County ruling kills condo plan

Residents on Oakbrook Court are celebrating a decision against extending the cul-de-sac street so that developers can build a 40-unit condominium project. Canton planners were perplexed by the decision.

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

It seems the cul-de-sac of Oakbrook Court might not be sacked after all, following a ruling by Wayne County stating that it cannot be extended into a proposed condominium development.

That ruling generated cheers from residents – but caused confusion for township officials, who said they were told several months ago that the street could be extended.

Oakbrook Court, which connects to the east side of Morton Taylor south of Joy, was to be extended to lead into Oakbrook Estates North, a 15-acre, 40-unit site condominium development.

The Canton Planning Commission voted 5-0 July 10 to allow the street to be extended so that Silver Construction of Canton could build the homes.

But residents living on Oakbrook cried foul, saying that they were concerned about increased traffic along Oakbrook and losing the privacy of their cul-de-sac. They also questioned whether the street, which ends in a circle with an island, was ever intended to be extended – as was stated by planning officials and commissioners.

Canton Planning Commissioner Melissa McLaughlin said at the July 10 meeting that Oakbrook Court was always intended to be extended.

Carol Sample, who has lived on Oakbrook since 1978, said converting the cul-de-sac into a through street never made any sense. She is secretary/treasurer of the Mayfair Village Homeowners Association.

"They should have built (Oakbrook) as a stub street," which differs from a cul-de-sac in that it ends without a turnaround. "Who would have ever thought that (Oakbrook) would be anything different (from a cul-de-sac)," she

Buses get OK from state cops

SCHOOLS

Children who ride Plymouth-Canton school buses will be riding safe transportation to classes this year.

That's the determination of a Michigan State Police inspection of more than 100 Plymouth-Canton school buses, which found no major problems with this year's fleet.

"It's hard not to find something wrong, but the problems I found were minimal," said Officer Kevin Hogan of the Michigan State Police bus inspection unit. "There were a couple of buses red tagged with some safety concerns, but the problems were from wear, not the lack of maintenance."

Red-tagging means the district must park the bus until all repairs are made.

"We made the repairs right on the spot, before they even went back on the lot," said Kurt Miles, head fleet operation mechanic. "A couple of buses were red tagged, which is below the 10 tagged during last year's inspection. One was a small exhaust leak, the other a low air buzzer. Nothing major."

That's a far cry from two years ago when buses were so old they were breaking down, not only on routes, but in the bus yard. Students were waiting at stops for buses that never arrived, many times in below-freezing temperatures. The district was putting thousands of dollars into buses

Township to buy land as part of charter deal

BY SCOTT DANIEL
STAFF WRITER
sdaniel@oe.homecomm.net

A portion of a deal that will bring a charter school to Canton was finalized Tuesday.

Township trustees approved the purchase of 88 acres from West Bloomfield-based Singh Development. Canton will pay $2.95 million for the parcel, which is located near the intersection of Ford and Ridge roads.

The land purchase is part of a larger deal with Singh and National Heritage Academies.

It will allow for a single-story charter school near the northeast corner of Ridge and Ford roads. Singh gets the right to build a senior living facility adjacent to the charter school.

Canton, meanwhile, was allowed to purchase the 88-acre parcel at less than market value – about $34,000 per acre. A Wayne County Circuit Court judge must sign off on a "consent agreement" in order for the deal to become official.

"Until we put our names on the dotted line," Canton Supervisor Tom Yack said, "anything can happen and probably will. This has not been an example of how to efficiently buy property."

The township has 40 acres of its own under option at Ford/Ridge and plans to combine the two parcels for a community park.

Canton will pay the entire $2.95 million for the Singh property up front, Yack said. The township will be reimbursed 40 percent of the cost through a Michigan Department of Natural Resources grant, he added.

Tire recall leaves dealers rolling to meet demand

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

The recall of 6.5 million tires on Ford vehicles has left local auto delearships and tire stores scrambling for replacements and calming anxious drivers.

The recalled tires are thought to be the cause of 46 deaths nationwide, following separation of tire tread while vehicles are in motion, according to news reports.

Tim DeHority, service manager at Blackwell Ford, 41001 Plymouth Road in Plymouth Township, said Thursday afternoon that he had a pile of about 250 tires sitting behind the dealership. All were recalled tires.

"There isn't one that's defective in that pile," DeHority said.

Statistically, only 36 out of every million recalled tires manufactured is expected to fail, DeHority said. Other factors, such as vehicle speed, geographic region and vehicle modifications also play a role.

For example, Ford Explorers manufactured for Middle Eastern countries are typically modified with bench seats instead of the captain's seats in U.S. models. This forces the vehicles – and the tires – to accommodate eight people in a vehicle designed for five, DeHority said.

This factor, combined with the hotter weather conditions, causes the tires undue strain. And driving too fast

3 caught in separate shoplifting incidents

COP CALLS

Meijer was the scene of a pair of shoplifting incidents this week, according to Canton police reports.

The first occurred Monday at approximately 12:45 a.m. Reports said a male and female entered the store and tried to exchange an article of children's clothes.

After being denied, the couple walked to a different part of the store and placed a pair of tennis shoes in their cart. Reports said several "Pokeman" cards were also selected.

The couple then left the store without paying for the items, reports said. Police later used information from the couple's attempted merchandise return to identify them.

Reports listed the man as a Garden City resident and the woman as a Vandenberg resident. Police are investigating the incident.

Police were able to apprehend a second shoplifter early Friday morning.

Reports said a 24-year-old Dearborn man concealed an electric razor and gum in his pants then tried to leave the store at about 6:20 a.m. Meijer loss prevention agents stopped and detained him until Canton police arrived.

Equipment stolen

Equipment valued at $650 was stolen from a Belleville Road landscaping firm recently.

Reports said someone took an air compressor and weed whacker in the early morning hours of Aug. 10. The items were in a storage building. Reports said there were no signs of forced entry.

Stolen car

A 33-year-old Canton man's 1999 Jeep Cherokee was stolen early Monday morning.

The vehicle was parked near the man's home in the 1600 block of Northbrook Court, according to reports. A records check by police indicated that the Detroit Police Department's arson unit made an inquiry about the Jeep at about 2 a.m.

Canton police are investigating the incident.

Window smashed

A 38-year-old Canton man's Geo Prism back window was smashed early Monday morning, according to reports.

The vehicle was parked in the street adjacent to his home in the 600 block of Kingsway. The Canton man told police he saw three white males in their teens walking down the street at about 2:30 a.m. He discovered his window smashed out about an hour later, reports said.

New Hindu temple will break ground in October

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

Groundbreaking for Canton's second Hindu temple is tentatively planned for sometime in mid-October, pending site plan approval from the township board.

The Canton Planning Commission voted 5-0, with commissioner Bob Wade absent, to approve the site plan for a Swaminarayan sect temple on Canton Center. The township board, which grants final approval on land use issues, will tentatively visit the issue at its next meeting Aug. 22.

The 9.6-acre temple site is on the east side of Canton Center between Geddes and Palmer. A one-story, 18,000 square-foot community center with a temporary temple is planned for the first phase and a 5,000 square-foot domed temple, attached to the community center by a walkway, would be built about five years later. Roughly 50 families are expected to be initially served by the temple.

Some planning commissioners said they were confused about how the building will look. Commission Chairman Vic Gustafson asked the developer to bring in a material board showing samples of exterior building materials and good artist's renderings.

Other commissioners echoed Gustafson's concerns.

"It looks stark and cold and commercial," said commissioner Karl Zarbo.

"I don't think this is any good at all," said commissioner Cathy Johnson.

Attorney Bryan Amann, representing Papadopoulos & Pradhan Architects Inc. of North York, Ontario, the architectural firm designing the temple, said they would provide better renderings and a material board.

The architectural style was described as traditional "Vedic," meaning a relatively simple building embellished by an intricately carved porch. Hand-carved Burma teak wood will be used in the porch.

Proposed exterior building materials include pre-cast concrete panels, limestone and wood. Inside building materials will include marble, granite and quarry stone with drywall and wood carvings.

Architect Arun Pradhan said an estimated 5,000-10,000 Hindus live in Canton. Of that number, roughly 200-400 families are Swaminarayan Hindus, the sect represented by the new temple.

The Hindu Temple located on 44955 Cherry Hill serves Jain Hindus, a different sect.

Hinduism is the third most prevalent world religion behind Christianity and Islam and has an estimated 761.7 million followers, according to almanac data.

Architect Arun Pradhan said the Swaminarayan sect's spiritual leader, Pramukhji Swami, is expected to attend the groundbreaking ceremonies in mid-October. The construction should take another six to eight months and the temple could be open by March, he added.

The planning commission approved the developer's special land use request April 3. Several residents at that meeting expressed concerns about increased traffic and noise. This time around, the issue garnered no protests from residents.

The developer is a Gujarat, India, firm known by the acronym B.A.P.S., which stands for Bochasanwasi Shree Akshar Purushottam Swaminarayan Sanstha. B.A.P.S. also has offices in Europe, North America, Africa and the Far East.

Project architects have said the temple will be the first of its type built in Michigan. A similar but larger temple was built recently in London and another temple is being built in Chicago.

OFFERING GRADES KINDERGARTEN–5TH IN FALL OF 2000

Still studying

Summer academy is chance to learn

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

Nearly 90 Plymouth-Canton sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade students completed a 14-day middle school Summer Academy, enriching their education before heading back to class Aug. 29.

"Some of the students used the academy for additional reinforcement, some for enrichment," said Cheryl Klee, director of the Summer Academy. "We tried to make it fun and as much a social activity as well as educational."

Klee said the program was designed to integrate reading, writing, math, science and social studies.

"Research says the brain learns better when subjects have some sort of connection, instead of being taught individually," said Klee.

Sixth graders studied ecology. Seventh graders, many of whom were among the fifth graders who went as a group to Space Camp in Florida, studied space. Eighth graders were given the task of studying the reasons behind endangered animals.

Students were allowed to design their own projects, using reports, displays, models and even Power Point visuals.

"We also allowed students to use resources off the Internet, giving them a broader range of information," added Klee. "Many of them used spreadsheets, graphs and diagrams to support their projects."

As part of the Internet learning experience, Plymouth Township police officers David Hayes and Bill Groff gave students a lesson on Internet safety and dealing with strangers on the World Wide Web.

CANTON CONNECTION

Bridge work done

The bridge connecting Fellows Creek Golf Club with an adjacent condominium development has been rebuilt.

The two-year project was taken on by developers John Retzlaff and Bruce Silver, with cooperation from the township. The existing bridge between the public golf course and the Preserve on Fellows Creek Condominiums was damaged beyond repair. So the developers had a new, 12-by-45-foot prefabricated bridge built, which they then installed.

The bridge is meant to aid pedestrian crossings and enhance the wildlife in the area, Retzlaff said.

The 116th National Target Championships held earlier this month in Canton's Heritage Park will soon be available for viewing over the Internet.

Cornerstone Baptist gets nod from planning commission

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

A Baptist church Monday was given a preliminary go-ahead from the Canton Planning Commission to build what has been described as a traditional country church.

Cornerstone Baptist Church plans to build a 5,000 square-foot church on a 6-acre parcel on the west side of Ridge north of Saltz. The Rev. Ricky Roop from South Carolina has already been selected as the church's pastor and he is already living in an on-site parsonage with his family.

Cornerstone Baptist's 55 members meet at Cherry Hill School, a one-room schoolhouse on the corner of Ridge and Cherry Hill. The church was founded 2 1/2 years ago.

"We've outgrown where we're meeting and feel that now is the time to go ahead and start building," Roop said. Groundbreaking is planned for October and the church could open by February.

Future members are expected to hail from two nearby subdivisions under construction - Vintage Valley and Founders Woods, Roop said.

The church will have a sanctuary, fellowship hall, Sunday school classrooms and a nursery. Future plans call for a day care center, which could open by next fall, and a Christian day school, which could open within three years.

Churches and schools are allowed to build in residential areas with special land use approval.

The building will have vinyl siding – something not all planning commissioners initially supported.

Petitioners and planning commissioners disagreed about whether the church would blend well with surrounding homes, including many upscale ones constructed primarily of brick.

"Basically it's in harmony with existing surroundings," said Chester Bartosik, project architect. "We believe that the vinyl is aesthetically pleasing."

Commission Chairman Vic Gustafson asked why they were departing from brick and why a steeple showed up on renderings but was not listed in the plans.

"Right now funds are somewhat limited and we're trying to keep costs down," Bartosik said, adding that a steeple would be added later.

Roop said their funding depends on the generosity of church members.

"We're looking for someone willing to donate to the church," Roop said jokingly.

Commissioner Melissa McLaughlin said the white vinyl-sided church design would fit with a "country church" look and fit in with its surroundings. The church would be near the Cherry Hill Village area, the site of one of Canton's original crossroads villages.

"I don't necessarily think it's a goal to have everything (be) homogeneous," she said.

Commissioner Ron Lieberman agreed.

"Frankly, I like the character of the vinyl siding," he said. "It sets it apart."

that should have been shelved. At times, there weren't enough buses to even service the routes.

"We've come a long way. The new buses have made a whale of a difference," said Miles. "We were using buses we bought in 1984 that had 200,000 miles on them, and vans with odometers reaching 300,000. They just became too unsafe and we eventually got rid of them."

Miles said the oldest bus in the fleet now is 12 years old. Six new 84-passenger buses are ready for duty come the first day of school Aug. 29. There are also three new 47-passenger special education buses.

Miles expects buses to last at least 10 years before replacement should be considered.

"The biggest thing is to have a good maintenance procedure and a replacement plan," he said. "If you get new buses all in one year, it's great to have them. However, in 10 years they are all worn out at the same time. It was too costly to replace all the buses we needed at one time.

"Think of driving a 20-year-old car ... ," said Miles.

Plymouth-Canton has bought nearly 40 new buses with $3 million from the March 1997 bond issue and $500,000 from the October 1998 bond issue.

Marv Bartal, Plymouth-Canton's director of transportation, said he's presented a five-year plan to the Board of Education for purchasing new buses.

"We still had some money left over in the bond issue to purchase buses this year and will still have some money left to purchase some buses next year," said Bartal. "After that, the board will have to decide if it wants to continue the program from the general fund."

Bartal said the plan calls for purchasing 11-15 buses a year, depending on need, at a cost of between $500,000 and $800,000 annually.

School board president Darwin Watts is in favor of the kind of plan being presented by Bartal.

"Yes, I've been in favor of such a plan because it favors continuity and accountability," said Watts. "It's a better way of managing the fleet."

the Grand Rapids-based company does plan to open and operate a charter school this fall. It will use portable classrooms until a permanent facility is finished.

The Ford/Ridge location represents National Heritage's third try at locating a school in Canton.

The company sued Canton April 19 in Wayne County Circuit Court after being rejected a second time. The lawsuit was filed after township trustees in mid-March nixed plans for a charter school at Warren and Ridge roads.

National Heritage's first site, at Beck and Hanford roads, was denied last year. In both cases, trustees said the lot was too small and they cited potential road impacts.

According to Yack, neither is a concern at Ford/Ridge. All 10 acres at the site are suitable for school development, he said.

The deal's third party, Singh, will build a facility similar to one it operates on Canton Center south of Ford Road, "Waltonwood." It would be Singh's third such facility in the township.

said.

Wayne County Commissioner John Sullivan, who represents the 11th district, said he routinely makes random calls to constituents asking if there's anything he can do for them. One of those constituents was an Oakbrook resident who asked him to look into the street expansion issue.

Sullivan's district includes the townships of Canton, Huron, Sumpter and Van Buren and the cities of Belleville, Romulus and Wayne.

"I completely agree with the fact that it should not be expanded," Sullivan said. "It violates the county ordinance."

A letter dated July 20 from the Wayne County Department of Public Services stated that Oakbrook cannot be extended without an additional roadway entrance. The July letter contradicts a letter dated April 25 that stated the expansion could be allowed.

■ 'We cannot allow for the expansion of the current isolated subdivision to exceed 20 lots, without an additional roadway entrance.'

–July 20 letter, Wayne County Public Services

"This would be in violation of our most current subdivision rules and regulations standards," as stated in the July 20 letter, penned by David Ryzyi, assistant division permit engineer. "...We cannot allow for the expansion of the current isolated subdivision to exceed 20 lots, without an additional roadway entrance."

John Roach, spokesman for the Wayne County Department of Public Services, said the developer would need to gain access from Lilley Road, which could be expensive because of Tonquish Creek, which cuts through the property. The developer would have to build a bridge over the creek.

"Realistically, it's the only way it's going to get done," Roach said of securing access from Lilley Road.

Jeff Goulet, community planner, said the issue was to go before the township board of trustees Aug. 22 but has been shelved. The township board grants final approval on planning issues approved by the planning commission.

"We've asked for clarification from (Wayne County) on that position," Goulet said. "We want to make sure we have clarification because we have two conflicting letters in our file," Goulet said.

Roach said the April 25 letter contained some errors.

"(Canton Township) asked for an opinion and this (letter) was not in any form an approval – it was just an opinion, he said

"That earlier mistake was regrettable. We've acknowledged that the person who made that opinion made an error. (Extending the street) is in violation of county ordinance."

Now it's even easier to stay in the loop.

Michigan gains the spotlight during Democratic gathering

LOS ANGELES — As Michigan delegates headed off to Los Angeles last weekend for the Democratic National Convention, there were a paltry two speakers from the state included on the official list of those who would grace the stage.

By the end of the four-day assemblage, Michigan Dems were positively raving about the attention they'd received. The speakers list had grown to include Michigan Attorney General Jennifer Granholm, Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer, U.S. Rep. and Senate candidate Debbie Stabenow, and state House Minority Leader Kwame Kilpatrick.

Michigan U.S. Reps. David Bonior and John Conyers actually made the trip to the podium twice.

On top of that, the Michigan delegation was seated right down in front of the stage on the convention hall floor during the Los Angeles convention Aug. 14-17. That's not just a perk. With network and cable television news cameras stationed in front and beside the stage, scanning the crowd for delegate reactions during the speeches, Michigan officials and delegates appeared earlier and often on TV screens during the broadcasts.

"It has been incredible," said state party Chairman Mark Brewer. "And the delegates outdid themselves. They have been very enthusiastic."

All that cheering and sign waving by the Michigan delegation made them a good target for those camera lenses.

"But all the attention on the state and our position on the floor is just a symbol of how important we are," Brewer said.

Political analysts have concluded Michigan is one of a

Flanagan to leave RESA post

Mike Flanagan of Plymouth is retiring as superintendent of the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency at the end of the year and is expected to become executive director of the Michigan Association of School Administrators in 2001.

Flanagan, RESA superintendent the last six years, qualifies for retirement because he has worked over 30 years in K-12 public education in Michigan, according to Cheryl Gambrell, RESA's associate superintendent for employee services.

MASA, the Lansing-based professional association for Michigan's more than 500 superintendents, offered its executive director's job to Flanagan, who was Farmington Public Schools superintendent prior to joining RESA.

"This was a very difficult decision for me," said Flanagan, who called his six years at Wayne RESA "some of the most fulfilling of my career."

strains the tires, too.

"A higher rate of speed generates higher heat," he said.

Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. officials initially announced that southern states would get recall attention first, because of indications that hot weather aggravates tire problems.

Scott Lempert, manager of Firestone Tire & Service Center, 44120 Canton Center Road, said the media has blown the tire recall story out of proportion.

"The media has started a frenzy," Lempert said, adding that it was "impossible" to meet the demands of all customers needing their tires replaced. The recall is expected to last until next summer.

"We're only operating on an informational basis that comes to us piecemeal," Lempert said.

Phil Smith, service manager at Jack Demmer Ford, 37300 Michigan in Wayne, described the situation as "madness."

"We're just doing the best we can with what we can get," Smith said. "We have many tires on order and we're not getting many in. A lot of people aren't very happy because we don't have tires."

Firestone tires have proven extremely hard to come by. Instead, Smith said they're installing competitor's tires, including Goodyear and Michelin. Using the competition's tires eases some people's concerns about the quality of Firestone tires, he added.

On the recall list

Here is a list of vehicles included thus far in the Firestone tire recall:

- 1991-2000 Ford Explorers
- 1996-2000 Mercury Mountaineers
- 2001 Explorer Sport Track and Explorer Sport models
- 1991-2000 Ford Rangers
- 1991-1994 Ford Broncos
- 1991-94 F-series trucks

Anyone with recalled tires can contact their dealer to schedule an appointment for replacement. There have been some delays in getting replacement tires, according to local auto dealers and tire retailers.

The recall involves all P235/75R15 Firestone radial ATX and radial ATX II tires and Wilderness AT tires produced at the company's Decatur, Ill., plant. The tires are also used on Nissan, Toyota and Subaru vehicles.

Tim DeHority, service manager at Blackwell Ford, said tires should be inflated to 26-30 pounds per square inch of pressure. Tire pressure gauges can be purchased in the automotive department of most stores.

Duggan tabs Sam Gardner for assistant prosecutor

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

His knees won't carry him in marathons anymore, but Samuel C. Gardner says he's still got the heart for running the Wayne County prosecutor's office and its staff of 160 assistant prosecutors.

That was apparently Mike Duggan's criteria when he announced Thursday the 69-year-old Gardner's appointment as his chief assistant prosecutor when Duggan becomes the county's top prosecutor in January.

"Sam Gardner works harder than anyone I know and he knows the legal system from both sides of the bench," Duggan said of the former Detroit Recorder's Court chief judge and marathon runner.

As chief judge, Gardner "did everything he could to make sure cases were tried in a timely fashion, even if it meant putting other judges' cases on his own docket," Duggan said.

"The judges know and respect him and so do the assistant prosecutors," Duggan continued. "He's going to be a tremendous asset."

Duggan won the Democratic Party nomination for prosecuting attorney in the Aug. 8 primary and is unopposed in the Nov. 7 general election.

Gardner, who said he ran in at least a dozen of the 26.2-mile races in 25 years as a runner, recalled negotiating a budget increase with Duggan to improve Recorder's Court operations, then reducing attorney fees for indigent cases.

"The county made money," he said.

Gardner, who now walks in a gym for exercise due to bad knees, said his and Duggan's "philosophies dovetail. I had to be sure of that."

He said he is "looking forward to making a difference in our justice system" through the prosecutor's office.

"I know it is possible to make our streets safer and to create a better place for our children and grandchildren. It just takes some extra effort," he said.

Gardner plans to reorganize the office and said he already has told office managers "to come up with a plan they agree on. I want it to be their plan."

A lifelong Detroit resident, Gardner will succeed George Ward of Plymouth as chief assistant. Ward and Duggan were bitter rivals in the primary.

During more than 30 years in criminal justice, Gardner has also been executive chief judge for Wayne County's circuit court and an Oakland County circuit court visiting judge.

Gardner, who earned his bachelor's, master's and law degrees at Wayne (now Wayne State) University, will leave his post as senior partner in the Detroit law firm of Gardner and Siringas.

handful of swing states that could determine the presidential election come November.

"It's going to be a close election. I'm not saying we are going to win or that we are going to win it going away. It is a battle that could go either way."

Additionally, Democrats have their eyes on a few other prizes. Democrats could win back Congress with only seven additional seats, said Barry Lepler of Huntington Woods, a delegate who is closely following the contests.

"In the case of Congress, its seven. Only seven, which is really not a lot," he said. "There is no question about gains. Every analyst agrees, Democrats are going to gain in the House and gain in the Senate. The only question is how many."

It would take five additional seats to win back the U.S. Senate. Actually, Dems are only down four there now, but since Sen. and vice presidential candidate Joe Lieberman is now on the ballot twice in his home state of Connecticut, he'll have to resign one post if he wins both. That would leave an appointment to the Senate seat in the hands of Connecticut's Republican governor.

"Five is very difficult in the Senate, but in the House they are going to pick up three or four in California alone," Lepler postulated.

That would boost Michigan even further into the national spotlight.

"Michigan is very important – if you look at the potential for Dave Bonior in Washington if we win back the Congress," state Rep. Gilda Jacobs of Huntington Woods said. Bonior is expected to run for House Majority Leader should the Democrats take back Congress, she explained.

"Then we have Sandy Levin being the head of Ways and Means. We have the potential of having Sen. Carl Levin being the chair of the Armed Services Committee (if the party takes back the Senate). We have a lot at stake. We have wonderful people in leadership positions in Congress and it can move forward even more to greater level," Jacobs said.

"I think Michigan is a very important state. We know we hold a very big link to the success of Al Gore and we are going to be there working for him," she said.

Former Sen. Don Riegle agrees with those analyses about the attention the state received.

"It demonstrates the growing importance of Michigan," he said. "I remember the convention when we were in the nose bleed seats the year (Jimmy) Carter was nominated."

Rocks seek a title trip

SALEM PREVIEW

The situation is a bit different this year for Plymouth Salem's soccer team.

A year ago, few people — if anyone, outside those related to players on the team — gave the Rocks much of a chance to mount a challenge for the Western Lakes Activities Association title, let alone the state championship.

Too many newcomers. Too many holes to fill.

Well . . . after 23 wins in 26 games, with just one loss, Salem found itself in the state finals opposite Rochester Adams. The Highlanders escaped with the victory, edging Salem 2-1. But there was no discounting what the Rocks had accomplished.

To almost everyone's astonishment.

But nothing is more fleeting than a high school championship team. After all, kids graduate.

The task Salem coach Ed McCarthy now must tackle isn't as huge as last year's appeared to be, but it's there. He must find someone to fill the scoring gap — lost to graduation were three key seniors, forward Scott Duhl (now at Western Michigan) and midfielders Brett Stinar (at Kalamazoo College) and Chris LaMasse (at Schoolcraft College).

Those three, together with the graduated Rob Ash, accounted for two-thirds of Salem's goal in 1999. Duhl and Stinar had 44 of the team's 84 goals a year ago.

"We should be very strong in the back," said McCarthy, who has guided the Rocks to the state championship match in two of the last three seasons. "That should be the strength of our team.

"But our seniors scored two-thirds of our goals last year. That's the big question mark this year: Who's going to score goals for us?

"Someone's going to have to pick that up."

It's not that bleak for Salem, to be sure. Eight starters do return, including the entire starting defense, which is all seniors this year: Keith Schenkel, a third-team all-state sweeper last year and "one of the top players in the state," according to his coach; marker Ben Wielechowski; marker Mike Harkins, a Western Lakes Activities Association all-Division selection in '99; and stopper Dustin Drabek.

Tavio Palazzolo, now a junior, returns as the starting keeper with Justin Griffin, a senior, also back.

"If you'd had told me a year ago that we'd start four juniors on defense and have a goals-against average of under .4 goals a game, I wouldn't have believed it," said McCarthy of last season's performance.

"That helped us a lot. All we needed was one or two goals a game."

The midfield is nearly as experienced, led by seniors Dan Longpre, Sean Loewe and Nick Tochman and sophomore Brian Popeney. Popeney figures to fill the attacking midfield

CANTON PREVIEW

If Plymouth Canton's boys soccer program did slip at all — and suggesting such a thing would be a real reach — the beginning of it could conceivably be traced to the state tournament semifinal against Brighton in 1998.

The Chiefs were expected to win that match. Instead, they were embarrassed, 6-0.

There was a lot of rebuilding to do last season, but no matter: They were still expected to be their superb selves.

But they weren't. Canton got off to a slow start, rebounded to play through the middle of the season, but then lost three of its final four matches — including a 2-0 defeat to Saline in the state district opener.

Their final record was 11-6-2, hardly the norm for a Canton squad.

"We had quite a young team," said coach Don Smith. "The younger kids who played a lot should all be better."

The Chiefs finished at 11-6-2 last season, losing the Western Lakes Activities Association Western Division title to Livonia Churchill. Most of the players who have graduated from that team were role players; significant among the losses is defender Jon Johnson.

"We fell flat at the end of the season last year," said Smith, not entirely sure why his team ran out of gas. "Hopefully, they'll play tougher this year."

If there's an area that must be considered a strength, it's in goal. T.J. Tomasso returns for his junior season. One of the top keepers in the state, Tomasso is a member of the Olympic Development Program regional team.

Backing him up are Matt Strabbing, a senior; and juniors Greg Musser and Chris Stevanovic.

The area that must be considered a problem for the Chiefs is up front, where the team's top two goal-scorers return: seniors Evan Malone and Mike Zemanski. That they return is the good news; the bad is that Malone led Canton in goal-scoring, but had just seven, while Zemanski was next best with six.

"You can't win too many ball games when your leading scorer only has seven goals — unless you have a whole bunch of them," noted Smith. "They're both on the varsity for their third year. If they're going to be ready, now's the time."

The problem Smith had in '99 was that, even when his young forwards weren't performing, he had very little else to call on. He's convinced that won't be the case this season.

"This year," he said, "we may have some others who will be able to pressure them."

Up from the junior varsity are junior Shon Washington, who has enough ability that he could be a solid keeper on any team ("He's very feisty," said Smith. "He's downright tough. And he loves to score."); sophomore Ryan Bussi, who makes up what he may lack in size with quickness to the ball; and juniors Jason Priebe and Jeff Bennett.

Smith has restructured the midfield, too, moving outside mids John Kaczmarek, a junior, and Andrew Holmes, a senior, to inside spots. Kaczmarek, "an excellent ballhandler who distributes the ball well" will be the attacking midfielder while Holmes is at the defensive mid position.

"We didn't win many air balls in the middle," said Smith of last season's performance. "I hope (Holmes) can help us there."

The outside midfield spots will be mostly new players, led by returnee Nick Houdek, a junior. Others who will see playing time are juniors Evan Baker, Zak Juntila, Jason Lenahan, Patrick Meyn, Nicholas Rolfe and Brett Clodigo.

"If there's anywhere we're going to be a bit weak, it'll be there," said Smith. "We're new out there, but they're all pretty good scrappers though."

On defense, James Steinert, a senior, moves from defensive midfielder to sweeper while last season's sweeper, Aaron Schmidt,

Shamrocks have talent to challenge

CC SOCCER PREVIEW

Last season wasn't a bad one for the Shamrocks — certainly not at 9-4-5.

"But I expected to do a little better with the talent we had," said Dana Orsucci, now in his fifth season as the head coach of Redford Catholic Central's soccer team. "It wasn't a loss or a disaster, but with the talent we had, we should have gone further."

Orsucci feels this year's team isn't as talented as his 1999 club, but then again, talent isn't everything.

"These are the best seniors I've had in terms of attitude, work ethic and desire," said Orsucci. "They have a will to keep going and that could be more important than talent. Sometimes in high school soccer, the best and most skilled team doesn't always win. Sometimes, it's the team that plays the hardest. You need role players and these guys aren't afraid to do that."

The Shamrocks are led by senior keeper Eric Sullivan — in more ways than one.

"He's an outstanding keeper, but he's also the best leader I've ever had," said Orsucci. "His work ethic is exceptional and he really understands the game. But he's also, in my opinion, one of the top five keepers in the state. The team is getting on his back this year. He has the ability to single-handedly win games this year."

Seniors John Ratliff, Pat Hayes and Brian Hagan will guide the defense, while Skylar Swiecki will help at midfield.

"John's a hard-nosed player, nothing fancy about him. He gets the ball and distributes it," said Orsucci. "Pat just goes hard, while Brian is one of the smartest players I have. Skylar is going to touch the ball a lot in the game and distribute it. He's the key of us in midfield."

Senior Chris Azanger and junior Matt Esper will lead the way at forward.

"Their games are different," Orsucci said. "Matt is very smooth with the ball, cutting in and out, while Chris is a finisher. Anything inside the 18-yard box is going to be a good shot. When you combine their games, they are dangerous. We're going to have to do that and control the tempo to win. We need to make other teams play our game."

position, with Tochman as the defensive midfielder and Longpre and Loewe on the outside. All started at times last season.

Kevin Savitski, a sophomore, has looked strong and could provide some valuable minutes in the midfield.

The forward line isn't entirely inexperienced. Jeff Haar, a senior who will share the team captainship with Schenkel, started on the front line last season and totaled 13 goals and 10 assists. He also scored 10 goals as a sophomore. Among his goals last season was the only marker in the 1-0 win over Livonia Churchill in the WLAA final.

Shane Smith, a junior who played on the junior varsity in '99, is slated to fill the other forward slot.

"I expect he'll score quite a few goals, that's for sure," said McCarthy of Smith. "I think he can get 15-plus goals for us."

What McCarthy doesn't have is an abundance of experience on the bench. All but two are juniors: defender Jon McGlone and midfielder Jeff Flora are both seniors.

At the midfield are juniors Jeff Bennett, Kevin Peurasaari, Jamie Zdrodowski and Matt Simons; at forward, there's Jared Lamborn and David Daigneau; and at defense, there's Scott Koehler.

All things considered, McCarthy has the guns to make some considerable noise in the WLAA and in the state.

"We should be strong, especially defensively," he said. "We return eight starters. On paper, we should be good as long as we can make up for the goals (those graduated guys) scored."

It won't be easy, but then it never is. Within the WLAA, McCarthy figures Canton "is going to be outstanding. They didn't lose much and have an outstanding keeper in T.J. Tomasso. He's one of the best in the midwest."

Livonia Stevenson has lost several key players, but the Spartans "always fill their losses right away. They'll be strong." Churchill, too — the team Salem beat in the WLAA final — looks good, as does Northville.

Within the state, Adams, the defending champs, returns many of the players responsible for guiding the Highlanders to the title last year. "They're the most talented team in the state," said McCarthy.

For the Rocks to get another shot at them, they'll "have to put up consistent offensive numbers," McCarthy said. "If we're averaging two goals a game, that may not be enough.

"And somewhere along the way we're going to have to have someone step forward and be our go-to guy. I don't know who that player will be this year. But any number of players could fill that void."

Fill that void and Salem may be able to fill the only vacancy that has gone unfullfilled since McCarthy took over as coach: a state title.

a junior, switches to stopper. Seniors Jai Bilimoria and Morgan Barr, together with juniors Mike Davis, Eric Durance, Brent Kwiatkowski and Nicholas Koehnel will be marking backs.

Two seniors, Mike Magers — who's coming back from knee surgery — and Scott McKee will provide depth at stopper and/or defensive midfield.

What Canton still has are questions, most notably: How good can you be?

It won't take long to get an idea. The Chiefs don't waste time easing into the season. Next weekend's kickoff, the Gary Balconi Invitational, has been expanded to eight teams, which means teams must play three games in one day (with 30-minute halves).

Teams in the tournament with Canton are Plymouth Salem, Redford Catholic Central, University of Detroit Jesuit, Troy Athens, Saline, Okemos and Midland Dow.

Three days after that tournament, the Chiefs play Novi (state champs in 1998), and two days later they go up against Warren DeLaSalle (three-time state champ in the '90s). Then, on Sept. 6, Canton goes up against Salem in their annual regular-season clash, which has been relocated from the end of the season to the beginning.

"Well, we'll see where we're at," said Smith. "If we come out of our first few games with a couple of wins, or at least some close losses, we'll be doing all right.

"It's hard to say (how good we are). Some of these kids have a lot of pride. They could surprise some people."

Although Salem's lost most of its scoring punch, Smith still figures the Rocks will be the team to beat in the WLAA — and in the state tournament.

And the Chiefs just might be the team to do it.

State records to be available on website

■ MHSAA NEWS

The Michigan High School Sports Record Book takes on a different look as the 2000-01 athletic year begins, becoming a feature of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's Web Site.

The record book, which has been printed as part of the MHSAA's annual Book of Champions beginning in 1982, featured rapid expansion in the past five years, growing from eight pages in the back of the publication to over 40 pages in the book reviewing the 1999-00 school year, and the placement of the information on the Internet by MHSAA Historian Ron Pesch of Muskegon.

This year, the record information which appears in the Book of Champions will be a combined list of MHSAA information and data from Pesch. The result is the most comprehensive document of its type ever assembled for Michigan high school athletics.

Beginning Aug. 25, a new link will be available on the home page of the MHSAA Web Site (http://www.mhsaa.com) called "Record Book."

Clicking the link will take visitors to a menu where they can click on the sport they wish to view records for.

"People will find that some sports have more listings than others," said John Johnson, communications director for the MHSAA, "and that is a direct result of the submissions that have come to this office and Ron Pesch. We have tried very hard to encourage information to be submitted in all sports, and hopefully, by adding the information to the MHSAA Web Site, it will stimulate more contributions.

"These lists will be a continual work-in-progress," Johnson said. "What you always hope is that someone will see a list and say, 'I know of a performance that was better,' and then get in contact with us."

Information about submitting potential records will also be vailable on the Web Site. Appropriate documentation, such as statistical summaries or newspaper clippings, should be provided.

Johnson stressed the need for people to be proactive in submitting information.

"It happens quite often that someone has a performance that tops a category in the record book, reports to the local media that it happened, and then never follows up with us. It's impossible for our staff and Ron Pesch to track all the local media, so we hope that people will bring potential records to our attention as they occur."

Pesch will coordinate all submissions, and once verified, will amend the records on the MHSAA Web Site on a regular basis.

"People will have to show some patience as we update the Web Site," Johnson said. "Just because the Internet is an instant medium, it doesn't mean that information will be posted as soon as it is received. It hasn't been unusual for someone to send an e-mail to Ron one day with information, and then complain to him the next day because his on-line list wasn't updated with that information.

"It takes time to verify records, and while Ron won't update the Web Site daily, he will update on a schedule that will recognize the performances of teams and individuals in a more timely manner than we have been able to in the past, and one that will encourage people to come back and visit the site more often."

Huge crowd expected for summit

■ SUMMIT NEWS

The lineup of headline speakers for the Michigan High School Athletic Association's third statewide Sportsmanship Summit is taking shape, and registration is continuing for the Wednesday, Sept. 27 day-long event at the Lansing Center.

Previous sportsmanship summits in 1997 and 1998 have taken place with overflow crowds, and a record 2,000 attendees are expected at this year's event — the largest of its type in the country.

The crowd is expected to be made up of contingents of coaches, administrators, student-athletes and community members from MHSAA member schools.

The 2000 conference will feature an opening keynote address from Bill Curry, a television football commentator for ESPN. Other speakers include Michael Josephson, president of the Josephson Institute ofEthics and the nationwide CHARACTER COUNTS program (www.charactercounts.org); Jody Brylinski, associate professor of health and physical education at Western Michigan University; Barry Mano, puslisher of Referee Magazine (www.referee.com); and Grant Teaff, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association (www.afca.com).

At the beginning of the conference, a special presentation will honor retired Michigan State University women's basketball coach Karen Langeland as a positive sportsmanship role model.

In addition, a number of sessions geared specifically for student-athletes will be offered; the popular video, "What Kids Wish Their Parents Knew About Sportsmanship" will be shown to open the conference; a session about sportsmanship issues on the Internet will be offered; and all attendees will be encouraged to sign a statewide Sportsmanship Accord.

Registration for the Sportsmanship Summit is limited to the first 2,000. Registration is $20 per person, which includes conference materials, morning refreshments and lunch.

For more information, call MHSAA office at (517) 332-5046 or via e-mail at register@mhsaa.com.

The sounds of the night: It's a strange, new world

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

Night is a mysterious time for most of us.

Since we spend most night hours sleeping, we are unfamiliar with what happens after the sun sets. Many animals are active during this part of the 24-hour cycle and treat t as we would the day time ıours.

During the night of Aug. 11 ınd the early morning of Aug. 12, I spent some time in my ɔackyard. Not long after sunset I ıeard a screech owl calling near-ɔy.

In the past, late August and September seems to be the time of the year when they are most ıctive calling. This must be the ;ime of year when males are establishing territories, even though nesting will not occur ıntil later next spring.

I have heard the screech owl several times in the past couple weeks. A couple mornings it sounded like he was right outside the bedroom window.

Its quavering whistle sound is uncharacteristic of an owl. Screech owls do not screech, or go whooo. Their vocalization is very distinct for our area.

After sleeping most of the night under the glow of the full moon, I got up after moon-set to look for shooting stars, or meteors. This was suppose to be a good time to see meteors from the Perseids meteor shower.

So I sat in a lawn chair, positioned myself on the driveway facing north, and put on my fleece jacket — it was very cool. Most meteors seem to emanate from the constellation Perseus positioned near Cassiopeia to the north.

Despite lights from neighboring houses and the city itself, I was able to see a few average meteors and about three really good meteors during the hour I was viewing.

A couple meteors created an intense white line against the dark sky and near the end I could see smaller particles breaking apart from the main piece.

Meteors are often remains of comets that passed through our solar system. When our planet passes through the debris during its orbit around the sun the same time each year, these pieces pass through our atmosphere.

Because of all the particles in our atmosphere, the comet debris often burns up due to friction. That is when we see it as a meteor.

Observing meteors can only be done at night, even though meteors enter our atmosphere any time of day by the thousands.

Most end up as tiny dust particles on the coffee table, in the soil, or in the ocean. Only at night can we see their natural fire works.

An unexpected treat occurred during my meteor shower watching — the northern lights. They seemed to sneak up on me. Then I began to notice a shimmering in the sky. After that, there were streaks of white flame that glowed bright and dim to the north.

I could not see any color, such as greens and blues, or orange/red like I saw several years ago, but I did enjoy the show.

The flash dancing of flames of light ebbing and flowing in the night sky with the occasional punctuation of a meteor was worth getting up to view.

How many other events do we miss when we sleep at night? I'll have to sleep on that!

Angler angling for top spot

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

Arthur G. Austin Jr. is on a roll. The Southfield angler is currently in third place in the race for Angler of the Year status in the Top Bass Tournament Trail.

"I think I'm concentrating a little better and making the right decisions," Austin said.

In the first tournament of the season, which was held on Saginaw Bay, Austin established himself as a front runner in the Angler of the Year race by winning the tournament with a five-fish limit that weighed 16.20 pounds. That weight is still the heaviest bag of bass weighed in the circuit this year.

Austin also won Big Bass honors for a 4.27-pound largemouth. He slid a little in the standings after finishing 12th in the second tournament, which was held on Lake St. Helen in Roscommon County, but rebounded nicely in the third tournament, which was held on Gladwin County's Wixom Lake. Fishing from the back of the boat, because time and travel constraints wouldn't allow the National Guard Reserve to transport his own boat to the site, Austin placed second with a limit of five bass that weighed 11.51 pounds.

In the fourth tournament, held earlier this month on Lobdell Lake in Fenton, Austin placed 11th with just two fish that tipped the scale at 4.39 pounds.

"I slipped up a little on that one," he said.

Austin will be back in action this weekend, again on St. Helen, then will wrap up the tournament trail on Aug. 26-27 in the Top Bass Classic on Wixom Lake.

Goose season on tap

Waterfowl hunters will once again have an early opportunity to hunt giant Canada geese as the state DNR has announced the early season will run Sept. 1-15 in the Lower Peninsula and Sept. 1-10 in the Upper Peninsula.

This season is a management hunt targeting the state's burgeoning population of resident geese. The liberal daily bag limit is five birds.

An added bonus this year is that for the first time since 1987, Saginaw, Tuscola and Huron counties, which surround Saginaw Bay, will be open to hunting Sept. 1-10.

"Michigan waterfowl hunters and wildlife professionals alike deserve credit for the experimental early season in the Saginaw Bay three-county area," said Greg Soulliere, the DNR's wetland and waterfowl specialist. "Through years of parts collection surveys, spring goose population surveys, and extensive leg-band recovery analysis, Michigan waterfowl managers were able to convince the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service that the impact of this season would be minimal on migrant geese."

(Bill Parker writes a weekly outdoor column for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. Hunters and anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to: Outdoors, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009.)

Champions, like Aleta Sill, find a way to come back

TEN PIN ALLEN

AL HARRISON

If you're an athlete, you're going to have a slump.

Still, it's hard to explain when a top notch player who has all the skills, tools and desire to excel, still goes into a rut where nothing goes right.

Something goes wrong and fixing it remains just out of view or right around the corner.

Aleta Sill was in such a slump, for more than a year, until emerging from it last week by beating a very tough field to win the Greater Atlanta Open on the ladies pro bowling tour (PWBA).

The tournament was telecast last Monday night on ESPN-2.

Sill led qualifiers most of the week and finished as the No. 2 seed.

It was her first title after what she feels was an overly long dry spell. At least by her standards.

Slump notwithstanding, Sill still became the first female bowler to top $1 million in earnings.

She did it by cashing on a consistent basis without taking any first-place money. Thus her Atlanta win had to be one of her most satisfying.

First she had to get by Tammy Turner, which she did, 225-212. Next on the agenda was Tish Johnson, who was defeated, 217-205.

She not only broke the slump. but the victory put her just a tournament away from equalling the record of 32 titles by a woman bowler, held by Lisa Wagner. Sill has 31.

Sadly, the event attracted scant notice locally, where the exploits of Tiger Woods at the Buick Open crowded out nearly everything else.

It seems that for the local media to mention bowling, someone would have to be the first to bowl a 300 game on Mars.

•The Sunday Youth Classic (SYC) youth traveling league is looking for a few younger bowlers who would like to get more seriously into the game.

The new entering average is from 120 and up. The youth travel leagues provide a great foundation for boys and girls who are interested in developing their skills and getting the feel of real competition at a different bowling center each week.

It gives them the opportunity to learn how to bowl under varying conditions.

This is a valuable experience and those who have come through the program have gone on to bigger and better things. The travel league experience is also an opportunity to earn scholarship money instead of sleeping in on Sunday mornings.

It is also a very nice way for parents to relate to their offspring as they develop a goal of seeing their own children learn to get along with other kids in an atmosphere of friendly competition.

For information and tryout schedule, please call: Ed Wright (248) 477-5047 or Bob Black (313) 386-2381.

•With the approaching new season, there are always some leagues that need bowlers to fill out their rosters.

At Plaza Lanes in Plymouth, the Plaza Men, who bowl at 7 p.m. on Monday nights, have some openings. The Keglers, bowling at 6:45 p.m., are also looking for a few more good men.

Plaza Lanes will also host the Mid-States Masters on September 10th, the Livonia Trophy Classic in the 198 division.

It is a good monthly scratch tournament for bowlers who can compete in the lower division.

If you cannot bowl in it, you're welcome to come as a spectator.

The most recent 198 division event was held at Bowl One Lanes in Troy, where the champion emerged in the person of Jason Swartz of Canton with a 268-171 victory over James Hardy, Jr., the high qualifier.

Swartz, 24, dominated the tournament, averaging 244. It was good for a payday of $2,100. Hardy settled for $1,500 second prize plus $100 for being high qualifier.

Plaza Lanes is located on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth, about one mile West of I-275. For details, call (313) 365-8449.

•There are league openings at Country Lanes on Nine Mile Road in Farmington.

The 6:30 p.m . Friday night Greenfield Mixed league is looking to fill a few holes. The Sunday Goodtimers also has openings for 9:30 p.m.

For other league openings, call Country Lanes at (248) 476-3201.

•There were some excellent Summer League scores shot recently.

Among them were: Delton Howard, 300; Bob Dudley, 290 and Kevin Murphy, 279 at Woodland Lanes; Mark Humphrey, 299/746; Rob Minehart, 278/745; Eric Gambrell, 297; Doug Ritter, 300; and Chuck Morris, 289 at Plaza Lanesl; plus Senior Bowlers Dick Brown 259; and Ralph Pearce, 290/627 at Cloverlanes.

Musician enjoys showing off cello's jazzy side

The first time I met Mike Karoub was at a Livonia Symphony Orchestra rehearsal. That's not unusual. Karoub plays cello. What surprised me was when his father, Carl Karoub, who plays French horn with the orchestra, told me Mike played jazz.

Carl pointed to Mike rehearsing a few chairs away in the string section. Cello? Then he must play another instrument, right? Yes, Mike also plays string bass but not with his group Cello Jazz.

The lyrical quality of the cello allows it to frequently carry the melody in orchestral music, so why not jazz?

"When you're a little kid you don't know any better," said Mike Karoub. "When I was teenager growing up I listened to recordings from the 20s and 30s and nobody told me I couldn't play jazz on cello. Now there's a lot of people playing jazz on the cello but it's hardly typical."

What: Mike Karoub and his Cello Jazz perform traditional jazz, swing and classical music
When: 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 25
Where: Kellogg Park, Main Street, north of Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth, call (734) 455-1453

At age 37, Karoub has already been on the jazz scene for some time. Although he began playing cello at age seven he eventually picked up the string bass in sixth grade because at that time there wasn't an orchestra in Allen Park Public Schools.

Those skills would come in handy later when he went on the road with James Dapogny's Jazz Band, playing such venues as the Kennedy Center and Smithsonian. Over Labor Day weekend, Karoub will play bass with Banu Gibson's New Orleans Hot Jazz at the Los Angeles Sweet & Hot Festival.

Equally at home with jazz and classical music, Karoub still performs with the Livonia Symphony Orchestra. Later this year, he'll appear with the St. Louis Symphony. But it's the Cello Jazz group that brings him the most satisfaction.

Karoub, who formed the group 10 years ago, is looking forward to returning to Kellogg Park on Aug. 25 to play traditional jazz, swing and classical music as part of the Music in the Air series sponsored by the Plymouth Downtown Development Authority. Cellist Eugene Zenzen and Ann Arbor guitarists Rod McDonald and Tom Bogardus, who also plays clarinet, will be joining Karoub at the concert.

"It's kind of special because the second cello enables us to play not only traditional jazz but classical music," said Karoub. "We just might play Vivaldi's Double Concerto for Cellos, and also classic jazz popular between the World Wars."

Carl Karoub, more than likely, will be in the crowd that night. He's watched Mike's love of jazz grow over the years. As band director in Allen Park Schools, Carl would feature Dixieland music in programs performed by Mike and the other student musicians. "Mike formed his first group at 12 and he was teaching them to play early jazz," said Carl. "We would have a 15 piece band meeting in our basement to play Glenn Miller and Harry James. He had a huge collection of 78s by Louis Armstrong and others. The thing that amazes me about his playing today is it's so creative. His improvisation became so innovative early as he steeped himself in jazz."

Hopefully, Karoub will soon be going into the studio to record that music. He already can be heard on CD's by Dapogny, Gibson, the Chenille Sisters and other notable jazz ensembles. It's time jazz audiences knew Karoub's Cello Jazz can improvise with the best of them.

Creativity conveys Emotion

Artists convey sense of peacefulness, serenity in their works

Creativity wears many faces. Depending on the medium, technique and subject matter, two artists can produce totally different work but affect viewers in the same way.

While Wallace Palazzola chooses to frame and photograph nature, John Marnon paints history, landscape and portraits. Both use creativity as an outlet to express emotion and share beauty in their current exhibits.

Palazzola, a Farmington Hills photographer, captures the wildlife and landscape of the Upper Peninsula and Kensington Metropark in a one-man show presented by the Farmington Area Arts Commission at Farmington Hills and Farmington City Halls.

Marnon, a Redford painter, shares whimsical and serious moments in a group show at the Southfield Centre for the Arts.

Their works evoke a sense of peacefulness and serenity.

At ease

"I look for things to put me at ease and make me relax," said Palazzola. "I like being close to nature."

For Palazzola, creativity is more than just snapping a picture in the midst of nature. Whether it's a single blossom of bee balm poking its head from a field of grass after wind and rain had beaten all the vegetation down, or shooting a photograph of a deer about to snatch an apple from a solitary tree, Palazzola waits for the "right" moment after he's composed the image through his lens. Eventually, a shore bird makes its way up a canoe to perch on the bow. Early morning is one of the best times to find dragonflies in a tranquil state or a flock of geese rising into the dawn of a strawberry sky.

"I look for interesting light and back lighting," said Palazzola, who became serious about photography in 1978 after taking adult education classes in West Bloomfield. "With the lighting coming from the back, the tulips look translucent. I like color, not the blazing color that's popular now but subtle earth tones and pastels."

Palazzola stresses many of the same techniques he uses in beginning photography classes at Stage Nature Center in Troy and in weekend workshops at the Ralph A. MacMullan Conference Center run by the DNR at Higgins Lake.

New director upbeat about future

Youthful enthusiasm: Darlene Dreyer's energy should take her far as the new executive director of the Plymouth Symphony Society.

Darlene Dreyer isn't letting the theft of five musical instruments from a window display dampen her enthusiasm for her new job as executive director of the Plymouth Symphony Society. Dreyer borrowed the instruments from friends as a way to spotlight the Oct. 14 opening of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra's 55th season.

According to Plymouth city police there were no signs of breaking and entering, and the showcase remains intact with two other displays for the Village Potters Guild and Plymouth Fall Festival. The instruments disappeared sometime between Aug. 2 and Aug. 4 from a window located next door to the symphony office at 821 Penniman.

"It's unsettling because nobody's going to benefit and because it shows a lack of respect for the arts," said Dreyer. A piece of the oboe was found in the Mayflower construction site."

Dreyer is hoping anyone with information about the theft will contact the symphony office. In the meantime, she's settling into the position she assumed in early June. There's plenty to do before opening night.

"It's my dream job to be executive which not only steadies the camera but allows me to frame a picture the way I want."

Like Palazzola, Marnon waits for the right moment before taking a photograph of the image he wants to paint. The only difference is that Marnon has more time since he retired from General Motors as a machine repairman.

His six children and seven grandchildren keep him busy, as do the art classes he takes with Carl Angevine at the Redford Senior Center, and Ann Lasher, an instructor for the Southfield Parks and Recreation Department. He is one of 18 artists in "The 50+ Art Show" featuring ceramics, drawing and painting created in classes at the Southfield Centre for the Arts and the Southfield Adult Recreation Center with Lasher and Bee Eagan.

Subjects

"I really don't have any favorite subject," said Marnon, who began painting seriously five years ago. "If I just see something I like, then I want to paint it. I always wanted to paint. I went to Society of Arts and Crafts (now Center for Creative Studies) but was working and I couldn't keep up. When I retired, I started taking art classes again."

Prize winner

One of the works in the show, "Girl at the Window" won first place at the Michigan State Fair. Like many of the 22 paintings he shows, it belongs to his daughter. A whimsical Noah's Ark was done for his grandson.

Marnon likes capturing history, scenery and people, but the variety of subject matter doesn't stop there. Animation cels of the Grinch and the Genie from "Alladin" are displayed alongside the painting of a lumberman's monument.

"I had to borrow a lot of paintings for the show because I'm always giving them away to family and friends," said Marnon.

Creativity is something both artists share with viewers and family, and something everybody is capable of doing whether it's with paint or through the lens of a camera.

director," said the 26-year old Dreyer. "I like people and because I'm personable it makes the orchestra more personable and gives it kind of a youthful look but we still have 55 years of history."

Her first task is getting the word out about "Music for Young People of All Ages," a family concert on Sept. 24. Dreyer grew up loving music and by age 12 was playing flute. That's why she believes it's important to expose children to music at an early age.

"The family concert is going to be fun with music from ET and Beauty and the Beast," said Dreyer. "They're pieces everyone can relate to and we're going to be doing this concert every year."

The family concert renews the orchestra's commitment to education. A $2,500 grant from the Canton Community Foundation will help keep an educational program to introduce third and fourth graders in Plymouth-Canton Schools to classical music intact. Plymouth Symphony Society president Don Soenen and his wife Colleen founded the program two years ago with a $40,000 grant.

"A school program in Oklahoma changed my life," said Dreyer. "That's why I'm such an advocate of education."

Dreyer eventually became interested in managing orchestras instead of playing in one. While working toward her master's degree in music history from the University of Michigan, she served as personnel manager of the University of Michigan orchestra and executive director of Michigan Opera Works, a student organization. The experience will help Dreyer market and raise funds for the orchestra, currently in the middle of a corporate and individual fundraising campaign. This season's budget is $238,000. Administrative costs, an additional concert, and a 15 percent raise for musicians account for the $38,000 increase from last season.

"Our conductor Nan Washburn and I have been going out to the community and explaining what we're about," said Dreyer. "People fear going to the symphony but we want to show them it's not something strange and unusual, and explain why they need music in their lives. There's nothing like hearing 75-100 musicians on stage and working toward an artistic experience. But there's many ways they can support the orchestra. They can give in-kind gifts of time, or host an afterglow."

Dreyer hopes plans for a new performing arts center in Canton will include the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. It will mean the orchestra will finally have a permanent home.

"It would be great for the economy and to reach broader audiences."

Soenen serves as president of Partnership for the Arts, a nonprofit organization established to build and develop the performing arts center. Until recently, his enthusiasm for the space seemed measureless. He's afraid the latest plan doesn't allow for growth.

"The 350-400 seating capacity that's been proposed will have limited utilization by the Plymouth Symphony," said Soenen. "We haven't pulled out (of the project) but wouldn't be able to utilize it as we hoped. Plymouth Symphony concerts usually draw more than 500."

And if Dreyer has her way that number could go soon climb higher. She welcomes any suggestions on the best way to do the job. Members of the public are invited to meet Dreyer and offer their help at a reception before the Plymouth Symphony Society's annual meeting on Sept. 6.

If you have information about the missing instruments, call Dreyer at the symphony office (734) 451-2112. An anonymous orchestra supporter has offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the return of the five instruments and the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the crime. Anonymous information regarding the missing instruments should be directed to Lt. Carol of the Plymouth city police at (734) 453-1234 Ext. 209.

Emotional, engaging 'Blameless' takes reader on a spiritual journey

"Blameless," by Lisa Reardon (Random House, $24.95).

■ At the heart of Mary Culpepper's story is loss, and what she sees as 'the absolute worst thing in the world' – betrayal. But 'Blameless' is also very much about denial, and an unsparing look at the true nature of love and its limitations.

VICTORIA DIAZ

Mary Culpepper is a 34-year-old school bus driver in a small, northern Michigan town. She's a divorcee who lives in a modest cottage with her cat, hangs out often at the village bar, and occasionally stars as the left-handed first-baseman on the local softball team.

Then, one awful day, Mary's seemingly mundane life takes a dramatic turn. Two of the children on her bus take her inside their trailer house out at the end of her route, where she discovers the body of their sister, lying dead on a closet floor.

Soon, the child's mother is charged with murder, and Mary Culpepper is expected to testify at the trial.

Second novel

This second novel by Milan native Lisa Reardon is not a whodunit or a mystery, but a kind of emotional and spiritual journey through Mary's pain-riddled soul. Finding the dead child opens up a Pandora's box of memories in her heart that will eventually threaten to not only destroy her, but another child.

As in her first novel, "Billy Dead," Reardon immediately reaches out and pulls us into this story, then compels us to stay immersed in its many possibilities until we reach its final, moving scene.

At the heart of Mary Culpepper's story is loss, and what she sees as "the absolute worst thing in the world" – betrayal. But "Blameless" is also very much about denial, and an unsparing look at the true nature of love and its limitations.

Since this is a tale told entirely from the protagonist's viewpoint, we always "see" the characters from Mary's eyes (unfailingly, each comes across as fully-dimensional, however). In the large, colorful tapestry, we meet her well-meaning but hurtful mother; her unpretentious sister, Sharon; pregnant sister, Stacy; ex-husband, Carl; best friend, Amy (Carl's wife); youngest friend, Julianna (who's taking an imaginary bike trip to the North Pole); a handsome softball player named John, who helps her to feel less lonely, and many more.

When our story begins, Mary's philandering father has been dead several years already, but in brief flashbacks, we get a distinct impression of him, anyway. Even those who play minor roles, such as the rather naive neighbor who believes that love conquers all, sparkle like fireworks.

As in "Billy Dead," Reardon's prose is elegant with clarity. Along with this, the author has a remarkable gift for comedy and dialogue, which is generously evident on these pages, and which goes far toward enlivening the characters and moving the story forward. (Mary Culpepper lives in what she describes as "semihermitude," refuses to get an answering machine, and always says "What?" instead of "Hello" when she picks up the phone.)

Flaws

"Blameless" is not flawless. The convincingly real story threatens to drift off into a kind of magical realism when Mary is haunted by a gargoyle-like creature she calls the Night Visitor.

This apparition sometimes feels like something that has stumbled in from another novel, perhaps one written by Alice Hoffman. Mary's car – a '65 Mercury – appears to border on the supernatural, too, at times. It plays a considerably large role here, although it's not always easy to see why.

In addition, one important and tragic event that occurs toward the story's end may seem a little pat and overly contrived for some readers.

Ultimately, though, these are matters that we look past. "Blameless" is a novel that is ever engaging and exquisitely observed on the part of the writer. Don't miss it.

Victoria Diaz is a Livonia resident and writes about books, movies and theater for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

Group picks best books for baby

What makes a good baby book? Beginning with Books, a nonprofit early literacy organization affiliated with Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, offers ten excellent answers to that question through the announcement of its list of the 10 best baby books published in 1999 – the first such listing for infant books.

The list of recommended baby books, authors, illustrators, and publishers is: Babies, Susan Canizares and Pamela Chanko (Scholastic); Babies on the Move, Daniel Moreton and Susan Canizares (Scholastic); Flappy, Waggy, Wiggly, Amanda Leslie (Dutton); Hello, Lulu, Caroline Uff, (Walker); Here Comes Mother Goose, Iona Opie, (Candlewick); Oh, Baby! A Touch-and-Feel Book, Elizabeth Hathon (Grosset & Dunlap); Show Me!, Tom Tracy (HarperFestival); Sleepy, Sleepy!, Emily Bolam (Price, Stern, Sloan); Sleepytime Rhyme, Remy Charlip (Greenwillow); and The Baby's Word Book, Sam Williams (Greenwillow).

The selection committee included Fred Rogers, of Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood fame, distinguished librarians, child development specialists, and early literacy experts.

Focusing on books for infants (birth through 18 months) published in 1999, the committee looked for excellence in text, illustration, and design. Age-appropriate subject or theme, clear uncluttered illustration, and interactive potential were important criteria.

"We hope to highlight the importance of reading to babies with this annual list," says Elizabeth Segel, Ph.D., Executive Director of Beginning with Books. "Research shows that a child's first few years are the most critical to language development, and a book shared between baby and a loving adult creates the best introduction possible to the pleasures of literacy."

Other goals are to help parents, grandparents, and teachers select outstanding books from the hundreds that crowd the bookstore shelves and to encourage publication of high quality books for this age group.

Beginning with Books was founded in 1984 to increase in the numbers of children who become capable and enthusiastic lifelong readers. Its research-based programs serve children and families throughout southwestern Pennsylvania. Beginning with Books also provides materials, training, and technical assistance to others who wish to replicate or adapt its programs.

Las Vegas Golf & Tennis - St. Joe's Pro Am Golf Classic Tees Up $160,000 for Women's Health Education

One of the ways in which a successful community fund-raising event is defined is by how well goals are achieved. This year's Las Vegas Golf & Tennis – St. Joe's Pro Am Golf Classic is a true success story by those standards. Nearly $160,000 from more than 120 community and corporate donors was raised and the event was a sell out.

Saint Joseph Mercy Health System recognizes and commends organizations and individuals for their support of the third annual Golf Classic that took place on June 14 at Pheasant Run Golf Club in Canton.

Special recognition goes to this year's Lead Underwriter, Las Vegas Golf & Tennis. Their lead gift encouraged other organizations and individuals to become involved in supporting this year's event, which benefits women's health education programs in the Plymouth and Canton communities. A listing of donors is below.

Because of Las Vegas Golf & Tennis' gift, which underwrote the cost of our celebrity entertainer, more than 180 players, Michigan PGA golf pros and volunteers enjoyed a performance by Chuck "The Hit Man" Hiter, who dazzled guests with his long drives while standing on a basketball, elevated tees or sitting on a chair and kneeling.

On behalf of the Health System, our thanks for your continued support and partnership with St. Joe's to improve education programs and services.

Go for gold cosmetics this season

DISCOVERING BEAUTY

MARY ANNE TOCCALINO

We've finally reached our hot August nights and everywhere you look, including newspapers, magazines, and Fash Bash 2000, we are reminded that it is time to face the fall season.

Welcome to the world beyond summer where soft neutral lips and eyes are now dripping in a wealth of rich lavish tones.

Summer's tropical palette is waning into mysterious, candlelit and darkening glamour looks and the creation of the fall facial look.

Golden glow

For eyes – shadows are simple with shades in sheer and polished finishes. Colors such as tobacco, raisin, pine and gold glitters the eye.

Gold has replaced silver as the metal of the moment. Gold makeup laminates the face with glitz or subtly accents the eyes and cheeks.

To obtain your gold star try Prescriptives Unmakeup with SPF 15 in Sheer Gold. This product is soft and light, which enables our skin to make a gentle transition from warm to cool seasons.

Another transitional look this fall is one to scarlet lips and clear soft alabaster skin reminiscent of the classic glamorous film era. Slicked-back hair adds to this dramatic sophisticated appearance.

A fall face also can portray a strong eye and brow. Creating the perfect arch just got easier with the new product, Brow Blender. This pencil features color on one end and a blending sponge on the other allowing you to define your brow with a soft powdery line and to diffuse your brow giving you a realistic look. Pair this with a charcoal-lined eye, smudged out and under the entire eye itself.

Add a strong pink mouth with Chanel's lipstick in Laser Pink and take over the fall.

Keep it simple

The Neo–Minimalist is still making her mark this fall in elegant style with a modern edge. A flushed-from-within glow is what is needed here.

Keep the makeup simple with a soft moisturizing foundation all over the entire face including eyes and mouth. Add luminizers of different creams shaded to the cheeks and eyes.

Mia Pelle (available at Toccalino Cosmetics) makes a product called Pro Palette that has an array of colors that are just right for different skin tones. Touch the lashes with brown mascara and Lancome LipColour in Hint. You are now off and running with a look of sheer elegance.

This time of year it is very important to keep your eyes on skin care. With large swings in temperatures and humidity you need to be flexible with your moisturizer. You may need a hydrating gel one day and the next day temperatures may dictate a stronger emolliating lotion. Keep an eye on the humidity levels to determine your specific product requirement.

Skin care

It is also a smart idea to exfoliate the face and neck areas at least twice a week so your skin will be able to wear more makeup and intense colors without grabbing and streaking the products.

Blending is very important now depending how well your skin makes the seasonal transition.

So, keep a close eye on your look and enjoy this time of transition.

Fashion moves to disco beat at Fash Bash 2000

For devoted patrons of Fash Bash, the question raised each year becomes "How do you top this?"

But Fash Bash 2000 proved that it could slip into the next century with style, innovation, and a touch of royal treatment courtesy of the Queen – Queen Latifah, that is, who served as the host of the 31st annual event to benefit the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Celebrating the club culture in all its forms, Fash Bash took a packed Fox Theatre audience to the hottest new nightclubs of New York and Paris, where the dance troupe Antigravity brought high energy motion to the sounds of rap voice Rahzel and the fashions of Dolce & Gabbana, Jean Paul Gaultier and Carolina Herrera.

Disco diva Gloria Gaynor brought the crowd to its feet with "I Will Survive" as the fashion of Calvin Klein, Kors Michael Kors and Ellen Tracy prowled under strobe lights and mirrored balls.

Loston Harris musically summed up the cigar and martini culture with fashion by John Varvatos and Donna Karan, and glam rock imitators Kiss Army brought the Fash Bash to a rocking conclusion.

While patrons were treated to a fashionable menu of leather, skin-tight animal prints, techo fabrics and clothing that harkened back to the '70s, pre- and post-parties at the State Theatre and Comerica Park offered edible fare from more than 20 area restaurants, along with a live auction by Robert DuMouchelle.

After an evening of fabulous fashion, pulsating music and luscious buffets, Fash Bash 2000 again begged the perennial question of " How do you top this?"

No doubt The Founders Junior Council and Hudson's already are thinking well into the next millennium.

Treat this season's luxury fabrics with gentle care

BY SHARON DARGAY
STAFF WRITER

You couldn't resist buying the velvet beaded gown you saw glide down the runway at Fash Bash last weekend.

You liked the silver-fringed, mirrored halter, too.

And the leather jacket with pink beaded shell.

Now that they all hang in your closet, how do you that leather soft and supple, the velvet smooth and the fringe sparkly?

Fabrics are more luxurious this year and fashions are softer and more "lady-like," according to Todd Fremling, fashion manager for Dayton-Hudson.

But that doesn't necessarily mean garment care will be any more difficult than in previous seasons.

"You have to realize the stuff we have in the show (Fash Bash), those are runway pieces. They're all very special pieces," he said. "You did see a lot more stuff that's feminine and lady-like. That's where you see more softer looking stuff, fuller skirts, patterns, more chiffon and silks."

He suggests dry cleaning those delicate fabrics, rather than trying to tackle them at home.

So does Beverly Rice, senior vice president for fashion and marketing strategy for Jacobson's.

"The luxury fibers need a little TLC," she noted.

Jacobson's fall fashion catalogue shows suede and beaded gowns, velvet tops and silk blouses, wool jackets, cashmere blend shells and leather pants, along with polyester and cotton blends.

Gentle treatment

Rice suggests trying do-it-yourself dry cleaning products at home only with "indestructible fabrics" such as polyester and micro fibers.

"When you get into leather, fur and these kinds of things, you want to treat them gently with respect and they will pay you back many times over," she said.

Fur trims everything from coat collars to skirt hems this season. Most are detachable and enable dry cleaners to remove them for cleaning.

"The main culprit with cashmere is the moth. It loves cashmere like it was caviar and champagne. Where you have a cashmere sweater, coat or jacket, you need some kind of moth preparation," Rice advised.

Use a solid or natural moth deterrent rather than a spray. Rice also recommends professional dry cleaning for cashmere. Never attempt to press cashmere or rub out a stain by hand.

"You can end up tearing up the nap and discover that it discolors if you don't know what you're doing."

She said waterproofing products, such as Scotch Guard, can help protect some cashmere fabrics and most leathers.

"Many leathers are already treated. Leather breathes and does not mind rain and snow. The only thing leather minds is if it gets wet and is hung in hot air that parches it. Let it dry naturally," Rice said.

"People have a tendency to want to correct it right now. Think of nature. The animal shakes itself and dries naturally."

No dryer

Treat wet fur the same way.

Delicate luxury fabrics, such as silk, satin and silk shantung, should stay clear of the dryer.

"Another thing that bears watching is lace. We're going to see more for spring and resort. It's being used as a trim now, but it is now coming back in cocktail separates and gowns," Rice noted.

Like silks, lace can't stand overheating.

"It's not as fragile as it looks, but nothing likes to be manhandled. Beads should always be hand cleaned. Everything pertaining to luxury takes a little care, but not ironing and pressing and fussing. It's a matter of turning it over to someone who knows what to do with it. "

Simply hanging a garment can save on wear and tear by avoiding wrinkling.

WHERE CAN I FIND?

This interactive feature is dedicated to helping readers locate merchandise that's difficult to find through reader feedback. If you've seen or are looking for an item, call (248) 901-2555 and leave a message with your name and phone number. We publish readers' requests for merchandise twice. If you don't hear from us or see information about the item within a few weeks, we were unable to locate it. When we find an item owned by another reader, rather than for sale at a store, we will call you. But, please, be patient; we handle an overwhelming number of requests each week.

TRAVEL

'Paradise' surrounds you in Upper Peninsula

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

Paradise is going upscale. We had reserved a cabin at the Cedar Lodge in the spring. We didn't know until we arrived in early August that the owner of the lodge was building a Best Western next door. As he grumbled to us, Best Western expected him to provide high-end accommodations, including a marble lobby and an indoor swimming pool-spa.

The Best Western, which opened July 4, joins a Howard Johnson, marking a major change in the laid-back style of this tiny village on the shores of Whitefish Bay in the Upper Peninsula. Next thing you know the one-street town will be lined with gift shops, ice-cream parlors, T-shirt emporiums and artists' studios.

Nah!

Paradise is the nearest town to some of Michigan's most spectacular scenery, hiking, biking, fishing and canoeing. But it has only recently succumbed to the tourist-town style. It is still a bit ramshackle with two grocery stores, three fish and fries restaurants, a couple low key gift shops and a half dozen or so old-fashioned, cabin-style resorts. You don't come here for Paradise, paradise is all around you.

The reason we came, the big draw, is Tahquamenon Falls State Park. This is one of the finest examples of the Michigan State Park system, naturally beautiful, well maintained, user friendly without being too intrusive on the natural wonders that are enclosed in its nearly 40,000 acres (second in size only to Porcupine Mountain State Park).

The center-piece is the tea-colored Tahquamenon River and its upper and lower falls. This has been a year of waterfalls on our vacations. Earlier in the summer we revisited the mighty Niagara. The falls at Tahquamenon do not match the force of Niagara, but they more than make up for it with the natural setting, the unusual contrast of colors and the sheer joy of being in nature rather then being in a tourist trap.

The Upper Falls are the larger, more often photographed site, notable for that streak of pale brown in the white rush of water and the rich foam that forms at the bottom. Several paths, boardwalks and platforms give you a variety of views. The falls themselves are a short walk from the parking area.

To best appreciate the park, river and falls, take the four mile walk down to the Lower Falls. This is a great hiking path. Several stairways have been added to make hills easier. The path moves toward and away from the river. Though many people gathered at the falls, few ventured on the trail and the views of the winding tannin red river were picture perfect.

Lower Falls

The Lower Falls is really a series of falls and rapids around a small island. To best experience the falls, visitors take a row boat over to the island. On the island a path takes you around and up close to the rock ledges over which the clear water rushes. No one walking around the island can resist wading into the river. Many also indulged themselves with refreshing showers underneath the higher falls.

The river trail is only a small portion of the park. There are camp sites, nature preserves, three lakes and a Rivermouth section where the river empties into Superior's Whitefish Bay. The rivers and lakes are open to fishing.

As spectacular as the summer views are, Tahquamenon is even more spectacular in the blaze of autumn colors.

As you enter the park, you'll see a group of tasteful log buildings around a pavilion. These are not part of the state park but rather a private business with the Camp 33 gift shop and Tahquamenon Falls Brewery and Pub, a casual lunch and dinner restaurant.

The falls are not the only draw to the Whitefish Bay area. The road along the bay from the south shore to Whitefish Point offers bicyclist a smooth wide shoulder through a tunnel of trees, broken only by the metropolis of Paradise.

At Whitefish Point is a lighthouse built in 1861 and the Great Lakes Shipwreck Museum. The museum is small but superbly mounted. The pictures and artifacts remind summer visitors that Lake Superior is a beautiful but deadly force of nature, especially off Whitefish Point. The exhibit shows how great storms, blinding fogs and poor communications between ships have led to disaster.

The central display features the most deadly of Lake Superior disasters and one that still remains a mystery, the sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald in the "gales of November" 1975. The display of pictures and retrieved artifacts is reverent, intelligent and informative.

Lighthouse

The lighthouse, which is still in operation by remote control from Sault Ste. Marie, has an exhibit on how the living quarters looked in the 1890s and the 1920s when a lightkeeper maintained the light.

The point is also a great place to walk the beach. There is also a board walk that overlooks grassy, soft dunes. Across from the lighthouse is Whitefish Point Bird Observatory, which is fairly quiet in mid-summer but is one of the best places to see migratory birds in spring and fall.

Canoeing is another draw to Paradise. The Two-Hearted River, made famous in Ernest Hemingway's two short stories, is noted for its long and short canoe trips that exit into Lake Superior.

The south shore of Whitefish Bay, the Curley Lewis Memorial Highway, is a wonderful scenic drive with numerous places to turn off for sandy beaches, spectacular lake views, piney trails and the picturesque Point Iroquois Light Station. It was on these powder white beaches that we saw numerous bear tracks, but fortunately no bear.

Despite the wilderness setting of water, sky and trees, urban life is not really too far away, though to get to a real city you have to cross the border into Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

FOCUS ON WINE

RAY & ELEANOR HEALD

Take your wine pulse

Nowadays, surveys are taken on every subject, wine included. With national stats and local viewpoints offered by Merchants Fine Wines owner/partner John Lossia, get ready to take your wine pulse.

With projected wine sales of $45 million, the California-based Wine Club is a national force in the retail wine trade. Each year, it polls its customers.

Of those surveyed this year, 59 percent enjoy wine five days per week; 28 percent drink wine every day. They spend a median amount of $2,000 per year with an additional $500 in restaurant wine purchases. In case sales, 44 percent purchase from six to 15 cases of wine per year; 40 percent purchase 16 to 50 cases, and three percent buy over 50 cases.

Lossia believes 25 to 30 percent of his customers are daily wine drinkers.

Purchases

"Spending $2,000 per year on wine, breaks down to $38 a week or $5 and change per bottle," he said. "My customers spend an average of $8 per bottle. The $5 bottle gets snapped up by bargain hunters, not the daily wine drinker. Half of my regular customers spend an average of $100 on a mixed case of wine and the other half buy a case of one wine."

After purchasing all of this wine, where is it stored? Seventy two percent of survey respondents have cellars of more than 100 bottles, 15 percent have over 1,000 bottles and 89 percent said they purchase wine well in advance of consuming it.

These stats buck another survey taken recently that indicated the average time between purchase and consumption was 90 minutes!

"My $100 per case clients generally have cellars of 100 to 200 bottles," Lossia said. "They are knowledgeable and want the right wine for the right food or occasion."

What types of wines do U.S. consumers prefer? For reds, cabernet sauvignon topped the list, followed by zinfandel, merlot, pinot noir, Bordeaux and syrah/shiraz.

"The cabernet is right on target locally," Lossia maintained. "But in second place, it's French Rhone wines because they are the value for the money today. In third place, it's Italian wines from Tuscany in the $8 to $11 category."

Top wine producers

Top ten red wine producers mentioned by Wine Club customers were Beringer, Robert Mondavi, Ridge, Beaulieu Vineyard, Ravenswood, Rosemount, Rosenblum, Silver Oak, Joseph Phelps, and Pine Ridge.

Dinner solution: Solve the dinnertime dilemma with quick Easy Meatball Sandwiches. Precooked, frozen meatballs and prepared spaghetti sauce are real time-savers in this recipe.

Cook faster

Here are some tips for faster cooking from www.minutemeals.com.

■ Chill hot foods quickly – to quickly cool down hot grains or sautéed vegetables for salad, spread them on a foil-lined sheet pan and freeze for 10 to 15 minutes. The thinner you spread them, the faster they will cool off.

Lining the sheet pan with foil first means one less pan to wash.

■ Plastic wrap – storing plastic wrap in the refrigerator makes it easier to use and handle. It especially helps in finding the end.

■ Cleaning white mushrooms – to wash white (button) mushrooms, rinse them under cold running water, rubbing off the dirt with your hands. Contrary to popular belief, the mushrooms will not absorb enough water during a brief rinse to become soggy.

■ Avoid soggy salad greens – pour a small amount of your favorite vinaigrette into the bottom of a salad bowl, then mound salad greens on top. Place the bowl on the table and prepare the rest of the meal. Toss the salad when you sit down to eat. This way the greens do not sit in dressing, getting soggy.

Simple is good for busy weeknight suppers

BY KEELY WYGONIK

Fall and frantic kind of go together. "Most parents are running around, taking their kids here and there," said Diane Hanson of Canton, the mother of six children ranging in age from 12 to 21.

Like a lot of moms, Hanson works full-time, and "dinner" can be a dilemma.

"Sometimes you come home stick a block of hamburger in the microwave, and think about what you're going to make while it's thawing," she said.

Tonight it's spaghetti, a meal she planned ahead of time.

"It's easier if I plan my meals," she said. "Sometimes I make extra stuff. It helps to have a husband who cooks, and I do."

Sharon Hegwood of Garden City did a lot of Crock-Pot meals while her children were growing up. "I'd put it on in the morning, and dinner was ready when they were," she said.

Hanson uses her Crock-Pot a lot too.

"It's a good ole thing from the '70s that's making a come back," she said. "I can throw things together in the Crock-Pot early in the morning, and have dinner on the table in 20 minutes after work. The kids love it. When they come home from school they can smell dinner cooking."

Simple is good, especially when you don't have a lot of time to cook.

Tacos are another favorite at the Hanson house, along with spaghetti. Both dinners can be tossed together in a hurry with items you can have on hand such as taco shells and seasonings, spaghetti sauce, and pasta.

Foods with Italian flavor are always in favor, especially when "gustoso" and "rapido" (tasty and quick) are used to describe them.

Easy meatball sandwiches, a recipe from the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, made with packaged, precooked frozen beef meatballs and prepared spaghetti sauce can be on the dinner table in only 30 minutes. Both the meatballs and the sauce just need heating through. Sauteed red or green bell pepper and onion punches up the flavor of the sauce.

Serve these family-pleasing sandwiches in French bread rolls and top with shredded mozzarella cheese – buy it pre-shredded, ready to use, for extra easy preparation.

With a little planning, you don't have to put dinner on the back burner. Make it a relaxing time to regroup with your family before heading out to the next activity.

RECIPE TO SHARE

Pie can be just peachy

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

When Barb Healey of Westland needs a quick dessert, she turns to an old favorite — Strawberry Pie.

Unlike other recipes that use JELL-O, Healey said it doesn't take long to set the gelatin-berry filling. The corn syrup and corn starch help the filling set quickly, Healey said.

"I fix it for my husband, Tom, on weekends or anytime we go someplace and I want to bring something," Healey said.

"It's not too sweet. It's pleasant and everybody goes crazy over it. It's the easiest thing to make."

But it's not only easy, it's versatile. Healey said peaches and blueberries can be substituted, which are now in season.

"The peach pie is excellent," Healey said.

Healey, who grew up in Dearborn, said she received the Strawberry Pie recipe about 20 years ago from a friend, Joyce Hill, who died about 15 years ago. "I make this dessert and it's a remembrance of her," Healey said.

Everyone knows the best recipes are the ones you share. Send us your favorite recipe, and if it's chosen to be featured in Recipe to Share on the third Sunday of the month in Taste, we'll send you a newly published cookbook.

Here's an easy Crock Pot casserole from "Ready and Waiting: 160 All-New Recipes to Make in the Slow Cooker," by Rick Rodgers, Hearst Books, New York, 1992.

RAVIOLI CASSEROLE

- 1 1/2 pounds lean ground beef
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 garlic cloves, chopped, minced
- 1 (28 ounce) can peeled tomatoes in thick tomato puree
- 1 (15 ounce) can tomato sauce
- 2 teaspoons Italian herb seasoning
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 pound bow tie pasta or fettuccini, freshly cooked
- 1 (10 ounce) package frozen chopped spinach, defrosted and squeezed to remove excess moisture
- 2 cups ricotta cheese
- 1/2 cup freshly grated imported Parmesan cheese

In a large skillet over medium-high heat, cook the ground beef, onion, and garlic, stirring often to break up lumps, until the meat loses its pink color, about 5 minutes. Tilt the pan to drain off excess fat, then transfer the beef mixture to a 3 1/2 quart slow cooker.

Add the tomatoes with their puree, the tomato sauce, Italian seasoning, and pepper, stirring to break up the tomatoes with the side of a spoon. Cover and slow-cook for 7 to 8 hours on low (200°F).

Skim the fat from the surface of the meat sauce. Stir in the cooked pasta, spinach, and ricotta and Parmesan cheeses, and slow-cook for 5 minutes. Serve the casserole directly from the slow-cooker. Serves 4-6.

Among white wines, chardonnay is purchased most often, followed by sauvignon blanc, pinot gris/grigio, riesling, and viognier.

The ten most popular white wine brands were Beringer, Kendall-Jackson, Ferrari-Carano, Mondavi, Chateau St. Jean, Meridian, Kistler, Sanford, Caymus, and Columbia Crest.

Respondents' favorite Champagne and sparkling wines were Chandon, Veuve Cliquot, Roederer, Mumm, Korbel, Dom Perignon, Schramsberg, and Gloria Ferrer.

Nationally, how much will people spend on a bottle of wine in a retail shop? For chardonnay $25; sauvignon blanc $18; cabernet sauvignon $40; merlot $25; pinot noir $30; zinfandel $25; Bordeaux $50 and Burgundy $50.

"My customers spend $50 and more for a top-name chardonnay," Lossia said.

"They recognize Sbragia Chardonnay at $40 is a real value. For cabernet sauvignon, there are two ends of the spectrum. Everyday drinking at $10 per bottle and for special occasions $30, for a Stags' Leap Winery Cabernet Sauvignon, as an example."

Motivation

What motivates purchase of a wine someone never heard of before? This shakes out as recommendations from wine writers, salesperson, price, and appellation.

For what it means, take your wine pulse, but above all remember, drink what you like!

Boost learning, start your day with breakfast

Tiger Woods currently is featured in a television commercial touting "you better eat your Wheaties."

Obviously, his recent golf victories cannot be attributed solely to eating a bowl of cereal. However, Wheaties – or any cereal – may give children a performance advantage in the classroom.

"Tiger Woods makes a valid point that is hopefully reaching children – a healthy breakfast is essential," says Beth Thayer, Heart Smart program coordinator for the Henry Ford Heart and Vascular Institute. "After not eating overnight for eight hours or so, the brain is sluggish and the reaction time is slow. Breakfast fuels both the body and the mind."

When school starts later this month, millions of American children will enter their classrooms on the first day without eating breakfast. Not only does this negatively affect their overall health, it also hinders their ability to learn.

Studies have shown that children who skip breakfast may be at a disadvantage. Research suggests that omitting breakfast interferes with cognition and learning, and that eating breakfast improves school attendance and enhances the quality of students' diets.

■ When school starts later this month, millions of American children will enter their classrooms on the first day without eating breakfast. Not only does this negatively affect their overall health, it also hinders their ability to learn.

Breakfast is important to children for two reasons, says Thayer. First, it helps "break the fast" of not eating since the previous evening. Eating a meal first thing in the morning is essential for maintaining a healthy metabolism and proper blood glucose levels. Second, if children eat breakfast, they have a better chance of meeting their overall daily nutritional requirements.

Thayer acknowledges that in today's busy families, it is often difficult to find time to eat breakfast. She offers the following suggestions for a quick morning meal:

■ Set out a cereal box, bowl and spoon the night before. A "fortified" cereal is a good choice because it usually provides children with the necessary iron, calcium and zinc.

■ Make low-fat muffins over the weekend. Individually wrap and freeze them. Take one out the night before so it will be thawed and ready to go.

■ Mix oatmeal with skim milk and heat in the microwave.

■ Throw your favorite fruit, skim milk and non-fat yogurt in a blender for a shake to send along for the ride to school.

■ Keep the kitchen stocked with cereal bars, fruit and yogurt that can be grabbed for a breakfast-on-the-go.

■ Stuff half of a whole wheat pita with low-fat or fat-free cottage cheese and sliced fruit.

The recipes will appear in the new "Heart Smart Kids Cookbook" available in bookstores in October.

1 cup rolled oats, uncooked
1/3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1/3 cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup skim milk
3 egg whites
1 1/2 cups all purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon allspice

Preheat oven to 400° F. Peel bananas. Using a fork, mash bananas in a medium size bowl. In a large mixing bowl, using a large spoon, combine oats, brown sugar, oil, vanilla, mashed bananas and milk. Mix well and set aside.

In a small bowl, add egg whites and using a hand mixer, whip until fluffy, cleaning sides of bowl with rubber spatula. Fold egg whites into the oat mixture. In a medium bowl, combine flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and allspice. Gradually add flour mixture to batter. Mix after each addition.

Line muffin pans with 16 paper baking cups, and using a spoon, pour batter into cups, filling each about two-thirds full. Bake 18 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Using oven mitts, remove from oven and cool on wire cooling racks. Yield 16 muffins.

When you're in a hurry, try bananas for quick-cooking desserts

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Editors who compiled "The No-Time-to-Cook Cookbook" (Avery Publishing, $19.95) say they were at a loss for quick-cooking desserts. Perusing other books for ideas didn't help, they say, because prep times were quick but cooking times weren't.

In other words, Mom could spend 30 minutes making an apple pie, but the pie needs another 50 minutes to bake. Sometimes that's O.K. But most times, the cook needs dessert tonight.

Editors Joanne Abrams and Marie Caratozzolo, both with full-time jobs, claim their recipes can be on the table in 45 minutes or less. And, voila! The Dazzling Desserts chapter claims some desserts can be prepared and on the table in 20 minutes or less.

Most kitchens have a bunch of bananas on the counter top and canned fruit in the cupboard. So these desserts are winners even in summer when there's no time shop.

BANANA-CACAO CREME

(Preparation time 15 minutes, setting time 30 minutes)

4 medium ripe bananas, peeled
1 quart low-fat vanilla yogurt
2 tablespoons creme de cacao liqueur
1/2 cup fat-free whipped topping (optional)
8 banana slices (optional)

Slice bananas into a blender and process for a few seconds or just until smooth. Drain off any accumulated liquid from the yogurt and empty the yogurt into a large bowl. Add the banana puree and the liqueur and gently fold together until well mixed.

Divide the mixture among four 10-ounce dessert bowls and refrigerate for 30 minutes or until well chilled. Garnish, if desired with whipped topping and banana slices. Makes 4 servings.

Nutritional information per serving: 343 calories; 64.5 g carbo; 12 mg chol; 3.5 g fat; 2.5 g fiber; 14.5 g pro, 163 mg sodium.

PEACHY BAKED BANANAS

(Preparation time 10 minutes, cooking time 15 minutes)

1-pound can peaches in light syrup
1/4 cup apricot liqueur (optional)
4 medium bananas, peeled
Ground cinnamon

Preheat oven to 400 F.

Drain the peaches, reserving 2 tablespoons of the liquid. Place peaches, the 2 tablespoons of liquid and, if desired, the apricot liqueur in a blender. Process for several seconds, just until they form a smooth puree.

Make 4 squares of aluminum foil big enough to enclose a banana. Place each banana in the center of a square and bend up the sides of the foil to create a cup. Pour about 1/3 cup of the puree over each banana and seal the packet by crimping the edges together. Seal carefully to prevent leaking.

Place the packets seam side up in a baking pan and bake for about 15 minutes. When done, the bananas should be soft throughout when pierced with a toothpick but should still hold their shape.

To serve, open each packet and lightly sprinkle each banana with cinnamon. Serve in the foil, if desired.

Makes 4 servings.

Breast cancer

Early-stage breast care patients are among the first in the world being treated with an experimental internal radiation therapy in a research study conducted at William Beaumont Hospital.

The treatment, called MammoSite Radiation Therapy System, delivers radiation directly to the site of the removed tumor and the area immediately surrounding it, where the vast majority of tumors recur.

The MammoSite RTS device is a simple applicator with a balloon-tipped end. The balloon is inserted in the surgical cavity and filled with a sterile liquid. During radiation therapy, a tiny radioactive bead attached to a wire is inserted into the balloon. The bead moves to various places in the balloon to deliver prescribed levels of radiation.

Beaumont is currently seeking participants for this clinical research study, which is also under way at five other sites in the United States. To be eligible, women must be at least 45 years old and not have other serious illnesses that may affect the study or the use of the MammoSite applicator.

For more information, contact Beaumont's department of Radiation Oncology at (248) 551-7029.

Germ-Proof your kids for the school year

Healthy tears: Dominique Bell of Romulus, 4, screams after receiving an inoculation from Public Health Nurse Lea Holleran. She was smiling and laughing moments later with mom Wendy Butler, on whose lap she sits.

BY MAUREEN MCGERTY
SPECIAL WRITER

More than 50,000 school-age children and youths in western Wayne County – 96 percent of whom are immunized – are about to return to academic environments in which individual health concerns coincide with one's learning and social development.

The keys to staying healthy are prevention and parental involvement.

This year, parents and guardians are required by state law to immunize K-12 students in public, private and parochial settings against an "invisible" communicable disease, Hepatitis B. The law targets "new school entrants," who must receive three doses of Hepatitis B vaccine over a six-month period.

The vaccine is available free-of-charge through the Wayne County Health Department. About 150 physicians countywide take part in the Vaccine Provider Program, charging an administrative fee of $15 per shot. Other medical sites usually charge $90 per shot, the cost of one dose of the vaccine.

The definition of "new school entrant" varies among school districts throughout Michigan. Parents and other caregivers must find out from their school districts how the term applies to their children. It may mean a child who transfers between or within school districts, from out of state, or one moving from elementary to middle school or middle to high school. Prior to this year, the vaccine was a requirement for child-care programs only, but not for K-12 students.

Hepatitis B prevalent

"The numbers that we're seeing right now in Wayne County for Hepatitis B are quite high," said Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk, medical director for the Wayne County Health Department. "The Centers for Disease Control estimates that for every case of Hepatitis B that gets reported to the local health department, there are at least 10 times that many cases out there that don't get reported, because the vast majority of people who have Hepatitis B show no signs or symptoms.

"It's not the type of disease that's routinely tested for. The good news is that it's a 100 percent preventable disease through this safe and effective vaccine."

Generally thought of as a sexually transmitted disease, Hepatitis B also transmits through casual, household contact through the exchange of blood and saliva. Adults and children should not share food and drink or personal care items, such as a toothbrush or bath linens. Hepatitis B causes inflammation of the liver and leads to liver cancer.

A second vaccine likely to be recommended late this summer is the pneumococcal vaccine that prevents bacterial streptococcus pneumonia, according to Doctor Gary Freed, director of the University of Michigan Division of General Pediatrics. It is the most common cause of invasive bacterial disease in children under 2 and the leading cause of pneumonia and meningitis nationwide.

Looking ahead to the 2002-03 school year, a chicken pox vaccine will be required, according to Gillian Stoltman, Ph.D., director of the division of communicable disease and immunization in the Michigan Department of Community Health. Yet, parents need not wait until then to inoculate their children against chicken pox.

■ 'If everybody ... washed hands before meals and after using bathroom facilities, over 90 percent of infectious diseases could be prevented.'

—Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk
Medical Director, Wayne County Health Dept.

Waivers

Parents and guardians may sign waivers for mandated vaccines if there are medical or religious reasons for not inoculating children. Waivers are kept on record at a child's school; medical waivers are available at physicians' offices while other types may be obtained from the health department or school office.

"In Michigan, we have a third type of waiver that we call a 'philosophical waiver,'" Stoltman said. "When parents simply have an objection to a vaccine, then they can sign that indicating that they don't want their child vaccinated. Schools will accept that.

"With children who do have waivers, if there happens to be an outbreak of that disease at the school, the general procedure is that the children who are not protected through immunization are excluded from school until the outbreak is known to be over. If a child has been on chemotherapy and can't take a vaccine, we have to make sure they don't get exposed to whatever the disease is."

Good example

It's never too early for parents to set good examples of prevention for children, teaching them to take responsibility for their own good health – over and above what's required by state law.

"Children often look to adults as their role models, whether they're parents or teachers," said Lawrenchuk. "When they see their parents aren't washing their hands, why should the kids be any different? If everybody did what our parents have been telling us to do for many years in terms of routinely washing hands before meals and after using bathroom facilities, over 90 percent of infectious diseases could be prevented."

Often, simple habits such as eating and sleeping affect a child's ability to achieve at school.

"The importance of a child having a good breakfast can't be undervalued," said Mary Huber, a school nurse for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. "Until lunchtime, the majority of complaints we may get are due to a child being hungry."

Good personal habits that guard against infectious diseases and negative social influences tend to be discounted as children evolve into adolescence even though what's perceived to be glamorous or hip, such as smoking, body-piercing or simply going hatless or coatless in winter months, has potential for serious illness and even death.

"The weather changes quickly in Michigan," Huber said. "Children benefit from being outside, so they need shoes they can run in. They need to follow the dress code of the school. In winter time, we have a very hard time getting middle-school age children and up to wear boots, gloves and hats. They need to be dressed appropriately for the weather."

Building and maintaining a good rapport early on with children pays off as they pass from elementary-age interests only to adopt behaviors they may view as sophisticated and socially acceptable.

"Nowadays, it's very popular for kids to go out and get their ears or some other body part pierced, or even tattoos, sometimes with their parents' knowledge and sometimes without," Lawrenchuk said. "That's another way that diseases like Hepatitis B can be transmitted, if not just through sexual contact but also through contaminated needles or syringes."

Vigilance

Parents and guardians should keep copies of health records handy – including up-to-date immunization records, allergy specifics, medications, prescriptions, dental requirements and physical exam results – for ready access as needed throughout the school year.

The state of Michigan has stringent guidelines for students who must bring any medication into school.

"That includes over-the-counter medications like aspirin and cough drops," said Huber. "Everything has to have a doctor's order and a parent's consent. The medication needs to come to school in the original container, and not (an unlabeled individual dose placed) in a baggie."

As American society progresses, often at mach speed, it's crucial for parents to continue their own education about trends and patterns that influence youth at "street" level. A quick call to the health department or physician's office or an online visit to a medical information Web site can garner helpful insights that can become part of the dialogue at home.

"I see younger and younger kids getting into smoking, and more and more kids experimenting with drugs and inhaling (household) cleaners and paint," said Dr. Jerome Bekker of Plymouth-Canton Family Physicians in Plymouth. "It has become more prevalent in the area.

"I recommend that parents be friends with their kids, but sometimes they don't need to be so buddy-buddy," Bekker said. "Kids actually want leadership or role modeling from their parents."

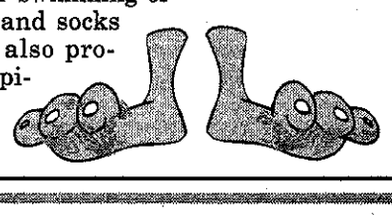
Reading, writing and ... athlete's foot

Many communicable illnesses, often passed on throughout the school day, can be minimized by practicing good hygienic, eating and sleeping habits. The common conditions listed below may be avoided by keeping fingers away from the eyes, not chewing on pencils and not sharing personal items:

- Strep throat – A bacterial virus that typically strikes in winter and spring, causing symptoms that include sudden sore throat, painful swallowing, red tonsils with white spots, decreased appetite, fever, headache and swollen glands.
- Mononucleosis – Known as the "kissing disease," mono is caused by the Epstein-Barr virus. Symptoms include fatigue, weakness, sore throat, fever, swollen lymph nodes and tonsils, headache, skin rash and decreased appetite.
- Influenza – An airborne virus that attacks the respiratory system is often transmitted through a simple sneeze or cough, holding hands, kissing, touching doorknobs, telephones, faucets and other everyday items. Symptoms include fever, headache, tiredness and achy muscles and accelerate into a runny nose, sore throat and a dry cough that can become congested. Flu season runs from December through May.
- Pink eye – Also known as conjunctivitis, the eye infection is distinguished by a yellow discharge, or pus. Eyelids may stick after sleeping and become puffy; dried discharge may form on upper cheeks; and the whites of the eye may become pink or red.
- Head lice, or pediculosis – A common parasitic insect causes severe itching of the head once it has fed on human blood and reproduced on hair shafts. The condition is not caused by personal or domestic uncleanness but by sharing combs, brushes, head bands, barrettes, hats, helmets or bedding. Head lice do not hop from one head to another.
- Athlete's foot, or tinea pedis – A fungus infection of the feet, the condition may occur in moist, damp places. Be sure to completely towel-dry sweat and residual moisture after swimming or bathing. Tight shoes and socks and a warm climate also promote the condition typically found in males.



Boost learning, start your day with breakfast

■ When school starts later this month, millions of American children will enter their classrooms on the first day without eating breakfast. Not only does this negatively affect their overall health, it also hinders their ability to learn.

Tiger Woods currently is featured in a television commercial touting "you better eat your Wheaties."

Obviously, his recent golf victories cannot be attributed solely to eating a bowl of cereal. However, Wheaties – or any cereal – may give children a performance advantage in the classroom.

"Tiger Woods makes a valid point that is hopefully reaching children – a healthy breakfast is essential," says Beth Thayer, Heart Smart program coordinator for the Henry Ford Heart and Vascular Institute. "After not eating overnight for eight hours or so, the brain is sluggish and the reaction time is slow. Breakfast fuels both the body and the mind."

When school starts later this month, millions of American children will enter their classrooms on the first day without eating breakfast. Not only does this negatively affect their overall health, it also hinders their ability to learn.

Studies have shown that children who skip breakfast may be at a disadvantage. Research suggests that omitting breakfast interferes with cognition and learning, and that eating breakfast improves school attendance and enhances the quality of students' diets.

Breakfast is important to children for two reasons, says Thayer. First, it helps "break the fast" of not eating since the previous evening. Eating a meal first thing in the morning is essential for maintaining a healthy metabolism and proper blood glucose levels. Second, if children eat breakfast, they have a better chance of meeting their overall daily nutritional requirements.

Thayer acknowledges that in today's busy families, it is often difficult to find time to eat breakfast. She offers the following suggestions for a quick morning meal:

■ Set out a cereal box, bowl and spoon the night before. A "fortified" cereal is a good choice because it usually provides children with the necessary iron, calcium and zinc.

■ Make low-fat muffins over the weekend. Individually wrap and freeze them. Take one out the night before so it will be thawed and ready to go.

■ Mix oatmeal with skim milk and heat in the microwave.

■ Throw your favorite fruit, skim milk and non-fat yogurt in a blender for a shake to send along for the ride to school.

■ Keep the kitchen stocked with cereal bars, fruit and yogurt that can be grabbed for a breakfast-on-the-go.

■ Stuff half of a whole wheat pita with low-fat or fat-free cottage cheese and sliced fruit.

The recipes will appear in the new "Heart Smart Kids Cookbook" available in bookstores in October.

Al Gore really was there at Net's beginning

PC MIKE

MIKE WENDLAND

He may not be the father of the Internet, but one of the men who really was there when the Net began, says Al Gore, was the first governmental official to see the Net's potential and push for governmental support.

Dr. Richard Mandelbaum, now CEO of the Applied Theory Web development company, says when he and three other information technology pioneers founded what became the Net's first T1 backbone in the mid-'80s, it was the then-brand-new Tennessee Senator Gore who helped get National Science Foundation funding.

Mandelbaum's New York-based NYSERNet regional educational research network later became NSFNET, a precursor to the Internet. Mandelbaum says his group coined the phrase "Information Superhighway" in a brochure describing their vision and that Gore picked up the phrase and championed it throughout the federal government.

Mandelbaum made the comments in an interview to be broadcast on my PC Mike High-Tech Weekend Radio program . I caught up with him while he was visiting the Troy office of Applied Theory.

As to the future, Mandelbaum says the state of Internet influence and technology today is like the automobile industry was in 1925.

"It's already had a sweeping and significant effect on the future," he says of the Net. "But just as the automobile industry didn't transform society until 1965 when the Interstates were built, the Internet is going to have an even more enormous impact on the world as high-speed digital networks and wireless comes into play over the next five years."

Net users trust their sites

The Internet has eclipsed radio and television as a credible information source for Net users, according to a new report from the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA).

Two-thirds of survey respondents using the Internet called it an "important" or "extremely important" source of information, while just 53 percent ranked television and 47 percent ranked radio at the same level.

And Web users also trust what they find online. Fifty-five percent said "most" or "all" online information is reliable and accurate. Overall, though, Internet users ranked books as their most important source of information among all media resources, followed by newspapers (69.3 percent of respondents). The Internet ranked number three (67.3 percent), followed by television (53.1 percent), radio (46.8 percent), and magazines (44.3 percent).

Surf from 40,000 feet

Here comes in-flight Internet and Web surfing for air travelers. AT&T Wireless Aviation, currently the No. 2 provider of in-flight telephone service the U.S., has come up with a new service called ePlane that the company hopes to sell to its airline customers, which include American Airlines and Northwest Airlines.

The plan involves installing Net-connected servers aboard jets and then, instead of charging the astronomical $5-a-minute rates that regular phone calls cost from the air, ePlane would provide laptop-equipped passengers unlimited Net connections for a single fee that covers the entire flight.

Privatizing systems

Around the country, governmental agencies and high-tech companies will watch with great interest as the Detroit School System becomes one of the biggest public agencies to privatize its information technology functions.

The troubled big-city school system, long plagued by expensive computer snafus and outdated equipment, announced last week it will turn over all IT functions to Compuware Corporation in a $90 million, five-year deal.

The company will provide all computer systems and networking for the 167,000-student district, train teachers and staff in using technology, and handle programming, payroll and Web site production. As Information technology becomes an increasing drain on both budgets and staff for governmental agencies around the U.S., privatization efforts like the Detroit Schools-Compuware deal are being touted as a way to increase efficiency and save taxpayer dollars.

The Internet is becoming a huge part of the automobile industry. Just this past week, General Motors announced a major portal site that its network of 7,000 dealers will use to stave off competition from rival sites like Autobytel.com.

The site is aimed at being a research and info service similar to the way Travelocity.com works with travel and airline info. As such, it won't push GM cars per se, or overtly promote its dealers, but will offer vehicle pricing data and comparison shopping info on its cars and, surprisingly, even cars made by other automakers.

GM sees consumer shopping research on the Web as playing an increasing role in automobile buying decisions and plans to work closely with Kelley Blue Book is providing pricing info. The recently spun-off-from-Ford Visteon Automotive Systems also sees the Net as a big part of vehicles themselves.

Visteon is creating a new business system that focus on accelerating mobile Internet communication through telematics and a bunch of new multimedia products and technologies.

If you don't think this is big, consider a report by UBS Warburg that estimates the automotive demand for telematics services like the Internet, wireless phones and even in-vehicle satellite radio receivers will amount to nearly $47 billion by 2010.

Mike Wendland covers the Internet for NBC-TV Newschannel stations across the country. He is the author of a series of Internet books. You can reach him through his Web site at www. pcmike. com and hear him Monday-Friday at 6:26 p.m. on NewsRadio 950, WWJ, and on Saturdays and Sundays from 4-6 p.m. on TalkRadio 1270, WXYT.

Put eye exam at top of back-to-school check

Few children start school without pencils, paper, scissors or glue sticks, but it is estimated only 14 percent of children entering kindergarten have had a comprehensive eye examination.

In order for your child to benefit the most from a good education, good vision is a must. Your child's eyes constantly are in use in the classroom and at play. When his or her vision is not functioning properly, learning, participation in class and recreational activities suffer.

The basic vision skills needed for school include near and distance vision, binocular coordination, eye-movement skills, peripheral awareness, focusing skills and eye-hand coordination. If any skills are lacking or not functioning properly, your child will have to work harder.

]This can lead to headaches, fatigue and other eye-strain problems.

As a parent, be alert for symptoms that may indicate you child has a vision-processing problems. Be sure to tell your optometrist if your child frequently:

- Losses place while reading
- Holds reading material closer than normal
- Tends to rub eyes
- Has headaches
- Turns or tilts head to use only one eye
- Makes frequent reversals when reading or writing
- Uses finger to maintain place when reading
- Avoids close work
- Omits or confuses small words when reading

Keep in mind that a school health screening is not a substitute for a thorough eye examination. Since vision changes can occur without you or your child noticing them, your child should visit the optometrist at least every two years – or more frequently if specific problems or risk factors exist. If needed, the doctor can prescribe treatment including eye-glasses, contact lenses or vision therapy.

For more information about vision in the school years, contact the American Optometric Association at www.aoanet.org. or call (888) 396-3937 and request "Your School-Age Child's Eyes" (C3).

Nicotine patches are not for teens

For teenagers wanting to throw away their cigarette packs for good, quitting is often more easily desired than accomplished. Quitting methods used by adults aren't always effective for teens.

The advent of nicotine patches and gums has made it easier for millions of adult smokers to quit by gradually reducing the dose of nicotine absorbed into the body, as opposed to the biological shock of going "cold turkey." However, a new study suggests that these methods may be ineffective in helping teen-agers quit smoking.

The study, released by the Mayo Clinic and published in the Archives of Pediatric and Adolescent Medicine, involved 101 teen-agers between the ages of 13 and 17 who had six weeks of patch therapy. After therapy, 11 out of the 101 were not smoking. Six months later, only five of them were still not smoking.

Researchers found a high level of interest among teens in participating in the study. "There is a mythology that teen smokers don't want to stop. That is not true," said Dr. Richard Hurt, lead author of the study and director of the Nicotine Dependence Center at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., in a news release from the American Cancer Society.

When asked how others might help them quit smoking, most students said, "Have the people around me not buy, offer or smoke cigarettes."

Although the rate of smoking among middle- and high-school students actually has dropped, nearly 3,000 youngsters take up smoking each day.

Some foods may contribute to ADD condition

Millions of children in the United States are being diagnosed with an attention disorder, and many parents wonder if their child's behavior is an indication that something is wrong.

"Before you conclude that your child has a disorder, take a look at what he is eating," said Kathy Bratby of Stony Brook University.

When a child is evaluated for attention and behavior problems a key factor that often is overlooked is his diet. Clinical experience and medical studies have shown that the things a child eats can have a direct effect on behavior and learning.

Many parents suspect their child behaves differently when brightly colored cereals or certain soft drinks are consumed. Others believe that candy leads to out-of-control behavior. They may think their child is on a "sugar high" and overlook the real culprits – artificial food dyes and flavorings.

"Food dyes are synthesized from petroleum – just like gasoline," said Bratby. "It doesn't take much to set off a sensitive child. Artificial flavorings can be made from thousands of synthetic chemicals, and some people don't tolerate them."

A nonprofit parent support group provides information on avoiding these additives.

CAN ONE SHOT FIX ALL

It is not absurd to see the doctor so he can give you an injection that will make you all right. If you have a sore shoulder as the result of a tendinitis, a single injection can at times, resolve the pain. You may feel good all over because the strain of the bad shoulder placed on your neck and other shoulder is gone.

You may have experienced the effect of a steroid dose pack taken when you hurt all over. The first dose of steroid is a high amount. It will make you feel wonderful, ready to stay up all night and work until dawn.

These examples exist, however, the fact is that most arthritis conditions won't respond to such treatment.

The reason is that the inflammation causing your pain exists in many places at once. Often the sites are the small joints of several fingers, plus your shoulders and knees. Or, the irritation involves muscles of both shoulder and both legs. A single injection at one site cannot reach the numerous locations where the inflammation resides.

Furthermore, in most arthritis conditions you need a constant level of appropriate medication at all times to suppress inflammation from re-appearing. A single injection of cortisone goes through your body only once before your kidneys eliminate it, the long term presence isn't there.

Finally, the alternative to a single injection is the medicine that you must take daily or even twice a day for months. Who wouldn't wish an easier way to become well.

Using a portable generator

JERRY GOETZ

To determine the size of an emergency generator you require, add up the wattage of the lights and appliances you need to operate. This is called the "constant wattage."

Appliances such as refrigerators, freezers, air conditioners and furnace blowers require up to three times their normal wattage to start. Make sure your generator exceeds both the "constant wattage" and also your "start-up wattage" needs.

When you are using a portable generator, disconnect your house circuits from the utility power lines. Pull the main fuses or switch the main circuit breaker to "off" to prevent an electrical hazard and to protect repair crews working to restore service.

I have a few tips regarding the operation of your generator:

- Read and understand all the instructions before hooking up the generator.
- Never run your generator in your home, garage or other enclosed building.
- Never refuel your generator while it is running or very hot.
- Be sure your hands are dry and you're standing in a dry place whenever you operate the generator.
- Turn off or disconnect all appliances and lights before you start the generator. When the generator is running, turn your appliances and lights on one at a time.

Small lake is centerpiece of new sub

It's all about the water and value for price at Indianwood Estates on the Lake.

So says the developer/ builder at the detached site condominium community of 77 lots off Dartmouth south of Oak Hill in Independence Township.

"You're paying the same square footage for the house but getting a bigger lot with a lake compared to our competitors," said Marc Rosenzweig, vice president of JAC Construction.

"It's gorgeous," added Brent Rieli, sales representative. "People come in here, look out this window and say, 'Wow, look how beautiful it is.'"

The centerpiece at Indianwood Estates is a 27-acre private lake with access for all homeowners. The lake was formed from a former gravel pit.

Plans call for a beach with playscape, gazebo and small boat launch. Gas motors aren't allowed on watercraft to reduce speeds and noise.

"Views of the lake are spectacular," Rieli said. "We only have two houses that back up to another house. Everything else backs up to woods or water."

Minimum lot size is eight-tenths of an acre. "You're up North without being up North," Rosenzweig said.

There are factors other than the site, itself, to recommend Indianwood Estates.

"You've got easy access to I-75 from Sashabaw or Baldwin – what is it, five miles?" Rosenzweig said. "A lot of jobs are coming out this way from (I-)75. You're able to get a large lot only 15 minutes away from the heart of activity."

That includes Pine Knob and Great Lakes Crossing.

"But far enough that you don't have any noise," Rieli said. "It's quiet, reclusive.

"Lake Orion schools are considered very good," Rieli added.

Homes at Indianwood Estates have either a park view – which includes a walking path to a 60-acre land conservancy lake view – or lake frontage.

Nine floor plans are available.

The smallest and least expensive, a 2,340-square-foot colonial with three or four bedrooms, is priced at $279,900 park view, $299,900 lake view and $354,900 lakefront.

The largest and most expensive, a 3,425-square-foot colonial with four bedrooms and 3-1/2 baths, is priced at $383,900 park view, $403,900 lake view and $458,900 lakefront.

Most lots also carry premiums ranging from $1,000 to $17,500.

Waterside Model: This story-and-a-half of 3,100 square feet features lots of windows, especially in rooms facing the lake at Indianwood Estates.

All plans include as standard features three-car garage, first-floor laundry, basement, fireplace, wood floor in the foyer, kitchen/ nook and half bath, ceramic floor in the laundry and upper baths and carpeting throughout.

All plans also include a dishwasher and a light fixture allowance of $1,000. All but one include a separate tub and shower in the master suite.

Brick, vinyl siding and dimensional shingles are primary exterior materials.

"The value what you get here as far as standard package is a lot," Rieli said.

"We flop the floor plans with the master in back on the lake fronts and in front on the lake views for a water view," Rosenzweig said.

"We're not a custom builder, not a cookie-cutter," Rieli said. "We've moved walls around, expanded houses."

Two additional floor plans – one with a second-floor laundry – are on the drawing boards.

One model has been completed, another is well under way.

The Waterside, a story-and-a-half of 3,120 square feet, features a two-story foyer, dining room or study, great room with high ceiling and fireplace, kitchen/ nook, and a master suite with separate tub and shower, two-sink vanity and walk-in closet on the main floor.

Three bedrooms and a full bath are upstairs. A bridge overlooks the lower level.

Base price starts at $349,000 park view, $364,900 lake view and $419,900 lake front.

The Beachwalk, under construction, is a colonial of 3,186 square feet. The home contains a two-story foyer, living room, dining room, kitchen/ nook, butler's pantry and family room. A two-way fireplace is between the nook and family room.

The master, upstairs, features a dual-sink vanity with make-up area, a walk-in closet and a compartmentalized commode.

A second bedroom upstairs (a possible guest suite) has its own bath. Bedrooms 3 and 4 share a jack-and-jill bath.

Base price starts at $349,900 park view, $364,900 lake view and $425,900 lake front.

A couple of spec homes are in various stages of completion.

The monthly association fee is projected at $35.

Indianwood Estates on the Lake is served by individual water wells and septic systems. There are no sidewalks.

The property tax rate is $29.46 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $420,000 home there would pay about $6,200 in taxes the first year.

How to select telephone calling card

A telephone calling card provides a convenient way to place calls while away from home. Calling cards eliminate the need for using coins at a pay phone or having to bill the telephone account from where you place a call.

By using a calling card, you can use your long distance telephone company of choice – at its calling card rates – and avoid unexpected charges that might be assessed by a pay phone service provider.

What types of calling cards are available?

Standard calling cards are typically issued by a local or long distance telephone company and charges for calls appear on your monthly telephone bill. Calling cards are also available as a combination credit card/ calling card, where the card serves as a standard credit card with which you can make purchases, and you can also use it to place telephone calls by using a personal identification number. All charges to the credit card, including telephone calls, are billed to the credit card account.

Prepaid calling cards are issued for a specific amount of money, usually in denominations ranging from $5 to $100, and are usable for a certain number of calling minutes, ranging from 10 to more than 100 minutes.

Prepaid calling cards are issued by local and long distance telephone companies and other companies whose businesses are not telephone related. The cards are sold through retail and convenience stores, service stations, vending machines, the Internet, and other retail outlets.

Because a prepaid calling card represents telephone time bought in advance, you are not sent a bill for the calls you make. With each use, the call's cost is deducted from the card's balance. Generally, periodic voice prompts tell you how much time you have left on the card.

How do you choose a calling card?

First, determine your individual calling needs. Do you need to make a high number of calls to different numbers while traveling, or do you need to budget each call? The standard calling card may offer the most flexibility by allowing you to place a call from any telephone, make international calls, and talk as long as you like.

Prepaid calling cards are useful if you do not have long distance service and want to limit your talk time. Once you understand your telephone usage patterns, shop around to determine the calling card that is best for you. Read the fine print and obtain written information on conditions and directions for use of the card.

What questions are important to ask?

Rates and conditions of calling card service vary widely. Call the company's customer service number and ask these questions:

Standard Calling Cards

■ What is the per-minute rate? Are there different rates for different times of the day and can they change without notice?

■ Are calls rounded up to the nearest minute, or 30 seconds, or other increment? Is the rate higher for the first minute or is there a minimum per-call charge?

■ Can the card be used for local, within state, interstate, and international calls? What are the rates for each type?

■ Is there a surcharge, tax, or any other additional charge for each call? If so, how much?

■ Do the surcharges vary when calling from public telephones, hotels, etc.?

■ Is there a monthly maintenance fee for the card? Is the fee assessed whether I use the card during the month or not? How much is the fee?

■ Must I subscribe to a carrier's local or long distance service in order to use its calling card? If no, will I pay higher rates if I am not subscribed to the telephone company's local or long distance service?

■ Can I reach customer service personnel through a toll-free telephone number? What is that number? Is it available 24 hours a day?

Prepaid calling card

■ Will the card expire and, if so, when?

■ What is the per-minute or per-call charge?

■ Is there a charge when a call is not completed?

■ Is there a per-call connection fee or connection surcharge?

■ Is there a higher rate for the first minute or for international calls?

■ Will I be notified when one minute is remaining on my call?

Guarding against theft

Be careful when using your standard calling card in a public place. Place your call as privately and quietly as possible. Since some calling cards have the account and personal identification numbers printed on the card, report lost or stolen calling cards immediately to the issuing company. Avoid sharing your card or its numbers with other persons.

Finking help with problem?

If you have problems or questions related to a standard calling card, contact the card issuer. Complaints regarding prepaid telephone calling cards can be made to the International Telecard Association at (800) 333-3513.

One place to look for carpet advice

(NAPS)– According to recent research, many Americans don't clean their carpets as often as they should.

Vacuuming more often would prevent dirt from becoming ground into the carpet. The average person vacuums their carpet every 6.1 days – roughly once per week as opposed to twice-weekly as recommended by experts at the Carpet & Rug Institute.

When buying new floor coverings, look for carpets that are easier to clean. Much progress has been made in addressing carpet stains.

The DuPont Stainmaster Web site offers a thorough guide to removing a vast array of stubborn and difficult stains ranging from fruit punch to ketchup and even worse.

To obtain these helpful tips visit their home page at http:// www. dupont. com /stainmaster

For more information on the new Stainmaster technology, call (800) 4DUPONT.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"THE FIX-IT-UP HOUSE"

Can you still buy a home at a reasonable price, fix it up and sell it at a profit? Always, if you buy the right home for the right price. Here are important factors to consider.

LOCATION

Real estate derives much of its value from its location. Profit potential is greatest if the home you buy is located in an area of high demand. How do you know if demand is high? Compare how long it takes to sell the average home in one area when compared to another.

When the house is rejuvenated, how high a sale price will this area demand? The risk involved in buying a home for the purpose of resale is best rewarded when you purchase in an area that can deliver the highest possible profit potential. So, you cannot simply consider the house and its condition. Location is also a major consideration.

PROFIT POTENTIAL

What is the spread between what you must pay and the amount you can obtain upon resale? Is the spread large enough to allow for the cost of repairs, the expense of owning the property until it can be resold and a reasonable profit?

WHICH REPAIRS ENHANCE RESALE VALUE?

What is the home lacking that will be expected by a potential purchaser? Make your repair decisions not upon your own personal tastes but with the average buyer in mind. Be sure of your costs. If you are not a builder, get at least two bids from licensed builders or home improvement firms.

TIMING

Is the local real estate market active and can you resell the property without too much delay? You don't need a hot market to guarantee success. If buyer demand is too high, you may not be able to buy the property at the right price.

ADVICE: In order to make an informed buying decision, use a Realtor®.

Two story has outside character of large ranch

With a walk-around covered porch across the front, the Phalia (G24-735) shows characteristics of a large ranch style home.

It has numerous windows across the front providing an open, gracious look, as well as being practical for extra light on the inside. Bay windows front and back give a balanced look and add special areas for unique rooms.

Located inside the entry bay are closets and a bench on both sides. This provides more than ample coat storage.

The coffered dining room is on the right and is well lit with extra large windows. Easy access to the kitchen makes the dining area great for use in family gatherings or formal entertaining.

The kitchen is very open with the counters running along one wall in a C-shape. There is a large window over the sink looking out onto the back deck.

In an alcove area between the garage and the kitchen is the utility room with a half bath. Between the utility and the storage area is the door to the large two-car garage.

On the other side of the home is a large great room in the rear with a fireplace on the left side. Two doors open off this room, one to the front porch and one to the rear deck.

Between the great room and the kitchen is a nook surrounded by windows, great for the early morning breakfasts.

Completing the first floor is an office in the left front, with French doors opening from the hall, easily accessible from the front entry. This room has built-in shelves and a large window seat.

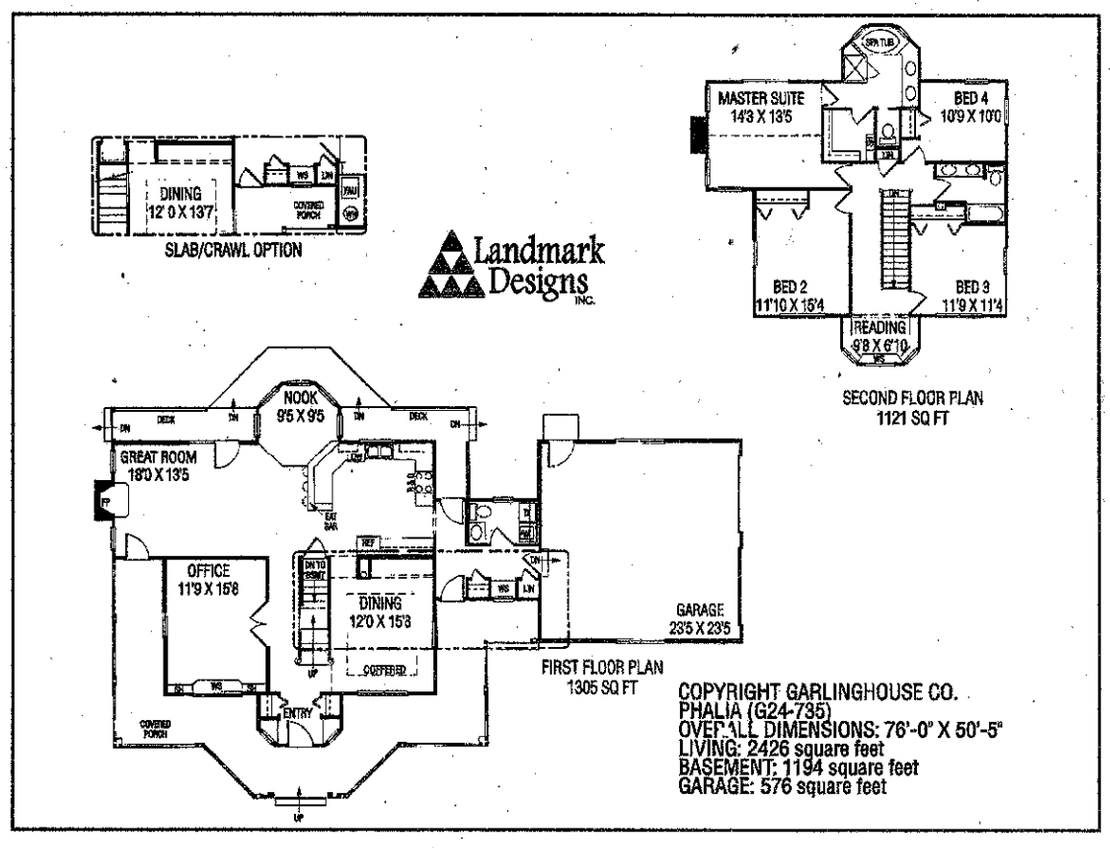
This is an ideal location for an office as it is separate from the rest of the home, yet easy to bring clients into if needed.

Upstairs are three bedrooms and the master suite. In the front-bayed dormer is a reading area, great for studying.

Bedrooms 3 and 4 have a full bath with a tub between.

Bedroom 2 is adjacent to the master suite, which takes up the entire left rear of the upstairs. It has many amenities such as a large walk-in closet, two sinks, a shower, and a spa tub in the rear bay windows. Centrally located for all the bedrooms is a linen closet.

This spacious home with 1,305 square feet on the main floor, 1,121 square feet on the second floor, and an unfinished 1,194 square feet in the optional basement offers its owners many amenities and options.



For a study kit of the Phalia (G24-735), send $24.95 to Landmark Designs, 33127 Saginaw Road East, Cottage Grove, OR 97424 (specify plan name and number of kit).

For a collection of plan books, send $20, or save by ordering the kit and collection together for $34.95. For faster processing, call (800) 562-1151, or visit the Web at www.landmarkdesigns.com

Alliance to Save Energy offers 'no sweat' summer tips

Looking to beat the heat without breaking the bank?

The Alliance to Save Energy offers smart, energy-efficient tips to keep you cooler and more comfortable while cutting your energy bill and pollution.

■ Tired of playing "thermostat cop" with the kids or coming home to a sweltering house on hot summer days? A programmable thermostat automatically coordinates indoor climates with daily and weekend patterns, increasing home comfort and reducing energy waste.

■ South and west facing windows admit the most heat in the summer. Close blinds on those sides of the house during the day, or install shading devices such as trellises or awnings.

■ Help prevent potential brownouts and blackouts by utility companies by shifting energy-intensive tasks such as laundry and dishwashing to off-peak energy demand hours.

■ Attics and crawlspaces, exposed to extreme outdoor temperatures, can often reach temperatures of 115 degrees. Adequate insulation and attic ventilation can keep you from "losing your cool."

■ Cooling and heating account for almost half of the average family's energy bill. Make sure your air conditioning equipment is properly maintained with a professional tune-up – cleaning coils and checking for refrigerant leaks and proper refrigerant charging could save you the cost and inconvenience of a breakdown during the hottest days. Also clean or replace filters monthly.

■ Size matters with air conditioning, but bigger isn't always better. Poorly sized air conditioning units can unnecessarily inflate your energy costs and contribute to poor indoor air quality in your home, worsening your allergies and making breathing uncomfortable. Check with your contractor or local air conditioning system retailer to properly size your unit.

■ Look for the Energy Star label, the symbol for energy efficiency, when shopping for room and central air conditioning systems – as well as for major appliances, lighting, and home electronics – to cut these related costs by 30 percent. Find retailers who carry Energy Star products at www.energystar.gov

■ Plant leafy trees and vines around your home and install reflective tiles on your roof. These will cut your air conditioning load, reduce pollution, and fight your local "heat island" effect.

■ Go "window-shopping" at the Efficient Windows Collaborative Web site, www.efficientwindows.org. You'll learn how high-performance Energy Star windows can reduce average cooling costs from 15 to 35 percent by filtering in visible light and filtering out heat waves.

■ If you're in the market for a new home, ask your builder or Realtor about homes that can improve your home's resale value by $20 for every $1 reduction in utility costs while reducing pollution. Find participating builders and developers on the Web at www.energystar.gov/homes

■ Take the guesswork out of energy-efficient home improvements by exploring the Alliance to Save Energy's free Home Energy Checkup online (www.ase.org/checkup), which provides homeowners with a quick analysis of potential dollar and pollution savings, considering climate types and energy prices.

■ Sip lemonade and think cool thoughts.

Utility sets office hours

Detroit Edison's customer offices offer uniform hours of operation as of July 10. All the utility's customer offices in southeastern Michigan operate from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Previously the customer offices in different geographic areas of the utility's southeastern Michigan service area operated on a variety of schedules.

"Meeting our service commitments to our customers in an accurate and timely manner is the first step in customer satisfaction," said Vincent G. Dow manager, customer services for Detroit Edison. "The customer offices are often the first contact a customer has with the company – it is critical that our customer office operations are consistent."

Business provides that extra support system

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

The computer has created a return to cottage industries, people staying home to work.

But what about all those support services usually offered by the workplace to make your work a little easier.

Tammy Burch was wondering the same thing when she decided to start Virtual Concepts in 1998.

At the time Burch of Milford was working as a convention coordinator and not enjoying the travel demands that took her away from her two children.

"I found that many people with home-based businesses hadn't the support to make their business a success," Burch said.

Burch found many people working at home who needed assistance and people, like her, who wanted a job where they could work at home.

"I found there were just as many people out in the world what wanted to do what I was doing and I began recruiting assistants. It's a double-edged sword," she said.

Fortunately, or unfortunately, for Burch the business that began in her home has grown so rapidly that she had to open an office in Milford to handle it.

"Clients find us easily. Ninety-two percent is referral but we launched an internet presence and affiliated with T-Manage out of Austin, Texas," Burch said.

Burch's "virtual assistants" provide a number of services from accounting to power point presentations to sending birthday cards.

"Anything non-revenue generating that they can outsource, so they can make more money for their clients," said Burch.

For Dan Georgevich of BNI, Business Network International, Virtual Concepts takes care of several time consuming jobs to free him up to deal with his clients. BNI, headquartered in Shelby Township, is a business referral service with 57 member companies across Michigan.

"Tammy and her staff take care of all the administrative stuff so that I can focus on growing the business and businesses of my members," Georgevich said.

He said virtual assistants help with chapter placements and arranging for Getting a degree, not all it's cracked up to be

Q. At age 47, I am strongly considering going back to school to complete my degree. The idea is scary and, frankly, not very appealing.

However, I want to advance within my company before it is too late.

What do you think?

A.. I doubt if long term, mid-career employees who obtain degrees are instantly viewed more favorably by their current organizations. Yet that's what the advertisements would have you believe. In late summer, the airwaves are filled with pitches that suggest a linear relationship between a new degree and rapid career advancement, a.k.a. big bucks.

JOB SEARCH

GEORGE HAYES

There has probably even been a study, funded by SAD (Schools and Academics for Dollars) that backs the claim.

But there are assumptive leaps in the message. Let's fill in some blanks.

What's it going to cost and how long will it take to recoup the money?

Unless your company has a tuition reimbursement program, college is often a financial drain. In addition, there are opportunity costs. If you worked at a part-time job or got a consulting gig instead of going to class and studying, how much could you make? Put pencil to paper.

If you project a salary increase of five or even 20 percent a year after you get your degree, when do you break even?

How likely is it that you will be promoted because of your new degree?

Mid-career people should analyze the potential ROI in light of their own circumstances.

I am a big advocate of additional training to enhance skills, teach critical thinking, and broaden general knowledge. But I am angry with the businesses to join a BNI chapter in their area; maintaining a membership database.

"Tammy always says time is money and she can save us both, and she does," Georgevich said.

John Clements, a stockbroker with A.G. Edwards, found there were some services he needed extra help to handle.

"Even though I have a full-time assistant that sits right outside my door, he could only handle the day-to-day routine work. He couldn't also handle client service," Clements said.

Clements virtual assistant handles newsletters, birthday cards, stock reports, reprinting magazine articles for clients. Clements said he was walking through Metro Airport one day when he saw a Fortune magazine article about a company his clients invest in heavily. He had his assistant copy the article and send to his clients.

"I once did a proposal. I wrote it at night. But why should I dink around on a computer for six hours. I sent it to my virtual assistant and 40 minutes later it was back to me, edited and ready to go," he said.

But it's often the little things that count, like a birthday card.

"The nice thing is that my clients will think it's great. They'll say to me, I got that birthday card or that article and I think, yeah, all right ..." Clements said.

Burch said she tries to create a good match between an assistant and a client, who is billed on an hourly rate.

"First we profile the clients, where are they spending their time, what hats are they wearing," Burch said. "We customize work solutions that make it possible to outsource to a virtual assistant."

Once a match is made, Virtual Concepts does 30-day and 60-day evaluations. Burch said by 60 days, most clients are asking for more services.

Burch said there are currently between 50 and 60 virtual assistants working through Virtual Concepts.

Burch holds monthly recruiting meetings at Eastern Michigan University's Livonia Center, at Six Mile and I-275.

The recruitment meetings are by invitation only. To be invited a resume must be sent by fax to Virtual Concepts at (248)676-9494. This is followed by a telephone interview and an invitation to the meetings, held the second Tuesday of every month.

people who have turned secondary education into a con game by promising career glory if you just write them a check. A new degree is rarely a silver bullet remedy for a stalled career. I also think it's a shame that so many of us look at education only as a means to vocational or financial advancement. What about learning for the joy of it?

Q. My dad is a controller for a manufacturing company. He has never liked it. He likes working with his hands. We built and sold a number of houses and he loved the experience. His dad pressured him into being an accountant. Now, he is telling me that I should go into accounting!

What should I do?

Jason B.

A. The career dialogue between parents and kids can get very complicated. Everyone is well intentioned. But it can degenerate so that decisions are based more on emotions than the fit with long term goals, interests and abilities. There can be power issues that confuse feelings and scramble facts. There can be compromises that lead to career mismatches and resentment.

I knew a guy whose dad wanted him to become a doctor. He didn't much like the idea of being a doctor, but then again, he didn't know what else to do, either. So he agreed to take pre-med courses. He did rather well, actually, but couldn't allow himself to enjoy all the cool classes because he felt coerced. Ultimately, our friend graduated with honors in Biology. But in complete rebellion, he went to graduate school in business. Later, he became a recruiter and a columnist with the O&E. But here's the twist: After twenty years, he recognizes his passion for natural sciences and often wishes he were a veterinarian.

In short, I don't have an answer for you. I've only come to some mini-conclusions: Most kids don't know what they really want to do; Parents should help children identify their natural interests and support them by helping identify related career options.

Car, twins featured in new magazine

BY EILEEN MCCARVILLE
STAFF WRITER

It's a welcome splash of sunshine, parked in front of the Geare home in Orion Township. In fact the 2000 lemon-yellow new Beetle has a revered place on its own special piece of blacktop.

The package includes a great preview of the new 2001 VW and a catalog of vehicle accessories, including signature clothing like hats and jackets.

Those who have purchased a new VW vehicle within the last four years will receive it. "It's a new magazine for consumers,' Iltyd Geare said. It will continue to be distributed to owners for the next four years they own the vehicle, he added.

The "Driver" portion of the magazine focuses customer information and VW happenings around the world, It includes news like the annual "Beetle Cup" race in Germany, or a recent, promotional "DriverFest" in Anaheim, Calif., where 15,000 people turned out to sample VW vehicles. The second part, titled "Driver Gear" (not intended to be a pun on his last name, Iltyd quips) features a catalogue of accessories.

Mom's bug — a model VW Beetle GLX 1.8T turbo, featured in the debut issue with the girls — is super-loaded, with a rear spoiler, 18-inch Tocatta wheels, double chrome exhaust tips, sun roof and power everything. It also includes a "bud vase" next to the steering wheel, fine leather upholstery, and a six-CD player for popping in the twins' favorite music, which ranges from alternative rock group Bush to new-age pianist David Lanz.

Dad also occasionally likes to plop in his Matchbox Twenty CD.

Sharon's car has "just about everything," Iltyd said. "It's the highest, fanciest model." There's a good vroooooom kick to the 150-horsepower, four-cylinder turbo engine too. "It's fast. It sounds gutsy," Sharon said.

And it's economical. The Beetle gets 19-20 miles to the gallon "in the city" and 28 mph "on the highway," Iltyd said.

Another nice feature of this model is its compartmentalized trunk. There are sections you can move around for organizing that include Velcro fasteners. The twins said it was helpful when they had to bring two ceramic pieces home from Jacobsen's, "so they didn't break." Sharon also fills it up with flowers and bushes during gardening season.

From the outside, given the size of the little bug, you just don't realize just how roomy it is. "There still is a lot of room in the trunk for the size of the car. I can still get my groceries in," Sharon said.

It's such a signature piece of work that even the hubcaps and the air valves include the VW logo.

The fact that he works for Volkswagen wasn't the only reason his girls were chosen for the promotional magazine, Iltyd said. They are great teenage spokespersons, even at school. "They have Beetle magnets in their lockers," Iltyd said. Plus, they come from an all-VW family.

Iltyd, whose father also worked for Volkswagen, drives a EuroVan, and both girls plan to drive VW's as soon as they get their driver's licenses and can afford to buy a car — which they'll share.

The girls have to chip in some of the funds, even though their parents could certainly afford a leased or purchased car. This teaches them responsibility, Sharon and Iltyd say. Set to be sophomores at Lake Orion High School this fall, Jennifer and Stephanie plan to strive for high scholarships, which will offset some of the college costs. They have a deal worked out with their parents where they'll "pay for half" the purchase of a car.

First choice is a Volkswagen Jetta, "because it's a nice sport car," Jennifer said.

One of the reasons the family loves bugs is because people who drive them have a chance to be "unique." There is no other car like it on the road.

Apparently statistics agree. The "New" Beetle was released several years ago, and buyers increase every year. According to marketing source J.D. Power & Associates, units sold in the U.S. have risen from two million in 1998 to nearly eight million this June.

And — although they'd like to get away from the comparison — the VW bus is still the unofficial vehicle of "Deadheads," followers of former rock group The Grateful Dead. "(Jerry) Garcia did a lot for us," Iltyd quipped.

It's also considered "cool" among the younger set, added Iltyd. "The kids like cool. They want to be different."

Sharon said she feels like "a different person" every time she steps into her Beetle. When you tool down M-24, other VW owners, as well as regular drivers, like to give you a "thumbs up" when they see the cheery little car. "Or a busload of kids goes by. They're yelling and screaming," Sharon said.

When she parks her car in a lot, invariably someone will come up to her and want to talk about the VW he or she once owned. "Good or bad, people still like to talk about the experience," Sharon said.

"It's all about fun," Iltyd added.

The girls agree their mom's car is an attention-getter.

"You can always tell when your mom is pulling up in the school parking lot," said Stephanie. "Cause it's the brightest car you'll see."
