Citizens coalition will map road plan

BY VALERIE OLANDER
STAFF WRITER

Canton officials won't be treading on political potholes if a road bond millage is revisited later this year. The recommendation will come from a citizens committee – not elected leaders.

The issue of cityhood also could come up in discussions as the group considers financial ramifications of a city road department. Townships are dependent on county road departments for funding.

Nearly two years have passed since voters defeated a 15-year, $12 million bond issue for roads. However, the condition of the road system continues to be a top issue.

Canton officials agreed last week to organize a "Blue Ribbon" roads committee comprised of residents who will review the current and future status of the township's road network.

"It probably makes sense that the citizens validate what our concerns are," said Township Supervisor Tom Yack.

The committee's first goal will be to determine if the public's needs are being met, said Aaron Machnik, municipal services director. If the service levels are found to be deficient – which is in all likelihood the case – the committee would identify alternative methods to provide and fund improvements, he said.

Trustee Melissa McLaughlin said the "Blue Ribbon" committee could come up with creative ways to fund road improvements, such as the recent paving of two miles of Beck Road and a section of Warren by developers.

But Yack told fellow board mem-

Voters have their say

■ If approved, the $79.7 million proposal before Plymouth-Canton district residents Saturday will pay for a new high school, Canton elementary school and other improvements.

By press time Saturday night, the fate of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' $79.7 million bond issue wasn't yet known.

The district recently installed state-of-the-art touch-screen voting machines, and school officials hoped for results by 9:15 p.m. However the delay was in counting approximately 2,000 absentee ballots.

Precinct totals showed the bond passing 4,893 votes to 4,515 no votes. Eleven precincts passed the measure, seven opposed it.

"This is a measure of how close we are to the community; how well we are perceived as listening - win or lose," said Superintendent Chuck Little.

"We don't know where we are just yet. We have a good chance. We can lose the absentees and still win," he added.

Observer Internet users may access election information made available after press time. The online address is http://www.oeonline.com.

The school district's web page also will furnish election results after noon today, said Judy Evola, community relations director. The schools' on-line address is http://users.aol.com/bondpccs/bond.htm.

Election workers at precincts including Canton High School reported a steady turnout of voters all day, with higher than expected numbers of senior citizens casting ballots.

Watching and waiting: Plymouth-Canton Superintendent Dr. Charles Little anxiously awaits the vote totals Saturday night at the district offices.

Yes voters - many with toddlers in tow - outnumbered no voters, according to an informal exit poll of voters at Canton High School.

"We are part of the problem, and part of the reason we need more schools," said Bob Boucher, who with his wife Elaine moved to Canton from South Redford six months ago. "Our child is going to a school six miles away versus one mile away because of all the new subdivisions."

Mark Silbernagel, the father of two school-aged children and a preschooler, also voted yes. "Our children could be going to three different elementaries next year, and that is ridiculous. The youngest, a kindergartner, would be going the furthest, riding a bus for 45 minutes one way on a good day. Some of the teachers haven't been allowing kids to have a snack, because it's too much time out of the day. I think they need the additional facilities."

Melvin Daniels, who does not have school-aged children, just moved to Canton from Livonia. "I voted against it," he said. "They had trouble finding the money to operate schools before. I think they can do as good a job adding classrooms as opposed to building a new school."

Jim Cutler voted no at Central Middle School, the building in which he attended kindergarten,

Ford cost-cutting hits Sheldon Road Plant

Last week's decision by Ford Motor Co. to discontinue four slow-selling models could mean job cuts at the Sheldon Road Plant in Plymouth Township, plant manager Paula Winkler-Doman said Wednesday.

"There will be an impact on our plant. We're still trying to determine how many positions will be affected," Winkler-Doman told the Canton Economic Club.

"Hopefully, we'll just be able to redeploy those people."

Winkler-Doman talked about the auto manufacturer's push to remain competitive; her management philosophy; and life as a working woman in a male-dominated industry during a half-hour presentation to about 75 people attending the monthly luncheon at Summit on the Park community center.

On Monday, Ford announced it was phasing out production of three current coupes – the Probe, Cougar and Thunderbird – along with the Aerostar minivan before the end of the year. Only the Thunderbird, which will be redesigned over the next three years as a specialty sports car reminiscent of the storied two-seater which debuted in 1954, has a guaranteed future.

The moves mean indefinite layoffs starting this summer for 1,800 Ford UAW employees in Ohio and up to 700 ancillary layoffs at Sheldon Road and 19 other plants which make parts for those vehicles, according to the company.

The Sheldon Road Plant employs 1,850 hourly and 250 salaried workers who build radiators, heater cores and air conditioning systems for all Ford models. The plant turns out three million radiators annually.

Conservancy land could be gas station site

STAFF WRITER

Virginia-based Nature Conservancy is selling property on Michigan Avenue, just west of Haggerty, to a developer with plans to build a gas station.

The less than two acres was deeded to the nonprofit group in October by a Canton resident. It was put on the market for $270,000 in January.

Odd as it may sound, the Nature Conservancy has no choice but to sell the land to whomever made the first purchase offer, said Ray Culter, vice president of the Nature Conservancy's surplus lands program.

"By law we have to market it on the open market to get the best return according to IRS requirements. It's highly regulated. We have no control over who it is sold to and what it's sold for," he said.

The property was deeded to the Nature Conservancy by resident Juliet McMath. It's a charitable remainder trust meaning the purpose is to have the property sold and the proceeds go to the donor for the rest of her life, Culter said. The Nature Conservancy becomes beneficiary at her death. For those entering retirement, it's a way to have

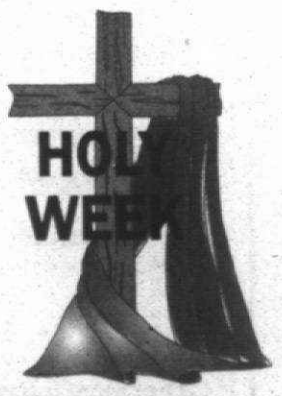
Customs may vary but Easter eggs are universal



When it comes to Easter, almost every country has its own customs, some of them very old indeed. And wherever people celebrate Easter, they have Easter eggs.

In the northern counties of England, children go around "Pace egging," or begging for eggs and other presents, and acting in the Pace egg play. The Pace egg place is one of the Mumming plays that have been performed at Christmas and other seasons for hundreds of years.

"Pace eggs" is another name for Pasch or Easter eggs and comes from the Hebrew word Pesach, meaning Passover. In Scotland, the same word also appears as Peace or Paiss.

Egg rolling is another old Easter pastime still followed in parts of Britain. Many people roll eggs just for the fun of it, but in Germany it has become a competition known as Elerisesn.

In Poland, girls used to send decorated eggs to their favorite boyfriends, and Finnish children beat the grown-ups with birch twigs on Easter Sunday until they are given a ransom of Easter eggs.

In countries in southeastern Europe, people dye hard-boiled eggs red. Greeks and Romanians carry scarlet eggs on Easter Day. When friends meet, they tap their eggs together with the greeting, "Christ is risen," to which the reply is "Truly, He is risen."

Some Eastern Europeans bury a scarlet egg in a family grave as a symbol of the Resurrection, while in the Balkans, scarlet eggs are buried in the field to make the crops grow better.

Such eggs and other symbols of resurrection will be prominent in churches as they prepare for the Easter celebration.

And part of that is Holy Week, an important time in the life of Christians, a time for reflecting on the grace and mercy of God and to give thanks for his gifts of salvation through Jesus Christ.

In Canton:

At Calvary Baptist Church, there will be an informal sunrise service at 7 a.m. Easter Sunday on its joint campus with the Plymouth Christian Academy, 43065 Joy Road, Canton.

Sunday School for all ages will be at 9:45 a.m., followed by a resurrection celebration service at 11 a.m., featuring music by the Celebration Choir, CBC Ensemble, CBC Orchestra and soloists. For more information, call the church at (313) 455-0022.

• At Christ Our Savior Lutheran Church, Canton, there will be a festival service with special music at 9:30 a.m. Easter Sunday. Cross bookmarks will be given to all who attend. The church is at 46001 Warren Road. For more information, call the church at (313) 522-6830.

• An 8 a.m. Good Friday Men's Breakfast will precede the 7:30 p.m. Good Friday worship at St. Michael Lutheran Church. Tickets for the breakfast are $4 for adults, and $2.50 for children. Sat-income with tax benefits, he added.

"We could have elected to keep it but there were no endangered species on it,and it's a small parcel – less than two acres," Culter said.

He added, "They sign a letter knowing we aren't going to preserve the property."

West Bloomfield-based developer George Odish has the purchase agreement to buy the land. He submitted an application to Canton Township for a special land use for a service station. A public hearing is scheduled before the Planning Commission April 7, said Community Planner Jeff Goulet.

"A large portion of it is in a floodplain. It's adjacent to the Rouge River," said Goulet. "It's not likely to be approved."

Odish would have to show an economic benefit to the township and show that the development is not in a floodplain. Goulet said planning maps show most of the area is regulated wetlands.

The Nature Conservancy conducted an ecological evaluation to see if the property meets its mission criteria, which is to protect rare and endangered plants and animals.

Culter added, "It would be embarrassing if it was sold and then we find out later that it had endangered species on it."

Robber targets I-275 rest area

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

A Westland man is accused of robbing another man whom he lured to his apartment from an I-275 rest area in Canton Township, police said.

Todd Stephen Nemeth, 31, is charged with a 15-year felony of unarmed robbery for an incident that allegedly occurred on the afternoon of Feb. 19, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fetner said.

A 50-year-old Walled Lake man was lured to a Westland apartment by a suspect who robbed him and forced him to drive to an automated teller machine, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fetner said. The victim reportedly lost $670.

The suspect also robbed the victim of charge cards used for $2,000 in charges, Fetner said.

"It all starts off as a sexual encounter," the sergeant said.

The two men met around noon Feb. 19 at the I-275 rest area, Fetner said.

On Thursday, Fetner said at least one more victim is expected to talk with police about being robbed. That could result in additional charges as early as this week, Fetner said.

"The suspect takes money and credit cards at force," he said. "He also has photographed victims while they were performing certain acts on him. He uses that to keep them quiet."

The photographs are used, in essence, to try to threaten the victims to silence, Fetner said. The Walled Lake man, for example, is married with children.

"There's an incentive not to report the crime," Fetner said.

After the suspect forced the Walled Lake man to drive to an automated teller machine, he then had the victim return him to his Westland apartment, Fetner said.

Nemeth has been arraigned on one count of unarmed robbery and one count of being a fourth-degree habitual offender, Fetner said.

Nemeth is scheduled for a March 27 preliminary hearing in Westland 18th District Court that will determine whether he should stand trial.

For now, he remains jailed in lieu of a $30,000 cash bond, Fetner said.

managers at Ford, said improving product quality while at the same time cutting costs continues to be the biggest issue facing the auto industry.

"Cost is a big issue. We know there are families who walk into the showroom and then out because they can't afford the price of a new car," she said. As an in-house supplier, the Sheldon Road Plant is constantly competing with outside vendors who can often supply the same parts more cheaply, she added.

Winkler-Doman said the move by U.S. manufacturing companies to a teamwork philosophy has met with mixed success in her plant, where a more traditional UAW-management culture has been the norm. "It's different in every plant and you have to recognize that," she said.

Paula Winkler-Doman

The Sheldon Road Plant though was among the first to get a local contract with its UAW employees after last fall's company-wide agreement, a reversal from previous years, she said.

She said spends at least an hour each morning walking the plant floor and talking to employees. She approaches her job as a "cheerleader, teacher, coach, bulldozer when I need to be. I play mom to 2,100 employees."

Winkler-Doman's presentation was interesting because it "shows we go through some of the same issues that a big manufacturing facility does even though we have only 60 or 70 employees" in one plant, said Frank Sgambati, division controller at MascoTech. Sgambati, who works at the supplier's Canton facility, said he was also impressed with the Ford plant's inventory turnover of 60, or a complete turn about once every six days.

Winkler-Doman, who has a law degree, spent the first 13 years of her Ford career in the company's legal department and then worked for Bill Ford Jr. in the Automotive Strategies Office. She was named plant manager last August after serving as assistant manager at the Sheldon Road Plant since 1994.

During a question-and-answer session following her speech, Winkler-Doman touched on last year's shooting rampage at the Ford Wixom assembly plant and similar incidents that have occurred at the Sheldon Road Plant.

"People are very, very jittery," she acknowledged. "I wish there was a way to anticipate or prevent these kinds of things from happening but realistically there isn't."

middle school and high school. "The publication and selling of this proposal has been, from my opinion, non-existent," he said. "It was all too vague. For all we know, they could be spending $2 million for the high school and $77 million to remodel principals' offices."

Family decision: Jack Massarello votes at Canton High School while Eileen, 8, peeks into the booth.

His wife Barbara Cutler also voted no. "We don't have kids in school, and our taxes are high enough," she said.

Plymouth's Lori O'Brien voted yes. "I believe it's much needed. I have friends with kids at the high school. They say there is a lot of trouble because of all the kids. I have a daughter who will be going to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, and my mom works for the schools. I think it's a good bond all the way around."

The district took a gamble in switching from a weekday to a Saturday election. "It was intentional to do it on a Saturday so everyone would have an opportunity to vote," said Superintendent Charles Little.

The bond issue was proposed to fund construction of a third high school at the corner of Joy and Beck roads in Canton. Also planned was construction of a new elementary school in the southwest portion of the school district in the area of Beck and Cherry Hill roads.

Other items on the wish list included bus and computer purchases, and remodeling in buildings throughout the school district.

Passage of the bond proposal would mean a tax increase of $87.50 annually for the owner of a $100,000 home. For the owner of a $200,000 residence, the tax increase would be $175 annually.

Regardless of the bond proposal's fate, school officials say stopgap measures will be needed to accommodate growth that's causing overcrowding throughout the district, particularly in the elementary and high schools.

Win or lose, Little foresees challenges in the months ahead.

"Passage means we go ahead with planning," he said. "It will probably be several months until we clear all the hurdles connected not only with design, but code compliance issues before we can build. We will put into place several committees to work on curriculum and transitional issues.

"The other direction is probably as complicated. We would again put together committees, and get a recommendation from them about what directions they want us to pursue and move in those directions; unless there are some unknown things that haven't ever been discussed before."

bers at last week's study session, "I think (funding alternatives) will have to be something more than selling cupcakes."

Some options the committee could recommend are maintaining the status quo, putting a millage or bond issue on the ballot, and cityhood.

Only one Michigan township, Bloomfield Township, levies a millage to operate its own road department. Under state law, a township can have its own road department, but in order to qualify the township must levy at least one mill to receive gas tax funding from the county.

The state disperses funding from the gas tax (Act 51) to the county road department, which in turn distributes the funds to townships. City and villages get their gas tax distribution directly from the state.

Canton officials have complained for years that they haven't gotten their fair share of road funding. According to figures obtained by Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton, the township should have received $10 million last year from Wayne County, but only was allocated $2 million.

■ When completed, possibly by July, the township will have a five-year plan with detailed road assessments, an improvement plan for funding and an initial priority list.

Representatives from the municipal services, finance and public safety departments will work with the citizen committee to look at road concerns. The committee also will get further public input through surveys, public hearings and subcommittees.

When completed, possibly by July, the township will have a five-year plan with detailed road assessments, an improvement plan for funding and an initial priority list.

Yack said the list of road improvements for the 1995 bond issue is somewhat outdated.

"It may have changed to some degree. The same problems exist today, but the priority might be different," he said.

In 1995, Beck Road was a gravel road and wasn't included in the eight-year priority list. Now, Beck is paved from Cherry Hill to Geddes, making the unpaved portion (Ford to Cherry Hill) a priority for a north-south corridor through the township, he said.

Residents interested in serving on the committee should contact the Municipal Services Department through the director's office at 397-5471.

The Ward Chancel Choir will perform musical selections from the Messiah.

The light of the Lord will break early on Easter Sunday morning at the 7 a.m. sunrise service, followed by a continental breakfast. The four regular morning services are observed at their regular times – 8, 9:15 and 10:45 a.m. and 12:05 p.m. Evening worship will feature the Billy Graham film, "Repeat Performance."

The church is at 17000 Farmington Road at Six Mile Road, Livonia. For more information, call (313) 422-1150.

• Three different Easter worship services, each with a distinctive character, will be offered at Detroit First Church of the Nazarene, 21260 Haggerty Road, north of Eight Mile Road, Northville.

A worshipful early service at 7 a.m. in the Atrium will allow those attending to greet the Easter morning with a time of devotion and praise, culminating in the Lord's Supper. (At First Church, communion is open to all Christians.)

At 8:30 a.m., there will be a contemporary celebration of Easter that will feature an expanded worship team, uplifting music of praise and dramatic readings.

The Festival of Easter worship and celebration at 11 a.m. will have a 65-voice Easter choir, led by a dynamic presentation of special music featuring Don St. John, minister of music, and Debbie St. John.

In both the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services, Dr. Carl Leth, senior pastor, will deliver the message "He Still Moves Stones." Free child care services will be provided for both services.

For more information, call the church at (810) 348-7600.

Salem High counselor cited by WMU

Mary Vertrees, counselor at Plymouth Salem High School, recently received a letter notifying her that she'd been nominated for special recognition at Western Michigan University.

Kristin Young, a 1995 Plymouth Salem graduate and a student in the Lee Honors College at WMU, nominated her high school counselor for the "Favorite Teacher Day" recognition sponsored by the honors college.

School officials say this is a way for students to show their appreciation, and for the university to show its support of excellence in teaching.

Young said, "Mrs. Vertrees is a very special woman who was much more to me than just a high school counselor. She was a help when I was confused, a comfort when I was troubled, and a good friend. She was always happy to see me; she made me feel welcome and cared for. She always wanted the best for me in everything that I did, and in my future. I still miss her and I would love for her to come visit me and see how well I am doing here at Western."

A memorable proposal

Nurse and firefighter: A routine Livonia Fire Department training exercise the morning of March 11 at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia gave firefighter David MacDonald of Canton an opportunity to surprise his girlfriend, Dawn Clark, with a unique marriage proposal. After extending the tower on the fire truck, MacDonald and his crew climbed into the window on the fifth floor where Clark works as a Registered Nurse. Then MacDonald, who wore a tuxedo under his firefighter uniform, proposed. And she said, "Yes!" Gathered after the creative proposal were Mike Bailey (left) of Plymouth Township, Tom Clark of Livonia, Clark of Northville, MacDonald and Ken Jones of Livonia. Not shown is firefighter Frank Szczewzyk who was manning the fire truck.

Area churches join Salvation Army project

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

Salvation Army officials have challenged Westland businesses to participate in a jobs program by hiring people, training them and serving as mentors.

The program, called "Project Zero" is a partnership between the Salvation Army and the Michigan Family Independence Agency, designed to pull people out of the welfare system and into jobs and self-sufficiency.

The FIA is the former state Department of Social Services, which deals with distribution of welfare funds, and is now working with a reduced state program.

Westland Salvation Army officials explained the program to members of the Westland Chamber of Commerce and their guests during the group's March luncheon at the Hellenic Center on Joy Road.

"Project Zero is about helping people in the community," said Leau'rette Douglas, outreach specialist for the Westland Salvation Army, who referred to those being served by the program as "achievers."

"We help them set goals . . . realize the barriers they have," she added. "We help them to . . . move from dependency to sufficiency."

There are currently more than 300 people in the program and of those, 50 percent are matched with mentors for training and job placement. More than 60 jobs have already been offered through the program, and some 100 area people have volunteered as mentors.

"A lot of our achievers need jobs, a lot are persons who have been in the workplace but . . . ended up in the system," she added.

A group of Wayne-Westland and Romulus leaders met last June to launch the program, which offers people leaving the welfare environment a combination of social, emotional and job-related support, said Cpt. Mark Welsh of the Westland Salvation Army.

"We saw some great needs we are looking into and this is one of them," Welsh said.

Although many of the mentors for the program were sought through area churches and other religious groups, Welsh said that those in the business community are also welcome to serve as mentors.

"Many people in our business community have some outstanding skills they can offer," he said.

For this program, the Westland Salvation Army is working through churches in Wayne, Westland, Romulus, Inkster, Canton and new Boston, Welsh said.

For more information about the Project Zero program, call (313) 722-3660.

GOP commissioners oppose spending plan

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Wayne County commissioners approved a five-year $31 million recreation plan Thursday, but they also authorized a $250,000 limit on what County Executive Edward McNamara can spend in contracts for capital improvement projects under the plan.

They also approved a memo of understanding with the city of Detroit for parks improvements. The plan and the memo were criticized by two Republican commissioners from western Wayne County.

Commissioner Bernard Parker, D-Detroit, amended the capital improvements plan to include the cap.

That limit may conflict with a purchasing ordinance, however, and the commission may need a legal clarification on that issue before it is officially enacted.

Commissioners approved the following contracts:

■ McNamee, Porter & Seeley, Inc. of Detroit, for $2.5 million to act as program manager of the five-year parks capital improvement program.

■ R.J. Thomas Manufacturing Co. of Cherokee, Idaho, for $98,433 to provide 220 outdoor charcoal grills and 1,000 picnic table frames for the Department of Public Services, Parks Division.

■ Johnson, Johnson & Roy, Inc. of Detroit, to amend a current contract for $76,817 for additional services in connection with the Inkster Valley Golf Course.

■ Beckett & Raeder, Inc. of Ann Arbor, for $45,500 to update the preparation of a five-year master plan update for the Department of Public Services, Parks Division.

Backing the agreement between Detroit and Wayne County were Detroit Democrats and suburban Democrats Kay Beard, Edward Boike, Christopher Cavanagh, Susan Hubbard, William O'Neil and Michelle Plawecki.

Opposing the memo was Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, and abstaining was Bruce Patterson, R-Canton. McCotter and Patterson also opposed the five-year plan, while the same Democratic contingent supported it.

McCotter opposed the Beckett & Raeder contract, the McNamee contract and the Johnson, Johnson & Roy contract. Patterson opposed or abstained from several of those contracts as well, but supported the McNamee contract.

McCotter said his position remains unchanged from last year when he opposed the millage because he was concerned at that time that voters would be subsidizing Detroit parks. He opposed the contracts and the five-year plan on Thursday for the same reason.

"The memo means that west-

Anyone who thinks gangs are not in local suburban neighborhoods or that their kids aren't involved with them, Tom Lewis wants them to perhaps take a second look.

Lewis, a delinquency service worker for the state of Michigan and a probation officer for Wayne County's juvenile court, handles about 35 juveniles in a geographic area consisting of western Wayne and Downriver communities at the Western Wayne-Family Independence Agency in Taylor.

Lewis acknowledged that the gang problem exists in all the suburbs - from the northern enclaves to the west and east sides, and the Downriver communities.

Hillegonds to speak at S'craft

Paul Hillegonds, the new president of Detroit Renaissance and former speaker of the Michigan House of Representatives, will be this year's commencement speaker at Schoolcraft College.

Ceremonies are set for Saturday, May 3, in the physical education building. Approximately 950 students are expected to graduate.

Detroit Renaissance is a non-profit civic organization comprised of chief executives from Metro Detroit's largest companies. As president, Hillegonds is charged with tapping corporate resources to foster economic development and urban renewal.

Hillegonds, a Plymouth Township resident, was first elected to the state House in 1978 from Allegan County. He served in the House until 1996, with terms as Republican leader, co-speaker and speaker.

CROWNING GLORY

Those patients who prefer tooth-colored restorations may be interested to know that significant advances have been made in the fabrication of porcelain crowns. Traditionally, a metal substructure was needed to support the porcelain crown. Today, however, the crowns themselves can be reinforced with Lucite and a tooth-colored core material, thereby eliminating the need for the quite-visible metal architecture. In addition, the newer materials sometimes make it possible to prepare teeth more conservatively than with conventional crowns before the crown is bonded with a resin cement which is tooth-colored. It should be noted that crowns paired with metal substructures are not obsolete. They are still used in restorations of heavy-wear teeth.

At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES we discuss all the treatment options available, and our recommendations are always in the best interest of our patients. April 2 skateathon at JLA will benefit Make-A-Wish

Several Red Wing players, sports celebrities and former hockey great Gordie Howe will appear at the first annual Elysia Pefley Skateathon Wednesday, April 2 from 3 to 9 p.m. at the Joe Louis Arena.

Presented by the Hockey Academy of Toronto, the skateathon will benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan and the Pediatric Oncology Group. The event is named after a child who lost a battle with progeria last year.

Progeria is a rare disease which causes a child to age rapidly. Metro Detroiters John Tacket and Danielle Reinhart continue to battle the disease.

Elysia also loved hockey, so organizers thought a skateathon was an appropriate fund-raiser to battle this disease.

Anyone who raises $50 or more in donations will skate at the Joe Louis Arena, be served refreshments and given a T-shirt to commemorate the event.

Scheduled to appear are: Darren McCarty, Joe Kocur and Kris Draper, members of the Red Wing Alumni, members of the Detroit Lions and Tigers, and other sports celebrities. Gordie and Colleen Howe will be autographing their book "...and Howe!"

A silent auction, 50/50 drawing and fund and games are scheduled. Prizes will be awarded for top individual and team donation raisers.

House OKs tuition tax credit

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

■ 'The (governor's) budget is designed with significant tax cuts in place. We will not support any more.'

Madhu Anderson
–treasury department

Parents of college students will get bigger state income tax breaks if a House-passed bill survives in the Senate and becomes law.

House Democrats kept Republicans from turning a fairly simple bill into a Christmas tree of ornaments and won 94-13 passage on March 19.

The bill would 1) double the income tax credit to $500 from $250 per student per year and 2) remove the requirement that the college keep its annual tuition increase below the rate of consumer price inflation.

Supporter Barbara Dobb, R-Union Lake, replied, This law did nothing for your constituents until it was amended (by the new bill). This removes the cap and raises the credit to $500."

"I'm opposed. It contains perverse incentives," said Rep. Don Gilmer, R-Augusta. "It tells colleges that if you raise your tuition and fees, you'll be rewarded.

"The cost will be $35 million, almost triple the general fund increase proposed by the governor for community colleges."

Gilmer was joined by 11 other Republicans and one Democrat in voting no. Area representatives voting no were Patricia Godchaux, R-Birmingham, and Shirley Johnson, R-Royal Oak. All others voted yes.

The bill would amend a law sponsored last year by Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton. But the overwhelming vote on final passage belied the fierce, two-hour debate over Republican amendments.

Among the rejected amendments:

■Rep. Nancy Cassis, R-Novi, sought to reinsert the ban on tax credits where students attend public colleges that failed to keep tuition hikes below the rate of inflation. The current law eliminates students at Oakland University, the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor, UM-Flint, Central Michigan and Schoolcraft College.

The Cassis amendment failed 42-63. Supporters included Republicans Lyn Bankes of Redford, Alan Cropsey of DeWitt, Frank Fitzgerald of Grand Ledge, Patricia Godchaux of Birmingham, Dan Gustafson of Williamston, Shirley Johnson of Royal Oak, Greg Kaza of Rochester Hills, Tom Middleton of Ortonville, Andrew Raczkowski of Farmington Hills, Judith Scranton of Brighton and Deborah Whyman of Canton.

■ A similar Cassis amendment requiring colleges to cap tuition at 3 percent or the rate of the consumer price index failed by a similar vote.

■ Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, came closer, getting 47 votes for her amendment to include on-campus room and board as well as tuition and fees for tax credits.

■ A shouting match erupted over a GOP amendment to extend the tax credit to students at private trade schools. Democrat Tom Mathieu of Grand Rapids objected, "We shouldn't steal money from the community colleges and give it to some rinky-dink school that you think should be aided."

"It goes to the taxpayer, not the institution," replied Republican Alan Cropsey of DeWitt. "Your bill is targeted only to those approved by the State Board of Education." The GOP amendment got 37 votes, 18 short of approval.

Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, tax policy chair who shepherded the bill through to passage, said super-inflationary tuition increases were the fault of "20 years of failed state appropriations," not greed or mismanagement by colleges. "In the last five years, we've had zero, zero, 3 and 5 percent increases for higher education."

"I'm surprised the other side (Republicans) didn't propose pencils (for tax credits)," Profit said.

As passed by the House, the bill likely would be vetoed by Gov. John Engler.

"The (governor's) budget is designed with significant tax cuts in place. We will not support any more," said Madhu Anderson, the former Farmington Hills resident who is a top official in the Treasury Department.

Refer to House Bill 4191 when writing to your state senator. State Capitol, Lansing 48909.

McCotter aims to elect more Republicans

Thaddeus McCotter has been unanimously elected the chair of the Wayne County Republican Committee (WCRC).

McCotter's election, a Wayne County Commissioner from Livonia, drew praise from the Committee's founder and former Chair, Edward L. Haroutunian.

"Thaddeus is a proven leader and winner," Haroutunian said.

"These qualities, combined with his vision and dedication, will enable him to continue the process of building our party in Wayne County – the county that in the past two elections has given more votes to John Engler than any other county in the state of Michigan."

On his part, McCotter characteristically set a straight-forward goal for the committee: "We must work to elect more Republicans at all governmental levels. We will dedicate every effort to this paramount goal, and we will succeed."

The WCRC also elected the following individuals to its executive committee: Margy Van Houten of Dearborn Heights will serve as first vice chair; Mel Byrd of Detroit will serve as second vice chair;

Also elected were Richard Grimes of Grosse Pointe will serve as treasurer, and Don Knapp of Livonia.

McCotter praised the new executive committee members.

"These individuals possess exceptional talents that, now combined, constitute a powerful new force in the Republican Party.

I am honored to be afforded the opportunity to work with them on behalf of our party's candidates and causes."

rn Wayne County will be used o subsidize the city of Detroit," cCotter said. "Voters were told hese were for parks improvements for Wayne County, but he reality is why are we being axed to fund parks in the city of Detroit?

"Those are city parks, not ounty parks. You don't see hem funding city parks in Canton, Northville or Livonia, do ou?"

The millage will be used to finance an estimated $13.7 million in improvements at Chandler, Mariner and Historic Fort Wayne in Detroit.

The 1/4 mill costs the owner of a $100,000 home or a taxable value of $50,000 about $12.50 a year in property taxes.

McCotter said he still wants to work to repeal the parks millage. He believes administrative and overhead costs are too high for the county parks.

At the meeting McCotter also asked Hurley Coleman, director of Wayne County parks, where the picnic tables and grills would be installed. Coleman assured him the tables and grills would be installed all over Wayne County parks, including along Hines Drive and Bell Creek in Redford.

Commission Chairman Ricardo Solomon suggested earlier that commissioners create a special subcommittee to monitor the Wayne County parks improvement plan to be sure all the parks in Wayne County are improved.

Patterson said the parks issue is a "problematic one" for him. "My district voted overwhelmingly against it, and I suppose it could be a vote of protest," Patterson said. "But my feeling is the plan doesn't even account for all the revenue that is projected from the millage."

Patterson said the 1/4 mill should generate $41 million. The plan accounts for $27 million spent from the millage with the remainder from grants and other sources. "You have $14 million that isn't in the plan yet, so how can you call it a plan?" Patterson asked.

Coleman called McCotter's opinion a "wrong opinion." Wayne County parks are for Wayne County residents, Coleman said.

Detroit residents have subsidized Wayne County parks for years without benefiting from local improvements because many Detroiters believe Nankin Mills is a Westland park and Bell Creek is a Redford Park, Coleman said.

"If he wants to talk about subsidy, the county has never spent any dollars in parks in Detroit since the parks were first established 78 years ago," Coleman said. "Money has never been spent in parks north of Jeffries and east of Telegraph, and you haven't heard any complaints from the citizens in Detroit."

Chandler Park will soon house a waterpark that all Wayne County residents can enjoy, Coleman said.

Coleman responded to Patterson's remarks by stating that millage money will be earmarked for operations to improve staffing and maintenance of current park facilities.

Park users should notice improved maintenance on lawns and rest room facilities, Coleman said.

Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, called the proposed improvements a good plan for Wayne County. Plawecki also chairs the Committee on Roads, Airports and Public Services. That committee held hearings on the plan.

"The capital improvement plan expedites matters for us," Plawecki said. "I really don't think they need to come back to (the full commission)."

Plawecki hoped to outline a commission subcommittee soon to oversee the projects. If commissioners are unhappy with particular projects or want to change the plan, it can be amended, she said.

tributes to the proliferation of gangs is the denial that there is a problem," Lewis said. "And there is a problem."

Lewis suspects that as many as 60 gangs are operating in the Detroit area and its suburbs. He doesn't have an accurate account of gang members, but wants parents, teenagers and young children to learn about gangs at a conference to "Protect Our Kids and Neighborhoods" on Wednesday, April 2 at Wayne State University's McGregor Memorial Conference Center.

Residents in suburban communities should be concerned, Lewis said, "because of the growing number of teenage gangs that are pervasive and because it's growing nationwide. The increase in teenage gangs is a phenomenon growing everywhere."

Lewis has been a social worker for the state of Michigan for eight years and a social worker for about 18 years. "The kids I'm coming in contact with are from dysfunctional homes or a lot of them are declared incorrigible by their own parents and come in contact with the law.

"Kids from dysfunctional families make them vulnerable to gangs, because gangs, in a perverse way, are replacements for their families. Kids join gangs because they look for 'love' and attention."

The three-hour conference starts at 6 p.m. It will feature topics on how to tell if your child belongs to a gang and what families and parents can do about gangs, Lewis said.

The forum will feature Dr. Carl Taylor, a criminologist and professor at Michigan State University, and Alex Montaneer, a gang mediator. Shawn Jacques, a prosecutor from the juvenile court in Wayne County, members of the gang squad from the Detroit Police Department also will be attending, along with a child psychologist and former gang members who will speak about their experiences, Lewis said.

Lewis said suburban communities have a hard time accepting the universal problem of gangs and added that the problem doesn't stop at a community's borders.

"Two main national gangs are named 'Folks' and 'People.' These gangs are organizing subgangs and they have organized a major drug distribution network."

"It's almost like a secret society that nobody knows about."

Lewis also said some gang members are using Satanic rituals in their initiations. Lewis knew of one gang member who tried to steal body parts out of a cemetery. Usually, potential gang members are initiated by either getting beat up by gang members or participating in Satanic rituals, Lewis said.

"Gangs are involved in many of the violent crimes in our communities: drug distribution, muggings and B and Es (breaking and entering). You name it, and they're involved."

Admission is free, but members of the public will be asked for a $3 donation. The McGregor Conference Center is located at 495 West Ferry Mall at Cass and Palmer Streets on the campus of Wayne State University.

Anyone interested in attending the forum can call (313) 931-1591 for information.

CARRIER OF THE MONTH: CANTON

Matt Kardel, 14, of Canton was named carrier of the month for March. He started his Canton Observer route in September of 1995. He is a ninth grader and home schools. He delivers his route in the Arbor Village and Canton Country Acres subdivisions. His parents are Dan and Laura Kardel. He has three brothers, Kevin, 13, Steven, 10, and Scott, 1.

His favorite subjects are math and science. His hobbies are fishing, hockey, and attending church activities. His future plans include attending the Air Force Academy.

He likes most about his route the chance it gives him to meet people and that he can be more independent financially. He has learned responsibility, accountability, and learning how to deal with people while delivering his Observer route. He feels that other young people could benefit by the same things that have benefited him.

Don't let green eggs and ham spoil your Easter holiday

Glazed ham and colorful decorated eggs are an Easter tradition for many families. Ham or hard-cooked eggs seem to bring a little "country" to our festive tables, but both of these foods are perishable and need to be treated with care.

To hard-cook eggs, place raw eggs in a pan of cold water and heat until water boils. Immediately reduce heat to keep the water at a simmer, and cook for 20 minutes. Never boil eggs so hard they bounce around in the pan:

Cool eggs in their shell in an open container in the refrigerator. Water cooling is not recommended because the cooking has removed the natural coating from the egg shells so they are more susceptible to bacteria. When cooled, decorate eggs with pure food colorings or dyes formulated with food-grade colorants. Don't store decorated eggs at room temperature.

Storage rules

Decorated hard-cooked eggs should be stored in the refrigerator, before decorating, and after decorating.

Two hours out of refrigeration is the limit for food safety. If the two-hour limit is a problem, color two sets of eggs, one for eating and one for egg hunts or displaying. Clearly mark which is which, and toss eggs after the hunt is over. Hard-cooked eggs should be kept no longer than one week.

Some other egg-handling tips are:

- Do not peel hard-cooked eggs until you are ready to use them.
- Don't worry about the dark ring that forms around the yolk after hard cooking: it's harmless. The ring is caused by an interaction between the iron and sulfur in the egg.

Holiday centerpiece

Ham is a family favorite for Sunday and holiday dinners. The appeal of ham is that you can add your own personal touch. Honey, brown sugar, molasses or jellies can be used as a glaze or garnish. Fresh fruits including kumquats, grapes, spiced crabapples, dried fruits, herbs and seasoning blends, which all give ham wonderful flavor, can be used.

Fully cooked, cook before eating, country-style, picnic, canned, bone-in, or boneless are just a few of the choices greeting you at the ham counter. Choosing a ham to fit your taste and budget isn't easy. Once you've made your decision and the ham is in the grocery cart, maintaining its wholesomeness is up to you. Store ham properly, cook it thoroughly and handle leftovers with care.

Fully cooked hams or "ready to eat" are the most available hams in the market. That's because there is no necessary cooking before serving. However, heating ham to an internal temperature of 140 degrees F. will improve the flavor and texture. Heat ham in a 325-degree F. oven on a rack, uncovered.

For a whole ham, allow 15 to 18 minutes per pound. Remove ham from oven about 30 minutes before it's done, add glaze or decorate, and return to oven. A simple glaze can be made by combining one-half cup of brown sugar, two tablespoons orange or pineapple juice and one-half teaspoon dried mustard.

Cook-before-eating hams need to be cooked to an internal temperature of 160 degrees F. Place ham on a rack in a shallow pan and bake in a 325-degree F. oven. Allow 10-20 minutes per pound ham.

After cooking, ham will keep four to five days. Most hams have a label, read the instructions for heating and storage.

Here's a buying chart, don't forget to allow extra for leftovers:

- Bone-in-ham provides 2-3 servings per pound.
- Boneless ham – 4-5 servings per pound.
- Semi-boneless – 3-4 servings per pound.

Ham does not freeze well, so plan to eat it rather than freeze. If you have to freeze ham, it is better mixed in a casserole or with other foods than by itself. Freeze ham in big chunks rather than slices and use within two months. Flavors change in ham that is frozen for too long.

A rainbow or iridescent sheen can sometimes appear on sliced ham, but it is harmless. This is merely a light refraction on the fat film. It is not a food safety issue. If you have a canned ham left-over from Christmas, check the "best if used by date."

Lois Thieleke of Birmingham is a home economist for the Michigan State University Oakland County Cooperative Extension.

Eggcellent dishes shine Easter Sunday

BY RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON
SPECIAL WRITER

Easter morning seems to bring out baskets of eggs, and not just from the Easter bunny. An "eggcellent" adventure for breakfast or brunch is the perfect way to start the day.

With lives on the fast track, simple, elegant meals are the way to go, just ask Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara and his wife Lucille, or Betty-Lee Seydler Sweatt of Franklin, assistant dean in the College of Architecture and Design at Lawrence Technological University in Southfield.

Easter Sunday is filled with family at the McNamara's home in Livonia – "hundreds of kids," said Mr. McNamara with a big grin, as Mrs. McNamara corrects him gently saying, "it's really ten or twelve."

The McNamaras have five grown children, three of whom are married, and three grandchildren ages 10, 7 and 2.

"Now that the kids are all grown, I don't do the cooking I used to. Ed and I go out to eat often," said Mrs. McNamara as she places her beautifully browned egg casserole on the dining room table. The casserole made with eggs, sausage, milk and bread was featured in the Observer & Eccentric Newspaper years ago, and is often requested by readers.

"This is a favorite recipe," she said. "What's great about it is everyone loves it, and I can prepare it the night before."

Mrs. McNamara serves the casserole on a beautifully set table with orange juice, Mimosa's (orange juice mixed with champagne) for grown-ups, fresh fruit – either sliced, or tossed in a salad, sweet rolls, toast and jellies. This lovely holiday meal, is fast and easy to prepare, leaving the hostesses time to share with family members.

Betty-Lee Seydler Sweatt is of the same philosophy. Light, delicious, and easy to prepare dishes are her choice for holiday meals. In her beautifully remodeled kitchen, she quickly prepares shirred eggs. The tarragon cream topping is made ahead of time, and spooned over eggs, which are popped into the oven, and baked for 10 minutes.

When preparing shirred eggs for holiday and guest breakfasts, she adds freshly baked, crusty bread made in her trusty Panasonic Bread Machine, flavored tea, and like the McNamaras, fresh fruit.

"Sometimes I like to add a brightly colored, flavorful gelatin salad with lots of fruit, other times a tropical fruit salad seems to be the right choice," said Betty-Lee as she sets the large oval dining room table that overlooks a beautifully landscaped tiered stone backdrop. Her two grown sons, one of whom lives in Japan with his wife and 21/2 -year-old son, aren't around much. Today, most of Betty-Lee's entertaining revolves around close friends.

"Being so scheduled, I love to entertain, but I need to keep my menus simple, and interesting," she said.

Cooking tips

- Quiches, egg casseroles and baked custards are done when a knife inserted comes out clean. Use a food thermometer if in doubt: Salmonella organisms will not survive if the end-point temperature is 160 degrees F.
- Soft custards are done when they coat the back of a spoon – the temperature is usually about 160 degrees F. at that point.
- Cook scrambled eggs, frittatas, and omelets until the eggs are thickened and there is no visible liquid egg remaining.
- Poached eggs should have completely set whites and thickened yolks.
- Fried eggs should be cooked slowly until whites are completely set and yolks are thickened.

Traditional foods are a family affair

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

In our family, ham, kielbasa and Easter are synonymous. Once I suggested replacing the ham on our menu with turkey or roast chicken, which are lighter and lower in fat. My mother-in-law had a fit. "Easter without ham is not Easter," she said. "It's a tradition."

Another year my sister-in-law tried to meet her halfway. She served lamb as the main course, and a "ceremonial plate" of blessed ham, hard-cooked eggs, and kielbasa.

That didn't go over too well with my mother-in-law either. It's not good to mess with tradition.

"We generally have ham, probably because my parents had it," said Jane Wojtan of Livonia. "We make our own kielbasa, and an Easter Soup – kielbasa broth, sliced kielbasa, chopped ham, and chopped, blessed hard-cooked eggs. It's thickened with sour cream, and a variation of my mother's recipe."

Sandy Simpson, and her children, Becky, Mark and Kim, who live in Farmington Hills, also have ham on Easter. "It was always the thing," said Sandy, my father-in-law's niece.

Last year, Sandy's foot flared up making it difficult for her to navigate around the kitchen. "The kids made dinner," she said. "It was wonderful. I still talk about it."

Mark made the ham, glazed with brown sugar and Vernors and a turkey breast. His sisters made the mashed potatoes, vegetables, and salad.

Kathy Wilson of Livonia, my mother-in-law's niece, wouldn't dare serve anything but ham and kielbasa on Easter, although she's thought about it. "Everyone is concerned about fat, but if you suggest anything else they whine, and say 'what no ham and kielbasa?'"

Easter is the holiest holiday of the year in Polish households. Like spring it is a time of renewal and rebirth. During holy week we'll fast, attend church services, and reflect on whether or not this has been a good Lenten journey – one that made us a better person.

On holy Saturday my father-in-law will put a fine white linen cloth in our biggest basket, fill it with slices of ham, kielbasa, hard-cooked eggs, pickled beets, sweet bread, butter lamb and horseradish, and take it to our church, St. Barbara's in Dearborn, to be blessed.

In the morning, on Easter Sunday, before dinner, we'll peel some of the blessed hard-cooked eggs, cut them into quarters, and arrange them on a platter with sprigs of fresh dill. My father-in-law, the head of our household, will offer one egg quarter to each dinner

Make glazed ham the centerpiece of your meal

SPIRAL-SLICED HAM WITH HONEY-APRICOT GLAZE

1 (10 to 14-pound) spiral-sliced, fully-cooked smoked ham
1 cup honey
1 (6-ounce) can frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed
1/3 cup soy sauce
1/3 cup apricot jam
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Place ham on rack in shallow roasting pan. Mix together remaining ingredients in medium bowl; set aside. Bake ham for 30 minutes; pour glaze over ham and continue to bake until ham is heated through, about a total of 1 to 1 1/2 hours. Serves 14.

PEACH CHUTNEY

1 (1 pound) can peach slices in natural juice, drained
3/4 cup cider vinegar
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 small onion, minced
1 apple, peeled, cored and coarsely chopped
1 teaspoon pickling spices
Juice of 1/2 lemon

Chop peaches coarsely. Combine with remaining ingredients in large saucepan; simmer 20 minutes or until thickened slightly. Cool and cover until serving. Serve at room temperature. Makes 2 cups.

TINY PEAS WITH MINT

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup diced onion
1 1/2 teaspoons grated lemon zest
2 (10 ounce) boxes frozen tiny peas, thawed
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint

In a medium saucepan, melt butter over low heat. Add the onion and lemon zest and cook gently, stirring occasionally, until onion is soft, but not browned, about 4 minutes. Add the peas to the pot and stir to combine thoroughly.

Season with salt and pepper and cook, stirring, for about 5 minutes or until the peas are heated through. Stir in mint and serve immediately. Serves 8.

GINGERED CARROTS

1 1/2 pounds carrots, pared and sliced
1 cup chicken broth
1 (3-inch) piece fresh ginger, peeled and sliced into 1/4-inch slices
1 tablespoon butter
Dash red pepper flakes
2 tablespoons honey
1 clove minced garlic

Combine the carrots, chicken stock, ginger, butter, red pepper, honey and garlic in a medium saucepan.

Bring to a boil, lower heat and continue cooking the carrots at a simmer, uncovered. Cook for 10 to 15 minutes or until carrots are soft and nicely glazed. Serves 8.

WARM NEW POTATO SALAD WITH CHIVES

2 pound red new potatoes
1/4 cup cider vinegar
1/3 cup olive oil
Seasoned salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste
1/3 cup chopped fresh chives

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water in a large saucepan for 20 to 25 minutes, until tender when pierced.

Drain the potatoes and cut them in half (if potatoes are large, cut into wedges) and place in a shallow serving bowl.

While potatoes are warm, sprinkle with vinegar and oil, toss well and season to taste with salt and pepper. Toss gain with chives and serve immediately. Serves 8.

SPINACH-STRAWBERRY SALAD

8 cups fresh spinach leaves, stems removed, washed
1 pint strawberries, hulled, washed and sliced
1/4 cup sliced almonds, toasted
4 tablespoons olive oil
4 tablespoons raspberry vinegar
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
Dash nutmeg
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Dry spinach leaves and tear into bite-sized pieces; place in serving bowl and toss with strawberries and almonds.

Combine remaining ingredients in small dish, whisk thoroughly. Toss salad with dressing and serve immediately. Serves. 8.

guest. He'll say – "Wesolego Alleluja," the traditional Polish Easter greeting, and wish everyone good health and happiness. We'll eat our piece of egg, and count our blessings.

My mother-in-law is right, it's important to observe traditions. They give us continuity, define who we are, and give us something to look forward to. Like my sister-in-law's delicious mushroom soup, made with imported, dried Polish mushrooms, which she makes only on Christmas Eve.

"We carry on the traditions our parents brought with them from Poland," said Jane Wojtan. "They're special." Her husband, Edward adds, "It reminds you of the way your mother and father did things when you were kids. It's a continuity of our heritage and family relationships."

Side dishes are another matter all together.

As long as ham and kielbasa are part of the menu with pickled beets, horseradish, hard-cooked eggs, and "Babka" (sweet bread) my mother-in-law is happy.

Traditions can be improved upon, and the Michigan Pork Producers Association suggests this hassle-free menu, that even my mother-in-law would approve of:

Spiral-Sliced Ham with Honey-Apricot Glaze

Peach Chutney

Freshly Baked Biscuits
Tiny Peas with Mint
Gingered Carrots
Warm New Potato Salad with Chives
Spinach-Strawberry Salad

Polish side dishes can't be 'beet'

RED BEETS WITH HORSERADISH

3 cups cooked or canned red beets, drained and coarsely chopped
6 ounces prepared cream-style horseradish
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon vinegar
1/4 teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients. Cover; refrigerate 3 days. Serve with cold meats.

STUFFED EGG SHELLS

3 hard-cooked eggs, unpeeled
2 tablespoons dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon chopped green onion
Salt to taste
Freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Fold a cloth towel in several layers. Holding the towel in 1 hand, place 1 unpeeled egg on towel. Hold egg lengthwise. With a heavy, sharp knife, split egg lengthwise halfway through with a firm stroke of the knife.

Firmly cut the rest of the way through so shell does not break apart. Repeat with remaining eggs.

Carefully remove egg whites and yolks from shells. Reserve shells intact.

In a small bowl, chop egg whites and yolks together. Stir in sour cream, 1 tablespoon bread crumbs and green onion. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Carefully pack equal amounts of egg mixture into each egg shell. Place remaining bread crumbs on a small plate. Dip flat surface of each stuffed shell in bread crumbs. Lightly press bread crumbs into egg mixture.

Melt butter or margarine in medium skilled. Place stuffed egg shells, flat-side down, in skillet. Cook over medium heat 2 to 3 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve immediately. Makes 6 appetizers.

Wash fruits and vegetables before using

Should you wash cantaloupe before cutting? "Yes!" says Sylvia Treitman, home economist for the Michigan State University Extension - Oakland County. "It sounds unlikely that you could get food poisoning from fruits or vegetables, but it has happened," said Treitman.

There have been reported cases of Salmonelia, Listeria, Campylobacter, and E. coli from fruit and vegetable contamination. Contamination occurs when produce falls on fertilized soil or is handled by someone with dirty hands.

Cooking kills most bacteria, but fresh fruit and salad foods need other precautions since they are eaten uncooked. Thorough washing of produce can help to reduce bacteria.

Additional tips to prevent food poisoning.

- Rinse all fruits and vegetables with cold running water, never use soap or bleach (this can cause more problems)
- Keep produce away from raw meat, poultry, seafood. Use a separate clean cutting board for meat and poultry and seafood and one for fruits, vegetables and breads.
- Rinse rinds of watermelon, cantaloupe, oranges etc. very well with cold water and use a vegetable brush to scrub surfaces before cutting.
- Discard outer leaves of lettuce before washing.
- Wash hands often between cutting fruit or vegetables and eating them. Bacteria on the rind can spread to your hands and from there to the part that

Entertain easily with eggs

THE MCNAMARA'S EGG CASSEROLE (STRATA)

8 slices white bread, crusts removed
1 pound regular link sausage (casing removed) or bulk sausage, well browned and drained
1/2 pound spicy link sausage (casing removed) or bulk sausage, well browned and drained
5 large eggs, lightly beaten
2 1/2 cups milk
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
Salt and pepper to taste (optional)
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
1 1/2 cans cream of mushroom soup (undiluted)
1 can button mushrooms, drained, or fresh mushrooms (as many as you like) lightly sauteed.
Parsley for garnish

Butter or grease a 9 by 13-inch ovenproof casserole dish. Place the crustless bread in the casserole dish. Combine sausage, and place the drained sausage over the bread.

In a bowl, combine the eggs, milk, dry mustard, salt and pepper. Mix all ingredients well. Pour the egg mixture over the bread and sausage.

Sprinkle the grated cheese on top, then cover and refrigerate overnight.

Before baking, preheat oven to 300 degrees F. Pour the canned soup and mushrooms over the refrigerated egg and sausage mixture.

Loosely cover casserole with boil and bake for 1 hour – remove foil and continue to bake for 1/2 hour longer. When mixture appears firm and golden, remove from the oven. Garnish with parsley or any fresh green leafy herb. Serves 6-8.

BETTY-LEE SEYDLER-SWEATT'S SHIRRED TARRAGON CREAM EGGS

Unsalted butter (for greasing gratin's)
2 (half pint cartons) heavy cream (whipping cream)
3 to 4 sprigs of fresh tarragon, reserve 8 leaves of garnish
16 eggs, room temperature
Sea salt and white pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F.

In a saucepan, over medium heat, add 3 to 4 sprigs fresh tarragon (or to taste) to heavy cream. Heat, do not boil. This infusion will flavor the cream. Set aside to cool down.

Butter or grease 8 gratin dishes (or any individual portion ovenproof dishes).

Into each buttered dish gently break 2 eggs, side by side.

Season eggs with salt and white pepper. Gently spoon 2 to 4 tablespoons (according to taste) cooled down tarragon flavored cream over the eggs.

Bake the eggs for 8 minutes. Top each dish with a fresh tarragon leaf and return to the oven for 2 more minutes. If you want your eggs browned, place them under the broiler, just to lightly brown. Serve immediately. Serves 8.

EASY FOOL-PROOF CHEESE SOUFFLE

6 extra large eggs
1/2 cup whipping cream
1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon prepared mustard (any type – flavored or plain)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
8 ounces cheddar cheese or any other semi-hard cheese
11 ounces cream cheese or Neufchatel cheese
1 tablespoon butter

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F.

Butter a large oven-proof souffle dish.

In the canister of a blender, or bowl of a food processor, place the eggs, whipping cream, Parmesan cheese, mustard, salt and pepper. Process or blend.

Add cheddar cheese. Process or blend.

Add the cream cheese and remaining butter. Process or blend.

Pour mixture into souffle dish. Bake the souffle for 40-45 minutes, until firm and lightly golden. Let stand just a moment and serve hot. Serves 4-6.

*This souffle can be prepared the night before – leave all the mixed ingredients right in the blender canister and refrigerate. When ready to bake, pour into the buttered souffle dish.

Festive frittata wakes up appetites

The sauce is made with peppers, diced Roma tomatoes, onion, fresh basil and Italian sausage.

The recipe was the first-place winner of a recent bed and breakfast recipe contest sponsored by Jones Dairy Farm.

The recipe was submitted by Garratt Mansion, a bread and breakfast located in Alameda, Calif.

BASIL FRITTATA WITH SAUSAGE AND FRESH VEGETABLE SAUCE

For the sauce:
8-ounce package Italian sausage
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 garlic clove, minced
5 medium green, sweet red or yellow bell peppers, seeded and sliced lengthwise (about 1/4 inch)
4 cups medium diced Roma tomatoes
1/2 cup finely chopped fresh basil
1 tablespoon sugar
1 1/4 teaspoons salt
For the frittata:
10 eggs
3/4 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
1/2 cup finely chopped green onion
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

For the sauce: In a skillet, cook sausages according to package directions; cool. Cut sausages into 1-inch pieces. In the same skillet, melt butter, saute onion and garlic until transparent. Add peppers. Continue to cook 5 minutes.

Stir in tomatoes, basil, sugar and salt. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, add sausages. Simmer until excess liquid is reduced by half. The sauce can be prepared in advance, stored in refrigerator and reheated.

For the frittata: In a mixing bowl, whisk eggs, sour cream, basil, salt and pepper. In a 10-inch nonstick, ovenproof skillet, saute onion for 1 minute. Pour egg mixture into skillet. Cook over medium heat until eggs are set and light brown on bottom, about 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from heat. Sprinkle with cheese.

Preheat broiler; place skillet 6 inches from heat for 2 minutes or until cheese melts. Serve immediately with sauce. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Beanie Babies: Hard to resist, hard to find

BY DONNA MULCAHY
SPECIAL WRITER

Forget about "Tickle Me Elmo." What many kids hope to find in their Easter baskets this year are "Beanie Babies."

What are they? They're soft and cuddly stuffed animals that fit in the palm of your hand. They're filled with beans (the kind found in bean bags) and they come in more than 100 animal, fish and insect shapes, including: a lobster, penguin, flamingo, lamb, armadillo, hippo, octopus, worm, dogs, bears, bunnies, cats — the list goes on and on.

Like Cabbage Patch dolls, each one is slightly different from the rest and they all have names and "birth dates." But unlike Cabbage Patch dolls and Tickle Me Elmo, they're inexpensive, selling for only about $5 each.

The problem is trying to find them. Most gift stores in this area carry Beanie Babies, but they're selling out just as fast as they come in.

"I got two boxes of them last week and they sold out within two hours," said Frank Madany, owner of The Country Peddler at Livonia Mall. Each box contained 100 of the critters.

"We're Out of Beanie Babies" signs could be seen all over Livonia Mall and Westland Shopping Center last week.

At Thomas Hallmark in Westland, the phone was ringing off the hook March 15. What most callers wanted was obvious by the way salesperson Priscilla Langdon answered the phone: "Thomas Hallmark, we're out of Beanie Babies, may I help you?"

Jamie Wicker of Canton, a customer who had just walked into the store, was sorry to hear her say that.

"I'm looking for the skunk — I think its name is Stinky — because it has the same birthday as him," Wicker said, nodding toward her 13-month-old son, Austin, who was sitting in his stroller.

Sherry Joyner, a real estate agent with Century 21 Row in Livonia, said she searched far and wide (well, as far as Ann Arbor) for almost a month to find Beanie Babies for her granddaughters, ages 13 and 15, after the girls mentioned that they liked them.

Finally, she was successful. Now, she said, she can spot Beanie Babies hunters just by the glazed look in their eyes.

"Nobody would realize the urgency if they weren't into them," Joyner said. "I wanted to get these for my grandchildren for Easter and that's what all of these other people want to do, too."

On March 15, one place where people could find Beanie Babies was at Johnny Lema's inside the Westland Shopping Center. But getting into the store wasn't easy.

The Beanie Babies were in two large bins near the back of the store, by the cash register. The store got so crowded with people searching or waiting to search through the bins that salespeople roped off the back of the store and let new shoppers through only as old ones left.

Kayla Robertson, 7, of Garden City, and her grandmother, Chris Robertson, were part of the frenzy. Kayla pulled several Beanie Babies out of the bins and her grandmother said she could have them for Easter.

"I like them because they're soft and cute," Kayla said, cradling the creatures in her arms.

She said a lot of kids at her school collect them.

"I have 11 at home," she said. "I have one friend who has 46, and I know of somebody who has 50."

It's not just girls who are collecting them. Boys like them, too.

John Zaccone, 8, of Canton, who was shopping with his mother, Lisa, and 6-year-old brother, Sam, at the Westland Shopping Center, said he owns five Beanie Babies.

He said he likes them because, "When you're lonely, you don't have to feel all alone if you have one of them with you."

Beanie Babies are manufactured by Ty Inc. and are made in China. They're not recommended for children under three, because if even a tiny tear develops in the doll, beans can spill out, creating a choking hazard for small children. On the label, it says that they're for ages 3 and up.

One of the reasons why Beanie Babies are considered to be collectors' items is because some of the pieces have been retired (discontinued). When a piece is retired, its value increases because collectors are willing to pay more for it.

"Some people are selling retired pieces for $500 on the Internet," Madany said.

Hmmm. For $500, I'd rather have a Faberge egg in my Easter basket.

Everyone wants to hit Target

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

It's a shopping phenomenon that's sweeping suburbia.

Eager consumers can't seem to wait for that next weekend Target circular to arrive. Sales on paper products, household goods and kids clothes have made shopping at Target a bi-weekly must for many.

"I really never thought about why too much, but I just love everything about the store," said Kim Statson, a regular at the Target store in Rochester. "I like the prices, the people are friendly, and its like one-stop shopping."

Susan Keyes of Troy echoes those sentiments. When she needs anything, from new shoes to lunch box snacks for her four children, she heads to the local Target. Keyes also eyes the weekly circular to spot sales on other household necessities, like floor mops and hand towels.

"I really like Target. They have better quality in their clothes and it's a better style," said Keyes. "These seem more in tune or more modern then a Meijers or Kmart."

Such compliments are beautiful noise to the ears of Target spokesperson Carolyn Brookter, although hearing from satisfied customers is not something new for the popular chain.

"What we've been told is that it's a very easy shopping experience. There are not a lot of distractions," said Brookter. "We've got clean, wide aisles and the signs are bold and bright and we feel all-of that has helped add to people's confidence in us."

That crisp, friendly feel is definitely paying off for the discount retailer. Target, an operating division of the Dayton Hudson Corporation, currently operates 735 stores in 38 states. The company employs 149,000 people and saw their operating profits jump 45 percent in 1995-96.

"We have been pretty lucky and we've worked hard on our growth strategy, which has been to open about 70 new stores a year," said Brookter.

Nationally, Target earned $17.85 billion in revenues last year. The retailer, which opened its first store in Minnesota in 1962, came to Michigan in 1987. Today, there are 45 locations here.

"The Michigan Target stores are doing very well," said Brookter. "Michigan is a good market for us and we plan to continue to grow there."

Brookter says that the universal question asked about the discount retailer by consumers is, "Why do I go into the store to spend $10 but end up spending $50?"

"I think most people are shopping for the basics, maybe items they saw in our circular, and they go down the next aisle and see something that's a commodity they may not need right then, but it's priced right, so they buy it," theorized Brookter.

"You see the good prices and say 'Why not?' and sometimes it's is something that I might not even need right then," agreed Statson.

Joy Stewart, of Rochester, makes weekly stops at the store. While the prices and quality are appealing, she also applauds Target's friendly service.

One Target shopper's confession

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

I admit it — I'm addicted to Target.

The cozy little chain of stores spun out of the Dayton/Hudson organization has captivated me and my checkbook. And if comments from family members, friends and scuttlebutt in the school parking lot count, I'm not alone.

If I need a birthday card and wrapping paper — Target. If I need toilet paper and toothpaste — Target. If my children need drink boxes and snacks for their lunch — hello, Target. The list just goes on and on.

Truthfully, much of the thrill of pushing my way through those automatic doors at the store has nothing to do with "need." I just love to shop at Target.

Grabbing a cart and heading straight to the nearby snack bar for a frozen Coke gets the shopping experience off to a pleasant start, particularly if I have children in tow.

Most of my visits are prompted by the need for some specific item I've spotted in the sale circular that week. Okay, that's what I tell myself at that time. (It's also what I tell my spouse later as he scans the checkbook register, wondering if we are singlehandedly responsible for the stores' huge success.)

As I make my way down the center aisle headed towards the paper towel display that offers four rolls for three bucks, an imaginary magnet drags my cart towards the junk food section. Pringles, just 99 cents? I'll take two. Cheesy Goldfish crackers, two for $3? Gotta' have them. What? Hostess Cupcakes on this end cap are a mere $1.20? Can't leave for home without them!

And so you see how a typical Target shopping trip can turn the quest for six items under $20 into a cart full of goods costing just under $65. It's a nasty little habit.

Those unfamiliar with this attraction to the store that boasts a bullseye logo may not be able to grasp this "shopping" problem; but I recently found compassion on the Internet.

It seems a woman had popped into her local Target to pick up just two simple items while on her way home from work. Suddenly, a voice over the loudspeaker announced that a chemical spill behind the store would prevent all customers from leaving until the matter was resolved.

Did this woman panic? Did she plot to find her way out of a side door?

No. She promptly grabbed a cart and took off shopping. Two hours and $200 later, she was on her merry way home.

Told-you.

"I find shopping there is convenient and I like that you don't get hassled if you do have to return something," said Stewart, who shops for a family of ten.

"Everybody I know loves to shop there and I always go with friends," added Statson.

Customer surveys conducted by the corporation verify the "everybody" factor, with findings showing that 80 percent of Target shoppers are female, with a median age of 39 and annual income between $25,000 and $75,000.

The Mervyn's chain is also owned by Dayton Hudson, but while that store has improved its popularity over the last several years, it has failed to make as big a splash as Target.

"That's really a different store, though. They are a moderate retailer and we are a discount retailer," explained Brookter. "But where Target is concerned I can say we are certainly holding our own with Wal-Mart and Kmart."

Adding new aspects to the popular store has kept Target outlets busy in the last year. In 1996, they introduced the Lullaby Club, a baby registry for expectant parents, at all of their chains. The retailer is also experimenting with the full service setting, opening eight Super Target stores which feature all of their regular items, plus groceries.

"We are not in the grocery business per se, so we are just trying it out now," said Brookter. "Most of those stores are in Utah."

The opportunity to shop for food, clothes, cards and diapers at Target sounds good to Statson. "If they opened a Super Target here I'd be spending a fortune at Target, that's scary," laughed Statson. "Boy, I'd be there all afternoon."

Artists struggle against the odds

Artists, visual and performing, frequently triumph over obstacles without recognition from the public. Take for instance, the members of the Livonia Symphony Orchestra who were unable to hold a dress rehearsal at Churchill High School prior to their March 15 concert.

The school's power went out during the ice storm on March 13. Orchestra members began calling other venues searching for an alternative space to practice. Finally, a room was offered at Burton Manor in Livonia. The only problem was it was next to the room where a singles night dance was being held. In spite of the noise from the singles dance, the orchestra rehearsed, and presented a heart-warming program of Dvorak, Wagner and von Suppe at their spring concert on March 15.

Tall and Elegant: This color pencil drawing by Judy Granata of Livonia is one of 59 art works on exhibit in the Artifacts Art Club show continuing at Livonia City Hall.

The concert was a winner in more ways than one, though. Seventeen-year old pianist Karl Shymanovitz dazzled the audience with a concerto by Katchaturian. Shymanovitz, a junior at Cousino High School in Warren, won first place in the LSO's Young Artist Competition's piano category, earning the opportunity to perform with the orchestra. His hands flew across the keyboard with a blur.

On a Different Note

Visuals artists spend a lot of time alone creating. That's why art clubs like Artifacts, which has 20 members, are essential. The club offers a forum for artists to exchange information, and gives them venues for exhibiting their works.

From cast paper dolphins to oil-painted tiles featuring animals, Artifacts Art Club members show a variety of mediums and subject matter in their multi-media art exhibit continuing through March 27 at Livonia City Hall.

"Artifacts is a good group because of the camaraderie between us," said Leola Wheeler, a member since the club was founded in 1986. "We excite each other. Sherry (Eid) will do a piece and when I see it, it stimulates my thinking."

Besides attending monthly meetings, which include demonstrations, speakers and critiques, Artifacts members share art experiences.

Shopping for Art: George Delich has more than 100,000 art works at his fingertips when using the laser disk art catalog installed in his Livonia gallery.

George Delich has the world of art at his fingertips. A state-of-the-art laser disk catalog installed in his Livonia shop allows customers to view thousands of limited edition prints, posters, photographs, sculptures, and animation cells on a monitor in a matter of minutes.

Looking for a piece of art for your home or office? Longing for a work you can relate to, or is something abstract more your style?

With just a few clicks of the keyboard, you can select from a variety of computerized images ranging from Robert Bateman's "Trumpeter Swan" or "Pandas at Play," to duck stamp prints. The video catalog, marketed by Art Information Inc., a nationwide art dealer association, enables galleries like Delich's to buy from publishers all over the world.

Searching for an animation cell of Daffy Duck or Anne Marie from "All Dogs Go To Heaven?" Select from subjects such as affordable originals, or if photography is more to your liking, choose from among dozens of categories of animals. Then narrow the field further. Some of the most popular subjects at the Delich Gallery, besides animals, are golf, landscapes and reproductions of masterpieces.

Still unsure if the work is suitable for your environment? Delich will print a color copy for prospective customers to take home or to the office for final approval. Once selected, an art work is special ordered and will arrive in about one week.

"It's very user friendly," said Delich. "Customers order right off the screen. What it does is give you another salesperson. I'm selling more off the laser than off the walls."

Creative Framing & Gallery in Plymouth installed the laser disk system nearly two years ago. According to co-owner Pat Korona, the video art catalog saves time, both for customers and sales staff.

"People don't have a lot of time. If they're not sure of what they want, or if they're looking for a certain color, size or price range, customers can call up these categories instantly. Otherwise, you'd have to go through thousands of pages in 50 different catalogs," said Korona."

Tired of going from gallery to gallery looking for a particular offset lithograph by an artist such as Terry Redlin? A gallery, in most instances, is only able to offer a sampling of an artist's work due to a limited amount of space for stock. The computerized catalog lists every Redlin work published. If a Redlin work sells out, Art Information's laser disk system will reveal any secondary markets available within their dealer-to-dealer network of more than 2,000 members nationwide.

- Delich Gallery – 17370 Laurel Park Drive North, Suite P80 (by the AMC movie theater), (313) 542-9400.

"It's an asset for us is to be able to find prints for customers whether it's a current piece or a sold-out or secondary market," said Korona.

Art Information dealers receive updated versions of the laser disc every three months enabling the listing of art works to remain current.

"The system is growing so much," said Korona. "It covers several categories of a subject now. For instance, people will come in and ask for certain dogs like a Golden Retriever. Before, the system offered only a dog category. Now, it catalogs art works by breeds."

Artist bares soul in emotionally wrenched pieces

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

All of the grief Sharon Sims felt when six friends died within a short span of time a few years ago went into her sculpture. Bead by bead, she applied melted metals with a soldering iron in a time-consuming, painstaking process. Once finished, the work was sold at an auction to benefit the Willis Gallery in Detroit.

Although this work will not be included in Sims' one woman show of sculpture and relief March 25 to April 28 at the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery, 35 other emotionally wrenched pieces reveal her soul.

"Every piece has a reason for being," said Sims, an award-winning artist with works on exhibit at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, Detroit Artists Market, and the Collectors Corner at the Toledo Museum of Art.

"I have something to tell you about myself, how I feel about life, what is bothering me. I use my sculpture to work out a problem."

Seven days a week, Sims works in her Wyandotte studio sculpting one-of-a-kind art works. There is nothing cast. Drip by drip, Sims builds the solder, copper and brass into figurative sculpture.

"Forgotten Pearl," honors unsung volunteers who labor along charity's path. "Withered Worth" refers to those who lose importance when they are no longer rich, famous, employed, or of use to society.

Works not on exhibit in the library's fine art gallery include an outdoor sculpture commissioned for Purdue University's Clinical Cancer Care Center, a logo lapel pin created for the State of Indiana Breast Cancer Coalition, and a logo pin which raises funds for Women Celebrating Life, a Michigan chapter of the national Susan G. Komen Foundation.

"I hope viewers find the message I'm trying to give them," said Sims, a board member of the Scarab Club in Detroit. "I feel I'm leaving a legacy of what I'm about."

Sims first ventured into art via the craft of stained glass. Upon realizing the

DIA showcases praiseworthy 'Images in Ivory'

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

In the Gothic world of dragons, crusades and evil demons, it was spiritually convenient to carry along miniature ivory sculptures to induce prayer. After all, tardiness for penance could mean a ticket to the nether world, or missing redemption altogether.

From the mid-13th century to about 1500, naturalistic ivory carvings of the Virgin Mary, Christ, and dramatic depictions of the Bible, demonstrate a more personal relationship between Christians and their God that would eventually transform the Church.

Many of these historic ivory carvings are included in the Detroit Institute of Arts international exhibit, "Images in Ivory: Precious Objects of the Gothic Age." The exhibit runs through May 11, which coincides with the Christian Easter season, a contemplation of the Passion, crucifixion and resurrection of Christ.

Praised by medieval scholars for providing a comprehensive range of significant works, the exhibit presents a collection of nearly 100 intricate carvings from 28 museums and galleries around the world. Because many of the lending arts institutions would not entrust their ivory sculptures for more than six months, the DIA-curated exhibit will only travel to one other museum, the Walters Gallery in Baltimore.

"The exhibit could be the last English word on the subject because of the extensive scholarship," said Peter Barnet of Birmingham, DIA exhibit curator. "But since it opened (on March 9) it has attracted all types of visitors, and certainly doesn't require any prior knowledge of Gothic art to be appreciated."

What: "Images in Ivory: Precious Objects of the Gothic Age"
Where: Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward Avenue, Detroit
When: Through Sunday, May 11
Hours: 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday-Friday; 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday-Sunday
Tickets: Adults $5; children and students $2; members free. Includes an acoustiguide recorded tour. For information, call (313) 833-7900.

Nearly 10 years ago, Richard Randall, then-curator at the Walters Gallery, which along with the Louvre in Paris maintains one of the most extensive ivory carving collections, began to solicit support of an exhibit on the Gothic art. But in the early 1990s, devastated by funding cuts, the DIA couldn't consider the high-priced exhibit. Then, about three years ago, the DIA received financial support of the exhibit from federal grants and private foundations. Barnet, who also serves as the DIA's associate curator for European sculpture, took the lead role in coordinating the exhibit.

While many pieces in "Images in Ivory" reflect religious themes, the exhibit also includes items from the secular world, such as combs, small backsides of hand-held mirrors, game boards and ornate boxes with depictions from popular romance tales. The proliferation of ivory carvings was the result of a burgeoning trade route from eastern Africa across the Mediterranean to Paris, the capital of commerce, scholarship and art. It didn't hurt that Paris also had an emerging bourgeoisie class that could afford the finely crafted items.

To their credit, the DIA effectively presents an esoteric epoch without simplifying history. Exhibit designer Lou Gauci has created subtle, yet distinctive archways that resemble the architecture of the great Gothic cathedrals. In fact, many of the carvings are miniature versions of the sculptures found at cathedrals in Chartres, Amiens and Paris, including Notre-Dame Cathedral.

On a more practical level, Barnet's chronological arrangement allows each piece to be considered separately, yet as part of the broader Gothic movement. Visitors won't be burdened by information nor indistinct artifacts. An audio-tape tour, narrated by NPR's Susan Stamberg, makes the walk through the exhibit seem like a pleasant drive listening to "All Things Considered."

DIA docent Betsy Loomus of Farmington Hills has given exhibit tours for 21 years. The intimate venue designed for "Images in Ivory" doesn't allow for large tours, she said. "We've been answering questions about the life and times of the Gothic period, but most people want to know how these pieces were carved," she said.

Working as a docent for "Images in Ivory" has helped Marsha Gordon of Birmingham get valuable experience before DIA's upcoming "Splendors of Ancient Egypt" exhibit in July. "Worship went from a public to a private event," she told gallery visitors. "These ivory pieces looked more human and more interactive. They encouraged people to become part of the Bible."

To the delight of medieval scholars, a meticulously detailed catalog and collection of essays by pre-eminent Gothic art experts provides unprecedented documentation on the art. Likewise, several of the ivory carvings represent precedents. For instance, the "Virgin and Child" carving from the Taft Museum in Cincinnati has been reunited with other elements of the original sculpture, two ivory angels from the Rouen Cathedral Treasury. And the mysterious dark brown patina Virgin carving, discovered in a chimney after the French Revolution, makes its first appearance in the United States.

While the thriving ivory carving trade included many craftsman, the names of few artists are known. The delicate carving, "Corpus of Christ" by Giovanni Pisano, is an exception. The porcelain-like figure reflects Pisano's exquisite sculpture skill, and a genius' ability to fuse compassion with the redemptive quality of his subject.

Historic ivory carving: "Virgin and Child," on loan from the Taft Museum in Cincinnati, is one of the compelling miniature sculptures in the DIA's "Images in Ivory" exhibit.

In the first several weeks, "Images in Ivory" attracted visitors from the Louvre, the Victoria and Albert Museum of London and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, said Barnet. Many in the museum world have not only grasped the significance of the ivory carving collection, but realize that Gothic art exhibits occur infrequently. The last major medieval exhibit in the United States was 69 years ago in Detroit, according to Barnet.

"It's hard to say when – and if – a show like this will happen again," said Barnet. "There just hasn't been an exhibit like this before. I've heard some visitors gasp when they see the work."

Although Wheeler travels to exotic destinations such as Australia, Alaska and India for inspiration for art works like "Boatman on the Ganges," she looks forward to joining fellow club members in searching for encouragement locally.

"We get together to go to other art shows like 'Our Town' in Birmingham or the Detroit Institute of Arts and that stimulates your thinking," said Wheeler.

Judy Granata learned of Artifacts when she began taking color pencil and pastel classes at David Messing's Art Store & More in Livonia. Although Granata's been a member for only two years, she's reaped benefits from belonging to the art club and learned a great deal about manipulating the time-consuming medium of color pencil from the Art Store & More. Not to be missed is Granata's "Tall and Elegant" white orchid in a clay pot.

"Being with other artists you can learn a lot," said Granata, a Livonia resident and vice president of the Visual Arts Association of Livonia.

Although the show was judged by Livonia artist Nancy Hurd, Artifacts does not discriminate against novice artists.

Having fun

"I'm a firm believer that everyone who wants to be in the show will be, from the housewife who dabbles to professional artists such as David Messing," said club president Sherry Eid. "My thought is to let every member in. Let's everybody have some fun."

And have fun, they did.

Eid portrays a colorful clown "who's outgoing and fun" in "Hi, I'm Sketches." The color pencil work is in stark contrast to the primarily white palette Ilene Tarkington uses for "Dancing Dolphins," a 3 by 5 foot cast paper work encased in Plexiglas. However, both works are whimsical and filled with delight. But decide for yourself by seeing the show then voting for the People's Choice Award.

Artifacts Art Club meets 7:30 p.m. the fourth Tuesday of the month at the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile Road. Membership dues are $15 per year. For further information call Sherry Eid at (313) 591-3094.

architectural glass she created for businesses, homes and churches was evolving into three dimensions, Sims experimented with solder and the techniques used to join glass. This led to her discovery of jewelry making and metal sculpture.

Sims then began mixing metals with the techniques. As she fused solder with lead came, elongated bodies without faces emerged. Patinas applied to the metals add color and character to the imagery.

"My sculptures don't have faces because I want movement to tell the story," said Sims.

Along the way, Sims studied at Center for Creative Studies and Wayne State University in Detroit. She took additional classes at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association. While taking a medallion sculpture class with Sergio DeGiusti, a Redford Township sculptor, Sims learned how to create bas relief. DeGiusti has purchased several of Sims' works.

"I like Sharon's work very much," said DeGiusti. "There's a traditional Italian relief quality to her work. The detail she achieves with these miniature figures is pretty skillful."

Sims works in two different styles of figures: three dimensional and flat body. The three dimensional figures were created by gradually adding solder to steel armatures to create dimension. Similar to the way a clay artist works, Sims adds and subtracts metals all with a 1/4-inch chisel tip. For the two dimensional, or flat body figures, she builds up solder as the work-in-progress lays flat.

University of Michigan student Val Richards assists Sims in her 1,200-square-foot studio/gallery in Wyandotte. She admires Sims' work.

"Sharon is really modest. She doesn't realize the impact her work has or its meaning to people," said Richards.

Like the "Forgotten Pearl," Sims believes in helping people and causes. She volunteers her time and talents to a number of organizations including First Step, Boy Scouts of America, and substance abuse prevention and community pride programs. In 1996, the YWCA of Western Wayne County selected Sims to receive the Women of Achievement Award.

"I feel this gift of mine is given," said Sims, "so I want to give back."

THE SPORTS GALLERY
The sports memorabilia specialty store at 269 S. Woodward, Birmingham, showcases items including autographed photos from such professional athletes as Grant Hill, Barry Sanders and Ted Williams, as well as jerseys, lithographs, baseballs, bats, footballs, basketballs and display cases. Call (810) 642-0044.

STEWART AND STEWART
The printer and publisher of fine art prints since 1980 announces six new intaglio/monotype prints by Catherine Kernan, the on site studies for which were done while sitting on cliffs in Ireland. Stewart and Stewart is at 5571 Wing Lake Road, Bloomfield Hills. Call (810) 626-5248.

WILD WING
"Harvest Moon Ball" by Terry Redlin is available at the Birmingham gallery, 155 S. Bates. In this latest painting, a dozen vignettes showing the transitional America of the 1920s and 1930s are presented. Some have special meaning in the artist's life. Call (810) 645-2266.

WOODWARD GALLERY
The gallery at 1357 Davis in Birmingham is the only dealer in the United States authorized to sell a limited edition series of photographs of jazz legends Miles Davis and Dizzy Gillespie. Gallery president and owner Dan Winter took the Davis photos. Also available are original prints and paintings by more than 300 artists, an unusual collection of sports photos and posters, and vintage photos and newspaper articles. Call (810) 642-1357.

KAPUT KAPOT
The ceramic studios, which recently opened at 151 S. Bates, Birmingham, feature ready made bisqueware. Paint freehand or use the studios' stencils, glazes and sponges. Call (810) 594-8423.

THE LOCAL SCENE
More than 30 artists help make the recently opened store at 425-1/2 Main, above King's Bikes in Rochester, a special place to shop for one-of-a-kind pieces, everything from jewelry to furniture. The entrance is on Main; call (810) 651-4690.

LUDA ART GALLERY
The gallery at 103-B E. Fourth, Rochester, presents for the first time a completely new collection of paintings of nudes by artist Luda Tcherniak, whose talent transports the viewer beyond the images and lines of her works into a focus on emotions and feelings. Call (810) 652-7052 for an appointment.

NATIVE WEST GALLERY
Handcrafted American artwork from the Southwest, including sculpture, pottery, sand-painting and fine sterling silver jewelry. Located at 863 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth. Call (313) 455-8838.

OBJECTS OF ART
The gallery at 6243 Orchard Lake Road, just north of Maple in West Bloomfield, presents an unusual and eclectic collection of art to wear. The affordable items are from very well-known (and some "struggling unknown") designers in the country. Call (810) 539-3332.

PIERRE BITTAR GALLERY
World-renowned French Impressionist painter Pierre Bittar invites you to view his first original oil paintings of local Detroit area landmarks depicting Birmingham, Bloomfield and Grosse Pointe at 296 W. Maple, Birmingham. Paintings from northern Michigan, France and the Caribbean Islands are also displayed. Call (810) 433-9917.

RUSSELL KLATT GALLERY
The gallery at 1467 S. Woodward, Birmingham, has expanded its collection of European original and reproduction oil paintings. Renoir's festive "The Boating Party" and Cot's romantic "The Storm" are two of the reproductions now on display. In addition, limited edition serigraphs by renowned artists Don Hatfield, Henri Plisson and Roy Fairchild are shown. Call (810) 647-6655.

'Notorious': Hitchcock thriller worth a look

BY LEANNE ROGERS
STAFF WRITER

The 1946 romantic thriller "Notorious" is one of my favorites among Alfred Hitchcock's films. Somebody else who frequents my neighborhood video store apparently was also fond of the film – I kept finding an empty carton on the shelf week after week.

I finally had to conclude the movie was lost or kept by a devotee or damaged beyond viewing. The happy ending to this story is that a new and very crisp copy of the movie appeared on the shelf a short time later.

Contemporary with it's release, the film begins in Miami where an unapologetic German spy has been found guilty of treason in federal court and is receiving a sentence of 20 years in prison.

The spy's daughter Alicia, played by Ingrid Bergman at her tall and luminous best, has to run a gauntlet of reporters and continues to be under surveillance by federal agents hot on the trail of a larger spy ring. Alicia, who had an American mother and is embarrassed by her father's actions, has been dealing with the tension by drinking and living the life of a party girl.

At one party, Alicia and her guests are having a good time. Joining them is a rather silent and solemn man, shown only from the back almost in a shadow. He turns out to be a federal agent named Devlin, played by Cary Grant at his most dark and handsome. He convinces her to help break up a German spy ring in Brazil – with her father's conviction and her own public silence about the case, Alicia has the perfect pedigree to infiltrate the group.

In Brazil waiting to get their assignment, the vulnerable and needy Alicia and cynical Devlin fall in love. Their romance is short-lived due to prickly miscommunications when it is suggested that Alicia re-establish contact with a man suspected as being part of the spy ring and she eventually ends up married to him. Not a happy situation for anyone involved.

Claude Rains is very touching as spy Alex Sebastian, an older man and a momma's boy, deeply in love with a taller and younger woman who betrays him personally and most perilously for his future, also betrays his spying activities. Rains is also chilling in the ruthless manner he deals with an obstacle to the end goals of his espionage activities.

No Hitchcock film would be complete without the domineering older woman – in this case Sebastian's mother who is jealous and hostile to the new woman in her son's life. When they discover her new daughter-in law is an American agent, the mother isn't surprised.

"We are protected by the enormity of your stupidity," Mother says as they try to extricate themselves from the situation before their confederates learn their circle has been breached.

"Notorious" has many of the Hitchcock trademarks – look for the director to make his appearance downing champagne at a party. There is a MacGuffin involving uranium ore and a tense scene involving how much wine is being consumed at the party. It's also a film of relatively few scenes that keep the story moving toward an appropriate ending.

Kevorkian's ghoulish paintings scream for attention

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

> What: "The Double Cross of Justice," paintings by Dr. Jack Kevorkian
> Where: Ariana Gallery, 119 N. Main Street, Royal Oak
> When: Through Saturday, March 29
> Hours: 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Saturday; noon to 4 p.m. Sunday. For information, call (810) 546-8810.

The media horde surrounding a frail, white-haired man talking about a fascist government and the right to die seems commonplace by now. The setting, however, doesn't include a mysterious van or a death-inducing mask. Rather this time, it's all too much like a Fellini film. It's tough to say what's more bizarre: Dr. Jack Kevorkian's ghoulish paintings, or a cynical band of reporters hovering in a gallery trying to figure out the meaning of art.

Either way, there was an absurd poetry to the opening reception of "The Double Cross of Justice," an exhibit of 13 paintings by Kevorkian at Ariana Gallery in Royal Oak. The exhibit runs through March 29. Five of the 13 paintings have been created especially for the show.

Even Ariana owner Anne Kufler, who shares Kevorkian's views, but not his taste in art, admits that the paintings show limited ability. The Bloomfield Hills resident, however, decided to show the work because she believes the collection continues the debate about physician-assisted suicide. Based on the public response and widespread media coverage, the exhibit has succeeded to bring even more notoriety and controversy to Kevorkian.

Nearly every major news organization covered the exhibit, including Newsweek, CNN, NBC and The New York Times – a testament, perhaps, to the media's obsession with Kevorkian, or their generally bad taste in art.

Ironically, an exhibit at Birmingham's Hill Gallery of one of today's most significant painters, John Walker, will likely draw scant media coverage. Meanwhile, a troop of reporters staked out Ariana Gallery and aggressively stood four-deep to ask Kevorkian about his approach to painting. Did anyone consider that was like asking Walker about his expertise in a pathology lab?

In normal situations, a painter might be recognized for the sheer brilliance of handling a subject or the mastery of the medium. But there's nothing normal about a Kevorkian exhibit. The rules of aesthetics and logic fall away.

Treated with the pomp of a major artist, Kevorkian could only muster a sophomoric and prankster mentality in his shock art display.

In "Genocide," he spread his own blood along the frame, while he instructed for a pair of socks to be placed under "Coma," which depicts a barefoot, sunken-eye patient entering a cloud chamber. It's hardly a surprise that Kevorkian's art is most popular among those who enjoy apocalyptic renderings, grotesque imagery and assaults on religion, law and government.

In Kevorkian's art, nothing is sacred. In "Noel of the West," Santa Claus coming down the chimney steps on an infant lying in a manger. In the foreground, an emaciated man's skeleton is literally ripping through his skin. In "Born Again," a flying Hitler figure anoints the U.S. Capitol. And in what Kevorkian calls his most important philosophical painting, "The Double Cross of Justice," he serves up a double meaning as a crucifix/justice scale is out of sync.

For Kevorkian the artist like Kevorkian the cause celeb, ideology comes first. Nearly all of his works scream from the canvas to be noticed, and for the viewer to "wake up" and see eye-to-eye with haunting figures that vaguely resemble Kevorkian's sullen countenance. In defense, Kevorkian claims that repression and genocide are "ugly and hideous," and that his renderings reflect the injustices that he has observed and experienced. That may be true, but his work reflects his dark obsessions rather than any life-affirming qualities.

Both Kevorkian and his attorney, Geoffrey Fieger, readily admit that the exhibit is another venue to promote Kevorkian's views. With posters priced at $250 and limited prints at $2,000, they might be planning on a war chest for their cause. Reportedly, the original paintings will remain with the Kevorkian estate.

The Kevorkian-Fieger art-media happening has already paid off. Shortly after Newsweek printed Kevorkian's "The Double Cross of Justice," Fieger turned down $100,000 for the painting. The value of Kevorkian's work make the inflated art prices of the 1980s seem justified.

Regardless of the earnestness of his intentions as a social protester, the motivations of Kevorkian the artist have an insincere ring. His claim that he's neither an artist nor a painter provides a haven from criticism. But if we take him at his word, then his paintings can only be called posters for his cause. And if that's the case, the disturbing imagery will likely convince people to rethink Kevorkian's moral grounding.

If art offers insight into the mind of the artist, then Kevorkian's work reflects a paranoid obsession with death, torture and ghoulishness. Strangely, as he looked around the gallery at his paintings, Kevorkian observed, "I think the ideas come across."

Even the media horde surrounding him couldn't dim Kevorkian's illumination of Hell.

STUDENT SHOW

The second half of the seniors graduating from Madonna University's art department show their work through March 28 in the Exhibit Gallery of the Library Wing on the Livonia campus, 36600 Schoolcraft (at Levan.)

The 1997 Student Art exhibit features painting, print making, sculpture, and photography by Amy Gilson of Livonia; Tom Smyth, Redford; Janet Jolley, Northville, and Randa Ajlouny. "It's really nice," said Ralph F. Glenn, art department chairperson. "The exhibit shows a lot of interesting print making and Oriental brush work."

Smyth captures in gouache the Spanish revivalism influence of a gas station built on Michigan Avenue in the late 1920s. Smyth learned about its architecture while studying Dynamic Detroit Architecture at Madonna University. This was an era when oil companies sought to minimize their intrusion into residential areas by building quaint stations such as the one still in use in Dearborn.

Gilson, who hopes to pursue a master's degree in art therapy after graduating from Madonna, shows her diversity by creating works in acrylic, oil pastel, and graphite pencil.

"There's some very nice three dimensional pieces by Janet Jolley," said Glenn.

Also of note, are an intaglio print series featuring circles by Ajlouny.

While the first set of students showed commercial art, the second group consisting of Smyth, Gilson, Jolley, and Ajlouny were fine arts major. Smyth began his studies in commercial art at Schoolcraft College in the 1970s. In an artist's statement exhibited with Smyth's work, he states that the years at Madonna and Schoolcraft have jointly influenced him.

"Color and composition developed as a fine artist has enhanced my commercial work," said Smyth. "At the same time, techniques learned as a commercial artist have aided me in the construction and execution of my paintings. While I'm excited about the possibilities presented by computer illustration, I enjoy the hands-on experience of putting brush on paper. I believe that commercial art can be as elegant and engaging to the viewer as the best of the fine arts."

Hours are 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday to Thursday, until 7 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

AWARD WINNERS

Livonia color pencil artist Nancy Hurd awarded prizes to members of the Artifacts Art Club when she judged their multi-media art exhibit at Livonia City Hall.

Marsha Weigand of Farmington Hills took first place for the oil painting "Temple of the Orange." Second place went to Sherry Eid, Livonia for "Flare," a color pencil work featuring a single poppy in a glass vase. Eid, who usually renders portraits of Indians, recently switched her subject matter to florals. Betty Whatt of Livonia took third place for the pastel "Autumn in the Smokey." Hurd also awarded two honorable mentions: Ilene Tarkington, Canton, "Dancing Dolphins," and Judy Granata, Livonia, "Fireworks IV," a photograph. The Artifacts show continues through March 27. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Mystery set in Ann Arbor improbable but entertaining

"Bleeding Maize and Blue," by Susan Holtzer (St. Martin's Press, $22.95, 294pp)

VITCTORIA DIAZ

University of Michigan alum and longtime Ann Arbor resident, Susan Holtzer has included something for just about everybody is this, her third mystery novel. "Bleeding Maize and Blue" should hold special appeal for techno fans, journalists (old and new), football folk, students and alumni everywhere, Ann Arbor natives and newcomers, plus practically anybody who appreciates a lively and engaging tale of mystery.

Played out against a backdrop of colorful Ann Arbor during one of those hugely important football weekends, the whodunit marks the return of computer whiz Anneke Haagen, as an amateur sleuth. This time around, she and live-in lover Karl Genesko (a former Wolverine defenseman and now Ann Arbor homicide chief) solve a strange murder that occurs inside Michigan Stadium. (The victim falls dead, appropriately, in the end zone.)

The victim is an NCAA investigator. The NCAA is apparently preparing to investigate alleged recruiting violations at Michigan. Suspects abound.

Could Coach Ralph Roczynski (nicknamed "Ro," of course) have committed such a dastardly deed? Or hard-working UM AD Russell Truhorne? Or influential genius-millionaire grad Daniel Najarian ("a head table kind of guy")? Surely, the investigator's daughter wouldn't have murdered her own father, but she seems so strange and peculiar lately, and is always stoned out of her mind. On the other hand, maybe star linebacker Kyle Farmer is the culprit. Or the Pulitzer-Prize winning has-been journalist Charlie Cassovoy. Or Farmer's devoted girlfriend. Or that irritating cleaning woman ...

You won't find any deathless prose in Holtzer's novel, and certainly poetry does not lurk on every page. Her ambition lies in simply telling a nimble, timely tale, moved forward by an eclectic cast of characters, not the least of which is Ann Arbor itself. ("Ann Arbor dazzled in the early morning sunshine, crisp and bright and crystalline, the tree-lined Burns Park streets shedding red and gold in a blaze of fall color.")

Leading the (slightly overcrowded) cast, of course, is Haagen – although her she doesn't make an appearance until Chapter Five, after Holtzer has neatly introduced us to a dozen or so of the supporting players. By turns checking calendars, schedule books, her watch, her spreading waistline, her graying hair, the middle-aged divorcee is highly conscious of the passage of time and what that can bring (here, in a sense, it brings murder). She seems almost always in a hurry, her lively mind ticking off "to-do" lists when she pauses to catch a breath and solving murder mysteries when the need arises.

Devoted fans of the Haagen series will be perhaps surprised to discover a kind of second "leading lady" in the midst of the action. Michigan Daily reporter Zoe Kaplan goes far toward solving this case, and she even receives a special mention before the action begins (her character is dedicated to noted Michiganian Zolton Ferency). Her astuteness and curiosity make her seem the youthful twin of Anneke Haagen – and she definitely has her eye on Genesko. (A careful reader may detect a smidgen of trouble here between Haagen and the handsome cop, by the way.) Perhaps we'll see more of Zoe in future Haagen stories. She definitely add dimension to this story, serving as more than a mere literary device to get us into the inner sanctums of the Daily, where much of this story take place.

A bothersome aspect of the whodunit has to do with the method for this murder. Stabbing someone to death with a four-foot flagpole seems a particularly odd way to commit murder to me, but this oddity is never really commented on in these pages. You'd think it was practically the preferred modus operandi for murderers everywhere. Though the killer is trying to make a statement with this gruesomely-colorful gesture (at the top of the pole flies a maize and blue banner), it remains rather confusing that no one appears to notice how, shall we say distinctive, this specific gesture is. Ultimately, it seems implausible that the killer would be able to do such a thing, anyway – which is even more bothersome.

Back on the plus side: As in most contemporary mysteries, readers can come away from this with some knowledge they perhaps didn't possess going in. You'll learn a little bit about a lot of things, including the rock-em, sock-em world of big-time football, the grinding wheel of NCAA justice, plus how, in this day and age, a dead man can help solve his own murder.

TRAVEL

Florida calls as winter chill hangs on into spring

In summer, metro Detroit moves en masse to northern Michigan where the cool breezes and sandy beaches of Lake Michigan are a siren's call.

But when winter's grip continues to hang on into early spring thoughts turn southward to that other peninsula, Florida.

The travel industry is in full gear with package deals, new attractions and alluring promises of warm sun and soft sand.

Though Miami, Orlando and Tampa/St. Pete are the usual destinations in Florida, other parts of the state also make their pitches for sunseekers.

Florida's Space Coast for instance is a strip of cities including Titusville, Cocoa Beach, Melbourne and Palm Bay centered around NASA's Kennedy Space Center. But this area is also home to the Ron Jon Surf Shop, dudes, and the largest sea turtle nesting area in the U.S. But, best of all, it is 72 miles of "sun-bronzed" Atlantic shore. Special events include the Grant Seafood Festival in Melbourne in February, The SeaFest '97 at Port Canaveral in March, Easter Surfing Weekend at Cocoa Beach on Easter Weekend and Valiant Air Command Warbird Air Show in Titusville in March. This area is also the home for the new Florida Marlins baseball team. For information, call 800-USA-1969 or surf the net, dudes, at http://www.space-coast.com

Moving in land we come to Kissimmee-St. Cloud, "conveniently located 20 miles from the Orlando International Airport, 60 miles from coastal beaches and 236 miles northwest of Miami."

Everglades adventure: Airboats skim across the miles of waterway in Florida's Everglades.

This area has aggressively promoted itself as the inexpensive place to stay when you finally make that trip to Walt Disney World. It has, also, become the home of numerous family entertainment venues of its own. A sampling of these attractions includes: Capone's Dinner & Show, a recreation of a 1920s speakeasy; Medieval Times, a return to jousting days; the seven-acre Jungleland Zoo with "400 animals"; American Gladiators, just like on TV; Arabian Nights, a horse show; Gatorland, a bit of the "real" Florida with "thousands of gators and crocs"; WaterMainia, a water theme park; Wild Bill's Wild West Dinner Extravaganza; Splendid China, with recreations of Chinese landmarks in miniature; and Houston Metro's spring baseball. Whew!

For visitor information of Kissimmee/St. Cloud, call 1-800-526-KISS (5477) or write, P.O. Box 422007, Kissimmee, FL 34742-2007.

Moving to the north Florida Gulf Coast, Destin and Fort Walton Beach on the "Emerald Coast" has a variety of events planned for the "southern sea towns." A press release describes these towns as "unpretentious, uncomplicated and breathtakingly beautiful. Simple pleasures are presented including, the 'World's Luckiest Fishing Village,' spirited seaside celebrations, links of great golf, the largest charter boat fleet in Florida, some of the world's finest underwater shelling and the undeniably freshest seafood on the Gulf." For more information about this quieter Florida, call the Emerald Coast Convention & Visitor Bureau at (800)322-3319 or check out their site on the World Wide Web at: http://www.destin-fwb.com

Moving south to Tampa, Busch Gardens is planning a new attraction, "The Edge of Africa," but you'll have to wait until summer.

"The Edge of Africa" is a 15-acre animal park addition that will take guests to a "distant world in pursuit of encounters with hippotamuses, giraffes, lions, baboons, meerkats, crocodiles, hyenas and other fascinating species." The "safari experience" will begin in an encampment and continue past an old fishing village with hippos and crocodiles, an abandoned Masai village with lions and hyenas, a distant view of the Serengeti Plain. The attraction is also being used for study and highlighted as a "conservation project" by Anheuser-Busch.

Anheuser-Busch (yes, the beer company) also operates Adventure Island, a water theme park that features the Key West Rapids, a six story high water tube ride. Other rides includes the Aruba Tuba, Calypso Coaster and the Rambling Bayou.

Driving south to Marco Island and the Everglades, visitors will find wetland parks, waterways and sanctuaries, as well as luxury resorts. Parks include the Everglades Nationals Park encompassing 1.5 million acres and featuring exotic birds and fragile wetlands. Also in this area are the Big Cypress National Preserve, Briggs Nature Center and Rookery Bay National Estuarine Reserve.

Marriott's Marco Island Resort and Golf Club is the first resort in North America to receive the distinguished National Parenting Center Seal of Approval. The seal is awarded by a California-based advice service on parenting issues established in 1989.

GREAT ESCAPES

Great Escapes features various travel new items. Send news leads to Hugh Gallagher, assistant managing editor, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Inc., 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150, or fax them to (313) 591-7279.

AUSTRALIA NIGHT

Australia 2000 Travel, a boutique travel service specializing in travel to the South Pacific,will be hosting an Australia Night at the Birmingham Community House, 380 S. Bates, Birmingham, on April 5. During the evening attendees will learn about travel destinations in the South Pacific and preview details of an upcoming escorted tour to Australia. The tour, for just 20 people, will run Oct. 5-28 and will be led by Karen Hardy Hodgson, an Australian native and president of Australia 2000. To RSVP for this event, call 1-800-875-4530.

SHANTY CREEK LISTED

Shanty Creek's Schuss Mountain Golf Course has been rated one of the most women-friendly facilities in North America by a leading golf magazine. The course made the 1997 Golf for Women Magazine's Top Fairways list due out this week. That means the facility's tee times, overall atmosphere, programs, course design, locker room, pro shop and amenities best met women golfers' needs among the 1,500 plus courses surveyed. Shanty Creek is in Bellaire, Michigan. The list is featured in the magazine's March/April edition.

NEW SEAWORLD

SeaWorld of Ohio will open a new attraction, "Pirates," a multi-million dollar, 3-D Plus special effects movie theater and state-of-the-art film feature with Leslie Nielsen as Captain Lucky. "Pirates" whisks visitors away to a remote Caribbean island in search of lost treasures. The theater seats 900 guests per viewing and provides a high quality 3-D image projected on a giant 60-foot-wide by 28-foot-high silver screen. SeaWorld is in Aurora, Ohio.

CUSTOMER SERVICE

Visitors and residents who shop in Frankenmuth are turning the tables on employees and providing them with Gemuetlichkeit.

Gemuetlichkeit in warm, Bavarian hospitality and is something service employees in Frankenmuth pride themselves on providing. The program is a new venture of the Frankenmuth Chamber of Commerce and Convention & Visitors Bureau. Customers are empowered to reward good service by completing a Gemuetlichkeit care.

Each month the cards will be collected and a winner selected from the nominees. In January 1998 one of the 12 monthly service winners will be selected as the 1997 Hospitality Award recipient.

LONDON DISCOUNTS

Entertainment Publications has introduced Entertainment London '97 which offers hundreds of valuable discounts for lodging, dining, entertainment and leisure activities.

Among the directory's hundreds of attractions are two-for-one tickets to the London Philharmonic, which many critics consider the world's finest symphony orchestra; an entertainment hotline on things to do; and a chance to win $170 in free dining.

More than 800 restaurants are featured offering $25 off the total bill. The directory is available for $48 by calling (800)445-4137 or writing to Entertainment Publications Inc., 2125 Butterfield Road, Troy, MI 48084.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

TRAVEL

Friendly Portugal allows you to experience history

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE
SPECIAL WRITER

It was early morning and my husband, Ed, was reading on a bench in the gardens.

He thought he was alone. But when he looked up he saw a busload of tourists regarding him. "I was a tourist attraction," he later told me.

No, we were obviously not at home.

We were staying at the castle-like Palace Hotel, a former hunting lodge in the middle of the Bucaco Forest north of Coimbra in Portugal, commissioned by King Carlos and built between 1888 and 1907.

A trip to Portugal allows you to experience history, not just regard its remains.

Besides this extraordinary building, with its gigantic staircase, walls covered with azulejos (tiles) depicting battle scenes from Portugal's history and antique furniture and chandeliers, we also stayed in an exquisitely renovated former monastery (Santa Marinha in Guimaraes) and a former palace (Rainha Santa Isabel in Estremoz) to which we actually drove miles out of our way to spend a night.

You, too, can experience history.

The Portuguese government in the early 1940s began a program to turn some of its decaying historical buildings into hotels.

They are called pousadas, are mostly first-class accommodations and may be reserved directly or through a travel agent.

They added immeasurably to our visit. We spent two-thirds of our time in the north of Portugal, driving its winding, narrow roads which twist up and down through miles of forest and vineyard visiting famous places like Fatima and Bom Jesus do Monte as well as lesser known such as the ruins of Citania de Briteriros near Braga, which existed from 8 to 4 B.C.

Portugal is the poorest country in the Common Market, but it has to be one of the friendliest whether you're visiting the walled city of Obidos, the old university town of Coimbra or exploring sophisticated Lisbon.

When my brother-in-law heard we were spending three days in Lisbon, he said it was too long. But he was wrong. It wasn't long enough.

It's a city, not unlike San Francisco, built on a series of hills, but the streets are narrower and the drivers more wanton so you need your wits about you.

JUDITH BERNE

Up on the roof: The rooftops of Lisbon, as all over Portugal, are red tile.

An elevator built in the early 1900s lifts you from the heart of Lisbon's Baixa shopping district with its outdoor cafes and street performers to the Chiado, full of bookshops and antique stores, and the more Bohemian Bairro Alto districts, where the fado houses flourish.

A night of fado is a not-to-miss as black-clad singers, mostly women in Lisbon, bare their souls through plaintive longings for love and Portugal's past. Plan to stay up late.

We were lucky enough to be there for the most acclaimed bull fight in a decade, according to the fan who sat next to us. Since it was our first bull fight, much of the expertise was lost on us, but none of the passion of the Portuguese spectators.

At times it was so quiet you wanted to shush your own breathing, at other times so loud you were certain you were in Michigan Stadium when U-M beats Ohio State.

The Portuguese don't kill their bulls on the field, and this night the foremost Spanish bullfighter in the world would play by their rules.

Not to forget food and best buys, shopping-wise.

Soups are wonderful, and, most often a meal in themselves. Stick to their wonderful fish and seafood and some of the freshest chicken you've ever eaten.

Desserts are easily avoided since most taste like you are eating meringues, being overly sweet.

Portuguese wines were a delightful surprise, and we enjoyed drinking those particular to each area we covered — including so-called green wines. And, of course, there are the ports, which we soon learned are more than mere after-dinner drinks.

Shopping-wise, jewelry (most of the gold is 18 carat) and azulejos are not to be missed – and Lisbon is the place to buy them. You can buy ancient azulejos as well as new and they will pack them for easy-carrying home.

They will be a wonderful reminder of your trip to a country less explored than most of Europe by the American tourist.

We used a travel agent for whom Portugal is his favorite country and who has traveled there more than a dozen times.

He is Jeffrey Slatkin of Royal Travel in Beverly Hills, (810) 644-1600.

Judith Doner Berne is a resident of West Bloomfield and a former editor of and frequent contributor to The Observer & Eccentric

Train travel is tops with a Eurorail Pass

(NAPS) – When in Europe, why not do what the Europeans do?

Why not see the sights by train? Most Europeans prefer the train because it's very convenient, comfortable, and less expensive than driving.

According to studies conducted by Rail Europe, Americans are favorably impressed by the quality of European trains, which are clean, punctual and take you directly from one city center to another. Trains save the time and expense of traveling to and from airports.

Now there's an even better way to see Europe's best. Europass Drive combines rail (for longer distances via high speed trains) and rental cars (for reaching the delights of the countryside) in the five most popular European destinations: France, Germany, Italy, Spain and Switzerland.

It allows travelers to arrange visits to suit their own pace and preferences.

Now that Europe is connected to England by the Channel tunnel, you can also travel inexpensively from Paris to London in only 3 hours and visit 2 memorable cities. Traveling by train is always a more convenient and cost-effective way to see Europe's more beautiful sights.

For more information, call a travel agent, Rail Europe at 1-800-4-EURAIL or 1-800-EUROSTAR. Information and bookings are also available on Rail Europe's Web site at http://www.raileurope.com

Stingrays win title

A tip-in by Brett Reinhart late in the third period gave the Plymouth TNT Stingrays what they had sought all season — a state hockey title in the Midget AA bracket March 16 in Battle Creek.

Reinhart's tap-in goal, on a shot from the blue line by Matt Church, came with 2:48 left in the game, giving Plymouth a 3-2 lead over the St. Clair Shores Saints, which proved good enough.

The win sends the Stingrays to the National tournament in St. Louis.

After a scoreless first period, both teams scored twice in the second. Plymouth goals came from Reinhart, on an unassisted breakaway, and Jeff Lang, assisted by Marc O'Keefe and Ryan Safran.

Gordy Smith was in goal for the Stingrays.

The five-game tournament began the previous Friday evening (March 14), with Plymouth meeting — and beating — Calumet, 7-1. Clint Bonkowski scored three Stingray goals, with Brad Feiler, Reinhart, Ryan Ward and Lang also getting goals.

On Saturday (March 15) the Stingrays clubbed host Battle Creek 4-1, with goals coming from Lang, Ryan Ossenmacher, O'Keefe and Reinhart, then defeated AFI Thunder 6-2. Nik Derouin, Feiler, Lang, Ossenmacher, Reinhart and Jay Perino got the goals, with the win clinching first for Plymouth in the National Division.

Which put the Stingrays into the semifinals against Midland, which they won 5-2. Lang scored twice, with Feiler, Reinhart and Bonkowski each getting a goal.

The championship leaves Plymouth unbeaten as it heads for the Nationals.

Team members are Smith and Justin Lilienthal (Westland); Reinhart, Lang and O'Keefe (Livonia); Derouin, Feiler, Jason Perino, Bonkowski, Austin Meibers, Miles Meibers and Church (Canton); Safran (White Lake); and Don Klacking (West Bloomfield). The team is coached by Fred Feiler, Paul Safran and Chris Manery; Jim Reinhart is team manager.

Lightning strike

Busy schedule, but a successful run through it.

The Canton Lightning under-13 boys premier soccer team competed in three different indoor divisions over the winter, and they came away as champions in each — without losing a game.

The Lightning posted 7-0-1 records in finishing first in the under-14 first division at Total Soccer in Farmington; in the under-13 first division at Total Soccer in Farmington; and at the under-14 second session at Canton Soccerdome.

Team members are Jeffrey Bennett, Jai Bilimoria, Daniel Boylan, David Daigneau, Nick Houdek, John Kaczmarek, Brent Kwiatkowski, Daniel Longpre, Pat Meyn, Brad Nollar, Tavio Palazzolo, Randy Palis, Jason Priebe, Aaron Schmidt, Kevin Schopieray, Kevin Strucel, Ben Wielcchowski and Jamie Zdrodowski. The team is coached by Watson Zdrodowski, Leroy Schopieray and Michael Longpre.

College updates

•Bob Petrie's career as a goalie at Bowling Green State ended ingloriously, in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association semifinals against eventual league champion University of Michigan, which beat the Falcons 7-2 at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit March 14.

Petrie, a senior from Plymouth Canton HS, made 19 saves as BGSU finished its season with a 17-16-5 record. Petrie was 13-10-4 and had a 3.63 goals-against average, with an 87.3 saves percentage.

Petrie's career isn't at an end, however. Ranked sixth on BGSU's all-time list in career wins (48) and seventh in goals-against average (3.47), Petrie is scheduled to play for the U.S. at the World University Hockey Championships at JLA next month.

•The pitching continues to sparkle for University of Michigan's softball team, which entered the Boilermaker Invitational last weekend at Purdue with a 21-7-1 record. The Lady Wolverines team earned run average stood at 1.24.

Kelly Holmes, a senior pitcher from Plymouth Canton, has done her share. Holmes was 6-3 going into the tournament with a 1.22 ERA; in 63 innings pitched, she's allowed 51 hits and 11 walks, striking out 47.

Inline competition

An inline aggressive skating competition is slated for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, April 6 at Bladesports, located at Joy and Main in Canton.

Cost is $30, which includes a T-shirt, stickers, and registration into the event, but spots are limited. There are three levels of competition: beginner, intermediate and advanced.

For more information, you may call (313 (202-8606).

Softball sign-up

The Canton Softball Center is now accepting registrations for the upcoming season. Team registration costs $495 per plus umpire fees for a 14-game season, featuring both single games and double-headers.

Game balls, USSSA registration, and first- and second-place individual and sponsor awards for each league are included.

The season begins April 13. Call (313) 4835600, Ext. 2 or 3, for further information.

Whalers: Last chance

They've got the stake, they know where the heart is, now all the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds have to do is find the hammer and drive it in.

Sault Ste. Marie spotted the Detroit Whalers a goal Friday night, then roared back for an 8-3 victory in the first round of the Ontario Hockey League playoffs.

Game 4 of the best-of-seven series, which Sault Ste. Marie leads 3-0, was scheduled for Saturday night. Results were not available at press time but can be read in Thursday's edition of the Observer.

"They're the fourth or fifth best team in North America," Whalers' coach Peter DeBoer said. "And they showed why. They're very deep.

"We went into the game with the goal of shutting down Joe Thornton, who's probably going to be the No. 1 draft choice of the NHL.

"We did that. Their goals came from their second and third line guys. We're young and inexperienced. There's not much you can do when they start chipping in goals."

Peter Cava got a hat trick for the Greyhounds, who also got single goals from Trevor Tokarczyk, Marc Moro, Richard Uniacke, Chad Spurr and Matt Lahey.

Nothing from Thornton, though. Not so much as a solitary assist.

Mission accomplished. Sort of.

Harold Druken got the Whalers off to a flying start with a goal just 4:12 into the game.

He was smartly positioned right in front of Sault Ste. Marie goalie Michal Podolka and whacked home the rebound of shot from between the circles. Sergei Fedotov and Randy Fitzgerald drew the assists.

Druken was foiled on a shorthanded breakaway attempt a couple of minutes later and Andrew Taylor fanned on a pass from Eric Gooldy, who had just gotten out of the penalty box.

Detroit kept coming up short on some golden opportunities as the puck seemed to take a wrong bounce, or somebody was just slightly out of position, or ... well, you get the idea.

"That first 20 minutes was probably the best 20 minutes we've played in the series," DeBoer said. "We needed to pop in two or three more.

"If a good team like that can weather a period like that, down just 1-0, it's going to be tough. But we battled hard the whole game."

Tokarczyk tied the score 3:01 into the second period and it was 3-1 before the period was half over.

Bryan McKinney drew the Whalers within a goal by taking advantage of a turnover behind Podolka, sneaking out and taking a shot that banged off the Greyhound goalie's back into the net.

But Uniacke converted a two-pass chance to make it 4-2 after two periods and Cava's second goal started the third.

It was all over at that point. The final Whalers' goal was an outright gift. Uniacke shot the puck into his own net trying to pass it back to a teammate. Troy Smith got credit as closest to the goal at the time.

"We're overmatched," DeBoer said, "in experience and manpower.

"Our guys have given me everything they've got every night this season. In my book, you can't do much more than that."

Canton set to defend state title

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK
STAFF WRITER

Take a guess which style of basketball Plymouth Canton soccer coach Don Smith likes ... the probe and seek or racehorse variety.

"You watch the NCAA basketball games," Smith said on the evening he was contacted to chat about his 1997 Plymouth Canton girls soccer team. "They do nothing but run up and down the floor.

"I don't like the slowdown game. It's boring as far as I'm concerned."

And why not?

Smith's Canton soccer teams, boys and girls, get up and down the field.

He draws some heat for his high-substitution style. Some of it from people who can't keep up.

And the Chiefs' battling boss has some news for the folks who have been trying to put soccer on the map for more than two decades, too.

"Soccer, if they want to make it in this country," Smith said, "has got to pick up the tempo. The American people like excitement.

"In football, it's long passes and runs. In basketball they run up and down the floor.

"Did you see the NCAA soccer tournament?

"North Carolina won the girls championship. They were putting in subs and playing a running up and down game. They beat Notre Dame, which didn't sub.

"It (the high-energy style) might be catching on in some other places."

Canton won the state girls title last spring, which brought the Chiefs a trophy for the shelf last year and a bulls-eye on the back this season.

Everybody's going gunning for Canton this year. (So what's new?)

The Chiefs will be hard-pressed to better their record of 18-4 from a year ago.

"We'll just try to equal it," Smith said. "People are going to be after us. We have to be ready.

"We have a nice solid team. We should be able to run a lot of kids at everybody. We sort of plan for it.

"We've got a good group. We're young, only six seniors, so we're still young."

Smith has a nice mix, though. Besides the half a dozen seniors, he has seven juniors, another half-dozen sophomores and three freshmen.

"I always seem to find 3-4 ninth graders," he said. "It helps keep the stock nice and fresh all the time. (Playing on the varsity) helps the younger ones along quickly. They really come along fast."

His tri-captains will be a trio of talented seniors — forward Jenny Parviainen, midfielder/defender Emile Meier and defender Jill Rahnert.

Rahnert was a first-team All-Observer selection last year while Parviainen and Meier were second-team choices.

Defender Emily Stachura, midfielder Beth Knight and Becky Hayner, a goalie who transferred into the school district from Brighton, are the other seniors Smith counts on for leadership.

Some of Canton's juniors won honors last season, too. Forward Melissa Marzolf was first-team All-Observer as a sophomore. She was a chief scoring threat for the Chiefs with 17 goals and eight assists, bringing her career totals to 27 goals and 20 assists.

Sweeper Elisa Esper was honorable mention All-Observer last year.

Other veteran juniors include midfielder/defender Elisa Erickson, midfielder/defender Angele Lebbon, goalkeeper Kristin Lukasik and forward Lisa Reissenweber. In addtion, defender Kristin Mayer comes up from the junior varsity.

Midfielder/forward Jannelle Kobor was honorable mention All-Observer as a freshman and is a leader of a talented sophomore class. Returning for their second varsity season are midfielder Kelly Connell, defender Cheron Rice, midfielder Lisa Tomasso and midfielder Sara Ware. Sophomore Robin Devos moves up from the junior varsity.

Smith's three precocious freshmen are defenders Abi Morrell and Heather Thompson plus midfielder Pam West.

Canton opens Monday, April 7, at Walled Lake Central, then plays Livonia Stevenson two days later, followed by games against Troy and Northville.

Offensive firepower: One reason for optimism at Canton — the return of forward Jenny Parviainen, who will certainly put goals on the board for the

Big year on ice

Curtin led Shamrocks to title, and leads Observer's top players

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

This was quite a year for Observerland hockey teams.

First, there was the methodical run through the season by Redford Catholic Central, which captured the state Class A championship with a resounding 7-0 victory over defending champion Trenton in the finals March 8 at Flint's IMA Arena. It was CC's second state crown (the last coming in 1994) under the strong guidance of coach Gordie St. John.

Scot Curtin
Catholic Central

The Shamrocks, the Michigan Metro High School Hockey League champions, finished 25-1-1 overall.

For their efforts, CC placed four on the first team and three more on the second.

It was also a banner year for the Livonia Stevenson Spartans, who finished 16-5-3 overall under coach Mike Harris, while going undefeated in the Suburban High School Hockey League.

The Spartans landed three on the first team.

And not to forget newcomer Redford Union, under coach Kirk Hunter.

The Panthers, a first-year varsity program, finished 12-10-1 overall and made a Carolina Panthers-type run in the regional, defeating Livonia Franklin and Livonia Churchill to reach the Class A final at Trenton before bowing to the host Trojans, 5-1.

For his efforts in his first year, the Observer salutes Hunter as Coach of the Year.

Hunter was the head scout from 1990-95 for the Saginaw Gears Junior A Hockey Club of the North American Hockey League. He was also an assistant coach for the Detroit Jr. Redford Wings of the NAJHL (1989-90) and was an assistant the previous year for Redford N.A.C.E., a Junior A team (1988-89).

Hunter also coached the Redford Midget AA state champions and national runners-up (1987-89).

RU, Churchill (11-9-3), Franklin (7-14-2) also landed one player each on the squad.

HONORABLE MENTION

Redford CC (25-1-1): Brett Murphy, Matt Bieniek, Nick Lewarne, Tim Cibor, Mike Sharpe, Ian Devlin; Livonia Stevenson (16-5-3): Doug Peacock; Redford Union (12-10-1): Jon Price, Mike O'Keefe, Joel Halliday; Livonia Churchill (11-9-3): Matt Grant, B.J. Tehan; Livonia Franklin (7-14-2): Dan Boyle, Dan Hofelich, Tom Taylor.

Darin Fawkes, defenseman, Livonia Stevenson: Defensive stalwart who is the anchor of the Spartans' defense. He is a strong skater who can move the puck up ice with ease. He is also a solid shot blocker and is very physical in his own zone, but what he did so well this year is learn to how to play in the defensive zone," CC coach Gordie St. John said. "He came back and made his checks.

"He was a very responsible kid, a good leader."

Greg Job, forward, Liv. Franklin: The three-year letterwinner and team captain moved into the fifth spot on the school's all-time scoring list after notching 21 goals and 16 assists for a total of 37 points.

The junior now has a total of 65 goals and 67 assists in his career.

He was the Suburban High School Hockey League's leading scorer despite missing the final two weeks of the season with a broken arm.

"Greg was the heart and soul of our team this year," Franklin coach Terry Jobbitt said. "He leads the team by example and is always ready to learn more. He enjoys helping his teammates. He's a very hard worker."

Job made All-State and All-League.

Andy Domzalski, forward, Liv. Stevenson: The senior played center and right defense this season, notching seven goals and 21 assists. He made All-League and All-State honorable mention.

"Andy is a very versatile, skill player who can play offense and defense," Stevenson coach Mike Harris said. "He's a fast and explosive-type of skater. He has a hard and accurate shot.

"Just a gritty-type kid."

Dan McLellan, forward, Redford CC: The senior left winger came on strong during the second half of the season, finishing with 16 goals and 20 assists.

"Dan is one of the best penalty-killers I've seen in high school hockey," St. John said. "He had the uncanny knack to score short-handed goals. I believe he was on the ice for more short-handed goals then the opposition had in power-play goals.

"He was one of the strongest offensive players we had. He was very quick and just a hard-working player."

Darin Fawkes, forward, Liv. Stevenson: The junior right winger led the Spartans this season with 20 goals and 17 assists en route to All-League and All-State honorable mention honors.

"Darin was one of our top players because of his speed and deception — he was a jitterbug on the ice," Harris said. "For a first-year player he had an outstanding year.

"The team designed to get him the puck and he was worth almost a goal a game.

"Darin is a real quiet kid, but a leader. He never complains and he's always on time."

Trevor Pagel, forward, Redford Union: The senior center pumped in 29 goals and 19 assists for 48 points. He had nine short-handed goals eight power-play goals for the regional finalist.

"Trevor had a great season," RU coach Kirk Hunter said. "He's a good two-way player who is a real threat to score in any situation.

"He was our go-to guy."

Pagel was named All-Suburban and honorable mention All-State.

Scot Curtin, defenseman, Redford CC: Voted Michigan's Mr. Hockey by the coaches association, the senior finished with 14 goals and 23 assists for 37 points.

"Scott was a combination of a very good defensive defenseman and a great offensive defenseman as well," St. John said. "He's very quick. He's a smart hockey player who finds the openings and puts the puck in the passing lanes.

"He's very skilled."

Curtin was named All-Michigan Metro and of course All-State.

Mike Porter, defenseman, Redford CC: Made up high school hockey's best one-two combination on defense with Curtin.

Porter, a senior, led CC in scoring with 16 goals and 25 assists for 41 points as he garnered All-State and All-Michigan Metro honors.

"Mike had the ability to to control the pace of the game, either slow it down or speed it up," St. John said. "He was not only intimidating because of his size, but also because he could dictate the flow of the game. You need a guy like that.

"He and Scot were the best defensive pair I've ever seen in high school hockey.

"He was just invaluable to us. He was a great asset in the locker room."

Brandon Martoia, defenseman, Liv. Churchill: The junior made All-State honorable mention and All-League for the Chargers.

He finished with eight goals and nine assists with 34 penalty minutes.

"Brandon is a natural talent," Churchill coach Jeff Hatley said. "He sees the ice real well and is a good puck-handler. He's an all-around good player who creates a lot of offensive opportunities.

"We used him on the power-play and as a penalty-killer. We used him at forward, too."

Mike Schmidt, defenseman, Liv. Stevenson: The senior was a three-year player and two-year captain for the Spartans.

This season he scored eight goals and added 18 assists for the Suburban champs.

"Mike like by example, he was our Rock of Gibraltar," Harris said. "He was so reliable back there. We used him on the power-play and as a penalty killer."

Crusaders defeat, then tie Aquinas

MADONNA

Madonna University's softball team got just about everything it wanted from Thursday's double-header at Aquinas College.

A field in good enough condition to play on. Weather good enough to play in. And results that ended up a single inning short of perfect.

As it is, the Lady Crusaders will have to settle for a win and a tie. They won Thursday's first game 6-4, thanks in large part to Shanna Price's four-hit, no-walk pitching performance.

But the second game had to be called because of darkness after six innings, with the game tied 5-5.

In the opener, Madonna overcame a 3-0 deficit after one inning, scoring twice in the third and four times in the fifth. Shawna Greene and Dawn Shaffer each had a hit and two runs batted in to lead the Crusader attack; Vicki Malkowski added two hits, and Melissa McGue had a hit, a walk and scored twice.

Price went the distance, allowing two earned runs in improving her record to 4-1.

In the second game, Janell Leschinger was cruising along for Madonna with a 5-0 lead — until the bottom of the sixth. That's when Aquinas scored five times to force the game to end in a tie.

Leschinger pitched 5 1/3 innings, allowing two earned runs on six hits. Price relieved and got the final two outs of the sixth, but not before giving up two earned runs on three hits and a walk.

Madonna had eight hits in the game, with Shaffer and Jamie Heins each accounting for two, including a double apiece. Shaffer had one RBI; Jamie Vickers and Malkowski had a hit and an RBI each.

The Crusaders made six errors in the twinbill, leading to three unearned runs.

Bigger Indians eliminate Wayne in state semis

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

CLASS A HOOP

Wayne Memorial painfully learned Friday there's no substitute for size, especially when you're facing a 7-footer and another frontliner who is 6-9.

But it was 6-2 guard Eric Large who loomed big over the Zebras, scoring a game-high 24 points to lift Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills past Wayne in the state Class A boys basketball semifinals, 57-46, before 8,728 fans at Michigan State University's Breslin Center in East Lansing.

The loss ended the Lorenzo Guess era in which Wayne compiled an 83-16 record over the past four years, including two trips to the semifinals and another to the quarterfinal.

Guess, the 6-3 senior headed for MSU to play football and basketball, finished with a team-high 20 points, while another four-year varsity performer Richard Rashad, a 6-4 senior center and Wayne's tallest starter, added 14 points and 13 rebounds.

And although Wayne had fits dealing with senior twin towers — 6-11 Jeff Rabey (12 points and nine rebounds) and 6-9 Ryan Christopher (six points and 14 rebounds), it was the sharp shooting of Large, who was eight of 13 from the floor, including a pair of three-pointers, which helped the Indians overcome a one-point halftime deficit and finish the Zebras' season at 24-2.

"We had been humming right along in the tournament, but everything seemed like a struggle today," Wayne coach Chuck Henry said. "And I really don't have an answer why.

"It was tough for us to score and that's been relatively easy for us to do all season long."

With Rabey and Christopher hanging around the basket, Ottawa Hills was able to gamble defensively against Wayne's perimeter players.

The usually dead-eye LaVelle Guess, who had been averaging 15 points per game, didn't get off a first-quarter shot as Ottawa Hills led 12-9.

"When a kid gets it blocked, the next time down he's not as comfortable," Henry said. "We gave up a lot of size, 7 feet and 6-9 to 6-4 and 6-2, but give them credit. They played better basketball."

Despite shooting an uncharacteristic 10 of 32 (31 percent) from the floor during the first half, Wayne managed to pull ahead with a late seven-point flurry in the first half for a 23-22 advantage.

But despite taking the lead, Lorenzo Guess was not feeling comfortable.

"I was mad because we gave them a lot of easy layups," he said. "They were sending a lot of long passes down and we didn't get back. Guys were worried about going for offensive rebounds and crashing the boards, but it was nobody's fault because everybody was so into the game."

A Lorenzo Guess hoop to start the third quarter gave Wayne its biggest advantage of the game, 25-22, but that would be the last time the Zebras would be on top.

Ottawa Hills went on a 9-0 run to go ahead 31-25 as Large began to heat up from the outside after Rabey (four points) and Christopher (two) reestablished themselves inside.

Large had seven third-quarter points as the Indians led 40-33 entering the fourth.

Wayne tried to step up its full-court pressure, but nothing seemed to work as speedy 5-5 point-guard Ernest McNeil (five assists) continuall was able to get the ball into the front-court.

Adam Sturdivent came off the bench to score four points, giving Ottawa Hills a 46-33 lead with 5:44 remaining.

Wayne cut the deficit to six, 48-42, on an acrobatic shot by Lorenzo Guess with 2:12 left, but it was too little, too late.

The win moved Ottawa Hills (21-6) into Saturday's state championship game with Detroit Redford (19-6). Redford won the other semifinal in the first game of the double-header over Public School League rival Central, 67-65, in overtime.

"We've had an up-and-down season, but right now everything seems to be in sync," Ottawa Hills coach Jim Eaddy said. "When I have both big people in there, it makes a difference, no question.

"We stressed the high-low. With 6-11 and 6-9 on the floor, that can be devastating."

Wayne was an icy-cold 27.9 percent from the field (19 of 68), while Ottawa Hills was 24 of 50 (48 percent).

"We didn't want to get beat off the dribble, but we know if we do, we'd get help with those two (Rabey and Christopher) back there," Large said. "We watched the film against East Lansing and we knew we had to stop the Guess brothers because they take 70 percent of their shots when they have the ball.

"We knew LaVelle could shoot and Lorenzo would penetrate and get the ball out to the 'three' (point-line)."

Quick start by Mason CC jolts, but can't derail, Bishop Borgess in state showdown

BY STEVE KOWALSKI

CLASS B HOOPS

Redford Bishop Borgess experienced somewhat of a time warp early in the first quarter of Thursday's Class C boys basketball state semifinal at Michigan State University's Breslin Center.

The Spartans' opponent, Scottville Mason County Central, jumped to a quick 6-0 lead with consecutive three-point shots by guard Jesse Deering and forward Travis Aultman.

The long-range shooting looked familiar — like another CC the Spartans see enough of in the regular season.

"They reminded me of (Detroit) Catholic Central with those 3s," said Aaron Jessup, Borgess' 6-foot-3 guard rapidly becoming one of the state's best juniors.

But the Spartans regrouped in a hurry, ending the half on a 24-6 run en route to a 79-46 victory. Jessup led four Spartans in double figures with 21 points, including 11 in the first quarter.

Borgess ended the quarter on a 7-0 run, culminated by a steal and dunk by Jessup, to build a 20-14 lead.

And the Spartans never looked back.

The win sent the Spartans into Saturday's championship game where they were heavily favored to beat Three Oaks River Valley, a 69-67 winner over Benzie Central in Thursday's other Class C semifinal.

Mason County Central finished the season with a 23-3 overall record and a real appreciation of Borgess' talent.

"They're good, real good," Mason County Central coach Tim Genson said. "They are well rounded inside and outside and hit the glass real well. I told my JV coach 'I don't think we missed any of our first five shots. If we keep this up we'll be in great shape.' A 94-foot game wasn't the kind of game we were going to win."

Defense was an even bigger concern for Mason County Central.

With Mason County Central laying back in a zone, Borgess canned five shots from three-point range in the game's first 11 minutes to gain a 27-14 lead.

Mason County Central did an admirable job on Sam Hoskin, the Spartans' 6-7 junior center who finished with seven points and two rebounds.

Chad Pleiness, Mason County Central's 6-6 junior center, had a team-high 12 points.

Those games will be a test for Canton, but Chiefs' fans should be reminded their team got off to a slow start last season. Smith typically prepares his team for the end of the schedule, which is why it's strong at the beginning.

Maybe it takes time for Smith's high-energy, high-substitution game to get in gear each season.

"Even when I coached Little Caesar's years ago, and you could only have 16 players, I still subbed," he said. "I like to play that up tempo type game.

"I think after they get used to it — some kids come from club teams, so they're not used to it — they enjoy it more.

"It gives more of them a chance to play, that's for sure.

"It's nice to win, but you can win this way too."

RECREATION

TIM NOWICKI

The ice storm on March 13 was inconvenient for people who didn't have electrical power and for those who may have slid into another car accidentally.

But to the early migrating birds and our resident birds, ice storms can be deadly.

When ice covers so much of the vegetation, as it did during the storm and the following several days in some areas of southeast Michigan, it's hard for birds to get food.

Researchers think birds still get 80 percent of their food in winter from the wild. Feeders only supplement their diets.

Although birds get only a small amount of their food from feeders, they're absolutely critical for their survival during ice storms.

A researcher followed a group of birds in a forest and monitored a group of birds that frequented a feeding station.

During severe storms that lasted two-three days, there was greater mortality in the forest group that didn't have access to a feeder than in the population that visited the feeders.

Early arriving migrants like robins and red-winged blackbirds take their chances when they return North early.

Late winter storms can take their toll on birds weak from their journey.

If they can't find food and are too weak to fly back South, they die in several days.

Some of the early arrivals exhibit what's called reverse migration.

Birds fly South just far enough to find food and suitable conditions. They will return when conditions are once again suitable in the North.

I didn't see any red-winged blackbirds on my way to Jackson, Mich., last weekend, though I know they had returned in good numbers.

This ice storm was considered the worst in Detroit Edison's history, but according to Richard Keen in his book "Michigan Weather," it wasn't Michigan's worst.

In 1922 a 100-mile wide band of Michigan was coated with ice up to 2 inches thick. Wires were covered with up to 4 inches, about 11 pounds per foot of wire.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

ON THE RUN

MARYBETH DILLON

One of the nicest things about this time of year is that the calendar begins to fill up with road-races - organized incentives to roll out of bed and enjoy a morning in spring with fellow runners and walkers. With winter on its way out, numbered are the days of battling inertia brought on by frigid temperatures, wind, ice and snow.

In southeastern Michigan, we're blessed to have a wealth of races from which to choose.

March 29

The Easter Bunny Boogie - a 4-miler sponsored by the Metro Macomb Runners at Metropolitan Beach Metropark - kicks off at 11 a.m. A special race for kids, a 50-yard run, is scheduled for noon. Entry fee is just $6.

Metro Beach on Lake St. Clair, a wonderful place to visit year-round, is closer than it seems. Exit I-94 at Metroparkway (16 Mile Road). For more information, call (810)426-7221.

The Motor City Striders present the Detroit Pistons Fast Break 5K at 10 a.m. at the west entrance of the Palace of Auburn Hills. The $20 advance entry fee includes a ticket to the Detroit Pistons vs. Philadelphia game, 7 p.m. Sunday, March 30; two vouchers for the Detroit Vipers hockey game at noon March 29; t-shirts; giveaways; and awards. Race day registration ($25) will be at the Palace from 8:30 a.m. - 9:45 a.m.

Call (810)544-9099 for more information.

April 5

Run the Shores, presented by the Lake Shore High School Athletic Booster Club, kicks off at 9 a.m. The 5-mile run/racewalk and 1-mile Fun Run courses in St. Clair Shores are fast and flat. Run the Shores is known for some of the best post-race goodies in Michigan. Call (810)293-7937 or (810)294-5726.

April 6

Enjoy Americana come-to-life as you run past the old mill stream at the Manchester Mill Run. Norman Rockwell would paint a scene of this one.

The 1-mile starts at 11 a.m., followed by a 5-miler at 11:15 a.m.

Entry fee is $15 for applications received prior to March 28. After April 3, the fee is $17.

An all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast follows the race. Flowers and four-color, long-sleeved t-shirts go to all runners. The popular race is known for its original awards and homespun hospitality. Proceeds go to Manchester school athletics.

"Everyone over 21 is invited to a post-race cross-country fun run and get-together hosted by the Hash House Harriers running club, with a free dinner and beverages afterwards," says Manchester race director Chris Brooks.

For more information, call (313)428-1447 or (313)285-1116.

April 19

Detroit's Race for the Cure 5K run/walk and 1-mile fun walk is expected to draw 15,000 to the Detroit Zoo. The men's 5K starts at 8:30 am. followed by the 9 a.m. 5K walk and run for women, family and friends, and a 9:10 a.m. 1-mile fun walk.

Registration, if postmarked by March 28, is $15. For more information, call (800)527-6266.

Entry forms for most races are available at area running stores.

M.B. Dillon is an Observer staffer who has run 31 marathons. Send results and race information for "On the Run" to her at 794 S. Main, Plymouth, or fax material to (313)459-4224.

ROCK CLIMBING: Up against the wall

Looking for toe holds: Safe in his well-knotted harness, 11-year-old Doug Perkins of Farmington Hills makes his first climb up the artificial wall at Benchmark.

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER

For a beginner, rock climbing is mostly about tying knots.

In fact, at a recent beginner's class at the Benchmark in Farmington Hills, two hours were spent tying, untying and tying again "figure eight" and "keeper" knots.

The six students in the class only spent minutes actually working their way up the artificial climbing wall inside the sporting goods store.

Instructor Mike Hood quickly made it plain why a well-tied knot is critical to mastering – and surviving – the sport.

"Rock climbing is a dangerous sport," said Hood, co-owner of Lansing-based Vertical Ventures, which puts on the classes. "It has a high bonehead potential, with lots of improper things done. You must put your gear on properly. Being safe is being smart. Most accidents are avoidable. Never get lazy and use bad knots. Have a reason for everything you do, and have it checked."

A well-tied knot hooked to the climber's harness is critical mainly because of the law of gravity. What goes up can come crashing down.

Everything's dandy as long as the climber keeps moving upward. But when a climber misses a toehold and topples, it's only the rope tied to the harness, and a partner holding the rope, that keeps the climber from falling to the ground.

A poorly tied knot can snap open quickly under the weight of a falling climber.

Students who take the class can come back repeatedly to master the techniques of climbing the store's wall. But they get very few shots at learning sound safety techniques from an expert.

Hood has climbed rocks around the world, "as far north as Scotland, as far south as Venezuela." In teaching 5,000 students, he said he's never had an accident happen.

"You guys (and gals) will remember these knots the rest of your life," Hood said, as he once again tells them to take apart their knot and start over.

One of the six beginners is Doug Perkins, a fifth-grader at Franklin Road Christian School in Farmington Hills, who is accompanied by his father, Jim.

The Perkins family is going to Colorado this summer; one of Doug's goals is to do some rock climbing there.

The Benchmark has one of two artificial climbing walls now available in the Observerland area. The second one opened March 14 in the Recreation Equipment Inc. (REI) store in the Northville Centre shopping mall at Six Mile and Haggerty in Northville.

With a dearth of mountains in Michigan, Hood teaches most of his students mountain climbing techniques on the ledges near Grand Ledge in mid-Michigan.

Partners are essential to mountain climbing. Partners check each other out, making sure each has done everything right before the climb ever begins. The climber even has to get permission from the partner/belayer to begin the climb.

"Ready to climb?" Doug asked his partner, Kevin Kenny, an industrial electrician from Wolverine Lake.

"Climb on," Kenny said, after checking Doug's knot and harness.

While Doug searches for the next toehold on the massive artificial wall, Kenny keeps the proper tension in the rope. He gives Doug just enough rope to let him move upward.

Doug slipped, but remembered Hood's rule of safety: "keep your hands on the wall if you fall; make sure your hand touches the wall, not your head. Launch yourself off the wall and slide down."

Doug swings back and forth on the rope; as belayer, Kenny did his job in halting Doug's drop.

In subsequent visits to the artificial wall, Doug will learn the skills of climbing. He'll learn to gently move over the rocks, not muscle his way upward.

"It's more like ballet," Hood said. "It's about finesse, balance, grace."

Well-dressed "figure 8": Over and over, Doug Perkins took apart the knot hooking him to his harness and remade it. Jim Perkins helped his son through the complex process.

Getting started

The best way to get started in rock climbing is to first work with the experts to learn safety techniques.

The Benchmark class cost students $20 for a three-hour session with an expert, Mike Hurd of Vertical Ventures in Lansing.

Both the Benchmark in Farmington and the new Recreation Equipment Inc. (REI) store in Northville have practice climbing walls, with artificial toeholds embedded in the wall.

Harnesses and ropes are available, but the climber must know how to use them.

The newly opened REI store is just getting underway, so many details are undecided. There are no classes, but at certain times a belayer is on staff to help climbers use the wall. The belayer's help is free. For more information, call 810-347-2100.

REI's wall is not like the wall at Benchmark, which abuts the wall of the store. REI's wall is a free-standing pinnacle that has a "chimney" (a more difficult climb) in the middle.

TEN PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

This is one story that I had better not forget to write. Last Saturday it was the Alzheimer's Association with their 1997 Bowling Bonanza at Cloverlanes in Livonia. This event, their 8th Annual was hosted by Bob Allison, the well known voice of "Ask Your Neighbor" on WEXL-AM radio. Altogether, over 500 people participated in the bowling games to have some fun and at the same time raise money for the fight against Alzheimer's Disease. In the greater Detroit area alone there are some 70,000 people who are afflicted. The participants each raised money on their own through pledges, and those who raised the most were rewarded with special prizes for achieving various levels of donations. Those who brought in $2,500 or more received a trip for two (2 nights stay) to Toronto. The $1,000 level was good for 13" color TV, while the lesser amounts were also rewarded nicely. In addition to the fund raising prizes, there were over 200 other door prizes given out in random drawings during bowling. Many of those were gift certificates from local merchants and restaurants who donated to this worthy cause. Host Bob Allison is remembered by a lot of bowling fans for his TV show, "Bowling for Dollars," which was aired weekly on Ch. 4 a number of years ago.

Many of the participants, like Lilly Evans of Canton who entered with her friend, Ernie Wygrecki said, "I like bowling and wanted to participate in this fund-raiser, it's my second year with it and many of my friends from the Farmington Singles Professionals are also in it today." Ann Hengstebeck entered with her friend, Rich Szurek and she said, "I just wanted to help in the cause, to raise money in the fight against Alzheimer's. I brought in $88 in pledges." According to Dian Wilkins, Executive Director of the Detroit Chapter, "This is the best turnout we have ever had. I am excited about it, and all proceeds go directly to help provide services for the patients and their families. Event coordinator, Mickey McGee added, "I want to thank our many sponsors and donors for the many awards and great door prizes."

This year's event was a huge success, everyone who came in enjoyed the bowling and the pizza along with knowing that they had helped raise the projected amount of about $25,000.

Fortunately for the fund-raiser, the worst ice storm to hit here in years was a day earlier, and people were able to function normally again. On Friday most of the schools were closed. Isn't it funny that when the schools are closed by bad weather, all the bowling centers are open? That is always a big day for business as the kids then have a free day to go bowling.

Oak Lanes in Westland will host a "Easter Hunt Ladies Singles" tournament on Tuesday, March 25 in the morning with a starting time at 9:30 a.m. The $10 entry fee includes 3 games of bowling (1st regular, 2nd 3-6-9 automatic strike frames and 3rd nine pin no-taps). They will have three high game jackpots (handicapped), two mystery games special Easter prizes, position payoffs and free baby sitting is available, all included. For additional information, call Oak Lanes at (313) 422-7420.

The future is now, as the high technology of the 21st century has reached a few of the bowling centers. Brunswick has "Instant Replay" and "Bowler Track" which both provide information on each ball delivery. Cherry Hill Lanes on Inkster Road at Cherry Hill has the only such installation presently in Metro Detroit area. Why not more? The expense of this program is "Outta sight" according to Ted Hochstein at Cherry Hill. They only have two lanes set up with it, but it works great if you want to really be able to analyze your game. You can play back the frame and see your delivery from a frontal view, you get a readout on the ball speed and where it was as it traveled down the lane, what board it was on at 15, 21, 33, 40, 45, 50 and 55 feet. It even has the angle of entry to the pins, so you can see exactly what you are doing, and how it relates to the pin action. Someday more of these will be in use, but for now, only at Cherry Hill.

Man of Steel moves into '90s

Superheroes seldom die ... for good, that is. They may fade away, but they always come back, bigger and flashier than ever.

Superman, beloved action hero of millions of comics readers, has undergone a few changes since he made his debut with DC Comics in 1938. He's died, come back, married the ever-patient Lois Lane, and certainly has become more muscular over the years.

Last week, he appeared on the shelves of Comics Readers on Wayne Road in Westland, sporting a new, streamlined silver-white and blue bodysuit. Even his hairdo, that neat side and romantic forelock, has changed: We're talking sleek GQ jock.

According to Susie Harris, a manager at Comics Readers, Superman's new look comes compliments a near- fatal encounter with a character know as The Atomic Skull. "There was a freak power surge and Superman absorbed it. For the past several issues, his powers have been changing."

Superman's new look is more than skin-deep. He underwent a molecular restructuring that rendered him "non-corporal" and required a cybernetically enhanced suit to "contain his powers," said Harris.

"He's also faster, can burst upon a scene like lightening, and disrupt electrical appliances, like computers. He can see energy fields," said Harris. "He's turned into an energy being."

Jeff Burke of Westland, also a manager at Comics Readers, is doubtful that fans will accept Superman's new suit. "I would say they'll like the old one more because it was traditional. Change is always a hurtful thing."

"Comics have really changed in the last couple years," said Harris. "Superheroes are still popular, but they don't dominate the market like they once did. Titles such as 'Star Wars' and 'Aliens' really give them a run nowadays."

Harris shares Burke's doubts about the longevity of Superman's new look. "It's a pretty cool-looking costume, but I don't know how long it will go over. They tried changing Spiderman. It wasn't popular with the customers."

Comic Readers, known as a "direct only" store in the trade, carries two cover versions of the latest "Superman, Ready for the Next Century" issue, one of which glows in the dark.

"You can only buy certain comics here, not at a 7-Eleven or a Dalton's," said Harris. The store has stocked about 50 copies of each issue.

Just who buys superhero comics today? Who's willing to pay $2 for a mere 20 pages of FLASH! SPLOOSH! ZAP! and KERPOW!? Harris said her biggest customer is a male, in his late teens or early 20s, and "he's willing to spend $10 to $20 a week."

Harris also said more women are buying action comics than a decade ago. "We have about six or seven regulars. They're in their 20s, and don't spend as much as men. They are more particular."

WSDP named top school station

WSDP, 88.1FM, was named Station of the Year by the Michigan Association of Educational Broadcasters. The award was presented Wednesday, March 19, at the association's annual share-a-thon.

This is the fourth time in six years that WSDP has received the honor. Judging the Station of the Year category were Thom Paulson and Nancy Ziskin of Interlochen Public Radio. Paulson is the general manager and vice president for Radio. He is also the immediate past president of the Michigan Public Broadcasters. Zisken is the Development Coordinator.

They recognized WSDP for being "a station committed to strong and responsible community involvement and to a broad range of educational experience within the purview of a radio curriculum." Their evaluation said, "We were impressed with the emphasis on the breadth of service to its constituents. This experience is especially pertinent in an era of increasingly non-personal, syndicated radio. WSDP's curriculum seems to provide training which is vital to the future of radio as it is important in the lives of caring people, regardless of their occupation."

Individual students were also honored for their work. Judging in the student categories was done by instructors at Specs Howard School of Broadcasting Arts. Students receiving honors were: Denny Kapp, Bronze Medal in Sportscast; John Kreger, Bronze Medal in Newscast, Bronze Medal in Sports Play-by-Play; Justin Belgiano, Silver Medal in Interview, Silver Medal in Production, Bronze Medal in Production; Mike Wicket, Bronze Medal in Sports Play-by-Play, Bronze Medal in Newscast; Kelly Honecker, Silver Medal in Newscast, Shripal Shah, Bronze Medal in Production, Erin Walterscheid, Silver Medal in Production.

"The students were very deserving of the recognition. The judges said Bronze Medal indicated a professional quality of work. I've been impressed with each of their work since they joined our staff," said Bill Keith, station Manager.

The MAEB was formed to promote and develop low-power educational broadcasting in Michigan. It was formed Nov. 2, 1977.

Group studies buildings

WAYNE-WESTLAND SCHOOLS

By Donna Mulcahy
Special Writer

Just how bad are buildings owned by the Wayne-Westland School District and what needs to be done to fix them?

A group of citizens and an architectural firm are in the process of finding out.

The Citizens Study Committee, was formed by Superintendent Duane Moore in December, consisting of one representative from each of the district's 30 buildings.

"All of the members are citizens – parents, senior citizens and other residents," said Moore, who chairs the group.

The group will identify and prioritize needed improvements to the buildings and make a recommendation to the board of education regarding a possible bond issue to pay for those improvements.

Moore said he formed the group in December responding to concerns trustees raised last fall about the deterioration of the buildings.

"I asked the (school) principals to find people who would be interested in serving on the committee and who were able to commit the time," Moore said. That's how the members were selected.

So far, the committee has met twice, on Jan. 27 and Feb. 24.

Each representative has toured his or her assigned building to find out what improvements need to be made. And on March 5-6, the full committee toured the district's two biggest buildings, John Glenn and Wayne Memorial high schools.

Four years ago, the Michigan Association of School Business Officials (MASBO) did a thorough audit of the district's buildings and issued a report outlining what repairs and improvements needed to be done.

The Citizens Study Committee used that report as a starting point.

"The hardest part has been holding ourselves back, because there are so many needs," Moore said.

"We have got to address the condition of the roofs and ventilation systems in our buildings," he said. "We also have power distribution problems. The power systems in our buildings weren't designed for today's technology, for running computers and things like that.

The group is also looking at barrier-free issues, floors and ceilings which need to be repaired and sports tracks and tennis courts that are crumbling.

"Plus, part of the bond would be for technology, for classroom computers and things like that," Moore added.

Since Proposal A was passed two years ago, individual school districts can no longer ask voters for millage increases. School districts can, however, ask voters to approve bond issues to pay for building renovation projects and technological improvements.

The school district can issue bonds on its own, but gets a more favorable bond rating by going through the state government.

On March 10, the board of education hired Bloomfield-based TMP Associates Inc. to prepare a comprehensive bond proposal for the district, for a fee that's not to exceed $22,500.

Moore had sent out requests for proposals to several architectural firms and TMP's was the most favorable, he said. The school district was not required to put the contract out for bids.

TMP will work closely with the Citizens Study Committee, the administration, school board, staff and students in developing the bond proposal.

Wish you were here

District expands pact with area college

By Donna Mulcahy
Special Writer

Wayne-Westland schools and Wayne County Community College are already Partners in Education at the William D. Ford Career/Technical Center.

But can the school district and the college become partners in fund-raising, too?

Sharon Banks hopes so. She is the executive director of the Education First Foundation, a non-profit fund-raising group that the college formed in August.

The foundation's purpose is to raise money to provide scholarships to WCCC students to cover non-tuition college expenses, such as books, lab fees, uniforms and automotive tools.

"Even with the low cost of tuition and fees at Wayne County Community College, higher education is out of the reach of many," Banks said, speaking to a group of about 10 community leaders and activists who had gathered in the Wayne-Westland Board of Education meeting room Thursday evening.

Board of Education President Patricia Brown organized the informal gathering to help spread the word about the foundation and to brainstorm ways in which it might help residents of the Wayne-Westland school district.

"I'd like to share with you what my vision of this is," Brown told the assembled guests, who among others included: Westland City Councilwoman Justine Barns; Cliff Johnson of the Wayne Democratic Club; and several members of the Westland Community Foundation.

Brown said that she would like to see the Wayne-Westland community raise money to endow a scholarship fund within the Education First Foundation.

The scholarships would be given solely to residents of the Wayne-Westland school district – adults and high school seniors alike – to help them take college classes at the Ford Career Center.

WCCC began offering associate's degree courses at the center in January, through a partnership with the school district called Partners In Education.

What would be different about the scholarships, Brown said, is that they would be given to the types of students who don't usually qualify for scholarships.

"We're not looking at the kids who are college-bound," she said. "We're looking at the people who aren't going on (to higher education) after the 12th grade, and that's what's different.

"We're looking at kids who might have abilities and skills and knowledge and may not have applied themselves 100 percent in high school ... These kids can go on and get the skills they need to have a career, raise a family and make a good living."

About 60 percent of Wayne-Westland students do not go on to receive a higher education once they leave high school, Brown said.

One concern raised at the meeting was that the Education First Foundation would, in some instances, be competing with the Westland Community Foundation for donations, and that the "cookie jar" might not be big enough for both.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Cardiology research

Botsford General Hospital's cardiology department is taking part in the largest multi-center international study exploring treatment options for cardiogenic shock, a condition which is fatal in more than three-quarters of patients who experience it.

The 12-month study, Thrombolysis and Counterpulsation to Improve Cardiogenic Shock Survival, will involve approximately 550 patients in an estimated 75 sites throughout the world, including 40 community hospitals in the U.S. The study began with the first patient enrolled at Botsford in Farmington Hills in January.

"We're excited at the prospect of contributing to this crucial study," said Dr. Robert J. Stomel, D.O., Botsford's chief of cardiology. "For over 10 years, Botsford has been involved in several pioneering studies examining how – in a community hospital setting – aggressive treatment strategies can save the lives of a significant number of patients experiencing acute myocardial infarction (heart attacks) and cardiogenic shock."

Cardiac shock, an emergency condition linked with heart attacks and heart failure, is a form of shock caused when the heart fails to supply enough blood to the body. It is fatal in about 80 percent of patients.

The survival rate for patients suffering from cardiogenic shock brought to most community hospital emergency rooms is lower than patients in tertiary-care centers (or much larger facilities offering a more specialized, highly technical level of care). Most community hospitals are not certified or designated as sites to perform angioplasty intervention (or surgery that transfers health tissue to repair coronary blood vessels, thus enabling increased blood flow).

Led by Stomel, a team of Botsford cardiologists has contributed research in several nationwide studies on the increased success rate of treating patients who develop cardiogenic shock with a two-step approach. This aggressive treatment strategy begins with thrombolytic therapy (administering a series of medications which dissolve blood clots), followed by surgery inserting an intraaortic balloon pump (a device which assists the heart to pump). Patients are then sufficiently stabilized to allow early transfer to a tertiary-care hospital for revascularization, or the treatment to reactivate the heart's blood vessels after the trauma of being deprived of blood supply.

"Our investigations demonstrate that the in-hospital survival rates improve to almost 70 percent with aggressive therapy , compared to previous community hospital survival rates, between 10 and 20 percent," Stomel said.

Donor cards

Taxpayers who get a refund check this tax season will find a little something else in the envelope.

For the first time, the U.S. Department of Treasury will enclose an organ and tissue donor card along with each tax refund check mailed this year. The 3-by-7-inch organ donor card answers commonly asked questions about donation and describes the steps necessary to becoming a donor.

The initiative is the result of federal legislation passed last year that directed the Treasury to enclose organ and tissue donor information with each tax refund check mailed between February and June 1997. Michigan Sen. Carl Levin, a Democrat, and Congressman Dave Camp, a Republican, were part of the team of legislators behind the initiative.

"It is very important that if you agree to become a donor that you make your intentions known to someone who is close to you," said Camp. "This is an important step that is not taken often enough. Signing up to be an organ donor is only one part of the process. Informing loved ones of your intentions is the other."

Today, nearly 2,000 Michigan patients await a life-saving organ. Medical advances in transplant surgery are giving new hope and life to many terminally and chronically ill patients; however, the long waiting list outpaces the donation rate.

Public education about family discussion is key to increasing the number of families who consent to donation. Levin, a longtime champion of organ and tissue donation, has recorded a 30-second radio public service announcement urging families to engage in discussions about donation.

The radio PSA is being distributed by the Michigan Coalition on Donation, 39 transplant-related organizations dedicated to increasing donation.

For more information on organ and tissue donation or to receive an organ donor card, contact the Gift of Life Agency of Michigan, 1-800-482-4881.

Lessons for life

ENCOURAGE kids to get in shape

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

Gloomy medical reports about the long-term effects of children carrying too many pounds have inspired area educators to invent creative ways to trim the fat from kids in your neighborhood.

It's not a small problem. In fact, one in five youngsters between 6 and 17 years old is overweight. Twenty percent of boys and 22 percent of girls are carrying around more bulk than they should for their health now and in the future, according to a National Center for Health Statistics study conducted by Richard Troiano.

He blames excess pounds on today's lifestyle. Physical education teachers and nurses in area school districts agree.

"What happens is children grab a bag of chips and sit in front of the TV," according to Linda Rotramel, Plymouth-Canton School District elementary physical education teacher. Local students are falling short of meeting physical fitness standards.

Rotramel sponsors a Presidential Physical Fitness Challenge and Awards program that measures children's cardiovascular endurance through a number of different tests. Students 5 to 15 years old participate and only between six and 10 out of some 400 students pass annually.

"It's not something that teachers have to do," she said. "The kids enjoy the challenge and this is a way to measure their fitness. Unfortunately, the majority of the children fail."

Students must meet the challenge in every category to pass. Many children pass some routines and fail others. The successful children receive a badge and a certificate with the president's signature. Gymnasts and ice skaters do the best on the fitness challenge, because those sports strengthen many body parts.

As a society, we need to teach children at a young age the value of daily exercise and eating properly, just like we teach them reading and arithmetic, Rotramel said. There's a growing concern about weight nationwide. Consider that the number of overweight children in the U.S. has doubled in the past 30 years, according to information provided by Henry Ford Health System.

Kids at risk

While heart attacks and stroke are rare in children, evidence suggests that the process leading to those conditions begins in childhood. Inactive children also weigh more, have higher blood pressure and lower levels of heart-protective high-density lipoprotein (HDL cholesterol) than active children.

At the elementary school level, physical education teachers in the Plymouth-Canton School District only see students one day a week for 45 minutes. "When they get to sixth grade they are getting it five times a week, but it's too late," Rotramel said. "It's not enough. By sixth grade they've learned a lot of poor habits."

Rotramel recently took students on a field trip to Compuware Sports Arena in Plymouth Township to see the new facility and try to get students involved in lifelong activities like, ice skating. "We're teaching kids to stay active through their adult lives to maintain good self-esteem and a healthy body."

Rotramel encourages kids to bring apples, cheese, celery with peanut butter and similar snacks during school breaks as opposed to packing flavored gummy bears and considering that a fruit. At home, she said, it's just as easy to grab an apple from the refrigerator than a bag of chips from the cupboard.

HELEN C. FURCEAN/STAFF ARTIST

There are many things a family can do to stay active, according to Bill DeFillippo, physical education teacher at Roosevelt Elementary School in Livonia. Preparing a schedule of various activities the family will do together is a good start. The first step is finding activities your children enjoy.

"You can be creative," DeFillippo said. "Find different activities and sports. The kids here are crazy for playing street hockey. It's a cardiovascular workout, it's a workout for their legs and they enjoy doing it. Mix things up so you don't get bored with the routine."

Most elementary schools in Livonia see kids one time each week for phys ed, he said. "We're lucky enough to have kids two times a week, but it's still not enough."

Helping children cope

Lynn Waldecker, Garden City physical education teacher, said most overweight kids are "horrified" to take physical education classes and they're the ones who need the activity the most. Certain concerns overweight students have, like changing clothes in the locker rooms in front of other students and not being able to keep up with the physical activity, can be overwhelming.

"We had one girl who was sick about it," Waldecker said. "They're afraid of physical activity."

She tries to soften their fears by allowing them to do things like wear a T-shirt over the swim suit in the pool, that will make them more comfortable. Waldecker treats overweight children as if they have a health risk.

For instance, she said wouldn't send those students out to run one mile until they worked up to that level of endurance. "Unfortunately, our school district doesn't have phys ed in (kindergarten through sixth grade) and that's a huge problem, because that's when they set their metabolism," Waldecker said. "We want to get them to like activity. We want them to pursue lifetime leisure activity."

Between 10 and 15 percent of the students in gym classes are athletes. "We try to deal with the other 80 percent," she said adding that she starts students out playing games like horseshoes, ping-pong, bowling and badminton. Swimming, golf, tennis and basketball are also offered.

Kids, including the heavier ones, who can't keep up on basketball teams are allowed to shoot baskets and that keeps them from running back and forth on the court. The idea is that when they get older they'll have some skills at sports that can be played by getting two or three people together.

Waldecker and Ron Pummill, who also teaches Garden City physical education, say their first role in teaching is to motivate students. "Our greatest joy is when a non-athletic kid comes back and says, 'I'm going to take it again, just because,' and she's overweight."

Leo Kinsella, Clarenceville schools athletic director, offers overweight students independent study classes involving walking, swimming, exercise and weight training. The nonstructured class is an alternative to classes involving team sports where these students wouldn't participate much.

Another option for overweight students is the individualized fitness classes where instructors and students decide what they want to achieve, like physical fitness or building strength. Realistically, Kinsella said, a lot of the programs for overweight kids are only moderately successful. Consider, though, that many overweight youngsters have extreme weight problems that began in early childhood, he said.

"There are more kids who are very opposed to physical activity today," Kinsella said. "The kids don't like to play as much as they used to. It's more of a chore to them. I think a big factor is that kids aren't getting the involvement they used to with parents in early elementary. Fewer parents are taking their kids out to play."

Attitude about exercise and good nutrition is important not only among students, but their parents, too, according to Jerry Szukaitis, athletic director for John Glenn High School in the Wayne-Westland School District.

"They need some type of physical activity daily. Make it fun for them."

Nurses also assist

School nurses often work closely with physical education teachers in helping overweight kids. When Carol Bass, Redford Union nurse, is approached by a teacher or parent about overweight students she recommends they go to their doctor, a Weight Watchers program for children and various exercise classes.

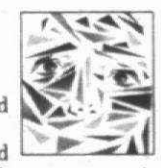
"A lot of teens who are normal weight are unhappy with their weight," Bass said. Working individually with each child with a weight problem is impossible, she added, considering there are two nurses for 5,000 students.

Stephanie Bury, South Redford School District nurse, said when an overweight child is brought to her she contacts the student's parents and recommends the child seek medical attention. If finances are a problem she refers them to agencies that will help.

"Usually if a child is overweight we look and the whole family is overweight," Bury said. "People are overweight because they eat too much or they eat the wrong thing."

Following nutritional guidelines and writing down everything the child eats daily are two more ways to make lifestyle changes.

Teen girls report more severe dating violence



While teenage boys are just as likely as girls to be victims of physical abuse by a date, girls report more severe violence and greater physical and emotional effects, say University of Michigan researchers.

In their study of 635 students from a large Midwestern high school, U-M social work Professor Richard M. Tolman and Christian Molidor of the University of Texas at Arlington found that about 37 percent of boys and 36 percent of girls say that they have experienced physical violence during a dating relationship.

However, more than 90 percent of the boys say that their worst incident of dating violence "hurt very little" or "not at all," while nearly half of the girls report serious harm ("hurt a lot") and physical injury (caused bruises, needed medical attention), Tolman said.

"Girls were much more likely to be punched and to be forced to engage in sexual activity against their will," he said. "Boys, on the other hand, were significantly more likely to be pinched, slapped, scratched and kicked."

The study results show that more than half of the boys say they laughed at receiving the abuse, while a third ignored it. Girls more often fought back, obeyed or tried to talk to their partner after experiencing violence. Furthermore, about 36 percent of the girls say that they defended themselves when abused by their date.

"This is one way of accounting for some of the incidents of violence that boys report occurring toward them," Tolman said. "The boys' reports of violence toward them may, in fact, be their partners' acts of self-defense in reaction to violence that they are experiencing."

The girls in the sample say that their dating partners started the abuse 70 percent of the time, while boys report that their dates initiated the violence 27 percent of the time.

According to the study, unwanted sexual advances, jealousy and drunkenness are primary reasons for teen dating violence.

About 37 percent of the abused girls report that their partners had made sexual advances toward them, while nearly half of the boys and one-fourth of the girls who were victims of violence say that their dates' jealousy was the reason they were subjected to physical violence, Tolman said.

Few reported incidents to an authority figure or a family member, although nearly two-thirds confided in a friend. Tolman suggested that schools should help prepare teens to respond effectively to abuse reported by friends, and to develop intervention plans and encourage student input to help prevent dating violence, much of which happens on school grounds.

Entrepreneur of the Year

Professional services firm Ernst & Young LLP is again calling for nominations for the Michigan Entrepreneur of the Year program. Now in its ninth year in Michigan, the program founded and produced by Ernst & Young honors and recognizes the state's most successful and dynamic entrepreneurs, those men and women who have created and sustained a successful, growing enterprise.

There is no fee for nominations, which must be received by April 4. Self nominations are encouraged, as are those from suppliers, customers and others who work with entrepreneurs, such as bankers, attorneys, accountants, public relations and advertising executives.

For information and nomination forms, write Megan Meyer at Ernst & Young, Suite 1700, 500 Woodward Ave., Detroit 48226-3426 or call her at 1-888-MICH-EOY.

The program has a number of local sponsors. The names of the award recipients will be revealed at a banquet Wednesday, June 18, at The Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn. Local award recipients will go on to the national competition.

Interest purchased

Detroit Diesel Corp. and AlliedSignal Inc. jointly announced March 4 that AlliedSignal has purchased a one-third interest in Davco Manufacturing L.L.C., which has its headquarters and manufacturing operations in Saline. Davco designs and manufactures diesel fuel processing devices for medium- and heavy-duty trucks. Other partners in Davco are Detroit Diesel and Stephen Davis, president of Davco Manufacturing.

AlliedSignal Filters & Spark Plugs, a unit of AlliedSignal Automotive, currently supplies fuel filter cartridges to Davco. AlliedSignal is a key supplier of heavy-duty truck filters and other products to Detroit Diesel.

Detroit Diesel, based in Redford, designs, manufactures, markets, services and provides aftermarket and remanufactured products for a full range of high performance diesel and alternatives fuel engines. It offers financing through its Detroit Diesel Capital Corp. subsidiary. It had 1996 revenues of $1.96 billion.

Ford kudos

For the third time in recent years, North Brothers Ford Inc. of Westland has been awarded Ford Motor Company's highest dealer honor, The QC Chairman's Award. The award is presented in recognition of customer satisfaction excellence.

The Chairman's Award recognizes those who excel in meeting and exceeding the needs and expectations of customers. The award is determined by rankings in surveys completed by customers regarding their dealership experience. Distributed nationwide, the award is given to the top qualifying dealer in each regional group.

Ford Motor Company created the award in 1985. The local dealership was opened in 1936 by Raymond and Ernest North and switched from Chrysler to Ford products in 1941. In 1969, the company moved to its current location at 33300 Ford Road. Raymond's son, chairman James E. North, and sons Douglas North, president, and Thomas North, vice president, continue to own and operate the dealership, which employs 150 people.

Powerhouse Gym

Powerhouse Gym is opening its doors at 34520 Ford Road in Westland. The company was founded by Will and Norm Dabish in Detroit in 1974. It now has more than 340 locations. The Westland location measures more than 16,000 square feet.

The local site's specialties will be aerobic activity and weight resistance training. It will offer a variety of amenities. For information, call (313) 722-4040.

Chosen for award

Harcourt Brace Professional Publishing has announced that Rehmann Robinson, P.C., has been selected as one of the 1996 Digest 50 Award winners. Winners are selected for their development and implementation of innovative strategies for growth among mid-sized firms nationwide.

For the 10th year in a row, the Digest 50 program has recognized the finest CPA firms across the country. Rehmann Robinson is the second largest Michigan-based CPA and consulting firm. It operates an office in Farmington Hills, along with offices in other Michigan cities.

New logo

Troy-based MVP Communications Inc. recently introduced a new logo for the company, which has undergone recent changes and expansion. The announcement was made by Roger Gullickson, president.

The company offers corporate communications services with offices in the Detroit area, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Scholarships

The Detroit Chapter of Women in Communications will offer three $500 scholarships to Detroit-area college students. Submissions must be postmarked by March 31. There will be two scholarships for journalism or communications students and one for such a student who has overcome a challenge of disability. For an application, contact Sonja Terbush at (810) 352-1250.

New division

Metro Mortgage Corporation has opened a new division, Key Mortgage Inc., announced Rick Shaffner, president of Metro Mortgage Corporation.

Chris Hoehn is president of the new division. Hoehn has eight years of mortgage banking and real estate experience, most recently with Republic Bancorp Inc.

The Key Mortgage office is at 215 E. Main, Northville. The telephone number is (810) 347-0100.

Stride Rite

Richard and Cherie Cerulli, owners of Richard's Stride Rite, have announced the grand opening of their newest Stride Rite location at the Boardwalk Shopping Center on Orchard Lake Road in West Bloomfield. The store will also feature other quality brands of children's footwear.

Expanding

Dearborn-based Ghafari Associates Inc., an architectural, planning, engineering and management firm, is building new offices in Macomb County. Ground was recently broken for construction of new offices at Mound Road south of 17 Mile. The 8,000-square-foot building, which will have capacity to house more than 40 staff members, is scheduled for completion in July.

Grammar guru

Punctuation Plus is a Livonia-based full-service writing consulting firm. The staff accepts editing, technical and publicity writing assignments. This includes newsletters, brochures, academic papers or special assignments that arise.

Punctuation Plus serves southeastern Michigan and can be reached at (810) 442-9610. CEO Jennifer Maykovich, 23, is a resident of Livonia where she was born, raised and educated.

New agency

The LAB Agency, which serves the Westland-Canton area, recently opened its doors. Principal owner William Morrison of Westland was recently named the state's top insurance educator by the Michigan Association of Insurance Agents.

The independent insurance agency sells auto, home, life and commercial business insurance. For information on the family-owned agency, call (313) 326-5305.

Program effective

An independent study was done to evaluate Black & Decker Corporation's employee Diabetes Management Program, administered by Universal Self Care Inc., which has offices in Livonia. The survey indicated the program was cost-effective and customer-friendly. The study was conducted by William M. Mercer Inc. for Black & Decker.

Representatives from each of the three organizations discussed the data in a presentation entitled "An Employer's Approach to Improving Diabetes Outcomes" at the Disease Management Congress. A total of 790 employees who participated in the company's Diabetes Management Program were involved, with 46 percent responding.

Tennyson donation

As part of the "Project From the Heart," owner Kit Tennyson of Tennyson Chevrolet donated a Sears Craftsman reciprocating saw to the home repair unit of the Livonia Senior Center. Mayor Jack Kirksey, Kit Tennyson, Activities Director Gaye Ware and Livonia Seniors were present for the donation.

"Thanks to Mr. Tennyson, repairs can be made with greater ease and convenience," said Ware. "The seniors are very grateful for this caring donation."

Established in 1955, Tennyson Chevrolet is a member of the Livonia Chamber of Commerce and Rotary, and an active supporter of DARE of Livonia and Livonia Hearts.

Airport entertainment

TeamGroup, a Romulus-based electronic advertising and media company, is using technology to provide information to target audiences. In cooperation with Compuguide Inc., TeamGroup has installed the first of three or more video walls in a high traffic area of Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

The first video wall is located in the baggage claim area of Northwest Airlines.

Kroger award

The Livonia-based Kroger Co. of Michigan was among 21 companies chosen as winners in United Way Community Services' 1996 Communications Contest.

Kroger earned honorable mention in the overall Comprehensive Promotional Campaign category. The contest honors companies for outstanding achievement in communicating the United Way message to employees during the annual fund-raising campaign.

Faygo milestone

Faygo Beverages is celebrating its 90th anniversary. A recipe contest featuring Faygo products is included, with winning recipes to be compiled in a commemorative cookbook. Entries must be received by April 30 and must be accompanied by an official entry form, found in newspapers March 16.

Faygo, founded in 1907, today produces 43 flavors.

New office

Metropolitan Title Company recently opened its 49th office, in Grosse Pointe. The company's corporate headquarters are in Howell and regional headquarters are in Holland and Bloomfield Hills. Metropolitan Title Company employs more than 500 people across the state. The title insurance agency now serves customers in 32 counties statewide.

Employee owners

Employees of Patio Enclosures Inc., which has a branch in Novi, have one more reason to serve customers. They have become partial owners of the company through a new Employee Stock Ownership Plan. The program gives a predetermined number of shares of stock – or shares of ownership – to employees each year. Within the next 10 years or so, the company will be entirely owned by employees.

BUILD FOR RETIREMENT. MANAGE FOR LIFE™

Should I consider tax-free or tax-deferred investments
When can I afford retire
How can I maximize my pension
How do I minimize taxes on my Social Security
How do I manage my investments
How do 401(k) rollovers work
Do I need a will or a trust

The answers to these questions and more will be discussed at a free financial planning seminar.

Internet fun appeals to children and teens

EMORY DANIELS
O&E ONLINE

At the Summit Place, your 4-year-old can surf the Internet while you are shopping, thanks to MST TechnoKids.

The TechnoKids shop is next to Kohl's department store in Summit Place. It offers families access to the latest technologies in a convenient, affordable and safe environment. All ages are invited to use the shop's computers and robotics.

Children can learn about robotics while they program motorized Legos with a computer. At Internet Central, children can surf the Internet or video conference using the shop's T-1 connection or can build their own Web page.

At the Science Center, hands-on experiments, computer dissections, robot construction and programming are available. In the Morphing Lab, youngsters can use a digital camera and morph the image with GOO software.

And in the Gaming Lab, kids can use any of more than 30 TechnoKids approved knowledge-based games. Programs and technologies are presented in an age-appropriate format at all centers. The first 15 minutes are free and $2 for each additional 15-minute segment. A one-hour program using any two labs costs $6.50 and a two-hour program selecting any two labs will cost $11.

Child drop-off programs are available for ages 3-12. For security reasons, a digital image of the parent and child is taken and each adult is given a beeper while he or she shops.

TechnoKids always has certified teachers on staff to offer personalized instruction. TechnoKids has provided computer education to thousands of children in more than 27 school districts in the Detroit area. They also have a Special Beginners Program for senior citizens older than 60 from 3-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Click on Click

Click, a new Web site developed to entertain and provide a guide to the Internet for teens, is worth visiting at http://www.click.toplinks.com, if you are a teen or young at heart.

Guided by the preferences of 13- to 19-year-olds, short reviews and recommendations are made in categories such as music, sports, fashion, the arts, hobbies, entertainment, humor, games, the media, and the Internet.

The categories offer Web surfers a chance to look at recommended sites and ask them for their opinion and recommendations as well. "We want kids to tell us what they think on a variety of subjects, get them to communicate with one another as well as give us an idea of what they consider good sites," said project developer Paula Guran.

Click also offers exclusive content in two other forms. Monthly astrological forecasts designed specifically for teens are provided by professional astrologer "Sultana Marijah." Josh Ellis, an 18-year-old from San Francisco, provides a fresh "rant" of his decided opinions each month.

"Josh is a self-styled 'cyberpunk cub reporter,'" said Guran. "Even though he is rooted more in the literary movement than the technological one, he knows his way around the Net. We think he will make his readers think and react. His writing and the special astrology should be a big plus for our users."

An educational advantage is found most prominently in "Study Hall," an area with a list of how to find information and help with homework on the Web. The interactive features encourage students to communicate their own ideas using E-mail, chat and message boards.

Click also steers high school students to sites that can help them in finding the right college and obtaining financial aid. "We all need something of a pathfinder for the Internet. With Click, we think kids now have a great spot to start," added Guran.

Click is part of Internet Association Corporation's TopLinks venture. The TopLinks sites are online guides to the Internet designed for specific market segments of the population. Click joins University TopLinks at http://www.university.toplinks.com as part of an expanding Web presence.

KidSurf

Speaking of youth and kids, the young and young at heart finished visiting Click can now go to Online at http://www.kidsurf.net

KidSurf is an Internet Surfboard for Kids and Teens. While it looks like a day at the beach here, it's also educational and entertaining. KidSurf has separate sections for both younger and teenage audiences. Parents can freely download the net filter CyberPatrol while reading about the SafeSurf rating method.

Younger kids can play their favorite sports online at The Sand Court or browse a library full of math, science, English and art sites in The Lighthouse. Teens can catch up on their favorite teen magazines, chat with others their age, or ask questions of Dr. Marla.

Panic attack, heart disorder have similar symptoms

A non-life-threatening, but often debilitating, recurrent rapid heart rhythm produces symptoms easily confused with "panic attacks" – a misdiagnosis made twice as frequently in women. Recognition and appropriate treatment of the cardiac disorder can eliminate panic-like symptoms in 90 percent of cases.

These new findings are reported in the March 10 issue of the American Medical Association journal Archives of Internal Medicine by a Wayne State University School of Medicine research team, whose senior member is Dr. Michael H. Lehmann, M.D., clinical associate professor of medicine and director of the Arrhythmia Center at Sinai Hospital in Detroit. The lead author of the article is Dr. Timothy J. Lessmeier, M.D., currently at the Heart Institute of Spokane in Washington state.

The researchers studied 107 patients (median age 40 years, 55 percent women) referred for electrophysiologic testing, a special heart catheterization procedure for rhythm problems. This test proved that the patients suffered from paroxysmal supraventricular tachycardia (PSVT) – a recurrent, non-life-threatening heart rhythm disorder (typically 150-250 beats per minute) that often stops on its own after several seconds to minutes.

At the time of physician contact, however, the diagnosis of PSVT was made in only 48 (45 percent) of patients. Among the 59 initially unrecognized cases of PSVT, a median of 3.3 years elapsed until the proper diagnosis was made. Prior to that time, symptoms in 32 (54 percent) of these unrecognized cases of PSVT were attributed (by non-psychiatric physicians) to "panic," "anxiety" or "stress" – a diagnostic error made twice as frequently in women vs. men. In fact, 12 percent of patients with unrecognized PSVT sought the care of a mental health professional because of their symptoms.

The potential for symptom overlap between PSVT and panic attack was striking. Of the 107 patients studied, two-thirds had a PSVT episode frequency and symptom profile that met American Psychiatric Association criteria for Panic Disorder.

Following the electrophysiology test, PSVT was treated either by another catheterization-like procedure designed to eliminate the abnormality, called "radiofrequency ablation," or by medication aimed at suppressing recurrences.

After a median 20-month followup period, 86 percent of patients were cured of their symptoms – including 91 percent of those whose symptoms were attributed to "panic," "anxiety" or "stress."

The fleeting nature and relative infrequency of PSVT episodes likely contributed to such initial misdiagnoses. Even the traditional portable 24-hour electrocardiogram recorder succeeded in catching a PSVT episode in only 9 percent (six of 64) of patients having this test.

Far more effective, the researchers found, were "event monitors" which detected PSVT in 47 percent (eight of 17) of patients so tested. An event monitor is a lightweight electrocardiogram recording device that is typically worn (like a beeper or wristwatch) over a one- to two-week period, and activated by the patient whenever he or she has palpitations or other symptoms.

Also potentially helpful is a subtle suggestive marker of a tendency toward PSVT, called a "delta wave," which sometimes may be evident on a standard electrocardiogram. However, this diagnostically valuable clue was not initially recognized in over one-third of the patients with this telltale electrocardiographic sign.

The study's findings should help physicians to avoid overlooking PSVT – a curable heart rhythm disorder – as the basis for recurrent "panic"-like symptoms, especially in women. Research is now needed to define the proportion of patients with panic attacks actually suffering from PSVT.

NEW HOMES

Several plans honored in Parade of Homes

What makes for a really good house?

Design, architecture, special features and value, according to architects here who judged the seventh annual Parade of Homes competition.

Sixty-six plans were nominated by builders in conjunction with the International Builders, Home, Flower and Furniture Show.

"We were looking for, first of all, innovation in planning, good design, good relationship and flow between functions," said George Erdstein, a Lathrup Village architect and panelist.

"A lot of the plans were similar. A lot of times, we found ourselves finding the best dollar value per square foot," he said.

Judges made their choices after scrutinizing floor plans, renderings, photographs and written descriptions. The houses must have been built or are currently under construction. Prices at which the plans were entered must hold through April 6.

"What builders have done is take primary relationships and refined them," Erdstein said. "Amenities seem to be forever expanding. The master bath is augmented by closets, sitting area."

A hearth room, sitting area has been included near some kitchen/nooks, he added.

Plan books containing photos, descriptions and locator maps for all the nominees – plus other models whose entries weren't complete – are available at Standard Federal Bank offices, some real estate offices and the model homes, themselves.

The information also can be found on the World Wide Web at http:// oeonline.com/ parade

"The show is a wonderful starting off point for this scattered site showing of superb homes," said Scott Jacobson, a Bingham Farms residential builder and president of the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Barrington model: This ranch, constructed by GTR Windemere, was selected the best of show at the lowest price range in the Parade of Homes judging.

Blue ribbons were awarded in five categories.

■ The Barrington Ranch, GTR Windemere.

This ranch of 1,968 square feet contains two bedrooms and two baths. Price is $184,900.

The open plan features a dining room with columns and raised ceiling, family room with sloped ceiling, skylights and fireplace and kitchen/nook with built-in snack bar.

The master suite has a vaulted ceiling, walk-in closet and elegant bath. A secluded study in the other bedroom has direct access to the second full bath.

The model, (810) 263-7360, is in Windemere Commons II off Heydenreich south of 21 Mile Road, Macomb Township.

■ Stratford Grand, Silverman Homes.

This contemporary two-story floor plan of 2,350 square feet features four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths. Price is $225,000.

The plan provides formal living and dining rooms and kitchen with snack bar opening up to a family room with fireplace. The master has a spa bath with connecting shower, double sinks and walk-in closet.

The house also comes with a first floor laundry, two-car garage with workshop area and basement.

The model, (810) 486-4979, is in Trotter's Pointe Village at the northwest corner of 11 Mile and Pontiac Trail, South Lyon.

■ The Cambridge, Cohen Associates and Crescendo Builders.

This two story includes four bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths and plenty of room to move around – 3,268 square feet of living space. Price is $322,900.

The open plan includes a family room, library, parlor, kitchen/nook, butler's pantry and dining room.

The model, (810) 347-7855, is in Westmont Village off 10 Mile west of Taft, Novi.

■ Monterey Summit, Cohen Associates, the Selective Group and Nosan Enterprises.

This two story , under construction, will include four bedrooms, three full baths and two half and fill out at 4,165 square feet. Price is $414,400.

The house will showcase a huge family room, library, large, functional kitchen/nook and a loft/computer room.

The luxurious master suite will contain a whirlpool tub and his and her walk-in closets.

Other amenities include three-car garage, custom closets, air conditioning and dynamic, two-story foyer.

Target completion date is mid to late May.

The sales center, (810) 669-1070, is in Park Ridge off Pontiac Trail between Haggerty and Green Lake roads, West Bloomfield.

■ Terrace Home, Crosswinds Communities.

These 1,200-square-foot condominiums with two bedrooms and two baths built in urban, brownstone-type fashion, also won in the condominium category last year.Price is $89,990.

The units feature vaulted ceiling, attached garages and private balconies.

The model, (810) 541-8700, in Campau Farms at Elmwood Park near the Detroit River, is off Chene between Vernor Hwy. and Lafayette.

Movie does some wonderful things with lighting

STEVEN SIVAK

The other day I went to see the new David Lynch movie "Lost Highway," and it made me realize the importance and role of light in effecting the quality of space. You should go see the movie due to the sets in general and the decorative elements in particular. The movie's first 40 or so minutes are filmed primarily in a '50s modern house in Los Angeles.

I am nearly certain that no natural light was allowed to enter the home during filming, and this allowed the lighting designers to carefully control the light, only adding it where necessary. Darkness is a blanket that can be removed by light, which cuts through the darkness – sort of like paint. In the movie, lighting was modest and very dark in general, which only makes sense because the film is a contemporary film noir adaptation.

It is through the lighting of space that mood and understanding of volumes is created. Lighting highlights certain activities and renders others less significant. A room with a single light source in the middle gives one kind of understanding of space and lighting just the sides emphasizes different aspects of the room and may even make the room feel completely different.

I am a big fan of providing light where it is needed to perform certain tasks but then allowing the general room lighting levels to fall off to very modest levels – enough to circulate and move safely. Night time is night time, and in most cases there is no need to raise lighting levels to match daylight conditions. The dramatic effect of lighting levels that vary across a room is really quite powerful – actually slightly mysterious. In addition, it certainly is a big energy saver to light in this way.

Years back I had the opportunity to work with a lighting designer by the name of Bill Lamm, who is the father of indirect lighting. Indirect lighting is the means by which spaces are light but the fixtures are concealed. It is light as opposed to fixture.

From the standpoint of fixtures, it is less expensive than traditional good light fixtures, but usually there is more construction required to conceal the fixture itself. The most common form of indirect lighting is under-cabinet-mounted fluorescent fixtures in the kitchen. In this application light will be emitted onto the counter-top but the source will be concealed.

This same idea can be utilized throughout a house to make surfaces glow and light to be "emitted". I have used such ideas in bathrooms, bedrooms and living rooms. Fluorescent fixtures are frequently used for this purpose, but I have even used cold cathode lighting, which is similar to neon, to provide a continuous light source in the middle of a large living room ceiling. Although I have not used an incandescent fixture, I imagine it could be used if the bulb spacing was tight enough to avoid scalloping. To pull this detail off the fixtures must be very close together so that the light is linear in nature.

Indirect lighting can be used as either an ambient or a task source. It is better suited as an ambient source due to the light output of the source as well as the distance that it is usually operating from the task being performed. Direct lighting placed in the proximity of the task is better for lighting high precision work and reading, etc.

While I am a big fan of indirect lighting, I am also a fan of the jewelry-like quality of beautiful fixtures. As I said in an earlier article, the Italians seem to have a corner on the high-end light fixture industry, and nice fixtures seem to start around $175 and go up from there. Public parts of the house should get the nicest of the fixtures and bedrooms the lowest of the nice fixtures.

To save money I have resorted to using "keyless" fixtures (porcelain-socket fixtures) in basements and garages in order to use nicer fixtures on the inside of the house. These nice fixtures should be seen as more than just light providers but rather as part of the decorative program (and budget) of the house.

If I had to guess, I would say that one should allow a minimum of $3.50 -$4.00 per square foot for the lighting budget alone (materials only) to be convincing about the fixturing. Get into specialty lighting for art or special object display and the budget could double.

In any case, the important thing really is the light and the activities being illuminated, not the fixture.

Anyone who is interested in lighting and the effects achievable with light should check out "Lost Highway". Sure it is as strange as it gets, but the lighting effects are great!

As the twig is bent, the chair is built

By Barbara Mayer
For AP Special Features

Rustic furniture for today's mountain lodges and log homes doesn't have to be old. And it doesn't have to be expensive. Rustic is a synonym for rough, so even the novice builder can make it look good.

Laura Spector with nail gun in hand, figured out how to fashion willow and bittersweet into benches and love seats. Then, last summer she joined other hobbyists in a course taught by Dan Mack at Museum Village in Monroe, N.Y.

"I learned the mortise-and-tenon construction method, which is a more refined technique than the nail gun," Spector said, "and I got to meet a group of people who have empathy with trees."

Mack was a college journalism instructor in 1978 when, with no previous training, he took up furniture-making. Today, Daniel Mack Rustic Furnishings are sought by collectors and Mack is author of "The Rustic Furniture Companion: Traditions, Techniques and Inspirations" (Lark Books, $26.95), which features the works of about 40 furniture makers in the United States and Canada.

He says rustic furniture – made from branches, trunk, bark and roots of trees – is currently popular and easy to find. Or to make. Mack suggests looking for pieces at regional crafts fairs and garden centers and, for really deep pockets, antiques stores.

"We do a lot of second homes," Mario Costantini of Milwaukee says. "Rustic furniture has the same appeal as four-wheel drives and log homes."

Costantini's La Lune Collection of 600 designs is sold through decorators.

Old pieces such as those by Thomas Molesworth, who worked in Cody, Wyo., in the 1920s and 1930s, are very collectible. At a recent auction, Mack said, some Molesworth pieces made of burls and juniper logs brought five- and six-figure prices.

Quirky one-of-a-kind pieces from camps once owned by wealthy Americans in Maine and the Adirondack Mountains in New York also are to die for. Also in demand is mass-produced rustic that was popular with the middle class around the turn of the century.

But why buy the furniture when you can make it? It is one of the few techniques equally adaptable to hobbyists and journeyman cabinetmakers, Mack says.

"I can teach the woodworking skills in a day or two," he says. "Most people have hammered before, and if you break the process down, no single step is very difficult. You can nail, wire, or wrap with twine to make joints."

Twig or stick style, made from slender branches nailed together, is the easiest. A piece can be completed in a day, from finding the branches to nailing them together.

Mortise and tenon, or hole and peg, construction takes longer and requires more skill. The wood must be dried so it won't loosen as it ages, but in the end it has a more finished look, Mack says.

Logs and trunks produce twig on the grand scale, but it takes heavy machinery to move and cut it.

Bentwood furniture, typically made from fresh willow, alder or cottonwood, requires a form to which the fresh wands are bent and nailed.

Bark applique and mosaic twig work is like veneering.

"Technically, it is not difficult to do," Mack says, "But it requires someone who is sensitive to form and color and has a capacity for tedium because it goes on forever."

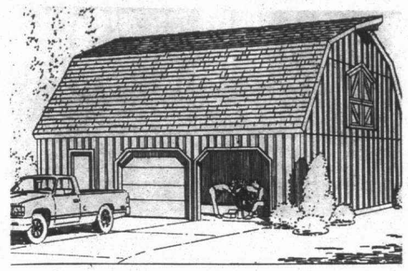
Window-insulating products save on fuel



Gambrel-roof garage

Increasing the value of your home and adding additional storage space can be met by adding this two-car, eave-entry, gambrel-roof garage with loft area/workshop. The loft workshop is something that most homeowners are thrilled to have. The space can be used for whatever purpose suits your needs. There are five sizes to choose from: 24' x 26', 24' x 32', 24' x 28', 24' x 36' and 24' x 30'. There are options for a ceiling support for an engine lift, a side personnel door, a slab or stem wall foundation, lower rear windows and 8', 9' or 10' walls. The plans include interior access to the loft workshop and side loft cargo door with a pulley lift. Two complete sets of the plans are included: one for you or your builder and one for the building department. Plans include clearly labeled, detailed drawings along with full framing instructions. Illustrations are drawn three dimensionally with full elevations and cross sectional diagrams. Step-by-step comprehensive instructions are included to aid you in construction. A full materials list will make your trip to a local lumberyard for building materials another easy step toward the completion of your new project.

For an affordable alternative to increasing the R-value of your windows, consider insulating window treatments (shutters, shades, draperies, blinds).

Single-glaze windows are poor insulators having an R-value of 0.9. Double glazing raises window insulation value to R-1.84. Energy-efficient glazing raises R-values significantly higher.

Window insulating products, often called movable insulation, add considerable energy efficiency to any window. Insulating shutters, for example, can raise the R-value to as high as R-10 in a home in the North, resulting in a decrease in fuel consumption by as much as 25 percent.

Insulating shades operate in practically the same way as ordinary window shades. They are wrapped on spring-loaded rollers. They are heavier, however, than paper shades and may slide in tracks rather than swing free. Some models are electrically operated.

Insulating shutters usually are positioned inside the house. They lie back against the wall and swing forward or slide over the window. Some are designed in the form of a panel that must be inserted and removed manually.

Shutters are available as single or double fold panels. The installation of insulating shades and shutters is no more difficult than installing a Roman shade or louvered blind. Insulation fixed within windows, such as blinds, come built into the window itself and requires window replacement. Insulating draperies are installed similar to ordinary draperies.

Cost-effective placement of movable insulation in your house is an important consideration. If your home has single-glazed windows, and where no door is protected by a storm sash, insulation over every opening would slash your fuel bills.

But even in this extreme example, a combination of glazing replacement and adding less expensive window treatments to strategic windows usually is less costly than adding storms to all your windows.

To save money, limit window treatment to north opening windows and possibly to west openings or on the side where prevailing winds blow in the winter.

Limiting the use of movable insulation makes good sense especially when your home is already tightly sealed and protected at windows and glass doors with at least double glazing. Then heat loss through windows (minus normal heat gain on sunny winter days) accounts for less than 20 percent of the total heat loss.

Another saving can be realized by mixing the various types of movable insulation. Use the more expensive, high R-value treatments for the coldest side of the house. On the less vulnerable sides, lined draperies may be all the treatment you need as long as you remember to keep them pulled at night or whenever the room is not in use.

In Southern states where protecting the house from heat entry is the greater concern, the most effective treatment is usually an exterior form. Shutters, awnings and screens are generally more efficient than indoor movable insulation in keeping the heat of the sun out of the house.

3 dread words: 'Some assembly required'

(NAPS) – It happens every time you purchase a computer, you encounter the three dreaded words, "Some assembly required." No matter how many sets of instructions and diagrams are provided, the task always takes longer than expected, and the manufacturer's never available to walk you through them. Unless you think through your purchase carefully, getting the right PC for your family from the right source could make "some assembly required" a true nightmare.

How can you make sure that you get the PC that best suits your family's needs?

Answering a few basic questions before you start shopping will help narrow the field tremendously. Most important, they will help eliminate a lot of the hassle and worry before you buy.

Who's going to use the PC? Will it be primarily for Dad working on business at home? Mom for working on business at home, household bookkeeping, or essential family information? The kids for playing electronic games, learning through educational software programs or surfing the Internet? Or for everyone in the house? The more users, the more memory and power you'll need. Children may need special add-ons like joysticks or an oversized "mouse" that lets small hands maneuver through programs easily.

What software will you use? The more software you plan to install, the greater the internal memory you'll need. Don't try to save money here by settling for only 8 megabytes of RAM (that's computer parlance for Random Access Memory). Buy more than you think you need – a good amount is typically 24 megabytes. You'll not only be able to enjoy more programs, but they will also run much faster. As for the great chip debate, you probably don't want to settle for anything less than an Intel Pentium processor. PCs that operate with Intel-486 microprocessors may seem like a bargain now, but in the future, you'll need the extra horsepower of the Pentium chip.

In fact, make the investment in a computer driven by the Pentium-Pro chip. It will save you from having to upgrade your machine too soon. Don't forget the larger hard-drive, too. It will hold more software, and you won't have to worry about running out of disk space. Don't even look at purchasing a hard disk with a capacity of less than 1 gigabyte.

Are you going to "surf the Internet with your PC? If so, you'll definitely need a high-speed modem built into the PC. Don't settle for anything less than a 28.8 Kbps modem to make downloading all those files faster and eliminate a lot of waiting time; a 33.3 Kbps is slightly faster. Also, make sure your computer comes with software for crucial on-line services that help you get access to the Internet.

If many people in your family are going to surf the Internet regularly, consider upgrading the standard monitor to make the images more vivid and text easier to read. Many World Wide Web sites now also include sound, so including a sound card as part of your purchase package means that you can hear the Internet as well as see it.

What other add-ons do you need? Many new software programs now come on CD-ROM instead of the typical floppy disks. You can save a lot of time by installing them from the CD-ROM instead of the floppy disk. To handle the CDs, you'll need a CD-ROM drive built into your PC. Many games and educational programs with incredible sound tracks also come on CD-ROM. To enjoy them fully, you might want to consider adding special speakers as part of your PC purchase. And, the speakers are really important if you're adding a sound card.

Who can you call to place an order, when you have a problem or just need a question answered? Direct marketers of computers like Gateway 2000 provide 24-hour support 365 days per year. Or simply visit Gateway's homepage at www.gw2k.com to ask questions, determine your exact computer needs or place an order.

They can also make sure that when you get your computer, it's a custom computer that fits your needs. Direct marketers like Gateway match your PC needs with the right equipment. Unlike some retailers, who sell everything from coats to microwaves, knowledgeable PC consultants personally advise you on what you should buy to meet your needs.

Software will usually be preloaded on the computer. Peripherals, such as printers, are picked to complement the equipment. And it's all delivered right to your doorstep.

Save time

Save time on remodeling projects by handling them the way the pros do.

When pros insulate walls, they use pre-cut insulation that comes stacked, not rolled, in the bag. They save time because they don't have to unroll and cut it to install it.

A U.S. map and zone chart on bags of Schuller's insulation help you determine the R-value you need for your job.

Elegant-looking house is a duplex in disguise

Who'd ever suspect that the Tupelo is a duplex? Two sets of porch steps and front doors are the only exterior clue. One faces the street; the other is around the corner to the left. This is an ideal set-up for a family that wishes to provide supportive but independent housing for an aging relative, or wants income from a rental they can easily supervise.

From its tapered porch supports to its low-pitched side gables and large centered dormer, the Tupelo's exterior styling harks back to Craftsman homes of the early 1900s. Inside, both of the duplexes have contemporary floor plans.

The ground floor unit is larger. In addition to the great room/kitchen, it has a master bedroom, two secondary bedrooms, two bathrooms and a small utility room that's tucked into an alcove just inside the front door. An eating bar defines the boundary between the kitchen and a great room with patio access and a large walk-in storage closet.

To enter the second floor unit, you step into a bright ground-floor foyer outfitted with a coat closet and a bench for removing and storing boots. Natural light streams in through sidelights. More light washes down from the dormer window above, brightening the staircase and spilling over into the great room as well.

Kitchen, nook and great room flow together, unimpeded by barriers of any kind. Next to the stairs is a pocket-sized utility room, designed to house a stacked washer/dryer combination. The small kitchen in the Tupelo's upper unit can be built with a door that opens onto a second-level deck, if one is desired.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Tupelo 60-006 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

History of wallpaper

(NAPS) – The advent of wallcovering goes back hundreds of years. As revolutionary as it was when first introduced, it took all these years for someone to develop an easy way to remove unwanted paper from walls.

Here's the abridged version of wallpaper history.

England dominated the early industry. Paper has been used there to decorate walls since the 1500s.

After the American Revolution, people in the U.S. were attracted to designs from France. The exact processes employed to make wallpaper in the 18th and early 19th centuries are not known.

Before the 19th century invention of continuous-roll paper, designs were placed on "joined" paper, which was made by gluing together sheets of handmade rag stock.

Machine printing reduced the cost of wall coverings and made it affordable for the middle class.

Removing unwanted paper involved soaking walls with hot water, mixing chemicals, or using steamers and scrapers. A few years ago, 3M Wallpaper and Paste Remover entered the market. It is a gel that is applied to wallcoverings with brushes and rollers. After about 20 minutes, paper and paste are removed more quickly and more easily than with the traditional methods.

If you are trying to make a historical record of your living space and, while removing wallpaper, you find layers upon layers, do not assume that you are looking at paper in the order each was applied. Some rolls may have been purchased and put aside, only to be hung by a later resident.

Shopping for ceramic tile

If you're considering ceramic tile for a new or remodeled room in your home but are concerned about making a confident purchase decision, no need to worry ... shopping for ceramic tile is easier than ever before.

Before you begin the shopping process, it's important to be aware of the different types of ceramic tile that are available. Because of the different composition, glazes, surface textures and gloss levels, some ceramic tiles are more suitable for specific uses.

■ Glazed Ceramic Tile has a glass-like, colored surface that can be smooth or textured-bright or satiny. Glazed ceramic tile won't fade or discolor and it's stain-and scratch-resistant. Consider high-gloss tiles for walls and backsplashes, matte glazed tiles for bath and kitchen floors.

■ Unglazed Quarry Tile in warm solid colors comes from the natural hues of the clays, and a rich patina will develop on the surface with wear. Though not as stain-resistant as glazed ceramic tile, it tends to be more slip-resistant. Quarry tile is a perfect choice for sunrooms.

■ Ceramic Mosaics, unlike other ceramic tiles, are made of porcelain and are available in a wide variety of colors. They are extremely versatile, provide unlimited design potential and are dent-proof, stain-proof, frost-proof and easy to keep clean. Consider ceramic mosaics for a bath floor or kitchen countertop.

Additional information can also be found in your retailer's showroom. American Olean Design Center 2000 showrooms, for example, offer homeowners information on everything from plumbing fixture coordination to design ideas. Homeowners will see room photos for each product to see how the tile will look installed as well as useful information, care and maintenance, plumbing fixture coordination and an abundance of other info

Homeowners can find the American Olean Design Center 2000 in their area by calling 800 678 4845.

OPEN HOUSES OF THE WEEK

Home features classic layout, new construction

46963 Brooks Lane
Plymouth Township
(N. of Ann Arbor Road, E. of Beck)
Coldwell Preferred
$367,900

Upon viewing this home, it is easy to understand why the builder has called this their most popular floor plan, which is still in much demand.

This home offers the combination of the classic layout of a formal living room and dining room with butler's pantry. This is combined with a huge kitchen offering walk-in pantry and ample family room with natural fireplace. Separate den and/or library plus four bedrooms. First floor offers the convenience of a large laundry area and coat closet conveniently located off the attached garage.

Add to this traditional layout newer construction features such as dramatic two story foyer with hardwood flooring. Cathedral ceiling in the livingroom, 10 foot ceiling in the family room, a true master suite with cathedral ceiling, large master bath with separate shower and soaking bath tub, two walk-in closets, separate dressing area with vanity and sink, security system, intecom and central vacuum system. Combining the traditional layout and the updated features it's easy to see why this home is so popular.

For added benefit throw in the fact that there is newly installed neutral carpet and vinyl flooring. Lovely deck overlooking commons and nature preserve. One of the most desired subdivisions in the Plymouth community (Woodlore North); convenient to both shopping and major thoroughfares.

For information, call Jim Stevens at 313-459-6000.

Traditional colonial is in move-in condition

4090 Saddle Lane
(S. of Walnut Lake, W. of Orchard Lake)
West Bloomfield
C-21 MJL Corporate Transfers Service
$245,000

Come today and experience a lovely colonial in move-in condition.

Privately located on professional, well-cared for lot in Potomac Green Subdivision.

Traditional "Nantucket Colonial" features four good-sized bedrooms, over 2,500 square feet of space and two and a half baths. Gorgeous updated white kitchen with hardwood floor. The 24- by 13-foot family room has a large brick wall natural fireplace and recessed lighting.

The home is in the West Bloomfield school district.

The irregular shaped lot is slightly elevated and boasts a variety of evergreen trees, perennials and privacy shrubs.

For more information,call Larry Horn or John Yugovich at 810-855-8506 or 810-855-8509.

Open today 1-4 p.m.

Certain behaviors can sabotage your search

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

If you've been job hunting recently, you've probably discovered that being qualified for a job doesn't necessarily mean you'll get that job. Besides the fact that there's usually more than one qualified applicant for every vacancy, employers say qualified candidates frequently sabotage their search efforts by committing one or more common "faux pas."

Among the most common self-sabotaging behaviors: arriving late for interviews. Punctuality may not seem all that important to individuals who consider themselves qualified for a particular position, but employers typically don't see it that way. It's common courtesy to be punctual and few excuses—including car trouble or heavy traffic—tend to erase the negative impression made by a late arrival for an interview. Employers say such behavior leaves them wondering, "Will this person arrive late for a meeting with clients? Do they have poor time management and organizational skills? Don't they value other people's time?" Frequently, employers are left to conclude that if someone isn't sufficiently organized or professional to arrive on time for a meeting as important as a job interview, they're likely to be equally unprofessional on the job if hired.

To avoid undermining your candidacy in this way, make a conscious decision to do whatever it takes to arrive on time for all interviews. If you're unfamiliar with an employer's location, consider making a trial run the day or week before your interview so you can find your way. If you're not certain of traffic patterns en route, try to do your practice run at the same time of day as your interview.

If time or geography doesn't allow for this approach, make sure you leave ample travel time the day of your interview in case you encounter heavy traffic or lose your way. If all goes smoothly, you'll arrive early and have plenty of time to gather your thoughts and make a quick stop in the bathroom if necessary. You can also use extra time to peruse any magazines or company brochures you find in the employer's lobby. From such materials, you can often glean additional information about the company or its industry that can prove helpful in asking or answering interview questions. At the very least, arriving early and having a bit of added preparation time beats arriving late—disheveled and distracted.

By the way, before leaving home, be sure you have not only the address of the employer you're meeting with, but the telephone number as well. You want to be able to call if you get lost or end up stuck in traffic. Although it's clearly best to do whatever you can to arrive on time, calling if you're unavoidably detained can go a long way to minimize the negative impact made by a late arrival.

Besides punctuality, attitude counts for a lot with employers. Qualified candidates who are punctual can still end up sabotaging their search efforts by being rude or arrogant with the administrative staff they encounter at a prospective employer's office. Unfortunately, some job hunters reserve their best behavior only for the hiring managers and human resource professionals with whom they're interviewing. They aren't as courteous to the receptionists, secretaries and administrative assistants they encounter when first arriving for their interviews. Such behavior can definitely backfire. Administrative support professionals often communicate with their bosses about rude applicants.

The same goes for applicants who lose their temper when kept waiting for more than fifteen minutes for an interview. Usually, it's an unexpected circumstance that delays an interviewer. Sometimes, however, employers will keep applicants waiting beyond the appointed interview time just to see how they'll react. They want to know if the person has "a short fuse." Companies aren't generally looking to hire volatile people with a low threshold for frustration.

To avoid problems in this regard, plan ahead. Recognize that delays occur and try not to schedule interviews too close together. If an employer is delayed, do something productive while you're waiting. Review your resume. Make sure you're familiar with the details. Go over the list of questions you've prepared to ask. Mentally rehearse a description of two or three work accomplishments so they're easy to recall when the interviewer asks, "What would your consider some recent successes?" There are plenty of ways to use your waiting time constructively.

If the interviewer is delayed excessively and you absolutely can't wait, ask if you can reschedule the appointment and do your best to confirm the new interview time and date before leaving the premises.

Whatever you do, don't lose your cool. Employers aren't impressed by tantrums. In job hunting, as in life, patience is a virtue.

Working Life: Smart moves in the reference game

By Deborah L. Jacobs - Chronicle Features

When it comes to getting references from a former employer, there are two realities. Officially most companies, worried about potential lawsuits, will confirm just the bare facts of a staffer's work history: job title, years of employment and salary, for example. Unofficially though, much more information often gets exchanged without a worker even knowing it.

That's distressing news for job-hunters concerned about making the best possible impression. Maybe you're leaving because you got passed over for a promotion, didn't get along with a new boss, or were fired. Your strategy will be to emphasize the positive (for instance, you're looking for a job that offers new challenges, room for advancement, the resources of a large company, or the intimacy of a small one). Even when an interviewer seems receptive, you may wonder with each rejection if you didn't get the job because someone bad-mouthed you.

Negative information leaks out by more than one path. Sometimes, one of your references may describe your work in less than glowing terms. More often, hiring managers rely on their own resources to ferret out any unfavorable details.

Typically, this second approach involves bypassing the personnel department (which tends to deliver "just the fact"). Instead, managers might go directly to those you reported to, whether or not you've given out their names. Or, prospective employers can rely on their own contacts at a company to get an "inside read."

Of course, you can't stop interviewers from calling anyone they please. But there are some steps you can take to help them get the most favorable overall report.

•Handpick your references. If, for whatever reason, you're afraid your latest supervisor will damn you with faint praise, don't use him or her as a reference. Instead, rely on previous bosses, colleagues, clients or team members who have seen you in action.

•Coach references about what to say. Once you've interviewed at a place and have a sense of the issues that concern this company, bring your references up to date. Talk about the kinds of inquiries to expect, and possible responses. If you're not totally satisfied with how your reference reacts, don't give this person's name to the business where you're applying.

•Negotiate, on your way out the door, what your previous boss will tell the new one. Increasingly, this conversation is part of severance discussions when workers get fired, says Kathleen Cahill, an employment lawyer in Baltimore. In such cases, it's perfectly reasonable to say, "As you can imagine, I'm very disappointed that you can't use me here. To help me find another job as quickly as possible, I hope we can agree in advance on how you'll recommend me to potential employers."

The ideal method is usually a reference letter that you draft, preferably with a lawyer's help. It should highlight your strong points, summarize the kind of work you've done (including a few examples), and describe in neutral terms why you're leaving. ("Our company recently underwent a 20 percent staff reduction, and John's job was unfortunately one of those cut.")

Get a written agreement that the company will promptly send out this text in response to any requests for references. The next best thing is to ask for 10 originals of the letter that you can use as needed (though many hiring managers frown on this prefab approach).

Depending on the level of job you're applying for, the letter may not stop businesses from probing further. Still, most former bosses will live up to their promises, Cahill says. And having some commitment about what they will (or won't) say is better than leaving people completely to their own devices.

Someone who digs deeply enough can probably come up with at least one reason not to hire you. Your goal is to give them many more to go the opposite route.

Bad Bosses: Saving your sanity in the workplace

by Linsey Novak,
Tribune Media

"Why is it that when people get into managerial positions, they are so bad?" a reader writes. "Do they know how miserable they make people, and in some cases, even cause illness? How do they get these positions? Thank God there are a few professional people in management, but they are few and far between."

This isn't just whining from a single disgruntled employee, but a common complaint. Many workers have written about being made miserable by intolerant, oppressive, ill-mannered and sometimes even emotionally disturbed bosses.

Peggy writes, "I'm having trouble finding a job where management treats employees decently. My current boss is one of the worst I've had, using much profanity, which makes working here really humiliating." Peggy (not her real name) has already switched jobs to get away from such rude and crass behavior, but her boss's" behavior seems to get worse every time she changes jobs.

"I feel as though I have gone back in time to the days of sweat shops, when employees had nowhere to turn. For some reason, they feel it is appropriate behavior to bully the staff."

Well, it isn't appropriate behavior, and though Peggy has had a stream of bad luck with bosses, she may need to change jobs one more time. Staying in a negative situation harms you, even if ever so gradually. You could end up doubting yourself, which in turn could ruin your ability to interview well when you finally realize that your current situation is not going to change and you start a job search.

Jim explains his predicament this way: "Within two weeks, I knew my manager was incompetent; I created a new brochure, sales material and a pricing model, which my boss shredded in front of fellow employees while mocking me."

This was just the beginning of her personal attacks, which led Jim to speak to his boss's manager about her behavior, only to be told that the company had had problems with her before.

Jim wasted no time finding another position because "life is too short to let the unprofessional boss rule your life," he says. He's thankful he had emotional support from friends and family, because if he hadn't, he might not have had the strength to ignore his boss's personal attacks while looking for another job.

Jim thinks he has learned a good lesson. "Our culture is full of people who find it easier to tear down others than to help and share in their success. It can be devastating to one's psyche. Avoid situations like these because you can't win."

And he's right. When bosses exhibit rude, crude and outright sick behavior, odds are they are not going to change. You can complain to their bosses about them, but that's no guarantee the company will deal with the problem or rectify the situation for you.

Mary writes that upper management tolerates almost any type of behavior by bosses as long as it doesn't interfere with the company's profitability. While that may be true, it won't help you to analyze why your boss is mean, vindictive or just plain crazy. Take your sanity and run.

Insecure bosses tear you down until you start believing what they say. Good jobs aren't particularly easy to get, but the longer you're in a negative environment, the more difficult it will be to leave.

What, me worry?

Entrepreneurs must ward off the worrywart

by Alice Breeding
Tribune Media

I was on vacation in Vermont recently at a resort that offered seminars addressing all sorts of subjects, including nutrition, time management and worrying. We weren't in the mood to attend structured classes, but I did ask the teacher of the worrying seminar about the habits of entrepreneurs.

Entrepreneurs genuinely have a lot to be concerned about: cash flow, taxes, technology and all the other responsibilities that are part of running an office. Home-based business owners often have the most to worry about, because they are less likely than larger businesses to have staff, and they can feel pulled between work and home.

The teacher of the seminar was Juliana O'Brien, a Shelburne, Vt.-based social worker and divinity school graduate who specializes in anxiety. She made some interesting points that may prevent you from wasting time worrying when you should be working on your business.

Worrying is a habit that you will have to work to rid yourself of. Most of the time, worrying is a means of avoiding your most pressing concerns. For example, if you consistently worry about your technology, ability to meet deadlines and every other aspect of your business, you may actually be concerned about cash flow. You may be using the other temporary concerns to prevent you from having to examine what bothers you most.

By examining your worries and determining the real source of your anxiety, you can take action on the cause of the concern. In the example above, you could take steps to increase cash flow and increase your business's viability once you have determined that the issue of cash flow is the root of your problem.

Another common source of worry is indecision. Many entrepreneurs vacillate before accepting a job assignment, hiring, spending money or taking the business in a new direction. If indecision causes you to worry, recognize this as a behavior pattern and consciously make a effort to take action sooner.

The next time you are trying to make a decision, recognize that you create worry for yourself in these situations. Change your pattern by weighing the pros and cons and making an educated decision without spending time obsessing over it.

You probably won't be able to change your habits right away, but stopping yourself each time you start to worry over a decision will wear away at your tendencies.

Other tips to keep your worrying to a minimum.

- Put your worries into two categories - things you have some control over and things you have no control over. Let go of the things you have no control over and make plans of action for the things you can control.
- Stop worrying about the future. O'Brien calls this "a negative habit that needs to be broken and it can be unlearned." She says that 97 percent of events we worry about never happen. Worrying about them is a waste of a time - and time is a precious commodity if you run a home-based business.
- If you are worried about money, do something to improve your financial situation. Make more client calls, send out more material about your company, network more. Use the energy you would have devoted to worrying to take action.
- Analyze what you are worried about. What is the cause of the concern? What are all the possible alternatives to the problem? Which approach will you take? How can you put your plan into action?
- Keep active and busy. Worry can be the result of too much thinking time. Live more day to day and think less about the future.

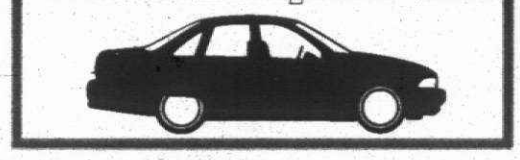
Civic stands out among small cars

CARReport



By Anne Fracassa
Avanti NewsFeatures

The 1997 Honda Civic is roomy. It's got a functional back seat. The doors sound solid when you close them. And, hey, it's even kinda cute.

Not small cute.

This new Civic, redesigned in 1996, is now in its sixth generation. Honda started selling the Civic here in 1972. And now, all these years later, the company's East Liberty, Ohio, plant is the largest manufacturer of the Civic worldwide.

A little more about East Liberty — Honda's the only automaker (and East Liberty is the only auto plant in the world) to accomplish completion of a running model change in the midst of a plant production increase of more than 30 percent.

Right now the plant is building around 800 Civics a day for us here in the U.S. market and for export to Japan and other countries.

That translates to about 300,000 cars. Whew!

Now ... back to the car.

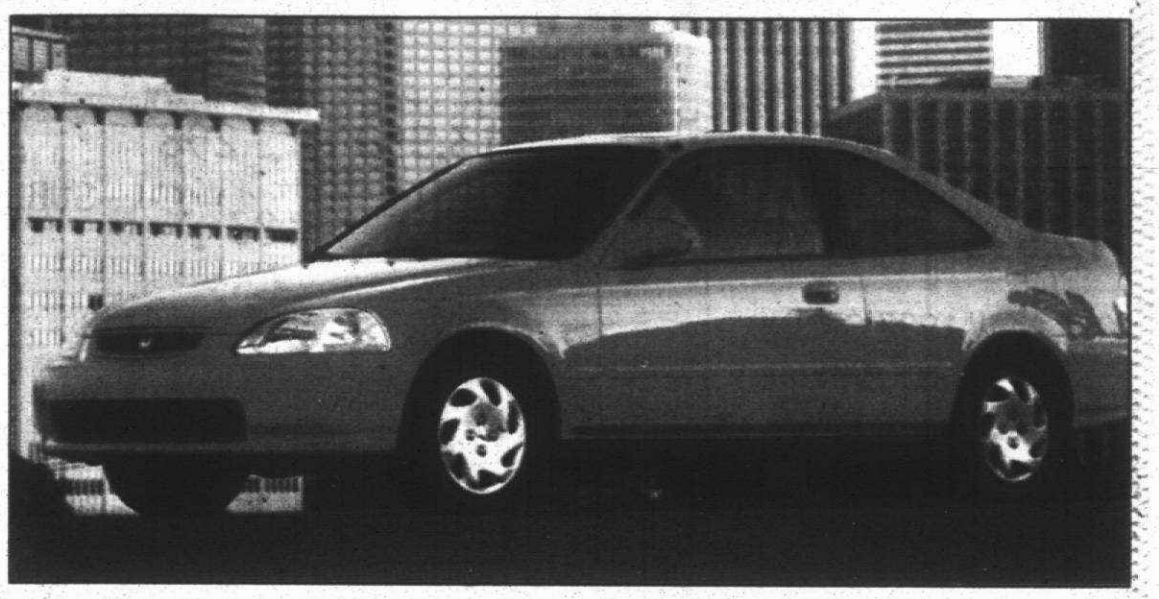
Last year it enjoyed its first major makeover since the 1991 model year. It's classified as a small car, but it's really bigger, quieter, faster and more fuel efficient than it has ever been. It's also more distinctive in styling.

All available Civics have strong transmissions, smart styling, stiff bodies and better engines than their counterparts in previous generations.

Now this is cool: The Civic HX coupe is available with an innovative automatic transmission Honda calls CVT — Continuously Variable Transmission.

What Honda has done here is melded the fuel efficiency of a manual transmission and the performance of an automatic.

What this means is that it's totally shiftless. You stomp on the gas and the rpms rev up without ever having a shift-back on the car. There's never an interruption of power, either.



All available Civics have strong transmissions, smart styling, stiff bodies and better engines than their counterparts in previous generations.

This feature is a little unnerving because you expect to feel the car shift up a gear. But it never does.

The Civic is also available with an improved 5-speed manual and a new 4-speed electronically controlled automatic on most models.

The automatic features Honda's grade logic control for smother shifting when climbing or descending hills. Anti-lock brakes are standard on the EX sedan and are optional on the other models.

Instrumentation is laid out well. The speedometer has a 247-degree sweep that's neat. All other instrumentation — including a tach, coolant temp and fuel-level gauge — is backed by a soothing blue background.

Seating is comfy in front — with enough leg room for anyone under 6-foot-2. The back seats, again, are functional for normal-sized people. Just don't push the seats all the way back. You'll fit, but the knees will touch the back of the front seat.

All in all, the new Civic is a "small" car that's fun to drive, easy on the pocket and easy on the trips to the gas station. Thumbs up.
