Yack seeks environmental study

Canton Township is pressing for a full environmental study of the impact of a proposed Willow Run Airport expansion. Noise and potential safety issues have been raised.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

Canton Supervisor Tom Yack has requested a formal, current study of all environmental issues associated with the proposed extension of a Willow Run Airport runway — part of plans for an international cargo facility — that would point directly toward the township.

"It is essentially asserting our rights under the law. Because of the concern of having timelines on this project pass us by, it is the most defensive posture Canton can be in," said attorney Bryan Amann, who was hired by Canton officials to represent the township's interest as Willow Run expansion and tradeport plans progress.

A less formal environmental assessment is being conducted now but is not expected to include in-depth discovery on issues of concern to Canton residents, such as noise, wetlands and pollution, Amann said.

Yack requested the EIS from the Federal Aviation Administration and Wayne County Director of Airports Bob Braun. In his letter, Yack, who is on sick leave, said that an EIS, which could cost $3-$7 million, is justified.

"The runway in question points directly to densely populated residential areas filled with thousands of homes (and thousands more residents). Extending the runway towards those homes would be a major action which would significantly affect the quality of the human environment in those areas and through western Wayne County," Yack wrote.

"Several hundred homes are now under construction less than three miles from the end of the proposed extension. Also, most of the operations at Willow Run Airport occur between (primary sleeping hours) 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. and are more disruptive

Cystic fibrosis a challenge to families

BY JILL HALPIN
STAFF WRITER

Three-year old Amanda Lee Dewyer is like a lot of other children: She wants nothing more than a trip to Disney World. But unlike other children and their families, Amanda and her parents aren't just waiting for some extra vacation time. They're waiting for a cure.

Amanda was born with cystic fibrosis, an incurable, degenerative respiratory disease. She and her parents are also waiting until she is healthy enough to travel.

"She's like most other kids her age. She likes to play outside with her friends and ride her bike. Her goal in life is to go to Disney World," said Amanda's mother, Terry Dewyer of Canton.

The family may not have to wait too much longer until they can take a journey to the Florida attraction. Amanda, who spent the first three months of life in the neonatal intensive care unit of the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, has been healthy for the past year and a half. Her parents are beginning to make plans.

"Hopefully in the next year we'll be able to go. She has breathing treatments twice a day, and she also takes enzymes with her meals to help her digest her food. But she has been well lately and has continually felt better," said Terry Dewyer.

On Saturday, the family will join more than 40 other families from the metro Detroit area in the seventh annual Cystic Fibrosis Walkathon. The 10K walk has more than 200 walk sites across the county. Locally, walkers will meet at Westland's Nankin Mills in Hines Park and on

Marketing brochure has trustee seeing red

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

Canton trustee Bob Shefferly is leery of spending money on a color brochure designed to promote the Pheasant Run Golf Course community in conjunction with developers who will use it to market housing in the area.

"This is beautiful but it won't do anything but make people drool," said Shefferly. "I just can't see the private enterprise of it. I can't see why we should sell their houses for them and I think that's what we would be doing."

Township trustees agreed to buy 1,650 brochures, provided by developers Jeff Brown and Dick Lewiston of Island Lake Associates. The township is buying the brochures at $5 apiece for a total of $8,250. Shefferly opposed the purchase.

"We have a large number of folks who don't necessarily live in the community who are asking what this is all about, how do all the pieces fit," said Aaron Machnik, Canton municipal services director.

Machnik defended the brochure, saying that it ties up the relationship between the Pheasant Run Golf Course, the five neighborhoods associated with it, and the nearby Summit on the Park community center and Heritage Park.

With only 1,650 brochures available to the township, Shefferly asked who would receive them. "As a taxpayer, I would be very leery about putting money into something that is very creative but I can't see what we would do with it."

Classic cars to draw visitors to Liberty Fest

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

Approximately 300 classic cars will roll into Heritage Park for a two-day show during Canton's fourth annual Liberty Fest June 23-25.

"With this park setting, we couldn't have a better place to show the cars," said Brian Lawrence of America's Most Wanted classic Car Club.

Last year, the new car club jumped in to host the Liberty Fest car show, offering a couple hundred cars and competition among car owners for as many as 89 trophies.

This year, more cars are expected to join the show that will offer 130 trophies, including Best of Show and Canton's Best. "They will be judged by club members," Lawrence said.

This year's car show will be kicked off with a cruise for car owners at 6 p.m. Friday, June 23, that will feature live country music, a Vegas Night, bingo and registration for the two-day car show.

Pre-registration for the car show — until the Cruise Night — is $15 for both days — June 24 and 25 — and

Auction planned

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

If you're interested in a bicycle, tools, holiday ornaments, car hood ornaments, hub caps, jewelry or any other odds and ends, a police and court public auction May 24 is for you.

"Most of it was found property or it was seized," said Brenda Luke, Canton police property clerk. "With the bikes, there are parts and some of them older. The better ones we gave to charity."

The auction is scheduled for 10 a.m. at the Canton Department of Public Works, 4847 S. Sheldon Road. It is a joint effort of the Canton Police Department, Canton administration, Northville Township Police, city of Northville Police and the 35th District Court.

"Everyone has their own list," Luke said, referring to each of the participating departments and the court. A list of items from the Canton police is available at the front desk of the department on Canton Center Road.

The DPW will open at 9 a.m. for interested participants to check out the items offered by the police departments and the court. Participants must register to bid during the auction.

While the auction will continue until about 3 p.m., potential bidders must be at the DPW and register between 9 and 10 a.m., Luke said.

Sunday in Bloomer Park in Rochester. Last year, walkers raised more than $70,000.

Dewyer was seven months pregnant with Amanda when she discovered something was wrong during a routine ultrasound.

"I had fallen down, and I called my doctor to see if they felt I should be seen. She told me to come in. It was during that exam that they noticed that Amanda's bowels weren't functioning properly. Two months after she was born, she underwent bowel reconstruction surgery. She spent the first year of her life in and out of the hospital with pneumonia and upper respiratory infections. But now she's on some new medication, and is doing fine. I try to just go from day to day, and think about the future in a positive way," said Dewyer.

Since the 1989 discovery of the cystic fibrosis gene, medical researchers have made strides in finding a cure for this sometimes-fatal disease, said Dr. I Abdulhamid, of the Cystic Fibrosis Center at Children's Hospital in Detroit.

"This is one of the few diseases in which researchers are experiencing success in trying to find a cure. It is still in the early stages and more research is needed, but they are making definite advancements," Abdulhamid said.

Cystic fibrosis is a genetic disease that occurs in approximately one in every 2,000 births among Caucasians. The disease causes patients to make thick mucous that affects their windpipes, pancreas and intestines, and results in recurrent lung infections and non-absorption, Abdulhamid said. While the disease can be fatal, the range of symptoms is widespread among cystic fibrosis patients.

"This is the No. 1 killer of children and young adults. Forty years ago, children born with this disease wouldn't make it to elementary school. They would most likely die before they had the chance. But now, half of them will live into their 20s and 30s, some beyond. But that is still really when life is just beginning," said Ann Peters, of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, a nonprofit organization dedicated to help fund cystic fibrosis research projects.

Yet new research projects, such as gene therapy, are offering hope to those afflicted with cystic fibrosis as well as their friends and families. The discovery of the cystic fibrosis gene allowed researchers to develop a therapy treatment, a process which involves the delivery of corrected genes through the patient's airway, Peters said.

Paul DiPirro and his wife, Sarah, of Canton are among those hoping that a cure will soon be discovered.

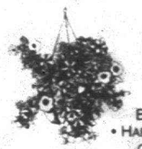

The couple discovered the disease in their daughter, Anna, when the child was seven months old.

"She didn't seem to be gaining any weight, and the doctor decided it was time for some tests. The cystic fibrosis test was the first one that they sent us for, because it was the most serious. And we found out she did have it, we were shocked," said Sarah DiPirro, also the mother of 2-year-old Anthony.

Residents leery of Wayne-Westland proposals

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

With only 28 days to mount a campaign, a deficit-ridden Wayne-Westland school board voted Monday to place two tax proposals on the June 12 ballot to coincide with board member elections.

The board has conceded that it faces an uphill battle to sell the plan to tax-weary voters in such a short time. But officials hope that promises to restore secondary school busing and to eliminate student pay-to-play fees will convince the electorate to favor the proposals.

The seven-member board had been sharply divided last week on placing tax issues on the June 12 ballot. But, with a four-member majority favoring the measures, the conflict appears to have given way to a united front, and board members who had opposed the decision have said they will support the effort.

"I will guarantee you that I will do everything I can, with the time available, to support the millage," said board president Mathew McCusker, who had preferred a fall campaign.

The first proposal seeks a two-year, 3-mill tax increase that would generate about $3.2 million a year. It would allow the board to restore full busing; eliminate pay-to-play fees for athletics and many other extracurricular activities; ensure continued high school accreditation; and trim $2.7 million from a deficit that had been projected at $6.4 million.

Other deficit-reduction measures, such as closing four elementaries and trimming the teaching staff, have already been approved.

A homeowner with an $80,000 house and a $40,000 state-equalized valuation would see taxes increase about $120 a year under the 3-mill plan.

The second proposal seeks a 15-year renewal of an 18-mill, non-homestead tax that would generate $10 million a year. Homeowners would not see their tax bills increase under this plan; only the commercial and industrial sector would pay.

The plan isn't sitting well with some voters, among them Jim Reedy and Chris Wejroch of Canton who predict the proposals won't be widely supported. "Money is mismanaged, and that's the whole problem with the whole community," said Reedy, who has a child in junior high school.

Asked whether he and voters he knows would be supportive, Reedy said, "absolutely not. The teachers have bad morale, there are no buses in the school system, and there's a lot of problems with management."

Wejroch has two children attending Wayne-Westland elementaries. "When they come to voters for millage increases, it never does go to the kids," he said. "It goes to teacher salaries and administration. This used to be a good school district. You look in the papers now and the test scores are just going down and down. It's all politics in Wayne-Westland. Everyone is out for themselves."

Millages won't succeed "until you get some accountability," Wejroch said. "They need an influx of younger teachers who care and know where society is heading." Voters might be willing to pay more in taxes, but they need to see improvements in exchange, he added.

School officials have questioned whether the 15,000-student district could recover if voters deal a blow to the non-homestead tax.

Superintendent Larry Thomas warned Monday that many voters don't even read the ballot language and that they decide how they will vote based on the pre-election campaign.

That certainly puts school officials at a disadvantage, with only 28 days to sell the plan following Monday's 4-0 board vote. (Board members Patricia Brown and Francis "Bud" Winter were out of town, and Vicki Welty had to leave the meeting early due to another commitment.)

Thomas said his administration will initiate several measures to explain the tax proposals to district residents:

- The proposals will be addressed in the next issue of "Connections," the district newsletter that will be mailed to voters.
- Additional documents will be sent home with students.
- Building principals will be asked to work with PTAs and booster clubs to educate the electorate.

Thomas noted that, by law, officials can only send out factual data about the election, rather than pushing for approval.

In a typical campaign, a citizens committee would be formed to gain public support, but officials won't have time to orchestrate such a move before June 12.

School officials also will have the task of explaining to voters why the district faced a $6.4 million deficit that, by state law, has to be erased. The problem has been largely blamed on the fallout from Proposal A, which slashed school property taxes.

On Monday, McCusker said that he and Brown and Winter would support the June 12 millage campaign, even though they wanted a later election. In a lighter moment, he joked about his efforts to unite the board.

"I have adopted a method of persuasion: It's called knee-capping," he said.

The millage election will coincide with a three-way school board race to fill two seats. However, incumbents Laurel Raisanen and Vicki Welty won't suffer any voter wrath from the tax proposals, because they are not seeking re-election.

The board had earlier decided on an Aug. 28 millage election, but county elections officials rejected that date because it could interfere with possible municipal primaries in early September.

Officials have noted that the June 12 campaign could save $12,000 that would be spent on a special election.

However, board members have indicated that they could schedule a special election later this year if voters reject the June proposals.

Plymouth-Canton voters also are being asked for a tax increase. On the ballot is a 2.3-mill, two-year tax increase and a 10-year, 18-mill renewal on non-homestead property.

Retired GM lawyer has school spending questions

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

Some tough questions were put to a Plymouth-Canton school board anxious to pass two millages at last week's Board of Education meeting.

Ted Bohlen, an attorney retired from General Motors, took the board to task on several issues.

Bohlen researched Plymouth-Canton budgets for the last 10 years and found that on a percentage basis, the spending increase in salary and benefits has outpaced spending for textbooks.

"In 1985-86, salaries and benefits were 75.5 percent of total revenue. In 1994-95, salaries and benefits are 87.1 percent of total revenue," said Bohlen. "In 10 years, total revenue increased 77.1 percent, from $50.3 million to $89.2 million. In 10 years, salaries and benefits increased 96.9 percent. Salaries and benefits have outpaced total revenue by 19.8 percent.

"A reasonable person could conclude that salaries and benefits have priority over the students' textbooks. Do the students come first?"

The average teacher salary in Plymouth-Canton is $55,789, higher than Ann Arbor ($48,872), Livonia ($51,617), Northville ($52,694) and Wayne-Westland ($49,908). That's the case even though revenue per pupil in Plymouth-Canton is lower than in the above-named districts.

Plymouth-Canton, where enrollment is comparable to Livonia, Ann Arbor and Wayne-Westland, has the smallest number of teachers. Plymouth-Canton employs 784 teachers. Ann Arbor has 1,100, Livonia 1,000, and Wayne-Westland 923.

"It appears we are really understaffed in teachers compared to these other schools, yet we are very high with teachers' pay," said Bohlen, adding that Plymouth-Canton test scores rank behind Ann Arbor and Northville.

Lastly, Bohlen asked the board why it's seeking a millage for computer software when in 1991, voters were told a $12 million portion of the $59.7 million bond issue would "provide a basic system for the technology, including the hardware and software," according to brochures sent to voters.

"A reasonable person could conclude that the technology purchased under the $59.7 million bond proposal of 1991 is being proposed again to be purchased under the 2.3-mill enhancement levy in the election of June 12, 1995," he said.

"I don't agree with your conclusions," said board president David Artley. "The 2.3 mills won't go just for computers. There's a long list of items."

School board treasurer Roland Thomas told Bohlen that while "factually, you are correct, we really have to adjust the numbers to make them comparable," given the fact that the state has gradually turned over to districts the responsibility for employees' Social Security and retirement costs.

"The percentage (for salaries and benefits) for 1994-95 is 76 percent, versus 75.5 percent in 1985-86," he said.

Teacher salaries are higher here because "as time goes on, the staff ages, and they move up the scale," Thomas added.

Board vice president Susan Feisen said millage revenue will be used for many things, including more software "to make the curriculum come to life."

Trustee Sue Davis welcomed Bohlen's inquiries.

"We need people like you to keep us on track and give us things we need to look at," she said.

Bohlen said, "If we are going to talk about kids coming first, let's do it. Money earmarked for kids should be untouchable."

Trustee Barbara Graham agreed. "I do believe we have to start looking at having a portion of that budget that can't be touched. We pay our gas and utility bills on time; we should pay our kids on time."

Bohlen took issue with Thomas' contention regarding retirement costs. "The whole point is that there has been an absolute trend all the way through of monies being increased for salaries and benefits on an ongoing basis. Social Security and retirement has been a small percentage of the total. It's been building up all the way through. That was my point," he said.

"There's been an attitude in this district that says, 'I can drive a Cadillac, because the people will pay for it,'" added Bohlen. "That's wrong. The priority should be kids, and I mean the ones who are currently in there who need this information today. We shouldn't just be saying, 'This is where we will be.' That will be fine for future kids. We need to think about the current kids who are coming out of school illiterate on computers."

Canton man faces charges in the shooting of his wife

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

A 44-year-old Canton man faces a felony charge in connection with the shooting of his wife in their home on Larchmont May 11.

Hugh F. Gentry pleaded not guilty to one count of assault with the intent to murder at his arraignment in 35th District Court on May 12. He was released on conditional bond, which is expected to be reviewed at a preliminary exam on the charge Friday, May 19, said Canton Detective Rick Pomorski.

Gentry's wife, Christine, 45, was shot in the leg and transported to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Ypsilanti.

Canton police were first informed of the shooting when a nearby resident reported hearing a shot fired. While patrol officers were on their way to the scene, they were informed by dispatchers that a woman had been shot in the leg, according to a police report.

Officers asked dispatchers to call the resident, the husband, to tell him to come out of the house with his hands above his head. When they arrived at the scene, officers said the man came out of the house and yelled, "It was an accident. It was an accident."

The man was handcuffed and taken into custody. He told police the gun, a .357-caliber Ruger, was on the kitchen table and no one else was in the house. Police found the wife on the floor near a stairway with bloody towels wrapped around her right leg, according to the police report.

The woman told police that both she and her husband had been drinking and arguing. When she began to walk up the stairs in her home, she said she heard her husband say, "Who's there, who's there," and she was shot in the leg.

Two teens taken into custody in connection with break-ins

Listed below are some of the Canton police incidents reported during the past week.

■ JUVENILES APPREHENDED

Two 16-year-old boys were taken into police custody in connection with the breaking and entering of 10 mobile homes May 6 and 7 in a storage yard in southern Canton.

A warrant is also being prepared for the arrest of a 20-year-old who apparently also was involved in the breaking and enterings that netted the trio televisions, VCRs, golf clubs, radios and other electronic equipment, said Detective Dave Schreiner.

Police were led to the 16-year-olds by an owner of a mobile home, who became aware that one of the boys involved was bragging about the breaking and enterings, Schreiner said.

The 20-year-old man apparently was renting a motel room in Canton during the incidents. When police went to the room they recovered a number of the stolen items, Schreiner said.

■ A warrant is also being prepared for the arrest of a 20-year-old who apparently also was involved in the breaking and enterings that netted the trio televisions, VCRs, golf clubs, radios and other electronic equipment, said Detective Dave Schreiner.

The juveniles, one of whom was remanded to his parents, the other sent to a youth home, will be petitioned to Wayne County Probate Court, juvenile division.

■ DAMAGE REPORTED

Three youths were apprehended for throwing rocks and damaging construction equipment at Palmer and Canton Center roads after they were seen by a passing motorist, May 9.

An employee of Stante Excavating told police that equipment used at the Glengarry subdivision construction site was damaged, mostly with windows broken out. Damage was estimated at $2,200 in one group of equipment and $3,100 in another group.

Police questioned the boys, who were released to their parents. The case remains open.

■ WEAPON FIRED

A BB gun was confiscated from a youth who apparently was shooting it from a second floor in a house on Morrison, May 13.

An employee of Outback Steakhouse in the Canton Corners shopping center on Ford Road was standing outside the back door of the restaurant when he heard something hitting the building siding above his head. The employee saw someone aiming what he described as a long gun out of a house window.

Police talked to a youth at the house, who later admitted he was shooting the gun, which was taken by police.

According to promotional information offered by Willow Run expansion and tradeport advocates, one of five runways would be extended from 7,000 to 10,500 feet to allow 747 jets loaded with cargo to land and take off. The extended runway would be about one mile from Canton.

Willow Run expansion would allow the airport to serve as an international cargo facility, boasted by automakers, who plan to include the empty Willow Run GM plant.

Two factors — which Canton Township satisfies — affect whether an EIS would be required. They include whether there is significant effect on areas within 3.5 miles of a runway and whether the proposed expansion has generated controversy, Amann said.

"The credit for the controversy goes to the citizens in Canton. Now we are able to establish that it has created a controversy," Amann said.

Residents, who formed an organization called Citizens Concerned about Willow Run Airport Expansion, have been working to gather information about the proposed plans, which they believe affect not only Canton, but the Plymouths, Northvilles, Livonia and Westland.

In his letters, Yack said he hopes an environmental study will rely on new data, not outdated information that accompanies the 1981 Master Plan for Willow Run Airport. A study should also include new or recent actual noise level tests, as well as the mix of aircraft involved in expansion plans.

Approximately $370,000 will be allocated to environmental studies by Wayne County and will not be spent until 1999, according to a county preliminary development schedule and cost document. Yack questioned the small allocation in his letters.

"I certainly hope this does not represent the only appropriation for the study of the environmental issues raised by increased activity (including noise and wetlands). If so, it would suggest the environmental assessment is intended to be a 'hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil' exercise in futility, designed to result in a Finding of No Significant Impact. I sincerely doubt that is the case., but we need to meet and be thoroughly advised of the process."

Amann said that the flight path from an extended runway puts about 26 houses in what is called a 65 DNL — 65 decibels daytime noise level. "There are hundreds of homes slated to be in that range," he added.

Amann admitted that an EIS is "not necessarily a savior for the residents' concerns. But it is a vehicle to make sure residents' concerns are addressed. We have to be vigilant in this process."

$10 for one day. Registration the morning of the shows is $18 for both days and $15 for one day.

For more information about the show or other events associated with it, call Brian Lawrence, 454-8938, Gordon Jackson, 981-9258, or Tony Clish, 595-7429.

America's Most Wanted, which includes primarily Canton classic car owners, is also offering a swap meet during the show during which car owners may bring old car parts to sell, said club member Gordon Jackson.

The club also will offer a model car contest Saturday for anyone who wants to bring out their models. Prizes will be given in three categories: seniors, juniors and adults.

While club members admittedly love their cars, their purpose is to raise money for underprivileged children. Last year's Liberty Fest helped the club donate $1,200 for Special Olympics for Children.

"We hope to double that this year," Jackson said, adding that business sponsors are needed for cash donations or door prizes.

Lawrence and Jackson started the car club about a year ago. "We started this on a whim. We're out there to have fun with the families," Lawrence said. "We have family functions and we try to raise money and collect food for the underprivileged."

The club name has nothing to do with outlaws. But it has everything to do with maintaining itself as a club for American-made cars — nothing foreign. For the Liberty Fest car show, however, owners of foreign cars are invited to participate.

"Buy American," said member Jerry Stodart, who owns a 1971 Oldsmobile convertible. "Try to find a 30-year-old Honda."

A classic car by definition is generally more than 25 years old. But America's Most Wanted also accepts members with hot rods, custom cars, T-buckets, pro-street cars and original or restored cars, including antiques.

Last year at this time, Lawrence and Jackson were asking for new members. Today, membership is closed at about 65 members. "We have a waiting list. We just got too big too fast," Lawrence said.

Club members have cruise nights, family picnics and other functions that involve their families and their cars.

"I love this. In high school I had a 1955 Ford," said member Joe Nardini, who now owns a 1950 Ford. "It took me this long to afford one."

America's Most Wanted is not just a male club. Member Linda Sheldrake plans to bring her 1958 Buick Special to the Liberty Fest show. "The people in the club are the greatest bunch."

Members admit the hobby of collecting and restoring classic cars can be costly. "It really is as expensive as you want to make it," said George Fontana, who has a 1941 Willys. "Some cars cost more than people's houses."

700 Madonna students get degrees

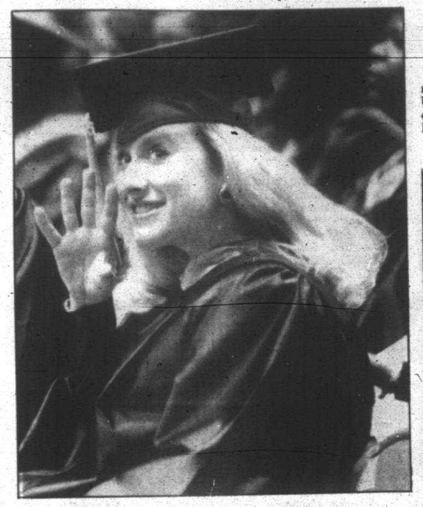

More than 700 students received degrees as Madonna University held commencement ceremonies at the University of Detroit Mercy on May 6.

Graduates heard from three honorary degree recipients: William Phillips, the founder and president of Phillips Service Industries of Livonia; Sister Mary Dennis Glonek, the 17th provincial superior of the Felician Sisters in the Livonia Province since 1988; and Antonio Flores, the director of support services programs for the Michigan Department of Education.

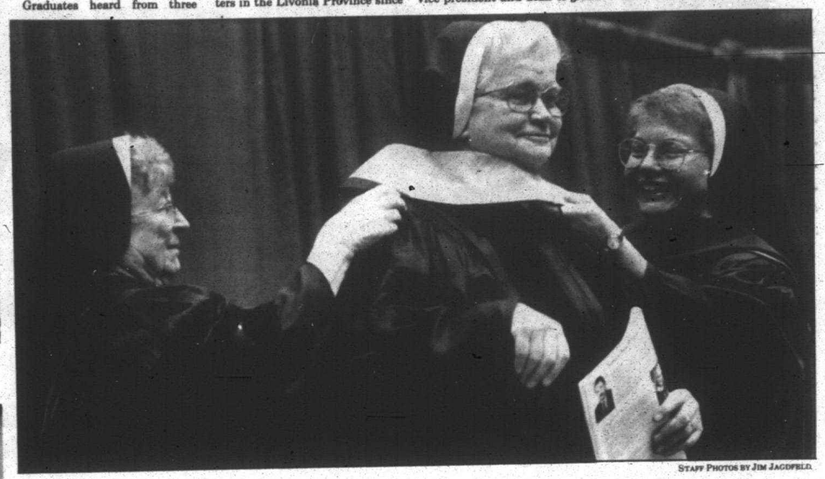

Madonna's associate academic vice president and dean of graduate studies, Ernest Nolan, presided over the ceremonies.

Gerontology professor Anita Herman gave the invocation.

Where families are born... close to home

A Comfortable Atmosphere
Imagine giving birth in a comfortable, home-like atmosphere where you make many of the decisions about your birth experience. And then, think about being able to go home within 24 hours after your baby is born. Well, the New Life Center at Providence Park in Novi offers all that, and it's just minutes from home.

A Unique Approach
From the moment you choose to have your baby with us*, you can feel comfortable knowing you'll receive personal attention from caring nurses, unrestricted visiting hours, prenatal classes, a neonatologist present at your baby's birth, and private visits to your home after baby's birth by a nurse and choreworker. What's more, you will enjoy a comfortable home-like atmosphere where your birth partner can stay overnight. The New Life Center at Providence Park was born from the success of the New Life Center at Providence Hospital, where for generations, thousands of women have had wonderful, nurturing, family-centered birth experiences.

Come See for Yourself
But don't take our word for it. Take it from the women who have already enjoyed a Providence Park New Life Center experience. Here are just some of the things they have to say:

- "We had no idea what to expect, but delivering here was the best experience of our lives. The personal attention we received made this a very positive experience."
- "My experience couldn't have been better. The staff was fabulous! They were so helpful, friendly and comforting. I really felt that they made my experience the best it could be. The room was beautiful, clean and comfortable. Everything was wonderful!"
- "Absolutely wonderful! I was so pleased I would rate it right off the charts!"

Call 1-800-806-BABY for an appointment to see what the New Life Center at Providence Park has to offer expectant families.

*Only pregnant women who have been pre-screened and assessed as low risk by a Providence physician are eligible to deliver at the Providence Park New Life Center.

Lawmakers seek religious help for school code

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Public school teachers would be encouraged to read their classes the religious writings of American presidents if Sen. Doug Carl's bill becomes state law.

"We don't want the Mayflower Compact edited to delete references to God," said Carl, R-Mount Clemens, a conservative Baptist. "The Pilgrims gave thanks to the Indians, not to God, according to some texts I've read."

Two suburban Democratic senators, Gary Peters of Bloomfield Township and Ken DeBeaussaert of New Baltimore, said the bill is unnecessary and should be tabled. Sen. Leon Stille, R-Spring Lake, chair of the Senate Education Committee, also appeared less than enthusiastic when the bill was unveiled May 11.

Carl's bill would pave the way for public school use of the Foundation for Traditional Values' religious books, tapes and parchments.

Carl's effort coincided with news reports that Pat Robertson's Christian Coalition this week will seek federal legislation to protect "religious expression" in public places, use of religious symbols in public schools, school prayer, and invocations at public ceremonies.

All are part of the religious right's "Contract with the American Family," a sequel to House Speaker Newt Gingrich's "Contract with America." TV evangelist Robertson's agenda was outlined in advance in Time magazine and the Chicago Tribune.

Meanwhile, the state Senate Government Operations Committee Wednesday was due to discuss a resolution urging the U.S. Constitution be amended to allow school prayer.

'Censorship' seen

Carl and Sen. Phil Hoffman, R-Horton, are pushing companion measures (Senate Bills 252 and 254) to prohibit "censorship" of the use of historical documents with religious references. Their bills would amend the state School Code, which Gov. John Engler wants to repeal entirely but which Stille's committee says will be just streamlined.

Co-sponsors include Republicans Loren Bennett of Canton, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion and Mike Rogers of Howell.

Cynthia Hughey of the Michigan Jewish Congress said the Carl-Hoffman bills contained "a Trojan horse to permit religious instruction in public schools. The Jewish community is for separation of church and state."

The East Lansing resident said "we've never had a problem with censorship. The kids sing Christmas and Hanukkah songs."

"Your experience is close to mine," said Stille, indicating the Carl-Hoffman bills may be in a 3-2 minority if they ever come to a vote.

Tom White, lobbyist for the Michigan Association of School Boards, called the bills unnecessary. "To my knowledge, school boards aren't censoring now." White and others cited protections in the Michigan Constitution of the freedom to write and speak.

Lists ready

Favoring the bills was James Muffett of the Lansing-based Foundation for Traditional Values. He called the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution "a vehicle for censoring religious references. It's not an insidious plot. It's a product of a secular society and diversity . . . It's a product of textbook publishers not wanting to offend."

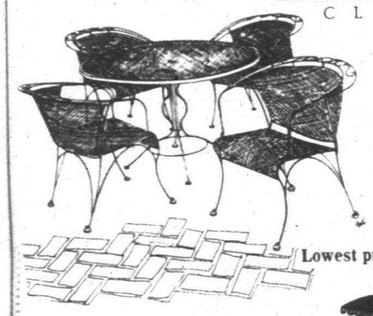

Carl's SB 252 specifically mentions allowing reading and posting of the preamble to the Michigan Constitution (though not the "freedom of worship" section), the Declaration of Independence, the U.S. Constitution, the Mayflower Compact, the national motto, national anthem, Pledge of Allegiance, writings of any president, "organic" historical documents, opinions of Supreme Court justices and the Congressional Record.

Meanwhile, Muffett's Foundation for Traditional Values has circulated a catalog of books and tapes it calls "ideal for teachers, home schoolers, pastors." Among the titles:

- "The Greatest Story Never Told," Muffett's narration of how Christians colonized America in video and audio tape.
- "America's God and Country," an encyclopedia of 2,100 quotations from Founding Fathers, including scriptures read by Columbus and citations that America is a Christian nation.
- "Defending the Declaration," a book showing "how the Bible and Christianity influenced the writing of the Declaration of Independence."
- "In God We Trust," a tour guide showing where the Ten Commandments are engraved in three places in the U.S. Supreme Court building, among others.
- "Thomas Jefferson's Abridgement of the Words of Jesus of Nazareth," the third president's 1804 compendium "for the use of the Indians."
- "A Worthy Company," a book on the religious lives of framers of the U.S. Constitution.
- "Founding Father Quotes," parchments suitable for framing with religious quotations.

Refer to Senate Bills 252 and 254 when writing to your state senator, State Capitol, Lansing 48909.

Democrats say polluter law gutted

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

The state Senate has completed work on three House bills amending the "Polluters Pay" law to encourage reuse of urban industrial sites.

Mihority Democrats and an environmental coalition were steamrolled on mainly party-line votes when they sought to maintain tough cleanup standards.

Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, said the key bill "makes it nearly impossible for the state to hold anyone accountable for contaminating a parcel of property.

"This means the responsibility for paying for the cleanup of the land will be shifted away from the guilty party and put on the shoulders of taxpayers" — a cost shift of $500 million to $1 billion a year, he said.

The vote on final passage was 28 to 7 with three missing. Here is how local senators voted:

YES — Republicans Loren Bennett of Canton, Michael Bouchard of Birmingham, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, Robert Geake of Northville, Mike Rogers of Howell, and John Schwarz of Battle Creek; and Democrat George Hart of Dearborn.

NO — Democrats Peters and Alma Wheeler Smith of Salem.

ABSENT — David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield.

Gov. John Engler, who is expected to sign the measure once the House concurs in amendments, had sought the legislation with the help of urban mayors, who said the old Polluters Pay law (PA 307) was so costly that it discouraged redevelopment of old industrial sites.

But Sen. Chris Dingell, D-Trenton, said the bills did nothing to help urban areas. In a Senate speech in which Peters and Smith concurred, Dingell said: "The bill failed in its fundamental purposes:

- "To remove liability from innocent subsequent takers of land, particularly vacant industrial land. Not quite all of the disincentives for reuse of this land are dealt with. There are no incentives provided for reuse of this land. This bill does nothing to encourage redevelopment of brown field (old city) over green field (rural) sites."
- To curb pollution. "This bill introduces new, complicated problems of proof to hold responsible persons, who actually have done something wrong, to the majority (Republican) party's refusal to consider mild rebuttable presumptions . . ."
- To prevent pollution. "There is no encouragement of release prevention on sites where there ha-

Parkinson Foundation has walkathon Saturday

With the goal of increasing awareness and raising funds for research, the Michigan Parkinson Foundation is staging a walkathon at 11 a.m. Saturday, May 20, at three locations.

An estimated 35,000 men and women in Michigan are afflicted with Parkinson's disease.

Walks will be staged at the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus, the University of Michigan-Flint campus and the Owosso Memorial Health Care Center.

"The purpose of the walk is twofold," said David Nesbitt, executive director, Michigan Parkinson Foundation.

"Those with Parkinson's will demonstrate to others with Parkinson's that they can take control of their lives. The second purpose is to raise funding to assist our new support groups, to train our volunteer support group leaders and to develop further programs to address the needs of those with Parkinson's disease."

Parkinson's disease is a slowly progressive disorder affecting a small region of the brain which governs control of movement. Symptoms can include shaking, rigidity of the muscles and imbalance.

Walkers will complete loops on a marked course and raise pledges. To register for the walk, pledge a donation or request information, call the foundation at (313) 745-2000.

Walking is one of the smartest things people with Parkinson's can do, said George Andrews of Plymouth, a physical therapist whose wife has Parkinson's.

"It's one of the simplest, safest and cheapest ways to exercise. The other aspect of the walk is that we raise money. We need more walks. In all instances, we've raised less than what people have hoped for," he said.

ven't been releases before, or sites where there have been releases."

Senators rejected Smith's amendment to presume liability for operators who used materials that later contaminated the soil. Her amendment would have allowed local governments to apply stricter cleanup standards and required funding for cleanups where no polluter could be held liable.

Her amendment went down 16 to 18, supported by 15 Democrats and one outstate Republican, and opposed by Republicans.

Peters lost with his amendment to presume liability of a person shown by the Department of Natural Resources to have owned or been operating on property when a hazardous material was released. The owner or operator could present evidence to rebut the presumption of liability. "It would have prevented taxpayers from automatically getting stuck with an astronomical cleanup bill," said Peters.

His amendment went down 14 to 19, supported by 13 Democrats and one Republican, opposed by 18 Republicans and one Democrat. All area senators voted with their parties except the absent Honigman.

At the Michigan Environmental Action Council, Carol Misseldine charged the bill "will lower cleanup standards everywhere in the state rather than stimulate the development of currently contaminated land."

Of 3,659 sites cleaned up under the current Polluters Pay law, 90 percent were done with private funds, she said, adding, "No wonder polluters are trying to amend the law. It's working by forcing them to pay for cleanup."

MEAC has 22 member organizations, including the East Michigan Environmental Action Council, Friends of the Rouge, Huron River Watershed Council and League of Women Voters of Michigan.

Cakes, dreams and brownies

I just took brownies out of the oven. The house smells good — warm and chocolatey. I'd rather have baked a cake though, but I didn't have all the right stuff. Oh well, brownies will be fine for after school today.

So — speaking of cake and not having it — did you ever wish you could have your cake and eat it too? I've thought about this. And here's what I've come up with: People who love their work and make a living at it have their cake and eat it, too. Movie stars, big league ball players, a handful of musicians, the Queen of England, a number of bosses, educators. They're passionate about their work. And they get handsomely rewarded. Right?

And then there are the people who make a living but aren't exactly passionate about their work. It's a means to an end, a daily grind, a lot of "putting up with" and "suffering through." For their efforts and sacrifices they're handed a comfortable paycheck, vacation time, benefits, that sort of thing. For them, work is work, passion doesn't figure in.

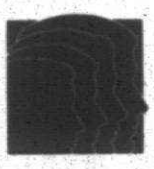

And then there are the dream followers — folks who follow dreams even though money may not be in it. They're passionate about what they do, and their eyes are only on doing a good job. Hard to admire these people, they're so impracti-

Husband, wife share passion for job

■ As teens, Randy and Karen VanLandingham didn't want to follow in their parents' footsteps, but they did. Now, as Salavation Army officers, they are heading up the organization's Plymouth branch.

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

Lts. Randy and Karen VanLandingham's enthusiasm for their job of heading the Plymouth branch of The Salvation Army couldn't be greater.

The spunky couple welcome visitors with open arms. In conversations, they convey a feeling of warmth and kindness. They speak of their upcoming tutoring program so vehemently that their passion rubs off on visitors.

As they approach the first anniversary of their assignment to the area, the VanLandinghams show no signs of budging.

"We're prepared to stay here forever," Randy said of his stay in the Plymouth area. "The community support is one of the greatest things about this area. A lot of places you go to, you sometimes have to build support because the awareness was not there."

Support is something that the couple has gotten, all right. The Salvation Army's 20-30 local volunteers have raised more than $500,000 toward a campaign for an addition to the building at Main Street and Ann Arbor Road to make it handicap accessible.

"We currently have classrooms downstairs where Alcoholics Anonymous, Overeaters Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous meet," Randy said. "Last fall we had a situation where a couple of people called in who were wheelchair-bound — they probably were wrapped up in narcotics through the problems they have — and we couldn't give them the help they needed through NA at the time."

The project needs $100,000 before the first shovel slices into the ground.

"In The Salvation Army, one of the main things that we focus on is integrity," Randy said. "Before we begin a project, we have 100 percent of the funds before we begin so we won't be in debt."

Hard at work: For Salvation Army Lts. Randy and Karen VanLandingham, heading up the Plymouth corps is their first assignment since graduating from the College for Officer Training.

Quite a challenge

Working with the Plymouth Salvation Army has been quite a challenge to the VanLandinghams. This is their first assignment since graduating from the College for Officer Training in Chicago.

"This is kind of a unique area," cal. Impossible to envy them, they don't have any money.

People call me a dream follower because I'm a stay-at-home mom and a writer. "So impractical," they decry. But these are my dreams, my passions. I can't let go.

Being an impractical, passionate dreamer goes way back for me. When I was 8, for instance, I painted a picket fence. Not just any old picket fence, but the one in front of the old Red Flannel Factory in Cedar Springs, Mich. I did it because it needed it.

The old paint was peeling and looked nasty and was a bad reflection on the flagship company of my little town, the town officially known as the Red Flannel Capital of the World. So I dreamed up this project.

I went in and asked the lady who owned the factory if I could paint the picket fence. The whole while I talked, she sat at her sewing machine making a pair of drop-seat long johns. I told her my idea of painting one picket red, the next one white, the next one red, and on like that. Finally, she looked up from her sewing, smiled and said yes.

So I did it. When it was done, it was beautiful and not in the least bit sloppy or yucky looking. At 8 years old, I'd felt passionate about my work and about my town. As for the money part, I was pretty impractical, I didn't get any and that was fine. That wasn't the point anyway.

As I grew older, I became less impractical. Painting picket fences for nothing felt right, but with college on the horizon I had to do something else. So I became a waitress, a carhop at the A&W. I ran orders out to cars, made change on the spot, filled mugs of root beer, used the long-handled pokey thing to stab the napkins and french fries bags blowing from customers' cars, and fought the occasional brush fire caused by passing trains on exceedingly dry summer days.

For 85 cents an hour, I was passionate about my first shot at my permanent work record. If I screwed up there, what the heck would happen when I applied for some future job on down the line?

Some time later, on down the line, I received my college degree (all those 85-cent hours helped see me through). I became a teacher (another dream). I started out as a substitute teacher. And in this, I could follow my dream and be practical.

I made $24 a day. And that was in 1979. And during flu season, I'd get called each day. That meant more than $100 a week. Sure, I had to figure out where the individual schools were in the unfamiliar county I found myself in. And yes, the occasional knife was pulled on me in the hall, and vicious threats were flung my way, and lesson plans were nowhere to be found, but I was a teacher.

I had found passion, dreams, practicality all rolled into one. I had found cake.

Not long after that I became a regular, full-time high school teacher, teaching six different courses in two different departments. Homeroom, lunch room, extracurricular assignments thrown in. I'll never forget the passion I felt as I put my name on the board that very first day. I'll never forget the exhilaration I felt when I signed my name to the contract in August 1980 which read: "yearly compensation $9,155."

Passion and money hand-in-hand, I was following my dream and paying my rent. I was having my cake and eating it, too.

Hey! Look at the time. 3:45. My children just got home from school and Tony's yelling up to me, "Is that cake I smell? Did you make a cake, Mom?"

No, Tony, brownies. It's all I could come up with today.

Salvation Army

Randy said. "We're not an inner-city area, even though we're right next door to some of the darkest inner-city problems. But we have a whole bunch of family problems, and school problems with kids."

To help mend some of these problems, Plymouth's Salvation Army is organizing supervised tutoring sessions with "quality professionals" beginning in the fall. This way children "won't have to be so frustrated about Mom and Dad not being able to help them with the new math," Randy explained.

Aside from the proposed tutoring program, the organization also offers day camps, athletics for all ages, and preschool programs. Traditional services include food, clothing and shelter assistance. In the Plymouth-Canton-Northville area alone, The Salvation Army passes out nearly 100 bags of groceries a week to 30-45 families year-round.

Whenever a disaster strikes, like the Oklahoma City bombing, The Salvation Army mobile canteens bring food, clothing, blankets and medical supplies. The group also provides extended services in major disasters, involving massive cleanup or reconstruction. Locally, The Salvation Army has helped with situations involving fires, explosions, barricaded gunmen, and hazardous-material situations.

'When I got older and we got married, and various other things took place, I realized what God wanted me to do was to be in the service full time . . .'

Karen VanLandingham

Following footsteps

The daughter of Salvation Army officers, Karen had no desire to follow in her father's footsteps. As a teen-ager, Randy aspired to be a rock musician.

"My dad is a United Methodist minister, so I grew up with the Methodist Church. I grew up in my teen years very rebellious, doing things that I wanted to do that went against my parents' wishes," he said. "I did it just out of spite. Then I realized again that the Lord was calling me to a very special ministry and this was the route or avenue that he opened up to us."

Karen went through a similar life-changing experience.

"When I got older and we got married, and various other things took place, I realized what God wanted me to do was to be in the service full time . . . to be an officer," she said. "It was a long time coming."

Joining The Salvation Army was a logical step for the couple. The organization follows the doctrine of the Methodist Church. To become Salvation Army officers, the couple attended the College for Officer Training for two years, intensively studying psychology, crisis management, counseling, social work and religion.

"You have classes plus hands-on training; you put that into practice usually two or three times a week," Karen said. "You go to a Salvation Army facility like this and be involved with what they're doing in the office, or what they're doing in the church."

After graduating from the school last summer, the couple moved to Canton with their three children — Heather, 10, Randy III, 7, and David, 5. After bouncing around the country with her Salvation Army parents, Karen hopes to keep her family firmly planted in this area.

RC offers health counseling

With spring and summer wedding plans underway, the American Red Cross is eager to join in the festivities by offering premarital health counseling sessions so couples can meet state requirements for a marriage license.

Michigan law mandates premarital counseling, so engaged couples learn about sexually transmitted diseases and HIV IDS prior to marriage.

The hour-long session is taught by a Red Cross-certified instructor at service centers throughout the tri-county area. The $12 fee benefits other Red Cross services in southeastern Michigan.

In interaction with others, writer is intense, competitive

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Lorene,

I have read your column for several years, and it has always interested me. Well, I finally got around to writing a sample for your expert analysis. Actually, I write very infrequently and prefer printing. I have developed a printing style which I feel is quick and clearer. Perhaps the early career days in data processing had me become more comfortable with printing. I always reread my writing, and never miss a crossed T or dotted I. After I have been writing for a while, I begin to feel more comfortable with it.

Thank you for your time in providing me with another perspective of myself.

R.M.,
Farmington Hills

This young man furnished me with a page of cursive writing and a brief sample of his neat, well-spaced printing. He mentioned that printing is what he usually does, so I have attempted to consider both styles in my analysis. However, as I have said many times before and want to reiterate, the research on printing is not as extensive as what has been compiled on cursive writing.

In both samples, the pressure is extremely heavy. He has vigorous likes and dislikes and can remember both happy and sad experiences for long periods. This amount of pressure also suggests he may be living with some tension. In interaction with others, he is often intense and competitive.

He is a restless man who requires variety and change in his life. A dull routine would probably drive him bonkers. Currently, he is very busy and may have so many irons in the fire that he is scattering his energies. It seems that he may be trying to escape from someone or something that is causing him to feel threatened.

In the printed sample, his spacing is very good. He needs structure and control in his life and will not be dominated by others. He also wants to be understood, but does not always make it easy for other people to do this. He is self-protective and tends to conceal many things about himself.

Our writer has a subconscious need to achieve. He is goal-directed, determined, dependable, and wants to excel in what he does. He tends to check and recheck to be certain he has handled everything to his set of standards. He does not run from a challenge, but welcomes it.

The rigidity of this handwriting speaks of one who is rather inflexible. Once he has set up his routine, it is difficult for him to revise or change it.

His approach to his work is sophisticated. He wants to be in the limelight and operates in ways that command attention. However, a seeming contradiction is noted in that he has only a minimal need to interrelate with others on a personal level. He appears to be overcompensating to conceal some lack of inner self-esteem. Perhaps his daily life is not measuring up to his expectations.

This is a rather serious man. He has a strong need to be right. His thinking is logical and practical. Rarely does he trust intuition for the answers.

He can become impatient with small details, but realizes their importance and takes care of them. A little resentment surfaces at times as does a tendency to become sensitive to criticism of a personal nature.

Money and what it represents are quite important to our writer. He also appears to have an active interest in the instinctual pleasures of life.

Early in life he appears to have had difficulty in expressing his feelings. Did he feel nobody was listening?

His signature, which is his public representation of himself, is larger than the text of his writing. When this is considered with the rest of his handwriting, it suggests he is giving a bolder account of himself than he can maintain for long. Appearances are important to him and he has worked to create a very impressive looking signature. However, he has overlooked one important detail. The signature is illegible. Does he want to be an enigma to others?

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are helpful. Objective feedback is welcome.

ANNIVERSARIES

Seitz and Oswalt

Oswalt

Seitz

Martin and Joanne Seitz and Arthur and Virginia Oswalt are celebrating their 40th wedding anniversaries . . . together.

Best friends since the mid-1960s, when they met through the Roosevelt School PTA, the Livonia couples are able to do that because they share a common wedding date, April 16, 1955.

The Seitzes — she is the former Joanne DelCampo — have five children — Michael and wife Yvonne of Brighton, Adele McKay and husband Steve of Sterling Heights, John and wife Diane Jones of Fowlerville, Arlene Earhart and husband Steve of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Ann Steckroth and husband Randy of Dearborn. They also have nine grandchildren.

The Oswalts — she is the former Virginia Keller — have three children — Greg and wife Marion of Livonia, Gary and wife Vicki of Southgate and Geoffrey and wife Lisa of Livonia. They also have four grandchildren.

The celebration included two surprises. First, Arlene Earhart came from Florida for an unannounced visit. Then, on April 15, the Oswalt children held a surprise party for their parents who thought they were going to a party for the Seitzes.

Wallace and Amy Juntunen of Livonia celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with a dinner celebration with their family and a color tour of the northern states with Melvin and Carol Juntunen last fall.

The Juntunens exchanged vows on Oct. 15, 1954, in Detroit. She is the former Amy R. Brandenburg.

Twenty-eight-year residents of Livonia, they have four children — Elizabeth Charest, Judith Kling, Alan Juntunen and Douglas Juntunen. They also have six grandchildren.

He worked in marketing survey research with Spectrum Associates and was an executive with Chrysler Corp. before retiring from the automaker five years ago. An avid golfer, his scores include a hole-in-one.

She is active in local politics and is a precinct delegate. She also is working on her master's degree at Wayne State University.

Gilligan

Jim and Marie Gilligan of Garden City gathered with their family to celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary.

The couple exchanged vows on April 16, 1955, at St. Alphosus Church in Dearborn. She is the former Matie Stiff.

Thirty-five-year residents of Garden City, they have four children — LeAnn of Dearborn, Tim of Texas, Michele of Canton and Tom of Garden City. They also have five grandchildren — Brad, Joey, Shannon, Brian and Matthew.

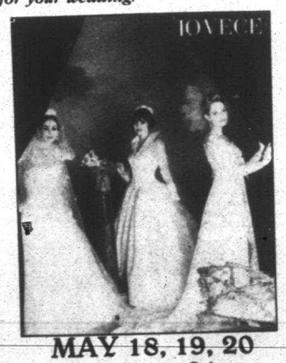

A former softball player in Livonia and Garden City, he is employed by Hegenscheidt Corporation in Troy. A retiree, she enjoys making quilts and playing volleyball.

Church ready to build new sanctuary

A recent groundbreaking ceremony at the First Baptist Church of Canton proved to be an exciting time for Pastor Weldon Spracklen.

More than 600 people attended the service, including Canton Township Supervisor Thomas Yack and his wife, State Sen. Loren Bennett and Township Clerk Terry Bennett, and County Commissioner Bruce Paterson.

The service was to break ground for the church's new sanctuary. The church owns 18 acres at Cherry Hill and Sheldon roads, and is currently meeting in the Family Life Center.

The sanctuary will be constructed in a fan shape, with a seating capacity of approximately 985. The second phase of a building program, it also will have three nurseries, three offices, rest rooms, a choir room and foyer.

The existing Family Life Center contains a full court gymnasium a with stage, a room with racquetball court dimensions, weight room and meeting rooms for its young people, college and career group and the "Beginning Families for Christ" classes.

The third phase will include second chapel, rooms for Sunday School, which also can be used for as overflow at worship services.

'Dirty' job: With the honorary shovels nearby, Rev. Weldon Spracklen addresses the congregation of the First Baptist Church during groundbreaking for its new sanctuary.

The First Baptist Church is the former Calvary Baptist Chuich, which relocated from its locstion in Wayne to the present Canton site in 1988. The church has had only two pastors in its ministering to western Wayne County — Dr. James Carroll from March. 1957 until June 1966 and Spracklen since June 1966.

Spracklen, an aggressive pastor with a vision for winning people to Christ, then helping them to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Word of God, believes that a church should be made up of individuals at whatever level of "Christ like" maturity they have achieved.

"And then the First Baptist Church workers and staff are to help them grow spiritually and become a beautiful 'family of believers,'" he said. "The church today should exemplify the joys of heaven, where all the redeemed in Christ will rejoice forever."

The church is at 44500 Cherry Hill Road at Sheldon Road, Canton. For more information, call (313) 981-6460.

Fox Hills to host Juliette Low outing

Kool 107 radio personalities Lucy Ann Lance and Dean Erskine will be the Celebrity Chairs for the 1995 Juliette Low Golf Open set for Friday, June 9, at Fox Hills Country Club, Plymouth.

The Juliette Low Open, held on the club's Golden Fox Championship Course, raises funds for the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council through golf fees, hole sponsorships and program ads. The event is named for Juliette Low, who founded Girl Scouting in the United States in 1912.

Lance is one of the charter members of the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council Alumnae Society.

"The lessons I learned in Girl Scouting have become a framework for life," she said of her experiences. "Girl Scouting is where I first learned to speak in front of a group."

Lance and Erskine will be at the Open to greet golfers and take part in the festivities along with Patricia Hedges, 1995 Golf Open Committee chairwoman.

Terri Ann Anthony-Ryan, an LPGA pro from Southfield, also will be on hand to offer clinics for golfers at all skill levels. Anthony-Ryan was the first female golf professional in Michigan. She instructs for PGA of America and has served the city of Southfield as head professional for seven years. She also worked at the Western Golf and Country Club and at the Doral in Florida.

Fox Hills is at 8768 N. Territorial Road. For available tee times, golfers should call the council at (313) 971-8800 or (800) 49-SCOUT, Ext. 216.

Prizes for the 1995 Open include four cars for holes-in-one — 1995 Plymouth Neon from Cueter Chrysler Plymouth in Ypsilanti, a 1995 Buick LeSabre from Suburban Pontiac-Cadillac-Buick in Ypsilanti, a 1995 Ford Contour from Blackwell Ford Inc. in Plymouth and a 1995 Chrysler LeBaron convertible from Fox Hills Chrysler Plymouth in Plymouth.

Other prizes include two tickets to the Buick Open, a signed and framed lithograph from Kmart, two daily admission passes to the Ford Senior Players Championship, and two one-day tickets to the First of America Classic.

Prizes will be awarded for longest drive (men's and women's), hole-in-one and closest to the pin. Cost is $500 per foursome, $125 for an individual ticket and $50 for dinner only.

HVGSC serves 14,000 girls and 5,000 adult volunteers in Washtenaw, Livingston, western Wayne, Oakland and Monroe counties. In addition to program fees and product sales, such as Girl Scout cookies, the council relies on fund-raising activities, such as the Juliette Low Golf Open, to help low-income girls participate in Girl Scouting, to maintain the council's three resident camps, and to train troop leaders and other adult volunteers.

Playscape

Volunteers were key to project

For more than a year, Canton volunteers have been raising money to construct the Heritage Hideout playscape, and it's now time for residents to put their muscles into the project.

Work starts June 7 and volunteers and tools are needed to turn a pile of lumber into a playground for children. The structure is located at Canton's Heritage Park behind Canton Township Hall at Sheldon and Cherry Hill roads.

The project is especially in need of trained carpenters. To volunteer to work, call Sally Wright at 397-9820. Also, to loan tools, call Bob Donaldson at 261-8928.

The final construction culminates more than a year of planning, during which volunteers from the Canton Community Playscape started a grass roots campaign to raise the nearly $85,000 needed to build the 14,000-square-foot structure.

The Playscape volunteers did it right. They started with a good project and involved as many people as possible in the fund-raising and the planning. Even children were tapped during a design contest.

The volunteers tapped into the American tradition of a barn raising where neighbors show up to lend a hand on construction day.

Local governments could learn the lesson of getting people involved from the volunteers. If government were to go out a sell its projects as did the playscape volunteers, more could be accomplished.

Here's how the volunteers rallied the Canton community:

■ Work starts June 7, and volunteers and tools are needed to turn a pile of lumber into a playground for children. The structure is located at Canton's Heritage Park behind Canton Township Hall at Sheldon and Cherry Hill roads.

■ Persuaded Blackwell Ford to donate a 1995 Ford Explorer to be raffled off with the proceeds going to the Playscape.

■ Held a raffle for a family membership to Summit on the Park community center.

■ Kroger bucks. You could buy certificates for Kroger dollars. For every 1,000, the playscape received 5 percent.

■ A Tupperware party was held on May 9 with the proceeds going to the playscape.

■ On May 13 a walk-a-thon was held at Heritage Park, with pledges collected for the playscape.

■ Conducted a telephone drive to line up volunteers.

■ Involved children in putting together a time capsule that will be buried at the construction side on Sunday, June 11.

■ Volunteers sought cash and material donations from local businesses for construction.

■ A buy-a-board campaign helped generate money for material.

So, when kids start playing on the structure in June, they will be enjoying the result of volunteer work done by their neighbors. And that will be the reward for the volunteers who worked so long and hard.

Bus system is smart investment

Canton voters won't be going to the polls on Tuesday to vote on the SMART bus millage, but they do have a stake in saving the regional bus system.

SMART is worth saving and voters in nearby communities (Livonia, Redford, Westland and Garden City) are urged to say yes on the one-third-mill property tax proposal.

SMART is the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transporation, the suburban bus system.

While Canton Township opted out of the vote, other suburban Wayne County communities and Macomb County will vote Tuesday on a proposal to raise property taxes by one-third mill to continue the system. Oakland communities will vote on June 6.

Regardlesss of the election results, public transportation is an issue that must be solved on a regional level. Canton is trying to go it alone on transportation, but at some point it must step up to the plate and participate in solving the issue.

Our region needs public transportation to serve the people who work, shop and live here. To reach jobs and educational opportunities in western Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties — where a majority of all new jobs in the state are being created — workers who don't have cars will need rides.

It will take new money to provide good regional public transit service. SMART's $50 million operating budget is coming 14 percent from federal grants, half from the state and the rest from fare boxes and other revenues.

The federal money is expected to dry up in the next few years, and Gov. John Engler has said that SMART will get no more from state government.

Virtually every major metropolitan area in the nation — except metro Detroit — offers better transit service for its citizens, and they have all found a way to pay for it.

In 18 major metropolitan areas, public transportation funding comes from a combination of taxes, such as sales and property taxes, as well as general-fund contributions from city or county governments.

Property taxes levied in the metropolitan areas of Seattle, San Francisco and Minneapolis support the system. Sales taxes support public transportation systems in Dallas, Houston, Atlanta, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Franciso and Seattle.

SMART — under the direction of Deputy County Executive Michael Duggan, who has served as interim general manager for the last few years — has reduced inefficiencies and redesigned routes to better serve area employers and merchants.

A regional transportation system that serves the needs of citizens is long overdue. Despite what critics may say, the proposal on Tuesday's ballot is fair, modest and flexible.

If voters approve the tax, SMART buses will continue to run, and new routes will be added. But if the millage fails, the federal government, which owns the SMART buses, will start taking them away soon.

Building a new system down the road will be a difficult job when all the buses have been moved to other cities.

It's better and certainly less expensive to keep the system we have now and improve it than to start over sometime in the future. Besides, the millage is only for three years, and voters will have another chance to judge SMART when that millage sunsets.

To keep metro Detroit a viable place to work and live, a regional bus system is necessary. Tuesday's millage, if approved, won't be a quick fix for a system that has languished over decades, but it will be a good start.

Airport noise

It would be a real shame for the residents of Canton to sit back, then be forced to deal with the proposed expansion of the Willow Run Airport. Having a runway one mile from Canton seems innocent enough. That's until you consider the amount of increased air traffic that would be taking off and landing at all hours of the day and night.

The situation is bad enough right now to restrict air travel to daylight hours only. These cargo planes are taking off and landing at 2 to 3 a.m. With their flaps down, their engines are full throttle. You can almost see the pilots snicker, thinking, "If I have to be awake at 2:30 a.m., every resident in my path is going to have to be awake also."

Besides hearing the gut wrenching noise, you can feel the roar of the engines vibrate right through the walls of your house. In most instances, it seems that these planes are using my rooftop as a landing pad.

If we are going to have to live with the situation, and it seems likely that we will, we must: Establish firm standards when these planes are going to take off and land; limit the quantity of flights per day, not night; restrict the type of jets to those which have the latest technology in noise reduction; build the runway further away from Canton, at least two miles; and scrap the idea and require them to use Detroit Metro or Pontiac Airport.

Remember Flight 103

The worst terrorist attack on the U.S. in a century" is how the bombing on the government building in Oklahoma was termed.

Does our country have that short of a memory?

It has only been six and a half years since the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103. That was a terrorist attack against the United States. In that one disaster, 270 people died, 189 of them Americans.

Consider this: Take the Oklahoma building, place it five miles in the sky, blow it up, and then watch the people and debris fall upon a small town. Then, let the president remain silent, never attending a memorial service or sending condolences, and the government drag its feet on taking action against the offenders. And in the end, or to the present, tell the families this is old news and there are other things more pressing.

"We will never forget the memory of the firefighter carrying the body of the small child out of the rubble." I remember so well a shepherd carrying the body of a little girl. Chastised because his action "interfered with the investigation," he persisted. Weeping, he said: "I could not bear to have the child lie out in the rain."

I remember. It was said justice must be done. Allowing the seeds of terrorism to be sown will let it happen again. When justice is not swift and severe, evil sneers. And, so the seeds were sown and fertilized.

I remember my husband and the father of my children. Perhaps you forget him. Right now you do remember the firefighter and if you try hard enough, the shepherd. Remember them, for someday, they may carry your loved one from the rubble. Write your president, your senator, your representative. Open your eyes to evil and speak up against it. Believe that God has the power to destroy the evil that seeks to destroy us.

Remember, remember, remember.

Susan G. Bennett, Canton

Frustration

I am a faithful subscriber writing to express my frustration with your newspaper and your apparent lack of concern for local news and opinions of community residents. Since the following is my person experience, I am aware that others in the "Observerland" communities probably have had similar experiences.

I am referring to two incidents. The first concerns an item for the religion calendar. This announcement regarding Meet at City Hall (On the National Day of Prayer, May 4) was hand-delivered to meet the deadline. It was not published on April 27, but after the event took place — on May 4.

When I called the Canton Observer on April 28, I was told it had been cut and was led to believe they would put something in Monday's paper. Not so.

I spoke to the editor and questioned why a letter to the editor I wrote on March 29 was not published but later ones in April were. I was assured it would be published — there was a backlog. So far, nothing.

In your mission statement on the editorial page you explain the difference between your paper and the bigger competition, explaining, in part, as follows: "We regard ourselves as both accurate journalists and as caring citizens of the communities where we work." (Philip Power).

I suggest you reorganize your priorities to allow plenty of room without "backlogging" and "cuts."

POINTS OF VIEW

Schools help teen pregnancy rates turn the corner

Repressive legislation works. Check the numbers from the state Department of Health.

Just before Mother's Day, DOH reported teen pregnancy at its lowest point in 10 years. The pregnancy rate covers live births, abortions and miscarriages per 1,000 females age 15-19.

Vernice Davis-Anthony, outgoing director of DOH, credited a "shift in attitudes and behavior," enhanced by abstinence programs in the school curriculum. Their purposes were to keep young women away from not only sexual activity but also from tobacco, alcohol and drugs.

For reasons never explained, DOH's report neglected a few other factors: Michigan voters' decision in 1988 against funding welfare abortions, a new parental consent law before a girl can get an abortion, and the noises Gov. John Engler's administration has made about requiring under-18 moms to stay with their parents.

It's entirely possible, since unmarried welfare mothers tend to raise more unmarried welfare mothers, that Engler's elimination of the general assistance welfare program also caused older folks to tell younger folks that the end of the free ride was in sight.

Engler was of course savagely attacked by the welfare industry, its clients and the political left. They talked recall.

But the Mother's Day evidence from DOH suggests the harsh changes in law and administrative policy have worked. Abortions per 1,000 females aged 15-19 fell from the 36-37 range in 1987-88 to 22.2 in 1993, the last year shown. Pregnancy rates topped out at 98.5 in 1989, slipping to 88.2 in 1993.

Liberals can't understand it because they don't believe market incentives work. The basic phenomenon is that pulling the plug on free abortions has had a dampening effect on pregnancies in general.

That was the good news. The bad news is scarier.

It comes from The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in American

TIM RICHARD

Life, the weighty 1994 statistical tome by Richard Herenstein and Charles Murray — much maligned by liberals who haven't read it.

America is becoming dumber. Our intelligence quotients are dropping 1-4 points per generation. It's not the fault of schools and the National Education Association. It's the result of "dysgenics" — collective bad breeding.

Not only do higher IQ women have fewer babies, H&M report, but they bear them at older ages. The authors group women in five IQ classes. Class I, very bright, have their first babies at the mean age of 27.2. Class V, very dull, have their firstborns at 19.8. (It's all in Chapter 15.)

When the dullest women have more babies and the span between generations is shorter, they exercise a doubly depressing effect on America's average IQ.

"In pre-modern (Victorian) times, privileged young women . . . married earlier and suffered fewer marital disruptions. The net result was that, on average, they ended up with more surviving children than did unprivileged women," H&M say.

But in modern times, they add, high IQ women (1) go to college instead of marrying in their late teens, (2) opt for jobs, careers and professions, (3) delay marriage and (4) have fewer babies (5) later in life.

It makes one feel guilty about "Take Your Daughter to Work Day."

There's more when we consider illegitimate births, which liberals refer to by the euphemism of "teen pregnancy." Scan the titles of some of H&M's graphs: "52 percent of illegitimate children were born to mothers in the bottom 20 percent of intelligence." "Forty-five percent of low-birth-weight babies had mothers in the bottom 20 percent of intelligence." "Fifty-six percent of all children from the bottom decile (one-10th) in home environment were born to mothers in the bottom 20 percent of intelligence."

And so it goes. Low IQs, young mothers, low birth weights, illegitimacy, welfare, poor school performance, criminal behavior of males, even injuries on the job — all are linked and even related.

Passing Engler-style social legislation is helping a little bit to turn back the tide of social disaster that has started at our toes and today is chest high. But the data suggest America is a long way from avoiding disaster.

Learning consequences

Children killing children over jackets, shoes or a relationship turned sour frightens us all. We blame it on deadbeat fathers, single mothers, violent television and/or movies, permissive parenting, lack of rules/basics at school . . . the list is endless.

I was recently once again reminded of this as I sat with friends discussing possible solutions and ways to fix what ails us.

I guess it's human nature to point the finger and blame whatever, whoever we can. During this dialogue, my friends insisted that we need to "even" the playing field and then our children would not be tempted — or outraged over what they can't have. Now let's examine their theory.

First, they suggested, we make kids dress identical. Now there's no reason for a peer to demand your coat or your shoes when you're all wearing the same clothing, right? But what about your new backpack that mom just bought you? Whoops — better make everyone have the same backpacks. And kids can't wear earrings because that would be a personal, unique item. Let's outlaw all jewelry. So now we have an "even" playing field . . . and all kids are created equal. They wear the same clothing, carry the same backpack, no jewelry allowed; therefore, we have solved the problem, right?

What happens at mealtime? Suppose Johnny doesn't like the sandwich packed for him and wants Tim's lunch, which he views as better? Does anybody get it? This isn't about "things." It's about an "I want it now, violent society."

Does the word consequence still exist in our world? When are we going to stop treating the symptoms and instead go for the cure? When I was very young, prior to entering school, I learned those who do . . . get. I learned there were kids who had more than me, and kids who had less. The kids who had more, materially speaking, usually got everything they wanted but nothing they needed — and that's a whole other column. The greater/lesser theory is a fact of life and the playing field will never change in or out of school.

Let's re-examine the words responsibility, accountability and consequences for our actions — and enforce it.

Kathy Keenmon, Canton

Lost words

The exact words of Decker resident James Nichols will never be known because the tape-recording device failed to operate during his unusual secret Saturday hearing.

Journalists and their lawyers have talked about the need for an open courtroom, and I agree. But I also think the malfunctioning tape recorder in this high-profile case should focus us on a disaster ready to happen in more and more Michigan courtrooms.

In efforts to cut costs, some courts are replacing their skilled court reporters with electronic devices for tape recording or videotaping.

They have failed to learn from the experiences in other states that have embraced these electronic recording technologies. In Honolulu, Hawaii, a grand jury lost nine days of testimony affecting 93 criminal cases when the equipment failed. In Alabama, the circuit judges, tired of taking responsibility for recording proceedings, have called a halt to a pilot project on videotaping and asked for their court reporters back.

The loss of testimony in this case has struck all Americans, but for everyone who goes to court, the matters at hand are of extreme importance. Therefore, I suggest this is a citizens' issue. To ensure the swift and sure justice that we are guaranteed in our Consitution, Americans need to know their testimony will be faithfully and accurately preserved.

Courts have historically depended on court reporters for this, and these professionals continue to bring advancements to the courtroom. They've gone from quill pen to steno machine to computer. The computer-integrated courtroom, which was pioneered in Michigan and is now highlighted in the O.J. Simpson trial, offers instantaneous transcripts and captioning for the hard of hearing.

Pamela Moceri, Birmingham

Sadly, emotion and memory are now houses, strip malls

The Michigan Department of Agriculture, ever vigilant in keeping tabs on things agricultural, released last month a study that indicated Michigan loses about 10 acres of farmland every hour.

In the decade of the 1980s, that loss mounted up to 854,000 acres, around the size of the entire state of Rhode Island. If the trend continues, another 1.8 million acres will be lost by 2012, nearly 20 percent of the total 10.1 million acres now farmed in our state.

Where's it all going? That's easy. Take a drive through Canton Township, now one of the most rapidly growing areas in Michigan, or in what used to be farming country just outside Brighton. It's going to subdivisions and shopping centers, strip malls and chain stores.

It seems sad but true. There is a certain point at which countryside, with development approaching, gradually becomes real estate. Emotion and memory turn into a commodity.

Is it what we want? Probably. After all, the whole point of the suburban revolution which brought people out of the big cities and into greener pastures was in response to what people wanted. Peace. Quiet. Good schools. A sense of country with trees, a garden to plant, a lawn to mow.

Has the promise of suburb somehow turned to the problem of sprawl? I don't know, but sometimes I worry.

One aspect is economic. A conference on "Alternatives to Sprawl" put on last year by the Brookings Institution listened in astonishment when a paper by the Bank of America argued that sprawl in California has created "enormous social, environmental and economic costs, which until now have been hidden, ignored, or quietly borne by our society."

"Businesses," the study went on, "suffer from higher costs, a loss in worker productivity and underutilized investments in older communities."

Here's an example of this point. If the bus system serving the suburbs in Southeastern Michigan (SMART) folds, a whole lot of suburban businesses are going to have to pay a lot more than they are paying now to get workers to their plant gates.

PHILIP POWER

Another cost of sprawl: Downtowns.

I don't mean big city downtowns like Detroit or Lansing. I mean the kinds of downtowns which I retain on my list of things most cherished about Michigan.

Plymouth, whose village green is surrounded by shops. St. John's, seat of Clinton County, whose downtown is punctuated by the county building at one end and the grain elevator at the other. Howell, with its magnificently restored 19th century courthouse, and Birmingham, buzzing with good places to eat and fascinating things in store windows.

All these downtowns, and many others like them, summon up a sense of place, of the roots of history that distinguish one community from another.

What hurts downtowns? Shopping centers, for one. Ask the folks in Birmingham 2000, a group devoted to sprucing up the downtown under the threat of Somerset North, a building just a few miles away.

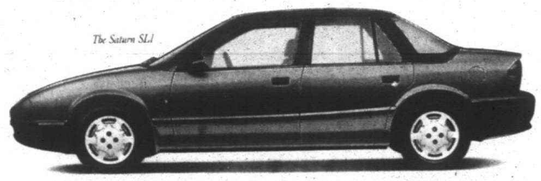

Big chain stores, for another. Ask the Brighton city fathers what happened to the base of locally owned downtown merchants when the Wal-Mart opened up just outside of town.

The anti-suburb theorists argue (as they did in last week's issue of Newsweek, the source for much of this meditation) that suburbs inevitably turn into sprawl.

I think they're wrong, but we'd better be vigilant.

CAPTURE SOME FUN AT THE END OF A STRING

Stunt pilots landing in Grand Haven

Free stunt kite lessons for beginners, and the thrill of seeing a team of sport kites move gracefully through the sky await at the Great Lakes Sport Kite Championships, May 19-21 on the beach at Grand Haven State Park.

"It's a family-fun activity, a spectacle you've never seen before," said Jeff Radtke, a 1975 Livonia Stevenson High School graduate, and one of the event organizers. "Pack your lawn chairs, blanket, and a picnic lunch for one of the most enjoyable beach weekends of the year. On Friday night we'll have a night fly. Lights and glow-in-the-dark sticks will be attached to the kites and kite lines. This spectacular sight is always a favorite with families."

Radtke assured me it's not too late to make plans to attend. "My dad lives in Novi. From Twelve Oaks Mall to the Lake Michigan waterfront it's about a 2½ hour drive," he said. "To get the park, Take I-96 west toward Muskegon. Look for the Highway 104 exit. It also says Ferrysburg, Grand Haven, and Spring Lake. Follow the signs to Grand Haven State Park."

Sponsored by the Mackinaw Kite Co. of Grand Haven, Radke, the owner of Alpine Almond Company, now lives in Holland, and has been involved with the festival for four years.

The event, sponsored by the Mackinaw Kite Company in Grand Haven draws over 40,000 spectators and 100 of the world's top stunt kite pilots, including fliers from all over the United States and Canada.

Spring skies beckon whimsical soarers

BY BARBARA WILSON
STAFF WRITER

They have been used to study electricity, weather conditions, air travel and even space travel. In some cultures they were considered to hold supernatural powers.

Today, kites are experiencing a rebirth — not as a means of scientific study — but as a great hobby that is as inviting to 6-year-olds as it is to 90-year-olds.

The rich, blue skies of spring beckon to the whimsical soarers. They bob about on the winds providing entertainment to those at the other end of the string and to those sitting along the sidelines with eyes fixed to the sky.

"To me watching kites is like watching fireworks or a waterfall," said Gary Maynard, captain of the Windjammers Stunt Kite Team of Detroit. "Sometimes when we're at an event, I just have to stop flying, take a step back and watch. They're beautiful."

The Windjammers find audiences everywhere they go from Belle Isle to a field at Ford World Headquarters where they practice for events like the Howell Hot Air Balloon Festival. Maynard is always willing to help out kite-flying "wannabes" and offer advice.

"We are asked to events where they actually pay us," he said. "If someone would have told me that I could be paid for flying a kit, I would have told them to go fly a kite."

Hobby stores and specialty shops like Kites & Fun Things in Plymouth always experience a spike in kite business this time of year as people get bit by the outdoor bug. Parents with fond memories of flying kites and want to pass that along to their own kids.

"We have our avid flyers who come in year-round, but at this time of year we see more beginners," said Marieanne Trennepohl, who owns Kites & Fun Things with her husband, Jon.

Jon was turned on to stunt kites a friend, according to Marieanne. A few months later, they went into business. Jon later became interested in designing kites and now they operate Sky Burner Kites, a company that manufactures and sells kites around the globe.

While folks like the Trennepohls and Maynard spend hundreds of dollars on their kites, they agree there is plenty of opportunity for quality soaring experiences without a major investment.

They also agree that a dime-store diamond shaped kite is probably not the best investment of time and energy.

"The deltas (triangular with a keel) are the easiest to fly," Marieanne said. A delta kite can cost between $15 and $100 depending upon specifications and size. Nylon is more durable than mylar, paper or plastic.

A single-line delta kite is easiest to fly, but a two-line kite will offer some maneuverability and allow you to do stunts. Young children are better off with a single-line to start as less coordination is required, Maynard said.

The old-fashioned box kite with wings added to the sides is also a good choice for beginners, according to Marieanne. Parafoils make great gifts for hikers, bikers or travelers. They are fairly easy to fly and are very portable as they have no sticks or frame. The fabric is shaped to work like an air foil.

As leisure flyers are transformed into addicted flyers, the price of the kites soars. Some of the kites made by the Trennepohls and others have frames made of costly graphite and can costs hundreds of dollars.

Where you can get a flying start

By Barbara Wilson
Staff Writer

Once the best kite is selected, in your favorite colors of course, the next step is to find a spot to fly.

Gary Maynard, captain of the Windjammers Stunt Kite Team, recommends a field, free of utility lines and trees, that is at least 300-by-300 feet. He cautions that kites not be flown near airports.

Belle Isle in Detroit is a favorite spot for flyers. Kites & Fun Things of Plymouth hosts kite flys open to the public every Wednesday 5-7 p.m. at Schoolcraft College's north and south fields, off Haggerty between 6 and 7 Mile Roads, Livonia. Other favorite spots are:

- Heritage Park, Proctor and Canton Center Road, Canton Township
- Maybury State Park, Eight Mile, one miles west of Beck, Northville Township.

These are also great places for spectators.

The old-fashioned method of running to get a kite aloft is not necessary, unless you want to wear the kids out, Maynard said.

Instead, he suggests that winds be at 5 to 10 mph for beginners and that you stand with the wind at your back.

"Let out about 100 feet of line and have some throw the kite into the air as you walk backwards a few steps," he said. "Keep walking backwards until the kite is in the air and then let out more line."

Once your kite is aloft, hang on and have fun.

Dick Sanders, 51, of Livonia, used to build old-fashioned kites as a kid and now he has a houseful of stunt kites and fighter kites. He was bit by the kite bug four years ago when traveling home from Mackinaw City. He saw some men flying stunt kites and stopped to watch. The retired Plymouth-Canton art teacher was hooked and now he competes in all sorts of events and has quite a collection of kites.

"I really enjoy it. I had a quadruple bypass 11 years ago and this is an activity that I can do," he said. "My blood pressure has been way down since I started flying and feels great."

Sanders is hoping to work on a new event which involves choreographing kite-flying to music.

Kite-flying is enjoyed by many retirees as an outdoor physical activity that can be adjusted to adapt to various fitness levels. For that same reason, it is enjoyed by people of all ages.

Maynard's son started flying single-line kites before his first birthday, and moved into stunt flying when he was three, but he was influenced by his father.

Marieanne recommends introducing children to kites at an early age, but allowing them to fly only when they've reached the age of six or so.

"Kites can have a lot of pull and can be dangerous," she said. "Too many times I've heard parents tell their children not to let go, but they should let go if they feel in danger. Kids can be dragged across streets or into other bad situations, so they should know when to let go."

With younger kids, Marieanne suggests even staking the line down, so they feel they can let go without losing their kite.

Winds of 5 to 10 mph are best for beginners, she added, as they aren't going to pull you off balance.

It's also important that kite-flyers stay away from utility lines. Not only can it be dangerous to become entangled in the lines, but flyers are also charged for any damaged done.

Spring is the best time around here for kite-flying as the winds are decent. Marieanne suggests that as it gets closer to summer, the mornings are best for flying. Ultralight kites can fly with virtually no wind, but they are more expensive and more difficult to fly.

For vacationers, conditions over water are great for flying, especially the parafoils which won't be damaged if they fall in the water. For this reason, Marieanne says kites have become popular wedding gifts for second-time marriages or older couples who might be honeymooning at a beach resort.

to help them," he said.

Sport kites have two lines which allow the pilot to steer their kites through the sky. Pilots compete individually or in teams and fly their kites "Blue Angel" style. Ballet events feature flight patterns choreographed to music.

Manufacturer representatives will demonstrate new kites and offer free hands-on workshops.

"I would be thrilled to see some of the people I grew up with in Livonia," said Radtke. "Everyone used to say I threw good parties. This festival is a great party. I hope to see some of you there."

New revue sure to outlive O.J. trial

By Bob Sadler
Special Writer

Just because Second City — Detroit's production is entitled "Ito Phone Home," it doesn't mean that O.J. jokes dominate.

"Ito Phone Home," the troupe's fourth review, has the catchiest title, edging out "Kevorkian Unplugged," their second revue.

The seven member ensemble has undergone some changes. Tim Pryor of Farmington Hills, and Jerry C. Minor of Fenton, have moved on to other things. Pryor paying more attention to his family and other life in the ad business, and Minor to work on a one-man stage show.

Joining the cast are longtime Detroit stand-up Rico Bruce Wade, previously a member of the touring company, and mysterious Grant Krause of Detroit, whose only other credits include Wayne State University's theater program, and a stint as a bouncer at Second City — Detroit.

"Ito Phone Home" opens with a sketch ripped from the Simpson case. Nancy Hayden as Marcia Clark, and Chris Smith, as Johnnie Cochran, review potential jurors who each, in their own way, are doing their best to be dismissed. The only other reference to the trial of the century was this wisecrack uttered by Smith in a later sketch: "If an ex-football player was going to go crazy and kill his wife, why couldn't it have been Frank Gifford?"

An appealing element to humor Second City-style is the way quick-hitting vignettes are used as breaks between longer sketches. Some of the evening's heartiest laughs come from these short, sweet morsels.

Andrew Newberg of Rochester, and Jackie Purtan of West Bloomfield, joined Smith and Hayden for a well-acted piece chronicling what seemed to be a rollercoaster ride — until the pilot announces they have arrived safely at Metro.

Musical numbers are sprinkled throughout to maintain pace, and close things on a high note. "Ito Phone Home" gives the Motor City new toe-tappers like "I Think I'm Gonna Die Today," in which Newberg, Wade and Krause play cows about to become hamburger, "I'm in Love with a Convict," and "Disneyland Detroit," the show's grand finale.

Christopher Lark

Funny scene: Nancy Hayden and Rico Bruce Wade act up in Second City — Detroit's "Ito Phone Home."

Overall, the verdict on this show is fun. A few of the sketches don't quite hit on all cylinders at this point, but in time, those bugs can be worked out — or better still, new sketches will take their place.

The only question remaining is whether the Simpson trial will outlast the run of "Ito Phone Home."

Reeves set to rock Mercy High School

By Keely Wygonik
Staff Writer

Martha Reeves, who was recently inducted to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame for her contributions to Motown, including "Dancing in the Streets," now has a scholarship to her name.

Reeves will be performing 2 p.m. Sunday, May 21 at Mercy High School, 29300 West 11 Mile Road, Farmington Hills, to help raise money for the newly established "Martha Reeves Scholarship Fund for tuition assistance, and instrumental music." All concert proceeds will go to the fund.

Tickets are $10 general seating, $20 reserved seating, $50 patron. Those who purchase $50 patron tickets will get the best seats in the house. They'll also be invited to a champagne and appetizer afterglow where they can meet Reeves and the other stars of the show.

Reeves will be performing at Mercy High School with her sisters, the Vandellas.

Martha Reeves

Also on the program are the Mercyaires, the Honorable Myron H. Wahls and his jazz trio, and "Dr. Beans" Bowles who will direct the 15-piece "Big Band" New Greystone Jazz Orchestra.

Martha and the Vandellas will be performing in the second half of the program. The grand finale, of course, will be her rock and roll classic, "Dancing in the Streets."

LET'S GO! DINING

Fat Willy's doesn't skimp

By Renee Skoglund
Special Writer

From its plum-colored walls and chandeliers with dangling silverware to its snappy menu, Fat Willy's, Livonia's newest restaurant-bar, has personality.

"It's a place to let loose, have fun and fill up," said manager Lisa Williams.

Filling up at Fat Willy's isn't difficult. Its menu reads like a declaration of war against low-fat. Items like the Butt Buster Burger, Mex-Tex Gut Suck and Bulk Hogan are bound to keep local health clubs in business for a long time.

"So many restaurants are going low-cal or new cuisine," Williams said. "This is the complete other concept. We're not skimpy on the portions. Everything is big. We're doing more with the dinners."

Besides mouth-watering items like barbecued ribs sauced up with Fat Willy's own and a butter-sauteed chopped sirloin, there are daily entree specials. Jim Pearson, one of five owners (who also owns several Country Skillets), was cooking up miniature meatloaves and a shrimp and pasta dish the night I dropped by.

So far, a lot of calorie-unconscious customers have walked through Fat Willy's doors. According to Williams, after only the fourth week of operation, business has been "overwhelming." And just who are these people who have left their diet books at home?

"It's been anything from the 77-year-old couple who thought they would have to leave because the music might be too loud, but stayed all evening to young couples," Williams said. "We have the suits and the hardhats side by side."

Success probably has as much to do with mood as it has with menu. "That's why I was brought in," said Williams, who worked as a part-time bartender for 18 years. "I'm kind of a meet-and-greet person, make people happy."

Fat Willy's is more than a sports bar. Sure, there are the proverbial pool, darts, pinball and TVs, but Fat Willy's is not just a "guy" kind of place. "The women are just as important as the men in this business," Williams said. "There are fewer and fewer places that allow men to come in with their wives. We have no Wonderbras, no G-strings. I want my female customers to feel comfortable."

Florence and Chuck Dickey, both 72 and Livonia residents for 35 years, were first-time customers. "Will this help us reduce our taxes?" quipped Chuck when asked to comment on his hamburger. "They are really delicious," Florence said. "I really mean it. I'm not a hamburger person, but I'm really enjoying this."

"The Molson Ice is excellent," said Chuck, getting right to the point. "The service has been very good," Florence added. "The girls have all been pleasant."

Florence, who had been tempted to order the "Stick to your Bar-B-Que Ribs," said they would be back. Chuck agreed. "Only when our diet will let us," he said. "We'll probably bring a few people here."

Williams and Fat Willy's five owners (none of whom is especially fat or named Willy) have lots of plans to keep their customers coming back. There'll be weekly theme parties with discounts on the featured drink specials and free valet parking on weekends. They'll also accommodate private parties.

Fat Willy's claims the difference between fitness and fatness in only one little letter. It also serves a Tex-Mex burger called "Hey, Eat This." With such an attitude, it's bound to be a success."

Grant exudes charm in eccentric 'Englishman'

By JOHN MONAGHAN

It isn't exactly a mole hill, but according to the precise measurement of a pair of English map makers, it's also 16 feet short of a mountain.

The Welsh residents of Pfynoon Garw take the news hard. For years, they have laid claim as the only Welsh village to have a mountain. Besides, it's wartime and what kind of homecoming will the boys have to find their mountain reduced to a hill?

"The Englishman Who Went Up a Hill but Came Down a Mountain," currently enjoying wide release, is one of the year's most charming films. While some might consider it a one-joke affair, it bubbles over with eccentric characters and subtle English humor.

Hugh Grant plays the younger of two cartographers, a slightly stuffy Englishman released from military service (it's 1917, toward the end of World War I) for shell shock. He's not all that disappointed when their car mysteriously stalls and passenger train schedules can't accommodate them.

The villagers' plan, you see, is to haul dirt up to the top of the hill, raising it to the required height. They'll stop just short of murder to make sure they get the job done.

The project forms an unusual alliance between Reverand Jones (Kenneth Griffith) and the town stud/barkeep Morgan the Goat (Colm Meaney). When it becomes necessary to work on the sabbath, the clergyman reluctantly agrees, as long as Morgan doesn't sell beer.

Much of the comedy revolves around the stuffiness of the Englishmen and the earthiness of the villagers. It's far from an original concept, first pioneered in countless Ealing Studio comedies in the '40s and '50s and more recently in the Scottish-made "Local Hero."

This one has a certain freshness, thanks in part to Grant's performance. He hits the right notes, though I'm starting to tire of his politely nervous act — the stammering and pushing back of his hair — that he does in every film.

Meaney, still best-known to the masses for his work on TV's current "Star Trek" series, again proves himself a likable, robust character actor. One of the funniest gags comes early, when it's revealed that all of the infants in the church congregation have Morgan's red hair.

Other memorable characters inhabit Pfynnon Garw. There are a pair of addled, elderly twins ("not too dotty not to know we're dotty") and a young woman (Sara Fitzgerald playing opposite Grant for a third time in as many years) who again stalls the young map maker by seducing him.

Written and directed by Christopher Monger, "Englishman" celebrates the oral tradition, as its story gets passed down from grandfather to grandson. Though everyone's tongue is firmly in cheek, the legend of the Welsh mountain is just crazy enough to be true.

To leave a message for John Monaghan, dial 953-2047, mailbox number 1866, on a touch-tone phone, fax him a note at 591-7279, or write him in care of Entertainment, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

■ DETROIT FILM THEATRE
Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward, Detroit. Call (313) 833-2323 for information. ($5; $4 students)

"Amateur" (USA-1995). 7, 9:30 p.m. May 19-20; 4, 7 p.m. May 21. The latest from low-key director Hal Hartley has a cast of characters including an ex-nun who writes exotic stories, an amnesiac, and a porn film director on the run.

"Temptation of a Monk" (Hong Kong-1993). 7 p.m. May 22. Filmed in China, this one is set in the Tang Dynasty of 626 A.D. as a warrior disguised as a monk takes refuge in a Buddhist temple.

■ MAGIC BAG THEATRE
22918 Woodward, Ferndale. Call (810) 544-3030 for information. ($4)

"Clerks" (USA-1994). 9 p.m. May 23. Kevin Smith's debut feature, made on a shoestring in black and white, charts a day in the life of New Jersey convenience store clerks. The jokes are crude, the performances and camera-work sometimes amateurish, but the result is cutting edge comedy.

■ MAIN ART THEATRE
118 N. Main Street at 11 Mile, Royal Oak. Films play through at least Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 542-0180 for information and showtimes. ($6.50; $4 students and matinee; $3 twilight)

"The Sum of Us" (Australia-1995). When a son comes out of his closet to his father, dad not only accepts the news, but helps him get dates. This gay-friendly comedy stars familiar Australian actors Jack Thompson and Russell Crowe.

"Bar Girls" (USA-1995). A seriocomic melodrama about the lifestyles of eight lesbians who frequent the same neighborhood bar.

"Muriel's Wedding" (Australia-1995). In this hit comedy from Australia, a young woman dreams of marriage but can't seem to get her life together.

"The Englishman Who Went Up a Hill but Came Down a Mountain" (Britain-1995). Hugh Grant stars in this new comedy about a pair of mapmakers who find they're no match for the people of a small town who will stop at nothing to ensure that their hill is declared a mountain.

■ MAPLE THEATRE
4135 W. Maple, Bloomfield. All titles play through at least Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 855-9090 for information. ($5.75; $3.75 students and matinee; $2.95 twilight)

"Tom and Viv" (Britain-1994). Miranda Richardson's Oscar-nominated performance finally hits the big screen. She plays Vivienne Haight-Wood, whose relationship with American writer T.S. Eliot (Willem Dafoe) was one of the century's great literary love affairs.

"Priest" (Britain-1995). In this controversial new film, a young priest questions the church's rules of celibacy and sanctity of confession. What starts as an authentic portrait of the modern priesthood quickly turns into a manipulative and one-dimensional plea for tolerance and understanding.

"Funny Bones" (Ireland-1995). From the director of "Hear My Song," the story of two separated half-brothers, both comedians, who only discover each other in adulthood. Jerry Lewis co-stars.

■ STATE THEATRE
2115 Woodward, Detroit. Call (313) 961-5450 for information. ($1)

"Killing Zoe" (USA-1994). 9 p.m. May 22. The debut feature from Roger Avary (he shared Oscar credit with Quentin Tarantino on "Pulp Fiction") is about another heist gone way wrong. This European-style mix of dark comedy and violence has style to spare and a great lead performance by Eric Stoltz.

Missing Nirvana was pretty dumb

Everytime I see Nirvana's "Heart-Shaped Box" video I feel sick to my stomach. When Kurt Cobain rocks on the tip of his chair, sings "Hey. Wait. I've got a new complaint" and his bright blue-colorized eyes stare at me I get this sinking feeling.

Maybe it's because I can relate to a lot of his lyrics. Maybe it's because I can relate to depression and suicide.

No, I think it's a little more selfish than that. I never got around to seeing Nirvana play live.

Sure, I had plenty of opportunities to do so. When Nirvana played the Blind Pig, I could have gotten tickets, but I was living in Clinton Township and I really didn't feel like making that long drive to Ann Arbor.

They came back a few years later to perform at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit. "Neverinind" had just taken off. My friend's brother talked endlessly about going to see the show. I figured I could make up for missing Nirvana, in my mind, by interviewing the band. So, I sat down in my parents' den and called Geffen. Their response to the interview request was, "Everyone wants to."

Thinking I probably didn't have a chance, I put the interview — and going to the show — in the back of my mind. I never called back. Maybe I did have a chance.

When Nirvana booked a show at the State Fair Coliseum after "In Utero" was released, I intended on going. We had tickets, but while my friend and I talked about the show, others told me about the poor sound quality at the coliseum. I guess acoustics aren't a top priority when you're designing a building to show farm animals.

A bad choice

Up until about an hour before the show, we planned on going. Then we got the chance to meet a hilariously cheesy metal star, who shall remain nameless, at The Ritz. We couldn't pass it up, but we could pass up Nirvana. After all, they were going to be back for Lollapalooza, and the sound would be better at Lollapalooza, our seats would be better, blah, blah, blah.

So off we went to The Ritz, where we were given backstage passes decorated with a drawing of a semi-topless woman. (How embarrassing.) We shook hands with this one-time mega-star, stuck around for a little while then went to the bar. Did we regret skipping Nirvana? Maybe a little, but the thoughts were fleeting. All my excuses kept running through my head as if to justify my decision to blow off yet another Nirvana show.

A couple friends of mine called me the next day and told me how great the show and the sound was. People are still telling me how great Nirvana's show was.

When Cobain killed himself in April 1994, I thought it was awful that he was so miserable that he took his own life. As the shock and sadness subsided, I clicked back into "selfish mode" and I scurried around my house, looking for all the Nirvana memorabilia I could. I also began kicking myself for missing Nirvana.

Easing the guilt

A few weeks ago, I went to the Mike Watt/Foo Fighters/Hovercraft show at St. Andrew's Hall. Sure, I wanted to see Pearl Jam's Eddie Vedder play with Hovercraft and Watt. But I also felt that if I saw ex-Nirvana drummer Dave Grohl with his new band Foo Fighters, some of the guilt about not seeing Nirvana would ease up.

I thought that when Grohl hit the stage as Foo Fighters' singer/guitarist, I would feel like a weight had been lifted. All I felt was more guilt about blowing off Nirvana. Grohl's vocal style resembled Cobain's, so I closed my eyes and tried to visualize a Nirvana show. I found it works better when you're hearing Nirvana songs.

As if to torture me even more, Grohl came back on stage — this time to play drums for Watt. As he started pounding away, I felt chills. This was the closest I would ever get to seeing Nirvana.

The next few days all I could think about was Nirvana. I re-read a book I have about Nirvana. I re-played in my mind the time I met Courtney Love at Pine Knob. I constantly flipped on MTV hoping to see a glimpse of "Nirvana Unplugged," one of their videos, or really anything about the band.

Last week I saw the "Heart-Shaped Box" video. I'm not sure why that video from "In Utero" stirs up all these feelings. A line in the song four tracks later more appropriately sums up my whole Nirvana experience, or lack thereof.

"I think I'm dumb."

Bad Brains: Reuniting feels good

■ The seminal rastafarian hardcore band Bad Brains needed a little breather to "find" themselves. After a 5½-year break, they realized that a reunion was in the cards.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Reunited: The newly reunited Bad Brains, featuring drummer Earl Hudson (from left), vocalist HR, bassist Darryl Jenifer and guitarist Dr. Know, opens for the Beastie Boys at Cobo Arena Thursday, May 18.

It's too bad that The Orb is calling their tour the "Happy Happy Joy Joy Tour." It would be the perfect name for Bad Brains' latest outing.

Happiness oozes from the Bad Brains camp now that the original lineup of vocalist HR (Human Rights), guitarist Dr. Know, bassist Darryl Jenifer and drummer Earl Hudson has realigned.

"It's all good, you know? It's good; It's good; it's good," said Dr. Know.

Musicians like Rage Against the Machine, Belly and Porno For Pyros' Perry Farrell are thrilled about it, too. Techno maven Moby recently told "Details" magazine, "Bad Brains are far and away the best hardcore punk band ever."

The now-defunct rock band Living Colour called Bad Brains their mentors. The Beastie Boys' Adam Yauch, known to fans as "MCA," thinks it's an honor to have the Rastafarian hard rockers open for them during their spring tour, which hits Cobo Arena for a soldout show Thursday, May 18.

"Bad Brains influenced me more than any other band in the world, basically, one of the most powerful, innovative bands ever," he was reported as saying.

This reputation was tagged on Washington, D.C.'s Bad Brains soon after the band formed in the early 1980s. Their furious blend of hardcore, rock, funk and reggae sent rumblings throughout the music industry.

"We knew people would take notice, but I have to admit I underestimated the effect it would have," Dr. Know said. "We grew up in D.C., and black music was always a part of the environment there. Bob Marley, Earth Wind and Fire, Stevie Wonder and George Clinton were some of the first things we all listened to."

After nearly seven years with Bad Brains, HR and Hudson split to pursue solo projects. Dr. Know and Jenifer reCruited new members and stuck it out. The revamped version of Bad Brains released a handful of albums on Epic until the label dropped them. The bad news couldn't have come at a better time. Fate already had a hand in reuniting the original band.

"It wasn't planned. Actually, we were getting ready to call HR and he was getting ready to call us," Dr. Know said. "We thought, 'Let's do this.'"

Echoing the band's strong political stance, Jenifer came up with a more philosophical explanation for the reunion: "Ultimately, being in Bad Brains is like being a part of a lifelong mission that stops and starts, depending on the needs of the world. We did not come together out of a financial need or a desire for attention. The current state of the world is what inspired us to reconnect. It was time for the mission to begin again."

Along with the newly reunited Bad Brains comes a new outlook, a new record ("God of Love") and a new label (Madonna's Maverick Records). "God of Love" carries the same enthusiasm as Bad Brains' earlier works like "Rock for Light." Bad Brains is one of those bands that truly can not be categorized and the album's schizophrenic personality is proof of that. Reggae, hardcore, rock — it's all in there.

"We've never operated under any preconceived notions like 'we need two hardcore songs, three reggae songs, one metal. What we do is just vibe it; take a style and put our own signature on it."

In recording "God of Love," they recruited the producer of "Rock for Light" — ex-Cars vocalist Ric Ocasek who also turned the knobs for Weezer. They looked to a familiar face for "God of Love" but Bad Brains abandoned their past practice of recording albums.

"Usually, most of our records, before this, we spent like four days at the most doing the whole thing," Dr. Know said. "This one took a week and a half to record."

Their hypercharged live shows have always been Bad Brains' strong suit. Mosh pits abounded long before it was trendy and fans of the old Bad Brains can expect that at Cobo this week.

"Same as it ever was," Dr. Know said of the reunited band's shows. "The shows have been going really well. There's a lot of good vibes and good energy. Everybody's really having a good time and they're really appreciative."

"Everybody walks away smiling."

Botfly breaks through music categories

BY TODD WICKS
SPECIAL WRITER

On the road: East Lansing's Botfly plays The Ritz in Roseville Saturday, May 20, with Sons of Elvis and Vudu Hippies.

Even over the telephone, Botfly bassist Jimmy Bauer's dismay is perceptible with the interview's opening question: "So, you guys are pretty much funk, right?"

"Uh, no," he answers flatly. "I don't think any funk band would call us funk. We have a lot of heavy grooves, but there are only a few songs I really slap and pop on. A lot of people just relate grooves to funk.

"Everybody has these little categories to put music in. We're trying to break throughout all that. It's all music."

But those familiar with Botfly can hardly be blamed for associating the popular East Lansing band with funk. Only months ago, anyone wandering the streets of the college town on a Friday or Saturday night was likely to hear an earthy, pulsing groove-pumping from one house party or another, an unmistakable sound that always turned out to be the steadily rising Botfly.

These days, the four-man group, which includes the charismatic, denim overalls-clad Craig Griffith on vocals and harmonica-guitarist Mike Fehrenbach and drummer Quade Finnicum, is more apt to be heard blasting their sweaty brand of party music out of local clubs, and now, out of record stores.

Botfly's first release, a self-titled collection of 10 originals, hit stores March 17. While the band hopes it will open even more doors to their unique sound, Bauer feels the best path to success is the longer one.

"We really just want to travel around the country, hopefully sell some CDs along the way, and slowly have the word spread," he said. "We're planning on taking the long road, where you get a following that stays with you.

"A lot of good bands play for seven or eight years before they have a steady following or become big. It's the long way, but I think it's the better way, because the fans seem to stick with you. They don't come and go."

Botfly's take-it-slow approach extends to other areas as well. For instance, mention of the exalted rock'n'roll dream of the big record deal hardly excites Bauer.

"We haven't really pushed for any label interest," he said calmly. "We're not in a hurry to do anything. I'd rather get tighter as a band and expand on our music more before a serious label offer comes along."

But Bauer isn't crazy.

"I mean, if one came along, we wouldn't turn it down," he said, "but we're not pushing it yet."

Although officially in existence only two years, the size of Botfly's following is remarkable, second in East Lansing only to The Verve Pipe.

The band's beginnings were slightly rockier, routinely halted by that stereotypical problem band member, the drummer.

"Me and Griff met at a (Grateful) Dead show and found out that we both jammied and had the same ideas about what kind of music we wanted to do," Bauer said. "Then Mike came into the picture, but we couldn't find a drummer for a long while. We ended up starting with a drum machine and saying, 'Well, we'll start writing songs and find a drummer later.'"

The great drummer search became a major stumbling block.

"We were stalled for a long time," he said. "Really, we were standing still, because we had to learn the same songs over and over with each new drummer. Finally, we found Quade, who made it come together."

With Finnicum as the final ingredient in their eclectic sonic stew, band productivity has definitely increased.

Bauer is fuzzy about the details of the recording process, but his thoughts on the album are clear: "I'm really happy with it. There's something on it for everyone. If you're into heavy stuff, we play some of that. If you like funky stuff, we play some of that."

But he's right. Botfly is remarkably eclectic, and confident, for such a young band. That's why Rich Deciantis from She's So Huge probably spoke for a lot of area bands a few weeks ago when he said admiringly, "Botfly is going to pass the rest of us by."

Botfly plays Saturday, May 20, at The Ritz, 17580 Frazho, Roseville, with Sons of Elvis and Vudu Hippies. For more information, call (810) 778-6404.

Restaurant Association honors HFCC student

Outstanding student: J.R. Lorentz of Garden City, a student in Henry Ford Community College's Hospitality Studies Program, will be honored on May 23.

Henry Ford Community College Hospitality Studies Program student J.R. Lorentz, of Garden City, will be honored at the National Restaurant Association's annual Salute to Excellence 1995 "Follow Your Dreams" student forum and awards banquet in Chicago on May 23.

Lorentz will be honored by the National Restaurant Association Educational Foundation for his academic and professional achievements. Outstanding hospitality studies students from around the country are selected by their instructors to be honored at the forum, according to Reid Cook, HFCC Hospitality Studies Program instructor.

"The faculty and staff in HFCC's Hospitality Studies Program elect students who not only have strong academic skills, but who also have demonstrated outstanding leadership qualities," Cook said.

The purpose of the forum is to encourage students to achieve their goals and excel in the search for educational and professional excellence, Cook explained.

Lorentz, who works in HFCC's Gate Room Restaurant, will graduate in May with an associate degree in Hotel and Restaurant Management. He has won several awards for ice carvings he has created as a member of HFCC's Ice and Snow Carving Club. Lorentz was one of two HFCC students to compete in the National Collegiate Ice Carving Championship, sponsored by the Rhode Island American culinary Federation and the National Ice Carving Association. HFCC placed third in the competition.

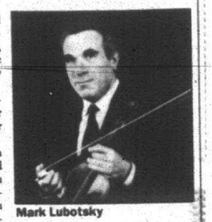

Lorentz helped lead the Ice and Snow Carving Club to a first-place victory in the college team division at this year's Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular. Lorentz earned a bronze professional medal from the National Ice carving Association. This was the first time during the event's 13-year history that a college team earned such awards.

As a key member of the Ice and Snow Carving Club, Lorentz participated in the Zehnders Snowfest in Frankenmuth by helping his fellow students carve a medieval fighting dragon. HFCC was the only college to be invited to participate in ice carving demonstrations.

At the Olde World Canterbury Village Second Annual Winter carnival, Lorentz took first place in the two-person amateur team competition, winning $1,000. Lorentz also took first place in the individual amateur competition, winning $500.

Henry Ford Community College is in Dearborn.

Southfield Symphony hosts famed violinist

Mark Lubotsky

Violinist Mark Lubotsky will perform with the Southfield Symphony Orchestra 7 p.m. Sunday, May 21, at the Southfield Civic Center Pavilion. Valery Leonov will conduct.

Tickets are $9 adults, $6 students (18 and under), and senior citizen s. Call (810) 354-4717, or (810) 85?-7408.

Lubotsky will perform "Violin Concerto No. 1" by Alfred Schnittke, which he premiered in Moscow in 1963. This premier began a long collaboration with Schnittke, who subsequently dedicated three violin sonatas and second violin concerto to Lubotsky.

In turn, Lubotsky recently recorded some of Schnittke's chamber works with cellist/conductor Mstislav Rostropovich and the English Chamber Orchestra.

Also on the May 21 program are Tchaikovsky's "Antiante Cantabile," from "String Quartet No. 1, Op. 11;" and Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade, Op. 35."

Lubotsky, who has played through Europe, New Zealand, Japan, Israel and the United States, is known for his Mozart and Beethoven interpretations, but also as performer of contemporary music, including his premiers of Schnittke and Benjamin Britten.

Looney 'Nunsense' is heavenly

VICTORIA DIAZ

Sister Julia Child of God, makes this vichyssoise, and accidentally cleans out her convent (almost), but the convent doesn't have enough money to bury all the dead sisters because Mother Superior (one of the survivors of The Terminal Supper) purchases a VCR before all the bodies are interred, so the little band of survivors has to cram the remaining remains into a deep freeze while they figure out how to raise money for a decent burial, and what they figure is this:

Put on a show — sing, dance, tell jokes, stuff like that, right here on the stage of the Mt. St. Helen's School, just ignore the backdrop, which is scenery for the school musical, "Grease," and everybody is invited and everybody will come, and (very significant detail!) they'll bring money.

It'll be swell! It'll be great! You could even say (and writer-lyricist Dan Goggin does) everything will be "coming up rosaries."

Get yourself to this loony, tune-filled, nunnery-bin, "Nunsense," performed by the Village Players of Birmingham, and do so with haste.

With her lilting Irish brogue, hearty voice, and breezy comedic talents, Maureen Cook is a Mother Superior nonpareil. She leads this cast with a sure hand, though certainly never a heavy one, always delivering delightfully.

Holly Hellsten is just about perfect as Sister Hubert, the Mistress of Novices nervy enough to nickname her M.S. "Lake Superior" when the generously-endowed good Mother complains of a tendency to "retain water." If a musical number can be a riot, Hubert's rousing "Holier Than Thou," with a deep-down gospel beat is just that.

"Nunsense"

Theater: Village Players of Birmingham, southeast corner of Chestnut and Hunter Blvd. (two blocks south of Maple Road).

Curtain time: 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, May 19-20 & May 26-27; 2 p.m. Sunday, May 21.

Tickets: $12, students $10. Call (810) 644-2075.

Picture a cute cartoon character come to life, and you'll have the awesomely-talented Patty Ward as Sister Robert Anne, Brooklyn-bred "tough guy." Robert Anne yearns for the spotlight, but seems fated forever to saw away at that second fiddle. Always embroiled in a good-natured war with herself and her big-time ego, she finally gets her chance with the aptly-titled "I Just Want to be a Star," and handily outshines all glittery accoutrements.

As the fluttery novice, Sister Leo, Sally Savoie is comically enchanting, whether "dancing a prayer" in pink ballet slippers, holding up her end of the sister act, or performing what is probably the goofiest ballet number you've ever witnessed, "The Dying Nun."

Last, but certainly not least in this sometimes-unholy quintet, you'll meet poor, addled Sister Mary Amnesia, who can't for the life of her think of who she is. Played winningly by Tania Velinsky, Amnesia is a holy card or two short. In the end, with the Board of Health closing in and still not enough money in the till, it will be Amnesia who saves the day and retrieves her elusive memory via a little number guaranteed to punch a dimple into all starchy wimples, "I Could've Gone to Nashville."

Elite wins state title

The Ann Arbor Elite, a men's soccer team stocked mostly with Observerland players, won the Michigan Amateur Cup championship Sunday with a 3-2 victory over the Redford Marauders.

Dominic Vella scored two goals at Hollway Field in Ann Arbor, the first on a cross from Wayne Worosz and the second with an assist from John Truskowski. Andy Cosenza scored the other goal, and Faris Hermiz assisted.

The Elite will play the Wisconsin champion in the upcoming regional tournament.

On Friday, the Elite won its first Inter-Regional Soccer League game, 4-1 over the Grand Rapids Explosion.

Vella scored two goals, Cosenza and Hermiz one each. Vella also had two assists, Bill Joker and Ryan Carriere one apiece.

The Elite (1-2) plays the Des Moines Menace at 7 p.m. Saturday at Hollway.

SC signs 2 more

Schoolcraft College women's basketball coach Ed Kavanaugh has just about completed his recruiting for the season by signing two more local products: Becky Bilicki of Livonia Ladywood and Sarah Camp from Livonia Franklin.

"They're going to help me at guard," said Kavanaugh, who has signed nine players. "Both can shoot, both can handle the ball, both have yet to reach their potential."

Camp came through the Franklin system after Dawn Warner, now starting for Western Kentucky. As a senior, she averaged four points, four rebounds and a team-best three assists a game.

Camp knows what she has to do to improve. "I have to score more," she said, adding she should have scored more last season.

The signees bring Kavanaugh's recruiting class to nine. Earlier, he signed Jenny Markham of Redford Union, Yvonne Malewski and Kristi Engel of Redford Thurston, Christine Edwards of Novi, Julie Schmidt of Milford, Sheilah Coulter of Lapeer East and Stacey Sailus of Warren Woods Tower.

All-Section selections

The choices for the Great Lakes Independent all-section baseball team have been made, and Madonna University — which last Saturday clinched the Great Lakes Section's berth in the NAIA regional tournament — is well-represented with five spots.

First, the pitching: Madonna has sophomore righthander Craig Benedict on the squad, a Plymouth Canton graduate. Benedict posted a 6-2 won-lost record, giving up 69 hits but just 10 walks in 62 innings. He struck out 29 and had a 3.48 earned run average.

Then there are two outfielders: seniors Jim Solak (from Redford/Dearborn Divine Child) and Scott Anderson. Solak had 11 doubles, a triple, four home runs and 45 runs batted in, posting a .328 average. And Anderson hit .329 with 14 doubles, a triple, four homers and 34 RBI, with 21 stolen bases in 23 attempts.

The final two Fighting Crusaders chosen are sophomores and infielders: Tim Kasubowski, a second baseman, and Kurt Wilczynski, a third baseman (named to the team as a utility player). Kasubowski hit .391 with nine doubles, a triple and 25 RBI, and had a .929 fielding average; Wilczynski hit .354, scoring a team-best 50 runs, with 16 doubles, two triples, a homer and 32 RBI.

Madonna carried a 37-23 record into the NAIA regional at Battle Creek.

Academic and athletic

These high scores were welcome.

A total of 13 athletes were named to the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference all-academic golf team, including Chad Edgar, a senior at Hillsdale College from Plymouth.

To be selected, an athlete must have at least a 3.00 cumulative grade-point average, be at the institution for one full year, and be a starter or top reserve. All those within the GLIAC meeting those requirements are automatically named to the team.

Edgar has a 3.228 grade-point average, with a major in philosophy.

Santello, Respert hailed

Redford Catholic Central Athletic Director Robert Santello will be receiving the Ed Lauer Person of the Year Award at the Catholic League Coaches Association and Catholic League Hall of Fame induction and reunion dinner, Monday, June 12 at the Warren Chateau, 6015 E. 10 Mile (just east of Mound).

Michigan State University consensus All-American basketball player Shawn Respert (Redford Bishop Borgess) will also be one of the nine Athletes of the Year who will honored.

A golf outing kicks off the day's activities (tee times 7 a.m. and 1 p.m.) at Maple Lane Golf Course (14 Mile and Hoover).

Tickets (golf and dinner) are $60 per person. Dinner only is $30 (or $55 per couple).

Madonna comeback fells Mount Vernon

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

■ BASEBALL

Zero.

That's how many chances in 10 — or a hundred, for that matter — anyone watching Wednesday's NAIA regional playoff baseball game at Battle Creek's Bailey Park would have given Madonna University against Mount Vernon Nazarene as the ninth inning approached.

By the time the inning concluded, the score was tied at 5-all — an unlikelihood, certainly, but a bigger one was yet to come. A 12th-inning walk to Shawn Penczak and a sacrifice bunt by Dan Gordon set the table for Kurt Wilczynski, and the sophomore third baseman delivered a game-winning single that gave Madonna a 6-5 victory.

Which means the Crusaders play St. Francis, the six-team tournament's only other unbeaten team, at 11 a.m. today. The winner gets a bye into Friday's championship round; the loser plays Thursday afternoon against another team with one loss, with the winner of that game moving on to the championship round.

Actually, Madonna seemed like anything but a championship bet prior to the eighth inning against Mount Vernon. The Fighting Crusaders had two hits through the first seven innings. Fourteen batters had gone down in a row against Cougar pitcher Mike Patch prior to Pete Quinn's two-out single in the eighth. By then, Mount Vernon led 5-1.

As Madonna pitcher Jim Solak (from Redford/Dearborn Divine Child) said, "We were one strike away from losing."

However, he added: "But I knew we were going to win. I just had that feeling."

Shawn Penczak led off the Madonna ninth with a single. The next two batters went down, leaving it to Solak. With two strikes on him, he lined a double down the right field line — and the rally was alive.

Aaron Jones fed it big-time with a long double to right-center field, scoring two runs to make it 5-3.

Suddenly, the Cougars were on their heels. Scott Anderson, who scored Madonna's first run after doubling on a wild pitch with two out in the second inning, doubled again to score a run to make it 5-4. That left it up to sophomore catcher Craig Petersen.

He came through, lining a single to center to score Anderson and knot the score at 5-5.

"I never even thought about losing," said Madonna coach Mike George after his team improved to 39-23. "Even with two out and two strikes on the hitter in the ninth . . .

"It was another big performance by Jimmy Solak."

Indeed it was. Solak (3-4 for the season) allowed five earned runs, but he pitched all 12 innings, giving up 11 hits and three walks, striking out 10. The loser was John Boker in relief.

"With our lineup," said Solak afterwards, "this team is never out of it."

Anderson led the attack with two hits and an RBI. Jones had a double and two RBI.

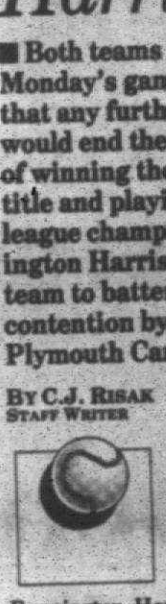

In their first game Wednesday, Madonna ripped Marian College (Wisc.) 9-5. The Crusaders collected 20 hits to support the pitching efforts of sophomore right-hander Craig Benedict (Plymouth Canton), who gave up five earned runs on eight hits and three walks, striking out two.

Harrison comeback ends Canton's title hopes

■ Both teams came into Monday's game knowing that any further slip-ups would end their team's hopes of winning their division title and playing for the league championship. Farmington Harrison was the team to batter its way into contention by clubbing Plymouth Canton.

They should have been feeling pretty good, those Plymouth Canton Chiefs.

Their must-win game Monday at Farmington Harrison was half over and they were in command with a 4-1 lead. A victory would give Thursday's game with Livonia Franklin a championship aura — the winner would be baseball champion of the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division, and would play Lakes Division titlist Plymouth Salem for the league crown.

But there are seven innings to a high school baseball game. As Canton coach Scott Dickey described it, "We kicked it around a bit."

That was a reference to Harrison's fourth and sixth innings, when the Hawks pushed across a total of nine runs — more than enough to offset the Chiefs' advantage, and certainly enough to keep Harrison in the hunt for the Western Division title, with a 10-4 victory.

The win upped the Hawks' record to 6-3 in the division, same as Livonia Franklin's. They are 10-5 overall.

And Canton? "We're out of it now," said a disappointed Dickey, his team now 5-4 in the division. "We had to win this one and beat Franklin (Thursday). We'll play for the districts now."

Harrison will play Salem — a team the Hawks defeated 7-1 earlier this season — for the WLAA championship if Franklin loses to Canton today. Otherwise, Franklin will go against Salem for the title.

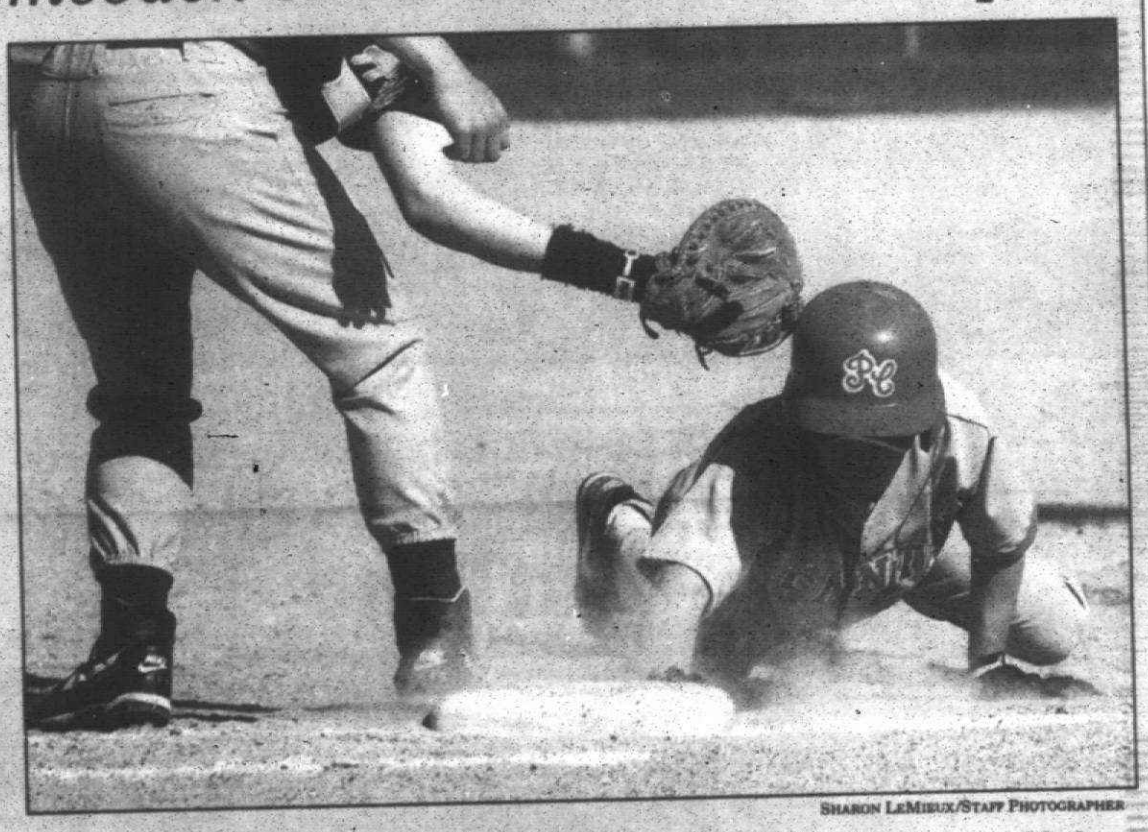

With hard-throwing ace Jake Lawson on the mound for Harrison, it figured to be a low-scoring affair Monday. Canton's strength was in a solid corps of pitchers and good defense.

Harrison scored first, getting a run in the second on doubles by Aaron Lawson and Zack Cornwell. But Lawson wasn't in complete command, and the Hawks' defense was shaky; in the first three innings, the Chiefs got four hits and four walks and, combining them with three Harrison errors, parlayed it into four runs.

Indeed, if they weren't striking out, Jake Lawson was getting them out in the first three innings. Of the nine outs made by Canton, six came on Ks.

But the difference between the two teams wasn't pitching or de-

Salem's Li captures singles crown

Xinning Li is one tennis player making up for lost time.

The Plymouth Salem junior, who moved to this country at age 9 from Mainland China and didn't start playing competitive tournaments until he was 14, won the No. 1 singles title Tuesday at the Western Lakes Activities Association boys tournament held at Livonia Stevenson High.

Northville, winning a pair of singles titles and three doubles crowns , captured the WLAA team title for the second straight year. The Mustangs are unbeaten this year (11-0) in dual meets.

North Farmington finished second, while Salem and Stevenson took third and fourth, respectively. See statistical summary.

Li defeated Stevenson senior Mark Findling in the championship final, 6-4, 6-2, to improve his season record to 16-1.

Earlier in the season, Li beat Findling in a three-setter.

"I tried to be more patient this time," Li said. "He (Findling) is a baseline player with a good first serve.

"I tried to go to his backhand and I thought I returned serve well."

Findling, meanwhile, ousted Northville's No. 1 Matt Schwagle, who retired with a knee problem after dropping the first set, 7-6, and trailing.

"Mark has been playing well," said Stevenson coach George Croll. "Both he and Li hit extremely hard. I'm sure Mark is glad he's going to the Dearborn regional."

Li, meanwhile, enters Friday's Class A regional in Ann Arbor, rated one of the toughest in state, seeded third in his flight.

"It's going to be tough to get out of that," said Li, an honor student who carries a 4.033 grade-point average. "But winning the league (WLAA) is rewarding because all the hard work has paid off."

Li has improved immensely since last year when he reached the WLAA semifinals at No. 1 singles.

His on-going program includes lifting weights three times per week, hitting against a ball machine and three-hour practice days.

Currently he is ranked No. 2 in the Southeastern Michigan Tennis Association Boys 16s and No. 3 in the Boys 18s.

Not bad for a player who is basically self-taught.

"My mom and dad played socially, that's how I got started," Li said. "This summer I'm going to work with Joe Brennan (head pro for the Schoolcraft College junior program). My goal is to get a college scholarship and go somewhere down south."

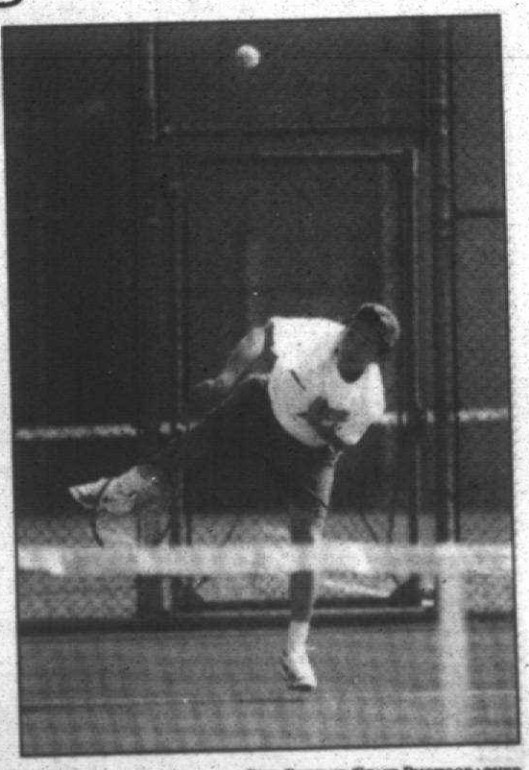

Salem also grabbed the No. 3 singles title when sophomore Matt Potter beat Northville's Ravi Mujumdar in the final, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

North Farmington also made a strong showing.

The Raiders came away with the No. 4 doubles title when Peter Golaszewski and Steven Lehrman defeated Northville's tandem of Jared Cromas and Desmond Liang, 6-4, 7-5.

North's Nomit Shah, a freshman, also reached the finals at No. 4 singles. Robert Yost and Mi-

Salem clinches in division

■ BASEBALL

An eight-run third inning was all Ryan Andrejzewski needed to keep his record perfect.

The Plymouth Salem right-hander improved to 5-0, stopping Farmington on seven hits — the same number the Rocks pounded out in that eight-run inning en route to an 11-3 triumph Monday at Salem.

"The win, combined with West Land John Glenn's loss, clinched the Western Lakes Activities Association/Lakes Division title for Salem (16-5 overall, 8-1 in the division). The loss left Farmington at 8-13 overall, 2-7 in the Lakes.

"I feel fortunate John Gravlin left me with a nice team," said Salem first-year coach Dale Rumberger.

The division title is Salem's second in a row and puts the Rocks in a position to win a second straight WLAA crown. "This is the first time a Salem team has the opportunity to win back to-back championships, and we're tickled to do it," said Rumberger.

Andrejzewski stopped Farmington on seven hits and three walks, giving up one earned run. He struck out six. Nick Latra took the loss for Farmington.

Jeff Mackiewicz slugged a three-run home run to highlight Salem's eight-run third inning. Brad Leat added a run-scoring double, and Ahmande Grimes, Kaz Kurisu, Dan Quaine and Sam LaGrow each had RBI singles. Kirk Craggs collected two hits for the Rocks.

Salem will play either at Livonia Franklin or at Farmington Harrison for the WLAA championship next Wednesday. Last Saturday, Salem's trip to the Midland Invitational was a short one, the Rocks lost 10-0 to Midland Dow.

■ Canton 11, Stevenson 0: Brian Kovach drove in four runs with two hits, Mike Elsner smacked a two-run home run and Eric Stidham and Jason Mortiere combined on a five-inning no-hitter in Plymouth Canton's win at Livonia Stevenson Tuesday.

The victory improved the Chiefs' record to 14-9.

Stidham (two innings) and Mortiere (three innings) did not issue a walk. An error was all that kept it from being a perfect game.

Elsner hit his two-run homer and Kovach had a two-run double in Canton's five-run third. Kovach drove in two more runs with a two-run single in the fourth. Kevin Kovachevich and Scott Patterson also had two hits apiece, with Kovachevich scoring twice and Patterson driving in two runs.

Andy Dattolo took the loss for Stevenson, giving up seven runs in three innings.

Chiefs can't hold early lead

■ SOCCER

Plymouth Canton's soccer team scored first, but it just wasn't enough to derail Livonia Stevenson.

Melissa Tomei, assisted by Jenny Parviainen, notched the game's first goal Monday but after that it was all Stevenson in a 3-1 decision.

"We played hard, but we just didn't get it," coach Don Smith said. "We hustled and we didn't give up. We were just outplayed."

The loss left Canton 10-5-1.

On Saturday, Farmington Hills Mercy raced to a 2-0 halftime lead and held on for a 2-1 victory. Melissa Marzolf scored the Chiefs' only goal on an assist from Tomei.

■ Salem 10, John Glenn 0: Plymouth Salem concluded its regularly-scheduled season by pounding Westland John Glenn, a first-year team, Monday at Glenn.

Liz Peltier scored five times for the Rocks, who took an 11-2-3 record into Wednesday's WLAA playoff match against Plymouth Canton. Peltier also had one assist. Kelly Lukasik added three goals, and Mari Hoff had two goals and two assists.

Jodi Coyle picked up three assists, and Kate Gardner, Colleen Kirby and Missy Simmons each had one assist.

Last Friday, the Rocks lost 3-1 to Troy Athens at Salem. The Rocks trailed 3-0 before Lukasik put in a free kick with five minutes remaining.

On Thursday, Salem hosted Northville and was thwarted by all-WLAA keeper Jessica Jones in a 1-1 tie. "Northville played well," said Salem coach Ken Johnson, concluding his final year of coaching Salem's girls. "Their goalie saved them."

Canton rebounds to stop Stevenson

■ SOFTBALL

Plymouth Canton was able to bunch its hits together to form a three-run rally in the third inning Tuesday, which was all the support pitcher Jackie Nicastri needed to subdue visiting Livonia Stevenson 3-1.

The win improved Canton's overall softball record to 16-10.

Nicastri started and went the first five innings for the Chiefs, allowing no runs on two hits and two walks, striking out eight. Jenny Sikora relieved and got the save with two innings of work.

Sikora had two of Canton's eight hits. Kari Jackson and Amanda Welton each slapped out run-scoring singles in the Chiefs' three-run second inning.

The Spartans were limited to three hits by Nicastri and Sikora.

On Monday, Canton was unable to derail the unbeaten Farmington Harrison express, which rolled to a 7-3 triumph at Canton. The win put the Hawks' record at 27-2 overall, 9-0 in the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division. Canton is 6-4 in the Western Division.

Nicastri gave up 10 hits, a walk and hit a batter in absorbing the loss. Erin LaCosse was the winning pitcher for Harrison, tossing a five-hitter without issuing a walk, striking out three.

Canton scored first, getting three runs in the first (one earned). But the Hawks retaliated with a five-run third and getting two more in the seventh. Jenny Myslinski was instrumental for Harrison, driving in three runs and collecting three hits, including a two-run double in the third and a run-scoring triple in the seventh.

Kristen Koziara and Stephanie Schwalm each had two hits for the Hawks, Koziara stealing two bases.

For Canton, Amber LaGrow had a two-run single in the first, one of her two hits. Nicastri also had two hits.

■ PCA 20-29, Fairlane 16-5: Karin Reed smacked a solo home run and collected four hits in both games of a doubleheader Monday to power Plymouth Christian to 20-16 and 29-5 wins over Fairlane Christian.

Reed went 4-for-5 in the first game and 4-for-4 in the second, in which she also collected a triple and drove in three runs.

Katie Martin struggled through 10 walks in four innings to gain the win with last-inning help from Lisa Erickson, who pitched a four-hit complete game win in the second contest. Martin fanned four and gave up eight hits while Erickson fanned three and walked four.

Martin went 2-for-4 and drove in two runs in the first game while Rebecca Pugno drove in a run in a 2-for-4 game.

Salem rolls past Canton to claim Athens Relays

■ TRACK

There were 13 events at last Saturday's Troy Athens Relays. For Plymouth Salem to have a chance at winning it, the Rocks would have to do well in nearly every event.

They filled that requirement, scoring in 11 events and winning three of them, with second-place finishes in four others, to collect a first-place total of 53 points.

Plymouth Canton was second in the 17-team field with 43, followed by Troy Athens with 31.

"We had lost to Canton on Tuesday, and came back real strong Saturday," said Salem coach Mark Gregor. "I was real pleased with the way they competed. We had to do well in first and second places to have a chance of doing well."

The Rocks did, starting with Angela Smith, Jessica Ash and Lisa Smith, who combined for a win in the shot put relay (90-feet, 4½-inches). Courtney Sheldon, Miranda Wade, Kristie Giddinap and Sarah Hamilton won the 3,200-meter relay (9:57.6), and Nicole Van Hees, Sara Vida, Kim Sheldon and Marcia Parker were first in the sprint medley relay (2:58.4).

The Rocks' Parker, Nicole Bolton and Courtney Sheldon were second in the long jump relay (41-11½); so, too, were Van Hees, Kristen Kosik and Carrie Dzialo in the high jump relay (13-11). Kim Sheldon, Hannah Watts, Rachel Thompson and Van Hees took second in the shuttle hurdle relay (1:11.5), and Parker, Courtney Sheldon, Giddinap and Hamilton were second in the 1,600 relay (4:12.7).

Finishing third for Salem were Kathy Jost, Evelyn Rahhal, Jennifer Burke and Meran Miles in the distance medley (13:24.1), and Bolton, Courtney Sheldon, Burke and Hamilton in the Athens Relay (7:07.6), an 800 followed by two 400s and another 800.

Kim Sheldon, Sara Vida, Van Hees and Katie Bonner were fourth in the 800 (1:50.5), and Kathy Jost, Bolton, Rahhal and Miles were fifth in the 6,400 (23:05.2).

Canton also won three events, one in a school-record time, and placed second in two others.

The Chiefs set a school record of 4:07.1 in the 1,600 relay, with Becky Bockstanz, Meghan Barresi, Tracey Cavin and Olive Ikeh getting their names on the record board.

Bockstanz, Becky Uryga, Kelly Smith and Ikeh won the 800 in 1:49.2, while Canton's shuttle hurdle relay team of Ikeh, Dian Jastzrebski, Leah Lashbrook and Lisa Soash finished first in 1:11.2.

The distance medley relay team of Cavin, Barresi, Nancy Hoffman and Becky Wolfrom finished second with a 13:25.3 time. The other runnerup finish came from Barresi, Uryga, Ikeh and Cavin in the Athens Relay (7:07.6).

Chiefs collect 2nd dual-meet victory

Here are a couple of surprises.

Plymouth Canton's boys track team won a dual meet, for only the second time this season. And the Chiefs did it convincingly, drubbing Livonia Franklin 97-40 Tuesday at Canton.

The other surprise: Plymouth Salem lost a dual meet, for only the second time this season. And this, too, was rather lopsided — Farmington 102, Salem 35 Tuesday at Farmington.

Canton's win was sparked by Jim Chefan, who won the high jump (5-feet, 8-inches), long jump (19-2¼) and 200-meters (24.6), and also was part of the winning 800 relay (1:38.6). Jon Gallinger also won two events for Canton: the shot put (46-½) and the discus (122-5).

Other individual firsts went to Dave Koshizawa in the 100 (11.7), Jon Page in the 400 (55.8), Sanjay Sharma in the 800 (2:08.9), Ian Bedford in the 1,600 (4:50.9), Ryan Portrey in the 3,200 (11:00.2) and Adam Massey in the 110 hurdles (17.2). The Chiefs also won the 800, 1,600 and 3,200 relays.

Salem needed a letdown in its final dual meet of the season. "I had to rest some people," explained coach Geoff Baker, studying Friday's Class A 18-team regional meet, hosted by Redford Union.

The Rocks had six competitions between May 4 and Tuesday. "There was no time to train in there, either," he said.

So several of his better runners were idle. The only wins came from Yu Kobayashi in the 300-meter hurdles (43.0) and from Lawrence Nunn, Kevin Conte, Jason Gibson and Scott Kingslien in the 800 relay (1:35.9).

The shuttle hurdle relay team of Anson Tse, Dan Johnson, Kobayashi and Dirk Schmiedel placed second (1:05.5), and the high jump relay of Dan McKian, Schmiedel and Andres Lopez were fourth (16-6).

chael Redisch (No. 2), and Aaron Scheinfield and Jeremy Lewis (No. 3) were also doubles finalists.

"We were second in duals (record) and second overall," North coach Dennis King said. "I thought the whole team played great. Not one person played poorly. Northville is a tough team."

Coach Dick Norton was pleased with his team's showing.

"We had visions of winning six or seven flights at the most," Norton said. "You always hope for more, but you have to be realistic."

On Friday, the Mustangs will host a Class A regional of their own at Schoolcraft College. The field includes No. 7 ranked Birmingham Brother Rice, Birmingham Groves and West Bloomfield.

Schwagle's injury is a big concern.

"He had an arthroscopy done in the off-season," Norton said. "It keeps swelling up. He hasn't played an awful lot of matches this year, only about 11."

Canton finishes 7-0

Wanted: an argument.

Or at least some clarification. At present, we can think of no member of the Western Lakes Activities Association in any sport who has won more consecutive division titles than Plymouth Canton's girls track team.

On Tuesday, the Chiefs made it 11-straight by romping past Livonia Franklin, 105-23 at Franklin. When the WLAA convenes to decide a champion, Canton figures to be at the top of the list of contenders. The Chiefs completed their dual-meet season a perfect 7-0.

In the win over Franklin, they won 15 of 16 events. Double-winners in individual events were Nkechi Okwumabua in the long jump (15-feet, 11-inches) and 100-meters (12.8); Tracey Cavin in the 800 (2:34.0) and 1,600 (5:46.9); and Olive Ikeh in the 200 (27.0) and 400 (1:02.0).

Other individual winners for Canton were Sara Israel in the discus (98-5), Kelly Smith in the high jump (5-1), Mary Anderson in the 100 hurdles (16.7), Nancy Hoffman in the 300 hurdles (50.1) and Casey Swanson in the 3,200 (13:34.0).

fense; rather, it was hitting prowess, and that advantage was Harrison's. The Hawks collected 13 hits in the game, and seven went for extra bases.

"This is the best hitting lineup I've every had," said Herrington, now in his 24th year as Harrison's varsity baseball coach. He qualified it, adding, "If it continues. They're hitting .375 as a team."

The school record for batting average in a season is .336.

Canton's third-inning surge began with Mark Biro's single. Lawson walked Kevin Kovacbevich, and a wild pitch allowed both runners to move up a base. Bryan Kwiatkowski's grounder to shortstop C.J. Ghannan was booted, and both runners scored on the error to put the Chiefs in front.

Kurt Richards followed with a run-scoring triple to make it 3-1, and another run came home on an error by first baseman Mark Cantor.

Cantón starter Marc Hazzard was tagged a few times in the first three innings, but only allowed the one run to score. In the fourth, however, the Hawks got their game in gear.

Aaron Lawson was hit by a pitch. Steve Beattie singled. After Mike Fisher hit into a force play, Dave Hensel singled to load the bases and Chris Puzzuoli followed with another single to score a run.

That's when the errors began for Canton. Biro let a ground ball get past him, an error that let two runs in, tying the score at 4-4. Ghannan struck out, but Jake Lawson hammered a double to left to score two more; Cantor also doubled to drive in a run, making it 7-4.

It remained that way until the bottom of the sixth, when the Hawks' Ghannan singled and went to second after left fielder Anthony Pastor bobbled the ball. Back-to-back wild pitches by Eric Stidham, who relieved Hazzard, scored Ghannan. After Jake Lawson walked, Cantor belted a two-run homer to left to ice the triumph.

Lawson took the win, allowing three earned runs in seven innings on five hits and five walks, striking out 11. Hazzard took the loss; he gave up seven runs (three earned) on 10 hits and one hit batter, with five strikeouts in 3⅓ innings.

Cantor finished with three hits, including a double and a homer, and three RBI to lead Harrison. Ghannan and Aaron Lawson each collected a double and a single, and Jake Lawson had a double and two RBI.

Only Biro had two hits for Canton, which slipped to 13-9 overall.

Ministry helps families, friends of gays

The Great Lakes chapter of Lutherans Concerned/North America and the Southeast Michigan Synod's Task Force for Gay and Lesbian Concerns are co-sponsoring an affirming spiritual support group for Christian families with gay, lesbian, or bisexual members.

Locally, the special ministry group meetings are held at 2 p.m. the first Sunday of the month at Emmanuel Lutheran Church, 34567 Seven Mile, Livonia.

A spokesperson for the ministry said the group "will focus on lessening the isolation frequently experienced by family members and friends while seeking prayerful spiritual insights, accurate information and Lutheran perspectives on Scripture in an atmosphere of love and confidentiality." Participation is confidential.

At its recent biennial assembly in Charlotte, N.C., Lutherans Concerned/North America unanimously voted to create a new ministry specifically to meet the spiritual needs of family and friends of lesbian, gay and bisexual people within the Lutheran church. It represents a renewed focus on helping people resolve the religious issues relating to human sexuality.

"Lutherans Concerned is the first religious organization to authorize a special ministry for family and friends across North America," said Bob Gibering, program executive for the organization. "Our research has shown that parents and family members often experience their own special pain, alienation and rejection, sometimes even within the church.

"I foresee the ministry as also helping people who want to come out to their family, but know they will have to address religious issues in the process."

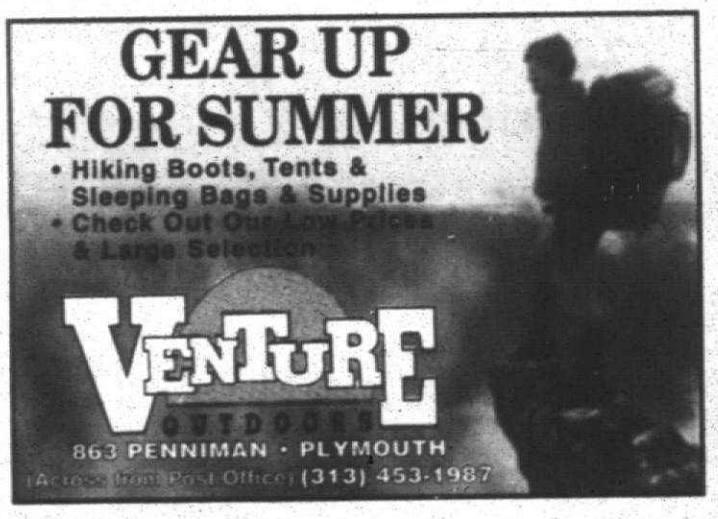

Lutherans Concerned/North America is a 20-year-old independent organization with chapters across the United States and Canada. Its vision is to promote justice by creating an inclusive Lutheran church and to help Christian people reconcile their spiritual beliefs and sexual identity struggles in an uplifting way.

The local chapter, Great Lakes, draws its members from throughout Michigan as well as northwest Ohio.

Gibering pointed out that other organizations which sponsor parent and family support groups "don't want to address sexual orientation issues in a religious context, so Lutherans Concerned is filling a spiritual niche that is unique."

"For example, we feel that parents worshiping in an affirming setting with gay, lesbian or bisexual people provides an important part of reconciliation," he said. "The new ministry also dramatizes the wide range of people hurt by homophobia."

For more information about the family and friends ministry, call John at (313) 668-7622, Bill at (810) 357-3496 or Mary at (313) 662-3829.

BOOK BREAK

VICTORIA DIAZ

New Leonard thriller has it all

"Riding the Rap" by Elmore Leonard (294 pp., $22.95, Delacorte).

With "Riding the Rap," his latest crime novel (set once more — and deliciously so — in the seamier crevices of South Florida), Elmore Leonard has done it again. Only this time, he may have done it better than ever.

What's so great about "Riding the Rap"?

Start with one of Leonard's best bad guys yet, the smoldering master gardener, Bobby Deogracias. Sleek and fascinating as any cobra, Bobby hardly ever leaves home without his favorite weapon, a pair of glittery little pruning shears. Bobby rarely smiles. Bobby is the coolest of the cool. Bobby, he'd just as soon snip off your fingers as look at you.

Out to get Bobby is the Marlboro-esque man, U.S. Marshal Raylan Givens. Raylan shot a man once. Sat down across a table from him, looked him in the eye, and blew him away. No, he wasn't absolutely certain the lowlife was carrying a gun, but at the time, well, it seemed the right and only thing to do.

Now, he just wishes to God that his friend, Joyce (one of those women who believes in soul-searching), would stop stilling him about it. She's making him feel like he's pinned to the wall. This, at a time when he's got all these other things on his mind, like catching the bad guys, and the way that seer-psychic, the Rev. Dawn Navarro, looks in that white mini-skirt.

The Rev, a Marianne Faithfull lookalike, lives in small bosky stucco, filled with old furniture and gimcrackery. Approaching middle-age, she seems a curious sort, holding onto youth for dear life. She knows Louis Lewis and Chip Ganz. Really well. And she'll soon meet the hapless Harry Arno .

Harry Arno is an aging bookie who's looking to collect on some delinquent accounts. Chip Ganz is one of those delinquent on his account. Louis Lewis? Think of him as Chip's bodyguard.

Chip lives in his loony old mother's moldering mansion. He is not what you'd call a doer. He doesn't have a job, or any plans to get one: He doesn't even bother to clean out the creepy-crawly swimming pool, or cut back the wildly-advancing gumbo-limbo trees. He just sort of sits in the old manse, smoking weed and getting the munchies, and having these ideas. Especially this one idea. Sort like hostage-taking — only with a twist. Now, if he could just get somebody to carry it out. . . .

He does.

They do.

I can't recall a Leonard novel that turns the screws quite so tightly as "Riding the Rap." I'm not sure if this is because Leonard has gotten so good at building a kind of exquisite suspense as he goes along, or if it's because he's become such a master at bringing you into his story, and nailing you to the living, breathing spot of the scene.

Believe me, you are there, riveted, when Senor Deogracias, with Louis Lewis, enters the tacky little South Florida convenience store, and robs

Village comes to life in clay

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

The streets of Michigan take on a magic air in the ceramics of Debbie LaPratt.

Victorian houses, a fieldstone church and a round Shaker barn popular during the late 1800s take their form in clay the way each structure did in many small towns and streets of Michigan at the turn-of-the-century.

LaPratt's miniature ceramic houses as well as other types of buildings remain on display through May 31 in the Livonia Arts Commission's circular showcases on the second floor of the Civic Center Library.

As a child LaPratt would spend hours looking at her mother's collection of cardboard houses displayed under the family's Christmas tree and imagine herself walking through the make-believe village.

In 1980 she turned those dreams into clay founding her business of miniature ceramic houses as The Streets of Michigan. Her first recreation was the Detroit home built in the 19th century for Lewis Cass, the last territorial governor of Michigan.

Next came the Loren Andrus Octagon House (c. 1863) which stands today in Washington, Michigan. Commissioned by the Friends of the Octagon House, the hand cast, signed piece is a limited edition.

A reproduction of the Fort Gratiot Light House in Port Huron, the oldest light house in Michigan followed.

LaPratt's current project is the Newburg Methodist Church at Greenmead Historical Village in Livonia. The restored white clapboard church hosts weddings during the summer months.

Lapratt hopes to sell her ceramic reproduction to brides and grooms as a remembrance.

"I was born and raised in Dearborn and thought the Dickens Village collectibles were great then I thought why not have something that represents Michigan. It would be nice to take a piece of historic Michigan home," said LaPratt, 41, and the mother of three children.

LaPratt begins her historical cre-

ROMANTIC ALLEGORY

Redford sculptor Sergio De Giusti curated an exhibition of works that explore contemporary issues with a historical reference to Romanticism and Allegory. It opens with a reception from 5-8 p.m. May 26 at the Detroit Artists Market, 300 River Place, Suite 1650. A performance by the Detroit Dance Collective, a local modern dance company known for their original interpretaions of the work of visual artists, will begin at 5:30 p.m.

"Romantic Allegory," continuing through June 23, is an exhibition of works in which the human figure is is prominent as the vehicle for expressing common themes of anxiety, frustration, turmoil, time and death.

Paintings are featured by Jim Cogswell, Mitchell Hope, Mingshi Huang, Catherine Peet and Robert Shefman; drawings by Anne Fracassa; photography by Marco Lorenzetti, and design by Cristen Velliky.

The show is accompanied by a Journal of Exhibitions, available during gallery hours at no cost. The journal provides visitors with photographic documentation of the work, artists statements, biographical information on the artists, a statement by De Giusti and an article by art historian Bernard Goldman.

The journal and exhibition program at the Detroit Artists Market are supported in part by the Michigan Council for the Arts.

From 12:15-1 p.m. Thursday, June 1 the Market will host a brown bag lecture by the curator and artists. There is no charge. Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday to Saturday, until 8 p.m. Friday.

that distant and it's part of the community," said Shannon Green who will attend Michigan State University next year. Her goal is to become a pediatrician. She decided on Michigan State because the institution allowed her to tailor a program including art and science.

Green will exhibit a clay fairy with gossamer wings, "a commentary that a woman can be anything she wants."

Students recognized

"It's good for the students to exhibit so that they have recognition and acceptance of artistic expression," said Darby, who's retiring this June after 27 years as an art teacher in the Plymouth Canton Community Schools.

Jason Tattan, a Plymouth Salem graduating senior entering the graphic arts program at the University of Michigan this fall, agrees with Darby.

Don't miss Tattan's dramatic monochrome painting of a symphony musician.

"It gives people a chance to see your work," said Tattan. "You can express your views and yourself."

Kari Jackson does just that in a body of work that leans to a dark mysterious underworld where a girl dances from strings like a puppet manipulated by a pair of a man's hands.

Jackson, a Plymouth Canton senior, plans to attend Hope College but remains uncertain as to whether she will major in art, physical therapy or architecture.

Self-expression

"My work's partly from imagination but its also a way of expressing myself. I really like working in pastels. They're fun and I like experimenting," said Jackson, a member of the National Honor Society as well as the girls' softball, gymnastics and diving teams.

The struggle to win over the evils inherent in society runs like a thread through many of the students work.

The concentration of Melissa Wagner's work is good versus evil. While one painting features angels, another threatens with demonic figures.

Wagner aims to become a medical illustrator. She enters U-M in the fall.

"I like to exhibit so other people can see your work. Feedback is good," said Wagner.

Elsewhere in the exhibition, is Mike McConnell's assemblage incorporating found objects, a commentary on television or on society as a whole? Whether, anger is key to this work that sports protruding nails and a fist smashing through the screen.

Comment on soceity

The Plymouth Salem senior, who will study illustration at Columbus College of Art and Design, explores society's evils further in two large scale acrylic paintings on masonite. One panel spotlights a young monkey, torn from his mother's arms at birth, bonding to a cloth form. The second panel pictures a human child bonding to the same cloth form meant to simulate its mother.

McConnell asks what are the boundaries of science?

"I think America is becoming too technical, taking monkeys and separating them from their mothers," said McConnell, president of the National Art Honor Society.

"Mrs. Darby pushes us to go against the norm. That allows me to take skills I already have and test my boundaries."

Jean Brucker not only comments but makes a bold statement about the state of our society today.

A large scale human figure by the Plymouth Canton senior is painted with images of pollution, drugs, nuclear reactors, a bride and children, capital punishment and Washington D.C.

"It's a commentary on society. It's the chicken or the egg, what feeds on what. Are women discriminated against because of the sex on TV, or is the sex on TV caused by the discrimination against women," said Brucker.

Art education

The importance of art education and art in education is evident from viewing the students work. Without it many of them might never question or draw hidden emotions into the light says Darby.

There are other benefits for the students.

"It's a self confidence booster, the pleasure of seeing their work matted and up, and it's recognition," said Judith Braun, a teacher of art for the last 23 years.

An artist herself, Braun knows of arts' importance to education. As coach of the Plymouth Salem tennis team, she also realizes that the strategy of the game ranks high, whether in tennis or life.

"I've never seen art as a frill. It deals with some basic problem solving techniques, how to approach a problem in a non-traditional way. Art, in particular, has been neglected far too long. It's a tool to making life more comfortable. It's part of everything we do."

it at pruning-shears point. Some pages later, you can see that boat darkly-silhouetted on the horizon, closing in as the bad guys attempt to make their final getaway. You feel the air thicken as clouds begin to gather out over the water. A mild, but definite, tachycardia sets in. A little moisture collects on the brow.

Then, often, just when you think you can't take it anymore, Leonard may turn around and tickle your ribs.

Anyway, here's a group of motley characters you can reach out and touch. A story so strong it makes you sweat. A setting so vivid it has a character all its own. Plus a few laughs. What more could you want?

Pacing as hot as serious salsa? Dialogue to-die-for? A trip to Florida without airfare? Prose clean and sharp to the point of drop-dead elegance?

You got it.

And all of it threaded through with some provocative stuff about insight, foresight, second sight, and the strangely powerful impact of fleeting, ethereal images. The next time you're at the movies, you may find yourself there.

stions with an architectural drawing rendered by her son. From there woodworker Jack Fleming of Dearborn builds a 1¼0th scale model of hollow construction in pine. From wood model to a plaster mold then casting in ceramic is a long tedious process but LaPratt's love affair with the historic structures sees her through.

Among pieces is the first round Shaker barn built in Hancock, Mass., in the 1880s.

"It was used as a dairy barn by the Shakers. There was a religious origin. It's round form was intended to keep the devil from hiding in the corners."

Prices for the miniature ceramic structures range from $29.50 for a small Victorian bicycle shop to $90 for the Octagon House.

Designers grace to Detroit Symphony showhouse

By Mary Klemic
Staff Writer

Decorating the largest private residence in Detroit is a formidable challenge, but area interior designers were among those who met it with flying colors — and soaring styles.

They are among more than 40 of the top interior designers in the state participating in the 1995 Detroit Symphony Designers Showhouse, taking place May 20 through June 11. The showhouse, presented by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall Volunteer Council, is the Bishop Gallagher-John Salley Mansion in Palmer Woods in Detroit.

The 62-room mansion, situated on 2.5 acres, was built 1924-26. It was occupied by Bishop Michael Gallagher and his successors, Cardinal Edward Mooney and Cardinal John Dearden. Basketball star John Salley bought the mansion in 1989 and donated it for the showhouse, which benefits Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall.

"It was austere. They worked some kind of miracle here," said Jeanette Keramedjian of West Bloomfield, marketing chairman.

Visitors can see for themselves. Besides tours of the house, a home accessories boutique, a cafe, a courtyard garden and the St. Vincent de Paul Society Collectibles — including a variety of fine art, antiques and collectibles — will be featured. A gala opening party with cocktail buffet, silent auction, musical performances and fashion show will take place Friday, May 19; call for tickets and information.

Experts and artisans will present 45-minute talks noon and 2 p.m. daily in the Pewabic Room on the lower level. Cost is $3. Noted fabric designer Christopher Hyland will lecture Saturday, May 20, only.

Topics and other speakers are decorating with Oriental rugs and other floor coverings; advice from decorators on use of slip covers, window treatments and how to work with a decorator; exploring Detroit's architectural history and stories of Detroit landmarks; the development, manufacture and use of Pewabic tile; artisans in wood, leaded glass, fabric and stone; and planting of trees, shrubs and flowers.

In style

The grandeur of the house is seen in such features as oak and walnut paneling from Germany's Black Forest, carved marble mantels, pillars and marble floors from Italy, 12 fireplaces and the largest installation of Pewabic tile in southeast Michigan. When Salley donated the mansion, he stipulated that the style had to be maintained — for example, there was to be no painting over wood, no fresh nail holes.

A room by Joan Knight of Joan Knight Interiors of Southfield is both elegant and comfortable.

The room bears Pewabic tile, glistening with a glaze developed by Pewabic's Mary Chase Stratton, who never revealed the formula.

The lush floral carpet and large green ottoman with brocade pattern pick up the shades of the marble fireplace and the green sponged walls, and the design of the ceiling moulding.

Plaid draperies echo the woodwork of the window pane.

Sitting rooms

P.K. Fields of P.K. Fields Interiors of Plymouth described her sitting room as "aubergine." The room has a warm glow like candlelight, with a blushing color touching the furniture, patterned carpet and plaid drapes. Candle sconces and a marble fireplace rest against dark walls.

The bishop's library by Sharon Holton of Sharon Holton Interiors of Plymouth is restful with its beige walls, marble pedestals and thick rods painted to have a black and gold marble effect. Part of the ceiling was painted to resemble lighter marble.

Holton provided the old postcard of Belle Isle that was reproduced by an artist on a wall in the basement, where the seminars will be conducted.

Cynthia Ohanian of Cynthia Ohanian Interiors of Birmingham made a sitting room into a "lady's hideaway." Walls were painted dusty rose, crown mouldings yellow and peach to repeat colors in the fabric. A large Venetian mirror sparkles like a giant brooch. The table at the bed is a reproduction of one originally bought by the Vanderbilts for their house in Newport.

Whimsical

A whimsical look is in the children's rooms by Joie de Vie of Birmingham, Rosanne Duncan of Rosanne Designs of Bloomfield Hills and Design Steps of Troy. Bright hues and artist illustrations adorn the walls by Joie de Vie and Duncan.

Designers from Design Steps turned their room into a little castle, with a tub painted to look like marble, a radiator painted to look like stone and a dragon painted on one wall.

Phyllis Berg on Paylus Berg Art Interiors made the most out of a linen room and a bathroom, turning one into a drying room. In the bishop's study, Donna Stevens of J.L. Hudson and Co. of Southfield added a dramatic sunburst frame on a wall piece and painted a cheery floral design on the ceiling in the adjoining bathroom. The painting on the ceiling in the vestibule and powder room by Charlotte Kennedy of A Designers Touch of Northville brought out the color of the limestone there.

Georgia Simon of Georgia Simon and Associates of Birmingham put fresh wood on the cabinets in the pantry. Alyssa Baenziger of Hepplewhite of Rochester added a drapery effect and a baker's rack in the kitchen. Other rooms were done by La Belle Provence of Birmingham (bathroom), Dan Clancy of Perlmutter-Friewald of Franklin (dining room) and McIntosh Osborne Interiors of Birmingham (wine cellar).

Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday. The estate is at 1880 Wellesley, two blocks south of Eight Mile and west of Woodward. On street parking is readily available. Additional parking is available at the State Fairgrounds for $3 per car; free shuttle to showhouse. Tickets are $13 in advance, $15 at the door May 20 through June 11. Group rates for 15 or more are $10 per person. Private parties and special guided tours for large groups may be arranged by calling (313) 369-1996 in advance of the showhouse opening.

Tickets are available at all Crowley's stores.

For more information, tickets by mail and group reservations, call (313) 962-1000, Ext. 285.

Artist produces pensive portraits

By Linda Ann Chomin
Special Writer

Jonathon McDuffie has reached a new level of drawing combining monochrome with pastel in pensive portraits of people.

His latest works as well as the pastel paintings from which they evolved are featured in an exhibit of McDuffie's artwork running through June 9 in the Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission, the exhibit of nearly one dozen drawings concentrates on portraits he rendered of Wayne State University theater students.

The 47-year-old media development consultant for Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency isn't a prolific artist. His work is slow and exacting. In the course of a year he completes two to three drawings.

"A lot of the pieces are deliberately not finished. They're a mixture of monochrome and pastel. I always start with charcoal. Sometimes it's easy to be seduced by color," said McDuffie, who has exhibited his work at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, Detroit Artists Market, Willis Gallery and Scarab Club.

"I like drawing the human figure. There's a sort of a sensuality spin to it of liking to draw bodies, the angles, the curves. And as far as using pastels, I enjoy taking that raw pigment and putting it down. There's a real kind of animal enjoyment. I like the intensity of the color that doesn't mitigate the way oils do."

On the other hand McDuffie feels that color lures many artists into playing with technique. Instead of centering on content they become lost in manipulating the medium.

While studying for his bachelor and master of fine arts degrees at Wayne State University during the late 1960s and early 1970s McDuffie primarily focused on print making and photography. That may explain where his passion for working primarily with black and white comes from.

In 1985 he decided to return to his first love — drawing.

McDuffie's printmaking background, and his love of black and white, has left its imprint on his latest portraits.

"These are the drawings of a printmaker concerned with keeping a lot of sharp contrast between black and white," he said.

A graphic artist for most of his adult life, McDuffie began drawing when he was 8 years old.

Since then he has "developed an intense interest in the history and theories of art, visual learning, photography (as art and science) and all ways of turning two dimensional marks into ideas and images."

Spritual development is very important to him as well. In fact he sees each drawing as solving spiritual concerns.

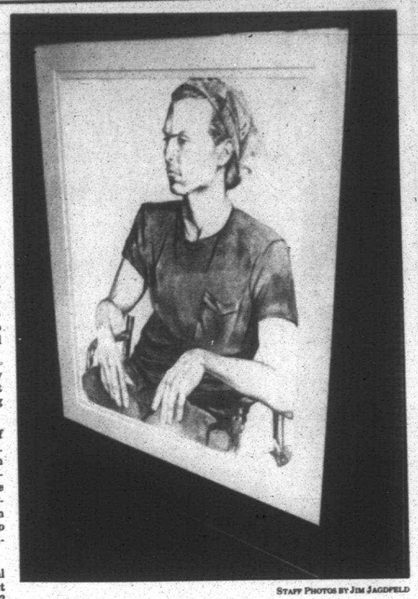

"I consider drawing a kind of means of spiritual development. They can be approached just from the aspect of drawing. In this portrait here I'm letting James make his own statement. I'm not forcing my interpretion of James on the viewer. In this one I want it to be just Renee, not my commentary on Renee," McDuffie said.

"There's also an art historical aspect to it. Where art is right now, is it really OK to do this? Both Gauguin and van Gogh weren't doing what the Impressionists were doing. I would like the viewer to start being a critic, to start forming an opinion."

Exhibit hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

■ A good location close to Hines Park, freeways and downtown Plymouth makes Greystone Estates an attractive buy. That's how the developer/builder of a small project at the site of a former church sees it.

An in-fill residential project at the site of a former church in Plymouth Township enables buyers to acquire a good product at an unbeatable price in a great location, the developer/builder says.

Greystone Estates, 25 lots on 7½ acres off Haggerty between Ann Arbor Trail and Ann Arbor Road, is the work of Robert Schwartz, president of United Homes in Farmington Hills.

"I knew it was a fantastic in-fill location," Schwartz said. "It has great freeway access, it's in a residential area and across the street from an elementary school."

Hines Park is a short jog or bicycle ride down Haggerty and downtown Plymouth with all of its quaint attractions and shopping is walkable up Ann Arbor Trail, he added.

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Three distinct floor plans are available at Greystone for less than $185,000.

Standard features in all three include separate tub and shower in the master suite, range and dishwasher in the kitchen, 2½ baths, fireplace, two-car attached garage, basement, first-floor laundry, bedroom ceiling lights and covered porch.

Two models are under construction.

The Chelsea, a Cape Cod with nearly 1,950 square feet, features the master suite on the main level and two bedrooms with loft or three bedrooms upstairs.

The loft option, expected by Schwartz to be selected by most buyers, overlooks the great room, and can be used as a computer/exercise/sitting area.

With either option, the upstairs contains a full bath.

The first floor, in addition to the master, offers a room that can be designed as a formal dining room or library, kitchen/eating nook and great room with sloped ceiling.

The model is priced at $182,075.

The other on-site model, the Kensington, is an 1,850-square-foot story and a half with three bedrooms and two baths upstairs. The master has two walk-in closets.

On the main level, the living room flows into the dining room — each with 10-foot ceilings — and the eating nook connects with the family room. A kitchen counter has a snack bar for quick meals on the go.

Recessed lights are over the fireplace in the family room.

The model sells for $174,750.

The other floor plan available to buyers, the Edmonton, is a 2,025-square-foot colonial with a living room, dining room and family room on the main level and a choice of four bedrooms or three bedrooms with loft upstairs.

The base price is $178,275.

Exteriors have some brick on all four sides and vinyl siding.

Greystone will have sidewalks, city water and sewers and access to the Plymouth-Canton Communi-

Women place women in full-time positions

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Every day is Secretaries Day for OfficeMates5 in Troy.

The female-owned business staffed with successful female account executives primarily places women in permanent job positions.

The franchise, owned by Nancy Moeller of West Bloomfield, was selected Office of the Year for 1994 among 350 in the OfficeMates5 network, a division of Management Recruiters.

Therese McShane, a Rochester resident, was National Account Executive of the Year both last year and in 1993.

Two other staffers, Marsha Haller and Michelle Park, have earned National Rookie of the Year honors for placement performance.

Kathy Chezick, the fifth member of the team, heads up the temporary placement end of the operation.

Following are edited excerpts from a recent interview with Moeller and McShane.

Who exactly do you place?

McShane: Some titles we've placed are administrative assistant, executive secretary, secretary, customer service, receptionist, medical biller, accounting clerks.

Moeller: Bookkeepers.

Ninety-five percent are women. Last year, we placed 375, I think. I'd guess 75 percent were permanent, 25 percent temporary or temp to hire (tryout).

This year, I expect it to be more ty Schools.

"I picture the typical buyer as professional people with families, kids who will probably go to the elementary across the street," Schwartz said. "Or, move-downs, empty-nesters who still want to own a home but not one with a lot of upkeep or high taxes.

"Price is a big attraction and location," he added. "In Plymouth Township, there's nothing really competing with it (price).

"From what I can see, there's a lot of site condos. These are platted lots where the resident owns his own lot," Schwartz said.

The property tax rate for township, county and school services in Greystone Estates is about $24.80 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value.

That means the owner of a $178,000 house there would annually pay $2,200.

Jill and David Russell, along with daughter, Rachael, will move into a Cape Cod with the three bedroom/loft option.

"It had all the things we were looking for — first floor laundry, master bedroom, all amenities — at a decent price," Jill said. "We were thrilled when it happened."

The family envisions using the loft for a media center/computer room.

"All the changes we wanted to make were no problem," she said. "We live in Plymouth now and really like the area."

Tim Lamb will buy the colonial.

"I wanted to buy a new house without going too far away," he said. "I like the area. I need the highway system to get to work. I like Plymouth. I guess that's number one.

"It was the most inexpensive offering of the group," Lamb added. "Economically, it's efficient with two floors under one roof. All of the bedrooms are upstairs out of the way.

"It's got a lot of open room on the first floor, a fireplace. I like the overall architecture. It's traditional," he said.

Until models at Greystone are ready, prospective buyers should call William Decker Realtors (313) 455-8400 in Plymouth to review floor plans and tour models built by Schwartz in other locations.

Women

50/50. That's the way we see the economy going.

The average salary, I would guess, would be between $18,000 and $25,000.

What are prospects for women looking to get into clerical type work?

McShane: We have a lot of openings. They're everywhere. Employees call in not with one opening, but needing several people. That's attributable to manufacturing being up now.

Moeller: The economy was down so long, when it turned, employers were so afraid to lock people in too soon. Now, it is better and they're overwhelmed. They haven't started building up (staff) soon enough.

What's the more difficult part of the job — finding employers who have jobs or people to fill them?

McShane: Now, finding qualified people committed to upgrading careers, that's the bigger challenge.

Moeller: The majority of our mornings is spent prospecting for employers. Afternoons are spent interviewing candidates, recruiting candidates.

There's no charge for people you place in jobs?

McShane: That's right. The fee is company paid. It's a percentage of a person's first-year earnings. Our fee schedule is almost identical to every other one.

It's approximately 1 percent(age point) per $1,000. If the salary is $20,000, the fee would be 21 percent or $4,200.

Moeller: We offer six months guaranteed. If someone falls off, we'll provide a replacement.

What advice would you give to people who may want to change jobs, go from part time to full time, maybe re-enter the job market after an extended absence?

McShane: They should think about what they like to do, what they don't like to do. Think about where their strengths lie, where their weaknesses are.

Think of the titles, positions, they're qualified for, the location they would like to work, the benefits they're going to need.

They should look at a salary range realistically. They should have in mind what makes for an ideal position.

If a person does all of that, they should be on track where they're going next.

Moeller: Updating skills.

McShane: They should know a word processing package of some kind. Those with Windows are most popular. Some exposure to spreadsheets, statistical or accounting. Another thing would be some form of (computer) graphics.

Adult ed, I think, is a great place to go. Every city puts out a flier on continuing ed. Look at the local library.

How does your firm stand out from the competition?

McShane: I think we're a stronger representative of the employer than other services.

It's almost like I'm one of their employees. They trust what I'm doing is in their best interest and I'm not trying to force a placement.

Moeller: We spend as much time with employers as candidates. We don't work with them unless we visit. We ask why they need the skill level they think they need.

McShane: We don't treat our (job) candidates like products, thrown in the marketplace. We treat them with respect and establish what their goals are, long-range dreams are.

Moeller: We don't send them places just to send them.

McShane: We're a batch of five women working together to make each other as successful as possible. We're supportive of each other, keep each other on track and provide uniform screening for customers.

Area economy slipped in April, bank says

The Detroit Area Business Activity Index compiled by Comerica Bank slipped 12 points in April to close at 153, compared with 165 in March. The index stood at 154 in April 1994.

David L. Littmann, senior economist at Comerica Bank, attributed the April slide to softer automotive sector performance. Year-to-date, the Detroit area economy is running 1.2 percent below the first four months of 1994, Littmann said.

April's weakness was equally centered on three components of the index: motor vehicle output, car sales, and the volume of financial transactions, which largely reflects the vigor of national auto sales.

"If an economic rebound does not occur in summer and fall, the Detroit area economy will not measure up to last year's performance levels, and unemployment rates will creep higher," Littmann added.

Comerica Bank compiles the Detroit Area Business Activity Index monthly from eight measures of regional activity, which are seasonally adjusted, corrected for inflation, and expressed as an index with 1982 as base year equal to 100.

The Economics Department of Comerica Bank has calculated the index monthly since 1967, depicting metropolitan Detroit's economy over seven full swings of the U.S. business cycle.

EMORY DANIELS

About six weeks ago the nurse ran a needle up my arm, filled a tube with blood, and shipped it off to the lab to be analyzed. About five weeks ago the results came back that my cholesterol level had hit the 280 mark. And so it was a little more than four weeks ago that I went out on the Internet searching for information on cholesterol, fat, nutrition, diets and health.

Along the way I found several sources of information on nutrition, health and medicine. And I learned far more than I ever wanted to know about fat, its importance in nutrition, and how to keep what you need and avoid the rest.

I also found the latest debates on what's harmful to bad cholesterol and what's not, and some great tips on maintaining a healthy eating lifestyle. I haven't done an Archie or Veronica search yet, though, on will power.

What I found was "10 Tips to Healthy Eating" and information on the Food Pyramid posted April 1994 by the American Dietetic Association, a January-February 1992 article from Food Insight on "Simple Strategies for Reducing Fat," a January 1995 report from the International Food Information Council (IFIC) entitled "Sorting Out the Facts About Fat" including the real scoop on hydrogenated fats, a "Backgrounder on Fat & Cholesterol," and an interview with Claude Lenfant, M.D., National Institute of Health director on "Winning the War on Cholesterol."

The International Food Information Council has a site on the Internet to combine colorful graphics and text to provide information on food safety and nutrition topics. The free site includes the IFIC bi-monthly newsletter, Food Insight. With special menus designed for reporters, health care professionals, educators, parents or consumers, on-line users can access the latest information on food safety and nutrition issues, food technologies, specific ingredients, and general nutrition guidance.

The IFIC World Wide Web (WWW) site can be accessed through Web browser like Mosaic or Netscape with this Universal Resource Locator (URL): http://ificinfo.health.org. Those who use Lynx might have to use this URL, http://ificinfo.health.org/homepage.htm. The IFIC also has a gopher site. When O&E On-liners select Gopher on the Internet menu, select the option of choosing your own Gopher site, and then enter gopher://ificinfo.health.org. I visited the Web site, followed the "consumer" links and also found a lot at the "Food, Safety and Nutrition" page and the "Sorting Out Facts About Fat" link.

These IFIC Web and Gopher sites also provide access to the Food Guide Pyramid, an approach which puts emphasis on balance, variety and moderation. Included here is information on how many popular foods like pizza and fajitas can help meet the recommendations in more than one food group. The pyramid addresses the idea of selecting food throughout the day with different nutritional components by choosing a food higher in fat, sugars or salt and then balancing it later in the day with foods lower in those nutrients.

Here are some other interesting health-medical sites I discovered on my own search a few weeks ago:

■ The SANTEL-WEB Server at http://www.crpht.lu/SANTEL/home.html is a collection of data bases of more use to health care professionals. Based in Luxembourg, Europe, this site for health care professionals and students points to Web sites throughout the world with medical information and medical related software. Follow the Mosaic SQL gateway to some pretty interesting search tools.

■ The Natural Medicine, Complementary Health Care and Alternative Therapies at http://www.teleport.com:80/(tilde mark)amrta is just loaded with health links. A quick sampling includes links to alternative care, family health, homeopathy, and chiropractic. I followed a nutrition link to Arizona Health Services Library and searched by subject using Web Crawler and the EINet Galaxy Nutrition Index, both very fruitful. I used a less helpful index search tool and found a link to food and nutrition abstracts and another to Gopher servers.

■ The Medical List is a guide to Internet clinical medicine resources that can be accessed with Gopher with this address gopher://una.hh.lib.umich.edu:70/00/inetdirsstacks/medclin:malet and via the Web by pointing to http://kuhttp.cc.ukans.edu/cwis/units/medcntr/Lee/HOMEPAGE.HTML. Pointers to The Medical List will be found at other medical, health and nutrition home pages. The list categories Internet clinical medicine resources by disease and specialty. In mid-March some 60 new entries were added to The Medical List.

■ A very helpful Web site has been furnished by our friends in Canada who built a home page called HealthNet. The URL is http://debra.dgbt.doc.ca:80/(tilde mark)mike/h ealthnet. Upon arrival you'll find several links to medical and health sources. I went to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and then followed the "Health Care Resources" link to a Fam-Med Health Line gopher site. HealthNet is loaded with information about Usenet, Listserv, Gopher and WAIS sources.

■ Stanford Medical Center is easily accessed on the Web by pointing to http://www.med.Stanford.edu/MedCenter elcome.html. The home page has graphical rectangles that serve as links to the areas of Education, Health Care and Research. Keep following the links and you'll find a lot here but much of it is of more use to professionals than consumers.

■ MED HELP International is a non-profit organization comprised of volunteer medical professionals who provide information, written in non-technical terminology, to patients and their families throughout the world. Based in Melbourne, Fla, the URL for Telnet, FTP and the Web is http://medhelp.netusa.net/.

So, stay healthy. As for me — well, let's talk in six months.

Home builder elects director

Pulte Corp. announced at its annual meeting of shareholders, the election of Francis J. Sehn to its board of directors. Sehn is founder and chief executive officer of the Fran Sehn Co., an international consulting service in Bloomfield Hills.

In 1978, he acquired the Martin Electric Division ITT Industrial Group and founded Robogate Systems Inc. Robogate was subsequently sold to Bendix Comau Production Systems, where Sehn served as chairman of Comau Productivity Systems until his retirement in 1991.

Sehn, a native of Youngstown, Ohio, attended Wayne State University, the University of Detroit and Lawrence Technological University in Southfield. He was an associate professor in Wayne State University's School of Business Administration from 1967 until 1968.

In 1972, he was elected to the Michigan Academy of Science, Arts and Letters. He is a member of numerous professional organizations including the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, for which he served as International President in 1965-1966, a Fellow of the Institute of Directors, London, England, and Honorary Life Fellow of the Institute of Production Engineers, London, England.

Sehn's previous board experience includes serving as a director of Sheraton Hotels Corp., Fruehauf Corp., Motor Wheel Corp., Lucas Industries Ltd. and various other companies. He and his wife, Celestine, live in Bloomfield Hills.

Other directors re-elected at Monday's annual meeting include William J. Pulte and Howard P. Berkowitz. Each director was elected to serve a three-year term expiring in 1998.

Pulte Corp. is the parent of the Pulte group of companies. Pulte Home Corp., one of the nation's largest builders, operates in 24 states and 37 markets across the country. ICM Mortgage Corp., a national mortgage bank, operates in substantially the same markets as Pulte Home Corp.
