School officials mull millage bid

■ Plymouth-Canton school officials vowed to put a 2.3-mill property tax increase back on the ballot either this fall or next year. However, one board member says it may not be the same question.

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

If at first you don't succeed, try, try again. In the wake of Plymouth-Canton voters' defeat of a 2.3-mill property tax increase Monday, school officials likely will hold another millage election, either this fall or next year.

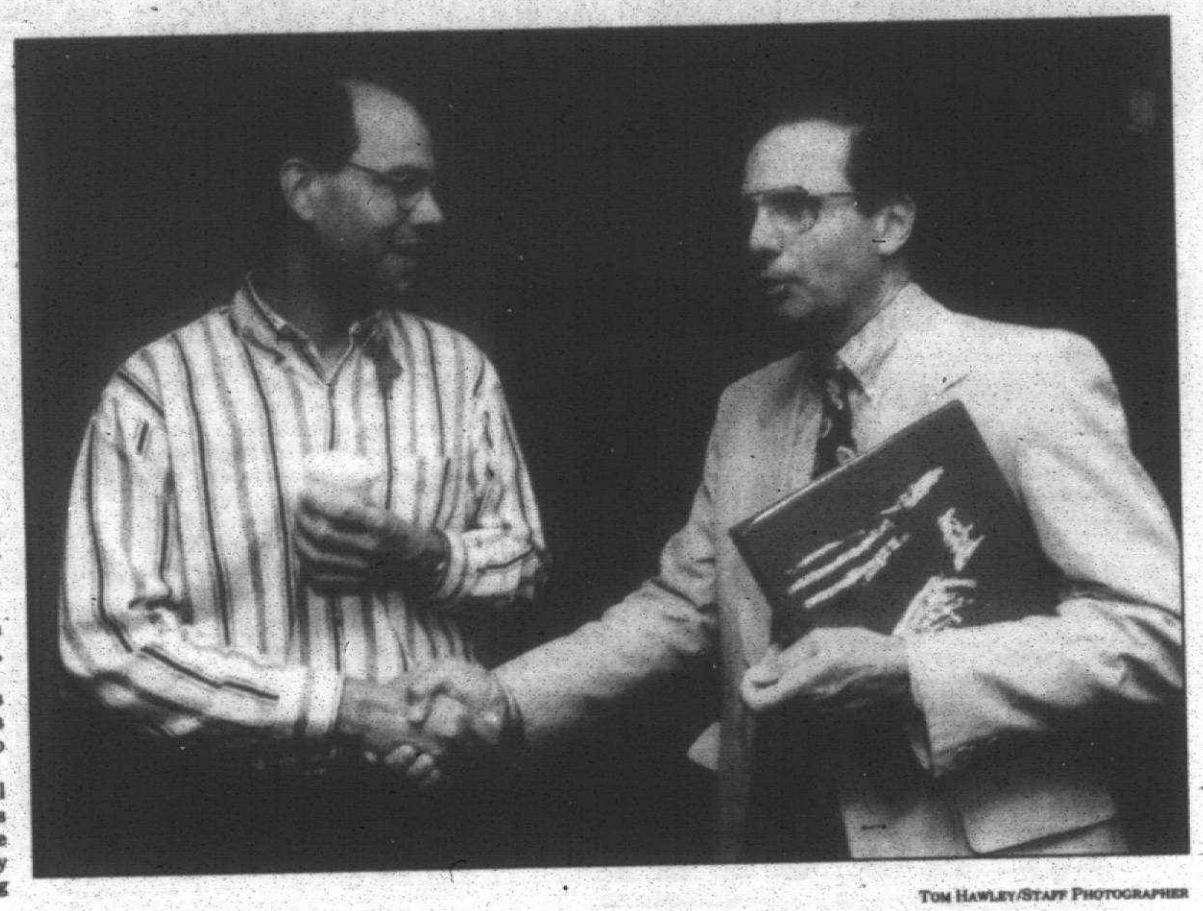

The two-year, 2.3-mill enhancement levy failed by just 197 votes, 4,145 to 3,948. The $12 million it would have raised was earmarked for textbooks, teacher training, and instructional materials.

The 18-mill, 10-year renewal on non-homestead property won handily, 5,797 to 2,304.

Just over 12 percent of the district's 65,000 registered voters cast ballots in the election, which also saw two school board members seated.

A board room packed with school officials, candidates and supporters fell silent shortly after 11 p.m. as the absentee votes came in. Until they were counted, the millage was passing by a slim margin.

Superintendent Charles Little said, "Obviously, I am disappointed. It is an opportunity that we missed. It's difficult enough to ask our taxpayers for money. I can't imagine being successful asking them for money that would be shared with someone else in two years." (By law, the district may go to voters twice a year with millage requests. After July 1, 1997, school millages must be levied countywide, and revenues shared countywide.)

Congratulations: Superintendent Charles Little congratulates school board candidate Michael Maloney on his election. "We need your creativity money-wise," Little told Maloney.

"This was indeed close," added Little, "and I am somewhat buoyed by that. There was a lot of support for it. The papers supported it, and the district extended itself to many groups. We will continue to do that. Hopefully, eventually, we can gain more support."

Little is leaning toward a millage request next year. "In my opinion, voters were very clear about this. In my opinion, it wouldn't be advisable to do it again verbatim. Next year is a different story. But the decision rests with the board of education."

Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business, recommends a second election. "I think the district will

Playscape volunteers feeling tired, proud

A dream come true.

"I am overwhelmed," said playscape organizer Christine Donaldson, as she surveyed the completed 14,000-square-foot Heritage Hideout playscape Sunday evening. "I've had a ball."

When the sun set Sunday, volunteers and organizers stood in awe of what they had accomplished collectively during the five-day construction that began Wednesday, June 7.

"The community excitement has been phenomenal. It has brought everyone together," said volunteer Sally Bailey of McAuley Urgent Care, whose employees were on hand to provide first aid throughout construction.

Completion of the playscape was capped at dusk with a closing ceremony featuring the kids who made a paper chain around the playscape. Nick Kulka of the Sound Machine provided nine hours of music Sunday for the completion and closing.

"To be here Wednesday when there was nothing here. To see all these people working together and to see it as it is now," said organizer Lynne Eckardt. "It has been absolutely fantastic."

Changing weather and hard work didn't dampen the enthusiasm and determination of organizers and volunteers to create the playscape that community children, with the help of the Robert S. Leathers Co. architects, planned earlier this year.

Completion of the playscape marks the end of a long year's worth of work for organizers, led by Donaldson, who took her idea to township officials, who provided $30,000 seed money toward an approximate $100,000 goal.

Organizers established a network to gather donations, materials and volunteers for the playscape that stands proudly by the picnic shelter in Heritage Park. "Even for us to see it come together is unbelievable. I would do it again. It was fun to see all the volunteers," said organizer Jan Pickard.

Heritage Hideout: Organizers and volunteers worked day and night June 7-11 to complete the long-awaited 14,000-square-foot playscape in Canton's Heritage Park.

Throughout construction, organizers and volunteers wondered if they would get the project done by Sunday evening for closing ceremonies or if they would have to scale the structure back.

"We pulled so much of it together today," said Paul Hansen, a consultant with the Leathers Co. "But the project got completed. It was a real marvelous thing."

Construction was moving nicely along and then high school graduation weekend hit. "At 3 p.m. Saturday, this place cleaned out. But they came back between 8-10 p.m.," said organizer Michelle Hall, who was in charge of group volunteers.

Sunday morning, a volunteer went to churches to solicit volunteers. "At 10 a.m., we were getting this line of traffic," Donaldson said. At one point, Hall stood outside of the park grabbing volunteers as motorists drove by.

"When they put the peaks on, we knew we were there," Eckardt said. "Everyone can point to what they did."

Some volunteers took vacation days from work to spend a day or more at the playscape. Others took a

Canton officials reject July 4 fireworks permit

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Canton officials have denied the Burda Bros. Fireworks a permit that would have allowed their customers — members of a fireworks association — who buy what are considered prohibited fireworks to shoot them off July 4 at a designated site on Michigan Avenue.

"The law enforcement nightmare created if Burda Bros. are granted a permit is that though they feel they can sell defined fireworks to retail customers, in fact, retail customers cannot buy, possess or transport these fireworks," said Canton Public Safety Director John Santomauro, who recommended permit denial.

The permit would have allowed American Fireworks Users Association members — Burda Bros. customers — to buy certain types of fireworks that are prohibited without a permit and to return to 47725 Michigan Ave. 9:30-11:30 p.m. July 4 to shoot them off or to have a pyrotechnic operator shoot them off for customers.

Canton police will take at least five criminal cases — violations of the state fireworks law — to 35th District Court Friday morning. Elfin and Elissa Burda and an employee were charged within the past week with misdemeanors. In a couple instances they allegedly sold fireworks, such as rockets and roman candles, to uniformed police officers.

The township board's vote to deny the permit Tuesday was not unanimous. Supervisor Tom Yack opposed the denial. He said he preferred to table action, pending more information about traffic and safety plans for the July 4 fireworks display on the Burdas' three-acre site. He also questioned the inadequacy of the permit application and preferred to wait to see what transpires in 35th District Court Friday.

"If the court determines they haven't violated anything, that's meaningful to me," said Yack, adding that his acquaintance with the Burdas did not affect his decision. "I know a lot of people in the community."

Burda Bros. and the Wayne County Prosecutor's office have disagreed for more than a year now on the interpretation of state fireworks law, which allows the sale and use — without a permit — of only a limited type of fireworks, such as sparklers, fountains and smoke bombs.

Maloney, Blamer top vote-getters

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

As precinct results poured in at the board office Monday night, it became clear that school board hopefuls Michael Maloney and Carrie Blamer were going to be the next two members of the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

"I'm on cloud nine right now," said Maloney of Plymouth, who along with candidate Dave McCarthy received the Michigan Education Association's endorsement.

A teary-eyed Blamer exchanged hugs with her campaign workers, many of whom belong to the district's Class-size Action Partnership.

"I had about seven people on my committee, and our main goal was to involve anyone and everyone who wanted to get involved," said Blamer, who enjoyed the support of outgoing school board member Susan Feiten. "We went door-to-door and worked hard."

Maloney, a Salem High School and University of Michigan graduate, was the top vote-getter with 2,754 votes. Blamer, former Bird Elementary PTO president, received 2,082 votes. David McCarthy finished third with 1,464 votes, and Daniel Dunnigan was fourth with 1,181.

Brenda Anderson Plecha was fifth with 1,157 votes. Sixth was Gerald Trumpka, with 1,053 votes. Seventh was Jeff Phillips with 975 votes. Finishing eighth, even though she withdrew from the race and didn't campaign, was Anne Cox with 682 votes. In ninth place was Paul Schrauben with 488 votes, and Sheryl Khoury, who also withdrew, was 10th with 482 votes.

Maloney was the first to file, and started out by gathering 1,000 petition signatures, even though he needed just 29 to be certified as a candidate.

"I just got out and talked to people," said Maloney, a manager in reliability engineering for Ford Motor. "I've been going at this for eight weeks. I went to school events, talked to parents and sent out about 1,000 pieces of mail. I probably spent $1,000-$1,200."

During the campaign, Maloney was questioned by some who wondered whether his being married to a teacher couldn't be a conflict of interest.

"What I tell people is that I have a 6-year-old son, a wife employed by the district, and a mom and dad who live in the district. I have to look at all three of them in the eye, and I'm not going to do that by taking sides. We have to come up with win-win solutions for difficult problems."

Plymouth Township's Blamer, who has a child at West Middle School and one at Bird Elementary, said she received support from teachers and senior citizens. "I was surprised at that," said Blamer, who spent about $2,000 on her campaign.

Candidate Jeff Phillips said, "I can walk out of here saying I have seven new friends (fellow candidates). We all got along; there was no mud-slinging or any of that."

try it again, whether it be this budget year or next. The schools will still lack the necessary support that's needed in the classrooms," he said. "Those things that need to be replaced or added will just have to be put on hold status until we find adequate funds."

Hoedel added that the outcome is "very disappointing. This election was for kids."

Had the millage passed, $1.3 million would have been spent on textbooks and instructional materials, and $350,000 on teacher training. As it stands, $500,000 will be spent on texts and materials, and $200,000 on staff development, said Hoedel.

A fall election would cost the district about $18,000, the same amount Monday's election cost.

Outgoing longtime board member Roland Thomas said he'd like to survey residents who voted against the millage. "One of the things we need to do is survey folks as to why it went down. We have failed to find out where the hot buttons are."

Newly elected Trustee Michael Maloney said, "I think when we fail at anything, we have to look inside ourselves and say, 'What can we do differently to communicate to people this is a good idea?' If we decide to go after the enhancement millage again, it's clear we will have to do a better job of reaching out to the community."

Several poll-goers interviewed by the Observer shared their reasons for voting no.

Annette and Michael Walsh voted at Canton High School, their two little ones in tow. "I'm sick of higher taxes," said Michael Walsh. "Double that," said his wife.

Janice and Robert Gale of Plymouth said they'll turn down millage requests until there is "fiscal responsibility, excellent management, and truth.

"If the district were a business, it would have folded up years ago, in my opinion," said Bob Gale. "They need to have an outside, signed audit done by someone who can't be bought off. They need an audit at every level, from the custodians, to teachers and the superintendent. The results, any mismanagement, and who is responsible, should be published. Also, the district should show who is trained in what, and what all these in-services have done to increase test scores," he said.

Joan Headrick of Canton said, "I almost always vote no against a tax increase. I just feel there should be more fiscal responsibility with the money they have."

Said Plymouth's Steven Garrett: "They don't spend the money well that we give them now. They don't take care of my money like I do."

Wayne-Westland voters OK tax proposals

Newly elected Wayne-Westland school board members vow to bring harmony to a board with a sometimes politically divisive past and to strive for financial stability in a district that scored victories Monday with two tax proposals.

Political newcomers Martha Pitsenbarger of Wayne and David James of Westland won handily in Monday's election, capturing four-year terms after defeating third-place finisher Ed Turner.

"I am pleased that the voters have endorsed me," Pitsenbarger, a clinical social worker, said as she celebrated with some 75 supporters at the Willow Creek Apartments clubhouse on Newburgh near Marquette.

Pitsenbarger, the top vote-getter, said one of her top priorities will be to boost school funding by pushing for donations from the business and industrial sector for a community foundation.

James, a 37-year-old Realtor, called his second-place victory "exciting" and said he wants to see "some harmony" on the seven-member school board.

"I'm pleased that the voters elected me," he said, "and I really want to show that I'm worthy of the position."

James, also celebrating at Willow Creek, said his No. 1 priority will be to improve the district's financial position.

To that end, voters gave the school board some help Monday by approving two tax proposals that will help officials erase a deficit, earlier projected at $6.4 million for next year.

By substantial margins, voters renewed a 15-year, 18-mill tax on non-homestead property and approved a two-year, 3-mill plan that will cost the owner of an $80,000 home about $120 a year.

The victories mean that:

- Middle school and senior high students this fall will have bus transportation, which was eliminated in October amid deep budget cuts.
- Students won't have to pay fees to participate in athletics and other extracurricular activities.
- High schools will be able to maintain program levels needed for accreditation.
- The district, despite a $2 million deficit this year, is expected to "break even" by June of 1996, said Patricia Brand, assistant superintendent for business. School officials, who had projected the deficit would swell to $6.4 million, can now comply with state orders to erase the red ink.

Voters renewed the 18-mill, non-homestead plan by a more than 2-to-1 margin, with 68.7 percent favoring it and 31.3 percent opposing it.

Chamber program helps develop leadership skills

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

It took about nine months, but the new Leadership Canton program has given birth to 20 community leaders.

"This program will now take its place in Canton history," said Janet Volante, president of the Canton Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the program.

At the graduation ceremony June 8, the graduates were honored, as were those who served on a steering committee to design and implement the program, designed to foster involvement and leadership in the community.

The nine-month program began in September 1994 with a retreat, followed by monthly sessions that covered particular aspects of leadership and the community. Students also participated in projects, including organizing and planning the first Friends of the Canton Library golf outing; planning the first Business-Education Connection Day; defining the quality of life in Canton; and developing a theme for Canton to be used for economic development, relocation, public awareness and relations.

■ The nine-month program began in September 1994 with a retreat, followed by monthly sessions that covered particular aspects of leadership and the community. Students also participated in projects, including organizing and planning the first Friends of the Canton Library golf outing; planning the first Business-Education Connection Day; defining the quality of life in Canton; and developing a theme for Canton to be used for economic development, relocation, public awareness and relations.

"We did this to get to know the community, find places where we could volunteer and serve in the community and to gain leadership skills," said graduate Judy Teachworth, Canton youth services librarian.

The program involved a lot of homework, reading, planning projects, and hands-on experiences, such as visiting the 35th District Court, role playing as a Canton planning commissioner, riding with the Canton police, and visiting social service agencies and a prison.

"For the whole month, you were focused on one topic," said graduate Sally Bailey, a clinical nurse manager at McCauley Urgent Care, who was fascinated with the program's session on the future.

Graduate Carol Thompson of the Huron Valley Girl Scouts is sure she wants to volunteer her services in the human services arena. But she was also interested in how local government, particularly planning, works.

"The one that stretched me the most was human services. I was amazed at the number of needs in our community. My eyes were opened," said graduate Ron Paradowicz, an accountant. "I was amazed at the array of people who were brought in to talk to us. We were talking to the right people."

Graduate Tom Adamusik's name is generally attached to the chamber, for which he served as president. "I've been so active that I thought the program would give me more of a view of the whole community. You get the inside track. I'm going to be very active. I would like to work on township committees."

Graduate David Pifer of the Fairfield Inn said he enjoyed the program because he met a lot of people and gained a lot of knowledge. "I learned about different parts of the community that I didn't know about. Canton is the only place I could see where this program is so successful because of the people who live here."

For graduate Paul Schrauben, Leadership Canton helped him decide to seek a seat on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education. "The educational session was important to me. I could identify because I have kids. I went to the school board meetings. I came from a small school and it was interesting to see what is available here."

Graduate and chamber member Carol Felker enjoyed touring certain facilities in the community, such as companies and social service agencies. "Every month, I went home and said, 'This was the best topic.' "

Graduate Brenda Plecha of Family Services, who recently sought election to the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education, said she has a better picture of how to make things work in the community. "The session on planning and zoning was interesting. I know now why there might be two muffler shops next to each other."

Bob Zulker, Gil-Mar Manufacturing corporate plant manager, was encouraged to participate by his company president and Canton Supervisor Tom Yack. "I am a leader. I've always been a leader. In the program, I got to practice more." An east coast native, Zulker learned more about Canton and how Michigan works.

"I'm a member of my condo board of directors. I think they have gained some of my knowledge from the program."

Graduate Michael Palchesko of Detroit Edison also joined the program to learn about the community. "I picked up at least one valuable thing in each of the sessions." But the sessions on government and the justice system particularly intrigued him. "There were so many good presentations."

Canton planner and graduate Jeff Goulet taught the planning session but himself joined the program to learn more about the community. "For me being the planner, I felt I needed to get better connected with the community and to get to know the community leaders."

Graduate Ron Lieberman, a planning commissioner and Detroit Edison retiree, said he encourages participation in future Leadership Canton programs. "I recommend it particularly for business people and residents who want to get involved. They can network with community leaders. It's helpful."

LEADERSHIP CANTON

PROGRAM SPONSORS

Tom Sullivan, Tom Adamusik, Dick Egli, Carol Herringer, Phil LaJoy, Charlie Mahoney, Bruce Patterson, Marty Schendel, Linda Shapona, Gary Stevers, Jean Tabor, Key Voyles and Tom Yack.

Sponsors of the 1994-95 Leadership Canton program included:

Applebee's Bar & Grill; Canton Township; Cleary College; Detroit Edison; Dunkin' Donuts; Fellows Creek Golf Club; Jonathan's Family Restaurant; McAuley Urgent Care; Metaltec Steel Abrasives; Mountain Jacks; Mult-Building Co.; My Generation Jewelry; Norrell Temporary Services; Olive Garden; Papa Romano's; ProCoil Corp.; St. Mary Hospital; Sumdeigh II; Thai Bistro; University of Michigan Health Care Center; Wade-Trim Associates.

Memories: "We weren't relatives but we were family," said Gertrude Hargreaves during an oral history taping for the Canton Historical Society. Ten early residents told recorded their life history. "We lived for one another," added George Simons, explaining the tenor of the times.

Residents share parts of tapestry of Canton's past

By Sue Buck

Yesterday's children reminisced about their childhood at a tea held to celebrate the debut of their video histories.

The Canton Historical Society presented the premiere and open house reception for Phase 1 of "Canton Memories — A Collection of Oral Histories" June 7 at Cherry Hill School, located at the corner of Cherry Hill and Ridge roads.

Perhaps because they grew up at a time when children were expected to be seen and not heard, the featured subjects had extensive recollections of early Canton.

The first 10 video interviews included: Heloise Travis Dunstan, Elsie Fulford, Donald Gill, Gertrude Hargreaves, Roy Schultz, Robert Simmons, George Simons, Flora Thurman, Avis Waldecker and Dorothy West. Only Elsie Fulford was not present for the gathering.

Their stories tell of Canton's days as a thriving farming community. All attended a one-room schoolhouse. Nine one-room schoolhouses once existed in the township, each its own school district.

Three video recorders were set up to show tapes of each person.

Omnicom will broadcast these videos at a yet undetermined schedule. Some sat around and chatted. Others reviewed their histories, with friends.

George Simons worked as a hired hand on George Smith's farm and also repaired vehicles. "If a farmer took ill, his neighbors would do his chores, before they did their own," Simons said. "There was a lot of togetherness."

They remembered the good times, the people long gone.

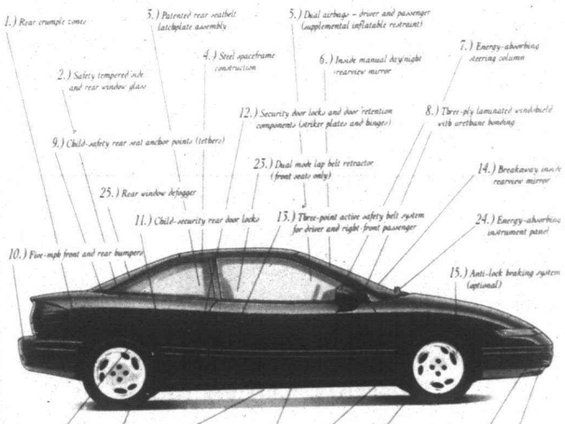

Dunstan recalled her father's 1914 Ford and the pleasure she experienced riding in it to her grandfather's farm on Canton Center Road.

She attended Truesdell School on Haggerty. She enjoyed overhearing the other grades studying. "We learned everything that everybody else did," Dunstan said. "We had elaborate Christmas parties with all the parents there. Big and little kids played together and everyone helped to carry wood in the winter."

The Schultz family, a farming family, set eggs out for sale each day, never worrying whether people would pay. "They left the money there," he said.

Airport the site of pancake breakfast

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Get your appetites ready for the annual Pancake Breakfast, sponsored by the Experimental Aircraft Association 7-11 a.m. Sunday, June 18 — Father's Day — at Canton-Plymouth Mettetal Airport.

"We are the pancake flippers," said Ed Purdy, EAA Chapter 113 president, referring to the 75 members.

The public is encouraged to bring its collective appetite to the popular breakfast that serves as a fund-raiser for the organization. Adult tickets are $3.50, children's $2.50, for the cuisine of pancakes, sausage, juice or coffee.

During the breakfast, EAA members will schedule for the Young Eagles, which provides free flights for kids. The national goal of the EAA is to provide one million airplane rides to children, Purdy said.

From the breakfast and other activities, the EAA is able raise money for maintenance and utility bills on its airport building and to provide annual scholarships to graduating high school seniors who are interested in aviation.

The EAA recently awarded two scholarships to honor students Darren T. Schindel, a Canton High School graduate, and Samuel J. LaGrow, a Salem High School graduate. Both plan to seek aviation careers. The $500 scholarships were provided through proceeds raised at last year's pancake breakfast, Purdy said.

few hours here and there — but always returning.

Members and families of Cub Scout Pack 1539 of Fiegel Elementary School spent Friday night guarding the construction. "It's important for our kids to see everyone working together," said Cathy Lytle, who with husband Scott, sons Scott, 10, Craig, 9, and daughter Tracy, 4, worked with other Cub Scouts.

While the adults did the skilled work, kids spread mulch, soaped nails, washed tires and color-coded nails. Everyone's job was important and added to the final product. "I can't believe how this has come together," said volunteer Peggy Staeb. Her husband, Rene, took a day off to work on the playscape and returned for more. "I brought my 12-year-old son Kevin. We had a lot of fun here," Rene Staeb said.

Volunteers and organizers amazed each other with their determination. Organizers lauded Eric Feldkamp, who just graduated from Plymouth Salem High School, and skipped the parties for the playscape. "I love doing this stuff," said Feldkamp, 18, who joins the U.S. Army in August. "I started working on it Wednesday right after school. I wasn't planning on doing this much. But I liked it so much I came back."

On June 9, the Burdas' attorney, Hugh Davis, filed a temporary restraining order in Wayne County Circuit Court against the township and police department. The order prevents police from confiscating fireworks from the business, but doesn't prevent them from enforcing the law, Yack said.

"These are internationally regulated consumer fireworks approved for use by adults and children with adult supervision," Davis said. "Yes, you need a permit for some of these fireworks."

Elissa Burda said four to six pyrotechnic operators would be on hand to shoot off the fireworks. Customers may shoot off the fireworks themselves, as well. "I don't sell anything like the city (township) would shoot off," Burda said, referring to the Liberty Fest fireworks display. "You could store them in your broom closet with no problem."

Burda acknowledged she has no guarantee customers will return to the site July 4. Those who do are educated in the safe fireworks handling.

"It is simply going to mislead your citizens that it is OK to buy fireworks and it is not OK," said George Ward, Wayne County chief assistant prosecutor.

Ward and Santomauro said that the fireworks association is an attempt to circumvent state fireworks law. "This is not the fireworks we remember shooting off as a kid growing up," Santomauro said. "These are dangerous fireworks in the hands of people, the general public."

Even if the Burdas and the fireworks association had been awarded the permit, customers who buy fireworks such as roman candles, rockets and firecrackers, for example, would be violating the state fireworks law, Ward said.

Illegal fireworks are generally considered anything that moves, spins, leaves the ground, emits a report or shoots. Illegal fireworks include firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and roman candles, according to Canton fire and police officials.

New law to help elderly renters move

State Capitol capsules:

Low-income senior citizens could terminate rental agreements when subsidized housing becomes available under a bill Gov. John Engler is expected to sign.

State Rep. Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills, sponsored House Bill 4287, which won overwhelmingly support in both the House and Senate.

The bill permits the breaking of rental agreement by a tenant 62 or older who becomes eligible for senior-citizen housing. Tenants must have occupied the unit for more than 13 months and give 60 days written notice of termination.

Tenants unable to live independently also may break agreements with a notarized statement from a physician. Dolan said the Office of Services to the Aging agreed that getting out of leases in order to move into subsidized housing is among the top problems facing senior citizens.

New penalty

Some convicted drunk drivers could forfeit their vehicles under a Senate-passed bill sponsored by Loren Bennett, R-Canton. A court could confiscate the vehicle owned by a person convicted a third time of driving while impaired or driving under the influence of liquor or a controlled substance.

"Anyone who has actually been convicted three times is a menace to himself and others," said Bennett. "We need to stop the individuals who are driving one-ton weapons through our neighborhoods and on our highways."

A court-confiscated vehicle will be sold for its actual value. Innocent joint owners will have their shares returned to them in dollars. The offender's share will be used for restitution for crime victims and law enforcement, said Bennett.

Future state increases would need a 60 percent majority rather than 50 percent-plus-one in both chambers of the Legislature under a plan proposed by Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham.

Both chambers would have to give it two-thirds votes to put it on the ballot, and voters would have to approve it in order to amend the Michigan Constitution. If approved, the constitutional change would apply to the personal income tax, sales tax, use tax and single business tax.

"It's easy for some to spend other people's money," said Bouchard, assistant majority floor leader in the Senate. "Increased taxes are a significant disincentive to economic growth and prosperity."

Lyme hearings

Two Oakland County legislators say they'll conduct public hearings this summer on alleged under-reporting of Lyme disease, a tick-borne bacterial infection that attacks the heart, joints and nervous system.

Reps. Penny Crissman, R-Rochester, and John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Township, will announce the schedule later. They said only 33 cases were reported by the Department of Public Health. "We should look at the protocol for treatment and where we need to be headed in terms of Lyme disease public policy," said Jamian, who chairs the House Public Health Policy Committee.

The disease was first diagnosed in children in Lyme, Conn., in 1975. A support group form Jackson, Hillsdale and Branch counties says its members are being denied treatment and recognition by physicians.

Child deaths

The House of Representatives has passed two bills to help officials determine causes of death among children.

Rep. James Ryan, R-Redford, sponsored House Bill 4731 to add county medical examiners to the list of people who would have access to child protective service reports. Current law requires medical examiners to investigate all cases in which death was unexpected, caused by violence, the result of abortion, or where the victim was without medical attention 48 hours before death. But they can't legally use Children's Protective Services central registry files to help determine the origin of death.

Rep. Michelle McManus, R-Lake Leelanau, sponsored House Bill 4783 which gives local Child Fatality Review Teams access to the Children's Protective Services central registry. Fifteen pilot teams in 15 counties will be named next month.

"Those who perform autopsies must have access to every clue," said Ryan, "especially when there are signs that violence may have been the cause."

Added McManus: "Michigan is one of the last to establish an arsenal of in-depth, multi-disciplinary techniques to review child deaths."

District honors top volunteer

Lee Ann Young was honored with the VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools) award by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education recently.

The board and the "I Care" Committee established the award to congratulate and recognize volunteers who make a difference in the district.

Young has been an active volunteer at both Field and Bentley elementary schools.

She has served as PTO president at both schools, organized a Bentley ice cream social, established Art Week at both schools, and sits on the interviewing committee for teaching candidates.

Young also organized a birthday celebration for Bentley, established a salute to volunteers, and serves as a CATCH (Caring Athletes Teaming for Children's Hospital) supporter and worker.

"Her willingness to help is only a phone call away," said Bentley Elementary School principal Larry Miller. "Her strength and independence combined with cooperation make her a powerful contributor. Lee Ann has also helped other parents with understanding diabetes," added Miller.

Big flowers

Principal plan: It's status quo

Doing away with the position of Plymouth-Canton High School principal was a short-lived idea.

After Canton Principal Tom MacKenzie announced his retirement, Superintendent Charles Little surveyed staff, students and parents to explore the possibility of realigning the administrative structure of the two high schools at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

"I've come to the conclusion that both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem should have a principal of their own, and that they should be on equal footing," Little told the school board.

"It wasn't difficult to come to that conclusion after speaking with people. Students said they needed two principals. Even if we had an executive principal, it would be perceived as a pyramid of bureaucracy people would have a tough time dealing with. Students also said to leave the letter jackets as they are."

Parents want a principal as a focus point, said Little.

Teachers emphasized that the two principals need to be "on equal footing," the superintendent said. "They need to feel there is an administrator at hand. They also said there should be someone to oversee instruction."

Little said he planned to post the position of Canton principal right away.

The concept of area coordinators working as assistant principals in various disciplines will be kept, he added.

Rotary Club aids deserving students

Plymouth Rotary Club announced awards of Plymouth Rotary Vocational-Technical Scholarships to seniors at the Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

Achievement in vocational and technical courses as well as school activities, work experience and community service determined the successful students. They are:

Contributions from the Rotary Fall Festival chicken barbecue, Rotary Golf Classic and donations to the Plymouth Rotary Foundation support the scholarships. Plymouth Rotary Club President Edwin Schulz and Foundation President Paul Sincock announced the awards: "We expect this money will substantially aid these fine students achieve their career goals. Rotary salutes the many non-Rotarians whose contributions to Rotary events have made these youngsters' job hopes possible."

Scholarship goes to Salem student

Melanie Bosse of Plymouth Salem High School has been named the recipient of the first George Lawton Memorial Scholarship presented by Community Federal Credit Union.

Lawton served the members of Community Federal Credit Union for 29 years as general manager. The scholarship fund was established to honor his memory and reward students who demonstrate the Credit Union's "People Helping People" philosophy.

At Salem High School's Honors Convocation in May, the first annual George Lawton Scholarship for $500 was awarded to Bosse.

Bosse, a Canton resident, was chosen for her academic excellence, work experience and the volunteer work she has done in the Plymouth-Canton community. She has maintained a 3.95 GPA, been a member of the Salem swim team, worked for a local real estate office and managed to donate her time through a variety of school, church and community groups. She plans to attend the University of Michigan to pursue a career in actuarial mathematics and finance.

"We are very pleased to award the first annual George Lawton Scholarship to such an outstanding individual" said Daniel Herriman, chairman of the Credit Union's Scholarship Committee.

Bash in the works for Old Shillelagh

A James Joyce Bloomsday celebration is planned for 5-9 p.m. Thursday, June 15, at the Old Shillelagh, 349 Monroe at the west end of Greektown in Detroit.

The eighth annual event is planned by the metro Detroit Chapter of the Irish American Cultural Institute.

Bloomsday — the anniversary of the day in 1904 when Leopold Bloom, the hero of Joyce's "Ulysses," set out on his day-long journey through the streets of Dublin — is celebrated all over the world by Joyce enthusiasts, and other party lovers.

For those who can't get to Dublin on Bloomsday, the local celebration offers a Dublin pub atmosphere, readings from "Ulysses" and other works by Joyce, spontaneous recitations from the audience, plus traditional Irish music by Jim Perkins.

The donation is $5. Liquid refreshments and fine foods are available at the cash bar. For more information, call (810) 540-6687.

ROLL CALL REPORT

House approves balanced budget plan

HOUSE

Republican Budget: Voting 238 for and 193 against, the House approved a Republican plan to reach a balanced budget by 2002, by curbing the growth of federal spending by $1.4 trillion over the next seven years. More than $6 trillion in red ink would remain in 2002, but the national debt no longer would grow each year.

The measure (H Con Res 67) eliminates three cabinet departments (Energy, Commerce and Education), 284 federal programs, and 82 agencies and commissions. It reduces Medicare spending growth by $283 billion, Medicaid growth by $184 billion and welfare growth by $101 billion, and it cuts individual and corporate taxes by $360 billion while allowing defense spending to rise an average of $8 billion annually above its present $257 billion level. Domestic discretionary spending growth is curbed by $190 billion and international spending by one-third or $30 billion.

For fiscal 1996, which begins next October, the measure projects spending of $1.6 trillion, revenue of nearly $1.4 trillion and an annual deficit of $211 billion.

The legislation redefines the Consumer Price Index so as to produce smaller cost-of-living increases in Social Security, federal pensions and other benefit programs that receive automatic adjustments for inflation.

A yes vote was to approve the Republican budget. Area representatives voting yes were: Joseph Knollenberg, R-Birmingham. Voting no: Dale Kildee, D-Flint, Sander Levin, D-Southfield and Lynn Rivers, D-Ann Arbor.

Coalition Budget: The House rejected, 100 for and 325 against, a balanced budget proposal by 23 of the most conservative House Democrats who call themselves "the coalition." It differed from the Republican budget (above) mainly by not cutting taxes and by spending more on Medicare, Medicaid, student loans and a host of domestic programs. It differed also by going beyond a balanced budget in 2002 to produce a surplus.

A yes vote supported the budget authored by conservative Democrats. Area representatives voting no were: Dale Kildee, Joseph Knollenberg, Sander Levin and Lynn Rivers.

Black Caucus Budget: By a vote of 56 for and 367 against, the House rejected a plan by the Congressional Black Caucus to balance the budget. It differed from the Republican budget (above) mainly by curbing defense spending by $201 billion, raising taxes on businesses by $695 billion, spending hundreds of billions more on domestic social programs and providing a tax credit to individuals equal to 20 percent of one's FICA contribution.

A yes vote supported the Black Caucus budget. Area representatives voting no were: Kildee, Knollenberg, Levin and Rivers.

Conservative Budget: By a vote of 89 for and 342 against, the House rejected a budget authored by some of the House's most domestic fiscally conservative Republicans. It used deeper spending cuts to achieve a balanced budget two years sooner than the seven years envisioned by the mainstream GOP budget (above). It delivered the same tax cuts as the other Republican measure.

A yes vote supported the plan to balance the budget in five years. Area representatives voting no were: Kildee, Knollenberg, Levin and Rivers.

Patterson criticized for backing SMART

BY PAT MURPHY
STAFF WRITER

By supporting the recent SMART millage proposal, Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson may have stuck his political neck out.

One hint was the musing of state Sen. Mat J. Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, who said he may challenge Patterson in next year's Republican primary for Oakland County executive.

"The SMART thing (Patterson's endorsement) really bothered me," Dunaskiss said Tuesday. "At a time the executive should have been leading in Oakland County to dismantle SMART, he was siding with Wayne County for a tax increase."

Patterson chuckled at the thought of Dunaskiss running against him. "It's the pressure of terms-limits," the executive said Tuesday. "It makes usually normal people do goofy things."

Dunaskiss can run for the senate only once more, in 1998 — something the executive said has colored his logic and wisdom.

While Dunaskiss saw the executive's endorsement of SMART as a retreat from traditionally conservative policies, others saw that support as an indication of a maturing Patterson, someone willing to take a regional view of a problem.

Last Thursday at the Democratic caucus preceding the regular meeting of the Oakland County Board of Commissioners, for example, Democrats agreed that the SMART millage proposal would likely have been dead without the executive's support.

Commissioner Ruel E. McPherson of Hazel Park went so far as to describe Patterson's support as "heroic," especially in light of heavy opposition from traditional Republican communities, including Waterford, the executive's home community.

For a moment, Democrats were silent, possibly disbelieving their own ears. "I never thought I'd hear that word from Democrat to describe Brooks Patterson," said a stunned Lawrence Pernick of Southfield.

One of Patterson's deputies, John L. Grubba, seemed to be aware his boss had stuck his political neck out by backing SMART. "We're aware of SMART's problems," he said to the Democrats as he outlined his vision of the transit system he and Patterson envision for Oakland.

Grubba said there is no working model of the transit system they see SMART becoming, although the Minneapolis transit system has some of the neighborhood services Oakland voters are demanding.

"But we (Oakland officials) know we have to deliver on our promise to make SMART the best system available," Grubba said.

Family Emergencies.

No two emergencies are exactly alike. So all emergency care shouldn't be the same either.

That's why we designed and equipped our emergency department to handle everything from minor accidents to life-threatening injuries. If there are any questions about the seriousness of the emergency, a specially trained nurse is on hand to evaluate the situation and direct you to the appropriate level of treatment.

And whether you're a walk-in patient or require critical care, you'll receive the same quick and personalized medical attention from doctors who are specially trained in emergency medicine.

Our emergency care is backed by the resources of a full-service hospital, it's available 24 hours a day, every day, and it comes with the understanding that minor problems shouldn't result in major expenses . . . good reasons to go to St. Mary Hospital for sudden illness or injury. For more information call us at (313) 464-WELL.

Voters elect new SC trustee, reject Greenleaf

By Ralph R. Echtinaw

Carol Strom

After 18 years on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees, Livonia resident Harry Greenleaf lost his bid for re-election Monday to Plymouth resident Brian Broderick.

Broderick, 28, came in second in the four-way race for three six-year terms on the college board.

Trustee Mary Breen of Plymouth Township was the top vote-getter with 6,365 votes in the unofficial tally. Broderick polled 5,679 votes. Board Chairman Steve Ragan of Plymouth got 5,307 votes. Greenleaf received 5,188.

Trustee Carol Strom of Livonia, who was appointed in February 1994 to fill a vacancy, ran unopposed for a two-year term expiring June 30, 1997. She received 7,992 votes.

Greenleaf, 57, the longest-serving Schoolcraft board member, was first elected in 1977. His last board meeting will be June 28.

Although Greenleaf is "still puzzled" as to why he lost, he suspects it has something to do with being the only individual among the four competitors for three seats to not live in Plymouth or Canton.

Voter turnout in the Plymouth-Canton school district, where a millage was on the ballot, was far higher than in the Northville, Garden City, Livonia and Clarenceville districts, accounting for more than half the votes.

Greenleaf was the No. 2 vote-getter in Livonia with 894 votes, No. 3 in Garden City with 667 votes, No. 3 in Clarenceville with 297 votes, No. 2 in Northville with 430 votes, but last in Plymouth-Canton with 2,832 votes. That was more than 500 votes behind his nearest competitor in Plymouth-Canton.

"It's very disturbing when you look at the low frequency of voting," he said.

Still, Greenleaf is grateful to voters for his long tenure on the board. "I appreciate the years of service I have been granted by the voters," he said.

Broderick, an attorney with Leikin & Ingber of Southfield, grew up in Livonia and attended Catholic Central High School, Notre Dame University and the University of Detroit. He is currently working on a master's degree in public administration at Wayne State University.

Broderick said it's sad to see Greenleaf defeated, but "I'll do my best to fill his shoes. I want to congratulate the candidates who won. Thanks to all my family, friends and supporters. I can't name everybody. You wouldn't have room in the paper."

Broderick will be sworn in July 10.

Ragan, 29, has been a member of the board since he was appointed to fill a vacancy in February 1991.

He was also sorry to see Greenleaf defeated. "He's been a mentor to me on the board, and although we've occasionally been competitors, I think I'm the better for it, and I'll miss him on the board," Ragan said.

Greenleaf, Ragan said, "wasn't afraid to criticize the administration when he thought it was appropriate. Harry took very little for granted."

Ragan, whose strong advocacy of cost containment in health care and wages may have cost him the endorsement of the faculty union, said, "I think that it's very clear that I intend to continue to pursue the issue of containing health care cost and salaries, and the faculty is going to have to deal with that."

Breen, 61, joined the Schoolcraft board in 1983. A former teacher, Breen taught for 16 years, then worked 10 years as a school administrator and retired in 1986.

"I feel very badly about Harry," she said. "He's been a colleague a long time. I feel terrible." But she congratulated Broderick. "He ran a hard campaign and I look forward to working with him."

Ragan praised Broderick, too. "Brian Broderick deserves to be complimented for running a very aggressive and strong campaign. He's a fine man and I'm looking forward to working with him."

Area lawmaker's court merger bill gathers sponsors

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

If promises were votes, Rep. Deborah Whyman's bill to merge Detroit Recorder's Court with Wayne Circuit Court will be an easy victory.

In one day, June 8, she gathered signatures of 53 co-sponsors and promises of support from nine other state representatives who declined to be official co-sponsors. It will take 56 votes to pass thebill.

"It's a matter of fairness. Both judges have the same salary, the same benefits and the same jurisdiction," said Whyman, R-Canton.

"But Detroit residents can vote for all 64 'circuit-level' judges while out-county residents can vote for only 35 'circuit judges.' This is a violation of the principle of 'one person, one vote.'

"There is a perceived controversy that this bill is racist. That's absolutely silly. There is no basis in fact to call it racist. When someone says 'racist,' people aren't running for cover any more."

Whyman, a second-term member from the conservative wing of a conservative party, has tapped an issue that has simmered for decades. The core issue is that Detroit gets one kind of a system, while the rest of the state gets another.

Detroit Recorder's Court was established in 1957 and "currently has jurisdiction of all felony criminal cases arising within the City of Detroit," according to the Michigan Manual, which adds:

"During 1986, the Recorder's Court and 3rd Circuit Court began an 'administrative unification' whereby all felony cases are tried in Recorder's Court facilities. On a rotating basis, five Wayne County circuit judges are assigned to hear felony cases in the Recorder's Court."

In short: Detroit alone, with half of Wayne County's population, elects 29 judges who try felony cases and provides half the votes to elect five other judges who sit in Recorder's Court at any one time.

Everywhere else in Michigan, felonies are tried before circuit judges who are elected on a countywide or multi-county basis. Only Detroit has a city-elected Recorder's Court.

Six Democrats from Wayne and Macomb counties, including Eileen DeHart of Westland, signed on as co-sponsors of Whyman's bill. Of those who declined to support it, she said, only one actually called it "bad policy."

Whyman's bill, still unnumbered, provides:

- Effective Jan. 1, 1996, Detroit Recorder's Court is abolished. Wayne Circuit Court would have jurisdiction over felony cases.
- No judge would lose a job. Every recorder's judge would become a circuit judge for the remainder of the term to which he or she was elected or appointed.
- Recorder's judges who become circuit judges will have the right to run for reelection by filing an affidavit of incumbency, just like circuit judges, and would have a ballot designation as "judge of the circuit court."

Whyman knows she will meet resistance on one point: Detroit, with its large black majority, will want to elect its "own"judges. Almost certainly there will be efforts to elect circuit judges from sub-county districts.

"I'd be happy to work with them on that. It's like we do the Court of Appeals," Whyman said. (Court of Appeals judges serve the entire state but are elected from four districts with roughly equal populations.)

Whyman's bill, which Speaker Paul Hillegonds is likely to refer to the Judiciary Committee, is the latest spoon to stir the bubbling pot of court reform. Leaders of the State Bar are pushing a plan to merge circuit, recorder's, probate and district courts into a single "trial court."

Outstate politicos want state government to fund all trial courts, the way it has funded Wayne Circuit, Detroit Recorder's and Detroit District courts since 1980. The battle was waged early in June during debate over the court budget bill.

A state Supreme Court task force in May recommended full state funding of "core costs" of courts. The Supreme Court itself is due to rule this year on a lawsuit demanding full state funding.

The Supreme Court task force also recommends that a single trial court be one option and also proposes larger administraitve units for courts — countywide or multi-county.

Millage election

Voters send message to board

Before taking any further action on a millage, Plymouth-Canton school officials should spend time figuring out why a 2.3-mill property tax increase was rejected by voters on Monday.

There was a message in the 4,145-3,948 rejection of the tax that would have raised $12 million over two years for textbooks, instructional tools and teacher training. The cost would have been about $115 a year for a home valued at $100,000.

It wasn't a lot of money. But that wasn't the point. Many voters told Observer reporters the "schools have enough money" and they are demanding fiscal responsibility before handing over any more tax dollars to the schools.

Voters were saying: "Listen to us."

There were other undercurrents to the election. Some voters who normally would have been supportive voted no because they want more teachers in the classrooms, not computers.

They aren't the only ones disenchanted with the high tech road taken by the schools. A no voter questioned the value of high tech equipment, noting that the voter's child was having a hard time learning to read.

The voter has a point. It doesn't matter how many miles of fiber-optic cable the schools have laid or how many computers there are in the math lab to a parent whose child is having a difficult time learning how to read.

The no vote on the millage increase poses a perplexing question. The cost wasn't much, so why did voters cast their ballot against it?

Certainly there were some mean-spirited voters who will be against anything. But there are others who live on a budget and see the schools paying top salaries and providing excellent benefits and yet falling short when it comes to providing money for textbooks.

These are the people who say the schools have enough money and should be expected to do the job with what they have.

The school board has until 1997 to persuade voters to pass an enhancement millage. After that date, the money will be shared countywide.

To convince the public more money is needed, the school board and administration must address those concerns.

Also, the board should see a millage campaign as an ongoing program, not just something that it must go through to obtain more money. As part of that campaign, the board must make all its spending decisions as public as possible and make financial information understandable and available to average voters.

That needs to be done before the question is placed on the ballot.

Dog found

On Saturday, May 20, my family and I were involved in a horrible auto accident on U.S. 23. Upon evacuating the vehicle, our daughter's dog ran from the scene and was never seen again. Following four hours of facial surgery, our daughter's recovery was hindered due to her depressed state of mind over the loss of her dog. However, almost 48 hours after the accident, her dog was found alive and well. My family is eternally grateful due to the efforts of two Plymouth citizens and their families who committed themselves to help find our dog. Sue Nisch and Amy Burns waged an all-out effort to help reunite Emily and "Molly Rose." They contacted all area agencies and several radio stations in hope that somebody may have seen Emily's dog. Sure enough Monday, we received that special call.

The City of Plymouth can be extremely proud and fortunate to have Sue and Amy and their families as such fine citizens.

Dove killing sickens

Wild birds, including mourning doves, dine at my bird feeder all year around. At the present time, I am delighted both morning and night to the sight and sounds of five or six of the taupe-colored doves singing their hauntingly beautiful song while they snack on sunflower seeds.

It makes me sick to the depths of my soul that hunters want to shoot and kill these tiny, defenseless, gentle creatures. For what and why? For target practice?

It further sickens me that Senator Loren Bennett of Canton Township voted in favor of the killing and carnage of these exquisite migratory birds.

Perhaps I should not be surprised at the way Mr. Bennett voted on the dove issue. After all, the destruction of the mile stretch of irreplaceable trees and wildlife on Morton Taylor between Warren Avenue and Ford Road in Canton is a clear indication of Canton Township governmental mentality.

A good dad is worth the fuss

Father's Day is coming and that should gladden the hearts of those who make their living in greeting cards, men's wear or fancy restaurants.

On Father's Day — Sunday, June 18, this year — many of us lucky enough to have a father will celebrate by providing him with a card, some article of male clothing or perhaps a dinner out.

Yes, Father's Day is another of those special events — rendered not so special by their very numbers — which dot the calendars and where the spending of time and money is required.

But fathers are so very important, we think, when it comes to effective parenting. Research over the years has shown that a father is a key part of a loving and strong family.

They're certainly worth celebrating, these fathers, especially as they've been overlooked and underestimated in this well, this double-decade of the woman and mother.

A good father traditionally provides for his family and acts as a disciplinarian, but truly dedicated dads do a lot more. Today, many men actively share parenthood with their wives. They consider child-rearing every bit as important as their careers.

Successful fathers must be a lot of things — including around. That can be difficult today when fully half this nation's youngsters do not live in traditional nuclear families. A divorced dad must somehow always finds a way to become involved in his child's life.

■ Successful fathers must be a lot of things — including around.

Good dads are also always willing to log quality time with the kids. So many studies have shown that involvement by a father can be a critical factor in a child's development.

A father cheers the success of his sons and/or daughters. Kids need to know that dad thinks of them as future achievers. The absence of such support can affect a child's life, studies have shown.

There's more, so much more. A good father must somehow be tuned into his kids' concerns. He must be understanding in a conflict. On and on it goes.

When you begin to look at all that is involved in being a good father, you'll see that it's the most difficult — and important — job he'll do in his life. And you'll be happy to spend the time and money for the card, the neckwear and the Sunday dinner out.

POINTS OF VIEW

Movie about 'last warrior' full of propaganda

Television can depict personalities. TV does a terrible job, however, with ideas and numbers.

Case in point: Tecumseh: the Last Warrior, the recent two-hour movie on TNT, the cable network. It's about a Shawnee chief (1768-1813), and much of it is wrong. Take the "last warrior" title. America's last battle with the red man didn't occur until 99 years after Tecumseh's death.

Michigan and Detroit are never mentioned in the TNT movie, though two events on screen had a major impact on our history. Last August was the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Fallen Timbers southwest of Toledo, in which an American army under Gen. "Mad Anthony" Wayne vanquished the Indians. This Aug. 3 is the 200th anniversary of the Treaty of Greenville, a town in west central Ohio that isn't even on a freeway. Results of Fallen Timbers and Greenville:

"During the summer and fall of 1796, Detroit and Fort Mackinac finally were handed over to the Americans, and the stars and stripes at last flew over Michigan," wrote Willis F. Dunbar in Michigan: a History of the Wolverine State.

The biggest error in Tecumseh comes from the alleged narrator, his mother, Turtle Mother. (Would TNT make a movie about George Bush or Newt Gingrich with their mothers as narrators? Not on your life.) "We lived on the land of our ancestors," says Tecumseh's mom. A screen title later says: "Old Shawnee Homelands — Ohio — 1804."

It's Indian propaganda. The Shawnees started in Canada, moved to Michigan's lower peninsula, then settled in Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky. A portion tried life in Georgia but were kicked back to Pennsylvania in 1707 by the Cherokees and Catawbas. Those in Kentucky were booted out by the Cherokees and Chickasaws. (Encyclopedia Americana, "Shawnee Indians.")

In sum, when Indians kicked each other off land, no movie. When Indians wiped out each other (Hurons, Erie), no movie. When Anglos evict red men, TNT makes a movie.

TIM RICHARD

When white men shoved back red men, we paid money, however trivial a sum, and set aside a reservation, for however short a time. That's in the movie. When red men shoved back other red men, no money, no reservation — and no movie.

However badly whites treated red men, red men treated each other worse.

Besides that major crime against history, Tecumseh contains other stretchers:

■ Fallen Timbers is shown as a hard-fought battle with many Americans going down. Actually, the Indians had 2,000 and Wayne 3,000, but Wayne deployed only 1,000, and it was over in 40 minutes. American toll: 33.

■ Wayne had evidence the Indians were aided by British militia. The movie plays it down, showing the British as breaking a promise to give the Indians shelter if they lost.

■ Wayne appears on screen for a few seconds in a non-speaking role. That's shoddy treatment for a winner and an American patriot who was more brazen than "Mad." There was, after all, a reason why Michigan's early settlers named a county for him, and why Marion Morrison, an actor who played hero roles, borrowed Wayne's name for the screen.

TNT and a lot of other television properties are owned by Ted Turner, who in private life is Mr. Jane Fonda. Remember "Hanoi Jane"? Do you detect a political connection?

Why would anyone want to make an Indian propaganda movie? Well, we're talking big money and big political issues — casinos, fishing rights, casinos, university tuition rights, casinos, and so on.

If one were going to make a movie about a real Indian strategist and tactician, the choice wouldn't be Tecumseh but Pontiac, the Ottawa chief who in 1763 coordinated 13 attacks on British forts spread over 1,000 miles and succeeded in nine of them. Tecumseh was a loser who died fighting in — of all places — Canada.

LETTERS

Story in error

As one of the attorneys for Gregory Young and a Livonia resident, I must take issue with your coverage of the O'Hair vs. Department of Corrections and Gregory Young case (June 5 issue). Despite the fact that the defense team has been available to all reporters, has given interviews to several other representatives of the media, and has published our own article defending our interpretation, you have failed to even contact us. I believe therefore only one side of the story has been told.

Your story is in error or incomplete in several respects. Your article indicates that Michigan consecutive sentencing law was never widely enforced until Wayne County chief assistant prosecutor George Ward brought his suit.

The fact is that the law has always been enforced, not ignored. There is just a dispute between the litigants as to what the law means. While it is true that Judge Susan Bieke-Neilson has agreed with Ward's position, Wayne County Recorders Court Judge Terence Boyle has agreed with our position in People vs. Lemel Hentz Johnson, as has Recorders Court Judge Michael Sapala. A Senate fiscal analysis is also critical of Ward's position because of the vast, vast sums of money that it would cost to implement Ward's position. With the Department of Corrections' budget already vastly exceeding the budget for Michigan State University, Wayne State University and the University of Michigan combined, don't you think that finances should be considered?

When this bill was passed, the Senate and House fiscal agencies indicated that the cost of this bill would be "minimal," yet according to the most recent fiscal analysis, the cost of implementing the Ward interpretation would be $157 million. Even by Lansing standards, this would not be a minor cost overrun!

Presumably, if the Legislature had intended these results, it would have funded it. As this nation considers rationing health care, I think it is important that there must also be a reasonable line drawn in terms of mandatory sentences. California's three-strikes law has resulted in horrendous problems in the criminal justice system which verge on a complete breakdown.

While talk about getting tough on crime is good, decisions to create such laws should come from the Legislature, not from prosecutors seeking judicial activism, or courts creating unfunded mandates.

While you point out that "several state legislators have also sided with Ward," you fail to point out that several representatives have sided with us, including Reps. Michael Nye, Michael Bennane, Raymond Murphy, Joseph Palamara, Ilona Varga, Frank Fitzgerald and Thomas Law. Thus, the issue is not as clear as your article makes it out to be.

Gregory Young is a petty thief and should be punished, but Ward's accomplishment is to increase the sentence from three years to 20 years for stealing a $50 television set.

While no crime should be condoned, a rational criminal justice system should punish non-violent crime less severely than violent crime. If we make the non-violent theft of an inexpensive item carry the same penalty as a violent offense, then we remove the incentive to not commit violent crimes. While a criminal justice system should deter all crime, it should also attempt to discourage crime which carries a risk of harm to human life more severely than it does simple property offenses.

If shoplifting and armed robbery carry the same effective sentence, what incentive is there not to commit armed robberies? If an auto thief recognizes that he or she will receive a de facto life sentence for stealing a car, why not risk a high speed chase? It is easy to talk about getting tough on crime. It is quite a different story to make the tough calls. It is for this reason that we leave decisions to the Michigan Legislature rather than judicial activists.

The judicial interpretation which Ward has thus far overturned traces its way back to 1949, and has been commented on approvingly by both the Michigan Court of Appeals and the Michigan Supreme Court. The interpretation was not the product of a Department of Corrections bent on releasing another Leslie Williams to the community.

When the Supreme Court agrees to hear a case, there are almost always two sides to the dispute. When reporting on such a case, it would be nice to hear both sides.

Stuart Friedman, Livonia attorney at law

Bilingual education: Do students learn English?

As long as we're debating incendiary subjects like prayer and patriotism in the schools, we might as well add language.

Here's the question at its crudest: How come the state of Michigan (i.e., the taxpayers) spends more than $4 million per year to teach kids in languages other than English?

One answer: We shouldn't. Sooner or later, kids who don't speak English will simply have to learn, and teaching them in their native tongues is nothing more than an expensive fraud.

Worse, it promotes the fragmentation of the United States of America into a bunch of self-segregated ethnic and linguistic communities. As nations ranging from Canada to Rwanda have demonstrated, at some point there has to be a common language and culture to hold a country together.

Another answer: We should. These kids who don't speak English are facts on the ground. Either we're going to help them along a little in entering the mainstream, or we're going to wind up with exactly the kind of fragmented society that the other side is trying to avoid.

The facts, as usual, don't easily fit either side of the rhetoric.

The state spent $4.2 million in the 1994-95 school year for bilingual instruction. A total of 99 school districts received $179 per pupil to teach 23,461 students who can't handle English in their native tongues. The two largest bilingual groups are 11,000 kids who are taught in Spanish and another 3,800 in Arabic.

You'd be surprised how many districts participate in the program, including the Plymouth-Canton district covered by this newspaper. Wayne-Westland contracts with the county for bilingual education.

In order to qualify for bilingual teaching, students are identified through a home study and tested in English. If they score below the 40th percentile, they're eligible. But they're re-tested every year and qualify for program support only up to three years.

In addition, each district which has a population of 20 or more eligible students in a particular language is required to hire an instructor or paraprofessional fluent in that language.

This can be expensive. And it can cause trouble.

Last year, for example, an Albanian parent complained that the Farmington school district wasn't hiring certified teachers fluent in Albanian rather than the less-expensive paraprofessionals. For a district that provides bilingual programs in 17 languages for more than 600 eligible students, that complaint seemed a bit extreme.

PHILIP POWER

■ As nations ranging from Canada to Rwanda have demonstrated, at some point there has to be a common language and culture to hold a country together.

And there's a legitimate question about whether three years of bilingual instruction are really enough to give a kid a firm basis in English. Three districts — Southfield, West Bloomfield and Walled Lake — have combined to write a grant application to the U.S. Department of Education for extra-long funding.

Moreover, bilingual programs are quite different from "dual-language" activites, in which teaching is done partly in English and partly in kids' native languages. Despite passionate advocates, most of the research done on this system suggests it simply doesn't work. Kids who receive instruction in their native languages never really face the fact that English is necessary for success in America.

My own view in this debate: If the purpose of bilingual education programs is to give kids a short-run jump start into learning English, that's fine. But the fact is that English is America's tongue, and any program that doesn't recognize the fact is out of line.

Introducing

MISSION HEALTH℠
ONE GIANT LEAP FOR HEALTH CARE

Introducing the launch of Mission Health. The partnership of four outstanding area hospitals, their medical staffs and affiliated outpatient care facilities committed to a single mission: The health of you, your family and the community.

MISSION HEALTH:

·Four hospitals with more than 1,800 doctors.

·Four organizations that span a wide geographic range - covering five counties with care at hospitals and more than 30 outpatient medical centers throughout Southeast Michigan.

·Four organizations that will combine staffs, resources and specialties to form a health care team capable of treating virtually any condition.

·Four hospitals expert in diverse specialties including obstetrics, cardiology, oncology, otology/neurotology and craniofacial reconstructive surgery.

·Four organizations committed to the values of the Daughters of Charity and the Sisters of Mercy: The value of compassionate care and dignity for all individuals.

People spending more time in cars, survey says

STAFF WRITER

Local people are driving longer to work, buying more cars per household, and making more trips every day, a regional survey shows.

Commuters in 1953 drove one trip per day; today, 1.3 trips as two-income households increase.

"In 1953, drivers drove for 16 minutes to their jobs . . . In 1994, the average driver commute trip took 27 minutes," said Paul Tait, a staff member of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

The old morning and quittin' time rush hours? Gone. As more housewives, teens and senior citizens drive, the lunch hour "spike" in travel has become an elongated rush that lasts all afternoon, Tait told the SEMCOG General Assembly's annual meeting.

Data came from a survey of 7,000 households with 18,000 members. Each person (preschoolers excluded) was asked to complete a thorough travel diary for one day. It was SEMCOG's first comprehensive travel survey since 1968, Tait said.

Key findings:

- Females, particularly homemakers, make slightly more trips than males.
- People age 75 and older make as many daily trips (4.2) as the 16-24 age group.
- People ages 64-74 make as many daily trips (4.5) as the 25-34 age group.
- Each household averages 4.4 trips per person daily. Each household averages 9.4 trips. Total travel each weekday: 114 million miles.
- In 1953, the average household was 3.5 persons and had less than one vehicle. By 1994 household size had shrunk to 2.6, a decline of 35 percent. But vehicle ownership per household had grown to 1.7 — a 75-percent increase per household.

"I would have loved to have seen the diary on each of my four teen-age daughters had we been selected for the survey," said Tait.

Travel in 1994 is perhaps understated in the survey figures. "More people make a stop during the commute trip to drop off children at day care, for example. In that case, both trips become part of the 'other' category," Tait said.

Tait added that SEMCOG is working on two smaller surveys — one on transit ridership, the other on trips into and out of the seven-county region.

"When data from all three surveys are ready, we will have the most comprehensive transportation planning foundation ever available in this region — and one of the most comprehensive in the nation," he said.

School seeking pupils

New Morning School, a private school in Plymouth Township, has announced openings for students in second, third and fifth through eighth grade.

New Morning is a state-certified and licensed nonprofit school and the only pre-kindergarten through eighth grade cooperative school in Michigan.

Parents help in the classroom, clean the building, lend their personal skills to special projects and assist in fund-raising.

For more information, call (313) 420-3331.

Foster families sought

The Methodist Children's Home Society is recruiting foster families for children up to age 14.

Foster families take care of these children while they await adoption or return to their birth parents.

For more information, call La-Tonya Shephard at (313) 531-9942.

An informational meeting for interested people is scheduled for 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, June 28, at the society headquarters, 26645 W. Six Mile in Detroit.

Sweet Adelines set to perform in Farmington

If you're a fan of outdoor concerts, you may want to put Thursday evening on your calendar.

The award-winning Spirit of Detroit Sweet Adeline chorus will present, for free, an evening of favorite melodies sung in four-part harmony at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 15, at Heritage Park, Farmington Road just north of 10 Mile Road.

The chorus was invited to make a return appearance in this year's Farmington Hills Summer Music Series.

Spirit of Detroit will perform a cappella in a bandshell on a hillside at Heritage Park.

Comprised of 90 women from communities throughout metropolitan Detroit, Spirit of Detroit recently returned from London, Ontario, where it captured a regional championship, outperforming all 21 challengers.

Spirit of Detroit welcomes guests and prospective chorus members to its weekly rehearsals at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays at the VFW Hall on Schoolcraft at Inkster in Redford Township.

What is right with America 12

This calendar, the one that's nine months long and ends in June, is really the only calendar we pay attention to around here. The time between June and September? We don't mark, it; we don't keep track of it. Time goes right on out the window for three months every year in my house. This nine-month calendar is as normal as bare feet, fireflies, ice cream trucks and blue skies.

But there are many people whose calendars aren't like that at all. Their calendar and their pace is relentless — day after day, month after month, year after year, no summers off, no three-month breaks. And there's a group out there who actually trumpet and celebrate the unrelenting nature of their work and life. Those are the folks who bring us our mail.

Judy Smith can confirm that. She's a mail carrier working out of the Livonia Post Office. And today, in this last installment in the "What's right with America" series, Judy Smith, relentless and dedicated in what she does, is my honored guest.

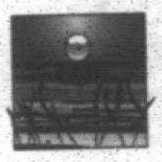

Judy, a life-long resident of Redford, has delivered letters for more than two decades, 22

Docents explain garden's secrets

■ Graham Markes enjoys introducing people to the wonders of Mother Nature. A docent, Markes explains the flora and fauna found at the University of Michigan's Matthaei Botanical Gardens and Conservatory in Ann Arbor.

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

In all honesty, when school kids go on field trips the last thing they want to do is pay attention.

Tour guides at the Matthaei Botanical Gardens and Conservatory in Ann Arbor, known as docents, have learned a trick, however. They use the Hawaiian Punch method of teaching.

Docents like Plymouth's Graham Markes give children a first-hand look at the fruits like guava and papaya found in the drink.

"They'll never see these unless they go to tropical islands like Hawaii, Tahiti or the Caribbean islands," he said.

The old saying goes "familiarity breeds contempt," but not with children who visit the botanical gardens. Markes rubs the two ends of a lemon tree leaf together and asks them what it reminds them of Lemon Pledge.

Many children — and even adults — probably never knew that bananas grow upward, until docents show them.

Chocoholics are intrigued by chocolate trees and the beans that are ground to make cocoa.

"We use common names and try to tell the children something that is of interest to them," he said.

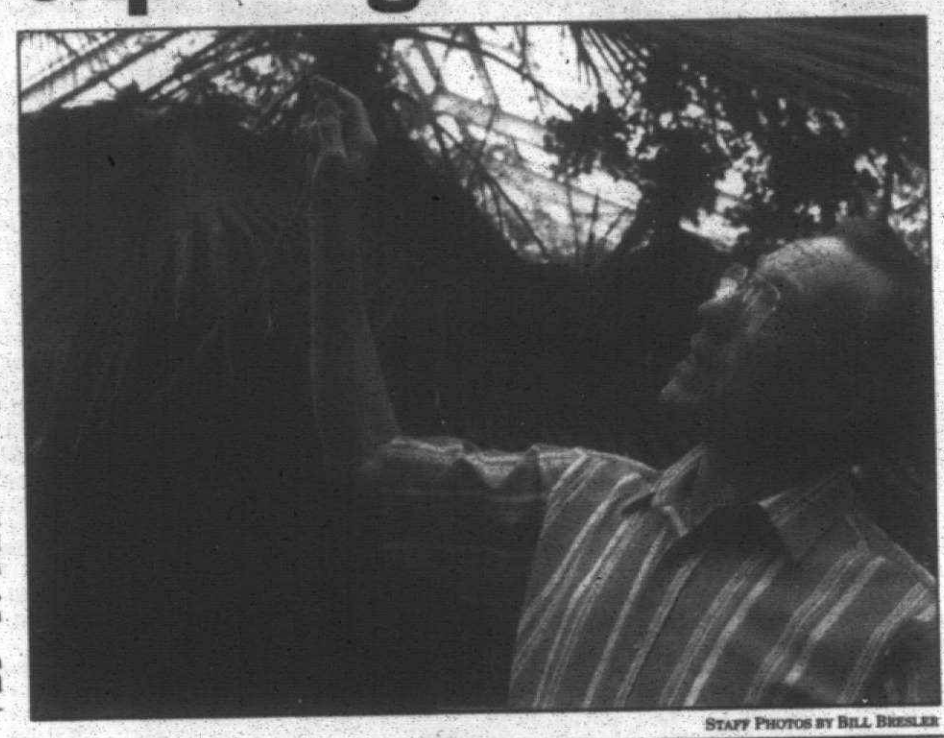

Just like orange cones placed in a highway construction zone, plants have their own way of letting insects and birds know that there's a flower waiting to be pollinated. Flowers on a popsicle plant are tucked inside brightly colored leaves that serve as beacons to the pollinators, signaling the presence of the flower itself.

Volunteering as a docent was a natural progression for the retired chemist. Markes was always interested in plants and was curious about the position after seeing a notice in the Plymouth Observer nearly six years ago.

In addition to being a docent, Markes and his wife Elizabeth volunteer in the greenhouse, planting seedlings and transplanting plants, as well as preparing for the annual flower show.

"We get all those plants up and growing for that," said Markes, whose own lot at home is too shaded for a flower garden to grow.

In order to become a docent, prospective volunteers must complete a 20-week course in which they are taught tour techniques and basic botany, according to Kathy French, the docent director at the gardens. French is a former docent herself who became the director after she suggested to gardens management that they offer formal training for the volunteers. She's been training others ever since.

Enthusiastic folks of all ages who want to learn about botany on their own are more than welcome to volunteer, French said.

"None of the tours they give are canned tours," she explained. "Each docent is responsible for determining how or what they are going to cover on the tour.

"They are essentially given the basic information, and they themselves develop the tours that they give each time," she said. "They have to have a lot of flexibility and interest in the subject, obviously, and the willingness to work to make an effort to continue their learning."

French said docents are important to the every day activities of the gardens.

"They are essentially the front lines for the gardens in terms of having a face," French said. "At the gardens most of the people work behind the scenes, so you don't often get a chance to interact with any of them and learn about the plants. They (the docents) help people discover what plants are all about."

The gardens and conservatory are at 1800 N. Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor. Tours of the conservatory are at 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. most Saturdays, and 2 p.m. most Sundays. Only 30 people per hour are allowed in the gardens. Trail tours are at 2 p.m. the first weekend of the month. On holiday weekends, the trail walks are rescheduled to the next weekend.

Reservations for group tours must be made at least three weeks in advance. Tours are not offered in August or December.

Markes has discovered a lot since becoming a docent. It's fascinating, he said, to learn of the importance of plants. He remembers as a child seeing lifejackets on a cruise and has since learned that cork plants, found at the gardens, provide the buoyancy. Growing up in Wyandotte, he also used plants for recreational purposes.

"Back in the days when I was younger, when we went fishing, we used a long piece of bamboo and a piece of cork for a float," he said.

Toward the end of the walk through the conservatory, he shows the annatto, a dye of reddish yellow made from the pulp around the seeds of a tropical dicotyledonous tree. When margarine was introduced to the public, consumers mixed annatto with the dairy product to give it a yellowish tint.

He shares those stories with adult visitors and in return many of them teach him a thing or two.

"We take advantage of the visitors, particularly the adult visitors, coming in from other countries," Markes said. For example, one foreign guest told him that women in Tahiti wear Hibiscus flowers on either ear to signify their marital status.

Sometimes the gardens can spark emotional responses from foreign visitors now living in the United States. One woman from Sri Lanka was awestruck by the beauty of the flowers which she had only seen in her homeland.

"She told me, 'I don't know if I can walk through here. It makes me too homesick,' " Markes said.

For Markes, one of the most gratifying tours was with a group of mentally challenged adults who returned to the gardens. Markes quizzed them about insectivorous plants like Venus' flytraps. One adult "piped right up" and recited what the docent had told him last time.

"He had only been here once before," Markes said. "It's wonderful to make that kind of impression on them."

years to be exact. And her life, her work and she, herself, are shining examples of what is right in this country. And here, the day after Flag Day and couple of weeks before the Fourth of July, celebrating what's right in this country couldn't be more timely.

Judy was born and raised in Redford. She attended Redford Union High School as did her only child, Jeffrey Anderson. He's all grown up now and doesn't live in Redford anymore. But Judy does. She's lived in her same house on the same quiet street for nearly 20 years. And she's delivered letters and packages for more than 20 years in Livonia, 17 of those years have been on the same route, in and around the Livonia Mall.

She knows her people and they know her. She's shared the joy of births with them and the sadness of deaths over the years. She's visited the people on her route in the hospital when they took sick and visited them in nursing homes when they went there. She's brought them stamps and good news. I bet she's even told some about her only grandchild, a beautiful little girl, Stephanie, who visits Judy at least once a week.

Judy usually works 9 or 10 hours each day Monday through Saturday. She works in the oppressive heat of summer and the biting cold of winter. She hops in and out of her mail truck more than 30 times a day. And along the way, from time to time, she is asked for directions. Which is fine because streets and intersections and north and south are the tools of her trade.

Also, along the way, she's encountered some four-legged meanies, and once in a great while, a two-legged one. But in all her 22 years of delivering mail, nothing too serious has ever come of these encounters.

She wears her uniform proudly. She still remembers how the uniform, crisp and blue, impressed her all those years ago when she saw the mail lady dropping mail off at the K mart she found herself working in after graduation. The uniform, Judy decided, was a neat thing and being outdoors, walking, with nobody looking over her shoulder every minute, was neat, too. And that was way back when.

And now, years later, Judy writes, "My job is very important to me." And she underlined "very."

Judy is dedicated to her work all right, but not to the exclusion of her family. Even after working long hours, she makes time for her family which includes Bob, two dogs and eight cats. She always makes time for them — neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night can stop her from that either.

A Note of Thanks: To the "Family Room" contest quiz winners who now have all been awarded their place in this "What's Right with America" series, I extend an enormous, great big thank you. And that's not just from me, I'll have you know, but from lots of readers, too.

You, your lives and your stories have touched and inspired many people around here, young and old and in between. You've convinced us that America is, indeed, brimming with good people doing the right things.

JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

3 get hospice nurse certifications

Jackie Dearbaugh, Cindy Paterson and Karen Zorney definitely have something to be proud of. They join an elite group of 1,530 registered nurses across the United States who have achieved the designation of certified registered nurse, hospice (CRNH).

To receive the CRNH certificate, the three nurses, who are with Community Hospice Services, had to pass an extensive four-hour written examination, given March 18.

"The title of CRNH is the national recognition for professional excellence through knowledge and application of all aspects of hospice care," said Paterson, patient care coordinator for Community Hospice Services. "It is an honor for us personally and professionally to be seen as leaders in hospice care."

For primary care nurse Dearbaugh, taking the examination was a self-imposed goal.

"The examination gave me an opportunity to demand of myself a focused period of concentrated review and study of the current materials pertaining to hospice nursing," she said. "Besides, I knew that if I took this exam with my co-workers we would hold each other accountable, and it worked."

"I took the certification test because I love hospice nursing and the philosophy of hospice," said Zorney, assistant patient care coordinator for Community Hospice Services. "I want hospice to be recognized as the highly skilled branch of the medical field that it is."

Different emphasis

The hospice concept of care places an emphasis on palliative care — state-of-the-art relief of pain and other distressing symptoms related to an illness. Hospice believes that the quality of life and dignity of the individual become the primary concern when physical healing is no longer achievable.

Hospice care neither hastens nor postpones death. A highly specialized interdisplinary team delivers the care, and patients and their families become an integral part of that team. Hospice focuses on enabling the patient to live each day in the peace and comfort they deserve.

Working in hospice is a labor of love for these nurses.

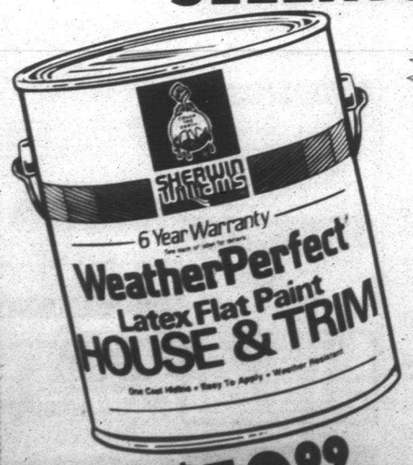

"The greatest fulfillment I've experienced in hospice nursing is being able to come alongside a family who desires to care for their loved one and instruct, encourage, and support them in doing so," said Dearbaugh. "When a patient is able to have his symptoms well managed and die a peaceful death, I often hear the family say that they didn't feel helpless.

"The families always say thank you for helping. I'm grateful to be a part of the team that can work to make the end of someone's life as meaningful as the beginning of that life."

"Hospice nursing is for me the epitome of nursing," added Zorney. "As I meet each new patient and family, I am deeply moved to be invited into their home, a stranger allowed to participate in the intimacy of this special journey. I see hospice nursing as life changing and life giving.

"There is a heroic devotion by loved ones in walking the journey with the patient. There is valor, forgiveness, humor, gratitude, sorrow, tears, and laughter; sometimes all within a five-minute time span. I find it impossible to walk away unaffected by these special people."

Nazarene is 'Celebrating Families'

Families throughout metropolitan Detroit are invited to participate in four days of "Celebrating Families" at the Detroit First Church of the Nazarene.

"Celebrating Families" will take place 7-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, June 26-29, at the church, 21260 Haggerty Road, north of Eight Mile, in Farmington Hills.

The theme was chosen because the church's annual summer gathering for kids has been given a new emphasis for 1995 — parents and children interacting in a fun, educational and meaningful activity.

"'Celebrating Families' is a Disney World-type event where children and their parents come together," said Judy Street, children's minister at First Church. "Just like Disney World, parents will be in charge of their own children and will spend the entire time with their children.

"The philosophy behind 'Celebrating Families' is that too many times we have children and parents doing things separately. So this year we want to give families the chance to be together and to offer a great time for mom and dad to interact not only with their own kids but with other moms and dads in the community."

The first hour will feature the Boone Family from Cobourg, Ont., Canada, with puppets, drama, objection lessons and personal stories. Donna Boone and husband Laurie use daughters Kimberley, 14, Laura Lee, 10, and niece Vickie, 16, as puppeteers.

The second hour will have parents and children engaged in outdoor activities, crafts, games and refreshments.

A free nursery is provided for children through age 2, and 3-year-olds will have their own class after the Boones finish entertaining with their puppets. Children age 4-12 will join their parents for the outdoor activities.

Visitors are welcome, even kids without parents or whose parents cannot come. Parentless kids will simply be "adopted" for the evening by the adult they came with or another available parent.

There is no fee for "Celebrating Families," the church's summer vacation Bible time activity. The church has not had an official vacation Bible school for several years.

For the past two summers, Detroit First Church has offered "Marketplace," a market experience where children study Hebrew history and culture, sold crafts they made and bought items with the money they earned.

For more information about "Celebrating Families," call the church at (810) 348-7600.

Nurses

Select few

According to Madalon Amenta, executive director of the Hospice Nurses Association, a national organization based in Pittsburgh, Pa., there are approximately 11,400 full-time registered nurses across the U.S. who work in hospice. More than 13 percent have achieved the CRNH designation.

"The CRNH designation is the only specialty credential for any group on the hospice team," Amenta said. "The National Board for Certification of Hospice Nurses established this examination to encourage the continued personal and professional growth for hospice nurses."

The certification provides a national standard of requisite knowledge required for certification, thereby assisting the employer, public, and members of the health professions in the assessment of the hospice nurse. To be eligible to take the CRNH examination, nurses must be currently licensed as a registered nurse in the U.S. (or the equivalent in other countries), and must have at least two years of full-time or the equivalent of 4,000 hours experience as a registered nurse in hospice nursing over at least two years.

The exam covers such topics as end-stage disease processes, palliative therapeutics, interdisciplinary collaborative practices, education and advocacy and professional issues.

Dearbaugh has been a registered nurse since 1971, when she graduated from Christ Hospital School of Nursing in Cincinnati, Ohio. She has worked in the medical/surgical, obstetric, labor and delivery, and intensive care areas of nursing.

Paterson graduated from Madonna University's Nursing School with a bachelor of science in nursing in 1988. She worked in oncology, cardiac care step-down and home care before coming to CHS as patient care coordinator in 1991.

Zorney just recently attended her 35-year Henry Ford Hospital nursing class reunion. She's been involved in nursing all but 12 of those years. She has also worked in medical/surgical, emergency room, pediatrics, geriatrics and outpatient urology.

Community Hospice Services has two offices — at 32932 Warren Road, Suite 100, Westland, and 127 S. Main St., Plymouth. For more information, call (313) 522-4944 (in Westland) or (313) 459-0545 (in Plymouth).

Practical woman, writer doesn't jump to conclusions

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene,

I would really love to have my handwriting analyzed to see how closely it corresponds with the picture I hold of myself. I have written to your column twice, but received no answer in the paper.

I am 59 years old, a right-handed female. I love writing letters to my friends and loved ones but also enjoy printing a lot, but I do not use printing when writing letters. Thank you for any input you can give me.

A.N.,
Livonia

I am sorry you found it necessary to write three times before having your handwriting analyzed. I want to thank you for your patience and persistence. I hope you find this analysis interesting.

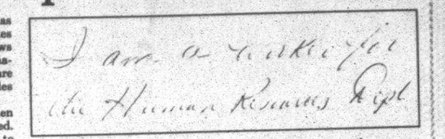

Here is a woman who is consistent and lives within the rules of society. She is not one to draw attention to herself. In a structured situation, she is most comfortable.

She is a practical woman who does not jump to conclusions. She leans toward caution and looks before she leaps.

Her mind is well-organized, as is her daily routine. She makes her plans and then follows through on them. Her determination cannot be missed. Details are important to her and she handles them carefully.

Our writer functions best when she can proceed at her own speed. Seemingly, she has an aversion to pressure deadlines.

She consciously processes new information in order to understand it completely. Methodically and carefully, she accumulates her facts. Hers is a slower pace of learning until she grasps the information. But from then on, she rarely has to repeat the process and then can move more swiftly.

Her memory is good. She retains what she learns and applies it effectively in similar areas and relationships.

Our writer has a strong need for approval from others. She holds authority figures in respect. "Should" often dominates her thinking, and she may feel guilty, if she does not do what she feels should be done. She is thorough in handling her work. Often, she is prepared to work hard without shortcuts to achieve her goals. Augmenting this is her thoroughness and conscientiousness.

There appears to be something from the past she is attempting to conceal. This could be causing her some anxiety.

Loyal would describe her. She is faithful to her beliefs and is not interested in changing them. To her friends, she is also loyal as well as being open-minded and tolerant. At times, she is probably a tad gullible.

Our writer is considerate, responsive, gentle and sympathetic as she interacts with others. She also has a need for some time by herself.

Her legible handwriting tells us she wants to communicate. Her signature also is clear and legible, suggesting she has the ability to communicate her ideas and thoughts to others easily. The flourish underscore bespeaks one who wants to be distinctive.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are helpful. Objective feedback is welcome.

Salvation Army has day camp

Arts, crafts, music, games and sports are among the activities the Salvation Army in Plymouth is offering during its summer day camp program beginning its first session Monday, June 19.

The curriculum also includes one swim day and one field trip per week.

"They're on site three days a week and then those three days they do arts and crafts, music, games, and some sports," said Martha Schultz, day camp director. "We do have some Christian education, but it's not doctrine. We teach them how to treat each other, and how to behave. Then they take field trips."

Children in the first session, through July 7, will take a field trip to the trash recycling center in Plymouth Township to study the environment. Other activities include swimming and a trip to a roller-skating rink.

Kids attending day camp from July 17-Aug. 4 will get to see the dinosaur exhibit at the Ann Arbor Exhibit Museum, play on water slides at the Rolling Hills Water Park, and see how Jiffy Mix is made at the Chelsea Milling Factory.

The cost of the camp is $75. Camp meets 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"It works out to a dollar an hour," Schultz said. "For those that are having some financial difficulty, we have scholarships available. They can come in and fill out a scholarship application. We never try to turn a child away."

The camp is open to children ages 6-12. Six-year-olds must have completed kindergarten or be 6 by July 1. The capacity is 50 students per camp.

Camps will take place at Plymouth Township Park at Ann Arbor Trail and McClumpha Road, and Heritage Park in Canton.

Bus transportation will be provided from Canterbury, Canton Commons and Sherwood Mobile Village, all in Canton.

JOSEPH R. CARUSO

Services for Joseph R. Caruso, 59, of Canton were Monday, June 12, at St. John Neumann Catholic Church in Canton. Burial was in St. Hedwig Cemetery in Dearborn Heights.

He was born May 28, 1936, in Detroit and died Friday, June 9, in Annapolis Hospital. He was a truck driver.

He is survived by his wife, Angela; son, Vito J. Caruso; three brothers; two sisters; and grandson, Joseph.

Students honored

A tribute: WXYZ-TV/Channel 7 will honor more than 200 high school students in its 15th annual "Brightest and Best" public service campaign, a tribute to Michigan high school seniors who have demonstrated excellence in academic and community pursuits. The station has produced a series of public service announcements featuring the students, which will be shown on Channel 7 throughout the summer months.

Student letters reach far

In the "Mail for Military" program, teacher Jodi Ring's West Middle School sixth-graders volunteered to write to servicemen and women. More than 130 letters were sent out under a combined language arts and social studies assignment. West Middle School ranked at the top in the state of Michigan for middle schools that sent letters.

A number of responding letters were received from the service personnel. The students had the delight of posting them on a map of the world, and also doing charting and graphing as to where the letters came from.

"This is an excellent program which combines language arts and social studies as well as community service," said Ring. "The kids met some fascinating people who were stationed all over the world — Cuba, China and Saudi Arabia were just a few of the places."

"Some of the respondents to the letters said how thrilled they were with the encouragement from the students," she added. "I really wanted the students to experience the volunteer aspect of doing something for someone else and the good feelings which it brings."

Area residents whose experience with ballooning is limited to blowing them up and watching them squirt around the room may wish to expand their horizons at the Michigan Challenge Balloonfest in Howell.

Lacking the hot jet exhaust of the Blue Angels, and the stentorian roar of radial reciprocating engines, this air show is based less on testosterone and more on aesthetics.

More than 50 balloonists are scheduled to attend, including Scott Lorenz of Plymouth, and Dale Duthie of Canton Township.

One balloon from Plano, Texas, is shaped like the head of a cat and called Miss Kitty. "You have not lived until you've seen this balloon," said Pat Convery, director of the Howell Area Chamber of Commerce.

The 11th annual Balloonfest begins 6 p.m. Friday, June 23, with a mass balloon launch and concludes Sunday evening, June 25.

The challenge for balloonists is to proceed to various "targets" and drop small beanbags as near to the targets as they can.

"It's a race of accuracy, not of speed," Convery said. "I've seen them come down to within a foot of the ground. Some of them just love to show off."

On the morning flights, balloonists will ascend from various locations and visit several targets, the final target being at Howell High School.

On the afternoon flights, all balloons ascend from the high school. The balloonist who hits the most targets with his or her beanbags will be named state champion.

Duthie and Lorenz plan to be tossing their beanbags, too, but neither has ever won a Howell Balloonfest.

Lorenz, a free-lance marketing and public relations consultant, has ballooned all over the world, including jaunts in China and Spain. He began ballooning in the early 1980s, in part because "my golf game was falling apart at the time."

In fact, Lorenz and Gordon Boring, owner of the Wicker Basket Balloon Center in Wixom, were instrumental in starting the now-defunct, Plymouth-based Mayflower Hotel Hot Air Balloon Festival.

Lorenz flies as often as he can, usually in the Kensington Metropark area of Oakland County because western Wayne County is too close to Metro Airport and too close to Detroit.

Lorenz carries 30 gallons of propane in his basket and burns 20-25 gallons of that in a typical one-hour flight. His wife follows him on the ground and maintains radio contact. How long does it take to pack up the balloon after a landing? "We like to land in subdivisions where there are a lot of kids to help out," he said.

Duthie, a project manager for the Rouge Steel Co., began ballooning in 1988 after purchasing a balloon ride at the Mayflower festival. "I was a big kid," he said. "I was hooked."

Oddly enough, Duthie is afraid of heights, but being up 3,000 feet with nothing but a balloon basket under his feet doesn't faze him. "The analogy I always use is, "It's like floating in water,'" he said. "I never had a passenger go up who started out scared and landed scared. By the time we land they just love it and want to do it again."

Folks who attend the Howell Balloonfest will have an opportunity to purchase a balloon ride if they care to risk being hooked like Duthie. (An inexpensive used balloon and attendant paraphernalia will set you back $10,000.)

The Balloonfest also features the Aerial Allstars Skydiving Team, the Windjammers Stunt Kite Team, a Medieval Village, arts and crafts show, antique and custom car show, carnival and lots to eat.

Learn to crew

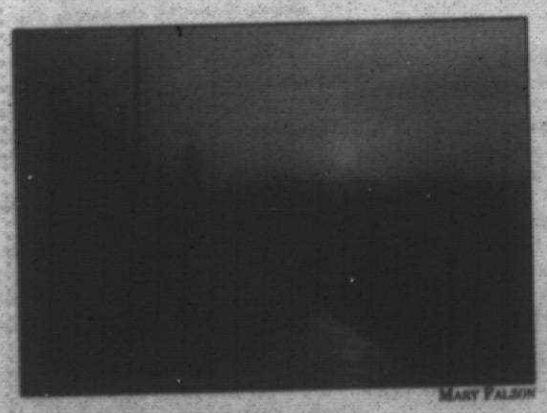

People interested in learning more about hot air ballooning may attend a "Learn To Crew" seminar 6-9 p.m. Wednesday, June 21, at Springfield Oaks County Park in Davisburg, southeast of Holly.

The event is put on by the Southeastern Michigan Balloon Association.

The fee is $5, which may be applied to membership in SMBA.

FINE ARTS

MARY FALZON

Great Lakes Sunset: Photographer Mary Falzon went off-the-beaten-track to snap the Port Sanilac lighthouse at sunset.

Liberty Fest Fine Art Show: Artist developing skill as a photographer

By Linda Ann Chomin
Special Writer

Mary Falzon enjoyed the Liberty Fest Fine Art Show so much last year that this year she decided to participate.

Falzon brings her color photographs, which focus on the scenic side of Michigan, to the fourth annual show June 24-25 at Heritage Park, (Canton Center Road and Proctor, behind the Canton Township Administrative Builidng), Canton Township. Hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

More than 70 artists will display their works. The event also features fireworks, face painting, sand art, paddle boats, strolling musicians and entertainers, a classic car show, antiques, and free children's art workshop sponsored by Canton Parks and Recreation department.

Falzon has photographed more than 40 lighthouses all around the United States. From the Holland lighthouse on Lake Michigan to the Grand Haven light- house, the images instill a sense of peacefulness and serenity in the viewer.

Falzon, a 35 year old secretary in the detective bureau of the Canton Township police department, takes weekend trips to capture not only lighthouses but barns, sunsets, landscapes, and animals in her scenic photography.

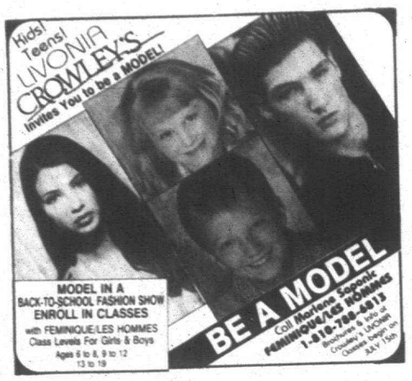

Her photography releases the stress she encounters on the job. Falzon previously had worked for the West Bloomfield police department, and before that in the Inkster police department for 15 years. She primarily uses a Minolta camera loaded with 100 or 200 ASA Kodak color film. She prefers the slower speed because it's less grainy than the 400 ASA Canton detectives use to to photograph crime scenes.

"It started out as a hobby when my sister, an art teacher in Lexington, thought they were good and suggested I enter some shows," said Falzon, a graduate of Cherry Hill High School in Inkster and Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

A hip roof barn in Traverse City looks like a picture postcard with it trees sporting rich autumn colors that play off of the barn's green roof and earth's bright blue sky. It's field stone base gives the barn a solid look as if it could endure through the ages.

"Barns just catch my eye. They all have a style. Many of the Michigan barns have stone foundations. Barns and sunsets are some of my best sellers along with cows and horses, and men really like the freighters," said

Falzon of South Lyon.

She's always looking for an unusual angle from which to take her photographs. She will go just about anywhere to get it even if it means standing knee-deep in lake water or at the end of a pier with waves washing over her feet. "People always want to know where they are taken. Many times people will buy them if they're from a certain area or have a cabin or cottage there that reminds them."

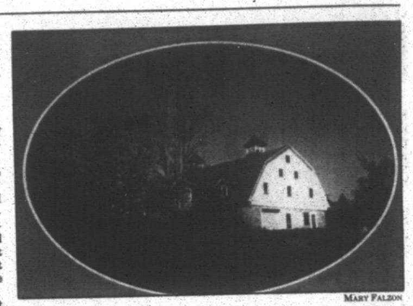

Prices for Mary Falzon's work range from $10 for a 5 by 7-inch matted photograph to $30 for an 11 by 14 inch image framed in wood. Matted 8 by 10 inch photos cost $15.

A team of Lansing artists creating garden sculpture from rusted steel, will make a return visit as will Hazel Owen of Garden City, paper sculpture; Lynette Anderson, Canton, paintings; members of Three Cities Art Club, Garden City Fine Arts Association, and the Plymouth and Canton senior citizen painting students of Sharon Dillenbeck.

Many of the artists will be demonstrating their skills during the show including Hugh Burley of Ann Arbor. T-shirts designed by Dillenbeck and Giordano to celebrate the event feature the Statue of Liberty. The cost is $10.

Sharon Dillenbeck of D & M Art Studio in Plymouth, co-producer of the show with Julie Giordano, has her fingers crossed there won't be a repeat of last year's torrential downpours that washed out sales for many of the artists.

"The Liberty Fest is a great fine arts show in an open air setting with a gallery feel," Dillenbeck said.

Auction benefits Very Special Arts

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Circle Friday, June 23 on your calendar. That's the date a group of Observer & Eccentric area artists band together to auction paintings, pottery and sculpture on behalf of Very Special Arts Michigan at Oakland Community College's Royal Oak campus, 739 S. Washington.

Very Special Arts Michigan provides art, music, drama and dance therapy programs for the disabled throughout the year. An upcoming exhibition by Very special artists of all ages disabled by hearing, sight, mobility, development and emotional impairments showcases work produced in the southeast Michigan visual art programs June 19 to July 19 at the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery, 32777 Five Mile Road east of Farmington. The public is invited to the opening reception 6:30-8:30 p.m. Monday, June 19.

Sponsored by Very Special Arts Southeast Michigan Region and the Livonia Arts Commission, the exhibit spotlights more than 70 works by 53 artists from local schools including Cooper-at-Whittier School in Livonia, JARC in Birmingham, and Oakland Schools Autistic Program, Kennedy Center in Pontiac.

This is the second stop for the exhibit which debuted in March at Urban Park-Detroit Art Center at Trapper's Alley in Greektown.

Works not to be missed include a wall hanging and two T-shirts by Caryn Martel of Farmington Hills; a watercolor by Vinny Conti of Redford; "Young Boy," colored pencil by Jason VanOchten, Livonia; "Mask," mixed media by Michael Myers, Southfield; a quilt by men of the Berlin Group in Birmingham; and "Bear with Honey," crayon and pencil by Kim Petteys, Livonia.

"It's very creative art. It's an excellent opportunity to see what can be done by people with disabilities, the quality most people wouldn't realize," said exhibit chairman Jack Olds of Livonia.

Very Special Arts is an international organization founded in 1974 by Jean Kennedy Smith as an educational affiliate of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

VSA seeks to promote worldwide awareness of the educational and cultural benefits of the arts for all people. Programs and training sessions take place in all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

VSA programs are implemented by local, state and national organizations. Internationally, VSA extends to more than 55 countries.

Very special auction

The VSAMI auction to raise funds for Very Special Arts programs, which led to the creation of the artworks on exhibit, begins 6:30 p.m. Friday, June 23 with a silent auction. The live auction runs 7:30-9:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 and available at the door. For more information, call (810) 546-9298.

Food will be provided by Royal Oak restaurants, and entertainment by Bess Bonier, Jack Brokensha and Dan Jordan.

Local artists donating work to the auction include sculptor Sergio De Giusti of Redford Township; potter John Glick, Farmington Hills; Free Press editorial cartoonist Bill Day, and painters John Tabb, Birmingham; Audrey DiMarco, West Bloomfield; William Bostick, Bingham Farms; and Jeri Fellwock, Farmington. Last year's auction raised about $3,000.

Colorful Very Special Arts T-shirts commemorating this year's exhibit feature an abstract artwork by a very special artist. They will be available at the opening reception and the auction for $15. Profits go toward supporting VSAMI Southeast Region activities, so show your support by buying one.

Linda Ann Chomin of Canton Township is a free lance writer specializing in the visual arts. Her Artistic Expressions column appears every Thursday in the Arts & Entertainment section of the Observer Newspapers.

■ AWARD-WINNER TO SHOW

Potter Judy Buresh of Garden City won second place ($300) in the ceramics category at Art Birmingham '95 June 3-4. The show featured more than 100 artists including nationally known painter Bill Rabbit.

Influenced by Eastern and pre-Columbian pottery, Buresh's work incorporates quartzite, amethyst crystals, raw turquoise, cabechons of lapis, cork from Portugal, antique beads, glass from Italy, and Chinese trade beads from Tibet. Buresh studied glaze chemistry at Western Michigan University. Her glazes, containing elements of the Oriental glazes used centuries ago, make her work one-of-a-kind.

Buresh will exhibit her ceramics at "Art in the Sun" taking place June 24-25 in downtown Northville. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

■ WILD WINGS

Terry Redlin, known as America's most popular artist, has just released a new print. It is available at Wild Wings Gallery, 388 S. Main St., Plymouth.

"Harvest Moon Ball" features a dozen vignettes of America in the 1920s and 30s. It was an era that ushered in the automobile, while not ready to relinquish the horse and buggy.

Although electricity was available to many farms, many more had not yet converted from kerosene lamps. For the past 20 years Redlin has captured the face and mood of America as a rural country sprinkled with small towns where farmers would congregate at market with their crops and exchange sociabilities.

Redlin was voted "America's Most Popular Artist" for the third consecutive year by art dealers in an annual survey published in U.S. "ART" magazine's March 1995 issue.

■ CHAMELEON GALLERY

"Fireworks Captured," the largest exhibition of kaleidoscopes in the Midwest, takes place June 25 to July 2 at Chameleon Galleries Ltd. 370 S. Main St., Plymouth. Regular gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Thursday and Saturday, until 9 p.m. Friday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call (313) 455-0445.

A series of activities related to the exhibit begins June 24 with a workshop to make your own kaleidoscope. The cost is $150. Reservations are required.

An opening reception for the exhibition spotlighting more than 100 handcrafted kaleidoscopes by 12 of the top artists working in the field today runs noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, June 25 at the gallery. The public is invited. Also on Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. Cozy Baker, a leading authority on kaleidoscopes and author of four books on the subject, will make a special appearance. She will be signing her books.

■ WINNING ARTIST

Plymouth artist Andrea DeZell took First Place in the Farmington Artists Club spring exhibit and sale held May 19-23 at the Spicer House in Heritage Park in Farmington Hills.

The juror was Stanley Rosenthal, associate professor of art at Wayne State University, president of the Michigan Water Color Society and artistic adviser to the Graphic Arts Council of the Detroit Institute of Arts. DeZell's winning painting, "Eggplant With Green Tomatoes," is an oil on paper.

DIA volunteer answers cry for help

Should you find yourself wandering aimlessly in the museum in search of a particular gallery or work of art, help is at hand — Torry Hand, the Detroit Institute of Arts' April Volunteer of the Month and Gallery Information Committee member for the past 14 years.

Hand admitted that the most frequently asked question is "Where are the nearest facilities?"

Terry Hand

"Volunteers actually go back 20 years, so that new pins had to be designed for 30-, 20- and 10-year recipients," she said. "At that time volunteers were mostly wives whose families were grown and who had the time. Now we see a new type of volunteer: individuals who work full time at their regular jobs and spend weekend hours helping at the museum. They are to be commended."

Hand was pleased to see about 200 new volunteers at a recent orientation.

Volunteer committees, which now number eight, perform a valuable service in helping to keep the museum open and in serving as community resource people.

Apart from her work with gallery information, Hand has served as day captain, vice chairman and chairman of the present committee, chairman of personnel placement and treasurer of the executive board. She is Founder's Openings chairman and a member of the Nominating Committee. While working on her committees, Hand was surprised to learn of the large number of international visitors the museum welcomes each year.

■ 'At that time volunteers were mostly wives whose families were grown and who had the time. Now we see a new type of volunteer: individuals who work full time at their regular jobs and spend weekend hours helping at the museum. They are to be commended.'

Terry Hand
Volunteer of Month

Born in Canada, Hand crossed the border into Maine one fateful summer, met a young man, and Therese Bourgon of Montreal became Mrs. Frank Hand. That was about 42 years ago.

The Hands' married life took them to Chicago, Louisville, Livonia and finally Farmington Hills.

"My husband has his own insurance agency in Livonia. He's hired, fired and rehired me," she laughed.

Hand and her husband raised four children, one son and three daughters.

"April through May is a busy time of the year for us since five of our six grandchildren and my husband share the Taurus sign."

While living in Livonia, Hand was active in the Livonia Children's Entertainment Guild, Girl Scouts, Town Hall and the Livonia Arts Commission.

Family visits to the museum spawned her interest in art, an interest that hasn't waned.

Of her volunteer duties, she said, "Who could ask for an easier job or a better place to work? Besides, I love people."

Away from the museum, Hand is a member of the travel group Nomads. She and her husband have traveled to Indonesia, Japan and Europe, among other places. They spent two weeks recently in Austria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

No golf widow, Hand plays along with her husband.

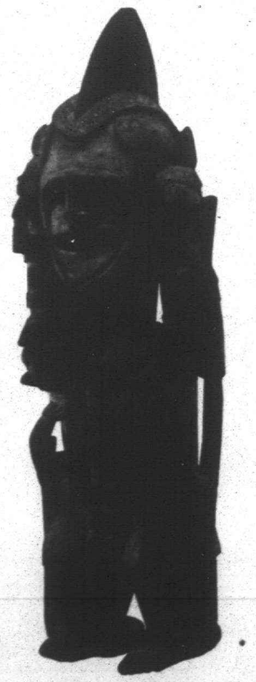

"I like golf because my husband does. On occasion when I spot a bird or something interesting, he has to caution me to 'watch the ball.'"

No admonition here. Hand has a lot on the ball, and her energy and enthusiasm make you want to follow her as she heads in the direction of the nearest cry for "Help!"

Art show 'Celebrates Life'

The enigmatic "Isabella," a photograph of a petticoated child with a questioning look on her face, captured top honors Saturday in the Congregational Church of Birmingham's 15th annual "Celebrate Life" art show.

Berkley artist Maureen Electa Monte's black and white portrait won the Katharine Kell "Best of Show" award. The award is named for Kell, now deceased, a CCB member instrumental in establishing the show.

Show juror Michael Farrell, associate professor in the School of Visual Arts at the University of Windsor, praised the portrait for its positive spirit and energy.

"This one kept sticking in my mind," he said. "There is nothing more positive than the look on a child's face — a wonder, an awe."

The exhibit, which has attracted artists from around the Midwest in a variety of media, opens to the public Saturday, June 17, at the church, 1000 Cranbrook Road in Bloomfield Hills. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. until the show closes Sunday, June 25, at 2 p.m.

Farrell, known for his enthusiastic teaching style and appreciation of Michigan's cultural and artistic heritage, built an exuberant show.

"I looked for quality and presentation as part of the process of the creation of the work of art. Also, when selecting the award winners, I tried to recognize the broad range of artistic talent. In choosing the overall winner, I could not help but be reminded of the theme of the exhibition."

Merit awards went to:

Carla Cronin of Bloomfield Township, for a paper on canvas collage called "Collage"; Frank Dulin of Rochester Hills, for a watercolor, "Intermission"; Jane McKanna of West Bloomfield, for her pastel "Katahbin Falls"; Nancy Meyer of Plymouth, for "Greta Come Kiss Me," a quilt; Judith Peebles of Milan for her steel, bronze, wax and cotton cord sculpture "Zaire-Ring"; Betty Sturley of Beverly Hills for a watercolor, "David Austin"; and Bill Westman of Pontiac for a watercolor, "Snow Creek," and a graphite work, "Turfus Graphitia."

In naming merit winners, Farrell cited Westman's two very different works, one a realistic watercolor and the other an abstract graphite.

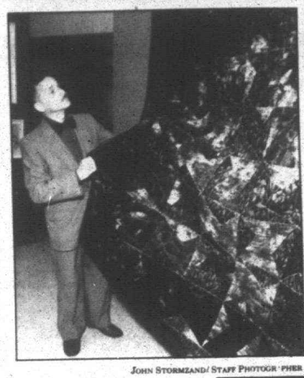

"The artist's sensitivity to nature comes out of both."

The sculpture "Zaire-Ring" wraps the colors of African Kente cloth around totemic figures.

"It's very interesting."

The quilt, representing a rise in a medium once thought only to be functional, reflects the qualities of Tiffany stained glass, Farrell said, in its cubist-like shapes and jewel tones.

"The quilt's magnificent."

Steve Gornall coming home to play

Steve Gornall and the Blue Collar Blues Band play Sisko's On The Boulevard (5855 Monroe at Van Born in Taylor) on June 16 and 17. Call (313) 278-5340 for more information and directions.

BY MARK GALLO
SPECIAL WRITER

Local blues fans know the name Steve Gornall well. Long time rock 'n' roll fans can go back even farther, to his tenure in Nature ("we had a write up in the Livonia Observer in '73," he remembers) and Mariah, who used to play places like the Ford Ice Rink opening for Ted Nugent and Bob Seger. An alumnus of Livonia's Bentley High School, Gornall was so immersed in the local music scene that he began to take on the characteristics of celebrity. When he left Detroit for San Francisco, early in 1994, it was a bombshell to the local music community.

Speaking by phone recently, he suggested that the move wasn't quite as spontaneous as it might have seemed to his many fans. Steve Gornall and the Blue Collar Blues Band had just released their superb debut for Royal Oak-based Blues Factory Records, and the band's fan base seemed to quadruple overnight. Though 20 years on the local scene afforded him a good degree of drawing power, with the release of their debut CD word spread on Gornall and Blue Collar like wildfire and each performance drew a full house, from Pontiac's Q-Club to Sisko's in Taylor.

"The CD should have been out months earlier," he says. That put the move behind, because he wanted to promote the disc. In the meantime, he and his family had the deal of a lifetime offered to them in the real estate market, and they had to go when they did, which, unfortunately for everyone, was only a few weeks after the disc finally was pressed. There were some hard feelings in the community because the move struck so many as a spur-of-the-moment decision.

"Most people didn't know the pressure that I was under," he says of that harrowing chapter of his life.

All of that is water under that famed bridge now. When Gornall came to town this past New Year's Eve for a reunion show with Blue Collar at Sisko's On The Boulevard, everything clicked. The house was sold out well in advance and the band meshed as if no time had passed.

He fully expects the same reaction for his return trip home later this month, when he again will join his compatriots in the Blue Collar Blues Band — harmonica player Kenny Welk, drummer Vinnie Scalabrino and bassist Tim Garrick — at Sisko's.

Asked if he's excited, Gornall is quick in his reply. "Definitely! Me and Harry (Sisko) are going to stay on this schedule of a summer concert and a New Year's Eve there forever. I like it because it gets me back home."

He's still working and working hard, though the gigs don't come as easily in San Francisco as they did in Detroit. He doesn't have a two-decade history to sell himself with to club owners, among other things. Still, he's keeping some pretty impressive company.

"I worked recently with Robert Cray's drummer and jammed with Steve Smith from Journey and Huey Lewis' bassist."

He's also just recorded "some guitar fills" with Jonathan Kane of the Babys and Journey fame, and has been spending a lot of time with Kevin Russell. The guitarist, originally from Westland, is best known for his stint in the rock group 707 ("I Could Be Good For You") and he has been building a reputation as a producer in the Bay Area.

"He just produced Rick Derringer," Gornall says, "and he plays with Clarence Clemons and people like that. He's been helping me out a lot . He knows a lot of players."

"Mostly I work in San Francisco itself," he relays. "I've got a new Blue Collar Blues Band. I know they still use the name there, but I had to use it here because I use the CD to get work. It's a three-piece most of the time. Once in a while I add a harp player, but it's pretty hard to find a Kenny Welk. I add keyboards more often."

"Once things get rolling," he says, "I'll get out more. You've got to go to L.A. if you want to get something happening."

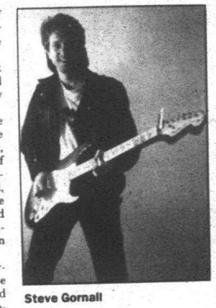

Guitar teaching fills in the quiet times.

"I've always taught. I do it on the side. It's the same stuff, only in a different place."

It's been nearly six months since he and the original Blue Collar Blues Band have shared a stage, so how good can they possibly sound?

"We'll do a sound check, and that's all the rehearsal we'll need," a confident Gornall says. "I told Kenny to listen to the album, because they don't do any of that stuff any more, and I'll throw a few new things at them, but it's like riding a bike, ya know? It's all pretty straight ahead stuff. This time we'll do two nights. We're looking for a good weekend. It should be a lot of fun!"

Ann Arbor Music Fest features starlit nights

Sunshine, good times and star-studded nights. That's the Ann Arbor Music Festival, June 16 to July 9, featuring internationally known artists at the Power Center for the Performing Arts, 100 Fletcher (corner of Huron St.) as well as free outdoor concerts and movies at "Top of the Park."

The festival began in 1984 and has become an Ann Arbor tradition. For more information, call the Ann Arbor Festival Summer Festival ticket office (313) 764-2538.

Each summer the festival presents a diverse series of performances at the Power Center for the Performing Arts. Approximately 20 performances take place in the 1,380 seat center, including jazz, pop, blues, folk and country music, as well as dance, comedy and children's programs.

Top of the Park, the plaza level of the Fletcher Street parking deck, which opens June 16, offers free concerts by a wide range of area performers each night. Free movies are shown on the festival's outdoor screen, plus food and beverages from some of Ann Arbor's finest restaurants and coffee shops are sold.

Located next door to the Power Cneter, the open-air top of the Park is the focus of festival activity and the perfect meeting spot for festival goers before and after performances.

Here's a list of upcoming performances at the Power Center for the Performing Arts.

TRAVEL

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

When weekends arrive, thousands of Michigan cyclists are ready to hit the road for healthy exercise and beautiful scenery.

But where will they go?

Two years ago writer Karen Gentry saw a need to answer that question and an opportunity to do it.

"I worked for the West Michigan Tourist Association. We were always getting calls asking about biking and there just wasn't a good collection of trips available," she said. "I worked with a travel writer who was starting his own publishing company. We knew there was a market for a bike book. It was fun to do and also know I had a publisher for it."

"Cycling Michigan: 25 of the Best Bike Routes in Western Michigan" was published in 1993 and became an instant success.

"When I started they told me regional guide books that sell 1,000 to 1,500 are doing good. We sold over 2,000 copies," Gentry said.

That success has led to the publication of "Cycling Michigan: 30 of the Best Bike Routes in East Michigan," ($13.95, Pagg Legg Publications). The book follows the same pattern as the first book with detailed, well written, descriptions of routes that follow backroads, main roads with wide shoulders and designated bike trails. Each route has a clear, simple map, information on area bike shops for emergencies and on restaurants, lodging and scenic views.

Gentry, who lives in Grand Rapids and works as an information specialist for Kent County, has been bicycling for many years but has only become a "serious cyclist" in the last eight years. Her books, however, are aimed at a wider audience than biking fanatics.

"I would say the books are not for the competitive cyclists who want to go 25 miles an hour. It's more for the recreational and weekend cyclists and for families. It's for people who want to get out and see the scenery, see Michigan up close," she said.

The new guide covers Michigan's more populous side. But our side of the state is less noted for its scenery. Gentry's book gives proper appreciation to those beautiful areas that are close at hand.

"One of the reasons we did an East Michigan book is that people wanted to bike close to home. They weren't looking for vacations but for day outings," she said.

This book follows the first with a special appreciation for the needs of the casual rider, especially the need to eat. Gentry delights in finding and sharing small restaurants, grocery stores and snack bars along the routes.

"I'm not a big eater, but that's definitely a matter of interest. You build up an appetite when you ride and people want to know when and where they can stop."

Gentry said that feedback from readers has convinced her that her guide is popular because it answers those questions that sometimes keep people from getting on the road. They want to know where they can eat, where they can park their cars, how long between stops, what will they encounter on their way, how bad or good are the roads.

The new book covers such close to home rides as the Paint Creek Trail between Rochester and Lake Orion, the Lakelands Trail between Hamburg and Stockbridge, two rides out of Ann Arbor, a trip around Grosse Ile and a ride through Kensington Park. It also moves up to the Thumb, the northeast Oscoda to Alpena area and Mackinac Island. Writer Jim DuFresne helped with nine of the routes and many bicycle clubs suggested routes, as Gentry duly notes throughout the book.

"It has sandy beaches and prime farm land and it's straight up from Detroit, real close," she said.

From her previous book she takes special note of the northwest section of the state, especially the Mission Bay Peninsula near Traverse City and the road between Petoskey and Cross Village.

Gentry is also a booster of the Rails-to-Trails program of which Paint Creek and Lakelands are a part. She said a trail between Grand Rapids and Cadillac is expected to be completed in the near future.

The Western Michigan guide is currently being updated for its third edition. The East Michigan book will also be updated as changes demand. Gentry said keeping the books current is important.

"Cycling Michigan: 30 of the Best Bike Routes in East Michigan" is available at bicycle and book stores throughout the area including D&D and Town and Country bike stores and Border's Book Store.

■ REVIEW

From the opening musical number "Comedy Tonight" to the surprise ending, Dearborn Community Theatre's, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" is a mirthful toga party of sight gags, bawdy innuendos, double takes and mistaken identities.

"Forum" is your basic farce set to music, sprinkled with vaudeville and burlesque. This presents a challenge to performers because there is no where to learn broad physical comedy. Even the TV variety show has disappeared.

While some of the funny business is a bit forced at times, director Rosemary Gass, who teaches speech, forensics and English literature at Brother Rice High School in Bloomfield Hills, has rehearsed her troupe well. Dearborn's "Forum" has generally high production values with good scenery, costumes, music and staging.

The setting is a lovely Roman courtyard with doors to three homes — one of which is a brothel. On the other side of the stage is the home of an old man who has gone off in search of his son and daughter. Center stage is the home of Senex (a dirty old man) and his son, Hero. What else would you expect in a farce?

Hero has his eye on a newly arrived courtesan — who it turns out is a virgin. To his slave, Pseudolus, he says, "Get me that girl, and you are free." The problem is, the girl has already been purchased by a self-centered captain in the Roman Army. And guess what? Hero's father, Senex, is also pursuing the damsel, thinking she is the new maid.

Around and around they go, with Tom Downey leading the way as the slave Pseudolus scheming for his freedom. With effervescence and energy he keeps the show moving as his plan survives one calamity after another.

C.J. Nodus is splendid as the henpecked father, Senex, with an eye for a well-turned ankle. Dianne Bernick scores as his imperious wife, Domina.

Perhaps the best performance is turned in by Greg Viscomi as the smug and conceited Roman Captain, Miles Gloriousus. His asides, voice and character are excellent.

Clif Levin is likewise very good as the hyperactive slave, Hysterium and Matt Higgins has just the right touch of debauchery as Lycus, the buyer and seller of courtesans.

The courtesans add spice to the show, and Lewis Sequin grabs his share of laughs with a few lines as Erronius, the old man in search of his children. And guess what? He finds them in a gaggle of geese. How else would a farce end?

Music director is Carole Mihalo of Livonia. The cast also includes Thomas Downey of Westland as Prologus/Pseudolus, Chris Drouin and Carlos Souffrant of Troy as Proteans.

Bob Weibel of Westland is a freelance writer, who has spent more than 25 years in community theater as a director, designer and performer.

Senior sex sizzles in two-act comedy

BY GLENNY MERILLAT
STAFF WRITER

"Morphing" has become the rage of the '90s. We see it in television commercials. We take the kids to see the Rangers do it in our local movie houses.

Now it's hit the legitimate stage.

"The Bermuda Avenue Triangle," a two-act comedy, opened June 6 at the Fisher Theatre and it didn't take long for the audience to realize that — hey! there's major adult morphing going on here.

Triangle is the story of two tired, dispirited old women played by Bea Arthur and Renee Taylor, who have been shuttled off to a retirement village in Florida by their daughters to spend their fading golden years, only to turn into raging sexpots.

The object of their ardor and reason for their dramatic lifestyle change is played by Joe Bologna, who is perhaps in worse shape than they are, but won't admit it. In his denial, he fires the banked flames of passion and awakens the libidos of both women who thought their lives, forget their sex lives, were over.

The two veteran television and stage actresses pull out all the stops in their portrayals of stereotypical Italian and Jewish mothers. Their telephone conversations with their daughters brought sustained laughter of recognition from the opening-night audience.

"A person could die from pastel poisoning," rages Arthur's character as she glances around the pale pink and green condo.

Taylor doesn't quite pull plastic slip covers from her purse, but instead "morphs" the sofa with a hideous, clashing crocheted afghan.

Bea Arthur

There is high comedy in Triangle liberally laced with explicit language and outrageous ethnic humor as "The Golden Girls' " Arthur and The Nanny's yenta of a mother transform themselves into sex kittens and in the process become two different, compassionate people.

Another familiar face and remembered voice is Triangle's fourth cast-member. Audiences will remember Cliff Norton from his hundreds of appearances on network television dating back to the Ed Sullivan era.

Norton plays a rabbi and head of the condo organization who welcomes "with a gift of fiber" what he believes to be two gentle, geriatric ladies into his little clan of bead-stringing seniors. When their metamorphosis is complete his incredulity is classic.

For those who enjoy makeovers (Arthur in a red wig!), makeup (Taylor's eyes, lips and legs), and make-out (do they still call it that?), pay a visit to "The Bermuda Street Triangle" at the Fisher before it closes on June 25 and heads across the Atlantic for an extended run in London.

Triangle was written by Taylor and Bologna, with Bologna also directing.

Circus sets up tent at Meadow Brook

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

For 12 weeks each year, the Big Apple Circus, which is coming to Meadow Brook June 16-27, performs at the Lincoln Center in New York. "We have trailers parked alongside the wall of the Metropolitan Opera Theatre," said Paul Binder, founder and artistic director. "We're something special."

The circus performs under a 1,972-square-foot, big-top tent. No seat is more than 50 feet away from the action in the ring. "Our circus is like circuses in Europe," said Binder. "It incorporates aspects of traditional theater, including original music, lighting, choreography, sets and costumes with classical circus elements, including aerial acts, clowning, mime, juggling and acrobatics, and a special focus on classical equestrianism."

Each year's show is created around a specific theme, and the heart of the circus is a small core company of performers who return each year with new acts centered around the new theme. They are joined by guest artists from all including Russia and Mexico.

This year's theme is "Grandma Meets Mummenschanz," and takes circus goers to a magical world where the Mummenschanz (Miguel Camerero and Cathy Callhoun) meet both the human and animal inhabitants of the circus ring. The show features the beloved clown character Grandma, (Barry Lubin).

"Mummenschanz is a Swiss group that does movement theater with puppets and abstract characters. Some of them are eight feet tall," said Binder. "Grandma encounters these characters. At first she's afraid, but, like all grandmas she'd rather knit them a sweater than scare them away. So Grandma introduces them to the elephants and other people in the circus."

From Denmark, world-renowned equestrian Katja Schumann, who has been married to Binder for 11 years, and her father, Max Schumann, present their regal stallion romping in a lively act with a Copland inspired mariachi beat.

Other acts include the frantic antics of Arturo Alegria of Mexico, a juggler of ping-pong balls and soft balls; award-winning trapezist Elena Panova, and the aerial acrobat Egorov Troupe of Russia; and America's Ben Williams who teams with his 5,000 pachyderm pal, Ned, in a funny set where Ben shares his lunch.

Big Apple Circus

When & where: June 16-27, under air-conditioned Big Top tent at Meadow Brook on the Oakland University Campus, (southwest corner of Walton Boulevard and Adams Road) Rochester.
Show times: 7 p.m. Friday, June 16; 1 and 7 p.m. Saturday, June 17; 1 and 5 p.m. Sunday, June 18; 1 p.m. Monday, June 19; no shows June 20; 1 and 7 p.m. Wednesday, June 21 and Tuesday, June 27.
Tickets: Range $18-$25 (weekday evenings and weekends), $12-$20 (weekday matinees). Call (810) 645-6666. For more information, call (313) 923-8259.

Greenfield Village musters array of car collectors

Steer into the past lane for a sentimental journey during Motor Muster June 17-18 at Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

From the creme de la chrome of the 1930s to the fin-tastic fantasy machines of the 1960s, this gathering of collectors from across the national features 500 vehicles including cars, trucks, bikes and motorcycles.

Vintage vehicles cruise through Village streets for a narrated pass-in-review, offering a chance to learn more about automotive history, design and restoration from nationally recognized experts.

When they're not parading, the vehicles will be on display for tours. Visitors can also meet the collectors.

Children can try toys their parents and grandparents enjoyed, including hula hoops and pogo sticks. Each day concludes with the Popular Choice awards. Visitors can vote for their favorites, and watch the winners make a "victory lap."

A new presentation shows how playing with toys and riding bikes helped the Wright Brothers solve the mysteries of powered flight. Summer Festival also offers craft demonstrations and make-and-take activities.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village are assessable via I-75, I-94, Southfield Freeway and Michigan Ave. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call (313) 271-1976 or 1-800-835-5237 for visitor information.

'Congo' delivers old-fashioned thrills, chills

JOHN MONAGHAN

Return with us now to those thrilling days of yesteryear, when kids would line up at the neighborhood Bijou on a Saturday afternoon. They'd set off with expeditions in search of jungle riches only to discover something more astounding — King Kong, dinosaurs, or bungalow-sized insects.

This same premise fuels "Congo," a new adventure thriller based on a bestseller from "Jurassic Park's" Michael Crichton. Filled with stock characters and dopey dialogue, it nevertheless delivers old-fashioned thrills and chills.

It's hard to run through the plot with a straight face. You see, there's this talking gorilla who uses a computer device to turn sign language into speech. Her trainer (Dylan Walsh) wants to return her to the jungle, but must take others along to meet expenses.

A Romanian philanthropist (Tim Curry) comes on board, though it's soon revealed that he's broke and in search of King Solomon's mines. The real money comes from a former CIA agent (Laura Linney), now working for a telecommunications company, who must retrieve a downed expedition that includes her former lover.

A savvy black safari leader (Ernie Hudson) guides them past hungry animals and unfriendly political regimes. The natives look astonished when they see him leading the group. "They expect a black man to carry a trunk on my head," he quips in a sophisticated tone a la George Sanders.

Closing in on their destination, they discover that deep within the jungle is something mysterious and deadly, an apelike creature that can wipe out an armed party in seconds.

That "Congo" works so well is no surprise. After all, writer Crichton negotiates multi-million dollar book deals with Hollywood long before he lifts a pencil. He tosses in every jungle adventure cliche, from volcanic eruptions and poisonous snakes to killer hippos. Yes, killer hippos.

As in "Jurassic Park," the cast plays it straight, no matter how silly the dialogue. "Rocky Horror's" Tim Curry, who could star in the Peter Lorre story if his eyes bulge out any further, has the proper blend of slimy charm and obsession in his quest for diamonds.

Former Detroiter and "Evil Dead" star Bruce Campbell even turns up early in the film as one of the first to meet the monster.

The most convincing performance comes from that talking gorilla, Amy, created by special effects wiz Stan Winston. The facial expressions and the mannerisms will make even the most cynical viewer believe, if just for a minute, that she is a real beast.

MERRICK MORTON

Remarkable story: Primatologist Peter Elliot (Dylan Walsh) is the guardian of Amy, a gorilla he decides must be returned to her jungle home in "Congo."

Call it a guilty pleasure, but I enjoyed "Congo" as well as any movie this year. Critics may sniff, but word-of-mouth should allow the family-friendly "Congo" to hold its own with a slew of other higher-profile releases this summer.

"The Englishman Who Went Up a Hill, But Came Down a Mountain" (Britain — 1995). Hugh Grant stars as an English mapmaker who meets his match in a small Welsh village. The residents are outraged when his measurements show that their beloved mountain is merely a hill and do everything in their power to make him change his mind.

"Braveheart" (USA — 1995). Mel Gibson both directs and stars in this epic saga of the legendary Scottish warrior who united warring clans against the English. Long and bloody, it still packs an emotional punch.

"The Bridges of Madison County" (USA — 1995). Skepticism greeted Clint Eastwood when he decided to bring Robert James Waller's much-loved, equally maligned novel to the screen, but it's not bad at all. Meryl Streep plays the Iowa farm wife whose chance encounter with a worldly photographer (Eastwood) changes her life forever.

"The Underneath" (USA - 1995). This new psychological thriller reunites "sex, lies, and videotape" director Stephen Soderbergh and actor Peter Gallagher. Starts Friday.

4135 W. Maple, Bloomfield. All titles play through at least next Thursday. Call (810) 855-9090 for information. ($6; $2.95 twilight)

"A Little Princess" (Britain - 1995). A child raised in India must fend for herself when it's presumed that her father has been lost in combat.

"Braveheart" (USA - 1995). See Main Art Theatre listing above.

"The Bridges of Madison County" (USA - 1995). See Main Art Theatre listing above.

"The Underneath" (USA - 1995). See Main Art Theatre listing above. Starts Friday.

603 E. Liberty, Ann Arbor. Call (313) 668-8397 for information. ($5; $4 studentseniors)

"Only the Brave" and "Playing the Part" (Australia — 1994) at 5 p.m. June 17; 9:15 p.m. June 20. The first is a harrowing coming-of-age story about two teenage girls who live on the edge and are desperate to get out of their desolate, deadend surroundings. The second is a home movie, currently on the film festival circuit, in which a woman tries and fails to make her uptight Grosse Pointe parents recognize her homosexuality.

"Amateur" (USA — 1995). Through June 25 (call for showtimes). The latest from director Hal Hartley ("Trust," "The Unbelievable Truth") introduces a string of unusual characters, including an ex-nun who writes pornography to earn a living and an amnesiac who was once a ruthless player in the porno game himself. Monday, June 19-Thursday, June 22.

Tickets, $10-$20 per person, are available at the Fox Theatre, (313) 396-7600, all Ticketmaster locations. To charge tickets by phone call, (810) 433-1515.

"Pocahontas" is the famous love story of the Native American heroine Pocahontas (the voice of Irene Bedard) and handsome sea captain John Smith (Mel Gibson) set in Jamestown, Virginia, in the 1600s. The folk tale features music by Academy Award-winning composer Alan Menken ("Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin") and lyrics by Broadway veteran Stephen Schwartz ("Pippin," "Godspell" and "The Magic Show").

Listen up British bands, we want fun not attitude

CHRISTINA FUOCO

Being a big fan of the Manchester music scene and having just returned from there, it hurts me to say this — the Stone Roses and Oasis need a few lessons in stage performance.

I'm not a performer or stage veteran, nor do I claim to be. But I feel justified in giving the Stone Roses and Oasis a few tips. First a little background.

The Stone Roses had no firm plans on coming to Detroit so Memorial Day weekend I hauled myself out to Chicago to see the Stone Roses perform as part of the Q 101 "Jamboree" radio festival at the World Music Amphitheatre, an outdoor venue nearly twice the size of Pine Knob. I loved the Stone Roses's self-titled album and the song "I Wanna Be Adored" and "Fool's Gold" so naturally I was looking forward to this. For a month I lived, breathed, and slept the Stone Roses so much so that I kept forgetting that bands like Collective Soul, Sheryl Crow, Bush, Sponge, Duran Duran, Faith No More, Flaming Lips were also on the bill.

The weather was 50 degrees and raining. Mud-covered lawn patrons hurled patches of sod at the pavilion. Through my years of concert-going, I have learned how to emerge sod-free from the grass wars. Well, OK, embarassment had something to do with it too. At Lollapalooza a few years ago, I went backstage to talk to Soundgarden when one of the band members so kindly informed me, "You have a big glob of sod on your forehead" and flicked it off me. How humiliating.

Anyway, it wasn't a pretty sight but I was getting more excited by the minute so I stuck it out for the Stone Roses. Their set started out fine, actually, with their hit "I Wanna Be Adored." As soon as the song was over, the Stone Roses copped an Oasis attitude. The singer hung his head down, turned around and got a sip of water, dawdled around the stage a while and broke into the next song. The cycle repeated itself throughout their set.

We're ever so honored to have you in our presence, almighty Stone Roses.

Because Oasis did the same thing when I saw them at St. Andrew's Hall in mid-March, I have this feeling that English bands don't know how — or don't have any desire to — to play up to American audiences. So I'm going to help them out. Here we go:

■ There's no need to still be bent out of shape because we whooped you in the Revolutionary War so get over it and get those silly frowns off your face. Stop looking at your shoes while we're at it.

■ We don't go to your concerts to worship your every move like British fans and tabloids so don't be so condescending. We'd like to have fun with you.

■ The United States is a hard country to break and your kindergarden temper-tantrums aren't helping. Pretend you all get along.

■ This is specifically for Oasis, you don't need to open up your show with the song "Tonight I'm a Rock 'n' Roll Star." We're pretty much prepared for that attitude anyway.

And Oasis wonders why fans have been known to shout "England sucks" at their concerts?

The bottom line is you just wanna be adored? We want to be entertained — then we'll adore you.

All of you who have never gotten ahold of me on the phone or in person, will be happy to know that I'll be readily available on Sunday, June 18, when I guest bartend at Lili's, 2930 Jacob, Hamtramck. No, I don't know how to mix drinks that well but Lili's has assured me that "real" bartenders will back me up. It should be a lot of fun so stop by and feel free to bother me. Clutch brings out the silly in rock

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

■ 'Being on the road and playing with rock bands, it can just be so silly. Personally, I can't take it seriously. Watching MTV, there's a lot of bands that do take it seriously. We're making fun of that.'

Neil Fallon
Clutch singer/songwriter

Clutch singer/songwriter Neil Fallon stands outside St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit, smoking a cigarette near his band's "tour camper." A line of fans snakes around the hall and through the parking lot hoping to get tickets to see underground rock's burgeoning stars. Having shed his glasses and sprouted hair, Fallon stands unnoticed only a few steps from the crowd. A homeless man approaches him, unaffected, Fallon puts his cigarette out and heads into the hall.

An hour later, Fallon is stalking his prey on stage. He rocks back and forth as if he's ready to lunge at the crowd of mostly sweat-drenched teenage boys. Other than looking like a group of average, self-admitted "rednecks," there's something almost scary about the melodic hard rock band from Maryland.

Listen hard, however, and those fears are dispelled. "Like a fly to doo doo/You need me like a bird needs wings/Or little bunny fufu/Who needs to bop the field mice," Fallon screams during the slow groove of "El Jefe Speaks," off their adrenalin-charged debut "Transnational Speedway League: Anthems, Anecdotes and Undeniable Truths" (EastWest/Atlantic).

Welcome to Fallon's metaphorical playground. Fallon, who ironically has a degree in English from the University of Maryland, mercilessly harasses his playmates with his pre-school lyrics. He just can't take playing in a rock band too seriously.

"I never expected to be in one. The guys asked me, I got in the band. Being on the road and playing with rock bands, it can just be so silly. Personally, I can't take it seriously. Watching MTV, there's a lot of bands that do take it seriously. We're making fun of that," Fallon said via telephone from his Denver-area hotel room.

Clutch's silliness prevails on their self-titled sophomore effort (EastWest/Elektra). Wrapped around references to mythological characters, he pays tribute to American pop culture.

In "Rock 'n' Roll Outlaw," a tongue-in-cheek look at road life, Fallon sings "So now you know not to clock the Weeble Wobble hot rod gang. . . . (it's) no fun to crack the axle, but it's got to be done because whenever you wobble the weebles you know they get tickled off."

"Big News I," the opening track of Clutch's self-titled sophomore effort, ends with "come down to the locker of Davy Jones." Other songs make references to "red rover red rover," "knick-knackpaddywack," "Howdy Doody" and the "hokey pokey."

In a weird sort of twisted way, Fallon is making good use of his degree.

"I can stretch and say I've been published."

Fallon was finishing up his degree at the other U-M when he was approached to join Clutch. He didn't have any other future plans, so he joined. A few days after graduation, he and bandmates guitarist Tim Sult, bassist Dan Maines, and drummer Jean-Paul Gaster were touring Europe with Biohazard.

Their first visit to Detroit in the summer of '91 spelled out their future in the city. Dan Kotwicki, a bartender at the Shelter at the time, fell in love at first sight.

"Dan was at the very first Detroit show. That was at the University of Detroit Grounds (Coffeehouse). That was the summer of '91. There was about 20 people there. He's been there ever since. He's responsible for a lot of our Detroit fan base by playing it in his bar and pushing it."

Radio eventually locked on to "A Shogun Named Marcus" and the rest is history.

"It's because of the radio. If you can get played on the radio in the city, that can work wonders for a band. There's three cities — Detroit, Phoenix and New York that play us on the radio. Those are our biggest cities."

Clutch's visit to the Phoenix Plaza Amphitheatre in Pontiac on Thursday, June 22, with Tad, is their first since the release of "Clutch." Where "Transnational Speedway League" caresses the grooves and explodes into melodic tirades, "Clutch" is a more even-keeled produced effort. Jackhammer guitars, as in "Transnational Speedway League's" "Shogun Named Marcus," have been steamrolled into a slow grind.

"We get, I think, bored with ourselves and we like to change the sound," Fallon said.

In recording "Clutch," the band called back Larry Packer, who produced their debut 7-inch "Pitchfork" released in 1991.

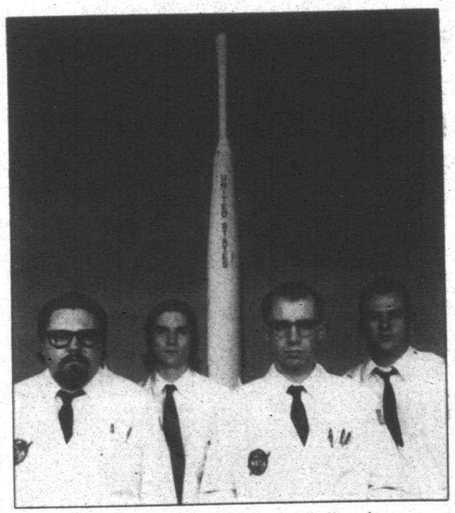

"We wanted Larry for several reasons," Maines said. "We wanted to be more relaxed about it. We figured recording it with Larry would help us make the purest record possible. On the first album we had to fly to the west coast and everything. Being a new band it was very distracting. On this album we had a green light to try any ideas we wanted."

While Clutch had their die-hard fans in mind, they didn't make any sacrifices for them.

"We always do what we want to do first. There's records we sold because people were asking for them. We do try to please people but that's just on the merchandise aspect," Fallon explained.

"Artistically, we're on our own little Cloud Nine."

Clutch performs with Tad at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 22, at Phoenix Plaza Amphitheatre, 10 Water St., Pontiac. Tickets are $10 in advance for the all ages show. For more information, call (810) 335-4850 or (810) 645-6666.

Wilco gets an unexpected warm reception

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

When former Uncle Tupelo member Jeff Tweedy kick-started his new band Wilco, he prepared himself for a long, uphill battle. He soon realized, however, that his fears were unfounded.

"The response has been really positive," Tweedy said via telephone from Pittsburgh where Wilco was performing.

Wilco, which is radio speak for "will comply," emerged as media darlings from the South by Southwest music conference in Austin, Texas. At a show that followed, the band tightened the screws of their credibility when members of the Jayhawks and Soul Asylum hopped on stage with them.

If that's not enough, Wilco will be a part of this year's H.O.R.D.E. festival the Black Crowes, Sheryl Crow, Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers, Blues Traveler, and Morphine, which comes to Pine Knob Music Theatre on Sunday, Aug. 20. Wilco will give fans a sneak-peek of what to expect at Pine Knob with a headlining show at 7th House in Pontiac on Thursday, June 15.

"We're bemused that we're even on that thing," Tweedy said with a sly laugh about the H.O.R.D.E. festival. "It should be interesting. We kind of did it because we haven't really ever played in front of festival kind of audiences."

Tweedy and songwriting partner Jay Farrer formed Uncle Tupelo nearly 10 years ago in St. Louis. Together they produced four albums together — "No Depression" and "Still Feel Gone," which carry strong punk influences, and the folk rock-flavored "March 16-20, 1992" and "Anodyne."

Toward the end of the "Anodyne" tour in 1994, Farrer announced that he was leaving the band.

"It was quite a shock," Tweedy admits. "Even though Jay had his reasons for leaving, both personal and creative, we were really thrown for a loop. It took us a little while to find our footing again."

Late last year, Tweedy and fellow Tupelos guitarist/bassist/backing vocalist John Stirratt, drummer Ken Coomer, and stringman Max Johnston re-entered the studio to record "A.M.," their debut for Reprise Records.

The chameleon-like nature of Wilco is well represented on the album switching gears seamlessly from knee-slappin' roots rock ("Casino Queen") to pure country ("It's Just That Simple" and "That's Not The Issue").

The first single "I Must Be High" qualifies for sing-along status: "You always wanted more time to do what you always wanted to do now you got it and I must be high to say goodbye. You never said you needed this you're (ticked) that you missed the very last kiss from my lips and I must be high to say goodbye."

Some of the lyrics are silly and endearing at the same time. For example on "Passenger Side," Tweedy sings: "For the last couple of miles you've been swervin' from side to side. You're gonna make me spill my beer if you don't learn how to steer." "Casino Queen" take a humorous look at the frustrations of gambling. "I've been gamblin' like a fiend on your tables so green. I always bet them black, black jack, I'll pay you back. The room fills with smoke and I'm already broke and the dealer keeps on jokin' while he takes my last token."

With Wilco, Tweedy and the band, which also includes guitarist Jay Bennett, there's a much stronger feeling of cohesiveness.

"It's a significantly different feeling as a band. We're more unified as a band. We felt like we were more like sidemen. Everybody feels like this is our band. That makes thing smoother."

And Tweedy gets to showcase more of his talent.

"We play a lot more songs that I sing. In Uncle Tupelo, I was only singing five or six or seven songs a night, and I was doing mostly backup singing. That's the difference with Wilco. There's a lot of songs that I had on records that I wrote that we never played live. We do more of that."

Tweedy said that when Wilco plays live, the renewed sense of enthusiasm is evident.

"Uncle Tupelo was kind of serious on stage, we tend to be less serious."

Wilco plays the 7th House, 7 N. Saginaw, Pontiac, with special guest Outrageous Cherry at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 15. Tickets are $10 in advance. For more information, call (810) 335-8100. Tickets for the H.O.R.D.E. Festival are $35.50 for pavilion and lawn. Showtime is at 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 20, at Pine Knob , I-75 and Sashabaw Road, Clarkston. For information about that show, call (810) 377-0100 or (810) 645-6666.

OCC hosts Culinary Classic June 24

When Oakland Community College asked Susan Muer if they could name their new culinary resource library after her father the late Charles "Chuck" Muer, she not only said yes, she rolled up her sleeves and got to work.

For the past three months Susan has been spending Friday mornings at OCC's Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills meeting with faculty members to help them to plan, promote and present two special events — "A Pledge to the Future," a strolling benefit dinner Tuesday, June 20, and "Culinary Classic," an all-day event Saturday, June 24 featuring champagne breakfast, seminars by culinary experts, grand tasting, marketplace, and silent auction.

Seminar presenters include Jimmy Schmidt of The Rattlesnake Club, Certified Master Chef Milos Cihelka of the Golden Mushroom, Charles Davis of Robert Denton & Company, Ltd., and Master Sommelier Madeline Triffon, newly appointed Director of Beverages for all Unique Restaurant Corporation restaurants, effective July 3. Triffon, who most recently held the position of sommelier at The Rattlesnake Club, is one of 26 Certified Master Sommeliers, and one of only two female Master Sommeliers worldwide.

"A primary goal of the Resource Library is that its guests will leave with a sense of satisfaction, not unlike that enjoyed by so many guests at a C.A. Muer Restaurant."
— Susan Baier, OCC Chef Instructor

If you would like to forgo the seminars on June 24, you can attend the grand tasting featuring local restaurants, 1-3:30 p.m. Saturday, June 24 and pay $65 per person.

"We're hoping to create a wonderful annual event to support what we believe is a fine culinary education," said Muer. "We've been long-term employers in the restaurant business. We would like to have well-rounded people to hire, and I'd rather stick with graduates from local colleges."

Muer is serving as the event chairperson with help from Oakland Community College co-chairpersons Susan Baier, Darlene Levinson and Chef Kevin Enright.

Baier, who approached Muer on behalf of the college in January, said they chose Chuck Muer because his name has long been recognized for its leadership in the restaurant business.

The vision for the library, which has yet to be built, is to bring every conceivable learning tool to its visitors from books and videos to computers and cookbooks. All proceeds from the June 20 dinner, and Culinary Classic on June 24, will benefit culinary arts programs at OCC, and the new Chuck Muer Resource Library.

The Chuck Muer Culinary Resource Library, to be inaugurated on June 20 at the prelude dinner, will be designed for use by students, professionals and the community.

In addition to research and reference materials, it will provide a central location for historical publications and documents releated to the restaurant and food service industries.

This year, also marks the 30th anniversary for the C.A. Muer Corp. In honor of this event, Susan Muer is compiling a tribute edition of the "Simply Great Cookbook," which will be ready in time for the event.

Chuck and his wife, Betty, were lost at sea in 1993 in the "Storm of the Century."

"A primary goal of the Resource Library," said Baier, "is that its guests will leave with a sense of satisfaction, not unlike that enjoyed by so many guests at a C.A. Muer Restaurant.

The vision is that one day the Chuck Muer Culinary Resource Library will attract students, professionals and the general public from throughout the United States."

■ Mark your calendars — Schoolcraft College in Livonia will present their fourth annual "Culinary Extravaganza" 2-5 p.m. Sunday, September 17 in the Waterman Center. Sixty of metro Detroit's best restaurants will offer tastes of gourmet foods and beverages. Tickets are $40 per person; two for $75. Call (313) 462-4417 to order tickets.

Canton Koufax perfect

The Plymouth-Canton Koufax baseball team improved its record to 5-0 with a sweep of Plymouth Salem Sunday, 11-1 and 14-3, in a Washtenaw Baseball Association double-header.

Canton Koufax dominated both games, closing out the opener in five innings and scoring runs in all 12 innings of the double-header.

Cobras on a roll

The Plymouth-Canton Junior Baseball League 13-year-old WABA Sandy Koufax team ran its current win streak to 10-straight by sweeping double-headers from Novi and Ann Arbor last weekend.

Mickey Adams, driving a 1967 Camaro, won in 10.639 seconds. Shorty Adams, also driving a '67 Camaro, was second in 10.799.

On Saturday in the Varsity Ford races, Mike Kelley of Plymouth, driving an '85 Ranger, placed second to Rich Corl of Belleville in the Sportsman Division. Kelley was timed in 12.442; Corl won in 12.391.

The '83 Plymouth Kicks completed a perfect season (11-0-0) with a 4-1 triumph over the Rochester Rockers, securing their Little Caesars Premier League division title.

The Kicks surrendered just four goals while scoring 44. The title is the team's fourth in league play; they have also won six indoor championships and five tournaments.

Team members are Danny Gill, Jon McGlone, jay Smith, Evan Malone, Oliver Wolcott, Derek Vermeulen, T.J. Tomasso, Chris LaMasse, Andrwe Holmes, Marty Kane, Phil Marrone, Brian Thiess, Brian Conway, Bryan Stephens, Justin Griffin, Sean Loewe and Nick Tochman. The Kicks are coached by Dennis Tochman and Bill Thiess.

The Canton Hornets made their trip to the Findlay (Ohio) Invitational Tournament last weekend a happy one by registering a championship. The Hornets recorded wins by scores of 3-0, 6-0, 6-0 and 6-0.

The Canton Lightning collected the title in the under-11 boys Select Division of the Wester Suburban Soccer League with a 7-1-0 record. The Lightning outscored their foes 26-4 during the season.

Livonia Youth Soccer Club United, an under-16 girls soccer team coached by John Boots and managed by Denise Fedrigo, will represent Michigan in the U.S. Soccer Association Midwest Regional, June 24-28, in Blaine, Minn.

United, made up primarily of players from the Observer & Eccentric coverage area, competed in the girls under-18 division in the Ilitch Division of Little Caesars Premier League.

Members of LYSC United include Anne Fedrigo, Melanie Siler and Nicole Tobin, all of Livonia; Sara Kloosterman, Farmington Hills; Shawn Chipelewski, Garden City; Jenny Parvianen, Canton; Jaime Bera, Jenny Long, Jill Swartz and Amy Simpson, Troy; Jenna Lawes and Jackie Clark, Rochester; Kristin Baja, Northville; Mava Mishler, Amy and Marcy Abner, Brighton; Leah Garn, Milford.

Missed chances end Salem's season

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

The fourth inning was half over. With Redford Catholic Central coming up for its turn at the plate, it seemed all the good fortune legend attached to the Shamrocks might be required to make them winners in this game.

At that point, Plymouth Salem had six hits off CC ace Justin Stankewicz. The Rocks had gone with their No. 3 pitcher, Ted Bentley, and he had allowed just two hits and a walk through three innings.

However, even though the offense favored Salem, the scoreboard did not: It was tied 1-1.

But it was only a matter of time, right? Stankewicz was coming off two days rest; he would soon tire and topple. And Salem had its ace, Justin Marcis, warming up in the wings. Salem coach Dale Rumberger had steadfastly refused to start Marcis on two days rest, but he was available for a few innings of relief.

Only a matter of time . . .

The Shamrocks didn't wait for luck. They took matters into their own hands in the bottom of the fourth, striking for five runs on the strength of two clutch hits and several Salem miscues.

It was more than the Rocks could recover from. CC (now 25-8) rolled to an 8-3 triumph, earning a trip to the Class A semifinals Friday in Battle Creek.

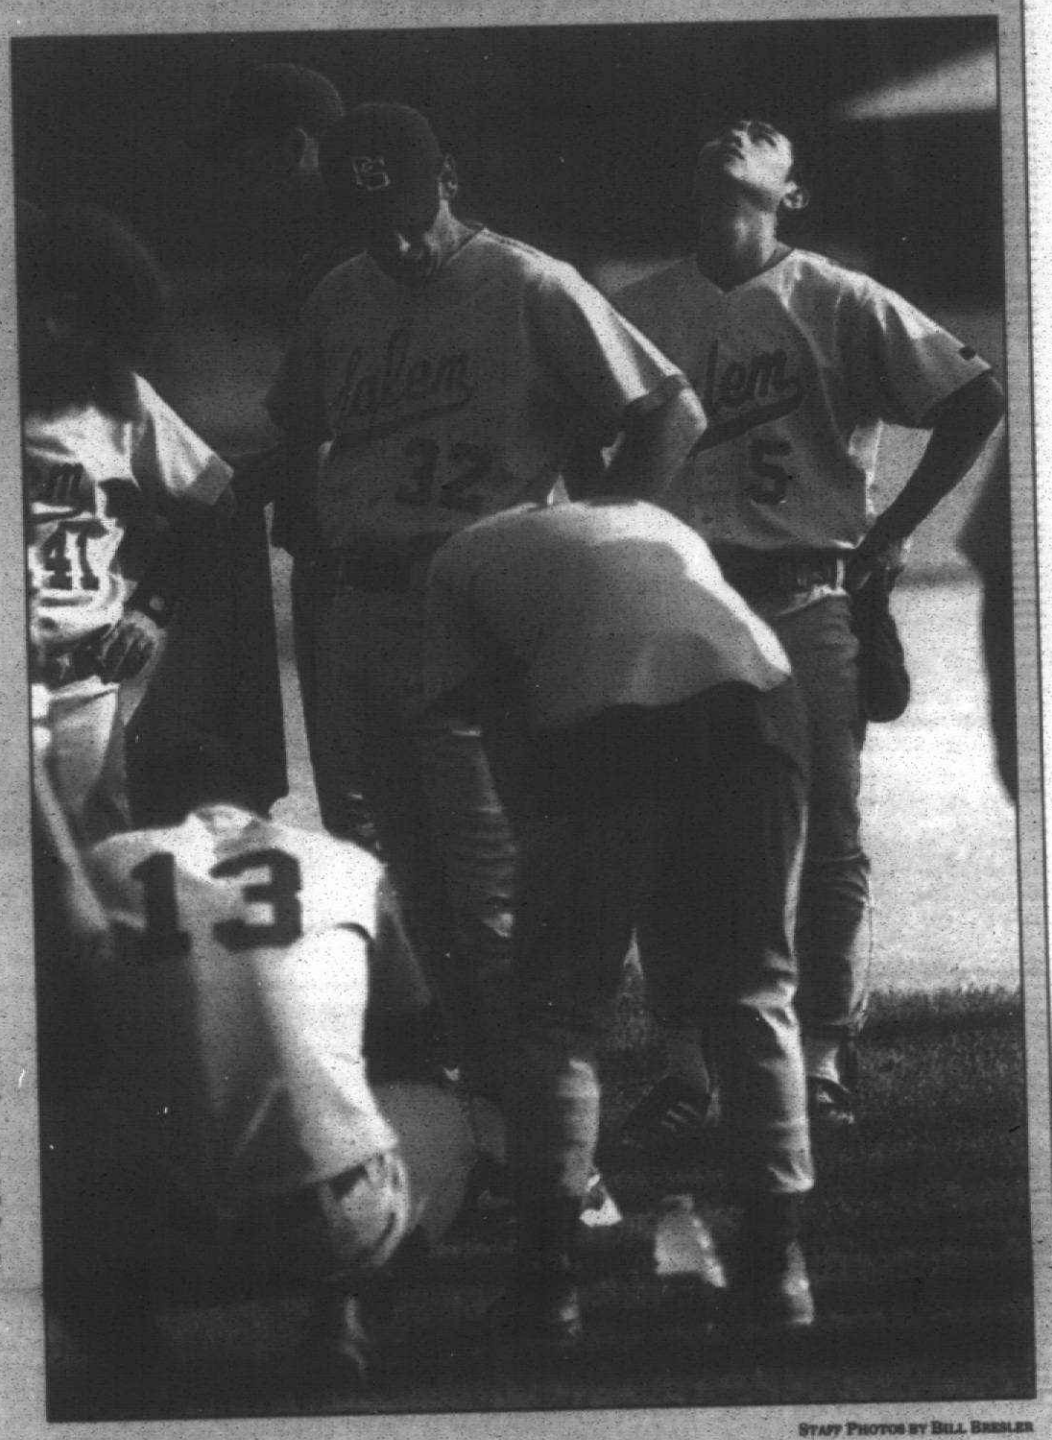

Salem bows out at 25-8.

"In the end, you'd have to say our defense hurt us," said Rumberger.

Poor timing didn't help, either. One mistake led to another for Salem, and the Shamrocks were only too happy to take full advantage of them.

Bentley started things off badly for Salem in the fourth by walking Garet Burch. Bill Styles, Salem's normally surehanded shortstop, made matters worse by allowing Marty Wilk's easy

Despite result, family is tight

Dale Rumberger was an assistant coach for Salem and his son, Aaron, was a junior outfielder and designated hitter for the Shamrocks when the two teams collided in a 1991 Class A regional final hosted by Dearborn High School.

Salem held on to win, 5-3, and three games later was crowned state champion after a 4-1 victory over Rochester.

"I remember telling Aaron, 'No matter what happens, I'm going on to Battle Creek (to coach Salem or watch his son play in the Final Four),'" recalled the elder Rumberger.

On Tuesday, it was all or nothing for the Rumbergers.

Class A Baseball Finals

- What: Michigan High School Athletic Association Class A baseball tournament.
- When: Semifinals, 7 p.m. Friday. Finals, 7 p.m. Saturday.
- Where: Semifinals at C.O. Brown Stadium and Nicholls Field at Bailey Park in Battle Creek; Brown Stadium will host Saturday's finals.
- Who: Grand Ledge vs. Grosse Pointe North; Redford Catholic Central vs. Rochester Adams.
- Cost: Individual tickets are $4 per day.
- Outlook: Solid defense, good pitching and strong hitting has been the key for Catholic Central (25-8), which eliminated Plymouth Salem in the quarterfinals. Still, Adams (26-8) advanced by beating Warren Mott in the quarters; in the regional finals last Saturday, the Highlanders knocked out defending Class A champ and pre-tournament favorite Birmingham Brother Rice 8-0. Getting past Adams will be a difficult task for the Shamrocks.
- History: This is CC's third trip to the Final Four in John Salter's 15 years as coach. The Shamrocks won a state title in 1987.

■ GIRLS TRACK

When Bob O'Brien took over a struggling Livonia Ladywood track program in 1993, he knew a quick start out of the gate was out of the question.

The Blazers had to concentrate on taking baby steps.

"It was frustrating at first," said O'Brien, 27. "For the most part, I had been a part of winning teams and knowing we wouldn't win at first was tough. But I knew I was young enough to weather the storm."

O'Brien is a 1986 graduate of Redford Catholic Central, where he was a regional high jump champion for coach Tony Magni. Following CC, O'Brien earned a teaching degree from Franciscan University in Steubenville, Ohio.

O'Brien said he learned a lot from Magni, including "how to run a big team. He did a good job."

O'Brien's first team at Ladywood had only 45 members. This season, the Blazers had a turnout of about 80, and it showed as they finished 4-2 in dual meets and won their first Catholic League championship in 11 years.

Ladywood finished fifth at the regional and sent six girls in seven events to the state meet.

"That's a pretty solid group of three," said O'Brien, a history and government teacher at Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard. "They've really put a lot of work in. The biggest job is trying to get a winning attitude and keeping the kids around."

ALL-AREA TEAM

Alisha Gordon, N. Farmington, shot put: The senior who is headed to Wayne State University on a basketball scholarship holds school records in the shot put (39-4¼), discus (142-11) and 100-meter hurdles (16.1). She finished eighth in the state in the shot and fifth in the discus. She received the Lady Raider Cup as the outstanding female athlete at North Farmington.

"Alisha is a dedicated and hard-working student," North coach Bill Pinnell Jr. said. "Not only is she an outstanding track athlete and basketball player, her academic accomplishments (twice academic all-state) are also outstanding."

CC wins the battle of pitching philosophies

Different coaches, different philosophies.

John Salter has been coaching Redford Catholic Central's baseball team for 15 years. Dale Rumberger, a long-time assistant coach at Plymouth Salem, is in his first year as head coach of the Rocks.

Salter opted to bring his pitching ace, Justin Stankewicz, back on two days rest to face Salem in Tuesday's Class A quarterfinal at Milan.

Rumberger refused to do likewise; even though ace Justin Marcis had pitched just four innings in a five-inning mercy victory over Ann Arbor Huron in the state regionals last Saturday, the Salem coach decided to go with his No. 3 pitcher, Ted Bentley.

The final result favored the experienced manager: CC 8, Salem 3.

"You can second-guess yourself all you want," said Rumberger, "but I don't think it's right to pitch kids on two days rest. I'm not going to ruin a kid's arm."

Both staff aces were in similar situations. Stankewicz threw five no-hit innings of CC's 9-0 victory over Detroit Southwestern in last Saturday's regional semifinal.

Marcis was nearly as effective. He allowed three hits over four innings in Salem's 12-0 blanking of Ann Arbor Huron in last Saturday's regional semifinal; he did not walk a batter.

Still, Rumberger called on Bentley. "Ted pitched well," the Salem coach later insisted. "He didn't lose it for us."

Perhaps not, but Bentley didn't win it for the Rocks, either. In his first three innings, he surrendered one run on two hits and a walk; in CC's pivotal five-run fourth, he faced five batters, walking three and got tagged for a three-run triple. The fifth batter reached base on an error.

Stankewicz lasted five innings for the Shamrocks. He gave up three runs (two earned) on 10 hits and two walks, improving his record to 8-4.

"Their kid threw hard," Salter said of Bentley. "But then he got behind (in the count). His wildness gave us an opportunity.

"Stankewicz was able to get us those five innings."

Which set it up for freshman lefthander Kevin Thomas to close out the game. He did just that: no runs, one hit, one walk, one strikeout.

Family

No. 27 Salem junior varsity jersey worn by his brother last year.

The Shamrocks scored five runs in the fourth inning and went on to defeat Salem, 8-3, to advance to the Final Four for the first time since 1989.

"Saturday night, we were sitting around at home after we found out Salem would play CC and my brother asked me, 'Who are you going to cheer for?' " Aaron said. "And I said, 'Family comes first.' I'm glad the Rumbergers are on the same side today, and I am so proud of my brother. I hated that day (four years ago) so much. My stomach was doing flips all day."

Aaron doesn't have fond memories of his only at-bat that afternoon.

With a runner on second base in the fifth inning, CC coach John Salter called on Aaron as a pinch hitter. After fouling off the first two pitches, Aaron went down swinging on the third.

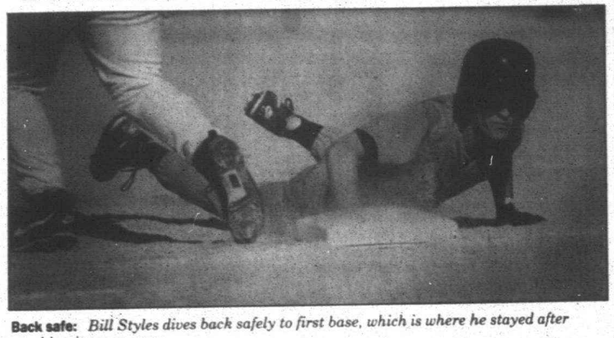

"I knew where my dad was going (to tell the Salem pitcher) to throw it — down and in," Aaron recalled. "The third pitch, he called for a pitch they named the Beast. I swear it broke two different times. It was a tough pitch to hit."

Dale Rumberger probably knows how to get Ryan out as well, but he's glad he was giving signs in the third base coach's box when his son was up and not calling pitches from the opposing dugout.

Dale isn't proud of calling the pitches that led to his son's strikeout.

"I didn't think it was fair for Salter to put Aaron in that situation," said Dale Rumberger, who moved his family from Westland to Plymouth in 1992. "I knew how to get him out, I was coaching him since little league. I told Aaron when he started at CC, 'These are two great programs and eventually we'll run into each other. And it'll be a situation where I'll have to try to win the game.' "

Salem

grounder to bounce through his legs. Bentley multiplied the problem by walking Jason Couture, loading the bases with none out.

That brought Kevin Thomas, CC's freshman center fielder, to the plate. "I was looking for a fastball, because he wasn't getting his curve over," Thomas recalled. "I missed the pitch on a 3-and-1 count and he gave me the same thing on 3-and-2, and I hit it hard."

CC had a 4-1 lead.

Thomas' hit didn't exactly surprise CC coach John Salter, simply because he didn't know what to expect. "He's the kind of kid you just don't know what he's going to do," Salter said. "He'll make a bonehead play one inning and a great play the next."

Thomas' hit wasn't the end of CC's inning. Bentley pitched to one more batter, walking Mike Homant. Marcis relieved, and he induced another freshman, catcher Mike Biane, to hit a foul fly to right that Jeff Mackiewicz eyeballed — then dropped. The error gave Biane another chance, and he delivered a run-scoring single.

That brought up the top of the order and Greg Rogers. With runners on first and second and no one out, Rogers pushed a bunt toward first. Marcis bobbled it but fielded it, then found he had no one to throw to at first. First baseman Dan Quaine charged the ball and second baseman Kaz Kurisu did not cover the bag.

For the second time in the inning, the bases were loaded — and still none were out. Marcis struck out Chris Misiak and got Mike Daguanno to ground out to second, but another run scored to make it 6-1.

The number of hits produced in the first four innings indicated the Rocks would not go quietly. Brad Lear punctuated that, leading off the Salem fifth by driving a Stankewicz pitch over the left field fence for a solo home run. After Ahmande Grimes flied deep to center, Quaine, Mackiewicz and Ryan Rumberger all singled to load the bases.

An ideal opportunity — but this was to be a day of misses for the Rocks. They managed to score just one run, on Mike Brannan's ground out.

For the game, Salem totaled 10 hits but stranded 11 baserunners. CC left seven runners on base.

"The game's a series of opportunities," said a philosophical Dale Rumberger. "If you don't take advantage of them, you go home."

At the start, it seemed the breaks would favor Salem. A two-out single by Mackiewicz in the third proved important when Ryan Rumberger's grounder in the hole between short and third was misplayed by Misiak. His wild throw to first allowed Mackiewicz to race all the way home with the game's first run.

CC tied it in the third on a walk to Homant, two sacrifice bunts and Misiak's two-out single to left. The Shamrocks iced it with two runs in the sixth, both scoring on Couture's two-out double to left-center field.

Salter pulled Stankewicz, who pitched five innings the previous Saturday, after five innings and let Thomas, a left-hander, finish. He did not give up a hit or a run, walking one and striking out one.

"With the top of their order coming up, I thought it was a good time to bring in another pitcher they hadn't seen before," said Salter.

CC got two hits apiece from Rogers and Misiak, with Thomas driving in three runs and Couture two. Ryan Rumberger led Salem with three hits; Mackiewicz and Lear had two each.

But even though Salem outhit CC 10-8, Rock pitchers issued seven walks to three by the Shamrocks. Which is why in the end the only number that really mattered — the score — also favored the Shamrocks.

BASEBALL

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer

Before Redford Catholic Central's freshman left-hander Kevin Thomas could throw a pitch in Tuesday's Class A quarterfinal baseball game, the umpires made him step off the mound and remove a white T-shirt he was wearing beneath his blue jersey.

Thomas won't win any bodybuilding contests, but his fastball sure made an impression on Plymouth Salem.

Thomas allowed no hits in two innings of relief as the Shamrocks held on to defeat the Rocks, 8-3, and advance to the semifinal round of the state tournament.

What made the hard-throwing Thomas tougher to hit was that he was following senior right-hander Justin Stankewicz, a side-armer who relies more on control than speed.

With one out in the sixth, Salem senior shortstop Bill Styles reached first base against Thomas on an error, but Thomas got the next two batters to pop out.

Jeff Mackiewicz walked with one out in the seventh and advanced to second on a ground out by Ryan Rumberger, but Thomas caught senior Mike Brannan looking at a called third strike to end the game.

Thomas, who also delivered a key three-run triple up the right-center field gap in a five-run fourth inning, seemed more in awe of being interviewed after the game than the pressure he faced during the game.

"This is neat," he said, watching a reporter scribble his answers on a note pad.

Viane, who played most of the season on the Shamrocks' junior varsity, contributed to two of the Shamrocks' runs.

He laid down a sacrifice bunt that led to the first CC run by Mike Homant in the third inning, and delivered an RBI single with no outs in the fourth.

"I'm just trying to do my part to help the team out," Viane said.

Happy trails to you

CC junior varsity coach Al Moran plays for an over 55 men's softball team sponsored by National Trails, a bus service out of Southfield. Moran was hoping to line up a bus for the Shamrocks to ride to Battle Creek for the Final Four.

It would be a welcomed change for the Shamrocks, who usually pile in vans for road trips.

"Maybe we can go in style," Salter said.

Juniors to battle

Salter said he plans on using junior right-hander Chris Karney in Friday's semifinal game against Rochester Adams. The Highlanders are expected to send their ace, junior right-hander Chris Wasen, to the mound. Wasen wasn't used in Tuesday's 4-2 quarterfinal victory over Warren Mott.

Thomas would be available for long relief and could probably start after pitching just two innings against Salem.

Salter said Karney was unavailable to pitch Tuesday after throwing seven innings in a 9-2 regional win Saturday against Southgate Anderson.

"Karney's arm was sore and it takes a longer time to recover," Salter said.

Adams defeated the defending state champion Birmingham Brother Rice, 8-0, in the Royal Oak regional championship game. Rice beat CC in all four of the teams' meetings this season.

Decision Consultants still 1st after twinbill split

Decision Consultants and Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury split a Livonia Collegiate Baseball League doubleheader Sunday at Madonna University Park in Livonia.

Tim Wakefield threw a three-hitter, helping Hines Park win the first game, 4-1. Decision Consultants won the second game, 9-8, scoring an unearned run in the bottom of the seventh inning to break an 8-8 tie.

The split leaves Decision alone in first place at 5-1. Hines Park fell to 4-3.

COLLEGIATE

In the first game, Dan Pydyn suffered the loss, scattering eight hits with six strikeouts. Brian Besco and Dino Rovinelli led the Hines Park attack with solo home runs.

Decision's only run came in the first inning when Aaron Jones doubled and came home on a single by Craig Petersen.

In the second game, Derek Besco gave Hines Park an 8-5 lead with a two-run homer, but Decision scored four unanswered runs for the victory.

Eric Butler led off the seventh with a double. A Hines Park error advanced Butler to third base and he scored on Eric Marcotte's single.

Petersen had a two-run single. Scott Carden went 3-3 with two RBI. Jeff McGavin was 2-3, both doubles, with a run scored.

Joel Hillebrand was the winning pitcher, going 3⅔ innings in relief of starter Steve Williams. Hillebrand allowed two runs on six hits with four strikeouts.

On Friday, Mike Borkowski threw a one-hitter, leading Decision Consultants to a 10-0 five-inning mercy victory over Dearborn Adray.

Petersen led the seven-hit attack with a two-run homer. Josh Reeber was 2-2 with two runs scored and an RBI.

■ CAESARS 11-1, ADRAY 4-8: Eric Christianson moved his pitching record to 2-0 Sunday, helping Livonia Little Caesars gain a split in a doubleheader against Dearborn Adray Appliance.

Christianson threw a six-hitter in an 11-4 opening game win. Adray rebounded in the second game to win 8-1.

Caesars is 3-4 overall in the LCBL. Adray is 2-5.

Caesars gave Christianson a 6-0 lead with two runs in the first inning, three in the second and one in the fifth.

Kevin Foley was 2-for-4 with two RBI. Chris Hollman was 2-3 with an RBI and Christianson helped his own cause with a triple and two RBI.

In the second game, Mike Marsella suffered the loss, allowing eight hits in four innings.

Christianson was 2-3. J.R. Taylor drove in Caesars' only run with a sacrifice fly to score Foley, who had singled.

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

It was a clear cut case of the student teaching the teacher.

Will Walker, a 14-year-old Bloomfield Hills resident, applied for his first turkey permit this spring on the buddy system with his father Bill. An accomplished hunter and angler, Bill had hopes of spending some time afield showing his son the tricks of the trade.

After hooking up with their friend, Keith Huff, the trio headed into the turkey woods near Gaylord.

On the first morning of their hunt, Huff called a Jake in and Will made the most of his first opportunity and filled his permit. With a calm, steady aim Will dropped the Jake with a 40-yard shot from his Youth Model Remington 1100 20 GA.

The following day, Huff worked another Jake into range, but Bill's shot, "which was actually closer then Willie's" sailed high and the startled turkey trotted off unscathed.

Maybe next year, with a little coaxing, of course, young Will can take Bill along with him and show his father some of the tricks of the trade.

Walled Lake's Chuck Baughman wasted little time taking advantage of some early-season bass fishing success. Teamed with Jerry Doucette of Waterford, the two fished their way to the championship of the Oakland Bass Masters 1995 Pontiac Open, May 28th on Pontiac Lake.

Using deep-water presentations of Pig-N-Jigs and soft plastic worms the duo weighed-in an eight-fish creel that tipped the scale at 25.04 pounds. There were 50 boats entered in the tournament and the Baughman/Doucette team won by better than 12 pounds. Second place went to Pat Robbins, of Waterford, and Marty Frey, of Tecumseh, for eight fish weighing 13.02 pounds.

Rochester's Robert Baumann and Clarkston's Lance Lester placed third with five fish weighing 11.82 pounds. They were followed by John Pearce (Bloomfield Hills) and Mike Grant (Royal Oak) with three fish weighing 8.34 pounds; Randy McKinley (Southfield) and John Laskowski (Farmington) with four fish weighing 8.14 pounds; Don Aubry (White Lake) and Ron Dautremont (Clarkston) with four fish weighing 7.57 pounds; Ralph Monko (Clarkston) and Tony Nordman (Waterford) with four fish weighing 6.75 pounds; Leo Favaro (Redford) and Louis Favaro (Redford) with three fish weighing 6.47 pounds; and John Sparkman (Livonia) and Dave Green (Detroit) with three fish weighing 6.47 pounds.

Oakland Bass Masters will hold an open tournament on Sunday, July 25th, beginning at 6 a.m. on Lake St. Clair. For more information or to register call Roy Randolph (810) 542-5254.

Fishing clinics offered

With over 11,000 inland lakes, 36,350 miles of rivers and streams and better than 3,000 miles of Great Lakes shoreline, Michigan offers anglers a vast array of fishing opportunities. Those interested in learning more about the sport can get all the latest information at a summer-long series of DNR-sponsored "Take A Friend Fishing" clinics. The clinics include weekday and weekend sessions at several state parks across southern Michigan.

Weekday clinics started this week and run through Aug. 18. Weekday sessions begin at 6:30 p.m. each day. Weekday clinics will be held Mondays at Maybury State Park in Northville, (810) 349-8390; Tuesdays at Pontiac Lake Recreation Area in Waterford, (810) 666-1020; Wednesdays at Island Lake Recreation Area in Brighton, (810) 229-7067; Thursdays at Seven Lakes State Park in Fenton, (810) 634-7271; and Fridays at Proud Lake Recreation Area in Milford, (810) 685-2433.

The DNR is also offering eight weekend-long fishing clinics, which will include advanced instruction and hands-on experience. The weekend clinics will begin Fridays at 8 p.m. and end Sundays at noon. The closest weekend clinic to the O&E area is scheduled for July 28-30 at Seven Lakes State Park in Fenton, (810) 634-8811. For a complete list of upcoming clinics contact the DNR's Livonia office at (313) 953-0241.

Anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-2573.

Pinzi also surpassed the previous school discus record (after Gordon broke it first) and established a personal best of 126-11.

Nkechi Okwumabua, Canton, long jump: Just a freshman, Okwumabua "had a tremendous first year," coach George Przygodski said. "She became a long jumper in midseason. She has become a perfectionist in this event and has worked hard to improve her technique. Nkechi is exceptionally strong and an outstanding sprinter.

"Nkechi is also a perfectionist in the classroom. This year she had maintained a 4.0 GPA."

Okwumabua's best long jump was a school record 17-2, which qualified her for the state meet. She was the Western Lakes Activities Association and regional champion, and she also ran a state-meet qualifying 12.7 in the 100.

Andrea Salyer, Farmington, high jump: Salyer finished third in the state meet with jump of 5-5, an inch off her school record. She won the Oakland County and regional championships and will attend Central Michigan on a track scholarship.

"I was really impressed with her focus and dedication this year," coach Bruce Brown said. "When she gets into a good college program with weight conditioning, she has the potential to be a 6-foot high jumper. She has excellent form and just needs to get stronger."

Amy Buhl, Mercy, 100 hurdles: The Oakland County, Catholic League and regional champion lowered her time by .35 to 15.5; Her goal next year is the school record of 15.2, and she's also looking to break 50.0 in the 300 hurdles. Her 197½ points is second only to Eileen O'Connell's school-record 199. Buhl was named Mercy's most valuable runner. She is also an excellent high jumper.

"She worked real hard and is looking forward to bigger and better things," coach Gary Servais said. "She has a real good shot at both (hurdle records). She's talking about running cross country, and that will help her strength and speed quite a bit."

Jeannette Stojcevski, Stevenson, 300 hurdles: This excellent junior was undefeated in dual meets this season, won the WLAA and regional titles and finished seventh in the state finals. She set a school record of 46.0.

"Jeannette was our most versatile athlete," coach Paul Holmberg said. "She is capable of running everything from the 100 on up and competed in nine different events this year. She has a great desire to improve and is willing to do the work required."

Lindsay Soter, Ladywood, 100 dash: Another junior, Soter had a best time of 12.5, finishing third in the regional and making the semifinals at the state meet.

"Lindsay has been an enthusiastic and valued performer for the last three years at Ladywood," coach Bob O'Brien said. "She has worked very hard to get where she is and has become a consistent winner in individual and relay events."

Devron Kennedy, Harrison, 200 dash: The sophomore star tied her own school and WLAA record of 25.8, and she was second in the Oakland County championships.

"Devron is very talented and learning to set goals for herself," coach Mark Babcock said. "She had a slow start this year but really came on strong later in the year. She is developing a strong work ethic and should continue to excel."

Olive Ikeh, Canton, 400 dash: Ikeh's 59.4 tied the Canton record. She won the WLAA meet and anchored conference champion 800 and 1,600 relay teams. The 1,600 relay set a school record (4:04.2) was fifth in the state, and Ikeh was ninth at 400 meters.

She will compete at the University of Michigan next season.

"Olive is one of the most versatile athletes I have coached. She competed in nine different events," Przygodski said. "This year Olive moved up from primarily a 100 and 200 runner to the 400. With her strength and speed, she enjoyed great success at that distance."

Sarah Hamilton, Salem, 800 run: She had the best area time at 2:18.6. She won the WLAA and regional, and she finished fourth in the state. The leading point scorer in Salem history, Hamilton will attend the University of Michigan and run track.

"Hard work, dedication and commitment have led Sarah to steady improvement throughout her high school career," Salem coach Mark Gregor said. "Her accomplishments in four years at Salem are astounding."

Kelly Travis, Stevenson, 1,600 run: This freshman was undefeated in dual meets, captured the WLAA championship at 1,600 meters and was second at 800. Her time of 5:14.9 placed her second in the regional, and she finished 10th in the state. She also was second at 3,200 meters in the regional and was seventh in the state.

"Kelly has established herself as one of the best distance runners in the state," Holmberg said. "She is a fiery competitor who will write new records at Stevenson."

Kelly McNellance, Stevenson, 3,200 run: The other of Holmberg's two stellar freshman Kelly girls, McNellance was also undefeated in dual meets, took the WLAA title for 3,200 meters and was third at 1,600. She placed ninth in the state finals and set a personal best of 11:36.3 while finishing fourth in the regional.

"Kelly had a great first year, but her best times are still ahead of her," Holmberg said. "She works hard and has a winning attitude."

Eileen O'Connell, Mercy, at-large: O'Connell was such an outstanding middle- and long-distance runner for four years that area coaches made her an at-large selection despite a season-ending injury.

The senior didn't run the last month of the season because of a hip stress fracture, which caused her to miss the Catholic League, regional and state meets. She still had some of the fastest times in the 800 (2:18.8), 1,600 (5:12.4) and 3,200 (11:41.2).

"She's still the best runner I've ever coached," Servais said. "She had a phenomenal career, averaging 140 points a season. She has amazing range; she can run anything from 200 to 5,000 meters and run it well."

400 relay, Harrison (Devron Kennedy, Monique Anderson, Erika Greene, Krista Snow): The WLAA champions set a school record of 50.2. They were runners-up in the Oakland County championships and regional, and they placed sixth in the state finals.

"This is the finest relay we've ever had," Babcock said. "All-Area was one of their goals this year. They worked very hard and deserve recognition."

800 relay, Ladywood (Lindsay Soter, Kara McDonald, Shannon Swish, Nicole Clausen): Their best time of 1:46.0 removed a record which had stood since 1978. The CHSL and Operation Friendship champions finished second at the regional and sixth in the state. Clausen is the only senior.

"This group has worked hard together for two years and just exploded at regionals this year, running four seconds faster than they ever had to set the school record," O'Brien said. "With two juniors and a sophomore, this group has a promising future. Nicole will be sorely missed, but this team will be there next year."

1,600 relay, Salem (Marcia Parker, Courtney Sheldon, Katie Bonner, Sarah Hamilton): Three seniors and freshman Bonner were fourth-place finishers in the state, third in the regional and second in the WLAA. Their best time of 4:03.2 was second in Salem history.

"Sarah, Marcia and Courtney are three of the top four point scorers in school history, and they certainly showed Katie what being competitive at the state level is all about," Gregor said. "Katie has three more years to help lead Salem to similar heights."

Some investment myths never die

MORE THAN MONEY

SID MITTRA Ph.D

Americans of all ages find the stock market fascinating. However, not everyone adores it. Some are skeptical of the market, while others believe that if they stick it out long enough, then they will automatically win the game. And then there are those who are convinced that the only way to come out ahead is to become a trader and be constantly in and out of the market. Perhaps that's part of the reason why more than 300 million shares change hands on the New York Stock Exchange on an average day and the volume reaches the 400 million mark on a busy day.

While there are many aspects of the stock market that are fascinating, the most intriguing aspect is that there are many market myths that never seem to die. Today we will explore three such myths.

■ Myth No. 1: A flat market is to be avoided at all costs.

Historically, the stock market has always moved higher — sooner or later. This can be easily seen from historical charts that cover the period 1926 to 1994. In fact, in the long run, common stocks outperform all other types of investments, including bonds, real estate and treasury bills.

Within this 68-year-long period, however, there are declines and periods of little change. That does not mean, however, that investors couldn't have made money during these periods. In fact, with proper management, investors can make money in these periods of a dull market. Here is the proof.

On Nov. 14, 1972, the Dow Jones (DJIA) closed at 1,003. A decade later on Oct. 12, 1982, it closed at 1,004. In between, it went up and down a lot, but at the end of 10 years, the index was unchanged (see Figure 1).

That's not to say that investors wouldn't have made some money during this period. For instance, $10,000 invested in Dow Jones stocks, with reinvestment of dividends, would have grown to $16,965 — an increase of 70 percent. During the same period, a portfolio managed by ABC mutual fund (name changed of a real life fund) would have grown to $23,272.

Study: Employers here tops at cost control

Michigan's unemployment tax system continues to be one of the best in the country in terms of giving employers greater control over their unemployment tax costs.
"A newly released federal study of state unemployment insurance tax systems reports that Michigan's system is among the top five experience-rated programs in the country," said F. Robert Edwards, director of the Michigan Employment Security Commission.
"This is good news for employers because it means they can directly control their unemployment costs by controlling their layoffs," he explained. "If an employer has a history of few layoffs, then that firm is likely to have a low unemployment tax rate, conversely, more layoffs mean a higher tax rate."
The study showed that Michigan's Experience Rating Index (ERI) for rate year 1994 improved by nine percentage points, climbing to 77 percent from 68 percent in 1993. The improvement moved Michigan into fourth place, tying the state with New Hampshire and Virginia. New York had the highest rating at 84 percent followed by Delaware (83 percent) and Arizona (81 percent). North Carolina had the most socialized cost system at 31 percent.
The index is based on a one-year record. Consequently, it can fluctuate from year to year because of law changes and economic shifts. Edwards said that Michigan's 1994 rating shows that 77 percent of all jobless benefits were charged directly to employers who had layoffs.
"Our high index rating means that stable employers — those with few layoffs — are more likely to have a lower unemployment tax rate in Michigan than in most other states," Edwards said. "In fact, about 48,708 employers, which is more than 25 percent of all Michigan employers who pay unemployment taxes, have a tax rate of 1.0 percent or lower."
State unemployment taxes in Michigan range from 0.5 to 10.0 percent. They are paid on the first $8,500 of an employee's earnings. In calendar year 1994, the average tax rate in the state was 4.5 percent. Employers can obtain a copy of the federal report by calling MESC's Customer Relations office at 800-638-3994.

The market timer devotes much time and energy to watching the market, trying to determine the "best" time to buy and sell investments. The long-term investor holds on to investments even when their values move up and down.
Most people believe that the market timer is the smarter investor, when it is, in fact, the "buy-and-hold" investor who is the smarter one.
Let's take a look at Figure 2, which shows the results of these two market strategies over a 19-year period (December 1974 to December 1993). In this chart, the market timer is credited with having 20/20 vision. That is, this investor is assumed to have timed the market perfectly and invested $1,000 at the market's lowest point each year during the period December 1974 through December 1993. In contrast, the buy-and-hold individual invested $20,000 at the beginning of the period and held on to it for 19 years through the market's ups and downs. The result is phenomenal: The buy-and-hold investor comfortably won the race. And even when the $20,000 initial investment is adjusted downward, its "present value" level, the outcome remains virtually unchanged.

■ Myth No. 3: Investment in high-grade bonds and bond funds is perfectly safe.

The third myth, widely believed by the so-called conservative investors, stems from the naive assumption that high-grade bonds are exposed to only the default risk. However, the truth of the matter is that bonds and bond funds are subject to a much greater risk known as the interest-rate risk. Failure to recognize this risk can spell disaster.
When buying and selling bonds and bond funds, investors often fall right into the path of what has been called the "whipsaw," which literally means a saw that cuts both ways. As investors, we should always try to buy our investments at the lowest price possible. And yet, many bond investors end up doing just the opposite. Failure to understand the interest-rate risk forces them to buy bonds when prices are high, sell when prices are low, and lose both ways.
This practice is clearly demonstrated in Figure 3. Historically, investors have tended to buy bond mutual funds (bars above the "zero" line) when interest rates, as measured by the long-term treasury bond, were declining. These investors were, in fact, buying at the highest prices.
But the story does not end there. Investors, who sold their bond mutual fund shares (bars below "zero" line) when interest rates were rising, got the lowest return on their investments; that is, they were cut by the whipsaw.
So, it is important for bond investors to recognize that the best time to buy bond investments is when interest rates are high, and the best time to sell bonds is when the interest rates are low.

Aids make Net accessible to disabled

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

Many disabled people are content individuals who live fruitful, productive lives because they learned to cope with their differences(s).

Much of the learning to cope comes from information they gained by themselves, through their parents or schools, or by networking.

A wealth of information on disabilities can be found on the Internet at Gopher, File Transfer Protocol (FTP), and World Wide Web (WWW) sites. There also are adaptive software and hardware aids available on the Net to assist disabled people in accessing online help.

The department of special education at the University of Kansas, a site rich with information for disabled people, can be accessed at http://chef.sped.ukans.edu/speddisabilitiesstuff/speddisabilities-univs.html. That is a long Universal Resource Locator (URL) so use the bookmark feature to save the address so you don't have to retype it on your next visit.

The University of Kansas offers information on scholarships for students with disabilities, accommodations for disabled students at such universities as University of Minnesota, University of Southern California, University of Chicago, University of Virginia, University of Rochester, University of Tennessee, Florida State University, University of Arizona, Albany, University of Delaware-Elwyn, New York University, and University of Kansas.

This site also contains a link to the American With Disabilities Act of 1990, an important act for disabled persons. Also included is information about courses at various universities on Learning Disabilities, Severe Disabilities, Families & Disabilities.

And there are a long list of links to diverse resources such as IBM Support for disabled people, Coming to Terms with Disabilities, the ACT Center for Students With Disabilities, categories of disabilities, identifying disabilities, financial aid for disabled students, library services, accommodation for job applicants, national hall of fame, Distributed Computer Access for People with Disabilities, Center for Human disabilities, support services, about hardware/software, technology-related assistance, and much more.

Evan Kemp Associates, who can be accessed at http://disability.com/index.html, operates The Disability Mall which provides access to products and services produced by different companies for the disability community. Kemp's home page also has a free guide to consumer protection, the One Step Ahead newsletter, Disability Marketing Group, and Division Medical which has information about van conversions and other medical equipment.

Kemp's page also has a link to other disability resources on the Internet, accessible at http://disability.com/cool.html, which has links to University of California-Berkley School of Psychology, Med Help International, Canine Companions, Project Pursuit (careers), Disabled American Vets, Blind Children's Center, Disabled Businesspersons Association, Center for Independent Living in Berkley, Mount Visions about a disabled person climbing Mt. Everest, Blind Links, Disabled Outreach Journal, Epilepsy Web Page, the Adaptive Computing Technology Center at University of Missouri-Columbia, Do It, JAN Job Accommodation Network, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, A to Z Assistive Technology, Stuff on Hearing Impairments (Deafworld), and a link to NCSA Mosaic Access Page which contains several links on disabilities.

Gopher users can obtain medical information with this URL: gopher.vifp.monash.edu.au:70/1/Medical. The first page offers access to Forensic Medicine, SAIDIE-The Intellectual Disability Network, and MEDCAL—Medical Computer Assisted Learning Resource Archive.

Follow the SAIDIE menus and you will come to the Cornucopia of Disability Information and an archive of handicap news files available from an FTP site. The cornucopia menu contains search tools, college services and resources, national information sources on disabilities, statistics, government documents, computing, legal, publications, Network Resources (gophers, FTP sites, bulletin boards, e-text), director of Independent Living Centers, National Rehabilitation Information Center, employment, and more.

Networking is an important information source for disabled people, parents, and educators. On the Internet, support groups are plentiful in the form of listserv discussions groups. (To learn how to use Listserv, read my "how to" columns at http://oeonline.com/(tilde mark)emoryd).

Among the Listserv discussion groups are:

■ ADVOCACY which is dedicated to addressing the issues of people with disabilities in bettering their lives and protecting their rights. Topics covered will include health care reform, benefits, Personal Care Assistants, employment, accessibility, civil rights issues, transportation problems, insurance. To subscribe, send a mail message to listserv@sjuvm.stjohns.edu and in the message are type "subscribe advocacy Firstname Lastname." You will receive notification of your subscription which you are asked to confirm by sending a message back with the word "OK."

■ AWD is a moderated forum for discussion related to American With Disabilities Act, the Rehabilitation Act, Fair Housing Amendments Act, Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, and other laws relating to discrimination and disability compliance. Topics will include litigation, pleadings, settlements, verdicts, corporate policies, agency guidelines, regulations, statues, and cases. To subscribe send a mail message to majordomo@counterpoint.com and in the body of the enmail type "Subscribe awd your e-mail address."

Workers comp seminar set

The Colburn Group is hosting a workers compensation fraud seminar for local business executives at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, June 21, at the Marriott Hotel, 200 W. Big Beaver, Troy.

"One of the biggest issues facing corporate executives is how to control workers compensation fraud," said Harry S. Colburn, Colburn Group president.

To register, call (810) 643-4800.

Economy is strong here, index shows

The Detroit Area Business Activity Index compiled by Comerica Bank surged nine points in May to a level of 165, compared with an upward-revised reading of 156 in April.

May's economic gain pushed the index back to the strong levels experienced in February and March.

Year to date, for the first time this year Detroit's economy is operating at a higher rate than the prior year, said David L. Littmann, senior economist for Comerica Bank in Detroit.

For the first five months of the year, the metro area economy is up 0.8 percent after inflation. Production of steel and motor vehicles moved higher in May, along with the volume of financial activity, Littmann said.

Comerica Bank compiles the Detroit Area Business Activity Index monthly from eight measures of regional activity which are seasonally adjusted, corrected for inflation, and expressed as an index with 1982 as base year equal to 100.

The Economics Department of Comerica Bank has calculated the index monthly since 1967, depicting metropolitan Detroit's economy over seven full swings of the U.S. business cycle.

INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES EXEMPTION CERTIFICATE FOR VALASSIS COMMUNICATIONS, INC.

PLEASE TAKE NOTE that a Public Hearing will be held on Tuesday, June 27, 1995, during a regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Plymouth to consider the request of Valassis Communications, Inc., for a ten year Industrial Facilities Exemption Certificate for a new facility at 47585 Galleon, in Metro West-Beck Road Industrial Park.

Valassis Communications, Inc., engages in printing and promotion of free standing, four color advertising inserts. They will be leasing the 60,000 square foot facility and relocating their Pre-press Department from their Livonia facility to accommodate additional growth. They will transfer 160 employees to Plymouth Township and add 25-30 new jobs by the end of the year at this facility.

During the public hearing any resident of Plymouth Township or member of the Legislative Board of any affected taxing unit in the Township shall have the right to appear and be heard. Written comments addressed to the Clerk will be considered.

The request of Valassis Communications, Inc., is on file in the Clerk's Office at Plymouth Township Hall where it is available for public perusal from 8:00 a.m., to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Board of Trustees meet in the Meeting Room of the Township Hall, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, Michigan 48170, at 7:30 p.m. Phone Number 453-3840 X 224. Following the public hearing, the Board may decide on the request by Resolution.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
TUESDAY, JUNE 27, 1995
INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES EXEMPTION CERTIFICATE FOR TNT-EDM, INC.

PLEASE TAKE NOTE that a Public Hearing will be held on Tuesday, June 27, 1995, during a regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Plymouth to consider the request of TNT-EDM, Inc., for a twelve year Industrial Facilities Exemption Certificate for an expansion to their existing facility, located at 47680 E. Anchor Court, Lot 13, in Metro West Technology Park Subdivision. The expansion will add 13,000 square feet of manufacturing space to the existing structure, and will house $2,137,755.00 of new machinery. It is expected that with the addition of the new machinery that revenues will grow by approximately 50%.

The company was founded in 1979, and relocated from Livonia to its present site in 1990. TNT-EDM, Inc., is a prototype and production tool and die shop and provides products to automotive suppliers in the metro area.

During the public hearing any resident of Plymouth Township or member of the Legislative Board of any affected taxing unit in the Township shall have the right to appear and be heard. Written comments addressed to the Clerk will be considered.

The request of TNT-EDM, Inc., is on file in the Clerk's Office at Plymouth Township Hall where it is available for public perusal from 8:00 a.m., to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Board of Trustees meet in the Meeting Room of the Township Hall, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, Michigan 48170, at 7:30 p.m. Phone Number 453-3840 X 224. Following the public hearing, the Board may decide on the request by Resolution.

Garden aid

Magic Planter: The Instant Color Flat is a new flower planting flat designed to reduce planting labor and make instant color in the landscape. The flat is 11 by 22 inches, the same size as a standard flat, and contains 18 four-inch plants. Each plant cell enables the roots to grow directly into the soil, eliminating the need to remove the plants from the tray to plant them in the ground. Also, the flat's special design makes weeding less necessary. Magic Planter is available at English Gardens, 6370 Orchard Lake Road in West Bloomfield.

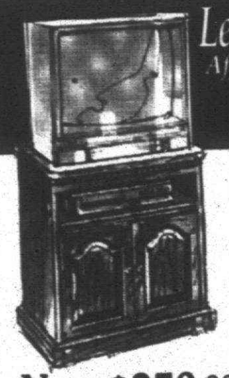

Family basket

Special offering: The Longaberger Co. of Dresden, Ohio, has created a series of baskets, honoring the Longaberger family, to be offered once a year through the end of the decade. The first basket in the series is available this month from Longaberger associates (call (800) 966-0374 for the nearest associate). It is handwoven and hardwood maple, with an oval shape measuring 15-/2 by 11 by 7-/6 inches and one swinging handle. The brand-new oval form has a patent pending and will be retired after the June selling period, making it a collector's item. Shown here with the basket are Rachel Longaberger Schmidt (left), chief operating officer; Tami Longaberger, president; and Dave Longaberger, founder and CEO.

INTERIOR MOTIVES

NAOMI STONE LEVY

Have your children moved away from home, but are sometime visitors? Do you like to entertain out-of-town family or guests? Is space at a premium? How does one accomplish a comfortable live-in room in the charming manner of a family guest room, library, office-at-home?

List your priorities BEFORE you accept this challenge. It won't just HAPPEN, and be wholly successful.

If the word "office" connotes too rigid an atmosphere or an otherwise pleasant retreat, be advised that this isn't necessarily so! The single most important ingredient is COMFORT. To achieve this requires one important investment — namely a convertible sofa-bed. Of course they are available for as little as $495, but it will be a disaster all the way around. It won't be a desirable sofa. It won't be a sound sleeper-bed. It won't have a durable fabric for constant use. Be realistic. This is the CORE of the room.

One can also buy a sofa-bed for $1,495, and it may still be a compromise, with inadequate construction. You can even spend $2,495. It will occupy the same space and ostensibly have the same functions. However, if the inner portions are of true quality the mattress of the bed CAN be wonderfully sleepable, and the mechanics will function without wrestling. The cushion construction should be as fine as any other kind of sofa, and the fabric must be delightful, sturdy, handsome and never itchy. Having this nucleus of the room workable in all of the above ways you are ready to consider other requirements.

Two guest chairs, not necessarily a pair, and facing the desk are desirable. One can be slightly larger than the other, and on a swivel to better view television. Two storage units, a locked lateral file cabinet. A desk that is decidedly residential and a desk chair that is otherwise comfortable as well as functional.

Be sure you provide an abundance of wall plugs for all manner of equipment and lamps. After your SCALED layout of the entire room, three or four "hi-hats" over the desk will round out GOOD lighting.

Book shelving is a significant component that mustn't be overlooked. Detailing of these will enhance the overall room — not just ordinary shelving — plan something unusual. A top shelf running the entire circumference of the room, above windows and doorways, and above the sofa-bed is an idea you might like. It would be a colossal place to intersperse sculpture with books, perhaps a handsome plate or an eagle, and many of your other treasured, brightly colored accessories. Your personality is beginning to take over.

One of my favorite window treatments is louvered shutters, so appropriate to this type of room. They can be vertical or horizontal in detail. They can be wood stained, or white. They, too, will add their own personality. They provide privacy, a cherished component.

With carefully synchronized planning way in advance you will have turned out your own spectacular LIBRARY, OFFICE and GUEST ROOM — EXTRAORDINAIRE!

Naomi Stone Levy, a Franklin resident, is an interior designer and a former secretary of the American Society of Interior Designers. You can leave her a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a Touch-Tone phone, then her mailbox number, 1897. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Antiques fair features toys

Toys, toys, toys for children of all ages will be the featured attraction at the June edition of the Marshall Antiques Market, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, June 17, at the Calhoun County Fairgrounds in Marshall.

For more information, call the Marshall Antiques Market at (616) 789-0990 or (800) 877-5163.

For the third time, well-known classic car buffs Gene Gooley and Bud Hicks will host a swap meet and car show on the fairgrounds. This event will feature show cars, a car corral with vehicles for sale and booths for auto-related items for swap and sale.

On the other end of the "toy" spectrum, internationally known antique toy and advertising dealers Jerry and Paul Ann Turner from Hot Springs, Ark., will be making their annual visit to the Marshall Antiques Market. They will be buying, selling and appraising all toys for show visitors. Jerry's specialties include Disney, cast iron, tin windups and games.

Admission for the market and car show/swap meet is $3 per person. The fairgrounds are well marked and easily accessible from I-94 and I-69. Parking is free and beverages are available on the grounds.

GARDEN SPOT

Spring's cool weather results in bright blooms

MARTY FIGLEY

Haven't the colors of the flowering trees, shrubs and early flowers made you smile this spring? They have seemed to shine even more brilliantly than in the past. I believe it is because this spring has been a little cooler, therefore the blooms haven't dropped as soon as they would have with warmer weather.

Our little rock garden has been such a delight. Every day it seems to surprise and offer more flowers. Early in the year golden primroses, Primulas, bloomed up through the snow bright and shining like the sun. They are still blooming, along with P. veris, polyantha, one in pink and the other a deep orangy red. Nearby is a "patch" of creamy primroses that are from our daughter's wedding in 1981.

At the same time, a row of multicolored pansies, Violacaes, that I planted last October is edging the rock garden with multiple colored blooms — white, blue, red, purple, yellow and orange — and they are still going strong. They are the "Universal Plus" series from Goldsmith Seeds. The blooms are two inches or more in diameter, and some of them have the "blotched face" of a pansy, while others don't. They haven't gotten leggy and are great!

I didn't add any extra mulch when winter arrived, just let them "do their thing." And they did — through the snow! They will be available at your favorite nursery as plants for planting in September and October — just remember "Universal Plus" pansies, and I'm

Colorful collection

Yellow and blue crocuses as well as scilla also bloomed along with these plants — what a sight. And I mustn't forget the little blue hepatica with its blue blossoms, which was covered with them this spring.

White trillium, T. grandiflorum, and maroon ones also grow in this little garden. We brought the white ones from a friend's place up north many years ago (with permission) and the maroon ones from my father-in-law's property in Ohio. I believe the maroon ones are T. erectum, wakerobin, which don't open fully but remain in little buds. They have multiplied over the years.

Another bright yellow flower is Basket-of-Gold, Aurinia saxatilis, which I cut back after they have bloomed to extend the season.

The birdbath is surrounded with tall pink/white tulips, Tulipa "Judith Leyster," and the crowning glory is the white-blooming dogwood tree, given to us by a friend. There are many varieties of Cornus with white blooms, others with coral or yellow blooms. Shrubs in this family have yellow or red stems — the family is quite large.

In the corner of the garden, near the deck, European ginger, Asarum europaeum, softens the area with its heart-shaped leaves.

There are other wildflowers in the garden, and we love them all. Wooly thyme, Thymus, fills in the gaps and blooms in pink as the season progresses.

In early spring I tossed some slow-release fertilizer (Kricket Krap) on the gardens and let them go. Just having that one special area to enjoy for so many weeks brings much pleasure and makes the work in the other gardens go quickly.

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

My 8-year-old dishwasher doesn't clean the dishes like it used to. A service technician has checked it out and says everything is working fine. Do I need to invest in a new dishwasher?

Put on the brakes at your local grocery store and spend just a few dollars for a pint jar of an orange-powdered breakfast drink called Tang. That's all you need to use to bring back the washability of your dishwasher. The following is what happens in 95 percent of American homes and what creates this common complaint.

We as consumers fail to realize that we cannot use a dishwasher effectively unless the water temperature inside is 140 degrees. Cold or lukewarm water just won't do the job. Turn on the hot water faucet at the kitchen sink until you receive maximum hot water temperature coming out of the spout. Then, turn on your dishwasher. If you do this faithfully every time you use your dishwasher you will notice a considerable difference in washability. The water that fills your dishwasher before it begins the wash cycle must be hot. If you don't turn on the faucet and get rid of the cold water in the pipe from the hot water tank to the kitchen spout, then you will begin filling the dishwasher with cold water. As a result, you won't dissolve the detergent, your dishes won't be cleaned, you'll have spots all over the glasses and you'll have soap buildup inside the complete unit. Soap buildup is what is causing your problem.

This buildup is coating the impellers in your motor assembly and won't allow these internal components to cut through the water properly, giving the dishwasher a strong pressure of water through the spray arms. The cure to the problem is on the grocery shelf and is called Tang powdered breakfast drink. Here's how you do it.

Turn on the hot water to maximum temperature. Turn on the empty dishwasher and let it fill and wash for four minutes. Shut it off and open the door. Empty the complete jar of Tang into the water in the bottom of the dishwasher. Shut the door and let it go through its complete cycle undisturbed. This cure has been verified by many consumers who listen to my talk show. They have asked how Tang does it so well. The acidic content and the abrasive action created by the powder seem to be just the proper mix to do the job. The astronauts drank it and I do as well.

They have asked how Tang does it so well. The acidic content and the abrasive action created by the powder seem to be just the proper mix to do the job.

My garbage disposal has an occasional odor. How do I clean it out?

If you could see what is inside your disposal, I can assure you that you wouldn't ever prepare another food item around your kitchen counter. We as consumers just stick the garbage in there, turn on the cold water, and away it goes, so we think. What about all the built-up grease, etc., that coats the walls inside? I don't want to be too graphic on the subject except to say that it needs a cleaning out every few days. The solution is in your kitchen refrigerator. It's called ice cubes.

Fill the disposal with ice cubes and let them stand in there for an hour or so. Turn it on without water for 30 seconds. Boil a kettle of water and rinse out the disposal. This little cure all should be performed twice a week and especially if you are going away for any length of time.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor" available at area bookstores.

LET'S REMODEL

Accent lighting adds to updating kitchen

This column is provided by the Michigan Remodeling Association.

Q: We are in the process of updating our kitchen and would like to use some accent lighting. Can you help?

A: The kitchen can be a very challenging room for lighting. This room requires a lot of task lighting over countertops and other work surfaces. You should have plenty of lights under the cabinets to light your work. Also, consider what type of surfaces will be installed. A white or light-colored surface is certainly the easiest to light. But if you have chosen a darker countertop, there will more reflection which will alter how you light that surface. Linear low-voltage halogen lights and miniature can lights work very well in this space.

Overhead lighting and overall illumination are also important in the kitchen. Linear lighting within the soffits and above the cabinets provides excellent accent along with some overhead light. Center fixtures work better with accepts from recessed cans. You can also get quite creative with your general lighting, using dimmer controls. This comes in very handy when entertaining and works well for wall washing — illumination that covers the entire room and enlarges the look of it.

Don't forget the accent lighting in your kitchen. Object lighting, cove and in-cabinet lighting, can add just as much to a room as the object itself. Using lighting so subtly will draw attention to these aspects without being overpowering.

Energy efficiency is another important point for any room. In terms of efficiency, incandescent light is least efficient, followed by halogens and then fluorescent lights, Consider all your options. You may be surprised at the new styles of some of these light sources. Still, the most efficient way to conserve energy and save on your electric bill is to turn lights off when leaving the room.

Q: We will be converting our three-season porch into a sunroom and would like some ideas?

A: Sunrooms are being used to create and enhance a wide range of attractive living spaces including family rooms, exercise areas, pool and spa rooms, dining rooms and even home offices. Of course, they can also be used as traditional greenhouses for plants. Versatility in style, design and modular engineering make sunrooms a very desirable way to expand your home without threatening its architectural integrity. Today's technology, in building materials and glass provide maximum insulation while minimizing drafts, condensation and heat gain.

NARI
MICHIGAN REMODELING ASSOCIATION

■ Don't forget the accent lighting in your kitchen. Object lighting, cove and in-cabinet lighting, can add just as much to a room as the object itself.

Developments such as Solar Control glass and Heat Mirror make it possible to enjoy your room year round. With the new glass technology the sun's infrared heat is reflected away from the glass, while visible light comes through with reduced glare, the result is not unlike sitting under a shade tree on a hot sunny day. If the weather is cold outside, radiant heat from within the room is 'mirrored' back inside, significantly reducing condensation, cold drafts and utility bills. Solariums range from small porch enclosures to greenhouses and fully customized room additions. Regardless of how you use it, a sunroom can add hours of pleasure to your life. Investigate, plan and then choose a professional remodeler and the sunroom options right for your house and lifestyle.

'Silhouettes' not just paper doll cutouts

NANCY AND FRANK BOOS

Dear Nancy and Frank:
I found these framed things in my attic which look like paper doll cutouts. Can you explain?
Alice,
Birmingham

Dear Alice:

What you have is a "silhouette," which is a portrait or image done in profile in one hue, normally black. They were usually done by following a shadow cast by candlelight on a sheet of paper. A great silhouette artist did truly amazing detail work, down to the hairline and eyelashes of his subjects. The technique was derisively named by the French nobility after Etienne de Silhouette (finance minister 1709-67), who was so unpopular that his detractors said the outline portraits were symbolic of his empty head. At least he is remembered! If your silhouette is unsigned, it would have a retail value of approximately $800. If it is signed by a known artist, it could have a value up to $3,500.

Nancy and Frank Boos are with the Frank H. Boos Gallery, an appraisal firm and auction house at 420 Enterprise Court in Bloomfield Hills that has been in the auction business for more than 30 years. Do you have an item you would like to know about? Send in a good photo of it, along with its description (including size, working parts, etc.) and any known provenance (history) to Treasure Search, The Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham 48009. Include your name, community and phone number.

'Alice Nizzy Nazzy' is terrific

BY SARAH NORDGREN
AP NEWSFEATURES

"Alice Nizzy Nazzy" (Putnam, $15.95) is a terrific title for a terrific little children's book. Tony Johnston is the author and Tomie dePaola the illustrator, a great combo for words that work and pictures that please.

Alice Nizzy Nazzy lives in Santa Fe, N.M., and is so old and so mean, people say she's a witch. This evil creature, based on the Russian Baba Yaga, lives in an adobe hut that stands on skinny road runner feet inside a fence of prickly pear.

When Manuela loses her sheep, her path leads straight up to the witch's house (oh my). The little girl is put in a pot to boil but is saved temporarily when she recalls a place where the witch can find the rare flower that will keep her from aging.

But (oh my) the witch had her fingers crossed when she promised Manuela to let her go and this time it is because Manuela tastes sour that she is released from the stew pot.

I confess to never having enjoyed, or been able to figure out if any children really enjoyed, the perennially popular Amelia Bedelia. Then my twins turned 6 and Amelia, at least to them, began to hold great appeal.

Herman Parish, the nephew of Amelia Bedelia's creator, Peggy Parish, has brought the wacky housekeeper with a penchant for unintentional puns back in "Good Driving, Amelia Bedelia" (Greenwillow Books, $15).

INVITING IDEAS

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

■ Make discovering exotic fruits and vegetables a summertime event. Plan a scavenger hunt for "Some Exotic Evening" at home with friends and family.

Considered exotic in the 1960s — Kiwi fruit, with its odd fuzzy-brown skin and bright green flesh, hit the food trend circuit with a bang! Today, the ubiquitous kiwi sits among kiwanos, feijoas, tomatillos, plantains, ugli fruit, pitaya, persimmons, sapote, cherimoyas, passion fruit and carambolas (star fruit).

What do these strange fruits and vegetables taste like? And what should you do with them? Chefs and gourmet cooks enjoy the challenge, but most people pass them by in the grocery store, intimidated by their appearance and questionable pronunciations.

Make discovering these exotic fruits and vegetables a summertime event. Plan a scavenger hunt for "Some Exotic Evening" at home with friends and family.

Mail each person or couple, a picture of a specific exotic fruit or vegetable. Your local library, produce market, and bigger grocery stores are great sources. Or just write the name of the fruit or vegetable on a card.

Tell each person to bring the fruit or vegetable to the party, along with some information about it. Prepare some unusual dishes using exotic fruits and vegetables for your guests. Be sure to label them so guests know what they are eating.

Collect all the designated fruits and vegetables and prepare table-side salads. Top the fruit salad with custard style low-fat lemon yogurt and serve as a dessert.

Encourage guests to share information about their "found" fruits and vegetables. Much of the evening's conversation will be filled with historical background, descriptions, and suggestions for using these newly discovered unusual foods.

Here's a brief introduction to some of these intriguing edibles.

■ Plantains — (Adam's Fig) — look like large green bananas and can be used in any stage (ripe or not), green, yellow or black, but are never eaten raw. When cooked, plantains taste like winter squash, and are often used like a potato. Ripe plantains are delicious peeled and halved lengthwise, then pan-fried until golden brown in very hot vegetable oil and drained well before serving. Green plantains, peeled, cut into thin wheels, then deep fried, make tasty chips. Plantains are commonly used in Latin American and Caribbean cuisine.

■ Passion Fruit — also called Granadilla — is a Brazilian native, but is currently grown in New Zealand, California, Hawaii and Australia. This egg-shaped fruit with a brittle outer skin, which is wrinkled when ripe, is usually purple. Other varieties include those that are orange or yellow. The fruit is aromatic and used for flavoring. The seeds are edible, but often removed when used as a puree in mousse, drinks or sorbets.

■ Feijoas — (Pineapple Guava) indigenous to South America, is widely grown in New Zealand, California, and other warm temperate zones. This oval shaped, thin green skinned fruit has a tangy pineapple flavor with a hint of spearmint. Some say it tastes like a combination of pineapple, pear and banana. Its texture is similar to a juicy pear, and is delicious served as a fresh fruit, in salads, sorbets, and preserves.

■ Ugli Fruit — Is a cross between a grapefruit, orange and tangerine. Citrus in appearance with a rather bumpy thick skin, Ugli Fruit is usually the size of a grapefruit, and grown in Jamaica. It's usually eaten like an orange, is sweeter than grapefruit, and wonderful in sorbets, fruit salads, and made into marmalade.

GRILLED SHRIMP WITH PASSION FRUIT SAUCE

2 passion fruits, halved, discard skin
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
1 stick butter, melted

Prepare an outside grill — spray grill with no-stick cooking spray. Light your fire.

Combine passion fruit, sugar and water in a saucepan. Over medium heat, bring the mixture to a boil, then reduce heat and continue to simmer until the passion fruit pulp is soft (approximately 12-15 minutes).

Press the mixture through a sieve and discard the remaining pulp. Add the melted butter and mix thoroughly.

Brush the shrimp generously with the passion fruit sauce and grill shrimp — 3 to 4 minutes on each side. Do not over cook, basting as necessary. Serve the shrimp on a bed of herbed rice. Serves 8-10.

NATURE

Fleabane now accents grasses of meadows

TIM NOWICKI

Plants need three basic ingredients in order to grow — water, carbon dioxide and sunlight. These three components in the presence of chlorophyll, the pigment that makes leaves look green, enable plants to make their own food — photosynthesis. If any of these parts are lacking, plants do not grow very well.

In spring water becomes available to plants, sunlight is present for longer periods of time and carbon dioxide is adequately abundant because of our industrial society. But spring is the only time when sufficient sunlight reaches the forest floor enabling most wildflowers to grow. Now that summer is almost upon us and trees have leafed out completely, forest wildflowers have finished blooming.

■ The name fleabane refers to the reputed quality of the plant to deter insects. Pioneers often stuffed it into their mattresses to keep fleas away.

Meadow wildflowers now begin to make the scene. Pussytoes have already gone to seed, but the delicate daisy fleabane is now accenting the green grasses of the meadows. Few wildflowers compete with the early blooming fleabane. Later in summer other wildflowers will dilute the generally white flowers of daisy fleabane.

Though the flowerheads are only about an inch across, far smaller than cultivated daisies, they grow in small clusters with numerous petals. As many as 70 thin delicate rays may radiate outward from the yellow core. Sometimes the white petals are tinged with pink or blue.

An old superstition states that if a pregnant woman wants to know the sex of her child she should plant the seed of a fleabane. If the petals from the plant are pinkish, she will have a girl, if they are bluish, she will have a boy.

The name fleabane refers to the reputed quality of the plant to deter insects. Pioneers often stuffed it into their mattresses to keep fleas away.

Many believe the plant has no insect detering qualities, however, recent observations of starling nests suggest otherwise. Starling nests with fleabane incorporated in its material had fewer parasites than those starling nests without fleabane. Do the starlings know they are incorporating a beneficial plant? If they do, how do they identify it before it flowers?

You don't have to answer these questions to enjoy the delicate daisy fleabane.

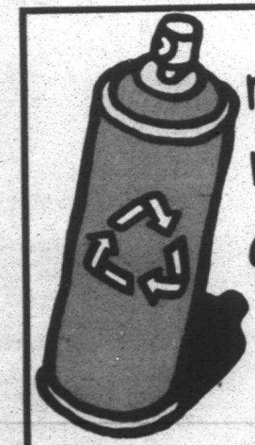

Tim Nowichi lives in Livonia and works as a naturalist with Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County. To reach him by voice mail, call 953-2047, and then his extension 1874.

COVER STORY

Take a walk on the CREATIVE SIDE

BY LINDA ANN CROMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

While Craig and Sue Kelly were on vacation playing golf at various courses around Michigan they stored up ideas for landscaping their home, one of the newest contemporaries in Livonia. Meanwhile on the other side of town, Barb and Scott MacDonald were investing hundreds of hours to restore the original formal and informal gardens surrounding their home, the first built in Rosedale Gardens in the 1920s.

Hundreds of the two families' design ideas, both time-honored and contemporary, are available for the price of a ticket to the sixth annual garden walk sponsored by Friends for the Development of Greenmead 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, June 24. A total of seven Livonia homes in addition to gardens found on the grounds of Greenmead, Livonia's 150-year-old historical village at Newburgh south of Eight Mile, are sure to inspire even those without a green thumb.

Cost per ticket is $7 in advance, or $8 on the day of the walk. All proceeds go toward the restoration and preservation of the Alexander Blue House. Advance tickets are available at all Livonia libraries, the community resources department at Livonia City Hall, and Greenmead Historical Village. For information, call (313) 421-2000, Ext. 351.

"We have a little bit of everything this year from the well-manicured beds, fountains and statues in a park-like setting to a bungalow with a picket fence surrounded by huge blue spruce. If anything the theme seems to be perennials. Gardeners like them because they're low maintenance," said Janet Bennett, president of the non-profit organization.

Planning

Before Sue and Craig Kelly began landscaping the grounds of their home they researched golf courses in upper and lower Michigan for ideas and designs that appealed to them.

"I first drew up a plan. The stone walls at a golf course up north gave me the basic concept," said Kelly, who bought 20 tons of rock excavated during the building of the subdivision. Several massive boulders accent the front yard.

The Kellys scoured nurseries far and wide in search of the perfect plantings. They did all of the landscaping, design and installation themselves. Eye appeal was the reason for choosing the contrasting colors found in the bloodgood (red) maple, green Norway spruce and a blue spruce placed in a corner by the front door. The varying heights, shapes and colors provide an interesting scene which keeps the eye moving; as with any fine sculpture, around the three-dimensional space. Gray Ohio ledge-rock and boulders, another idea parlayed from a golf course, were used to construct terraced planting beds in the front yard. In springtime, bulbs provide a show of color. In summer, blue salvia, pink begonias and silver dusty miller, interspersed with cypress mulch and river rock as ground cover, create a delicate floral painting.

Craig Kelly's creation of a New York Bluestone patio was culled from a similar one at Forest Lake Country Club. He worked a lot of late nights laying the stone himself. Directly behind this restful view lies Whispering Willows Golf Course. Oases or islands of plantings in the back yard to break up the wide expanse of lawn produces plenty of interest. Future plans call for the addition of a pond.

"We did it for ourselves. We spend a lot of time outside to unwind from a hectic day of children and work. It's something we always wanted to do but previous to this we'd owned a condo," Sue Kelly said.

Timeless traditions

Barb and Scott MacDonald are restoring the formal and informal gardens designed by the master gardener who built the home in Livonia's Rosedale Gardens in the 1920s. The MacDonalds are only the third family to own the home. The second owner was also a master gardener. Front courtyards separated by a white wood fence showcase beds of heirloom flowers including a dwarf lilac and hollyhocks.

"They're old-fashioned Victorian gardens with 40 different and unusual species of perennials like daylily and iris. We've restored a lot of the gardens and tried to plant a lot of the same flowers," Barb MacDonald said.

Through the back garden gate visitors find an enchanting forest-like yard featuring a 50-year-old playhouse that appears as if torn from the pages of a storybook. A circular herb garden set in the center of this haven is sectioned into four distinct areas by brick. The home's original fish pond reminds guests of the prosperous era of the '20s just before the Great Depression. Stocked with goldfish in summer, the cement-bottom pond provides a perfect escape to day-dream. Goldfish overwinter in a greenhouse attached to the home. A trellised patio, lotus pond, wildflowers, shrubs and trees make this serene back yard complete.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Cropping can dramatically improve photos

MONTE NAGLER

■ I believe in cropping through the camera to obtain the best possible negative or slide. Then use cropping if necessary to enhance your photograph.

Years ago, I remember seeing a mattress tag that spelled out in no uncertain terms "Do Not Remove Under Penalty of Law." How ridiculous, I thought, yet I bet there are people who wouldn't think of snipping off that sacred tag.

In numerous photography judgings and critiques over the years, I've noticed a similar reverence. That is, people hesitate altering the size of their finished prints and slides. They feel either they can't cut down that 8-by-10 enlargement or they're not aware of the improvements that can be made by slight cropping.

Yes, cropping your photograph when needed can dramatically improve the impact and strength of your final image.

I've seen many a gorgeous, well-composed and well-executed print that suffers, for example, only from that distracting bright patch of sky in the upper corner. Cropping just ½-inch or so off the top of the shot eliminating the "hot spot" will impressively improve your shot.

How about that special sunset picture of yours that has just too much sky and too much foreground? Cropping some off top and bottom will produce a much more striking "panorama" sunset.

Or your favorite zoo shot of the giraffe stretching his neck upward to reach the berries on the branch. Wouldn't a vertical crop enhance this picture? You bet!

A cropped print may preclude you from using precut mats available in many stores. But for just a couple of dollars more, any frame shop can custom-tailor mats to your cropped print.

Slides can be cropped, too. A slide presentation can be made much more interesting by cropping some of the images providing a variety of size slides. Your local photo dealer stocks Gepe brand slide mounts, easy to assemble and available in many precropped shapes.

In discussing cropping, I am not suggesting photographing the whole scene and then deciding later what parts to crop out. I believe in cropping through the camera to obtain the best possible negative or slide. Then use cropping if necessary to enhance your photograph.

New camera devices bring adults 3-D

By RICK SAMMON
AP NEWSFEATURES

When I was a child, one of my favorite toys was a 3-D View-Master. Holding the viewer up to my eyes, I was magically transported, via dramatic three-dimensional images, to the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone National Park and other spectacular locations around the country.

View-Masters are still popular with kids of all ages. But today, rather than the brown or black binocular-style model of yesteryear, children can choose from a variety of fanciful models, including ones that look like Power Ranger and Batman masks.

For grown-up children (like me) there are 3-D cameras that capture the virtual reality of scenes and subjects. There are also gadgets that let you use standard cameras to get 3-D effects. Here's a look at just a few:

Franka Beam Splitter — Attach this device to a 50 mm or 55 mm lens, put the setup on a 35 mm SLR, and you are ready to take side-by-side 3-D prints.

Stereo Realist — This 35 mm camera became popular in the 1960s, and is still popular today among dedicated 3-D photographers. It is one of the few quality 3-D cameras that offers full manual exposure and focus control.

Franka Beam Splitter and Stereo Realist take two photographs simultaneously. Once you have your stereo images, you can either view them with a hand-held stereo viewer, project them with a 3-D projector (or two standard projectors) or have an anaglyph made. (An anaglyph is a true-to-life 3-D print that requires 3-D glasses for viewing.) Reel 3-D Enterprises of Culver City, Calif., has information on viewing equipment and anaglyphs.

3-D Magic — You don't have to spend several hundred dollars to get 3-D pictures. A one-use camera called 3-D Magic by Image Technology of Norcross, Ga., sells for under $15. The company's 3-D Wizard, a pocket-size point-and-shoot model with flash, sells for under $100.

More information on viewing equipment, anaglyphs and the latest in 3-D photography trends and techniques can be found in Stereo World, the official bimonthly magazine of National Stereoscopic Association.

BOOK BREAK

Local authors give summer reading tips

VICTORIA DIAZ

Packing or planning for that vacation trip soon? Don't forget to include a good book to add to your well-deserved fun. Here, area writers (who should know good writing) make some suggestions as to what you should take along:

■ Kathe Koja, Berkley ("Strange Angels") This superlative author of tales of terror recommends "Street," by Jack Cady, a contemporary thriller which easily transcends the genre. In it, a serial killer snuffs out prostitutes, and some homeless individuals take it upon themselves to find the monster responsible for the murders. "It's a powerful story about the decline of morality," says Koja, who also recommends Cady's 1994 short story collection, "Sons of Noah," and "anything by Cormac McCarthy."

■ Ingrid Tomey, West Bloomfield ("Savage Carrot") Young Adult novelist Tomey sees E. Annie Proulx's "The Shipping News" as one of the best novels she's read recently. First published in 1993, the highly acclaimed tale tells the story of a 36-year-old newspaperman who travels to Newfoundland to start a new life. The tragicomic romance won the 1994 Pulitzer Prize for Fiction. "Her use of the language reminds me of James Joyce, and her scenes just blaze," says Tomey. "I'm also fascinated by how she writes so convincingly in a man's voice. She seems to really get inside a man's soul and mind." Another Tomey favorite: writer Tobias Wolff's memoirs, "This Boy's Life."

■ Linda Bartell, Troy ("Tender Rogue") Tami Hoag's romantic suspense novel, "Still Waters," would make for great summer reading, says historical romance writer Bartell. The cast of characters includes an ex-football player who retires to become a small-town sheriff, and a woman whose reputation has been wrongly besmirched. Add a mysterious murder, and an Amish backdrop. "I'd never read any of Tami Hoag's books before this one," says Bartell. "But I intend to read them now." Other titles by Hoag include "Cry Wolf" and "Dark Paradise."

■ Doug Allyn, Montrose ("Icewater Mansions") The Edgar Award-winning mystery author suggests Elmore Leonard's latest crackling thriller, "Riding the Rap." "I thought 'Pronto' was good," says Allyn. "This is better. Leonard just smokes here. He's in top form." If you want more of Leonard, Allyn suggests "Get Shorty," his personal favorite. A story about a loan shark who makes it big as a Hollywood screenwriter, Allyn calls it "a great story." Be ready for a knock-out ending, he advises.

■ 'Her use of the language reminds me of James Joyce, and her scenes just blaze. I'm also fascinated by how she writes so convincingly in a man's voice.'

Ingrid Tomey
West Bloomfield

■ Tom Kakonis, Grand Rapids ("Shadow Counter") crime novelist Kakonis suggests Lee Goldberg's debut novel, "My Gun Has Bullets," especially if you're looking for a murder mystery with a funny bone. The tale, a send-up of a television show set in La-La Land makes him laugh just thinking about it, says Kakonis. Goldberg is a veteran television writer.

■ Barbara Burgess, Lapeer ("The Fred Field") Burgess, a Young Adult novelist, was more than eager to recommend Carol Shields rather off-beat novel, "The Stone Diaries," first published in 1986 and now in paperback. "It's about a woman who witnesses her own birth, childhood, marriage, motherhood, work, and death," says Burgess, who calls it "extremely powerful."

■ Thomas Lynch, Milford ("Grimalkin and Other Poems") This gifted Michigan poet likes Keith Taylor's short story collection, "Life Science." Taylor, an Ann Arbor writer, sets many of these stories in Michigan. If you haven't already done so, here's your chance to get acquainted with yet another area writer. Speaking of Michigan writers, Lynch also highly recommends Jim Harrison's "Julip."

Victoria Diaz of Livonia, a longtime member of Detroit Women Writers, has a lifelong interest in reading "everything from great novels to cereal boxes." You can leave a message for her on a Touch-Tone phone by dialing 953-2047, then her mailbox number 1854.

West Bloomfield artist signs books

Satellite TV services offer program packages

BARRY JENSEN

Last week we talked about RCA's new 18-inch television antenna. Actually, it's more than a dish. The system involves digital signals received from a satellite, not over the air or from a cable. You buy not only the dish but a black box to convert what you receive from a satellite into programming.

No matter how nifty a television system is, it isn't worth a thing without some programming to watch. A computer needs software; a TV set needs programming.

If you buy the system, you can also buy, through RCA, 120 channels for $61 a month, said Bill Scarfone of Scott Shruptrine, which sells the hardware necessary to set up a digital satellite system (the real name of the 18-inch antenna and associated hardware).

There are two other major distributors of programming for a digital satellite system: DirecTv or United States Satellite Broadcasting.

DirecTv, a unit of GM Hughes Electronics, offers its basic package of 30 channels, including ESPN and CNN, for $22.

USSB, which is a subsidiary of Hubbard Broadcasting, sells its basic package for $8. You can get many premium channels in addition to the basic package for $35 a month. These fees do not include pay-per-view channels, which are offered by both distributors.

The RCA little dish sounds good, especially in suburbs where a six-foot-wide dish may be ugly or illegal or both. But DirecTv and USSB won't sell you network programming if you could get it from a cable system or over the air. That leaves out most of us.

So the choice is yours: broadcast, cable or the newest entry in the lists: the digital satellite system. The existence of the new mini-antenna gives the consumer just another choice in the world of electronic information exchange.

Barry Jensen welcomes your comments and suggestions for topics for future columns. His telephone number is 313-953-2125. This number has voice mail attached, so you can call at any time.

To keep yards healthy you need the right tools

While chemical-free, organic gardening may take a little extra time and effort, many home gardeners have discovered that the longterm benefits of safety and a healthier environment are worth the added investment. Among the companies working to meet the demand for products designed to keep the yard healthy and lush without chemicals or pollutants is Ryobi. From the experts at Ryobi come the following tips for a safe and beautiful front yard.

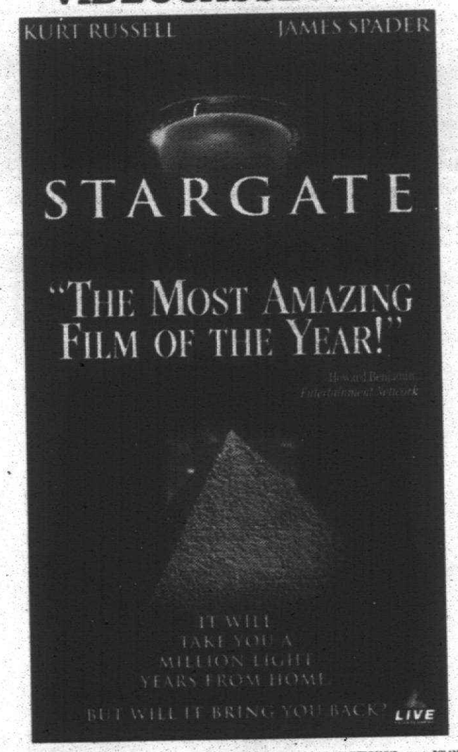

The first step is to make sure you have the raw material to work with. Your lawn may need a little help maintaining the right pH level, between 6.3 and 7.0. Conditioning the soil with limestone will help correct any imbalance.

Water your lawn once a week to a depth of two to three inches to supplement the regular rainfall. This will encourage deeper root growth that will, in turn, help your lawn withstand a drought or other severe weather conditions. Watering in the morning is best to minimize runoff and evaporation.

Once your lawn is up and growing, the next step is to get out the mower. Look for a sturdy, durable and reliable mower. Many do-it-yourself homeowners are turning to a new kind of mulching mower called the Mulchinator. Because it is powered by a 24-volt battery taht recharges overnight, it starts at the touch of a button, and runs in virtual silence. The battery will work up to 1-½ hours on a single charge, which is perfect for a lawn of up to half an acre. It's a good idea to mow when the grass is completely dry, and try not to cut off more than one-third of the blade. When you're done, make sure that the clippings aren't sticking together in clumps, which would mean the grass was too wet. If the tips of the grass blades turn white, that would signal that it's time to sharpen your mower blade.

The next step is to maintain your yard, and to do so means arming yourself with the right tools. Adding a trimmer to your stock of outdoor power equipment is a great start. Your trusty mower is a handy ally, but a mower can only do so much. A trimmer will take care of those touches that most notably improve the appearance of a yard. The multiuse TrimmerPlus 970r from Ryobi runs on a powerful, advanced four-cycle engine that meets all proposed environmental regulations through 1999. This new engine doesn't require the mixing of oil and gas, which cuts out the smoky, oily exhaust that is dangerous for the environment. The TrimmerPlus is actually a system of tools that can be attached to the TrimmerPlus base. This means you can easily turn your trimmer into an edger, cultivator, blower, vacuum or tree pruner.

STUCK ON STAMPS

New stamp issue honors lighthouses

JOHN FOXWORTH

A booklet pane of five new stamps depicting Great Lakes lighthouses will be issued Saturday, June 17, from the deck of the USCGC (Coast Guard Cutter) Mackinaw in Cheboygan. The first day of issue will be the first for Northern Michigan since 1958 when the then new Mackinac Bridge appeared on a 3-cent stamp.

The Postal Service stamp booklet honors one lighthouse on each of the five Great Lakes — Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie and Ontario. About 360 automated Great Lakes lighthouses still remain but they require no light keepers.

The five lighthouses honored are: Split Rock in Duluth, Minn., Spectacle Reef northeast of Cheboygan, Mich., St. Joseph, St. Joseph, Mich., Marblehead, Sandusky, Ohio, and Thirty Mile Point, northeast of the Niagra River in Ontario.

A dedicated group of local area collectors will attend the first day of issue ceremonies and hand cancel covers in Cheboygan. A very attractive set of six covers including first day of issue cancels on special cachet envelopes is available from the Motor City Stamp and Cover Club. One cover features all five stamps and a cachet showing a lighthouse is $3. Each of the five lighthouses is also featured on a separate cachet cover. All five covers are $6. Both sets may be obtained for $9. Include a self-addressed, stamped, large return envelope and order from MCSCC, 1353 Catalpa, Rochester, Mich. 48307.

Special delivery

The 100th anniversary of mail service to ships plying the Great Lakes via the Detroit River will be celebrated this month. June 17 is the anniversary when the Detroit River Marine Station was established; the first mail was actually delivered June 19.

A special cachet cover honoring the 100th anniversary of "Mail by the Pail," as the service is called, has been prepared. The cachet cover features the mail boat, the "J.W. Westcott II," and a special pictorial cancel. These covers represent a piece of Detroit's history. The Motor City Stamp and Cover Club also offers these covers for $1, plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope. If you want a cover from both dates, include $2. Send to the same address above.

Other new U.S. stamps issued recently and first day of issue cities are: Pink Rose, 32-cent self-adhesive, and Ferry Boat, 32-cent coil, both June 2, McLean, Va. 22101-9991; and Cog Railway Car, 20-cent coil, June 9, Dallas, Texas, 75260-9991; Also, a Blue Jay, 20-cent booklet, June 15, Kansas City, Mo., 64101-9991; and the 150th anniversary Texas statehood, 32-cent commemorative, Austin, Texas, 78710-9991.

Computers come to the aid of gardeners

NEW YORK (AP) — Here's the latest dirt for gardening enthusiasts.

There's a growing line of personal computer software that promises to help everyone from the most experienced hobbyist to the novice who's all thumbs, none of which happen to be green.

They can tell you when to start planting grass seed (early spring for many regions.); which perennials can withstand harsh winters (the daffodil is one of several.); and what plants don't mind neglect (try peppermint and periwinkles.).

Professionals have been mapping out gardens and landscape designs via computer for years, but it wasn't until recently that such programs became widely available for the consumer.

On the grow

In 1993, there were little more than a handful of gardening programs with sales totaling $2.2 million; the next year there were 20 with triple the sales, according to PC Data, a Reston, Va., software tracking firm.

Sales are expected to move even higher this year as more products are introduced, making gardening software among the fastest growing in the line of personal productivity programs, a sector that includes high-tech how-to guides for things like cooking and home improvement.

About 72 million households engaged in at least one gardening activity in 1994 and spent $25.9 billion on supplies, up from the 70 million households that spent $16.3 billion in 1989, the National Gardening Association in Burlington, Vt. said. Furthermore, at least 26 million people do some or all of their own landscaping each year, according to the association.

"We're seeing that certain kind of pride of place . . . I like to call it outside decorating," said Bruce Butterfield, the group's research director.

At the same time, more individuals — about a third of all U.S. households right now — own PCs and are finding more uses for the high-powered machines.

Computer help

"Obviously, a person wouldn't buy a computer in order to plan his or her garden. But they (the programs) can help you get more organized and give you a pretty wide range of information fast," said Michael MacCaskey, editor in chief of National Gardening magazine.

PC gardeners can become better informed about available products and services and even save money by learning how to do some or all of the work themselves. (A well landscaped home can increase the resale value of a home by between 4 and 5 percent, according to a Clemson University study published last year.)

The current crop of gardening software, many in the $50 to $70 price range, falls into two basic categories — plant databases and landscape design. A few overlap.

The plant database programs include products such as: Better Homes and Gardens Complete Guide to Gardening; The Exotic Garden; Florafile; and Garden Encyclopedia.

Each serves as a giant resource of information on hundreds of plants, trees, flowers, vegetables and herbs, including planting and caring instructions and common pests and diseases to watch out for.Nearly all show colorful photographs of each plant on file. Some allow users to keep an inventory of plants in their own gardens.

Users can search for plants and flowers by their common or botanical names. (A hemerocallis by any other name is still a Daylily.)

Because of the abundant material many database programs are available only on CD-ROM.

Among the best feature of these programs is the ability to search for plants based on their particular attributes and an individual gardener's needs and regional growing zones. (There are essentially 10 cold hardiness zones in North

Landscaping plan should follow guidelines

■ The first thing to consider is that the front of a home is different from the back, both physically and socially. For better or worse, the front yard is part of the larger community, while the back yard usually requires a private invitation.

AP — When considering a landscape plan for your home, your plan might very well be different from your next-door neighbor's, even if your homes are nearly identical. That's because the tastes and lifestyle preferences of the owners do affect the decision-making process. Still, there are a few goal-specific rules and guidelines that should be applied to each site.

The first thing to consider is that the front of a home is different from the back, both physically and socially. For better or worse, the front yard is part of the larger community, while the back yard usually requires a private invitation.

The front is more formal, the back, less so. In addition, front yards are often lopsided, with the house, garage, driveway or entry door uncomfortably weighted to one side. And finally, the fronts of houses are usually dominated by hard lines, as viewed from the street. The line separating the yard from the foundation, the door from the walk and the vertical corners from the horizontal lawn allproduce abrupt, severe edges.

A front-yard landscaping plan, therefore, has several jobs to do. To begin, it must complement its surroundings — its neighborhood. Any striking departure from the norm should begin modestly near the street and then develop its full effect as it nears the house.

Above all, the front yard should be inviting, especially as you approach the front door. The plantings here should be chosen and placed so as to lead the visitor to the door and to focus attention there.

In addition to setting an inviting tone, these plantings should also break up the hard lines near the door. In practical terms, if the door waits at the end of a long walk, or driveway, the area near the door should be softened, to diminish that end-of-the-runway feel.

How are hard edges softened? By variety — specifically, by plants that vary in height, texture and color. The plantings near the door can be placed symmetrically, as when the sidewalk is centered onthe property, or asymmetrically, as when the entry is off-center, right or left.

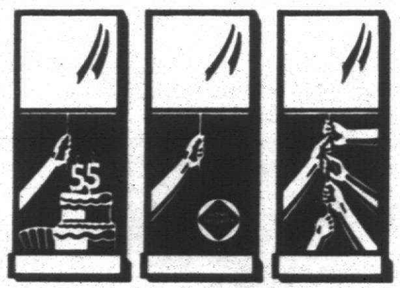

The same applies to a lopsided yard. If your house, garage or driveway hugs the left side, a prominent right-side grouping of plants can pull things back into balance. Similarly, the hard outside corners of a house can be obliterated by ornamental trees or shrubs, while the foundation line can be broken by shrubs, flowers and low-growing ground cover.

Side yards are transitional, both physically and visually. They either graft together the separate senaibilities of front yard and back yard or they deliberately separate them. When a side yard is wide and spacious, shade trees and evergreens make good punctuation points and function as good dividers. When side yards are narrow, shrubs and flowers can lead the eye toward the back yard.

While front-yard sidewalks are usually made of concrete, side-yard and backyard walkways can make good use of alternative materials.

Back yards are more casual. They can be cozy or structured. They can harbor Japanese gardens or sandboxes and tire swings. It all depends. If houses are like their owners, back yards are most like them. The plant selection should be less formal, with greater emphasis on variety and experimentation, and plant placement can be more relaxed — less orderly.

This is the place for wild clumps of tall grass, shade trees, vegetable gardens, fruited bushes, bird feeders, steppingstones, vine-covered arbors, a pool, horseshoe pits — it's your call.

America as classified by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.)

For instance, you can request non-poisonous perennials suitable for zone 6 (that's where the minimum temperature averages minus 10 to zero degrees) that bloom all summer and are low maintenance. Punch that information into the Garden Encyclopedia program and it'll flash on screen 34 plant suggestions, including coral bells, hardy geraniums and a host of hostas.

If you want to narrow the search to plants with only purple blooms, the list drops to 10 plants. For red-only flowers, the list narrows to four.

Plants can also be searched by punching in a ZIP code.

Programs

The Better Homes and Garden program stands out not only for the pretty classical musical played in the background but the wide range of gardening tips it provides. There are garden layout suggestions, tips for each calender month, plus a new quotation or tidbit of information every time the program is started. Among the many suggestions: Don't remove more than a third of the grass blade with each lawn mowing.

The landscape design programs — which include products like 3D Landscape, Key Home Gardener and LandDesigner — also provide databases of information as well as drawing materials to customize any landscape style. All use computer aid design technology, or CAD, which is the same process that allows PC users to designs cars or sophisticated machines on their screens.

Some provide design templates with a few ideas already sketched out as well as price estimators for equipment and supplies. A few, such as LandDesigner, allow you to "layer" your design with things like plants, structure and drainage.

One of the easiest, and perhaps most fun to use, is 3D Landscape. You start out by creating your design from a bird's-eye view, dragging a gazebo, deck or plant icons into your design based on specified property lines. But click on the program's 3D button and you can see the design in three dimensions, from several angles.

The program also lets you set the slope of your land, shows you how large your plants will grow over specified years and even illustrates how shadows will fall on your yard during a typical sunny day and at various times of the year.

Do professionals see these products as a threat to their business?

Joe Albizo, a spokesman for the National Association of Nurserymen, doesn't think so.

"Landscape projects can be very overwhelming. You have to think about shade patterns . . . drainage, the ecology of the site.

"Generic information just doesn't suffice. Most people will need to talk with a professional for the big projects."

But Tamara Attard, president and chief executive officer of Multicom, which puts out the Better Homes and Garden software, says future programs will allow individuals to "talk" with professionals through on-line access.

Home safe home

Keep burglars away while you're on vacation

■ Burglars are successful because they strike quickly and avoid risks. Law enforcement officials agree that would-be intruders shy away from unpredictable situations — when they can't really be sure no one is home.

While you're out of town enjoying your vacation this summer, make sure that you don't give burglars an opportunity to ransack your home.

Vacations provide burglars with plenty of time to enter your home, remove items and search for hidden valuables. The FBI reports that almost 2 million homeowners are burglarized each year, with an average loss of nearly $1,200.

Burglars are successful because they strike quickly and avoid risks. Law enforcement officials agree that would-be intruders shy away from unpredictable situations — when they can't really be sure no one is home.

But some simple measures that create an illusion of normal activity can help safeguard your residence in your absence. One of the most effective is to use timers throughout your home to create the impression of movement at different times of the day and night.

"The best approach is to combine several timers so that they vary the times lamps and appliances operate," said Mike Einstein of Intermatic Inc., a manufacturer of home security and safety lighting products. "For example, you can program a television or radio to turn on in the living room or den during the afternoon. After dark, lamp timers can be set to imitate someone moving from room to room over the course of an evening."

In using timers, it's a good idea to avoid an obvious timer-controlled look. Einstein said that timers with a random pattern that turns lamps or appliances on and off at slightly different times each day are now available. For even easier programming, there's also a plug-in timer with a dial resembling a clock. To help secure your home during vacations, consider using a variable timer that enables you to schedule different on/off times for each day of the week.

Various electronic timers that offer outstanding accuracy can be obtained at local hardware stores and home centers. Also available are screw-in and plug-in photo controls, which can be used to regulate porch lights, coach lights and floodlights.

■ Ask your police department to check your home when you're away.

■ Stop mail and newspaper deliveries, or have a trusted neighbor collect them. Also ask your neighbor to remove any advertising flyers.

■ Arrange to have your lawn and bushes trimmed if you'll be away for an extended period of time.

■ Keep some shades and blinds up and curtains open to maintain a normal appearance.

■ Remove messages from your telephone answering machine regularly so that the "beep" is always short. And don't indicate on your message that you are on vacation.

There are ways to silence squeaking floors

■ Sometimes when you fix a squeak in one place it moves to another spot. The solution is construction adhesive, a squeak-stopper you can apply to large areas of a floor.

A floor generally consists of three layers: the joists, the subfloor and the flooring. When it squeaks, the usual culprit is wood rubbing against wood or wood rubbing against a nail.

It's best to eliminate the cause entirely. But this isn't always possible, and a temporary solution is to lubricate between the boards. Many lubricants work. Try sprinkling talcum powder or powdered graphite between the boards. Or use penetrating lubricant spray. If none of these do the job, try dripping furniture wax or liquid soap in the cracks.

A more permanent way to quiet noisy floorboards is to drive small triangular metal glazier's points, used to install windowpanes, into cracks between the boards. Space the points about 6 inches apart and sink them below the surface with a nail set or putty knife.

If squeaking occurs in a floor that has exposed joists in the basement or crawl space underneath, try repairing the problem from below.

First check the cross braces, known as bridging, between joists. Some of the pieces may have worked loose over the years, allowing the joists to move when someone walks on the floor above them. Reattach the bridging with common nails.

A gap between the subfloor and a joist can also cause squeaking by letting the two pieces rub together. To stop it, dab glue on a wood shingle or shim and tap it between the joist and the subfloor near the squeak. Don't force it too far.

Sometimes when you fix a squeak in one place it moves to another spot. The solution is construction adhesive, a squeak-stopper you can apply to large areas of a floor. Put a tube of adhesive in a caulking gun and run a bead of adhesive along both sides of a joist where it supports a subfloor. The squeaks should be gone for good.

If the floor joists are not exposed, make a repair from the floor surface. At the squeak, drill small pilot holes through the flooring, preferably going into the joists. Angle the holes so that theyare directed against each other like a "V." Then drive spiral-shanked floor nails through the flooring. Sink the nailheads and cover the holes with wood putty in a color that matches the floor finish.

Wall-to-wall replacement time offers a great opportunity to track down and eliminate squeaks in an unfinished floor. After the carpet is up, walk over the entire area to find the squeaks. Whenever there's a problem, run 2-inch dry-wall screws through the floor and subfloor into the joist below. A line of existing nails is often the best clue to locating a joist.

When it comes to squeaks, stairs can be worse offenders than floors. Most stair squeaks are caused by a tread (the horizontal part you step on) rubbing against a riser (the vertical part) or againstthe stringers (side pieces).

If a squeak seems to be coming from the front of a tread, drive nails at opposing angles through the tread into the riser.

If it seems to be coming from the rear of a tread, insert thin, glue-coated wood wedges in a crack between the bottom of the riser and the tread. Use a sharp knife to cut off the exposed ends of thewedges so that they are flush with the riser. Then cover the repair with molding to conceal it.

If the underside of the stairs is exposed, you can often silence squeaks by fastening small wood blocks where a riser meets the tread above it. Attach the blocks with glue and screws short enough sothey don't protrude through the surface.

Please don't call this furniture 'recycled'

AP — Modern furniture is about much more than a complete break with the past. In fact, one of the most noticeable trends at the International Contemporary Furniture Fair (ICFF) in New York this spring was turning old into new.

Thierry Valfort, a French architect based in Nice, uses high-tech parts from scrapped airplanes. But don't say he's recycling.

"Recycled suggests garbage, and this stuff is not garbage," Valfort says. "Nobody could afford to buy these parts, which are made of aluminum and titanium."

Valfort uses a titanium helicopter rotor as the base for a glass table and refashions pieces of an airplane's fuselage into fanciful bookcases. He also has turned aluminum air brakes into a bench.

While a few of his pieces, such as the table and bookcase, are mass produced, most are one of a kind.

The New York show was the first in the United States for Valfort, who began production about two years ago. Prices start at $2,700.

Another clock, $2,000, is made of an old tea box from Chile, a clock dial from an old American car, feet from a lamp base and drawer pulls and other sundries from a large inventory that Kowalski keeps in his Berkeley workshop.

"People like the fact that the clocks are made out of recycled objects and are useable," says Kowalski, who generally uses quartz innards but sometimes reconditions mechanical movements "in reverence to clockmakers of the past."

Chinese furniture repainted in colorful tiger motifs is an example of recycling in a more traditional vein. The work is done in Hong Kong and imported to the United States by Artemis, a Hong Kong-based design company showing at the ICFF for the first time.

Artemis' owners, Doris Leong and Dicky Tam, find the furniture in China and Tam repaints it. Prices for the completed pieces range from about $1,500 to $6,000.

Marriage chests work well as storage cabinets for home entertainment components. Long, low cabinets that once held painted scrolls are now used as tables and storage pieces. Pedestals that could have shown off a piece of porcelain have been converted into floor lamps. Narrow canopy beds are used as seating.

While it is difficult to get a license to export antiquities, the Chinese government is not so strict about furniture, Leong says, adding that items such as the 18th- and 19th-century wedding chestsare in good supply.

The ICFF, a trade show, was notably free this year of eccentric pieces. Rather, emphasis seemed to be on simple wood furniture such as that from Berkeley Mills.

The Berkeley, Calif., design firm, new to the show, offered two distinct design idioms: Desks and storage units are adapted from simple Japanese cabinets known as tansu, and seating is based on American Arts and Crafts pieces. It isn't surprising that the two styles complement each other. One of the originators of American Arts and Crafts furniture, architect Frank Lloyd Wright, was inspired by Japanese furniture and buildings.

Listing enhancement: Kevin J. Berry, owner of ERA Quality Realty, demonstrates a computerized listing of a house for sale.

Technology has enhanced many business operations, including real estate. Computers have become a key tool for many sales associates. Here's why.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

It used to be that prospective buyers obtained brief descriptions and maybe black-and-white exterior photographs of houses for sale from a thick multi-list book. Those books are still available. But RealComp II offers an on-line computer multi-listing service with colorized photo capabilities and up-to-the-minute information on availability that has become the tool of choice for many agents.

The service, based in Farmington Hills, is owned by eight realty boards including Western Wayne/Oakland County, Birmingham/Bloomfield/Rochester/South Oakland and North Oakland.

"Computer access is updated constantly," said Karen Kage, MLS director for RealComp II. "Information in books by the time they come out is five days old. The market now is moving very quickly."

While many larger real estate firms are part of their own national networks with computer databases, RealComp II's MLS is a detailed regional compilation of houses and condos solely in the Michigan market.

Computers can compile, organize and list information in a variety of categories. MLS books list by community and price.

"I can be very selective," said Jerry McKeon, general manager and broker at Hall & Hunter in Bloomfield Township. "I can request houses that have basements, garages, Birmingham schools. It only brings up the things I want."

Computer multi-listing services save everyone time, a precious commodity for buyers, sellers and agents who are increasingly busy.

"It's very user friendly and gives a lot of information," said Sue Thorn, an associate broker with Century 21 East in Rochester Hills. "It's more current. In today's market, the (MLS) book is almost obsolete by the time you get it."

A recent study by the National Association of Realtors found that 50 percent of house buyers were introduced to their houses through research and information provided by their agents, reported ERA, a national brokerage network.

"We recognize the trust clients place in our real estate agents and the important role of providing computer technologies on the cutting edge of the real estate industry," said Kevin J. Berry, associate broker/ owner of ERA Quality Realty of Redford.

"RealComp II, along with ERA's Electronic Home Selling Network, allows us to provide the most comprehensive and detailed information to our clients.

"The more they know, the better informed and more comfortable they are in making sound real estate decisions," Berry said.

"Our previous Michigan MLS did not provide any photos of the property," said David Owens, broker with ERA Accent Realty in Livonia.

"Now, the benefit to the client is he/she is able to get a visual opinion of the home which greatly aids in the decision to pursue that piece of real estate."

Computers have it over books in another big way, McKeon noted.

"You can put prospects in computers, how many bedrooms they want, the area, price range. As information becomes available, it automatically alerts you there's a home there and it alerts other agents you're looking for a home like that," he said.

Thorn also noted another advantage to technology. "It's easier to misplace a book than a computer," she said.

The cost of acquiring a computer would be the major expense to going to an on-line system, Kage said.

"This is a phone bill. What's that cost?" Berry said of accessing by computer.

McKeon predict that MLS books one day will become obsolete as more and more agents get access and become comfortable around computers.

"Early on, when computers were available, I think there was a lot of insecurity," McKeon said. "As new agents come on who are more computer literate, more familiar with computers, there's more acceptance."

If points were paid, you may be able to get a refund

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I have heard that there may have been a change in the law regarding the deductibility of "points." Do you have any information about that?

A. If you bought a personal residence after Dec. 31, 1990, you may be entitled to a tax refund. On March 28, 1994, the Internal Revenue Service issued Revenue Procedure 94-21, which changes its position on "seller paid" points. Prior to that time, if the seller paid mortgage points on behalf of the buyer, the buyer was not allowed to take an income tax deduction for those points. The change in the IRS position means that any taxpayer who purchases a personal residence after Dec. 31, 1990, on which the seller paid points to the mortgage lender, is entitled to file an amended tax return and get an income tax refund for the appropriate year. However, the new change in the IRS's position does not allow a deduction for points paid in lieu of appraisal fees, inspection fees, etc., nor for points paid on property that is not your principal residence, nor for points for home improvement loans or refinancing loans. You are best advised to consult with your legal adviser regarding the ramifications of this change in position of the IRS.

Q. Our municipality is considering banning large satellite dishes more than 8 inches in diameter or 12 inches high. Dishes more than 3 inches in diameter require a permit. Is this legal?

A. In a recent sixth Circuit Court of Appeals opinion, the Court held that where a city banned large satellite dishes, this violated a federal regulation and a homeowner can sue for damages and attorney fees under 42 U.S.C., Paragraph 1983. In a similar type statute, it was found that the ordinance violated 47 C.F.R. Paragraph 25.104(b), which is an FCC regulation that says that cities and towns cannot impose "unreasonable limitations" on satellite dishes. In addition, the FCC regulation is enforceable under Section 1983, which means that a homeowner who is ordered to remove his dish antenna may be entitled to damages and attorney fees because, since the FCC regulation was intended to benefit homeowners, it created a binding obligation on cities and towns and is sufficiently specific to be within the competence of the judiciary to enforce. Your municipality ought to get a legal opinion before passing such an ordinance.

Remodeling makes sense to more and more people

Rising interest rates are causing many people to remodel their houses rather than buy new ones. But, before you make any home improvements, do your homework. The Michigan Association of CPAs points out that some improvements enable you to increase the resale value of your house, as well as save you tax dollars.

Kitchen fix-ups, the most common remodeling project among homeowners, typically yield the highest return when a house is resold. Adding a family room, a master bedroom suite or a bathroom also has a high resale value. Another renovation that increases marketability in today's market is a sun room.

When making renovations, keep energy efficiency in mind. For example, replacing your furnace or adding new double-paned windows may help you reduce heating bills. What's more, to help you make such improvements, utility companies may offer you a low-interest loan or a cash rebate.

Also, keep in mind that it may not pay to expand your house beyond the norms of your neighborhood. For instance, you may not be able to recover the cost of adding a large grandparent or babysitter suite, equipped with its own kitchen, bath and separate entrance, in a neighborhood of small houses. Similarly, typical house buyers may not be willing to pay extra for improvements such as pools, tennis courts or elaborate landscaping.

When you sell your house, you generally have to pay a tax on any profit — that is, the difference between your house's net selling price (selling price less broker and legal fees, etc.) and its adjusted basis. To determine your house's adjusted basis, add the cost of any home improvements to the amount you originally paid for the house. Adding the cost of improvements to your house's basis means that every dollar you spend to improve your house could shave a dollar off your future taxable gain. That's because the greater your basis, the lower your profit — and the less taxes you pay.

For tax purposes, the Intemal Revenue Service (IRS) distinguishes between improvements and repairs. Expenditures qualify as improvements only if they add to the value of your house, considerably prolong its life or adapt it to a new use.

Examples of improvements include converting an attic into living space, installing central air conditioning, adding another bathroom or bedroom, putting in new plumbing or wiring or paving a driveway. Storm windows, lighting fixtures, skylights, new trees or shrubs, termite proofing and waterproofing also qualify as improvements. One test to determine if a renovation qualifies as an improvement is whether it is permanent. For example, you can add to your basis the cost of built-in bookcases or wall-to-wall carpeting, while the cost of a free-standing bookcase or a room-size rug doesn't qualify.

According to the IRS, repairs differ from improvements in that repairs merely maintain your property in or restore your property to good working condition. For example, fixing a leaky roof is considered a repair. However, installing a new roof is considered an improvement. Thus, basic repairs and maintenance, such as the cost of painting or repairing gutters generally offer no tax benefit since they cannot be added to the basis of your house.

How you pay for home improvements also can affect your tax bill. Your best strategy (depending on available interest rates) is to avoid paying interest charges by using as much cash as you can afford to finance the improvement. If that's not possible, you may want to look into a home equity loan. The interest paid on home equity loans or home equity lines of credit is usually less than the rate charged for other forms of borrowing. In addition, these types of loans offer a tax break because the interest usually is deductible (some restrictions apply to certain high-income individuals). Keep in mind that using your house as collateral has serious implications, so borrow only an amount you are confident you can repay.

When you file your tax return for the year in which you sold your house, you'll need to complete Form 2119, Sale of Your Home, on which you calculate the profit on the sale of your house. CPAs recommend that you prepare a worksheet and keep a running record of all home improvements, along with bills, contracts, receipts and other substantiating records, from the day you become a homeowner.

Yesterday's luxeries are today's 'must haves'

Design features that just a decade ago were considered luxury items will be standard in new houses by the turn of the century, according to "The Futures of Home Building," a newly published analysis by the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB).

Viewed as luxuries in the 1980s, a number of design elements are rapidly becoming standard features in response to changing demographics and consumer expectations, the study found. Among them are:

- Walk-in closets.
- Kitchens with central islands and walk-in pantries.
- Large, luxurious bathrooms as part of master bedroom suites.
- Higher ceilings.
- A room that is designated as a media room.
- More use of windows to bring the outdoors inside.

At the high end of the market, another set of luxury features is expected to become more widespread by the end of the decade. In the upper price ranges, more houses will include:

- Two master bedroom suites.
- A fitness room.
- A fully dedicated media room with a built-in large screen T.V. system.
- Security/lighting/energy management systems.

Other changes will be dictated by regulation, rather than demographics or consumer expectations, the NAHB study found. They include the use of radon mitigation systems in high-risk areas, the use of water-conserving plumbing fixtures, widespread use of energy-efficient windows and high performance insulation, and larger town houses to accommodate model code changes to staircase geometry.

In response to a variety of concerns, house builders also will change some of the materials and methods that they use to construct houses. Higher lumber prices will speed the adoption of wood substitutes including engineered wood products, steel and masonry. Furthermore, worker safety and environmental concerns will result in the expanded use of safer construction products such as roofing systems that don't require hot tar. And shortages of skilled workers will encourage the use of products such as wall panel systems that reduce the need for skilled labor.

Other findings of the NAHB study include:

- Kitchens and baths will remain a key to selling houses and will incorpo- rate more elaborate designs.
- Computer-assisted design packages will be used by more builders to customize houses for buyers and to rapidly estimate the cost of design changes.
- Window manufacturers will use energy-efficiency labels that will allow builders to better compare different products.
- Builders will intensify their efforts to build in an environmentally sensitive manner.
- The share of builders who use complete factory-built systems will remain small, but the use of factory-built components such as wall panels and roof trusses will increase.

The Michigan Association of Home Builders is comprised of more than 10,000 member companies, thus providing service to over 370,000 people in the house building/construction industry. MAHB also represents 36 local home builder associations throughout the state.

A 'cheap' mortgage may be the most expensive

ON MORTGAGES

DAVID C. MULLY

Shopping for a mortgage lender is probably the least enjoyable part of the home buying process. Therefore most people rush through this stage and end up selecting a lender based solely on the fact that the lender has the lowest interest rate and closing cost of all the lenders they have time to compare (or had the patience to compare). But is that really all that matters? Have you found out later on that you wished you had shopped a little smarter when you selected your lender?

Most homebuyers do not think about some of the important points to consider when comparing one lender with another. Besides trying to obtain the lowest rate and closing cost possible (if you do not lock the rate in the day you compare lenders, you may not have ended up with the best rate, rates can change daily from one lender to the next), there are other important things to consider when selecting a lender.

Granted, you want to get the process over with so you can move into your new house, but it you take the time to think about how you may be affected by this choice in the future you might shop smarter. For example, let's say you're putting a 10-percent downpayment on your new house, you will have an extra charge added to your monthly payment that is called MI insurance (commonly known as PMI).

This is charged by most lenders when you put less than 20 percent as a downpayment. Some day when you have built up enough equity in your house to equal 20 percent, you are going to want to request that your lender drop this extra charge off of your monthly house payment.

You may have asked about this when you originally applied for your loan and the loan officer may have said yes you may request this when you have the necessary 20-percent equity. But what you probably did not realize in this case is how important it would be for the lender you select to continue to service your loan in the future. Because if the lender sells the servicing of your loan to another lender, what they may have told you previously may not hold true with your new lender, and as a result a few years later you're paying extra fees you may have saved by shopping smarter, and asking the question "Will your company service my loan now and in the future?" All companies are required by regulations to disclose to the borrower what percent of loans they sell each year. Ask for a copy of this disclosure.

So the money you may have saved initially could have ended up as a loss in the future if you are required to continue these MI payments each month in your house payment. This is just one example of how shopping smarter can affect your pocket book when you take the time to look at the big picture and not just the small picture of hurrying to get the best rate and getting the process over with ASAP. Also remember, your credit history can sometimes be affected when the servicing of your loan gets sold to another lender because of the timing of when your now lender actually records your payment, it could end up showing late on your credit report even though you made the payment on time.

Master suite in this house plan isolated from day-to-day living

If the privacy of a well-isolated master suite is important to you, consider the Kearney. The master suite and second bedroom couldn't be much farther apart. For the couple with an older child still at home, or empty nesters who need a spare room for guests, this arrangement is beneficial.

Luxuries in the master suite, where a large bay window brings the sunshine inside, include a skylit bathroom with separate toilet and twin basins, a large closet, and private access to a small back patio, where an optional spa can ease away the cares of the day.

Dining room and family room flow together, with a wide hearth to take away the chill. This bright skylit area, with built-in entertainment center, is a great place for family and friends to gather for hours of fun watching television, listening to music or just enjoying each others company. A full bathroom, with dual access, separates the family room and second bedroom.

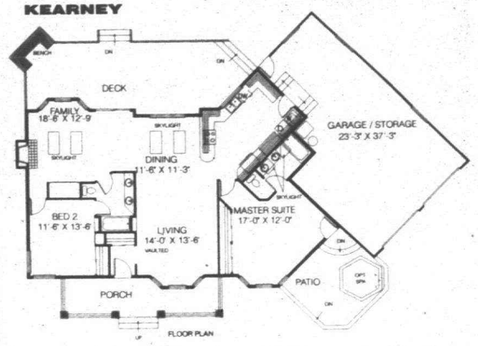

The large, vaulted living room has a big bay window looking out over the covered porch to the front yard. This room also flows into the dining area, enhancing the open feeling of the house.

For the cook in the house, the spacious walk-in kitchen is sure to please. Conveniently located for easy serving, the kitchen has all the built-ins plus a pantry and room for a washer and dryer. With direct passage to the two-car garage, groceries can be easily brought inside. Extra room is available in the garage for storage or it can be used as a workshop for the do-it-yourself person that likes to tackle tough projects.

For the lazy days of summer, there is a large back deck. Here friends and relatives can fire up the barbecue and savor each other's company along with the sunshine and food.

Houses of Country Creek fit Crosswinds mold

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Villages of Country Creek in Oakland Township looks a lot like other recent residential projects developed and built by Crosswinds Communities in Westland and Royal Oak.

Houses are fairly close together, yards are relatively small and interiors feature volume ceilings to accentuate living space.

"What we've been able to do is give tremendous value in a first-class location," said Bernard Glieberman, Crosswinds president.

"This is a better answer than attached condos," he said. "You have the benefits of condos — less yard to take care of, a real nice looking community — but yet don't have common walls."

Villages of Country Creek is off Adams Road just north of Silver Bell. About a quarter of the 196 lots at the site are still available.

Glieberman offers four models.

They range from a bi-level of 1,444 square feet with three bedrooms and two baths for $139,900 to a 2,250-square-foot colonial with three bedrooms and 2½ baths for $159,900.

A ranch and story-and-a-half also are available.

All models include as part of the base price a two-car attached garage, basement and dishwasher. All but the bi-level has a first-floor laundry. Exteriors are brick and vinyl siding with wood trim.

Options include fireplace, air conditioning, skylights and decks/patios. Finished basements, as reflected in all of the models, also are extra.

Buyers represent an interesting mix.

"The majority are either upper end of first-time buyers or you're getting people who are coming from big houses who are buying a house after raising a family," Glieberman said. "It's the person who doesn't need a big house.

"We sell a lot of cubic space. We sell drama. I believe our success is values we give in our homes," he added.

Each of the models offers something different.

The Kensington offers a walk up to the main living area and a step down to the lower level at the front entrance. All three bedrooms in the bi-level have sloped ceilings.

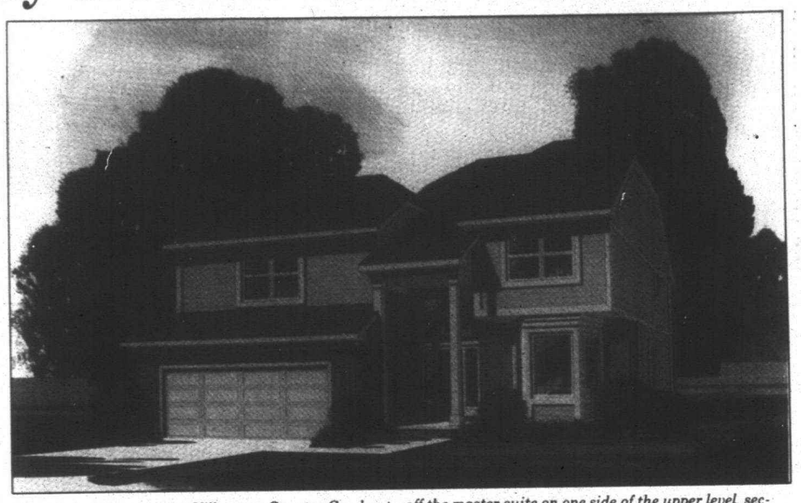

The Dorchester, a story-and-a-half, places the master on the main floor. You can see the whole house from the bridge at the top of the stairs on the second level.

The Hampton, a colonial, places the master suite on one side of the second level, two secondary bedrooms, each with a walk-in closet, on the other side.

The master in the Dorchester provides a separate tub and shower. The master in the other models has only a shower.

Villages at Country Creek
Rochester Hills

Hampton: This model at Villages at Country Creek sets off the master suite on one side of the upper level, secondary bedrooms on the other end.

Villages of Country Creek is serviced by city water and sewers. The sub is in the Rochester Community Schools.

The property tax rate currently is $22.39 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $150,000 house in Villages of Country Creek would pay $1,680.

A monthly association fee of $35 covers snow removal on roads and driveways and maintenance of common areas.

Addie Balaban has been the sales rep at Villages of Country Creek since it opened about two years ago.

"Basically, they (visitors) are most impressed with openness and how well space is utilized," she said. "That's what I hear from everybody."

There's a style to suit everyone's needs, Balaban added.

"I can't decide what I like best. You get a lot of value for your dollar," she said.

Dale and Wes Griffith, along with kids Rob, Chad and Kim, moved into a Hampton.

"We wanted to live in the Rochester area and this was the sub we could afford, quite honestly," Dale said. "As for the model, there's lots of room, lots of cupboard space. It's quality built. We love it."

"To get in the Rochester schools with new construction in that price range, that's the only one out there," Richard said.

"It's just a tremendous floor plan," he added. "It's kind of an ideal blend between a ranch and a colonial."

The sales office at Villages of Country Creek, (810) 373-1100, is open 1-7 weekdays, noon to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, closed Thursdays.
