead of high calorie ones — creams, fats, oils and mayonnaise.
- Thicken soups and sauces with cornstarch or flour dissolved in cold liquid or with pureed vegetables instead of heavy cream.
- Grease pans with non-stick vegetable spray instead of butter or oil.

Soup, bread, old-time favorites

See Larry Janes' Taste Buds column on Taste front.

In 1794, Thomas Jefferson recorded a bumper crop of peanuts at Monticello, thus fitting for this recipe.

CREAM OF PEANUT SOUP

- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 ribs celery, chopped
- ¼ cup butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 2 quarts chicken stock or broth
- 2 cups smooth peanut butter
- 1¾ cups light cream
- peanuts, chopped for a garnish

Saute the onion and the celery in butter until soft, but not browned.

Stir in the flour until well-blended.

Add the chicken stock, stirring constantly, and bring to a boil.

Remove from the heat and puree in a blender or a processor until smooth.

Add the peanut butter and the cream, stirring to blend thoroughly.

Return to low heat and heat until just hot, but do not boil. Serve, garnished with peanuts.

This soup is also good chilled on a hot summer day. Serves 10-12.

According to tradition, Sally Lunn is named after a young girl who in the 18th century "cried" the sweet yeast bread in the streets of Bath.

SALLY LUNN BREAD

- 1 cup milk
- ½ cup shortening
- 4 cups all-purpose flour, divided
- ⅓ cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 3 eggs

Preheat oven to 350 degrees 10 minutes before baking begins.

Grease a 10-inch tube or bundt pan.

Heat the milk, shortening and ¼ cup water until very warm, about 120 degrees.

The shortening does not need to melt.

Blend 1⅓ cups flour with the sugar, salt and yeast in a large mixing bowl.

Blend the warm liquids into the flour mixture.

Beat with an electric mixer at medium speed for 2 minutes.

Gradually add ⅔ cup of the flour and mix well. Add the eggs and beat on high speed for 2 minutes.

Add the remaining flour and mix well. The batter will be thick.

Cover and allow to rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Beat the dough down with a spatula and turn it into the prepared pan.

Cover and allow to rise until it has increased in bulk by ⅓, about 30 minutes. Place in preheated oven and bake for 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

Run a knife around the edges and turn it onto a plate to cool. Serves about 6.

Kicks capture 4th title

The Plymouth Kicks remain on a roll that began nine months ago, winning their fourth consecutive under-10 boys soccer championship.

After capturing the select championship last fall in the Western Suburban Soccer League, the 1983 Kicks won the first and second indoor sessions at the Canton Soccerdome.

Expectations were high for the spring season and, after a pivotal 2-0 victory over the Northville Sting, the Kicks marched to a fourth regular-season title in a row with a 7-1 record. Plymouth had six shutouts and outscored its opponents 34-5.

The Kicks are 27-3-2 in the regular season with 14 shutouts and 213 goals (56 allowed). Since the team formed a year ago, the Kicks are 32-6-2 with 19 shutouts and have outscored the opposition 233-60.

The players are Jay Smith, Marty Kane, Oliver Wolcott, T.J. Tomasso, Nick Tochman, Shane Smith, Jon McGlone, Philip Marrone, Justin Griffin, Brian Conway, Danny Gill, Chris LaMasse, Brian Thiess, Derek Vermeulen, Jay Sofen and Kenny Wuorenma. The Kicks are coached by Dennis Tochman and Bill Thiess.

Father's Day golf winners

The threesome of Fred Alcock, Dennis Alcock and Dan Alcock won the Canton Parks and Recreation Father's Day Scrambles Golf Tournament June 20 at Fellows Creek Golf Course. They shot a 12-under-par 60 for a one-stroke victory.

Second place went to the defending champion team of Earl Kent, Darrin Kent and Craig Klimczak with an 11-under total of 61. Steven Zeck, Fred Zeck and Tim Zeck took third place with 62.

Klimczak also won the long-drive award and Russ Carlson the closest-to-the-pin award.

All-Catholic baseball

Four members of Redford Catholic Central's baseball team were named to the all-Catholic League team: seniors Brian Paluk and Jeff Gutt, and juniors Juan Sanchez and Mike Brusseau.

Paluk was CC's top pitcher. A right-hander, he finished with a 10-3 record and a 1.30 earned run average. He led the Shamrocks in innings pitched (80⅔) and strikeouts (109); he allowed 15 earned runs on 56 hits and 29 walks.

Gutt was a Shamrock surprise. Cut from the team as a junior, he emerged as CC's top hitter, batting .323. A left-fielder, he had seven doubles, a triple and 17 runs batted in.

Sanchez split time between catcher and right field, batting .321 with 23 RBI. Brusseau played second base and led off, batting .313 and scoring a team-best 33 runs.

Collegiate honor roll

Jeff Paluk, a junior right-handed pitcher for Saginaw Valley State from Plymouth (Salem High School), was honored as co-recipient of the Coaches Award this past season.

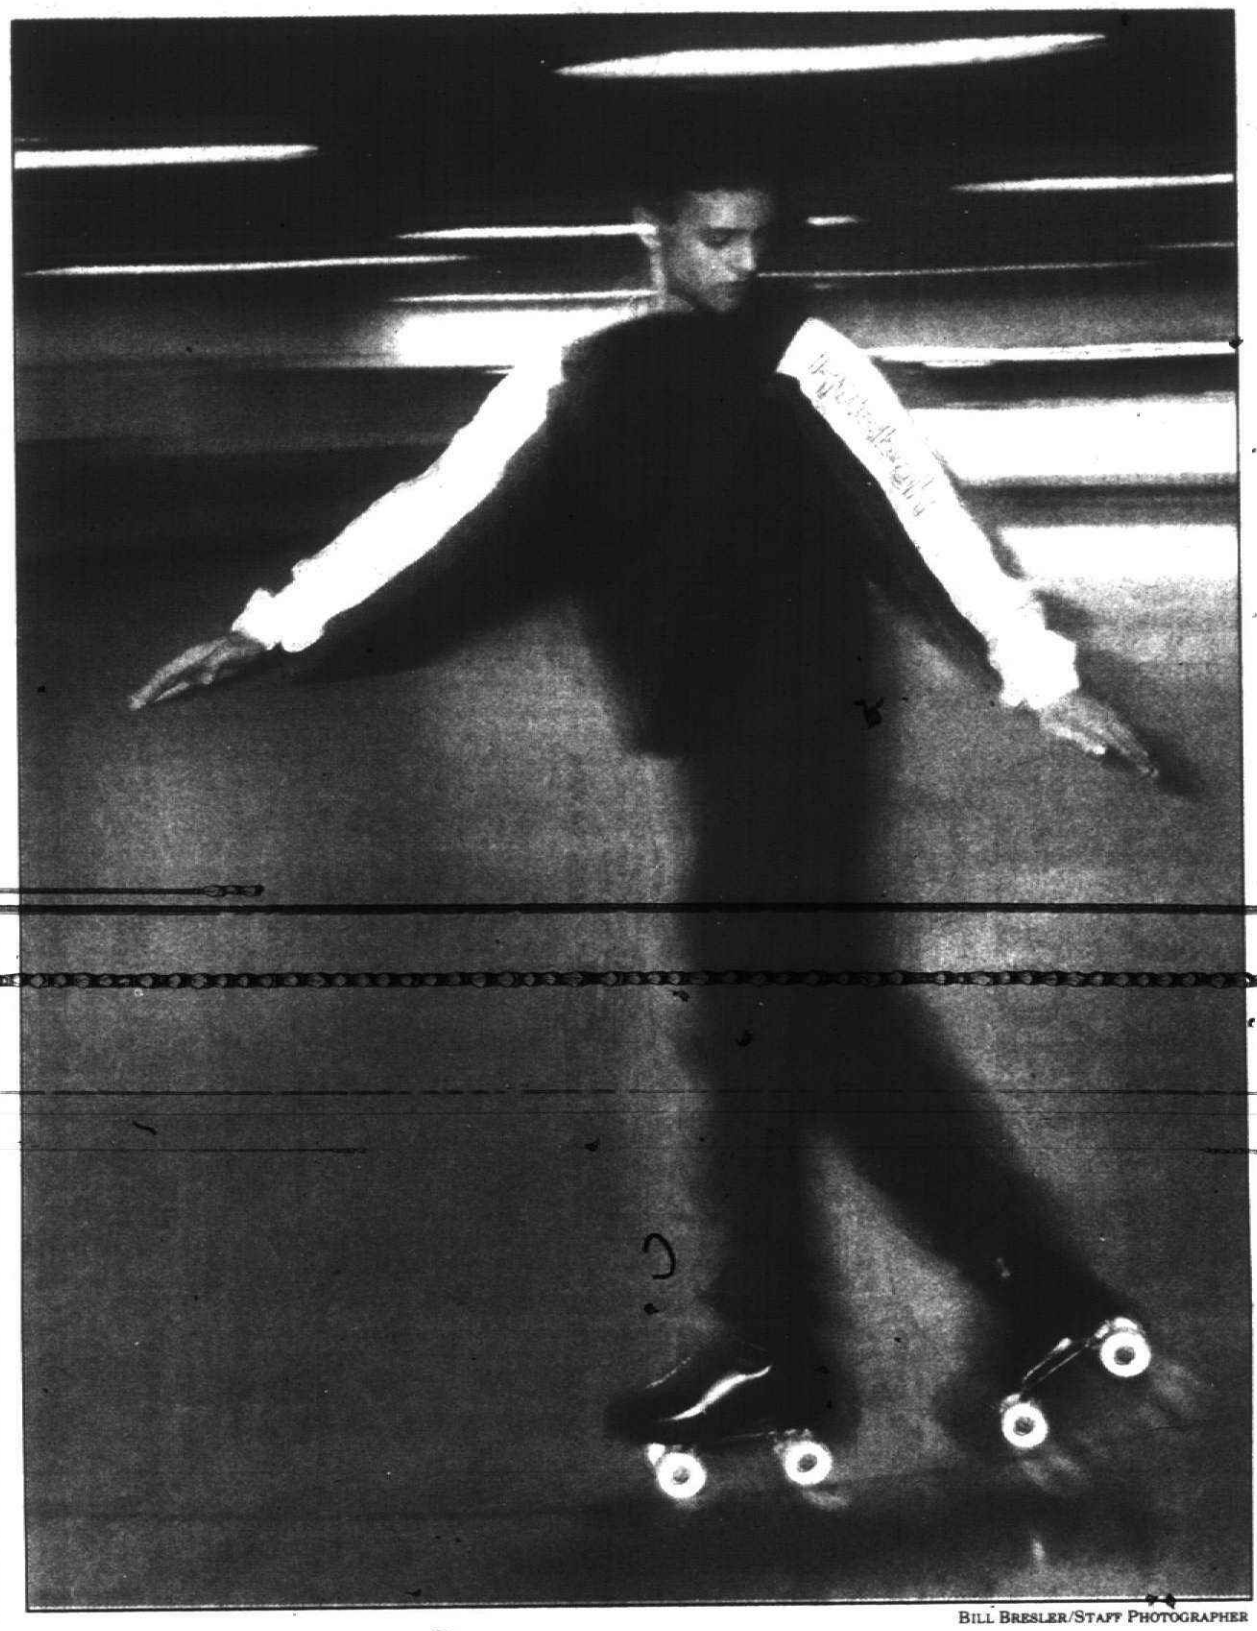
Paluk, who was 5-5 with a 4.37 earned run average and 53 strikeouts in 59⅔ innings, shared the award with shortstop Mike Bloomfield. The Cardinals were 24-20.

Academic/athletic stars

Kim Reichard, a sophomore third baseman for Michigan State from Plymouth (Farmington Hills Mercy High School), was named to the all-Big Ten academic softball team. Reichard has a 3.0 cumulative grade-point average with a major in English.

■ Jeff Belisle, a sophomore at Wayne State from Canton (Salem), was an honorable mention selection to the GLIAC's all-academic baseball team. A pitcher, Belisle posted a 3.6 grade-point average with a major in accounting.

Angiulli's goal: world-class title



BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Skating champion: Jeff Angiulli practices at the Skatin' Station in Canton for the world-class men's figures roller skating competition.

Sixteen-year-old Jeff Angiulli of Canton is an accomplished roller skater, having won many national honors, but aspires to even higher goals.

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

It would seem 11-time national amateur champion Jeff Angiulli has done it all in roller skating at the age of 16.

But nine years of competitive skating was preparation for his greatest challenge in world-class men's figures — the Major League of skating.

The Canton Township youth believes he is ready for the big time and will compete for a place on the United States team this summer. He has been practicing five hours a day every day to get ready.

"I'm the youngest in the world (by three years) skating this event," Angiulli said, adding some are in their 30s. Many have been skating at the world-class level for 10 years. "So the politics of it is really the hardest thing to get past.

"One (competitor) was second in the world, and another has been on the world team. It's going to be hard this year, but I've pretty much done all I can (to prepare). Everyone says I have a chance."

Angiulli, who will be a junior at Plymouth Salem High School, realizes it will be difficult winning another national title this year, not to mention the world championship.

But neither can anybody [illegible] him, not with his track record for success. There is no doubt about his commitment to reach those goals eventually.

"I want to win the worlds," he said. "I have all the right things behind me — teachers, support from family and friends and all the time to practice.

"I've skated all the right political meets. I've shown up at all the right places to be known."

Angiulli's quest began with the U.S. Amateur Confederation of Roller Skating regional, which concludes Tuesday in Troy. He must finish among the top three to qualify for the nationals July 30-Aug. 7 in Pensacola, Fla.

If he places among the top three there, he will earn a trip to the Federation of International Roller Skating world championships in Bordeaux (France) with the U.S. team in late September.

In the meantime, Angiulli's busy summer will also have him skating in the Olympic Sports Festival July 21-26 in San Antonio.

LaPointe steps down as Canton coach

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

After one season as Plymouth Canton varsity baseball coach, Mark LaPointe has resigned to devote his attention to personal matters.

LaPointe had taken a team that was 9-12 a year ago and turned it around in just one season. The Chiefs won the Western Lakes Activities Association title and finished 22-12.

The success in baseball provided a soothing diversion for LaPointe during a difficult time in his family life while he and his wife went through a divorce, he said.

"Although I'm putting it down because of my personal life, baseball also helped me with my personal difficulties," the 42-year-old LaPointe said.

"It's some thing I knew would come sooner or later, but it was coming sooner than I expected because of things in my personal life. The only regret I have is leaving the kids and not being at the field."

With the high school season over and the Connie Mack summer season getting started, LaPointe said he had to reconsider his role in coaching because of his children — 11-year-old Joseph and 9-year-old Elizabeth.

"Due to the fact my children's family structure is changing, it's necessary to spend more time with them," LaPointe said, adding they would have been apart again last weekend if he had taken the Connie Mack team to Pennsylvania for a tournament.

"The kids would have had to stay with relatives, but they've done enough of that. I could have sent the team to Butler without me and resumed running the team later, but I'm the kind of person who's either going to run it or not run it."

LaPointe indicated the stress of that situation and other things had led him to make his decision.

He submitted his resignation to Plymouth-Canton Athletic Director Paul Cummings on June 18. LaPointe had coached the Connie Mack team for the last five years, but will leave that role to former Canton player Jason Crain.

"It was not something I had planned on," he said. "A number of things had happened.

"I came home and the yard was knee deep in grass. The eaves trough was overflowing with those helicopter things. I looked at my children and I hadn't seem them much at all.

"They're going through a tough time and they need me. Everything had built up and I said 'LaPointe, you don't need to do this anymore. You don't need to prove anything to

Rutherford, Winstel show all-star talent

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Mark Rutherford didn't mind a kiss from his older sister Lynne following his performance Thursday at Tiger Stadium.

The pitcher/infielder from Livonia Churchill had quite a day at the 12th annual Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association East-West All-Star Game.

Rutherford was voted East team most valuable player despite a 7-6 loss in 10 innings to the West squad. (Grand Ledge's Pat O'Keefe was the West MVP.)

The only four-year starter ever to play at Churchill High School, Rutherford made his first trip to the old ballpark a memorable one.

Among his contributions, he:

■ Drew walks in his first two trips to the plate, including one after falling behind 0-and-2 in the count against Michigan's Mr. Baseball, right-handed fireballer Jason Middlebrook, who is headed for Stanford after recently turning down a $300,000 offer from the New York Mets.

■ Made a diving stab of a piercing line drive off the bat of Tom Horny (Saginaw Nouvel), turning it into a double play in the third inning.

■ Came through with a clutch two-run single in the seventh inning to knot the game at 5-5.

■ Protecting a 6-5 lead, did not allow a hit in his three-inning stint and was within one out of becoming the winning pitcher in the bottom of the ninth before disaster struck the East squad.

With two outs and the bases empty, the East made three consecutive errors, all routine plays. The West scored a run and won it in the 10th on an RBI single by Ismael Castellon (Lansing Everett) after Steve Uganski (Jenison) reached second on another East outfield error.

Redford Catholic Central's Brian Paluk, who relieved Rutherford in the 10th, was charged with the loss.

"It felt nice out on the mound," Rutherford said. "I was able to hit the spots and things worked out well, then we kind of fell apart.

"But they made some good plays behind me, too."

Five East errors told the story the of the ballgame, but the memory of playing in a major league stadium won't be forgotten for quite sometime.

"The adrenalin was pumping at the start, but you had to realize it was a game," Rutherford said. "You get used to it after awhile. It was a great place to play and a good way to end a high school career."

Plymouth Salem first baseman Charlie Winstel also could brag about his performance.

The lanky left-hander collected a pair of singles, while reaching base safely three times in four trips to the plate. He singled and scored a run in the East's five-run seventh, which helped erase a 5-1 deficit.

"In my mind, Charlie was second in line for MVP," said Salem coach John Gravlin, an East assistant. "He had two base hits, two good pickups and made three great defensive plays."

Winstel completed a key double play in the 10th when he nailed a runner trying to go from first to third on a sacrifice bunt play.

"I was definitely a thrill," said Winstel, who hit .447 for the Rocks this season with 44 hits. "I was kind of nervous to start, but when I first stepped up to the plate, I forgot all that and I just wanted to pop that ball into the overhang (upper deck).

All-stars from page 1C

"To walk out of the tunnel was one of the best feelings I've ever had in my baseball life.

"And just being around these players and coaches, the whole experience was great."

Winstel is undecided about his college choice, but Gravlin is convinced his first baseman's best days are ahead of him.

"He's got great hands," said the Salem coach. "His hands are so quick that he can go with the pitch to left field.

"Charlie was our clubhouse leader and he hit better than I expected, even better than he expected. He has excellent instincts. I hope had finds a place to play next year."

The East-West All-Star game also marked the final appearances for several other Observerland players including Birmingham Brother Rice lefty Chris Smolky (Clemson), the East starting pitcher who was roughed up for four runs on four hits in the opening inning; Rochester Adams' Ryan Ward, 0-for-2; Troy's Greg Janus, 0-for-2; Paluk, CC's tall right-hander (0-for-2); and Birmingham-Detroit Country Day's John Heller.

Area lanes get new shine in summer

10-PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

So that is where our bowling dollars go!

It's resurfacing time at many of the area bowling centers.

It takes a lot of hard work to give us bowlers our best shot. Maybe someday most lanes will be of the synthetic variety, but only a few of the houses have been able to invest the heavy dollars necessary to convert to the plastics.

The wooden surfaces take quite a beating throughout the year, and the crews that come in to rework the lanes must be highly skilled in making the proper repairs and replacements to the boards.

For the first step in the process, a drum sander is used to remove the old finishes and the oil. That is followed by another machine which is a leveler, run up and down the lanes several times to get all the wood perfectly level every way. Any and all damaged boards are replaced, loose wood is epoxied in place and the lanes are checked and re-checked for the finishing process.

The cross-grain sander is then brought in with several runs using progressively finer grit. At this point, the lanes are perfectly level and ready for the next machine which sands with the grain. After that the lanes get screened in which a screen mesh is used on a rotary buffer to take out the scratches and marks left by the other machines.

Next, the big clean-up. All sawdust must be removed from the lanes and floor, usually by hand, using a tack cloth. Next, the base coat is applied, this is a solid and it binds the wood together and sets up for the final finish.

The topcoat is most commonly a urethane based finish, although there are some other types in use also. The lanes are constantly checked and re-checked during these processes to be of proper level, that there are no loose or faulty boards, and to see to it that all necessary repairs are made.

The entire process takes about five or six days, depending on the number of lanes and the amount of repairs that must be done. As a bowler, when you expect your ball to hook, when you want to bowl to the best of your ability, there is all of this work that takes place in June or July that will affect your shot in September, October and throughout the season.

■ Last Thursday, the men's (CDBA) and ladies (DWBA) associations held their annual awards dinner at the Polish Century Club. The honorees included the all-city teams from both groups.

Angiulli is looking forward to that for the opportunity to meet "all the famous people" such as U.S. Olympic gymnasts Kim Zmeskal and Shannon Miller.

Angiulli won his first national titles in 1987 in juvenile dance and boys figures. Following other successes at the elementary, freshman and advanced levels, he was first in team dance with partner Melissa Callegari and junior men's figures last year.

By moving into men's figures, Angiulli is specializing in an event that combines loops and figures. He will not do dance this year but concentrate solely on the one event.

"I have enough to keep me busy this year," he said. "I couldn't have put all I wanted into figures if I skated dance, also."

Angiulli, who is listed among the Who's Who of high school students and rated one of the best young American skaters by Roller News, has been coached by the renowned Ron Jellse in recent years.

"Since I started taking lessons from Ron, that's when I started to improve really quick," he said. "I feel I have one of the best chances since Ron is one of the best teachers."

Linda Angiulli has been a longtime supporter of her son's skating career, too. Looking for an activity they could do when Jeff was little, she got him started in the sport.

"I thought he would never be a roller skater because he couldn't stand up," Linda Angiulli said. "But he just took off and he surprised me.

"Since he was 10 years old, he's been in the rink skating 10 hours a day, giving up his summer vacation, which is something [illegible] want him to do but he was determined he was going to win.

"It's been worth it. Roller skating is not cheap; it's very expensive. But he has an education he can fall back on, and he can make good money teaching. He has a social life, but he's always had a job to do since he was 7 years old and he's done it himself. I'm real proud of him."

Angiulli might eventually follow other former roller skaters into ice skating when he's accomplished all he can on the hardwood rink.

"Ron would like me to because his son did, but I want to finish up what I started with the worlds in roller," Angiulli said.

"This is going to take me a good four or five years if everything goes right. By then, hopefully, I'll be out of college and have a job. I'll always be teaching but I want a job outside of this."

Angiulli, who wants to study law and finance and have his own business someday, teaches on the [illegible]ers. One thing he doesn't expect to do is compete as a roller skater in the Olympics.

"It's not an Olympic sport yet, but I'll be out by the time it is. By then, I'll be ready to teach the young Olympians coming up."

anyone. You don't need this.'"

LaPointe, who teaches at Central Middle School, had assisted former coach Fred Crissey for 17 years and had been the Canton junior varsity coach for 10 years. He became the varsity coach after Crissey retired following the 1992 season.

"Somebody might say 'You got your big break and now you're getting out?' But I've been with the program for 18 years, so it's not like I'm getting out all of a sudden.

"Circumstances are forcing me to do what I'm doing. It's just the situation and I have no control over it right now."

By Scott White

The adage that truth is stranger than fiction is brought to life in "Caught in the Act," airing Wednesday, July 7, on NBC. This documentary on the world of video surveillance and its attendant role in fighting crime is intriguing to watch, but noticably devoid of ethical concerns raised by the video age.

Actual hidden-camera footage of robberies, stings and busts is combined with interviews, background information and technical insight to produce dramatic moments often more compelling than Hollywood movies.

The stories, while not excessively violent, are disturbing because they are true. For example, a segment edited from a police interrogation, in which a subject confesses to a murder, has an unnerving potency not often found in fictional screenplays.

"Interrogation is a Hollywood staple," says Arthur Smith, supervising producer of the show. "It's been in movies; you see it every week on 'Law & Order' and 'Homocide,' but this is better because it's real."

Surveillance footage for the show was collected from businesses and law enforcement agencies, stories were researched, and nearly 400 leads were reduced to the dozen or so vignettes presented in the program. The background information often adds to the drama of the stories, as in the case of an ATF gun bust than almost goes very wrong.

"When we saw the footage for the ATF story," says Smith, "It was very dry. But when we got into it and found out the details, we learned that (the agent) was out there unarmed and got cut off from his backup. When you set it up properly, all of a sudden you understand the value of it... It was really about the skill of the undercover agent. He's giving a performance, and he's playing with his life."

Not all the stories are as somber or tense as these; in fact, they run the gamut of topics and emotional appeal. Some are mildly amusing, and one, concerning the misadventures of a pair of would-be appliance thieves, is downright funny.

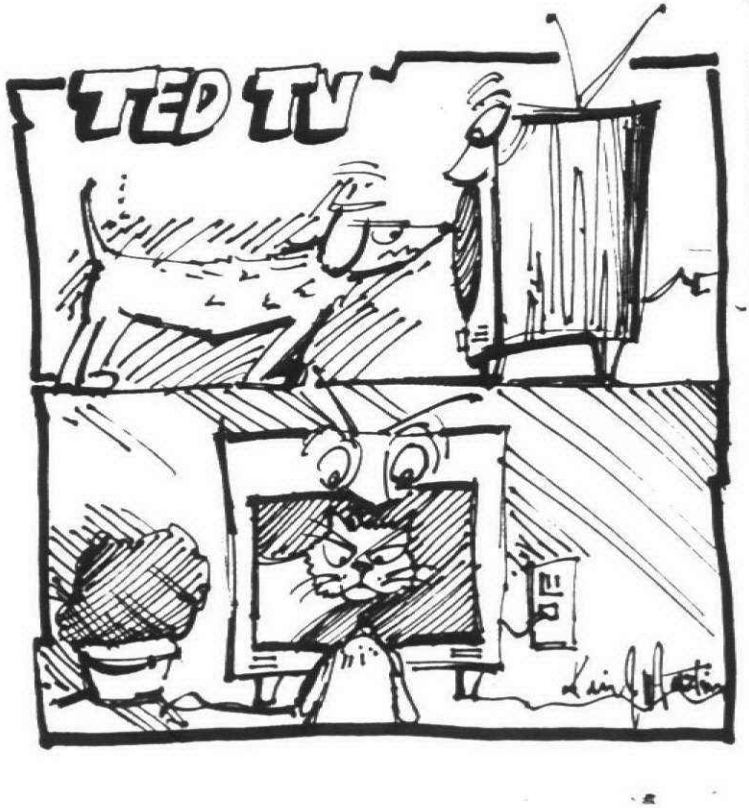
According to Smith, "Caught in the Act" may lead to future specials maybe even a series.

"The cost of video surveillance of some form is very inexpensive," says Smith. "There's a wealth of interesting stuff and great stories to be told. The question is: Are there enough stories to be told? Are we gonna run dry? We don't believe so. We know, because of what's out there, that we could do lots and lots of shows and still keep the quality up."

Though the premise of the program is intriguing and the format will appeal to fans of reality shows, "Caught in the Act" remains strangely silent on many of the video revolution's ethical issues. As the show progresses, it unwittingly introduces an Orwellian Big Brother-is-watching atmosphere. "Caught in the Act" seems to tell us to be good citizens because the electronic voyeurs will certainly catch us if we aren't.

Host Dean Stockwell (best known as holographic helper Albert in NBC's "Quantum Leap") guides viewers through the hourlong program with an authoritative, man-in-a-suit approach that comes across as dated and even somewhat crass at times.

"In just a few moments," Stockwell says at the show's close, "we'll be turning off our cameras, but the countless surveillance cameras out there will remain on; their sleepless eyes constantly on the lookout for trouble. So as long as people play by the rules and don't break the laws, the video surveillance camera will be their friend. But if they don't, they just might get... caught in the act!"



HIGHLIGHTS

Jeff Griggs and Barbara Alyn Woods star in "Eden," an adult series debuting as a two-hour special Sunday, June 27, on the USA Network. A coproduction between USA and the Playboy Entertainment Group, the half-hour series begins its six-week, Monday-through-Thursday run on June 28. Set in an exclusive tropical island resort, "Eden" follows the steamy adventures of guest characters and the resort's owner (Woods), a beautiful widow who must satisfy her husband's will by remarrying or face losing the pleasure paradise.

Tuesday, June 29, A&E presents "Sam Peckinpah: Man of Iron," a profile of the renegade director whose films included "The Wild Bunch," "The Getaway" and "Straw Dogs." Shown here with Bob Dylan (right) on the set of "Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid," Peckinpah was known for the brutal realism of his work, particularly his trademark scenes of violence in slow motion. The two-hour documentary features recollections by friends and collaborators including James Coburn, Ali MacGraw and Kris Kristofferson.

On the Tuesday, June 29, edition of "P.O.V.," PBS' showcase of independently produced nonfiction films, young filmmaker Garth Stein documents his sister Corey's (pictured) brain surgery, which was intended to relieve chronic epilepsy.

"When Your Head's Not a Head, It's a Nut" was shot with a home-video camera and follows the family's emotional preparation for the risky operation, the surgical procedure itself and Corey's post-operative recovery and eventual return to her career in art.

TBS looks at environmental backlash; Geena Davis hits the high seas

Arthur Kent, the former NBC correspondent who won many fans for his daring work during the war in the Persian Gulf, will serve as host for a new "World of Audubon" special scheduled to premiere Sunday, Aug. 8, on TBS. Titled "Backlash in the Wild," the hourlong program examines the growing anti-environmentalist movement fueled by organizations claiming that conservationists' efforts have cost too many jobs and abridged the rights of property owners. Filmed in New Mexico, Washington, Montana and New Hampshire, the special includes interviews with AFL-CIO executive Don Judge, economist Tom Power and various loggers, miners, ranchers and environmental activists.

New York City will be the site for the 36th Annual Grammy Awards next February. It seems the Big Apple just pursued the event more aggressively than laid-back, quarrelsome Los Angeles. (The L.A. City Council refused to pay certain expenses, the mayor blames the council, etc.) The show will go on at Radio City Music Hall.

Geena Davis going to sea

Post-production activities are moving right along on director Fred Shepisi's film version of Broadway's "Six Degrees of Separation." Stockard Channing and Donald Sutherland star, with Will Smith, Ian McKellen, Bruce Davison and Mary Beth Hurt in the supporting cast. ... Geena Davis may soon be battening down the hatches to star in Columbia Pictures' big-budget dramatization of John Carlova's book, "The Mistress of the Seas." Paul Verhoeven will direct the film, which is scheduled for a Christmas '94 release. No other stars have been named. ... Published in 1923, "The Prophet" has sold nearly 9 million copies and been translated into more than 20 different languages. Now, under the nurturing of producer Larry Thompson, Kahlil Gibran's uplifting book of verse (told from the standpoint of the prophet Almustafa) is headed for the big screen. Playwright William Luce will write the screenplay, combining the text of the book with author Gibran's real life in 1931 New York.

SOAP WORLD

Vanessa to wed Billy on "Guiding Light"

BY CANDACE HAVENS

In true soap opera fashion, the characters Vanessa (Maeve Kinkead) and Billy (Jordan Clarke) on "Guiding Light" have had more than their share of trouble getting hitched.

The last time they tried to get remarried, Billy found out his ex-wife Reva (Kim Zimmer) had died, and he wound up with a hangover in another town with Nadine (Jean Carol) on what was supposed to be his wedding day.

After being left at the altar, Vanessa told Billy it was the last straw. A short time later Nadine and Billy were married in Las Vegas, and Vanessa has wanted Billy back ever since.

It seems there has always been someone trying to keep them apart. First it was Reva, who interfered with their happiness. Then it was the scheming Nadine, who wanted the rich oil tycoon for herself.

In the beginning, Vanessa was headstrong and sometimes malicious, but she has mellowed through the years and Kinkead thinks things will go more smoothly for her character now.

"Vanessa is marrying the man she has loved all her life," says the actress. "She has tried to move on and get away from Billy, but she always comes back to him. Now she has Billy and baby Peter, and it is a complete combination of happy events for her. It is unbelievable to her that things could be working out so well, untainted by any sadness."

Kinkead lives a somewhat less tumultuous life than her character with her husband, dancer/choreographer Harry Streep, and her two children, Abraham and Maude. "I have a terrific job that allows me to spend time with my family," says Kinkead. "I just hop on a train and 45 minutes later I'm at work. I do my thing, and then I come home. I don't have to go on location. It is a wonderful job if you have a family."

There is also her extended family at "GL." "The people here are very supportive," Kinkead says. "I've worked on the show for a long time, and it has always been this way. I don't know what to ascribe it to, but it really is amazing."

Will fans finally see Vanessa and Billy walk back down the aisle? Only time will tell.
