Teachers OK 1-year pact

Extension of current agreement gives staff 2.62 percent raises

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

The Plymouth-Canton Education Association, which represents nearly 1,000 teachers, approved a one-year contract extension this week by a 2-1 margin.

However, PCEA President Chuck Portelli said that despite the vote, his membership isn't completely pleased with the pact.

"I still have a considerable amount of teachers who aren't pleased with the agreement, and we've heard loudly and clearly from them," said Portelli. "Many weren't happy with the one-year extension. They wanted a multi-year contract."

"We understand that the administration, with changes in leadership positions, wanted a one-year agreement," he added. "But, the PCEA leadership had to convince our membership this was good for both of us. If the state economy continues to be in a downturn, we're taking a risk."

Portelli said the one-year pact includes a pay raise of 2.62 percent for all teachers, unlike the agreement turned down by PCEA members April 11.

That agreement called for teachers at the very top of the pay scale, along with first-year teachers, to receive a 3-percent wage hike. Teachers in between, who are in their second through 10th years, would have received a 1.75 percent wage increase. It takes 11 years, plus a master's degree, for a Plymouth-Canton teacher to get to the top of the wage scale.

More than 400 teachers voted against the first tentative agreement, the most ever to vote against a contract during Portelli's tenure of negotiations. The pact was ultimately rejected by 55 votes.

"The biggest issue was the difference in pay," said Portelli. "We took the same money and just re-divided it."

School board president Darwin Watts said the one-year extension will help the district focus

Wysocki hopes experience propels him to board

Tom Wysocki

Tom Wysocki said if he's elected to the Plymouth-Canton school board, he'll rely on his experience as president of the Plymouth-Canton Band Boosters.

"It was a fairly intensive effort and I learned a lot of things," said Wysocki, who lives in Plymouth. "That kind of experience prepares you for something like the school board. There are a lot of tough decisions, and a lot of rewards. I have the time, energy and desire to do this right now."

Wysocki, who's had a daughter graduate from the district and a son who is a senior, is one of four candidates vying for the open seat in the June 11 school board election. Incumbent Roland Thomas is not seeking re-election.

School Board Election 2001

tion. Wysocki says it's no secret what the major issue is for school board members.

"Funding is the top issue. It's going to carry through the next several years unless something happens to the state foundation grant that will improve the outlook for our district."

Wysocki said that while Plymouth-Canton is attempting to lead changes in state financing, the effort needs to encompass state legislators, other school districts and voters.

"We're just one voice with a few legislators in Lansing, and they, by themselves, can't make a difference. They need to form alliances, so other districts need to get involved. It will take the effort of all those districts and the voters to let the legislators know there's a problem. They need to be part of the solution with us. Now is the time for change."

Next on Wysocki's list of priorities is the opening of Dodson Elementary in August, and Plymouth High School in 2002.

"There will be a fair amount of money to open those schools, but the next several years after that the money will be tighter."

Cartoon Network will use Liberty Fest for summer launch

BY CAROL MARSHALL
cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

When the folks at the Cartoon Network were looking for a place to launch their summer tour, they had family and fun on their minds. They found the perfect setting in Canton's 10th Annual Liberty Fest.

The Cartoon Network Boomerang Express double-decker tour bus will launch its 10-city summer tour at the festival June 22.

"Our tour is geared toward families and fun so I thought Canton's Liberty Fest would be a great place to start our tour," said Cartoon Network Event Producer Andrew Kloack.

Kloack said the bus is an authentic English double-decker.

"It's being shipped here from England as we speak," he said. Ten costumed characters will come out of the bus to entertain the children, pose for pictures, play games and give out prizes. "We're just coming to play and spread some cheer."

In addition to the Boomerang Express bus, Kloack said he also hopes to bring the world's largest chalk drawing to Canton on Saturday during the festival.

He should receive word by June whether ABC Warehouse on Ford Road will be able to accommodate the 150- by 150-foot chalk drawing, which Kloack said will need the help of young artists to color in.

"It should be really exciting," he said. "The guys from Guinness Book will be there and everything. This is the real thing."

Youngsters will have the chance to meet Yogi and Boo Boo, Magilla the Gorilla, Huckleberry Hound, Quickdraw McGraw, Top Cat, Snagglepuss, Muttley, Secret Squirrel, Droopy Dog, Dick Dastardly and Hong Kong Phooey.

A three-member crew will travel around the country, and hire local talent to work in costume.

"It's a lot more fun hanging out with the kids you meet than with their parents," said Kloack of his past summer tours on the cartoon bus. "They're just there to have fun, and they're so overwhelmed by the big characters and the big inflatables. Everything is just so big to them."

Cops to get in-car cameras

Encounters with Canton patrol officers will soon be tape. The Canton Township Trustees approved the purchase of 23 of the 27 vehicles.

"This is probably a handy tool," said Tom Yack.

Since 1992, in-car cameras have been a special feature of the equipment as well as safety.

Careless outdoor cooking causes fire

A fire that destroyed a Sturbridge home Monday was apparently started by one of the home's residents.

A 19-year-old resident of the home told police he was trying to start a charcoal grill in the garage when the fire started. He said he doused the charcoal with lighter fluid and tossed a match on the grill.

An open gas can was located next to the grill.

"Everything went up in flames," the teen told police. The teen sustained minor injuries.

His sisters escaped the home without injury, as did two of his friends, who were also inside the home.

Two friends who were in the driveway at the time of the blaze told police they tried to extinguish the fire, get help and get everyone out of the house.

Speakers stolen

A Canton teen who took his Eagle Talon into a garage for repair told police someone took more than $500 worth of speakers and stereo equipment from the car.

The victim took his car to a KIA dealership located at 41840 Michigan Ave. last Wednesday. The repair technician told police when he worked on the car, the speakers were still intact.

The store's general manager is assisting Canton police in identifying possible suspects.

Isbisters' students rally around family

BY KURT KUBAN
STAFF WRITER
kkuban@oe.homecomm.net

When a bacterial infection suddenly cut short the life of former Canton resident Jeff DuCharme back in March, he left behind three young children and a pregnant wife.

Unfortunately, like many people that are only 39-years-old, DuCharme wasn't prepared for his own death. The 1979 Plymouth Salem graduate didn't have life insurance or leave behind any financial safety nets for his family, and they have struggled to pick up the pieces since his death. The bills keep coming to their Mount Pleasant home. And the children have to be fed.

Paying the bills and feeding those mouths are enormous tasks for DuCharme's home-maker wife Lisa, who is due to deliver a baby in July. She is also a 1979 Salem graduate.

When a group of students at Plymouth's Isbister Elementary School, where DuCharme was once a student, learned of the tragedy, they made a pledge to rally around the family. The school's Grateful Isbister Volunteers Everyday (GIVE) Club, which consists of 30 members from third through fifth grades, dedicated the month of May to raising money for the DuCharmes.

In addition to pledging money of their own, the students are collecting donations from others in the community and holding fund-raisers, including a car wash last Saturday at a Plymouth Amoco gas station.

The children learned about the tragedy from DuCharme's sister Sally Mitchell, a Canton resident with three children attending Isbister. Mitchell said the last two months have been very difficult for Lisa and the three children: Joey, 8, Danielle, 6, and Samantha, 3.

"This has been such a tragedy and it's so hard for Jeff loved his family and was a very involved parent, but he wasn't prepared for this," Mitchell said. "But I realize he is not alone. It seems like a lot of people don't start thinking about dying until they are 40. I think a lot of people just take life for granted."

Wash and go: Ellen Mitchell helps Isbister Elementary students in their car wash fund-raiser to benefit the family of Jeff DuCharme, who died suddenly of a bacterial infection earlier this year.

Mitchell said the children's efforts have provided a big moral boost.

"Once the kids found out, they really wanted to help. I was just overwhelmed. Just to know these people are there to help. It's just been wonderful," she said. "They have been donating their extra lunch money. One boy even gave his entire allowance of $12."

Under the direction of Isbister teachers Shelly Kitley and James Buhro, the GIVE Club was begun this year as a way to teach the children how important it is to help others. In addition to aiding the DuCharmes, GIVE members have collected books for a school in Highland Park and canned food for the Salvation Army.

The group has already raised more than $1,100 for the family and hopes to raise as much as possible during the rest of the month. All the money will be contributed to the DuCharme Children's Fund.

According to Kitley, the lessons the children are learning from GIVE are as important as any math or English assignment.

"I have been so impressed with the kids. They have been very willing to give both their time and even some of their extra lunch money. And they are definitely getting something out of their efforts. They are working together and gaining an awareness of the community. They are realizing not everyone has as much as they do."

Mitchell agreed. "These children and their parents don't know Jeff and his family from Adam. What they are doing is so unselfish. At the same time it's such an opportunity for them to learn a big lesson about life. This is what it's all about — pulling together, doing something worthwhile and helping those in need."

Contributions to the family can be made c/o DuCharme Children's Fund, Isabella Community Credit Union, 2100 E. Remus Road, Mount Pleasant, MI 48858. The family is also in need of goods such as diapers and baby food, which can be donated through Isbister Elementary. The school can be contacted at (734) 416-6050.

There were more than 101 of them, and they weren't all Dalmatians, but that didn't stop last weekend's running of the Plymouth Dog Jog from being proclaimed a dog-gone good time.

There were 200 official registrations, but almost certainly more actual canine participants, according to the event's Top Dog, Denise Chapman.

"The sun finally came out, and we'll be giving the Humane Society at least $7,500," Chapman said. "I'd call that a successful day."

The money to benefit the Humane Society came from a variety of sources, including pledges. Renee and Joe Kochanek led the pledge drive by raising $1,365, while Jackie and Jim Walesch raised $1,103. But Chapman also paid tribute to those who gave in smaller amounts.

"Those pledges are important, but it's the $5, $10 and $20 donations that make up the bulk of it," Chapman said. "We appreciate the people going out and getting the pledges, but it's the smaller donations that really add up."

After starting the day with some pet tricks and a demonstration by the Plymouth Township K-9 team, the event got down to brass tacks, with the competitors traveling a two-mile track starting at the fountain in Kellogg Park. The event drew veteran joggers as well as some newcomers.

"We have come out every year. It's just a great time for everybody," including four-legged family member Scooby Doo, said Canton dog-jogger Carol O'Donohue. "If dogs could smile, you would have seen every dog smiling."

"This is my first time," said Jill Phillips of Plymouth, who made the Jog with her yellow lab, Lola. "Being a big dog lover, I thought it would be fun."

Ed Quinn of Plymouth had his Irish wolf hounds, McCullough and Halissey, in the park for the day's activities. It was McCullough's second time, but the first for Halissey.

"It's a great chance to socialize with other dogs," he said.

Of course, there can't be a competitive event without having winners. In Saturday's event, they were:

- Age 40 and over — Don Kearney with his dog, Abby; Betty Curran with her dog, Shadow.
- Ages 15-39 — Joe Galea with Katy; Sherry Paolucci with Domino.
- Under-14 — Sean Tabers with Laces; Ashley Mosley, Baxter.

Thousands of students from throughout southeastern Michigan visit the center which provides hands-on learning about the importance of good nutrition, how to keep your heart healthy, how to avoid infections and illness and more.

Ground breaking ushers in a new era at Schoolcraft

BY TIM SMITH
STAFF WRITER
tsmith@oe.homecomm.net

Clusters of balloons outlined the footprint of a project expected to change the face of Schoolcraft College.

"This is an exciting time in the history of the college," said Schoolcraft President Richard McDowell, looking out toward those balloons while commenting during Wednesday evening's groundbreaking ceremony for the Waterman Campus Center expansion. "With this center, we'll be able to serve businesses in the area much better."

A few moments later, McDowell and other college officials ushered in the much-anticipated new era with a turn of the shovel.

More than 120 college and community dignitaries attended the groundbreaking ceremony and open house to check out what the future holds after the 55,000-square-foot addition to the Waterman building is completed. The addition, to be known as the VistaTech Center, will house an expanded culinary arts program and information technology facility.

"We're calling it the VistaTech Center, meaning vision, talent and technology," said McDowell, standing from a podium on property that will, sometime in 2002, be part of the technology center.

McDowell said about half of the projected $26.7 million project will be funded by the state of Michigan, with the rest to be paid through a combination of college money, donations, pledges, and possibly federal funds.

Paul Welday, chief of staff for U.S. Rep. Joseph Knollenberg, told those at the groundbreaking ceremony that Knollenberg "has put this project at number one on the list of federal projects to partner up on."

Watching proceedings from the sidelines was Conway Jeffress, who as of July 1 will assume the college presidency from McDowell.

A new era: Schoolcraft College's President Richard McDowell shows an artist's rendering of the new Waterman Center Expansion Wednesday evening at the Livonia campus during a ground-breaking ceremony.

"This will be a major contribution to this community, a whole new way of interacting with businesses," Jeffress said. "And this will (enable) a new thrust for our culinary arts service. We will do things like food distribution, food research and nutrition, which we don't do now."

Shirley Dixon, a research assistant at Schoolcraft's learning assistance center, said she is looking forward to when the VistaTech Center — to be constructed off of the west side of the Waterman facility — is up and running.

"We've always considered ourselves on the cutting edge of technology," Dixon said. "And this will make it even more apparent."

Bruce Konowalow, director of culinary arts at Schoolcraft, said the new facility will help expand the scope of the culinary arts program through teleconferences and distance learning between chefs and students.

"We can have conferences with a restaurant staff or a business, which may be limited in what they can do in staff training," Konowalow said. "They don't have to leave or fly. They can learn from us, or vice versa, right from their own kitchens."

Konowalow hopes the expansion brings the culinary program national recognition.

"(The expansion) takes a program we have that is known locally and throughout the state, and gives us an opportunity to go everywhere," Konowalow said. "Our chefs have contacts. Right now, Chef Jeff Gabriel is in Thailand, so eventually we hope we can do multicultural cross training. It brings a whole new dimension to their training."

While that allows Schoolcraft with the possibility to add 25 percent more students to the program, Konowalow believes that is not the ultimate intention.

"We're not trying to be the biggest, just the best. That new facility will be a statement."

Staff Writer Ken Abramczyk contributed to this story.

Police reveal notebook led to 'hit list' investigation

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

Plymouth police say two drawings in a notebook led them to take seriously "implied threats" by an East Middle School 8th grader against six of her classmates.

School district officials say the girl has been suspended "until professional review and psychological treatment is complete." She could eventually be expelled.

"There were two drawings which depicted acts of violence that we interpreted as threats to the other students, whose names were printed in the notebook," said Acting Plymouth Police Chief Wayne Carroll. Carroll said one of the drawings was of a gun, while the other was of someone being shot.

Carroll said that during an interview with the girl and her parents, the student admitted she "went over the edge" in venting her frustrations with fellow students, who apparently teased her.

Carroll said the notebook was taken from the girl by another student, who found the drawings and names of the six students. Before that student turned the notebook over to assistant principal Jerry Sullivan, the girl went to her counselor to tell what was written and drawn in the notebook. Sullivan called police and the girl was suspended from school pending charges and counseling.

Carroll said he will interview the six students before handing his case over to the Wayne County prosecutor juvenile division to assess whether charges will be filed. Carroll also noted school officials are interviewing the six teens to determine circumstances leading to the case.

Carroll noted that during one-hour interview, the girl and her parents were "very cooperative." He also said the family "voluntarily handed over two weapons, a handgun and a BB gun that were locked in a safe, until determination of the case."

He reported the outcome of citizen complaints has been affected by having videotaped evidence of officer activities. Complaints of inappropriate officer behavior, racial profiling in particular, have been dramatically reduced in the six cars outfitted with cameras.

Santomauro said the cameras are the single most effective means of decreasing citizen complaints and pursuit liability against officers. The majority of citizen complaints involve traffic stops.

Public service

The cameras protect the public as well, because officers know they're being taped. Santomauro said the cameras increase officer professionalism, and the tapes can be used as training tools.

Trustees asked Santomauro if citizens will be automatically informed they're being taped.

He said as a rule, they will not be told unless the officer determines the disclosure could diffuse a confrontation or improve the encounter.

"Sometimes you just want people to keep on talking and that's OK," he said.

The cameras, tapes, microphones and batteries will cost $93,000. Canton will receive a $22,500 grant from the Michigan Municipal Risk Management Authority to reimburse the township for part of the costs.

on its financial picture.

"The board can get through some budget priorities and really understand where we're at financially," said Watts. "We've now got a fixed cost, meaning we know what it's going to cost us, which will help us in the budget process."

MLK Day

The extension also includes teachers receiving diversity and sensitivity training on Martin Luther King day, with students off the entire day.

In the total picture, if the money is going to be tight, Wysocki said the district will have to take care of its main resource to get it through.

"We have to ensure we keep a high quality group of employees working in the district. The quality of education depends on those people who work with the kids day in and day out. We have to make sure they are quality people."

As for the threat of charter schools, Wysocki believes the rules governing them will change.

"The charters are still trying to come into their own. In my opinion, there's going to be more calls for regulating them like the public schools."

Wysocki believes Superintendent Kathleen Booher has assembled a qualified administrative team that should be able to work well with the school board.

"That relationship will go a long way to help the district

Portelli said his membership has a long laundry list of benefits they want in the next contract.

"The next round of bargaining will be difficult as we try to address everyone's needs," he said.

meet the challenges. I've worked with the past superintendent (Chuck Little), and I prefer the interactions with the current administration."

While the challenges are expected to be tough, Wysocki said it all comes down to the district's main focus.

"We need to make sure students get the education they need and are entitled to. If you deal with student concerns, the other issues will become less important and better solved."

Canton college student presents study

Albion College student Daniel B. Holland culminated three years of study by making a poster presentation of original research titled "A Do-it-yourself Molecular Beam Spectrometer (Some Assembly Required)" during the College's 12th annual Elkin R. Isaac Research Symposium held earlier this month.

Holland was one of more than 80 Albion students chosen by faculty members to participate in the symposium, which featured research in the sciences, humanities and arts.

The research symposium gives exceptional students a chance to share original research which is often used in writing honors theses for graduation. It is named for Elkin Isaac, a Kalamazoo resident and 1948 graduate of Albion College, who taught at Albion from 1952 to 1975.

Former students of Isaac's created an endowed lectureship in his name in 1991, and the endowment has been expanded to the annual student research symposium.

Holland is a junior majoring in chemistry and physics.

He is the son of Brian Holland and Carol Holland of Canton and a graduate of Plymouth-Canton High School.

Albion College, acclaimed as the seventh-Most Wired College in America (Yahoo! Internet Life), specializes in innovative and interdisciplinary programs in the liberal arts tradition.

ADVANCEMENTS IN FOOT CARE
- presented by -

PREVENT ATHLETE'S FOOT

Anyone can suffer from athlete's foot. It's a fungal infection that thrives in a warm, moist and dark environment. Shoes present an excellent environment for fungal infections to grow. The best prevention is to create a shoe climate least suitable for their growth:

- Choose a shoe made of a natural material that allows the foot to breathe.
- Apply absorbing cornstarch to your shoes before and after wearing them.
- Don't wear the same shoes on consecutive days.
- Clean your feet thoroughly at least twice a day.
- Change your socks at least twice a day.

If you are prone to athlete's foot or other fungal infections, see your podiatrists. Fungus can cause severe nail infections, but new medications are available by prescription for this condition.

Pundit sees 'Godzilla, King Kong' political showdown

STAFF WRITER
pmurphy@oe.homecomm.net

Michigan politics in 2002 will be wide open because of two factors never experienced simultaneously in state history, according to the editor of Inside Michigan Politics.

The effects of term limits and redistricting will be like "Godzilla meets King Kong," said political pundit Bill Ballenger, the main speaker at a luncheon hosted by the Birmingham Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce May 8 at the Townsend Hotel.

The luncheon was the fourth and final in a series looking at likely trends. Others focused on the economy, real estate prospects and technology.

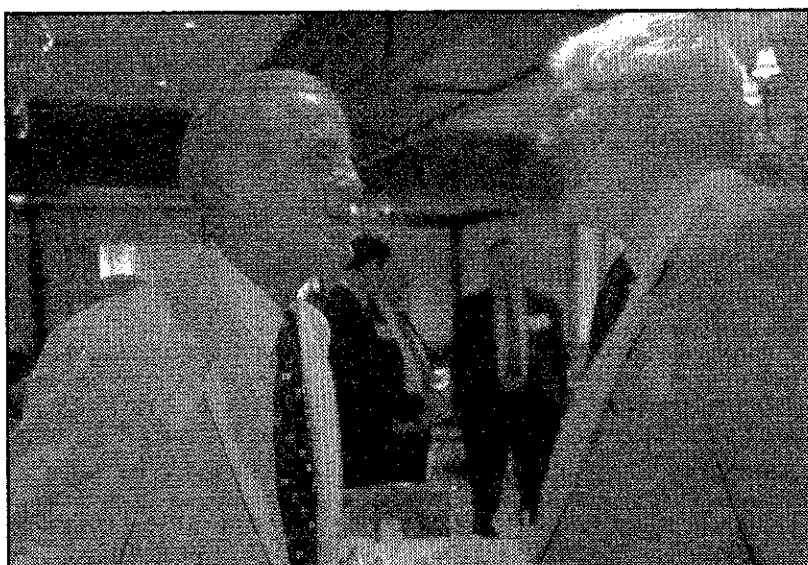

"We've never had an election — as we will in 2002 — when so many incumbents (71 percent of the State Senate and 23 percent of the State House of Representatives) will be jettisoned from office," said Ballenger, whose Lansing-based biweekly newsletter is considered informed and knowledgeable.

About 100 people attended the luncheon.

Ballenger's look at the year 2002 was that of a political insider. He likened the months leading into next year's elections to a "phony war," like the one that existed in 1939 after Germany invaded Poland.

European nations were in a state of declared war following that invasion, he said, but no battles were waged and no shots were fired. The actual shooting war didn't begin until months later when Germany invaded France.

Michigan is in a state of phony political war, Ballenger said, because of the uncertainty of redistricting — when would-be candidates do not know the boundaries of the districts in which they would be running.

Potential candidates are speculating about running, he said. But until redistricting is completed later this year, nobody will declare. No political battles will be waged, no election shots will be fired until redistricting is finished and undergoes any court challenge.

"Nobody knows who will run until then," said Ballenger.

Republicans will have a decided edge in redistricting, said Ballenger, because in many cases the GOP controls the committees established to draw the new political boundaries. Furthermore, Republicans control the Michigan Supreme Court which would rule on any legal challenge brought by Democrats, according to Ballenger.

Redistricting will not impact the races for U.S. Senate, governor, attorney general or secretary of state. But it will affect virtually every other election, Ballenger said, including the U.S. House of Representatives.

Redistricting gives rise to some interesting possibilities, said Ballenger — such as new districts combining southwest Oakland County and western Wayne County. In those gerrymandered districts, he said, incumbent Democrats could be forced to run against each other.

Ballenger could envision, for example, a new Congressional district combining northern Oakland County with parts of the thumb area — raising the possibility of incumbent Democrats Dale E. Kildee of Flint and James Barcia of Bay City running against each other.

Another new district under consideration, Ballenger said, might combine parts of Wayne County with sections of Washtenaw County — raising the possibility of a race between Democrats, John D. Dingell of Dearborn and Lynn Rivers of Ann Arbor.

To negate the advantage Republicans have in redistricting, Democrats must have strong candidates at the top of the ticket, said Ballenger. The Democratic nominee for governor, for example, would have to win by 10 or 12 percent for Democrats to offset the GOP advantage, he said.

Fortunately for Democrats, said Ballenger, Carl Levin will be the party's candidate for U.S. Senate. In a year of great uncertainty, Levin's re-election is the closest race looking like a sure thing, he said.

Republicans have been searching for a legitimate candidate to run against incumbent Levin, said Ballenger. But for lack of candidates with greater stature, the GOP may nominate Dan Pero, he said, referring to the Gov. Engler's former chief of staff.

During the question and answer period, Ballenger touched on a variety of topics, including:

■ Election reform. Despite the controversy following last November's presidential race, meaningful election reform won't happen, said Ballenger. The main reason, he said, is that elections in Michigan are conducted by townships, cities and villages, each of which has its own system — using voting machines, punch cards or scanners.

Without a common voting system, election reform is not likely to happen, Ballenger insisted.

■ The Detroit mayoral race. Detroit City Councilman Gil Hill and State Rep. Kwame Kilpatrick appear to be the early favorites, said Ballenger. But with a crowded field of candidates, the key will be getting through the primary election, he said.

"It's unlikely that (Southfield attorney) Geoffrey Fieger will moved into Detroit to run for mayor," said Ballenger,

"although many of you may wish he would."

■ Term limits. Term limits will not be abolished or modified in the near future, Ballenger said, because to many people, they appear to be working. Term limits will not be modified, he predicted, until there is a major legislative mistake — "something big," he said — to arouse public sentiment.

■ Pistol permits. Michigan's new law easing restrictions for obtaining permits to carry handguns is still in the courts, said Ballenger. Any state wide referendum will have to wait until the courts rule, he said.

That referendum may be held 2002, he said. But it may not be held until later, he theorized, after the law has taken effect. By then, gun advocates hope voters will see that easing gun permit restrictions will not have such dire consequences.

Group holds campaign school

Running an effective political campaign will be the focus of an upcoming education session sponsored by the Michigan Credit Union League (MCUL) in partnership with the Credit Union National Association (CUNA).

"Building Political Capital for the Future," slated for 10 a.m., Thursday, June 14, at the Michigan Credit Union Center in Northville Township, is designed for prospective political candidates, would-be candidates, and keen spectators of politics in general. It is open to the public.

"The campaign school will help people learn more about the process and evaluate the political environment to determine their best chance of success," said MCUL Grassroots Coordinator Todd Stabenow.

The session will focus on planning, budgeting, fund-raising, targeting voters, tailoring a message and developing a media plan. Participants will take a virtual tour through a campaign, learning prudent tips to running a successful race for any office — from local school board to the state legislature.

Sen. Debbie Stabenow, D-Michigan, is among the featured speakers, kicking off the school with opening remarks. John Truscott, former director of communications for Gov. John Engler and, Jeff Butzke, named one of the "Top Political Action Leaders in America" by Campaigns and Elections Magazine, are also slated.

Freeway repair work 'jump starts' this weekend

BY MATT JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER
mjachman@oe.homecomm.net

If regular travelers on Livonia's freeways haven't yet felt the effects of a massive construction effort, starting Saturday (yesterday), they will.

That's when crews are scheduled to start rerouting traffic and shutting down lanes for the $51 million project involving I-96, M-14 and I-275 in western Wayne County, according to the Michigan Department of Transportation.

The work includes rebuilding the east-west freeway, in both directions, between and Newburgh and Haggerty roads and resurfacing it between Newburgh and Telegraph. Work, ranging from minimal structural repairs to deck replacement, will also be done on about 50 bridges over the freeway.

I-96, M-14, I-275: Lanes, many ramps will close for work

On Saturday - if this week's rains don't cause delays - westbound traffic between Newburgh and Haggerty will be rerouted to two lanes on the eastbound side, said Rob Morosi, an MDOT spokesman. Between Telegraph and Newburgh, in both directions, lanes will be closed, he said.

In early July, the traffic shift between Newburgh and Haggerty will be reversed, with eastbound traffic rerouted to two lanes on the westbound side, he said.

The lane closures between Telegraph and Newburgh will continue until October, Morosi said. During peak hours, weekdays between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m., traffic will be maintained on two lanes in each direction. During weekends and overnight hours, traffic could be reduced to one lane in each direction.

The plan is to open all lanes between Newburgh and Telegraph for the Memorial Day weekend, Morosi said, but that is not guaranteed.

Bridge work will be done at the same time as the pavement work, Morosi said. The entire project should be wrapped up by late October.

In addition to the lane restrictions, the work will require five ramp closures, also scheduled to start Saturday, MDOT said:

■ The Newburgh entrance to westbound I-96 will be closed until October.

■ The ramp from westbound I-96 to northbound I-275 will be closed until at least late June.

■ The southbound I-275 ramp to eastbound I-96 will be closed until early August.

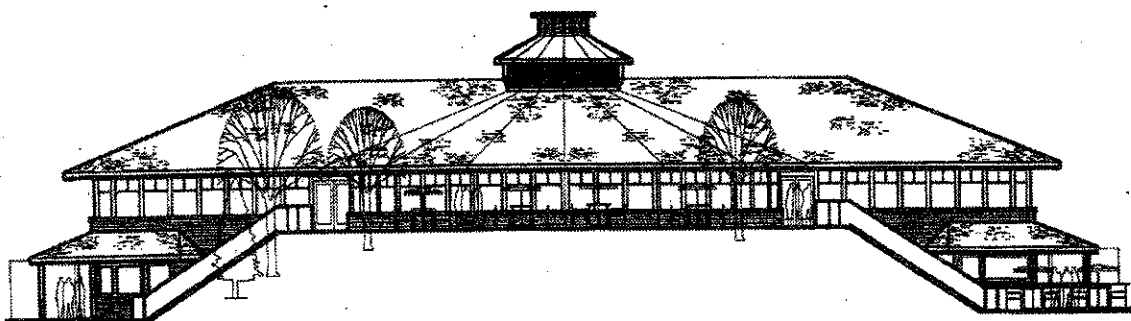

■ The ramp from westbound I-96 to southbound I-275 will close until at least late June.

■ The northbound I-275 ramp to westbound M-14 will close until early August.

In one piece of good news, the ramp from eastbound M-14 to northbound I-725 could be opened as early as today or Friday, Morosi said.

Construction updates are available through MDOT's toll-free hot line, (800) 641-MDOT or 641-6368.

Seatbelt crackdown

In conjunction with the Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning, the Canton Police Department is participating in the "Click or Ticket/Operation America Buckles up Children" campaign this week.

Officers from every state will take part in the campaign, which aims to save lives of both adults and children. In Canton, police officers will take a zero-tolerance approach with regard to the state's seatbelt and children's restraint laws, said Capt.

Laura Golles.

"We want to strongly encourage people to use their seatbelts and child restraints," she added. "This is a very worthwhile initiative."

According to state law, each driver and front seat passenger of a motor vehicle operated on a street or highway must wear a properly adjusted and fastened safety belt. Children age 4 and under are required to be placed in a properly adjusted restraint system.

Violation of the laws is a civil infraction. Fines of up to $40 for seatbelt and $100 for children's restraint violations are possible.

Ice spectacular

The City of Plymouth Recreation Department runs its annual Ice Show Spectacular at 3 p.m. Sunday. Tickets for the event are $5 for adults, $3 for children under 12 and senior citizens.

The Ice Show Spectacular features more than 120 youth and teen skaters from the area in this year's show, themed Broadway Review. It will feature music from West Side Story, Oklahoma, Annie and others.

The recreation department has held the annual ice show since 1972.

Book signing

Dr. David Janda, who has offices in Plymouth, signed copies of his book, "Awakening of a Surgeon," Saturday, at the Little Book Shoppe on the Park.

CANTON CONNECTION

Janda's book details his struggle to heighten awareness about sports injuries.

Patterson/vote reform

State Rep. Bruce Patterson (R-Canton) this week welcomed Secretary of State Candice Miller to the House Elections and Redistricting Committee.

Miller presented a plan for statewide voting reform that focused on two principle ideas: a uniform voting system and allowing voting to begin up to 14 days before an election.

"Our committee has been very deliberate in proceeding with election reform," said Patterson, R-Canton. "We have taken testimony from a broad spectrum of witnesses over the course of the last five months. We have heard from both the chair of the Democratic Party and the Republican Secretary of State as well as scores of individuals expressing their views. Elections officials and clerks from across the state have told the committee what they like and what they would like changed. Now the committee will move specific bills to ensure that Michigan's system of elections remains on the cutting edge and never reaches a crisis condition."

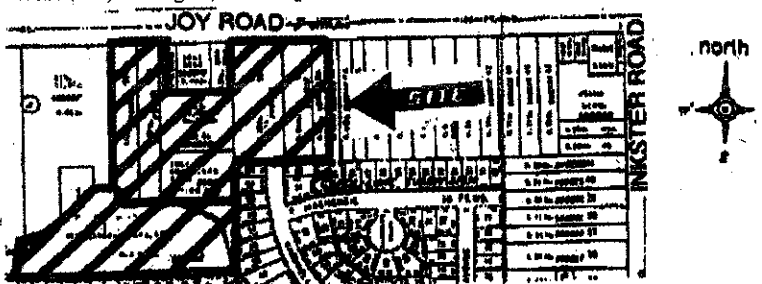

"I am confident the ideas that Secretary Miller proposed take into consideration the current fiscal situation as well as the need to maintain integrity within the voting process."

Students study Rouge tributary

Nearly 5,000 high school students and teachers walk across it every day at Plymouth-Canton Education Park, paying very little attention to the dirty looking waterway, except maybe to throw something in it.

However, last Wednesday nearly 100 Canton and Salem high school students participated in testing and studying Willow Creek, the Rouge River tributary that runs through campus. "It's the first time in a long while since we participated in the Rouge Education Project," said Bob Williams, ecology and environmental science teacher. "It's monitoring day for all the tributaries of the Rouge River, looking at how it impacts our campus every day."

With the help of a $1,000 grant from the Plymouth Rotary Club Foundation, students performed water quality tests and took physical inventory of the stream, finding crayfish, worms and small fish, among other living organisms.

"I'm disappointed that we're not finding sensitive species. It would mean we're not as polluted as we thought," said Williams. "What we're finding are moderately sensitive species and pollution tolerant species."

For teachers and students the exercise is real science, turning the outdoors into a classroom.

"For me to stand in front of students and tell them about the creek is not as real as them finding it out through real science," added Williams.

Students, wearing waders and armed with fishing nets and old containers, converged on Willow Creek in day-long testing.

"We're finding all sorts of different species in the water," said Barry Flavin, a senior from Plymouth Township. "We spent a lot of time in class identifying bugs we already know are in the creek, and those we hope to find. You never realize what's in the creek by just walking over it every day."

"The stream isn't healthy," added Ahmer Semna, a senior from Canton Township. "The phosphate levels are too high. I didn't think it was that bad. We need to stop students from throwing things in the creek."

Educators are hoping students will begin to notice their surroundings, and how it affects them.

"We're trying to motivate students to get interested in the environment around them," said Denise Zarate, one of the teachers who participated with students.

"Students walk across this bridge every day, and many have no idea about the dozens of living things in the creek as they cross it," said Bill Zolkowski, assistant high school principal for science. "Maybe they'll think the next time they decide to throw a candy wrapper into the water."

Rising prices at the pump spur interest in Lansing

HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Rising prices at the gas pump, now getting close to $2 per gallon, have spurred the interest of state lawmakers.

Calls for action in response to the increasing prices have come from both sides of the political aisle in Lansing.

Oakland County lawmakers drafted a letter to Attorney General Jennifer Granholm, asking her to investigate the possibility of "unfair pricing practices" in gasoline sales.

A Senate Democratic Task Force on Gasoline Prices has come up with a long list of proposals aimed at curbing prices.

Along with giving the attorney general more power to examine price gouging, Democrats called for "holiday free" weekends, where gas taxes would be suspended for a holiday weekend to encourage tourism. They also proposed development of a Department of Treasury database to monitor fuel prices statewide.

Rep. Bob Gosselin, R-Troy, has proposed legislation intended to cap the sales tax on gasoline at 12 cents per gallon, in case prices climb higher this summer.

The 6 percent sales taxes, already an addition to 19 cent per gallon fuel tax, would only be capped if prices go over $2, but as Gosselin noted, if the price climbs to $2.50 per gallon, it would save 60 cents on a 20-gallon fill up.

Gouging concern

Oakland lawmakers, in their letter to Granholm, said there is concern about gouging because there seems to be little reason for the price increases.

"Citizens are suspicious because retail prices here have risen sharply in recent weeks at the same time that world oil prices have been steady or falling slightly. As we learned last summer when a broken pipeline and refinery problems caused a temporary price spike, there are other factors which also affect prices. Yet none of these factors seems to be present in this current price increase. This is what is causing citizens to ask questions. (We) believe that free markets, unrestrained by excessive government interference, are the best way to ensure that citizens have access to adequate supplies of reasonably priced products, including critical commodities like oil. Yet for people to enjoy these benefits, it is necessary that markets be truly free," the letter stated.

Senate Democrats reached their conclusions after eleven months of hearings and testimony from citizens, as well as economists and experts in the oil industry.

Sen. Dianne Byrum, D-Onondaga, and George Hart, D-Dearborn, were on the panel.

Democrats, led by Sen. Burton Leland, D-Detroit, called for an increase in the country's oil refinery capacity and called on the Michigan Economic Development Corporation to restore holding supplies in the state.

Holiday free

Along with the "holiday free" weekend and statewide database, they called for tax credits for drivers who buy alternatives fuels and an increase in public transportation.

"During the last couple of years, major oil companies are pulling down record profits," said Leland. "Exxon-Mobil alone reports first quarter profits in excess of $5 billion. Why haven't oil companies used a portion of their windfall to produce more reformulated gas or build additional refineries in the Midwest?"

"We realize that one independent action will not curb high prices at the pump," Hart said "but with threats of prices around $3 per gallon this summer, we must take action on several of these measures now in order to provide immediate relief."

AAA has gas watchers guide

To help ease the "pain at the pumps," AAA Michigan rereleased a set of fuel-conservation instructions for motorists seeking to save fuel.

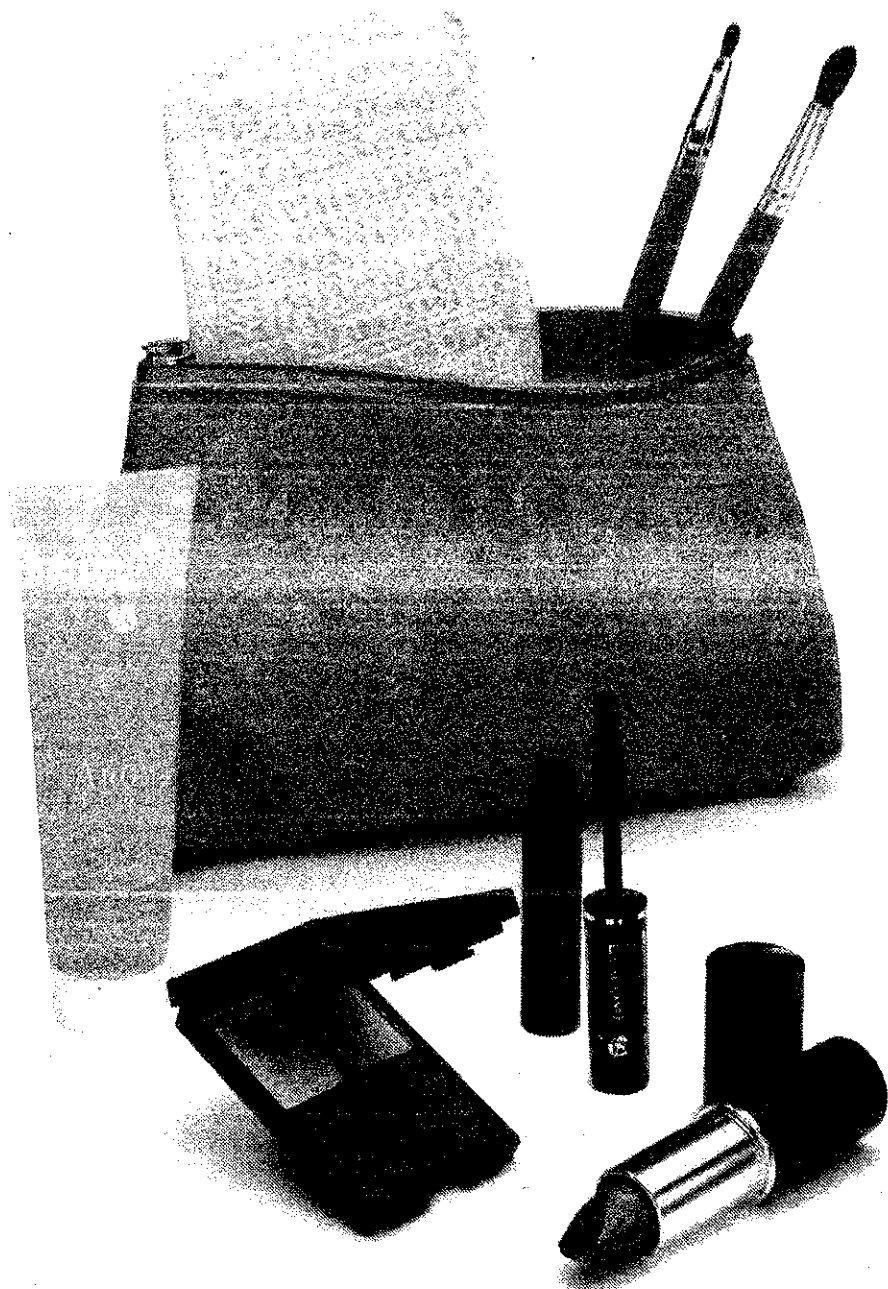

AAA's energy conservation guidelines, contained in the booklet "AAA Gas Watcher's Guide" are available from AAA Michigan and in abbreviated form online at www.aaamich.com. AAA recognizes the steep increase in gasoline prices brought on by tight supplies has created a hardship on millions of American motorists.

The guide is a 12-page brochure that covers a variety of ways motorists can save fuel and money, while driving safely and protecting the environment.

For a free copy of the "Gas Watcher's Guide," stop by your local AAA Michigan office or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Public Relations, AAA Michigan, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, MI 48126.

Like the Dow Jones, this was merely a momentary slip.

The recovery followed quickly for Plymouth Canton's baseball team, which suffered its first loss by shutout in "about three years," according to Chiefs' coach Scott Dickey last Wednesday at Westland John Glenn.

Canton responded by blasting Northville 7-3 Friday at Northville. The Chiefs improve to 12-9 overall, 5-4 in the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division.

"We had scored 41 runs in the three previous games," noted Dickey. "Their pitcher did a nice job. And Matt Staley pitched a great game."

So did Nick Musselman in Friday's win at Northville, except that Musselman — whose record is now 1-1 — did more than pitch. He slugged a three-run home run in the second inning, then doubled in Oliver Wolcott, who had singled, in the third.

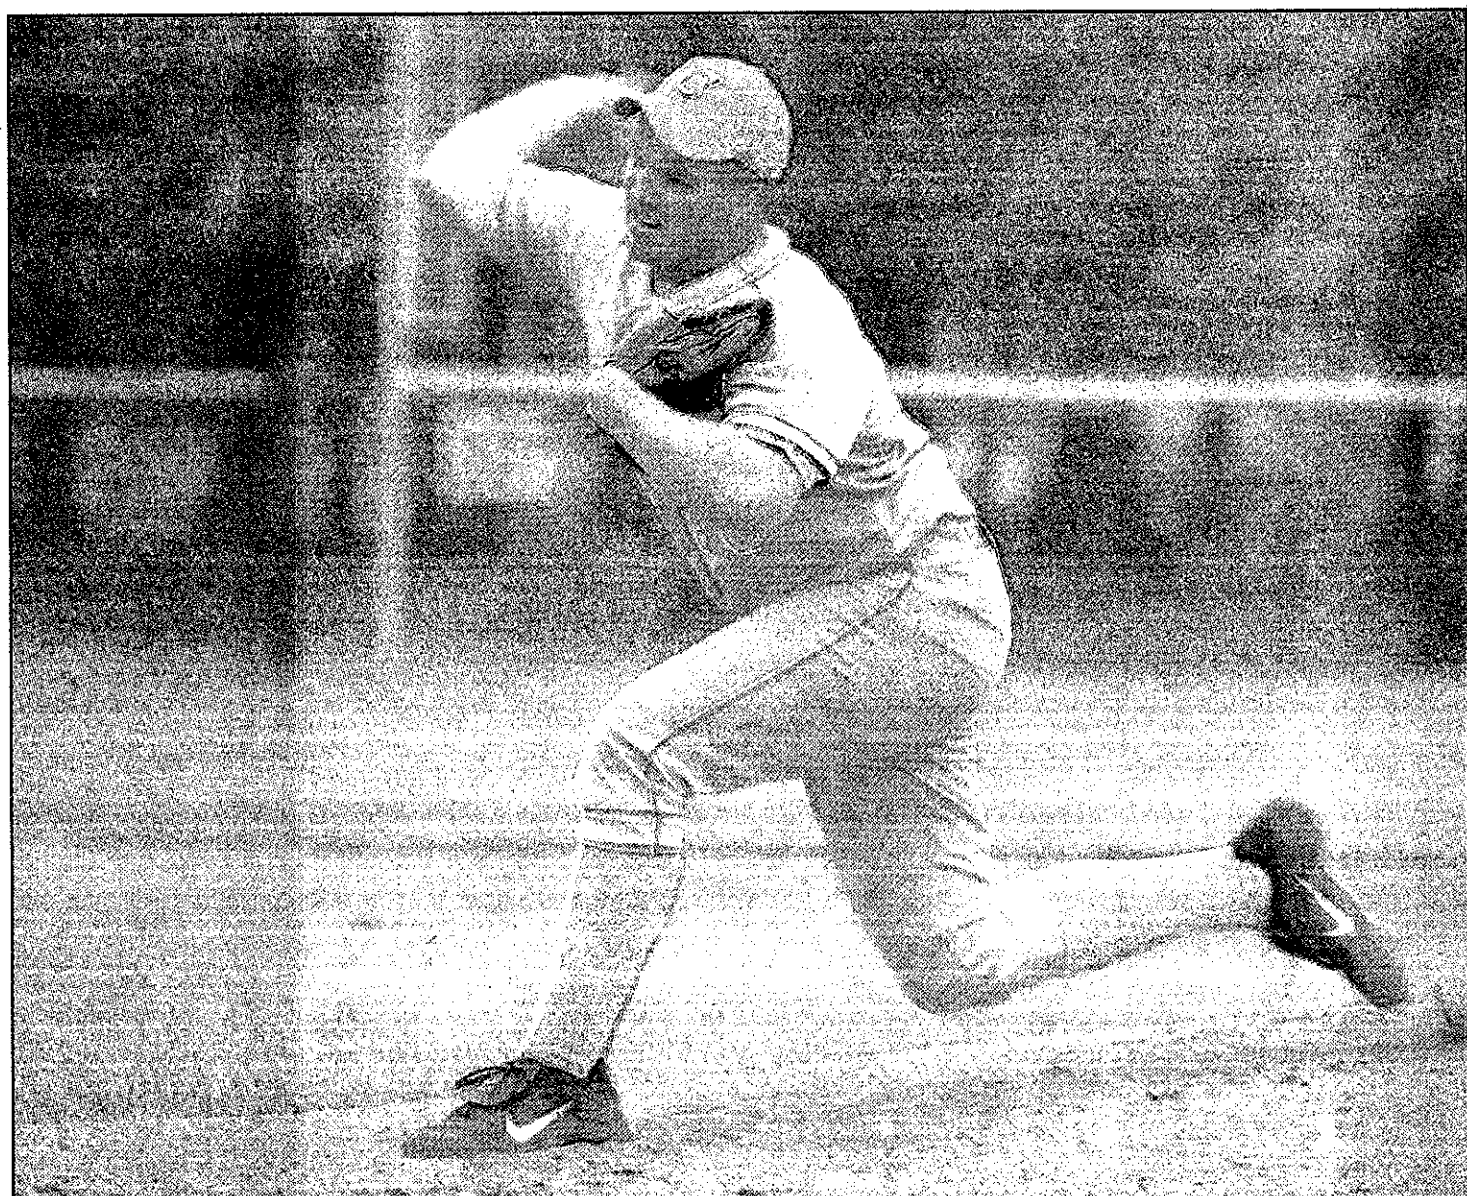

Musselman allowed three earned runs on seven hits and one walk, striking out two, in seven innings. At the plate, he finished 2-for-3 with four runs batted in.

The Chiefs put the game on ice by adding three more runs to their total in the seventh. A walk to Jay Sofen, followed by Brent Kwiatkowski's bunt single, set the table for Russ Caid. He singled in one run; Wolcott's fielder's choice and Mark Hanson's sacrifice fly scored the next two.

Wolcott finished with two hits, including a double, two stolen bases and an RBI. Kwiatkowski also had two hits and Caid had a single and an RBI.

CC downs Eagles; Catholic title game next

Next up for Redford Catholic Central, another peek at John Picco.

CC played its way into the Catholic League A-B Division championship game at 12:30 p.m. on Thursday and will play Windsor (Ont.) Villanova in the title game.

Villanova will almost certainly pitch Picco, a left-hander who should get drafted by some pro baseball team somewhere in the first 10 rounds of next month's major league draft.

BASEBALL

Picco is 1-1 lifetime against the Shamrocks, having lost to them two years ago in the finals at Tiger Stadium and owning a victory over them in a tournament last year.

CC (19-6) scored twice in the bottom of the seventh Wednesday to defeat Orchard Lake St. Mary's, 3-2, and advance to the championship game.

Jake Viane and Anthony Coratti led off the inning with walks. J. T. Haelterman sacrificed but the throw to first went into right field and the Shamrocks wound up with runners on second and third and a tie score.

Blazers reach league final

Five runs in the first two innings Wednesday propelled Livonia Ladywood's softball team into Monday's Catholic League championship game.

The Blazers added another run in the fourth to build a 6-0 lead before host Harper Woods Notre Dame (21-10) scored three times in the bottom half of that inning — which was too little, too late, as Ladywood collected a 6-3 victory Wednesday in this Catholic League semifinal.

The Blazers take a 19-9 overall record into Monday's 7:30 p.m. final opposite Farmington Hills Mercy (25-6) at Dearborn's King Boring Field.

Shawn Fallon got the pitching win for Ladywood, allowing three runs on seven hits and three walks, striking out four.

Meghan Wilkinson provided key plays at the plate and in the field. Wilkinson had a single and slugged a two-run home run in the second inning. She also threw a runner out at first base from the outfield in the fifth inning to snuff out a potential Notre Dame rally.

Ann Marie Starasinich added a triple for the Blazers.

Last Monday, a three-run rally in the bottom of the seventh carried Ladywood to a 4-3 triumph over Dearborn Divine Child in a league quarterfinal played at Ladywood.

The Blazers were hitless until the sixth, when they scored one run. Wilkinson had two of her team's five hits, including a game-winning, two-run double with one out in the seventh.

Shelly Moros got the pitching win in relief, allowing one run on two hits in three innings, with one strikeout.

Franklin 6, Salem 5: A two-run rally in the bottom of the seventh enabled Livonia Franklin to wipe out a Plymouth Salem comeback Wednesday.

Nikki Zabkiewicz, who entered the game when starter Jenny Linn took a shot off the knee in the third, quelled the Salem rally at five runs in the top of the seventh and her teammates took it from there.

The Patriots carried a 4-0 lead into the seventh but Salem scored five times to take a 5-4 lead that lasted only as long as it took the Patriots to bat in the bottom of the inning.

Linn gave up one hit, struck out one and walked two before a liner off her knee struck by Kelly Jaskot forced her off the mound.

Zabkiewicz gave up seven hits over the last 4 1/3, striking out five and walking one.

Kristen Miller took the loss for Plymouth Salem (15-10). The game was played at Emerson Middle school.

Stephanie Smith had two hits and an RBI for Franklin while Zabkiewicz had three hits. Jenie D'Annunzio had an RBI.

For the Rocks, Amy Szawara had a two-run double while Mandy Bradley and Dawn Allen had two hits each.

Offense is major goal for Whalers

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

Offense was the main criteria for the Plymouth Whalers in the Ontario Hockey League's Priority Selection draft.

The Whalers first three picks were all centers. Their first choice, 19th overall, was John Mitchell, a 6-foot-1, 160-pound left-shooting 16-year-old who played for the Waterloo (Ont.) Junior B team last season.

Mitchell had 15 goals and 29 assists for 44 points last season for Waterloo. Scouts had him rated in their top 10 overall, with a game compared to current Whaler standout Stephen Weiss (who is projected as a top-five pick in the NHL Draft this summer).

"With the possibility of us losing some scorers next year, including Stephen, we felt we needed to pick up some players to help fill in those holes," said Whaler assistant coach Steve Spott.

"Mitchell is a player very similar to Weiss. He can score goals and sees the ice really well. We feel he can be a playmaker in this league and has some good years ahead of him in the OHL."

The Whalers had no second-round pick, but in the third round selected two more centers: Tim Sestito, a 5-11, 165-pounder who played for Syracuse (N.Y.) Junior.

Madonna seeks to fill voids

BY BRAD EMONS
SPORTS WRITER
bemonsoe@homecomm.net

Madonna University women's volleyball coach Jerry Abraham must reload for the 2001 season after losing three key players to graduation.

The Lady Crusaders, 40-8 a year ago and qualifier for the NAIA National Tournament, will certainly miss 5-foot-11 All-America Brandy Malewski, 5-8 Erin Cunningham and 6-1 Kelly Artymovich.

The three who hope to fill the void are three new recruits: 5-10 outside hitter Nicole Boyd, a transfer from Schoolcraft College; 5-8 outside hitter Laren Bann, a transfer from Western Michigan University; and Laura Lesko, a 5-10 middle and outside hitter from Wyandotte Roosevelt High School.

"I'm happy with all three and they should complement the kids we already have," said Abraham, who hopes to sign one more player before the fall. "I think all three are good additions."

Boyd played two seasons under coach Tom Teeters at Schoolcraft after a sterling high school career at Livonia Franklin.

"We're getting an experienced player in Nicole who has already played two years at Schoolcraft," Abraham said. "She's a very good attacker and will lend experience to our lineup on the outside."

"She hits the ball hard and can be a terminating-type outside hitter."

Bann was an All-Stater at Dearborn High, but did not play last year while attending WMU. She was an All-Region and All-State honorable mention selection coming out of high school.

"I was very interested in Laura as a senior because she possesses all-around skills," Abraham said. "I also saw her in club volleyball. She's feisty and she's a competitor. She's a smart, aggressive-type of player. She plays hard and is a good passer. She also has a good vertical jump."

Lesko, a three-sport standout in volleyball, softball and basketball at Wyandotte, is capable of playing a pair of positions.

She was recently selected the Downriver News-Herald's Athlete of the Year.

"Laura is talented, she has the ability to contribute right away as a freshman," said Abraham, who guided MU last fall to the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference and Region championships. "She's coming to us now as a middle hitter, but she can also swing to the outside because she hits hard."

Shamrocks dominate regional Redford Catholic Central coach Philip Eagleson thought his team would do well at the Division I regional Friday at Woodhaven.

"But I didn't know we'd win every flight," said Eagleson as his team grabbed 32 points to win the regional. "It was a long day with a rain delay of about three hours. But we got the tennis in and got the job done."

CC, the defending state runner-up, outdistanced runner-up Trenton (20) and third-place Fordson (15) for the win. The

TENNIS

Shamrocks will play in the finals on June 1-2 in Midland.

All eight flights won in two sets or less — as Mark Pleszar and David Atallah won by default at No. 1 doubles.

Mike Findling beat Jens Koller of Taylor Kennedy at No. 1 singles, 6-2, 6-0; Jason Bedouin stopped Carl Coffee of Woodhaven at No. 2, 6-1, 6-2; defending state champion Bill Walsh beat Brian Richardson of Trenton at No. 3, 6-1, 6-0 and Mike Wagner won at No. 4 with a 6-1, 6-2 defeat of Trenton's Art Switzer.

In doubles, Matt Row and Steve Doot won at No. 2 with a 6-2, 6-1 win over Tony Ventura and Mo Saad of Fordson. Eric Tomkowicz and Paul Swetaj beat Abe Karaali and Waleed Jammal of Fordson, 6-3, 6-1; and Ian McHenry and Nick Gonzalez beat Trenton's Scott Nadzam and Alex Switzer of Trenton, 6-1, 6-4.

Joe Cichowski started the Rocket rally with a walk. After stealing second, Cichowski scored on Ricky Verville's base hit — Glenn's first hit of the game. Brandon Ajlouny followed with his team's second hit, putting runners on first and third.

A passed ball worked against the Rockets when Verville was thrown out at the plate, leaving a runner at second. Dave Mijal walked and Josh Day delivered an RBI single.

Canton's best scoring opportunity came in the third inning, with one-out singles by Nick Musselman and Joe Kondrtek. But Jay Sofen grounded into a force out and Brian Rossow struck out to end the threat.

With their 4-3 win over North Farmington Friday, the Rockets were 16-9 overall.

Salem 8, W.L. Central 4: Plymouth Salem battled back from a 4-2 deficit by scoring four runs in the bottom of the fifth, then added two more in the sixth to beat Walled Lake Central Friday.

Salem was the home team, but poor field conditions forced the game to be switched to Central.

"We played a lot better today," said Salem coach Dale Rumberger. "We've been giving up so many runs lately."

The Vikings broke a 2-2 tie with two runs in the top of the fifth, but in the bottom half of the frame Justin Barnett walked, stole second and scored on Chris Trott's single. Mike Thackaberry followed with a base hit, and a double-steal moved both runners up a base.

Chad Goethe then delivered a two-run single, giving the Rocks a 5-4 lead. After a ground out moved Goethe to second, Drew Styles brought him home with another single.

Goethe finished with two hits and three RBI. Trott had two hits, two runs scored and two RBI, and Barnett had two hits (including a double) and scored twice.

Thackaberry started and got the pitching win, allowing four runs in five innings. Chris Eichler relieved and worked the final two innings. Eric Kinderman took the loss for Central.

Franklin 9, Salem 8: Joe Ruggiero choked off a Rocks' rally in the seventh inning Wednesday to provide the Patriots with the victory.

Plymouth Salem was the home team, but due to poor field conditions the game was played at Franklin.

Ruggiero went the distance, giving up 12 hits and four walks but striking out five and pitching tough when he had to.

Chris Trott took the loss for visiting Plymouth Salem; he gave up five runs (two earned) on four hits and one walk, with five strikeouts in 3 2/3 innings. Neil Kowalik relieved, tossing 3 1/3 innings and surrendering three unearned runs on three hits and one walk, fanning two.

The Rocks committed five errors in the game.

Franklin scored four in the fourth to go up 5-3. Salem tied it on Justin Barnett's two-run homer in the bottom of the fourth, but Franklin scored two runs in each of the next two innings to pull away. Salem scored two in the seventh.

Ryan Tracy went 2-for-3 with a pair of stolen bases and three runs scored. Mike Bugnell was 2-for-3 with an RBI and Audy Kelley had an RBI double.

Barnett was 3-for-3 for Salem including a two-run home run. Trott, Chad Goethe and Tony Puzzuoli were each 2-for-4 with an RBI.

PCA 4, Oakland Christian 3: Clay Welton did double-duty Thursday at Auburn Hills Oakland Christian, singling in Ryan Johnson with what proved to be the game-winning run in the sixth inning, then holding off the Lancers to earn the pitching save.

Johnson had two hits and two RBI for the Eagles, who improved to 11-5 overall, 5-4 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference. Johnson singled in a run in PCA's two-run first, then singled in Brian Carnevale, who had doubled, with the game-tying run in the sixth.

Oakland Christian slipped to 8-3 overall, 3-2 in the MIAC.

Xander Younce earned the pitching win with two innings of relief.

Jimmy Mehlberg started and took the loss for the Lancers. His two-run homer in the bottom of the first had given his team a 3-2 lead.

A last season, was the 44th selection overall; Luke Dubbin, a 6-1, 190-pounder who played for the Midland Bantam team in Ontario, was the 45th overall choice.

Sestito collected 20 goals and 24 assists in 45 games with Syracuse. Dubbin had 35 goals and 46 assists in 16 regular-season games and five goals and four assists in three playoff games.

With no pick in the fourth round, the Whalers opted for defense with their two fifth-round choices.

The 84th-overall selection was 5-11, 175-pound Chris Robinson of the Detroit Honeybaked 85's; the 86th-overall selection was 5-10, 185-pound Steve Phillips, a physical player from White Lake who played for the Detroit Honeybaked Midget team last season.

Other Whaler draftees:

Seventh round (131st overall) — defenseman Ryan Suter, 6-1, 175 from Culver Academy; Eighth round (159th overall) — defenseman Sean Pennock, 6-0, 180 from Sudbury Lockerby Bantam; Ninth round (179th overall) — goalie Ryan Nie, 5-11, 150 from Brantford Bantam; 10th round (199th overall) — left wing Sean Thompson, 5-11, 165 from Orangeville Juniors B; 11th round (209th overall) — center John Vigilante, 5-9, 160 from Plymouth Compuware 85's Midget; 11th round (219th overall) — defenseman Jeff Harris, 6-2, 190 from Plymouth Compuware 85's; 12th round (229th overall) — right wing Adam Stein, 6-1, 190 from North York Canadians; 12th round (239th overall) — defenseman Scott Laderoute, 6-1, 160 from Ottawa Valley Bantam; 13th round (249th overall) — goalie Dan Miller, 5-9, 160 from Plymouth Compuware 85's; 15th round (299th overall) — center Adam Boyd, 5-10, 160 from Cambridge Bantam.

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

Passin' by: Birds ready for nesting

Several migrant species of birds are still on their way north to their nesting grounds. They will be passing through southeastern Michigan in mid May, and by the end of May they will be gone.

Summer in Canada is short so they cannot waste a lot of time getting to their breeding grounds. Some species pair en-route so when they arrive on the breeding grounds they can begin nest building.

Southeastern Michigan's nesting birds have arrived and are either starting to build nests, or they may be ready to fledge their first brood of young. I looked in on an Eastern bluebird's nest the other day and it looked like they were ready to leave in just a couple days.

Eastern bluebirds are one of the most colorful breeding birds in our area, but there are three others that are judged by many to be equally as beautiful. Baltimore orioles, scarlet tanagers and indigo buntings exhibit some of the most striking colors found in the bird world.

Last week while on a field trip to the University of Michigan-Dearborn's natural area with my class from Schoolcraft College, we had the pleasure of watching all three in one binocular field of view. It started when someone spotted a scarlet tanager.

As the name of this bird suggests, the male has a scarlet body with contrasting jet black wings. The diffused light of the morning allowed the color to beam even when under leaves of a tree.

Once in the field of view of the binoculars, the red and black stands out remarkably against the green of the vegetation. An additional treat was the appearance of two female scarlet tanagers.

Unlike the bright male, the female is a subtle, soft other color that camouflages her while she sits on eggs in the nest. After the breeding season, males molt their red feathers and acquire a plumage like the female.

After all, if bird watchers can see the bright red male, so can sharp-shinned and Cooper's hawks — so it better not be brightly colored unless it's necessary.

A male Baltimore oriole seemed to have been attracted to the activities of the tanagers. His bright orange with black accents complemented our view of the male tanager. He too was in the tree tops staking out a territory in which to attract a female.

There was no conflict between the two males because dissimilar species typically do not compete directly and are thus able to tolerate each other in their overlapping territories.

Either attracted by the activity or food that attracted the tanagers to the area in the first place, an indigo bunting showed up. The blue of indigo buntings is breath taking. But the feather structure that produces the blue color needs sunlight.

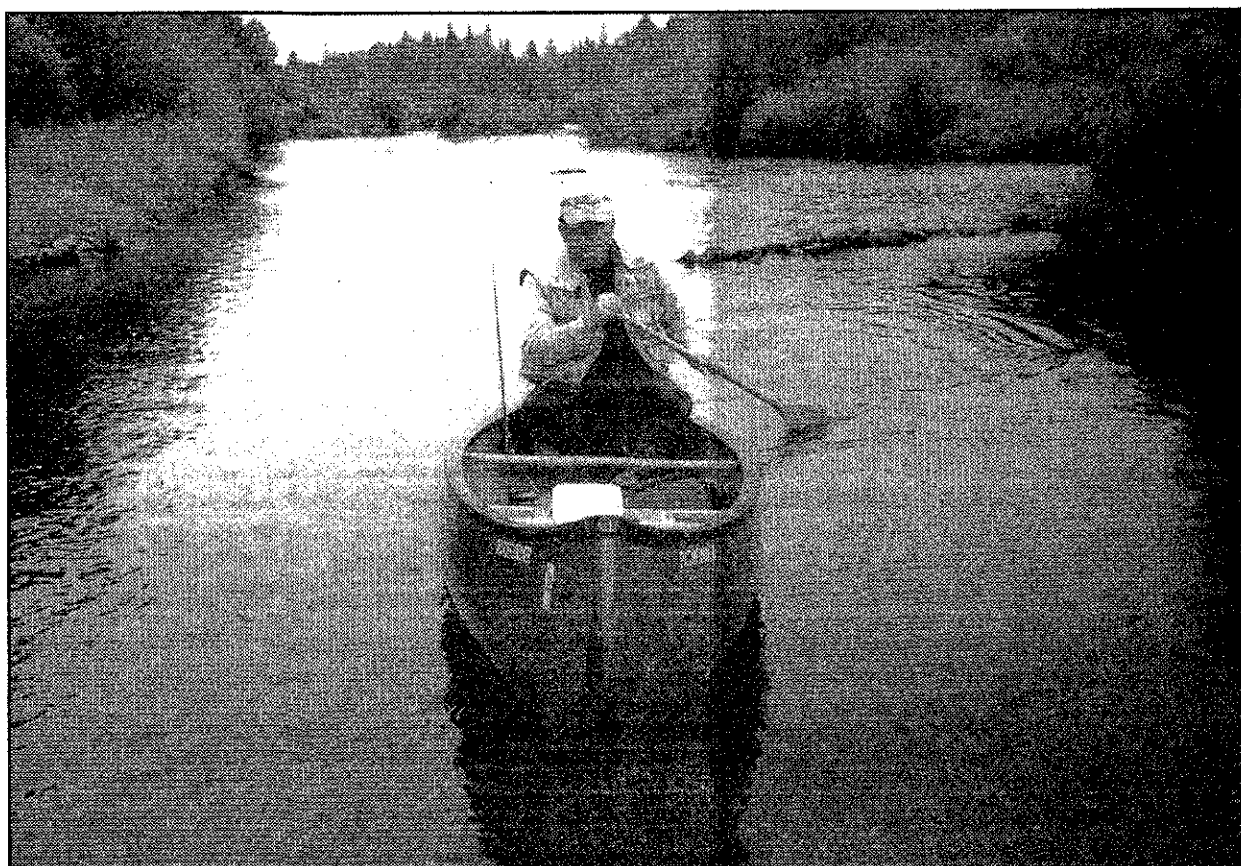

Unfortunately the diffused light did not produce the spectacular blue that would have taken our breath away again.

Some of the bright colors seen in birds is a result of minute grooves and ridges, or layered air vacuoles, or other features of the fine feather structure. This causes light to reflect off the feather and to our eyes as different colors.

No matter how the color is produced, it's a good idea to orient yourself while bird watching so the sun is at your back and highlighting the birds in front of you. Birds seen in dark shadows "lose" their color and it becomes very hard to see patterns as well.

Try and get out bird watching so you can experience these intense colors of the natural world.

Just me and a canoe

Going it alone: Most outdoors associations advise against solo canoe trips. But going it alone can have a number of rewards, from getting back in touch with the world outside of civilization to self-realization.

Solo trip: Prepare properly and enjoy

SOLO CANOEING

JEFF COUNTS

When canoeing, going alone isn't the best policy. Most experts advise canoeists to go not only in pairs, but at least two canoes to a party.

But there are other rewards from going solo. You can set your own pace, take breaks on your own schedule and camp where you want.

There's also that blissful silence that can only be achieved while alone. There's no nagging feeling that you should be entertaining a companion.

There's also the challenge of being alone. Most of us never are out of earshot of another person, or without the constant drone of radio and television.

Apart from days spent fishing, hiking or canoeing alone, I hadn't spent more than a day without someone for more than 20 years. Then I spent about five days without seeing or talking to anyone during a backpacking trip to the Porcupine Mountains.

It was a conscious-raising trip. It made me aware of how unaware we are of ourselves; how because of the daily din of noise and activities we numb ourselves to life. After several days in the woods alone, my nerve endings became more alive: I was alert to the night noises in the woods.

Last summer I set out to recreate that lone trip. But this time I went by canoe, instead of on foot. The rewards were the same. I went three days without seeing or talking to a person. My only companion was a book by Sig Olson, a nature writer.

Although it may seem difficult to find a spot where you wouldn't see anybody — it wasn't. My trip was to take me from near Grand Marais on Lake Superior along the Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore. But I was dissuaded from taking that route by a savvy friend from the area. He said the currents in the Grand Marais harbor would be too tough to negotiate.

I took his advice and started out from a campground west of town. There I left my Jeep, dragged the canoe to the beach, along with my gear. Camping in the National Lakeshore is by permit only, and I had registered for three nights out. The Park Services requires me to tell them which camp I'll be in each night.

I wasn't certain, so I gave it my best guess. As it turned out, I was fairly accurate.

My equipment wasn't anything special or elaborate. A 16-foot Pathfinder canoe made by Old Town; backpacking stove and tent, food, clothing and rain gear. The rain parka was particularly useful while paddling in Lake Superior. Although the weather was fair, the lake was rough at times and the parka kept me dry.

While I'd done a fair share of paddling, I'm no expert. Unfortunately I hadn't read Bill Mason's Path of the Paddle before the trip. If I had, I would have done things differently.

Mason's book is a must, even if you just plan on spending an afternoon floating down one of Michigan's rivers. He stresses safe paddling, control of the canoe and how to either avoid a dunking or recover from it.

Packing a canoe is a matter of balance. I didn't do a bad job, but if I'd read Mason beforehand, my packing would have been different. I had too much weight in the canoe's bow, causing it to crash heavily in the waves. If I had placed the heavy items in the middle, the canoe would have rode more smoothly.

Mason also charts out the various strokes, and if I'd known them all, I could have made better time. But then there's something to be said about not making a trip an athletic contest. The experience is more important than the technique.

My first day of paddling was along a sandy shore, to which I stayed close, too close as it turned out. The strong waves in the shallow water were difficult to negotiate and I discovered that the farther I got out into the lake, the easier it was to paddle.

That first afternoon I encountered no one. I'd expected to see a few backpackers along the shore, but there were none. The shoreline was a bit monotonous, an unbroken line of sand. I remembered what a kayaker told me the day before while talking on the beach. He described a certain type of nausea he experienced while in his boat. He had to pull up on shore for an entire day during a trip from Duluth to Grand Marais.

I heeded his warning, and made numerous stops to walk around. It helped.

Eventually, about a full day of paddling, I made it to the pictured rocks. It was an awesome feeling paddling near them and watching the waves lap against the rock. It was a bit frightening, too. I felt very vulnerable, alone in a thin plastic canoe without a soul around. But there was a reward to going solo. There was nobody around to spoil the moment for me.

A season full of worthwhile memories

AL HARRISON

A little bit of this, a little bit of that, mix it all together and what do you have?

A very eventful bowling season.

A lot of interesting bits and pieces made the 2000-01 regular season one to remember.

The first ingredient in the recipe was a Canadian lady, Linda Higenall of Hamilton, who commuted 200 miles to Livonia each and every week for the Cloverlanes All-Star Bowlerettes where she opened the season with a 300 game.

In November, four notables were inducted into the Greater Detroit Hall-of-Fame including Mark Voight of Farmington Hills, recipient of the Judge John D. Watts Award.

Others included Marilyn Frederick, Canton; Carmen Allen, Detroit; Dave Bernhardt, Mt. Clemens (for outstanding performance on the lanes), Warren Teubert, Redford (for meritorious service).

Also, there was one moment to remember, as the late, great Joe Norris received the Thomas McKay Award, presented by Tom McKay himself, one of Norris' last visits to our city.

The other award was kind of special, too, it went to Dagwood Bumstead, a comic strip by Chic Young. The strip is carried on today by his son, Dean Young, who had Dagwood bowl a 900 series in that fantasy world.

David Sill moved back home from Chicago to open the pro shop at Novi Bowl.

On Nov. 19, the All-Star Grille Women's team of the Cloverlanes All-Star Bowlerettes set a new all-time high three-game scratch series of 3,600 pins, beating the previous record of 3,557, which curiously enough had been bowled against them the previous April by the Turbo 2-N-1 Grips team in the same league.

The Old Timers Tournament went on as scheduled over the Thanksgiving weekend, and the newly elected president of the Greater Detroit Bowling Association, Mike Munson, led all bowlers with a 300 game (that's leadership) in winning his age division.

Norris also bowled in this event, his last ever Detroit-area appearance. His did promise to return again next year, and yes, he will be there, but in spirit only.

In January, Steve Klein, known more for his bowling skills in the All-Stars, moved in to take over the snack bar operation at Plaza Lanes in Plymouth. He added the pro shop shortly afterward and then with his partner, Gerald Johnson, bought the whole bowling center.

Wanza Christie of Redford beat her 134 average with a 240 game at Oak Lanes. She is a 76-year-old member of the Senior Ladies League.

Joe Krajci overcame a severe physical handicap to become a fine classic bowler, bowled his first 300 game, this in spite of losing all of his fingers of his bowling hand in an industrial accident years ago. With the help of his coach, Tom Relich, he was able to find a way to bowl well in spite of his loss.

February was a great month for the oldsters, as Hall-of-Famer Mary Mohacsi of Livonia rolled her fourth career 300 game at age 68 in the Ten Grand League at Cloverlanes.

Meanwhile, 97-year-old Lewis Saad led all bowlers in the sixth annual Senior/Youth Challenge at Mayflower Lanes in Redford. He stroked games of 200-180-193 with his 54 pins per game handicap totaled 735 to top all seniors.

Top youth bowler was 15-year old Nick Hidalgo of Redford. He shot 708 actual plus 90 for a 798 with handicap and won $1,000 in scholarship money.

Meanwhile, Mark Robey opens the doors of his new pro shop inside Westland Bowl. Ray Kreuter opens his new Pro Shop inside Country Lanes. And Sill opens his new pro shop inside Novi Bowl.

Feb. 19 was the date that Norris passed away in San Diego. This man was one of the most legendary figures in any sport.

Mike Makowiec of Canton rolled a three-game series of 879 at Cloverlanes with games of 300-290-289, which beat out the previous GDBA record 878 by Kent Kossick.

In bowling's version of March Madness, the Plymouth Salem High School boys team won the state prep championship for the second year in a row. Credit coach Cliff Richards for an outstanding job, as this team had only one carry-over from the year before.

The Livonia Churchill girls team were the stars of the tournament with a gallant effort and a second place finish.

The American Bowling Congress convention in Reno brought forth the concept of a Single Membership Organization (SMO) which will be widely discussed for the next couple of years to see if it could work out to the benefit of bowling.

We'll all just have to wait and see.

The All-Star Bowlerettes announce their move for next year from Cloverlanes to Plaza Lanes, located on Ann Arbor Road west of I-975 in Plymouth. It was a 10-year run at Cloverlanes, having moved there from Luxury Lanes in Ferndale.

We all know how hard it is to make the 7-10 split, but Redford's Myrtle Ringe did it in the Good Neighbors League at Mayflower Lanes. Keep in mind, she is a 91-year-old (young) lady who loves to go bowling.

Adeline and Alan DiBiasi of Taylor Lanes announce that the PBA Pro Bowler's Tour is returning in October with the Greater Detroit Open following a one year absence. The Pro-Am will start on Oct. 18 and the TV finals will be held on the Oct. 23.

Thanks to all you bowlers who gave me a lot of great material to write about.

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

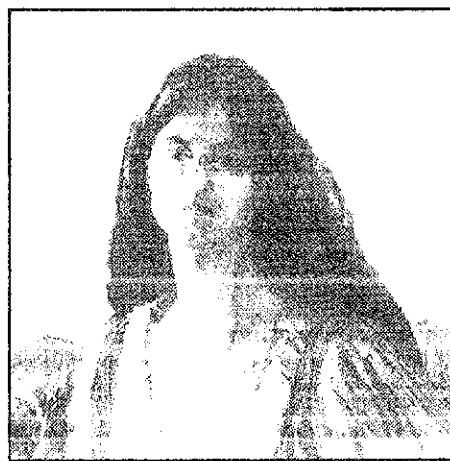

Hometown shows illustrate the many faces of art, nature

There are as many reasons for creating art as there are people painting, drawing, sculpting and photographing subjects only they can imagine.

All I have to do is look around at the many exhibits in our communities to know that whether it's done as a hobby or serious profession, art allows all of us to express our emotions and dreams, and to share them with others.

Take Regina Dunne and Donald Alley, for example.

Dunne, who's in the Visual Arts Association of Livonia exhibit at city hall, began her art career illustrating ads for Hudson's before going on her own to create graphics for agencies such as Ross Roy. Now retired, Dunne creates fine art — pastel portraits that touch the viewer with their sensitivity.

Alley began taking photographs as a hobby six years ago. For the last four years he's worked semi-professionally as a free lance photographer for the Observer Newspapers and Focal Point Studios in Farmington Hills. By day, Alley works as an electrical engineering technician developing controllers for air bag systems for TRW Automotive Electronics in Farmington Hills.

His nature images, on exhibit in a group show at Quicksilver Photo Gallery in Plymouth, bring a little bit of the great outdoors to the city.

In the past he's shown with Artifacts Art Club at Livonia City Hall, the Dearborn Community Arts Council at Dearborn City Hall, and the Art Center in Mount Clemens. In addition to the Plymouth exhibit, Alley has a photograph on display in "Animals, Vegetables and Minerals: A Focus on Our Environment" in the Alfred Berkowitz Gallery at University of Michigan-Dearborn through June 15.

"I'm not sure why I do photography," said Alley, who grew up in West Bloomfield and now lives in Plymouth. "It started as a hobby. I found myself going hiking and backpacking and taking a camera along."

The result of those forays into nature continue on display at Quicksilver Photo Gallery in a customers exhibit through June 1.

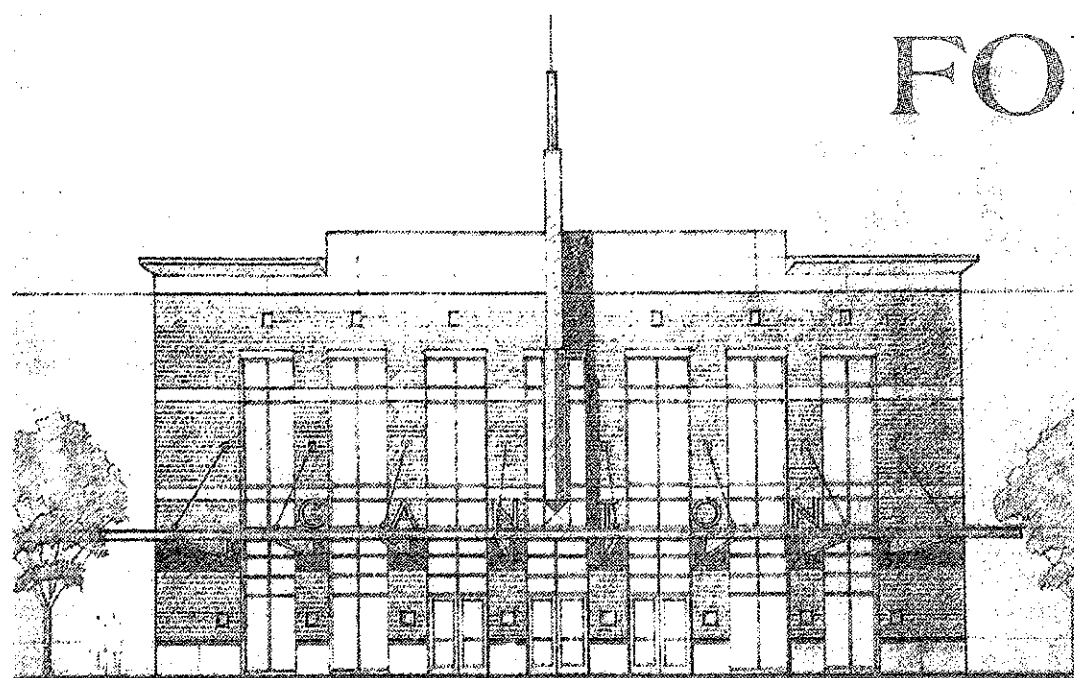

Captive audience

Patience was a key ingredient in capturing the screech and snowy owls, a red-tailed hawk, American kestrel and an opossum through the lens of his camera.

"These birds were taken at the Howell Nature Center, but in the wild you just need bait and patience. The birds in the show were ones that cannot be returned to nature due to injury. One was hit by the antenna of a car going down the road, the snowy owl, one of his wings is clipped."

PARTNERSHIP FOR THE ARTS

STAFF PHOTOS BY PAUL HURSCHMANN

First look: This is a preliminary sketch of the Canton Performing Arts Center as designed by TMP Architects. It will be located on the northeast corner of Cherry Hill and Ridge roads.

lchomin@oe.homecomm.net fall goes as planned, Canton Township will break ground for its long-awaited performing arts center in April 2002, and Supervisor Tom Yack couldn't be happier.

For more than six years, Yack has dreamed about building a facility to spotlight theater, dance and music performances, visual art, and educational programs.

Now it looks like there will be a 420-seat Canton Performing Arts Center to provide a home for groups such as the Plymouth Theatre Guild, Peter Sparing Dance Company, Verdi Opera Theatre of Michigan, and Canton Project Arts, the township's official arts organization. Located on the northeast corner of Cherry Hill and Ridge roads in Cherry Hill Village, the 50,000-square-foot arts center will be flanked by a line of commercial and residential buildings. The space, estimated to cost $8 million, will house a variety of events and activities including Plymouth Symphony Orchestra chamber concerts, and art and music classes to remain self-supporting. Eastern Michigan University is contemplating bringing its theater management program to the facility.

Function and style

An intense design and planning session by township officials, arts center architects, local developers, and the developers and architects for Cherry Hill Village, a community of homes inspired by the small towns of yesteryear, was held in March to determine function and style. A curved facade will serve as the entrance and allows space for a restaurant, which would serve audiences before and after performances. Inside the theater, 100 balcony seats will provide intimate seating by bringing the audience closer to the stage. The main floor will hold the remaining 320 seats.

"We met with the architects last Friday," said Yack. "We're working on development materials to be completed by June and working on changes for the theater. We hope to bid it in February and start construction in April."

"The challenge is coordinating Biltmore (developers of Cherry Hill Village) and their architects and the construction of liner buildings — working out details like how to deliver product to retail — with the construction of the arts center and our architects, TMP (in Bloomfield Hills)."

Coordinating the two projects could mean cost savings for the arts center, which will spend $1.2 million on the stage alone. Prudent planning has been key to the project since March 1995 when Yack gathered together a group of residents to see if the region could support a cultural venue. After a series of feasibility studies, the nonprofit Partnership for the Arts was formed to oversee the project.

"We always thought the township would own the facility and run it similar to the DIA, which is owned by the city, but eventually the Founders Society took over the operation," said Yack.

Partnership for the Arts president Bryan Amman recommends an almost-identical plan to that used by the Detroit Institute of Arts for the day-to-day running of the Canton center. It is based on visits to successful facilities near Denver in early May.

Ownership

"The last round of feasibility studies showed people want a distinct ownership," said Amman, a Canton attorney. "We looked across the country for models, then I took a day trip to Colorado to look at the organization and bylaws of arts centers in Arvada and Lakewood."

"We found trying to establish a nonprofit, that art groups had a hard time making a commitment. They said, 'We're not going to participate if we don't have control.' My recommenda-

Quartet swings into town for evening of 'eclectic' jazz

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Lucky for Thomas Knific and the rest of the Western Jazz Quartet that summer vacation is here. The break gives the Western Michigan University music professors the opportunity to play venues across the country and Europe without having to worry about scheduling substitutes to take over their classes.

When they're hot, they're hot — Jazz lovers from across the country and Europe long to hear standard tunes and originals by the musicians — and Farmington Hills is no exception. On Saturday, May 26, the quartet will treat audiences at Birmingham Temple to sounds ranging from Duke Ellington to a Latin inspired suite by quartet saxophonist Trent Kynaston. The concert concludes the Vivace series for the season.

"It's an eclectic repertoire with classic swing, and tango influenced jazz from the new CD Sabine's Dance," said Knific, who's managed and directed the quartet for the last 10 years in addition to playing bass. "Trent wrote a suite based on music heard in Buenos Aires in 1994. We'll play the final movement, also a piece from The Waning Moon CD released in Europe in 1999 and two weeks ago here. It features elements of Polish culture fused with jazz."

The quartet's toured Europe twice promoting The Waning Moon which premiered at the International Association of Jazz Educators in Los Angeles. The CD is one of three the Western Jazz Quartet's released in the U.S. along with two in Europe since the early 1990s.

It's a wonder, group members have time to record with their busy performing and teaching schedules: After playing Birmingham Temple with vocalist Sunny Wilkinson, the quartet, which includes pianist Stephen Zegree and drummer Tim Froncek, goes on to a jazz festival in Saugatuck and then a date with the West Shore Symphony in Muskegon. The quartet is currently tion is for the township to own and operate the theater. The city owns and operates the theater in Lakewood and is staffed by six city employees, but events are scheduled by a facility user group."

Partnership for the Arts would primarily be responsible for raising money to build and operate the center. To date, $4 1/2 million has been secured from the township, a state grant, and local developers.

"We're not reaching into the resident's pocket," said Amman. "This thing has to pay for itself. The nonprofit entity for fund-raising lets artists be artists, not spend their time fund-raising." "My other recommendation is to include humanities (history and literature) and education because it broadens the base of users. In the Colorado centers, local artisans have gift shops and there are arts classes for all ages."

"We have this great vision," said Joan Noricks, president of the Canton Community Foundation and a member of the arts center development committee. "I'm just thrilled. It's an exciting project. The Canton Community Foundation has provided funds for a feasibility study and will have a role in the fund-raising phase."

Working together

Canton Township treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter just wants to make sure there's plenty of space for hanging art. Kirchgatter was instrumental in founding Canton Project Arts and its fine arts competition, which takes place in October. She remembers the early days when the annual art exhibit was hung in the Administration Building.

"We talked about different sites along the way and ended up here for some good reasons including incorporating residential and commercial with the theater. Restaurants will be a nice asset. Along the way, we've had a lot of dedicated people working on the committees."

Amman is impressed with the depth of commitment by members of the development, design and operation committees as well as the art groups.

"The arts center is important for Canton, the cultural enhancement of the community," said Amman. "After having gone to Colorado, I'm very excited. We just scratched the surface of possibilities, like senior art programs. There's no reason Canton should be second-best to anyone in this country."

negotiating to play with the Rochester Symphony next season after playing Europe this summer and Korea in fall.

"We tour year round," said Knific. "Depending on where we're playing we adapt the program to a certain extent to fit what's going on but always maintain the highest commitment to performing quality music and to communicating both musically and verbally on stage. The audience can sense the joy of music making we have. The state department hires us to play concerts because we're great ambassadors."

Claire Levine, who co-chairs the Vivace Series, thinks the quartet's popular because of the overall sound.

"We thought they were really exciting and innovative when we heard their CD," said Levine of

■ 'Knific loves teaching.'

Bloomfield Hills. "We always look for a group that's interesting. They have exceptional backgrounds in jazz - both in academic, the teaching of jazz, and performing with great jazz groups like Dave Brubeck."

Knific toured with Brubeck several years ago after admiring his music from an early age. Knific began guitar studies at age 8 in Cleveland where he grew up.

"When I was 13, I saved up my money and bought two jazz records, one of them was by Dave Brubeck (the other by guitarist Tal Farlow)," said Knific who went on to teach and direct the jazz program at Interlochen Arts Academy for five years before joining the faculty at Western Michigan University 13 years ago.

Knific is a professor of bass, classical and jazz, and director of jazz studies at Western. In addition to the jazz quartet, he performs at chamber music festivals throughout the state.

"Playing classical and jazz is just different," said Knific. "If it's a good group that's it for me. For a bass player there's more freedom in jazz. It allows me to have an independent solo voice but I love it all."

And there's no doubt Knific loves teaching. He's proud of the reputation the university's jazz program has built over the years.

"The WMU jazz program is nationally rated as one of the tops in the country," said Knific. We've had more students win the Down Beat magazine competition for students since 1994. There were three winners alone this year."

Knific's commitment to teaching goes hand in hand with trying to do everything possible to keep the music alive.

"Young people are the future of music," said Knific. "It's important to have the alternatives presented to them. It's our culture we're celebrating and it's important we keep celebrating here. Jazz is tremendously popular in Europe. The demographics of an audience there looks more like what you'd see at a pop music concert here."

"I'm looking forward to coming to the Detroit area to play because Detroit has such a great jazz history."

My favorite is Alley's shot of a barn owl, looking and waiting, in the window of an old weather-beaten barn. It's just $120.

If vintage scenes are more to your liking, don't miss Jeffrey St. John's photographs of a general store and an old beat-up truck plastered with bumper stickers. JoEllen Kalyon offers a different take with her vibrant abstracts. Dr. William Ross shows travel scenes as does Livonia photographer Lawrence Diggs, whose penguins play near Capetown, South Africa. Diggs' architectural, nature and historical landscapes feature places ranging from Germany to Michigan's Upper Tahquamenon Falls. If you love horses, don't miss the farm on U.S. 23 near Parshallville or a line-up of equines awaiting riders in Tennessee. Another sure-to-be favorite is the red-white-and-black theme of the American Coney Island in Detroit.

Along with local photographers, Quicksilver owner Jack Kenny is showing Cuban photographs by Roberto Salas. Kenny curated an exhibit of Cuban art continuing through the end of May at Fourth Avenue Gallery in Ann Arbor. Kenny travels to Havana four times a year to photograph the people for a book he's working on. He also brings back large-scale black-and-white images by Cuban photographers he represents. If you miss the show at Fourth Avenue Gallery and Quicksilver, you can still find Kenny's Cuban images at www.cuba-photo.com.

Springtime blooms abound in the Visual Arts Association of Livonia exhibit at Livonia City Hall.

Obviously judge Alice Nichols, a Farmington artist, loves flowers as much as the artists. She chose Isabelle Renaud's sunflowers as Best of Show. Second place went to Billie Thompson for her watercolor of "Evening Iris." The Livonia Arts Commission Award went to Helena Lewicki for "A Rose is a Rose."

While many of the works in the show resulted from classes taken at VAAL, Dunne's was the exception in more ways than one. "Western Dreamer," Dunne's first-place winner, was created during independent studies at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Center and features a female figure. Every Friday artists chip in $8 apiece to hire a model for a life-drawing session.

"It's becoming embarrassing. Every year I win," said Dunne. "There are a lot of nice pieces in the show."

Dunne shouldn't be so modest. She makes a habit of stealing the spotlight with her pensive portraits. She took second in Our Town at The Community House in Birmingham last fall and won the popular vote at the recent Farmington Artists Club exhibit. One of her works also won first place in a statewide exhibition by artists of Latin descent. The exhibition is now on display in Saginaw. But see for yourself. The Visual Arts Association of Livonia exhibit continues to May 30.

The Count meets the Duke in concert

Two of jazz's legendary bands, the Count Basie Orchestra and Duke Ellington Orchestra, will perform 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 24, at Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts.

The event, "The County Meets the Duke: Prelude to the jazziest," is the third benefit performance for Music Hall's educational outreach programs and the Ford Detroit International Jazz Fest.

Tickets for "The Count Meets the Duke" range from $25-$50 and available at the Music Hall box office and all Ticketmaster locations. Call (313) 963-2386.

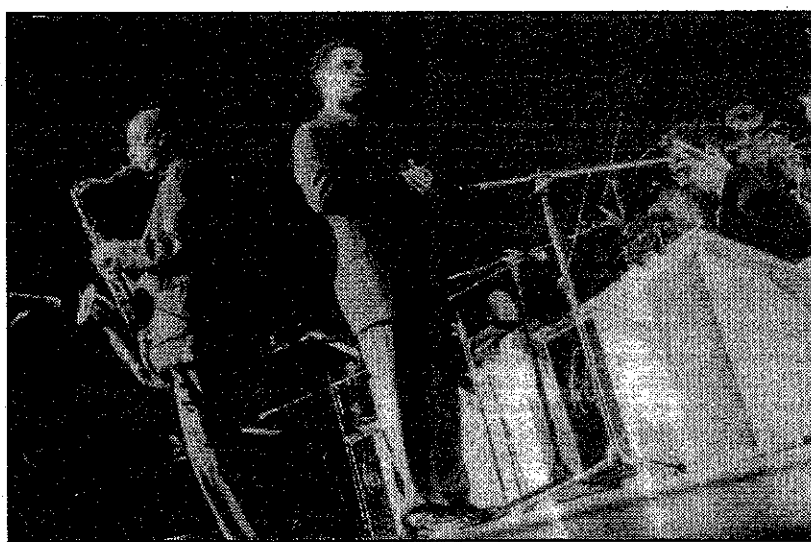

The Count Basie Orchestra has been performing since the 1930s and was lead by jazz icon Count Basie for over 50 years. Throughout its history the orchestra has won 17 Grammy Awards, the most recent being for its 1999 recording "Swing Shift."

In 1999 and 1997 the Count Basie Orchestra also won Grammy's for Best Large Band Performance. Trombonist Grover Mitchell has conducted the 19-piece Count Basie since Basie's death in 1984.

Duke Ellington's 21-year-old grandson and current orchestra conductor Paul carries on the family tradition of great jazz that began with the Duke Ellington Orchestra in the late 1920s.

Duke Ellington penned in excess of 5,000 musical compositions during his 50-year career. Among the most famous of Ellington's compositions performed by his orchestra are "Take the A Train," "Mood Indigo," "It Don't Mean a Thing (If It Ain't Got That Swing), "Don't Get Around Much Anymore" and "Satin Doll." In recent years the orchestra toured and performed worldwide in Japan, Spain, France, Finland and Mexico.

Tastefest needs volunteers

An army of upbeat and energetic volunteers is needed for the annual Comerica Tastefest - Celebrating its 13th year - Saturday, June 30 through Wednesday, July 4 in Detroit's New Center.

Volunteer opportunities include staffing information and beverage booths, assisting in staging areas, and helping in the children's activities areas. Volunteers can sign up with their friends and family or come along and meet other volunteers.

'Each year more than 300,000 visitors fill the streets adjacent to the historic Fisher Building.'

In appreciation for their help, volunteers will receive an official crew T-shirt, reserving parking space and an opportunity to win an array of thank-you prizes.

Tastefest features a melting pot of ethnic eats from 35 metro Detroit restaurants, music from local and national acts, works from emerging artists, and children's activities.

Each year more than 300,000 visitors fill the streets adjacent to the historic Fisher Building on West Grand Boulevard between Woodward Ave. and the Lodge Freeway.

To receive information about becoming a Tastefest volunteer, sign up online at www.tastefest.org or call (313) 872-0188.

The new program - "Best of the DSO" - will feature recordings from the DSO's extensive discography, including many historic and highly prized collectable recordings that are now out of print.

"Best of the DSO" will also feature recordings by and interviews with various guest artists who will be appearing with the DSO in the spring and summer months, as well as featured artists from the 2001-2002 season.

Some highlights of "Best of the DSO" in the coming weeks include:

■ June 10 - A 1960 recording of Paul Paray conducting Dvorak's Symphony No. 9 ("From the New World"). The work was recorded at Cass Technical High School in 1960 during the years

■ June 17 - A 1981 recording of Antal Dorati conducting the DSO in Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" which went on to win the coveted Diapason d'Or, the highest honor bestowed by the French recording industry.

Treatments for facial skin need not be surgical

DISCOVERING BEAUTY

MARY ANNE TOCCALINO

It's not too late to get your skin ready for summer.

Quickly obtaining clear, clean skin doesn't have to be painful or hard work thanks to modern technology and advances in cosmetic dermatology.

Many procedures have become extremely simple and quick. Many are almost painless.

Some allow you to return to your desk without telltale signs (at least nothing a dab of foundation can't conceal).

There's a great amount you can do now with chemical peels, lasers, and injections, such as botox and collagen. These procedures tremendously improve dull, lifeless skin.

Here are what I believe to be the best non-surgical solutions for common skin afflictions. Hopefully, it's enough information to help you put your troubled skin behind you. However, do consult your doctor before undergoing any treatment.

For age spots, freckles and dark patches of pigment caused by sun damage, the solution is the Nd:Yag laser. It zaps dark spots in one or two sessions. You may feel a wave of heat when the laser hits the area being treated, but it's nothing too hot to handle.

Keep in mind that spots will not disappear instantly; fading requires between one and four weeks.

Also, scabbing may occur. Healing time for scabbing, which can be covered with makeup, is five days. Be careful, though, darker skin may be left with white spots.

The results are permanent, but use sunscreen daily to prevent further damage. This procedure costs $200-500 per treatment.

For crow's feet, the lines that appear at the outer corner of the eye, and marionette lines, which extend from the corner of the mouth down to the chin, I believe that botox is the best solution. It temporarily paralyzes underlying muscle, so when you smile, your lines won't.

Botox, otherwise known as botulinum toxin, a derivative of the poison that causes botulism, is injected with a needle straight into the fold of the skin. You may feel a pinch or mild burning sensation upon injection.

You'll also be a little red where the needle is injected. However, the redness will fade within 10 minutes.

Botox requires from two to 14 days to take effect but lasts three to five months. The procedure is priced $200-500 per treatment.

For under eye circles, the fix is Trichloroacetic-acid (TCA) or glycolic-acid peels in low concentrations. Irregular dark pigmentation around the eye can be hereditary or caused by sun damage, a lack of sleep or other factors.

An acid peel treatment evens out skin tone by stripping away the surface layer of delicate skin around the eye. A series of six peels is usually required for results.

Another option for sufferers of dark eye circles is the Q-Switched Ruby laser. It's new and removes pigment without harming the skin's surface. You'll need about two treatments, four to six weeks apart, to get the best results.

Since you're dealing with a delicate area, stinging may occur, as well as flaking two or three days later. With laser treatments, scabbing may occur. Make sure you apply eye cream day and night and consistently apply a stronger moisturizer with scabbing.

The results are permanent, but remember your skin will continue to age. These procedures range from $200 for a single acid peel to $400 for a single laser treatment.

Most important, make sure you protect your investment with plenty of sunscreen!

Trends put summer shoulders back in style

Goodbye bare bellies. Fashion designers like Shelli Segal, whose current line for the Laundry label was shown May 10 at Neiman Marcus at the Somerset Collection in Troy, are baring the shoulders.

The runway event was held to benefit the Founders Junior Council for the Detroit Institute of the Arts.

Packed with interesting neck lines and an assortment of halters, spaghetti-strap tops, tanks and T-shirts, the collection seemed to say, hey, it's summer, show off those shoulders.

Spaghetti straps, for instance, were extra thin. Off-the-shoulder and one-shoulder styles were in abundance. A strapless black top came with white decorative vertical ribbing, creating contrast to the shoulder line.

Several tops featured gathered bodices. Others had similar styling along the sleeves and down the sides. Gathers at the shoulders were created by rhinestone clasps on dressier attire.

White T-shirts with vintage images and rhinestone accents were dominant over simple, cropped pants and denim.

Legs, too

Shoulders weren't the only show-stoppers, however.

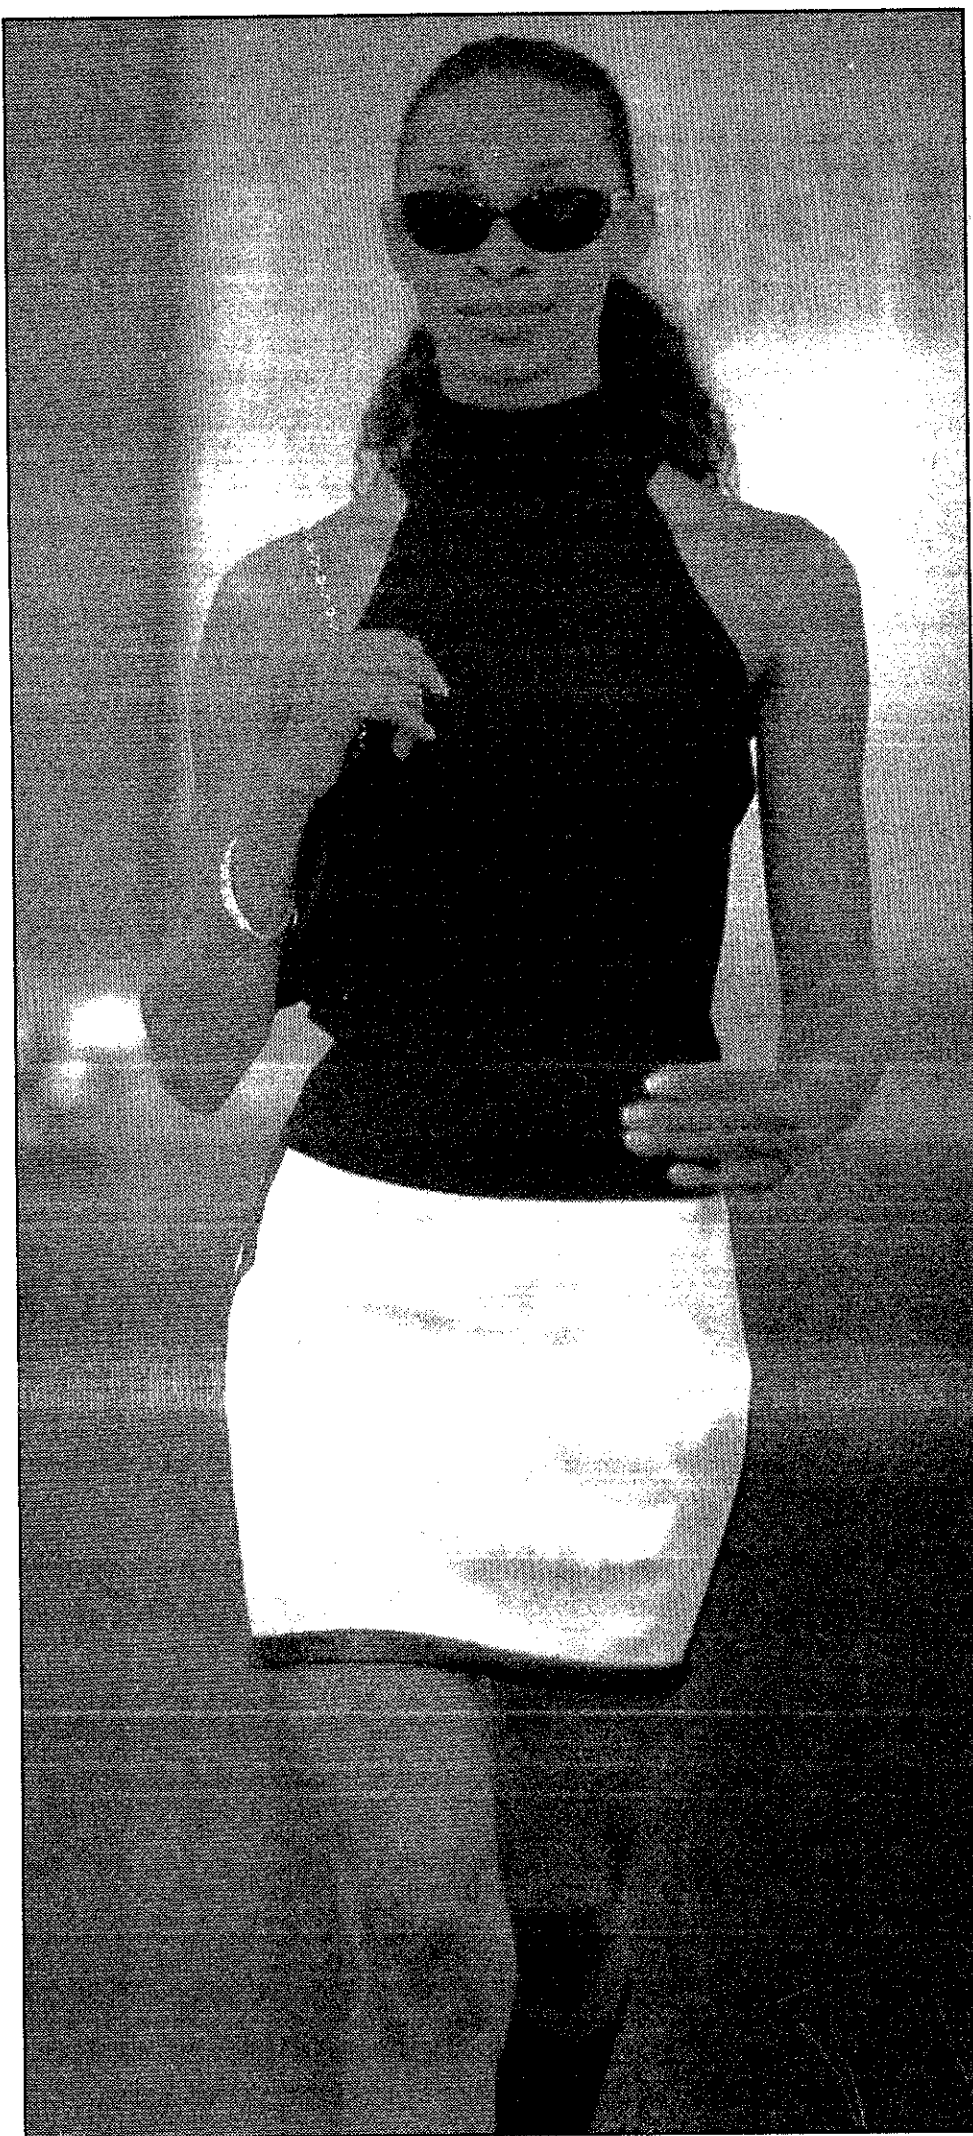

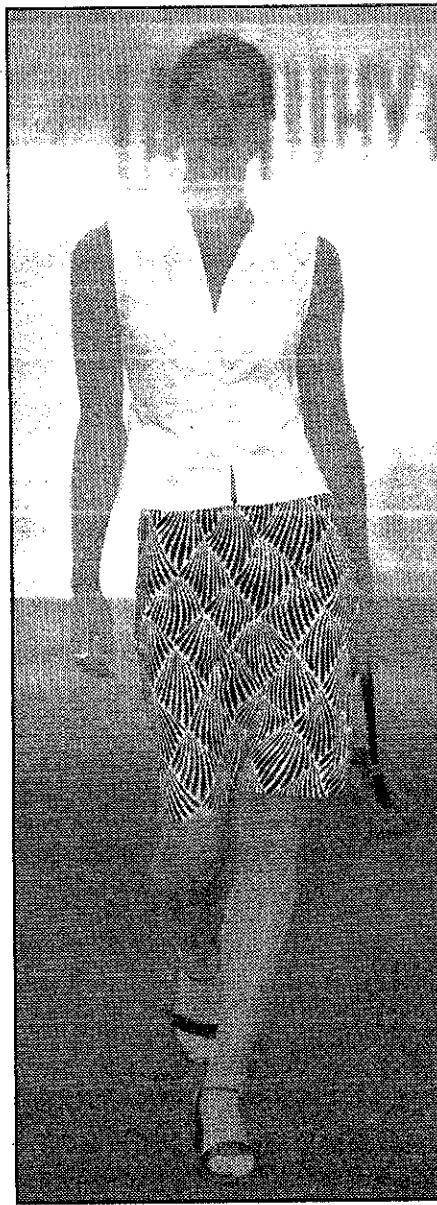

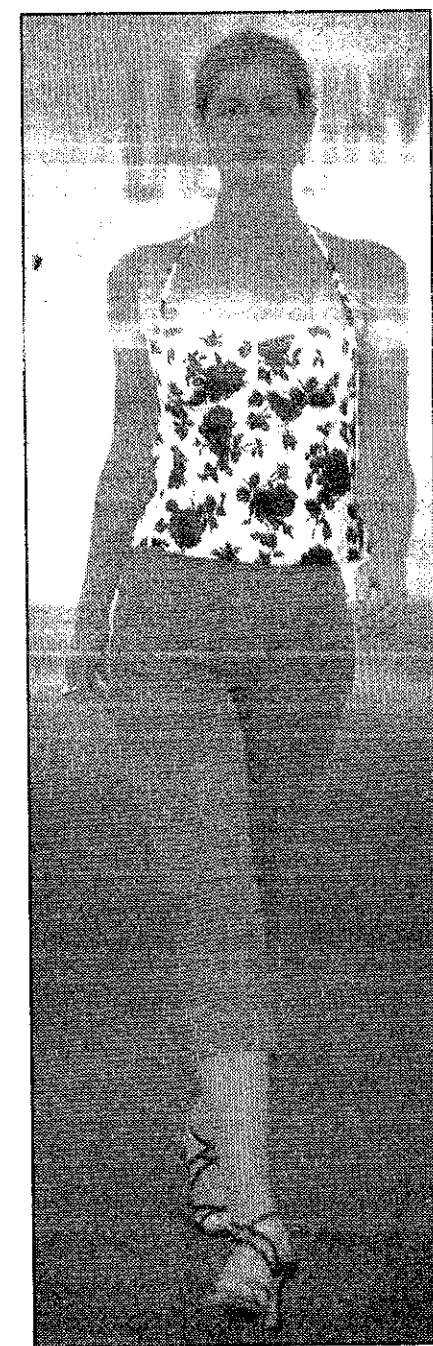

Asymmetrical skirt lines, ruffled, feminine skirt hems and skirts with gathering brought attention to the calves.

Segal also brought focus to the lower legs by layering sheer fabrics at the hem line in a series of "color block-bottom" skirts featuring contrasting bright colors.

Choice is yours

There's been much said this season and last summer about wearing cheerful colors, rather than resting on black and other neutral shades. But Segal, like other designers, seems to be saying the choice be yours. One portion of the collection featured only black and white and the same classic combination with the addition of true red. Later, the collection mined brighter and softer palettes including turquoise sea, lush melon, lipstick pink, soft yellow and pale blue. Then, black returned in a series of sexy, fluid jersey pieces, embellished by gathers, ruffles and ties.

Donate old jeans, buy new pair at half the price at annual clothing drive

Once upon a time, the store owners of Guys N' Gals in West Bloomfield decided to start a "jean trade-in" clothing drive to benefit the homeless.

On June 15, from 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Guys N' Gals sponsors their 12th Annual Clothing Drive.

Customers can trade in used jeans (clean, without holes) for one new pair at half the retail price.

All jeans collected will be donated to the homeless of Oakland County. Additional clothing, as well as bedding, small furniture and toys may also be left, if customers want to make a tax-deductible donation.

It was 1989 when Lois Levenson and her daughters Sheri Stav, Julie Feldman, and Stacy Cohen came up with the idea of trading a pair of used jeans for a new pair at half the price.

They researched Oakland County agencies to find those that assist in clothing the homeless. It was important to find an agency that would generously give to those in need rather than turn around and resell donated items.

So popular is the event today that community residents start calling the store about it weeks in advance. They clean their closets of unused items and bring their filled bags over to Guys N' Gals.

Customers and their children even have started volunteering their time to work the day of the trade-in.

Lois' 5 out of 8 grandchildren are now old enough (ages 4-12) to play an active role working the day of the benefit as well. They have seen through the example of their parents the importance or reaching out and helping others. You can, too.

For additional information about Guys N' Gals annual jean trade-in clothing drive, call the store at (248) 851-1260. Guys N' Gals is located at 6333 Orchard Lake Road in West Bloomfield.

Grandparents' trip to Galapagos teaches lessons in prehistory

John and Joan Reddy of Bloomfield Hills took a trip to the Galapagos Islands with an Elderhostel group. They documented their trip in a diary to their nine grandchildren. Here is their account:

DAY 1:
We arrived by plane at the island of Baltra. A short bus ride brought us to the dock where we boarded dinghies, which took us to our ship. While we ate lunch, the boat sailed to Santa Cruz Island. There we disembarked for a beach where we saw marine iguana, sea lions, and a great variety of birds that allowed us to get very close to them and their nesting areas. We also spotted the large tracks of a giant Pacific green sea turtle which had come in the night to lay its eggs high on the beach.

DAY 2:
During the night we sailed to Genovesa or Tower Island. It is the only major island that is entirely north of the equator. In the morning, we made a wet landing at Darwin's Bay, where we walked the beach and saw masked and red-footed boobies (birds), swallow-tailed gulls, lava gulls, great frigatebirds. In all cases, we could have reached out and touched the birds, but, of course, we didn't. We also tried snorkeling as we did on the beach the first day. Neither Grandpa John nor Grandma is a very good snorkeler. But our guide helped Grandma, and she got to see some colorful fish and many, many sea urchins.

In the afternoon, we visited Prince Phillip's Steps, where we had a steep climb on lava steps. At the top, we walked among masked and red-footed booby colonies. We were looking for storm petrels, the short-eared owl and other shore birds.

DAY 3:
Again we sailed during the night and arrived in the morning at Bartolome Island. Here we observed how a volcanic-formed island gradually transforms itself from a barren rocky place into a more hospitable location via seemingly sparse plant life that breaks up the rocks into soil over millions of years. We had a 400 foot hike to the top, but the climb was 365 wooden steps, which made it much easier than if we had had to climb all those rocks. The view from the summit of the volcano was spectacular.

The afternoon expedition took us to Puerto Egas on Santiago Island, where we made a wet landing on a dark brown sandy beach. We walked along the shoreline. Our destination was the grottoes, where we saw the Galapagos fur seals. These are really sea lions, but unlike the California sea lions which we saw earlier, they like to hide out in caves and grottoes. No sunning themselves on the beach like the other sea lions. We noted that here the marine iguana were more colorful, with patches of green and red on them. Most marine iguanas are black and blend in with the lava rocks on which they live. The increased color comes from the kind of algae that they eat.

DAY 4:
Our morning trip was a dry landing at Punta Espinosa or Fernandina Island. This island has the largest colony of marine iguanas in the archipelago. We had to be careful not to step on them. The males were piled up on the lava rocks, sunning themselves. It was difficult to tell what were rocks and what were iguanas. But the females were busily laying eggs all over the beach. On the trip back to our ship, we followed a school of seven dolphins, who seemed to enjoy playing with our boat.

Our afternoon trip was to Tagus Cove on Isabela Island. We had a steep climb to a lookout where we could see the harbor where Charles Darwin's

If you're going...

■ Trip to the Galapagos arranged by Elderhostel through Holbrook Travel. Cost $3,300 per person, includes transportation, all meals, three nights in a Quito hotel and seven nights on ship. Group size: 39, with three full-time guides provided by Galapagos National Park District.

■ Trips usually booked through travel agents who coordinate travel on and among the islands with the National Park District and the government of Ecuador, which is trying to balance revenue-generating tourism with government desire to protect the environment.

■ Ship size and nomenclature varies, with some traveling on wind-driven vessels. Local scuba gear stores periodically organize swimming tours.

■ January to June experience clear skies, high cumulus clouds and heavy, though short rains. July to December is characterized by low clouds with light rain common.

■ Currency is U.S. dollar.

DAY 5:
This morning we hit a red sand beach on Rabida Island where we had another opportunity to snorkel after a walk along the beach where a male sea lion was guarding his harem. He swam along the beach where the females were sunning themselves, barking warnings for other males to stay away. On another part of the beach, Grandma swam with a young sea lion. Sea lions are very playful — particularly the young ones.

DAY 6:
We spent a whole day on Santa Cruz Island today. It's the home of the Charles Darwin Coastal rocks: This is the view from the peak on volcanic Bartolome Island.

Research Station where giant land tortoises are bred until they are large enough to be released back into the wild. We then took a bus into the highlands where we had a wonderful lunch at an open-air restaurant where the Darwin finches came right up to the table.

Then it was off to a cattle ranch where the cattle live with the tortoises in perfect harmony. (They both love the rich, green grass.) Again, we were able to get very close to the animals although they would draw in their necks if we got too close.

We spotted the various varieties of Darwin finches along the way although we didn't see the elusive vermilion flycatcher. Fortunately, we had seen one years ago on a birding trip to Texas.

After our return from the highlands, we enjoyed relaxing in the town of Puerto Ayora. Most of the Galapagos Islands are uninhabited, but there are populated areas on a number of them. The town is full of flowers and trees that are very beautiful, but they have been imported by people. Imported plants and animals create many problems as they interfere with the natural environment. For instance, there are hundreds of thousands of wild goats that eat all the vegetation and leave little for the native animals.

DAY 7:
Today we visited Espanola Island, landing at Punta Suarez. The marine iguanas on this island are particularly colorful, with many yellow, green and red markings. Their skin looks almost as if it is beaded. Also on this island is the hooded mockingbird, which is particularly curious and unafraid of humans. But Grandma encountered a lava lizard here who became so curious that it walked up and tested her boot as a possible food source.

We hiked some very rocky terrain here in order to see a blow hole, where the sea water hits a spot in the rocks that produces so much pressure that the water shoots up in a tower of water and foam.

Our final day of snorkeling was at Gardener Bay where the sand was white and very fine and the water the color of aqua marine.

DAY 8:
In the morning, we left the boat for the last time and returned to the airport at Baltra. From there we flew to Quito, Ecuador, and then home at last.

FOCUS ON WINE

RAY & ELEANOR HEALD

Americans should give German wines a try

I don't like German wines; they're sweet," is a lament we hear all too often. Yet, when the same people who say this, taste a very dry German wine, their lips pucker and they remark, "it's sour." Give them a German Riesling Kabinett category wine from a great estate and they love it.

So why don't more Americans like German wines? We have a theory. It's based on what Americans say they like — a dry wine. And somewhere along the line, they picked up the idea that all German wines are sweet. Both concepts are false.

What people who like wine enjoy is not that the wine is dry — it's that it's balanced. A wine with the correct fruit and acid is balanced and delicious.

German wine producers are partially at fault in trying to chase after the American market with their "trocken" (dry) and "halbtrocken" (half-dry) wines because they thought that was what U.S. drinkers wanted when they asked for dry. Americans tried a trocken wine and puckered up.

With the introduction of vintage

Wine Picks

Some German Riesling wines do make sweet endings in the dessert category. They are gloriously rich and full-bodied. We recommend:

- 1999 Fitz-Ritter "Prestige" Beerenauselese $28/375mL from the Pfalz region.
- From the Rheinhessen, 1999 Heinrich Seebach Niersteiner Oelberg Eiswein $22 is a bargain.
- 1999 Fitz-Ritter Duerckheimer Hochbenn Eiswein $61 is a nectar of the gods.

to Spaetlese and Auslese or higher, the wines get richer. They are off-dry, but balanced. Drink these low-alcohol wines with the right foods and they are perfect. In fact, German wines are the most versatile wines in the world.

How to enjoy German wines

With spring here and summer on the way, there is no better time to get introduced or re-introduced to German Rieslings. Wines from the exceptional 1999 vintage are now available. We recently met with top German estate owners, winemakers or representatives who were making a U.S. tour. As we tasted through their balanced offerings, we made mental notes about food pairings and some delicious 1999 wines.

In general, German Rieslings pair well with Japanese food. With sushi, they are refreshing. Any dish with ginger is stunning with a Riesling Spaetlese or Auslese.

From the Rheingau region, Schloss Schoenborn QbA $8.50, fruity with tantalizing mineral notes, is perfect for broiled white fish, salad with a citrus-based vinaigrette or light cheese and fruit. With the same foods, the delicate Studert-Prum Bernkasteler Graben Kabinett $11 from the Mosel would pair equally well.

From the Saar region, Dr. Fisher Ockfener Bockstein Kabinett $11 with appley fruit and a hint of mineral character is suited to any dish with a light sauce, fried Cajun-seasoned catfish filets, or grilled shrimp. The more complex Dr. H. Thanisch Bernkasteler Doctor Kabinett $29 or Schloss Schoenborn Erbacher Marco-

EASTERN MARKET ADVENTURES

Produce shopping becomes fun at the farmers' market

Take it in: Ciaramitaro Bros. Fruit & Produce is among the many vendors who sell freshly cut flowers at Eastern Market. Flats of flowers are also in abundance. Even if you're not in the market for blooms, you'll relish in the sights and scents.

Shopping tips

- Wear comfortable shoes, sunglasses and carry only the essentials.
- Consider bringing along a carrier for your purchases such as a small cart, Radio Flyer or large fabric shoulder bag.
- Take a quick tour through the market before buying to determine which vendors have the best quality and prices.
- Plan to purchase the most perishable goods near the end of your shopping trip.
- If you see someone carrying something you like, ask them where they bought it and for how much.
- Don't hesitate to negotiate with vendors for the best price — they're used to haggling.
- Bring cash — credit cards and checks aren't typically accepted.
- Early risers get the best pickings, but latecomers often go home with bargains, it's your choice.
- Make a day or half-day of your trip to the market. There's great people-watching, street entertainment, food to graze on and spots for lunch and other shopping.

Walk in, grab a metal cart, make a beeline towards the spray of the lettuce sprinklers and pick your poison.

Sort and select for ripeness and quality. Then, weigh it, bag it, buy it and go.

That's produce shopping for you. That is unless you've decided to take a trip to a farmer's market for fruits and veggies. There, produce shopping comes with participation, observation, entertainment, learning and conversation.

With six open-air stands filled with vendors, dozens of specialty food retailers, several restaurants and other shops — an estimated 45,000 people visit on warm-weather Saturdays — Detroit's Eastern Market promises to be an adventure.

"It's people-watching at its best," says Ed Deeb, chairman and CEO, Eastern Market Merchants Association. "It's a melting pot of the all the people and groups of Detroit."

Though most Eastern Market visitors come on Saturdays in the spring and summer, the 43-acre operation, located between Mack and Gratiot avenues, is open everyday except Sunday throughout the year.

There are street musicians like Sweet Daddy Lou who plays blues guitar in front of the Russell Street Cafe.

At any given moment, hundreds of shoppers are traversing the market with red Radio Flyer wagons and other conveyances for their purchases.

In front of Bert's Marketplace on Russell Street, visitors spontaneously dance to a reggae band that's entertaining the crowd. Others savor BBQ ribs and chicken from Bert's outdoor grill operation.

And people who normally grow impatient while in line at the grocery store think nothing of the waiting for the right slice of cheese or lunchmeat at R.J. Hirt's — an anchor store of the market complex.

Yvonne Bussey of Oak Park has finished both her lunch and shopping so sits at a nearby table and simply watches people pass by. Bussey says she's been coming to the market since she was less than 3 feet tall. She visits twice a month to buy produce, flowers and eggs from the Burns Poultry Farm where large white eggs sell for a whopping 75 cents a dozen. Incidentally, all the farm's eggs have been laid within the week.

Street beat: Sweet Daddy Lou plays his blues version of Mustang Sally in front of the Russell Street Cafe in Eastern Market. Patrons line up outside the restaurant for lunch.

Spices and stuff: If you love to cook, a visit to the Rafal Spice Company alone is worth a trip to Eastern Market. Store owner Donald Rafal (right) and shop employee John Kingsley get a kick out of naming some of the store's more unusual ingredients, such as Dragon's Blood and Pinhead Gunpowder tea.

Rhubarb: Forgotten fruit brings back old flavors

BY LEANNE ROGERS
STAFF WRITER
lrogers@oe.homecomm.net

People don't seem to eat rhubarb much these days for some reason.

Maybe it's because they don't have any growing in their yards and store-bought rhubarb doesn't have much flavor. Or they don't really cook much and have no idea what to do with rhubarb. Maybe it needs to be a family tradition.

It could be fondness for rhubarb is developed in childhood. Growing up in what was then the quite rural Avon Township, now the very developed Rochester Hills, we had rhubarb growing in the back yard. My sisters, Becky and Colleen, and I would pick the stalks, add some salt and eat away.

My grandmother, Mary Walker, or mother, Barbara, would make a rhubarb sauce that they would eat with shortcake — the homemade biscuit style — or make pies.

When my mother remarried and we moved from my grandmother's house, my mother took some rhubarb to the new house where we had an even bigger crop. I was living in an apartment after my mother died, so I couldn't transplant any rhubarb.

I bought my grandmother's house after she died nearly 10 years ago, but the rhubarb had gone to seed. I tried planting some sets I bought, but they never really grew that well — just a few stalks to eat.

Much to my delight, a couple of years ago my friend Rachael Dolson called and asked if I wanted some rhubarb. Her parents had transplanted some from their home in Bridgeport to her house in Rochester Hills.

Rachael's rhubarb was planted on the south side of her house and has grown to enormous proportions. I didn't want to be greedy but since Rachael was the only one in her immediate family who likes rhubarb, I generally leave with a grocery bag full.

You can make rhubarb preserves, sauce, crumbles and probably a whole lot of other things I haven't thought about — I generally stick with pies. I love rhubarb pies and so do my colleagues at work, especially my pal Doug Funke. Some pies include just rhubarb, others strawberry rhubarb, blueberry rhubarb, mixed berry-rhubarb and custard rhubarb. I have a recipe for pineapple rhubarb but I haven't tried that yet.

The most labor intensive part of making a rhubarb pie is cleaning the rhubarb. It's just a matter of taking the leaves off the top, peeling off the thin skins and chopping it up. I usually do it all at once and place the cut up rhubarb into sealed plastic bags.

Make your crusts or buy prepared ones and very little effort results in a delicious pie. Add some extra flour if you use frozen berries. It's best to let the frozen fruit thaw and drain off the excess liquid. Don't worry if the pie is a bit juicy — it just makes the pie better.

See LeAnne's rhubarb recipes inside of the Taste section.

Get into a rhubarb with friends by baking these pies this spring

These pie filling recipes are from a Betty Crocker Cookbook, circa 1954, for 9-inch pies. A nice variation is custard-rhubarb pie. The sweet smoothness of the custard provides a good contrast to the tartness of the rhubarb.

RHUBARB PIE

- 4 cups, cut-up rhubarb
- 6 tablespoons flour
- 1-1/3 to 2 cups of sugar (less sugar is needed for early rhubarb)
- 1 9-inch pie crust (recipe follows)

Mix together ingredients.

Pour into pie crust. Dot with 1-1/3 teaspoons butter.

Bake 40-50 minutes at 425°F. Serve slightly warm.

For variations, substitute half the rhubarb with 2 cups of strawberries, blueberries or mixed berries. Use the minimum amount of sugar.

CUSTARD-RHUBARB PIE

- 3 eggs
- 2-2/3 teaspoons of milk
- 2 cups sugar
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 3/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 4 cups rhubarb, cut up
- 1 9-inch pie crust (with dough for lattice top crust)

Slightly beat together eggs and milk. Stir in sugar, flour and nutmeg. Mix in rhubarb. Pour into 9-inch pie crust and dot with 1 tablespoon of butter.

Cover with a lattice top crust. Bake 50-60 minutes at 400°F. Serve slightly warm.

TWO-CRUST PIE

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2/3 cup shortening
- 5 to 7 tablespoons ice water

In medium bowl, combine flour and salt. Using pastry blender or fork, cut shortening into flour until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Sprinkle flour mixture with water 1 tablespoon at a time, while tossing and mixing lightly with fork. Add water until dough is just moist enough to form a ball when lightly pressed together.

Shape dough into two balls. Flatten one ball to 1/2-inch thickness, rounding and smoothing edges. On a lightly floured surface, roll from center to edge into 11-inch circle. Fold pastry in half; place in 9-inch pie pan. Unfold; gently press in bottom and up sides of pan. Do not stretch.

Trim pastry even with pan edge. Roll out remaining pastry; set aside. Continue as directed in recipe for a top crust or a lattice top. (For a lattice top, roll remaining dough, then cut into decorative strips with a pastry wheel. After pie crust in pie pan is filled with rhubarb, lay strips across top, trim and press dough edges into crust.)

Here are some rhubarb tips

Rhubarb is a perennial vegetable with a unique taste that makes it a favorite in pies and desserts. Rhubarb is low in calories, and is a good source of both vitamin C and calcium.

The edible portion of the rhubarb plant is found in the leaf stalks (petioles); the leaves contain oxalates, which are poisonous to humans if eaten.

Michigan is the third largest producer of field-grown rhubarb in the United States.

Rhubarb is a cool season, perennial crop; therefore it requires temperatures below 40 degrees to break dormancy and to stimulate vegetative growth.

Once planted, rhubarb plantings remain productive for 8 to 15 years.

Rhubarb grows best on fertile, well-drained soils that are high in organic matter. The crop can tolerate soil pH as low as 5.0; however, maximum yields are attained at a pH of 6.0 to 6.8.

Rhubarb may be planted in the spring or fall; in areas where the soil freezes deeply, it is best to wait until spring.

The crowns should be planted so that buds are just below the soil's surface. They should be covered with a soil - the soil should be pressed firmly around the root, as air pockets left around the crown will cause excessive drying.

During the first year of planting, the stalks should not be picked, since food from the leaves is needed to nourish the roots for the next year's growth. One light picking may be taken during the year following planting if the plants are vigorous, and beginning the second year following planting, the entire plant may be harvested.

When harvesting rhubarb, the first step is to cut the stalks at the soil line or pull them out individually. All of the stalks of a plant may be harvested at one time, or pulled out selectively over a four to six week period. After the stalks are cut, the leaves may be removed.

Generally, harvesting begins in late May or early June, with an option of a second harvest made in late August.

Bagel outlet is popular in survey

Einstein Bros Bagels, with 20 stores in the Detroit area, received top category scores and won the Platinum Award in Restaurants and Institutions magazine "Choice in Chains" survey for the Bread/Bakery Division.

The nationwide survey, in which questionnaires were mailed to 4,000 households, asked customers to rate restaurant chains for their food quality, menu variety, value, service, atmosphere, cleanliness and convenience.

Einstein Bros and Noah's stores are bagel café's and bakeries featuring fresh-baked bagels, a variety of cream cheese spreads, specialty coffee drinks, as well as soups, sandwiches and salads.

Currently there are 371 stores operating under the Einstein Bros Bagels brand name.

Bloomfield Hills, shopping at Eastern Market is a social event. A visitor every Saturday, Tulupman almost always finds herself engaged in conversation with somebody's she's just met. "You'll see someone carrying flowers or something you like, so you'll ask where they came from. Next thing you know, you've been blabbing for 10 minutes. You just meet all these people."

As a regular visitor, Tulupman has become friendly with the market's many vendors, as well. Stop in the Rafal Spice Company at 2521 Russell Street and you'll get a taste of the camaraderie that exists between shoppers and vendors.

Store owner Donald Rafal, for instance, likes to tell shoppers "we have a spice for every letter in the alphabet" and then name a half-a-dozen or so of the strangest ones like Zatar for "Z" and Quassi Chips for "Q."

New among the market's more than 175 vendors is the Milano Bakery, a European style bakery that is currently remodeling to create a sit-down café. Also relatively new is Eastern Market's visitor's center.

Built two years ago and located between Russell and Market streets adjacent to Shed 3, the center provides market maps and information to shoppers. It also houses historical photographs of Eastern Market, which was founded in 1802 and originally located in Detroit's Cadillac Square.

Gratiot Central Market, which houses meat and poultry vendors, is also open for business again. The market's original building burned down in 1995, but reopened a year ago after rebuilding.

Other plans for Eastern Market include setting up information kiosks for shoppers, more outdoor seating and eating tables, says Deeb.

More artisans and specialty gift shops will likely come to the market in the next few years, too, he says. "Markets are branching out from produce and flowers to artists, gift shops and other retailers. We're seeing it across the country."

brunn Kabinett $13.50 would pair with the same foods, but could take on a broiled veal chop just as well.

Wines in the Spaetlese category make perfect aperitif wines. They are off-dry, delicate yet full and definitely not sweet. What was the correct word? Balanced. Dr. H. Thanisch Brauneberger Juffer-Sonnenuhr Spaetlese $18 is unchallenged in this category.

Any apple dessert with brown spices would match with Paul Anheuser Kreuznacher Kroetenpfuhl Auslese $21.50.

Dr. H. Thanisch Bernkasteler Lay Auslese $24 had the heady aroma of mangoes. Pair it with a fresh fruit dessert. Vereinigte Hospitien Scharzhofberger Auslese $30 is a liquid dessert on its own as is Dr. Fischer Ocfener Bockstein Auslese $25.

Sipping samples: Wine tasters sip a variety of 400 wines from wineries in the Great Lakes region. Tasters awarded gold, silver and bronze medals at the Great Lakes Great Wines event Wednesday at Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge campus in Farmington Hills. The event featured foods prepared by OCC instructors, area restaurants and country clubs. The fund-raiser helped raise scholarship money for OCC's culinary arts students.

Chicken dish is ready in a hurry

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here's a stylish dinner menu to serve four. The main dish is Creamy Chicken and Mushrooms, which sounds rich and does indeed taste great, but fits in the low-fat category because it has less than 7 grams of fat per serving.

Make roasted asparagus to serve with the chicken; prepare ice cream with praline sauce for dessert and — hold your breath — you can have it all ready in 30 minutes or less.

The menu and recipes by Tamar Haspel was featured in Cooking Light magazine's April issue, along with a game plan to streamline the cook's progress.

CREAMY CHICKEN AND MUSHROOMS

(Total preparation and cooking time 25 minutes)
2 cups uncooked medium egg noodles
Cooking spray
1 pound skinless, boneless chicken breast, cut into bite-size pieces
1 teaspoon olive oil
1/2 cup chopped shallots
8-ounce package presliced mushrooms
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 cup fat-free milk
2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
1/3 cup (3 ounces) spreadable cheese with garlic and herbs
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
Chopped fresh parsley (optional)

Cook pasta according to package directions, omitting salt and fat.

While pasta cooks, heat a large nonstick skillet coated with cooking spray over medium-high heat. Add chicken, saute 4 minutes, or until done. Remove chicken from pan; set aside.

Heat oil in pan over medium-high heat. Add shallots; saute 1 minute. Add mushrooms; saute 4 minutes. Add wine, and cook for 3 minutes, or until liquid almost evaporates.

Combine milk and flour in a small bowl; stir well with a whisk. Add milk mixture to pan; cook 3 minutes or until slightly thick. Add chicken, cheese, 2 tablespoons parsley, and pepper; reduce heat, and simmer for 3 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serve over pasta; sprinkle with parsley, if desired.

Makes 4 servings (serving size 3/4 cup chicken mixture and 3/4 cup pasta).

Nutrition information per serving: 338 cal. (18 percent from fat), 6.9 g fat (2.5 g saturated fat), 37.1 g pro., 31.3 g carbo., 2.9 g fiber, 101 mg chol., 241 mg sodium.

ROASTED ASPARAGUS

1 pound trimmed asparagus
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper

Preheat oven to 400 F. Toss asparagus with oil, salt and pepper; bake for 5 minutes.

ICE CREAM WITH PRALINE SAUCE

1/2 cup fat-free caramel sauce
2 tablespoons chopped, toasted pecans
Low-fat chocolate ice cream

Game Plan:

Prepare ingredients while water for egg noodles comes to a boil.

■ Cut chicken into bite-size pieces.

■ Chop shallots and parsley.

■ Wash and trim asparagus.

■ Chop and toast pecans.

Roast asparagus in oven while chicken cooks.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

American Legion donation

Garden City Hospital received $2,800 from the 16th District of The American Legion, Department of Michigan, for the purchase of a pediatric pulse oximeter. This piece of specialized equipment will be used to monitor the heart rate, respiration, integrated pulse and oximetry of sick children.

The money was made available to the hospital through The American Legion's Tabs For Tots Program.

"We are very appreciative to The American Legion for the money to purchase this specialized piece of equipment that will help us treat children," said Gary Ley, president and CEO of the hospital. "Many pieces of medical equipment have to be made especially for children because of their physical differences. It is so nice to have an organization like The American Legion become a partner with Garden City Hospital in providing health care to the children of the community."

Skin cancer study

Beaumont doctors are the only ones in southeast Michigan participating in the Sunbelt Melanoma Trial, a research study to help develop a more effective treatment for melanoma.

Until recently, surgeons removed all the lymph nodes in the area of the melanoma to determine if the cancer had spread. However, studies have shown this subjects many patients to a major operation without improving their life expectancy.

In the research at Beaumont, doctors use sentinel node biopsy to determine if the cancer has spread. With sentinel node biopsy, the doctor injects dye at the cancer site to determine which lymph node drains the cancer site. If this "sentinel" node is found to be free of cancer, then other lymph nodes are assumed to be cancer-free also. If the sentinel node is affected by cancer cells, the patient may benefit from further treatment.

Once the severity of the cancer is determined, study participants will be randomly picked to receive: observation only; lymph node removal via surgery; or lymph node removal plus interferon. All study participants will be followed up for 10 years.

Call Beaumont's Cancer Clinical Trials office at (248) 551-7695 for more information. The office coordinates research for many cancer treatments and is currently involved in more than 100 research trials.

Cancer survivors

Scott Burton, award-winning comedian, national champion juggler, cancer survivor and author of A Life In The Balance, will bring his one-man show - Looking for Laughter in all the Wrong Places - to the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center's annual Survivors' Day celebration. This free community event will be held 1-3:30 p.m. Sunday, June 10 at Washtenaw Community College's Morris Lawrence Building, 4800 East Huron River Drive, Ann Arbor.

More than 300 cancer survivors from across Michigan, along with family members and health-care professionals, will gather to celebrate life and enjoy Burton's high-energy and life-affirming show describing his cancer survivorship.

St. Mary Mercy program pairs doctors and community members

BY RENÉE SKOGLUND

Dressed in a white lab coat, Dr. Ken Watson, superintendent of Livonia Public Schools, spent the morning observing the busy activity of St. Mary Mercy Hospital's emergency room and the afternoon getting an eagle-eye view of a carotid artery repair in surgery.

As a hospital board member, Watson was part of the hospital's new community outreach program that allows selected community members to view hospital activities up close and personal. The Healthcare Partnership Program, which debuted May 9, paired four hospital board members with doctors from various disciplines - radiology, oncology, cardiology, surgery and the emergency center - for two four-hour sessions.

The program is modeled after St. Joseph Mercy Hospital's well-established, bi-annual Community Associates Program, which invites community members for a two-day experience of shadowing doctors. Both St. Joseph's and St. Mary Mercy are members of Trinity Health, a Catholic health system in the States.

"I wasn't disappointed," said Watson of his experience. "The doctors' routines are anything but routine to me."

Dr. John Iljas, the surgeon who performed the carotid artery procedure, said he was surprised Watson didn't faint. Reaming and patching carotid arteries (located on both sides of the neck) damaged by arteriosclerosis can be quite bloody. However, Iljas liked having an outside observer.

"He was very good, very attentive. He didn't say much, which is good. He asked a lot of questions afterwards. Having lay people is always interesting. They're new to the field. It's exciting to tell our story to them."

Making the rounds with Iljas afterwards, Watson said he developed a new appreciation of the doctor-patient bond. "I saw the patients looking up (at the doctor) with such hope in their eyes. It's a tremendous responsibility."

In addition to Watson, board members included Dr. Richard McDowell, president of Schoolcraft College; Susan Rosiek, publisher of the Observer Newspapers; and David Parr, a principal for Allstate Insurance Company in Southfield.

St. Mary Mercy doctors included Dr. Vali Orandi, radiology; Drs. Ash Gokli and Michael Colice, emergency room; Dr. John Iljas, surgery/general; Dr. Syam Zampani, cardiology; Drs. John Harb and Omar Majid, surgery/urology; and Dr. Harmesh Naik, medical oncology.

Board members were chosen for the pilot program; however, as the program expands to a twice-yearly event, participants will be selected from among educators, legislatures and civic leaders, business and automotive executives, editors and reporters of local newspapers, Chamber of Commerce executives and community advisory boards, said Julie Sproul, director of marketing and public relations for St. Mary Mercy.

In other words, participants will be people who can get the word out on the good things going on at the hospital.

A success

"It was a privilege to have board members here," said Dr. Harmesh Naik, a medical oncologist. "I hope I convinced Mr. Parr that we provide cutting edge cancer therapy. I wish he could have spent two days with us. I would consider this a very successful pilot."

"Nobody has ever come to my department before. I thought it was wonderful," said Dr. Vali Orandi, a radiologist. He emphasized that St. Mary Mercy has advantages over other hospitals. "This is not a teaching hospital. If you come in a 2 a.m. with a heart attack, you have an institution-trained cardiologist seeing you."

Naik and Orandi's remarks echoed the sentiments expressed by other doctors and program participants at a dinner afterwards. The Healthcare Partnership Program's initial run was a success, they said, a solid public relations venture for the hospital and an opportunity for community members to see what doctors and hospital medical staff do best - care for patients.

"I'm pleased to be part of an organization where people are so compassionate and dedicated to patient care," said Susan Rosiek.

Today's treatments take fear out of schizophrenia

The treatment of mental illness has advanced a long way since Dr. Phillipe Pinel was first to order his psychiatric patients unshackled from the hospital walls in 1793.

Yet despite today's effective therapies, many afflicted with schizophrenia and related disorders remain confined by societal misperceptions, fear and ignorance.

To help free the more than 2.5 million Americans who suffer from the effects and misunderstanding of the debilitating illness, the National Schizophrenia Foundation is proud to announce May 24 as national Schizophrenia Awareness Day. This is the fourth annual observance for building public awareness of schizophrenia-related disorders.

Affecting about one percent of Americans, schizophrenia is a biologically-based brain disorder. Estimates of annual treatment costs range from $32.5-$65 million annually.

Striking more men than women, signs of the disease generally appear between the ages of 18 and 25. Symptoms include hallucinations (both auditory voices and images), paranoid delusions, delusions of grandeur, feelings of confusion, apathy and disordered thoughts. The German derivation of schizophrenia translates to "splitting of the thought process."

Schizophrenia does not involve multiple or split personalities; it is not contagious; and it is not a reason for discrimination, isolation or banishment.

Pioneer

A pioneer in the humane treatment of patients suffering from mental disorders, French physician Phillipe Pinel startled his colleagues when he ordered his staff to free mental patients from the chains anchoring them to the walls of the men's "insane asylum" in Paris.

Since Pinel's day, medical researchers have confirmed that persons with schizophrenia-related disorders are not violent dangers to society, particularly when adequately treated with medicine and other therapies.

One major public misperception is that schizophrenia is a mental disorder with no basis in biology, said Dr. Rajiv Tandon, professor of psychiatry and schizophrenia researcher at the University of Michigan. Researchers have discovered that schizophrenia is a disorder of the brain, with clear abnormalities in structure, function and chemistry.

"With the breathtaking advances in brain and drug research, we can treat patients earlier and more effectively," said Tandon. "This stability can translate to their families, their employers and their communities."

Senior retirement facility gets a face lift

Maple Manor of Wayne, a senior retirement community, held its open house Saturday, May 19. Formerly the Venoy Nursing Home, the renovated facility consists of 62 newly refurbished apartments and offer services such as housekeeping, meals, transportation, and 24-hour staffing. The majority of apartments are one-bedroom; however, there are two-bedroom apartments available.

Also included are amenities such as the Maple Manor Theatre, library and game room.

"We are extremely excited to finally open our doors to the community," said Jennifer Finley, executive director. "Refurbishing our apartments has taken slightly longer than we first anticipated, but I think the Wayne residents who are interested in our community will appreciate the extra time we've put into it."

The community has been very receptive to the change, she added. "Many residents can't believe that this was once a nursing home."

"Our mission is to provide a worry-free lifestyle for not only our residents, but also for their families," said Bryan Neal, assistant director. "We have in place the services that will maintain our residents independence." Call Maple Manor at (734)

Governor Engler urges support for the Red Cross

DETROIT — Gov. John Engler urged Michiganians to help the American Red Cross raise $20 million by June 30 to support disaster relief efforts in communities across the state and around the country.

"In Michigan alone, the American Red Cross' 30 chapters spent over $1.4 million in direct assistance to state disaster victims in 1999 and provided vital lifesaving assistance to more than 11,000 individuals," Governor Engler said.

Nationwide, the Red Cross has spent more than $33 million providing lifesaving relief to the victims of almost 300 major disasters in 45 states but has raised only 60 percent of these expenses, putting a significant strain on the organization's resources.

"The American Red Cross responds to a disaster every eight minutes, around the clock, 365 days a year," noted Dr. John Clizbe, vice president of Disaster Services at the American Red Cross. "Due to many costly disasters and the absence of major high visibility disasters, our costs have outpaced our contributions from the public."

Engler added: "Michiganians are generous and compassionate people who are ready to help their neighbors in time of need. Through monetary contributions to the Disaster Relief Fund, the people of our state can ensure that the Red Cross will be there immediately when disasters strike, whether it's an apartment fire, windstorms, or fires, like the forest fire in the Thumb, which was the first disaster ever handled by the Red Cross in 1881."

All American Red Cross disaster assistance is free, made possible by voluntary donations of time and money from the American people. To help the victims of disaster, contributions can be made to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund by calling (313) 833-2664 or 1-800-257-7575 (in Spanish). Internet users may make a secure online credit card contribution by visiting www.semredcross.org

Henry Ford symposium addresses end-of-life care

Storey will present the ABCs of palliative care 8:30-10:30 a.m. He also will discuss forgiveness, meaning, and hope in a patient's final months 2:45-4 p.m.

In addition, workshops will be held on hospice care paths, the hospice social worker, spiritual care, the role of nursing home volunteer and bereavement coordinators, and nearing death phenomena.

Speakers include Sister Mary Cecilia Eagen, former director of Hospice Education and author of the hospice curriculum at Madonna University; Kelly Rhoades, chairwoman of the Hospice Education Department at Madonna University; Loretta Crow, nurse and hospice director for Henry Ford; Diana Tomezak, social worker for Bon Secours Cottage Health Services Hospice; and Mary Jane Ward, volunteer coordinator of Henry Ford's Hospice Nursing Home Service.

Board members came away from their day-long experience with a heightened awareness of what being a doctor means. As Ilijas said, "When you see a case from start to finish you get a larger prospective than what you see on TV."

Dave Parr said he was very moved by a scene in which the doctor told an aging mother's family that she was terminal. "The patient's son said he was so impressed with the 'caring care' that he wanted to become a hospital volunteer."

Dr. Richard McDowell, who once taught anatomy and physiology, was impressed with the cardiologists' skills during cauterization procedures. "Watching them I became aware of the skills they had that enabled them to do this in such a marvelous manner."

He was equally impressed by the concern the cardiologists and medical staff had for the anxiety levels of patients undergoing heart catheterizations. "In each case they called the patient by name and described what they were doing. They had a tremendous concern to reduce the stress levels of patients."

The future "National Hospital Week seemed like a good week to launch this new program because it opens the doors of the hospital to the community. It's important for the our community leaders to see first-hand the quality of medical care and technology available right here and get a chance to speak directly with our doctors about health care issues," said David Spivey, president and CEO, St. Mary Mercy Hospital.

Besides seeing what doctors do, the board members saw what doctors need.

"I can see why the emergency room needed to be expanded," said Rosiek. "Dr. Colice never sat down."

"I was lobbied all afternoon for a cancer center," said Parr about Niak's persuasive techniques. "I was told 'We'll take care of people better because we're not just crunching numbers. We're not going to be a Karmanos cancer center. We're going to be a St. Mary Mercy Cancer Center.'"

St. Mary Mercy Hospital recently celebrated their one-year anniversary as a member of Trinity Health. The Healthcare Partnership Program is a small part of a new marketing focus as the hospital defines and implement new goals.

"It is really important to provide this kind of opportunity to get the word out. Get as many people as you can to see this. This is powerful public relations," said Watson.

All participants were given evaluation forms and asked to suggest future participants.

The next Healthcare Partnership Program will run in the fall. "We'll soon be contacting people for that program. Interested community leaders should call me directly," said Sproul. She can be reached at (734) 655-1591 or e-mail: sproulj@trinity-health.org.

Diagnosis

To be diagnosed as having schizophrenia, one must have associated symptoms for at least six months. Medical doctors specializing in mental illness are qualified to make the diagnosis.

About 70 percent of patients can control schizophrenia with anti-psychotic drug therapy.

Drugs can be 80-90 percent effective in relieving auditory hallucinations. Currently, about 25 percent of patients can recover fully.

About 50 percent will improve over ten years of treatment. With drug treatment, 60 percent of patients remain out of hospitals longer than those not on drug therapy, who have a 20 percent chance of avoiding hospitalization.

While medical advances have helped schizophrenics around the world since Pinel's day, the social barriers for it sufferers still exist. To that end, the National Schizophrenia Foundation administers a key therapeutic resource, Schizophrenics Anonymous.

The support group was formed in 1985 by Joanne Verbanic in Detroit. It has grown to an international support network with over 150 groups worldwide, helping more than 4,800 people.

Does the Dow Jones Industrial Average really matter to anyone?

Even if you've never invested a penny in the stock market, you've likely heard of the Dow, or Dow Jones Industrial Average index. The Dow's performance is quoted every week night on local and national newscasts, and it has appeared prominently in the past decade in numerous media stories focusing on the stock market's record-breaking performance.

ERIC ZIMMERMAN

While all the attention given to the Dow makes an interesting story for financial editors, what does it mean to you as an individual investor? Why does it garner more attention than other stock market indexes? And, is it really necessary to track the Dow's daily ups and downs as reported on the evening news? For the answers to these questions, let's take a look at what the Dow is and how it came about.

Granddaddy of indexes

The Dow was created on May 26, 1896, as a way to help investors see how the stock market performs on a broad scale. Before the Dow, investors could only track the market's performance by following individual stocks. Originally composed of just 12 stocks chosen by Charles Dow, co-founder of Dow Jones & Co., publisher of The Wall Street Journal, the Dow was literally an "average." Charles Dow added up the stocks' prices and divided the total by 12.

After Charles Dow's death, editors of The Wall Street Journal assumed management of the index. Some relatively minor changes have occurred over the years. In 1928, for example, editors expanded the Dow to include 30 stocks and adjusted the formula used to calculate the index's daily average. The new formula, still used today, prevented stock splits, mergers and other changes from distorting the average.

Strong performers

The Dow measures the performance of just 30 actively traded issues from large companies, such as IBM, General Motors and AT&T. The Wall Street Journal editors select and periodically change the stocks that comprise the Dow, making it different from other commonly used market measures, which typically index and weight stocks according to their market capitalization (market capitalization measures a company's size by multiplying the number of shares issued by its current market price). Dow companies generally represent 15 to 20 percent of the total market value of New York Stock Exchange issues.

Over the years, the mix of companies measured by the Dow has changed several times. Editors tweak the Dow from time to time to better reflect the strongest parts of the American economy. In November 1999, for example, the Dow dropped Goodyear, Sears Roebuck, Chevron and Union Carbide in favor of Microsoft, Intel, SBC Communications and Home Depot, companies with stock that has performed well in recent years.

The bigger picture?

Today, at the age of 105, the Dow is still the most widely quoted stock index in the country, the one people remember when the market hits new peaks or valleys. It's often cited as an indicator of overall market direction, and individual investors often measure their portfolio performances against it.

Critics of the Dow, citing the index's relatively short list of companies, complain that it doesn't accurately reflect the overall performance of the American stock market. Critics also claim that other market indexes, such as the Standard & Poor's 500 (500 large-capitalization stocks) and the Wilshire 5000 (all stocks on the New York and American exchanges, as well as the NASDAQ) are more accurate performance benchmarks.

Defenders of the Dow argue that even though the index comprises just 30 issues, each company represents a major sector of the economy and provides a reliable indication of overall stock price trends.

As an individual investor, the Dow may be most useful to you as an indicator of general market trends rather than as a benchmark for measuring your investment portfolio performance. For your personal investment portfolio, you'll likely want to include a range of investments that extends well beyond the Dow's scope of 30 companies. Diversification – spreading the investment dollars in your portfolio among multiple assets and asset classes – can help you moderate risk and increase your portfolio's earnings potential.

Your investment choices should be influenced by your personal situation, financial goals, investment timeline and tolerance for risk. These factors – not day-to-day changes in the Dow or other market indexes – should guide your investment decisions.

Your next move

If the daily ups and downs of the Dow and other indexes leave you puzzled, or if you'd simply like help diversifying your portfolio, consider consulting a professional financial adviser. A qualified financial adviser can help you develop an investment plan that fits with your financial goals, needs and risk tolerance.

Homes in Labana Woods deliver value

Multi Building Co. and Singh Construction have targeted the new home market with Labana Woods, a platted community of 80 homes off Wick Road just west of Beech Daly in Taylor.

Customers can get a good deal there, both companies maintain.

"I think it's a good value for the dollar, a lot of amenities for the dollars," said Stacey A. Pardikes, sales and marketing director for Multi Building.

"It's a very good value, dollar for dollar, between new homes and used homes here," said T.S. Chhatwal, Singh Construction president. "Price is very reasonable compared to if you lived in Canton."

2 builders, 12 plans

Singh Construction presents four plans ranging in price from $195,000 for a ranch of 1,650 square feet with three bedrooms and two baths to $229,000 for a colonial of 2,200 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Multi Building offers eight plans.

They start at $194,900 for a three-bedroom, two-bath ranch of 1,650 square feet and go up to $242,900 for a story-and-a-half of 2,400 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Both builders offer the same standard features at base price. Those include two-car garage, first-floor laundry, basement, fireplace, range and dishwasher, ceramic or wood flooring in the foyer and carpeting throughout.

Brick and vinyl siding are primary exterior materials.

Labana Woods should be attractive with nearly nine acres of trees, wetlands, ponds and park areas scattered about the grounds.

"It's not too huge," Jennifer Reeve, sales manager for Multi Building, said of the community. "There's enough houses to make a nice neighborhood, but not excessive, like 150 lots."

"We're in close proximity to area freeways and shopping," Pardikes added.

"It's near almost anyone," Chhatwal said. "It's right near Telegraph and not far from the freeway (I-94)."

Chhatwal projects that expansion of Wayne County Metropolitan Airport and growth of businesses nearby will be a boon to Labana Woods.

Taylor has a lot to offer, too, Reeve added. "The city is in the process of building a hockey/ soccer complex. The city also has lots of recreational activity, festivals."

Singh's models

Singh has built three models.

"My design usually is very different - contemporary and soft contemporary," Chhatwal said. "I don't build traditional homes."

"The unique little touches that he adds, the contemporary look of the homes, those are eye-catchers," said Julia Short, Singh's sales rep.

The Fairfield, a story-and-a-half of 2,050 square feet, features a master with walk-in closet and shower, great room with volume ceiling, dining area and kitchen with island on the main floor.

Three bedrooms and a bath with combination tub/shower is upstairs. A balcony slightly overhangs the great room at the head of the stairs.

Base price is $219,500. The model, as is with upgrades, carries a price of $249,900.

The Franklin, a colonial of 2,200 square feet, contains a living room, dining room, family room and a pass-through wall with the sink oriented toward the family room from the kitchen/nook.

A sitting area, three secondary bedrooms, a full bath and the master with dressing area, combination tub/shower and walk-in closet are upstairs.

Base price is $229,000, the model as is $239,900.

The Lexington, a colonial of 2,050 square feet, has a living room, dining room and kitchen/nook downstairs, a master with shower and walk-in closet, three secondary bedrooms and a second full bath up.

Base price is $214,900, the model $239,900.

Multi's models

Multi Building has built two models.

The Maple, a colonial of 2,475 square feet, features a living room, dining room, family room with sloped ceiling and kitchen/nook on the main floor.

The deluxe master, at a premium of $3,700, showcases a separate jet tub and shower, walk-in closet and two-sink vanity. The standard master has a shower and large walk-in closet.

Three other bedrooms and a bath are upstairs. Base price is $232,900, the model as is, about $270,000.

The Maple plan has served Multi Building well in such communities as

Pebble Creek in Brighton, Hunters Creek in South Lyon and Brookside Village in Canton.

The other model, the Cypress, is a colonial of 2,300 square feet with two-story foyer, den, dining room and great room with volume ceiling.

Four bedrooms, including master with separate tub and shower (standard here) and a second bath are up.

Base price is $232,900, the model about $282,000.

Labana Woods is served by city water, sewers and sidewalks. It's within the Taylor school boundaries.

The property tax rate is $43.41 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $230,000 house there would pay about $5,000 the first year.

The annual association fee is $200. Most lots carry a premium of $6,000 or less.

Here's how to carpet stairs on your own

BY POPULAR MECHANICS
FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Stairs leading directly from a living room or central hallway may look more attractive and inviting when carpeted.

And a carpeted stairway will quiet your home by softening footsteps and absorbing sound waves. Carpeted stairs are safer, too, lessening your chances of slipping.

Avoid utility-grade carpeting. Stairways get heavy wear, especially along the tread nosing. Choose an easy-to-clean variety with a dense pile.

Carpet with attached cushion backing is cheaper and easier to put down, but isn't recommended for stairways. Since you want a long, narrow runner, you may be able to buy remnants of high-quality carpeting at much less than the going rate for a room-size piece.

The runner need not be one length. Two or more sections can hide the seam under the tread nosing where it will be unnoticeable.

Remember, the pile on each piece should always lie facing toward the bottom of the stairs. Both ascending and descending, the pressure of your foot is mostly toward the tread nosing, so unless the pile faces the same way, wear will be excessive — perhaps doubled.

Feel pile direction by running your hand lightly across the carpet.

The most common method for carpeting a stairway with a closed wall on one side and open balusters at the other is to roll both edges under.

Allow about one inch from the wall with 1-1/4 inch roll under at the edges. If your carpeting won't unravel at a cut edge, you can butt it against the sidewall without rolling under.

Determine the total length of the runner by measuring one tread and one riser, wrapping the tape measure around the nosing and holding it against the riser below the tread with your thumb.

Add one inch to allow for the thickness of the padding under the carpet. Multiply this figure by the number of steps. Remember to allow extra carpeting if your runner is in two or more sections, since each section must join under a tread nosing.

To get width, measure from the wall to the base of the balusters, or whatever portion of the step you will be covering. Add 2-1/2 inches for rolling the edges under 1-1/4 inches for each side. Since you will probably need to trim at least one edge along the runner's length, allow an additional inch for this.

If your carpeting has irregular edges, be sure you have enough material to trim the full length of both sides straight.

Measure a stairway with a landing as if the landing were one deep step. Ideally, cover the landing and the first riser above it with one piece.

If you can't, include the riser with the steps above it. Winder steps — wedge-shaped steps that turn a corner — require carpeting about 50 percent wider than a straight runner, and waste considerable material.

You need a separate piece for each step and the riser above it. The pile on each tread must be at right angles to the nosing and facing downstairs.

If your stairs have been carpeted, remove old nails or tacks and any quarter-round trim or molding, check treads and risers for looseness and secure any that need it using glue and 8d finishing nails.

Refinish the parts of the treads and risers that will show before putting down carpeting.

Easy ways to cut energy bill

(NAPSA) — It doesn't take a lot of work to lower your energy costs. Here's a simple checklist from Earth Share:

■ Reduce the temperature of your water heater to 120 degrees. You'll save energy and avoid scalding your hands.

■ Install an insulating blanket around your water heater. It will pay for itself in a year or less.

■ Use energy-saving settings on refrigerators, dishwashers, washing machines and clothes dryers. Air dry your dishes instead of using the dishwasher's heater.

■ Clean or replace your home's furnace, air-conditioner, and heat pump filters to improve air flow.

■ Seal up the largest air leaks in your home—the ones that feel drafty or whistle on windy days.

■ The worst energy-drainers usually are holes in walls to accommodate pipes and gaps around chimneys.

Consumer Mortgage Advisory #10: Know all of the fees.

Lender mortgage fees typically run $600 to $800, plus the cost of title insurance. However, some companies may charge $2,000 to $4,000 or even more. Higher fees should buy you a lower interest rate. Know what your true costs are; what you're getting for your money and whether it's worth it. Always check at least three lenders.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

by GARY S. MEYERS

REFINANCE RULES PART 1 OF 3 PARTS

It's another refinance boom. And, as with every refinance boom two things happen, more people want new mortgages and are prepared to lay out cash for them and more mortgage companies spring up to take that cash. While most will provide reasonably priced products that work, too many don't. The problem for consumers is that they can't tell difference until they are committed. No pun intended.

This week The Meyers Report begins a new series of the "rules" for wise mortgage hunting and what can go wrong is you choose badly.

(RULE #1) PICK THE RIGHT LENDER FIRST. Before you look for the lowest interest rate, choose a lender that you know will be there at the closing table with enough money to close, at the promised rate and with the promised closing costs. "You also want to know that, in the event of problems, the lender will be there when you need them today, tomorrow and next year," said Peter Boomer, vp/regional manager for Chase Manhattan Mortgage.

(RULE #2) CHOOSE THE RIGHT MORTGAGE PROGRAM. All mortgages are not alike. Even in the computer age, we are still unique. Some of us need smaller down payments, or higher income ratios to qualify. Perhaps you need to rehab or upgrade your new dream house to increase its value. Different lenders have different programs to meet those needs. Choose the lender who has the best program for you. If the lender is honest, the mortgage rate will be competitive and the fees will be relatively low.

(RULE #3) THE TRUST RULE. Don't just follow the lowest rate advertised. The wise borrower should first find out if, "they can trust the loan officer and their company? And, can they help you?" Unless you are absolutely assured of a yes to both of those questions, the lowest advertised interest rates are irrelevant, or worse, dangerous to your financial health.

But there is a problem with Rule #3, the trust rule. There is no local, state, or federal agency banking for an Office of the Commissioner of Banks and Real Estate.

The sad fact is this: A state license to do business in a state is no guarantee of performance, strength or integrity. However, banks, thrifts credit unions, and insurance companies are heavily regulated and routinely examined by state and federal agencies, such as the FDIC, the U.S. Controller of the Currency and the SEC if they are publicly traded. The longer a company is established, the more it is tied into the community and the more it must be responsive to good and bad press.

Our advice for consumers: Stay with name brand lenders, who have been around for a long time. These companies have a lot to lose if any of their employees behaves badly. They also have the financial strength to correct mistakes made by their employees, others do not.

Does this mean that all mortgage brokers are bad? Absolutely not. Just be sure to know with whom you are dealing and know what is a fair price, including closing costs. Above all, remember, if the offer is too good to be true, be very careful.

It all starts with design

Owners of new homes commonly ask how to simplify landscaping projects. Begin with a design - the easy answer to landscaping success.

Usually, the best approach is to hire a professional landscaper or knowledgeable local nursery to draw up the design, according to Bob Misovich, Sears buyer of non-powered lawn and garden equipment.

"A well designed and maintained landscape can provide years of family enjoyment and add 15 percent or more equity to your property's value," says Misovich. "With a design in hand, many homeowners can complete most of the initial work and upkeep as a do-it-yourself project."

Public, Private Areas

For example, the accompanying drawing by Marianne Binetti, author of Easy Answers for a Great Garden, shows a design for the public area of a home on a typical suburban lot.

The public area is that part of your property regularly seen by guests and passers-by. Trees should frame the house, and an attractive arrangement of shrubs and other foliage should be planted along the foundation.

The foundation planting should accent your home's entrance, but not appear overgrown or cluttered. Repetition of plant material helps to declutter the overall look.

Also, plants need to be in proper scale with your house. Choose compact or dwarf shrubs for small houses.

Using slower-growing, disease-resistant plants specific to your climate cuts down on maintenance. This is where your local nursery can help with specific recommendations.

Your landscape also requires private space with quiet retreats, pleasant views and recreation areas. Every home also has service areas containing such necessities as garbage cans, air conditioners and firewood that need to be screened from view.

Extension of house

Think of your landscape as an extension of your home's interior. Look at the views from each window as you develop a design with your landscaper.

Walk over your property, noting both its good and bad features. Where are drives, walks and utilities located? Do you want to modify the way sun and wind strike the house by planting shade trees or windbreaks? Would you like to accentuate some views and hide others?

Consider how your family will use the property. Do you need an open, grassy recreation area? Would you like to have a patio or deck? Is anyone in your family allergic to plants, pollens or insects? Will you plant flower beds or a vegetable garden? How much time are you willing to spend on yard maintenance?

Soil composition and sun exposure are crucial. Put the right plants in the right place, with drought-resistant plants in hot spots and shade-lovers on the north or dark side of the house.

Basic tools

Quality tools make do-it-yourself landscaping projects fun growing experiences. Sears, which sells tools with both fiberglass and hardwood handles, suggests beginning with a round-point shovel or spade, bow rake, trowel, pruner and wheelbarrow or garden cart.

A round-point shovel should be the first garden tool you purchase. It has a curved blade, usually 8-1/2 in. wide and 12 in. long, attached to a long handle. Its primary purpose is to cut roots and break topsoil. Round-point shovels also come with shorter handles and D-shaped grips.

A strong, rectangular blade with a rolled top for footing makes the spade ideal for digging, cutting, trenching and turning soil. It has a short handle and D-shaped grip for good leverage.

General purpose garden spades are equipped with flat or slightly curved blades, 7-1/4 to 8 inches wide, and 12 inches long. A tree-planting spade has a 16-inch-long tapered blade with a wide footrest on top. The blade is slightly curved for digging holes to plant trees and shrubs.

■ The bow rake has a long handle and 14 to 18-inch steel head with tines for breaking up soil. It's used for separating roots and loose stones, spreading heavy or loose material and leveling topsoil for seeding.

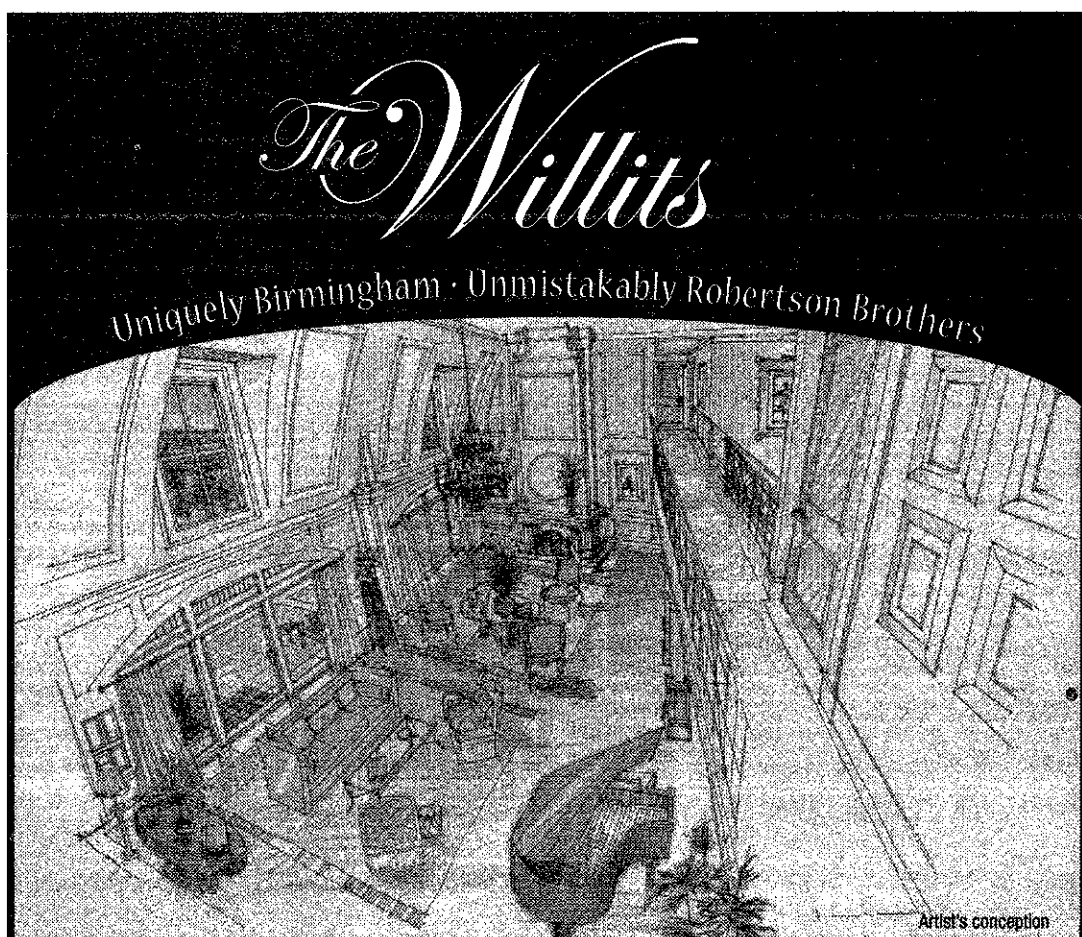

■ A trowel is essential for digging small holes, planting flowers and container gardens, moving soil and transplanting. It has a narrow, V-shaped blade of stainless steel, aluminum or resin plastic, attached to a short handle.

Pruning Trees, Shrubs

In mature landscapes, you'll need to prune spreading or low-branched trees and shrubs that block walks and infringe on patios and decks. Plantings also should not block outdoor lights or obscure the house.

A nylon strap engages the tree pruner's cutting blade when you hook a branch and pull on the long extension handle. The pruner also has a 16-inch-saw blade for cutting thicker branches.

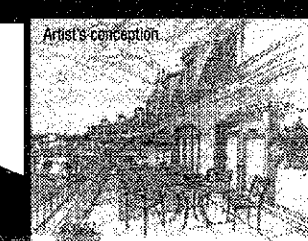

Wheelbarrows keep landscaping projects moving along.

LARRY KAUFMAN

The cooling season is just around the corner and weather forecasters are predicting a hot summer. For many homeowners the question is not if they will cool their homes but how they will cool them – air conditioner, attic fan, ceiling fan or dehumidifier. When making the decision on how to cool your home, I suggest that homeowners be aware of the seasonal energy efficiency rating (SEER) of their selected air conditioning system as well as the cost per hour of operation.

The SEER is calculated by dividing the BTUs by the wattage. A BTU is a measurement of the amount of energy needed for heating or cooling. Both ratings usually can be found on the unit nameplate.

Compare two equal-sized central air conditioning units of 30,000 BTU.

An air conditioning unit with a SEER of 6 will use 5,000 watts and cost about 44 cents an hour to operate. A newer air conditioning unit with a

■ Regardless of the approach you adopt, keeping the windows closed during the day and evening, except when operating an attic fan, will prevent the outdoor humidity from entering your house.

SEER of 12 will use 2,500 watts and cost about 22 cents an hour to operate. The higher the SEER rating the more efficiently and less expensively a cooling system operates. (A charge of 8.71 cents per kilowatt-hour was used to calculate the operating cost).

An attic fan uses 370-watts per hour and costs about 3 cents per hour of operation.

For an attic fan to work most efficiently, all the windows in the house should be open.

The open windows will avoid a back draft on the water heater flame that could start a fire in your house.

A room ceiling fan using 130 watts and will cost 1 cent per hour to operate. All ceiling fan installations should have a reversible switch. Most experts agree that during the summer the fan should be set to blow downward – feeling the breeze makes you more comfortable.

A dehumidifier using 580 watts costs 5 cents per hour.

Regardless of the approach you adopt, keeping the windows closed during the day and evening, except when operating an attic fan, will prevent the outdoor humidity from entering your house.

If you open your windows in the evening, it may cost you more money as the air conditioner will have to run more the next day to remove the

FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

If you're like many homeowners, the back yard deck is the focal point for warm-weather activities.

But as with most parts of your home, a certain amount of routine maintenance is required to keep your deck structurally sound, safe and looking its best.

While other types of lumber may have been used, chances are your deck is built of either cedar, redwood or pressure-treated yellow pine. These are the most commonly used materials because they are resistant to rot and insect damage.

When exposed to the elements for extended periods, however, any wood will show signs of weathering. Even if the deck was originally treated with a stain or preservative, this treatment eventually needs to be renewed.

Use a belt sander to smooth the boards on the deck surface. Sand only in the direction of the grain, and keep the sander moving evenly to avoid gouging. Finish with a sanding block to remove roughness and hazardous splinters.

You'll find many stains and sealers designed specifically for your deck. Several manufacturers offer products called deck brighteners (actually bleaches) which remove stains and weathering from the wood surfaces.

Apply these products according to the manufacturer's directions, usually with a stiff bristle brush, and rinse off thoroughly before applying any top coat. Be sure to wear gloves and eye protection when using these products.

Sealers protect your deck from moisture and are available clear or tinted to act as a stain. Sealers need to be renewed periodically to offer continuous protection.

Stains are offered in a range of opacities for either hiding the grain completely, or allowing it to be visible. When it comes to choosing a stain and sealer for your deck, check that the products are compatible and that they're suitable for the type of wood your deck is made with.

After a new deck has been exposed to the weather for a year or so, shrinkage of the lumber can cause nails to pop up above the deck surface.

If the boards are still flat, reset the nails slightly below the deck surface using a nailset or punch which matches the size of the nail heads.

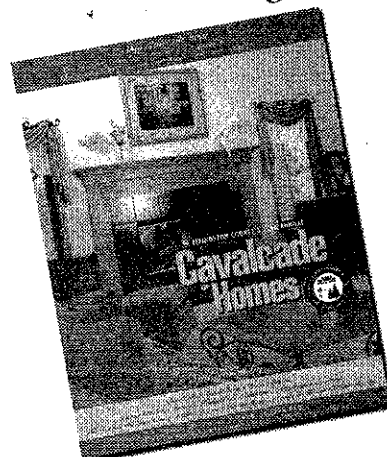

If the deck boards have cupped due to drying, there are several ways to approach the problem. If the cupping is not too severe, first remove the nails with a pry bar. Then, install galvanized decking screws to pull the board flat. If the board is too severely cupped for this technique, use a pry bar to remove the board.

Then use a circular saw to make a series of relief cuts along the back convex surface of the board, equal in depth to about one-third of the board's thickness. Replace the board and fasten with galvanized decking screws.

If this techniques fails to bring the board flat, install a new board in its place. Remember to always use galvanized nails or screws when working on a deck.

Thomas Ervin
Let's Talk About Real Estate

"BITING THE BULLET ON PRICE"

Most people would like to receive more money than their house is actually worth. You may not be willing to admit it, but it is true. For this reason, most homeowners overprice their home at the outset and reluctantly price it more reasonably after they are convinced that no one will pay their inflated price.

They usually agree to a price reduction after the original excitement about the house has long since passed in the minds of Realtors and their customers. This is regrettable because homes have a much better chance of receiving a higher price early in the listing period, not later. There is usually a relationship between the time a house is on the market and the decline of its eventual sales price. There are three occasions when you may have to bite the bullet on price:

AT TIME OF LISTING

This is the most ideal time to price the house correctly. It is not yet market weary in the minds of Realtors and buyers. It is fresh and exciting. This excitement could translate into a good sales price. For this reason, the original offer is usually the best you will ever receive.

AT TIME OF STAGNATION

If the house is getting no or very few showings, your chances of an offer are not good. The most dramatic thing you can do is reduce your asking price to make your home more attractive when compared to other properties also for sale.

AT TIME OF OFFER

You may have to accept an offering price less than you really want. As painful as this is, it may be your best alternative.

ADVICE: Ask your Realtor to provide the market facts you need to make the best possible decision.

Home's elevation presents Southwestern motif

The Abilene has a tiled roof with a covered veranda visible behind archways.

This home has two stories with the master suite downstairs and the other three bedrooms upstairs. It has the accented facade of a Southwestern home, but would fit in almost anywhere.

Crossing the beautiful veranda, one enters into the formal foyer of the Abilene. Just beyond the entry are the staircase to the second floor and also an optional staircase that could go to a basement, if one is desired.

A large window overlooks the veranda in the front and the room has an added amenity of a built-in hutch

The kitchen occupies the left rear corner of the Abilene along with the breakfast nook, the utility and a half-bath.

The kitchen has a corner walk-in pantry as well as a Lazy Susan between the range and the dual sinks. This makes spices, canned goods and the perishables easier to reach. A snack bar faces the breakfast nook.

The nook has bay windows that provide extra sunlight. A built-in desk is on the opposite wall with the half-bath behind.

Along with this extra, the great room has two large windows across the back, overlooking the back yard, and a door to the covered patio. It is also open to the roof with an 18-foot ceiling.

Opening off the great room is the master suite. It runs the full length of the left side of the Abilene. It has a huge master bath with an oversized shower, a whirlpool tub and dual sinks. A large walk-in closet behind sliding doors will hold an ample supply of clothes.

Upstairs is dedicated to the three remaining bedrooms, each with a wall closet and large windows. A full bath with a tub and single sink is at the end of the hall.

For a study plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations and an artist rendering, send $24.95 to Landmark Designs, 33127 Saguaw Road E., Cottage Grove, OR 97424. Please specify plan name (Abilene) and the number (D6805).

A catalog featuring hundreds of home plans is available for $14.95, or save by ordering both for $29.95. For faster processing, call (800) 562-1151 or visit the Web at www.landmarkdesigns.com

Today's gas fireplaces not only give us the ambiance and charm of a warm fire at the flip of a switch or a click of a remote.

They also allow a clear view to the outdoors through windows above the firebox where chimneys used to be due to direct venting.

Homes in Labana Woods deliver value

Multi Building Co. and Singh Construction have targeted the new home market with Labana Woods, a platted community of 80 homes off Wick Road just west of Beech Daly in Taylor.

Customers can get a good deal there, both companies maintain.

"I think it's a good value for the dollar, a lot of amenities for the dollars," said Stacey A. Pardikes, sales and marketing director for Multi Building.

2 builders, 12 plans

Singh Construction presents four plans ranging in price from $195,000 for a ranch of 1,650 square feet with three bedrooms and two baths to $229,000 for a colonial of 2,200 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Multi Building offers eight plans. They start at $194,900 for a three-bedroom, two-bath ranch of 1,650 square feet and go up to $242,900 for a story-and-a-half of 2,400 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Both builders offer the same standard features at base price. Those include two-car garage, first-floor laundry, basement, fireplace, range and dishwasher, ceramic or wood flooring in the foyer and carpeting throughout.

Brick and vinyl siding are primary exterior materials.

Labana Woods should be attractive with nearly nine acres of trees, wetlands, ponds and park areas scattered about the grounds.

"It's not too huge," Jennifer Reeve, sales manager for Multi Building, said of the community. "There's enough houses to make a nice neighborhood, but not excessive, like 150 lots.

"We're in close proximity to area freeways and shopping," Pardikes added.

"It's near almost anyone," Chhatwal said. "It's right near Telegraph and not far from the freeway (I-94).

Chhatwal projects that expansion of Wayne County Metropolitan Airport and growth of businesses nearby will be a boon to Labana Woods.

Taylor has a lot to offer, too, Reeve added. "The city is in the process of building a hockey/ soccer complex. The city also has lots of recreational activity, festivals."

Singh's models

Singh has built three models. "My design usually is very different - contemporary and soft contemporary," Chhatwal said. "I don't build traditional homes."

"The unique little touches that he adds, the contemporary look of the homes, those are eye-catchers," said Julia Short, Singh's sales rep.

The Fairfield, a story-and-a-half of 2,050 square feet, features a master with walk-in closet and shower, great room with volume ceiling, dining area and kitchen with island on the main floor.

Three bedrooms and a bath with combination tub/shower is upstairs. A balcony slightly overhangs the great room at the head of the stairs.

Base price is $219,500. The model, as is with upgrades, carries a price of $249,900.

The Franklin, a colonial of 2,200 square feet, contains a living room, dining room, family room and a pass-through wall with the sink oriented toward the family room from the kitchen/nook.

A sitting area, three secondary bedrooms, a full bath and the master with dressing area, combination tub/shower and walk-in closet are upstairs.

Base price is $229,000, the model as is $239,900.

The Lexington, a colonial of 2,050 square feet, has a living room, dining room and kitchen/nook downstairs, a master with shower and walk-in closet, three secondary bedrooms and a second full bath up.

Base price is $214,900, the model $239,900.

Multi's models

Multi Building has built two models.

The Maple, a colonial of 2,475 square feet, features a living room, dining room, family room with sloped ceiling and kitchen/nook on the main floor.

The deluxe master, at a premium of $3,700, showcases a separate jet tub and shower, walk-in closet and two-sink vanity. The standard master has a shower and large walk-in closet.

Three other bedrooms and a bath are upstairs. Base price is $232,900, the model as is, about $270,000.

The Maple plan has served Multi Building well in such communities as

Maple: This model is one of two erected by Multi Building

Lexington: This is one of three models by Singh Construction.

Pebble Creek in Brighton, Hunters Creek in South Lyon and Brookside Village in Canton.

The other model, the Cypress, is a colonial of 2,300 square feet with two-story foyer, den, dining room and great room with volume ceiling.

Four bedrooms, including master with separate tub and shower (standard here) and a second bath are up.

Base price is $232,900, the model about $282,000.

Labana Woods is served by city water, sewers and sidewalks. It's within the Taylor school boundaries.

The property tax rate is $43.41 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $230,000 house there would pay about $5,000 the first year.

The annual association fee is $200. Most lots carry a premium of $6,000 or less.

Multi Building's office/models at

LABANA WOODS SUBDIVISION
 Located at the northwest corner of Beech Daly and Wick in Taylor

Labana Woods, (313) 291-4626, are open 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 1-6 p.m. Monday, closed Thursday and Friday. Singh's sales models/office, (313) 292-5555, are open 1-6 p.m. daily, closed Thursday.

Here's how to carpet stairs on your own

FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Stairs leading directly from a living room or central hallway may look more attractive and inviting when carpeted.

And a carpeted stairway will quiet your home by softening footsteps and absorbing sound waves. Carpeted stairs are safer, too, lessening your chances of slipping.

Avoid utility-grade carpeting. Stairways get heavy wear, especially along the tread nosing. Choose an easy-to-clean variety with a dense pile.

Carpet with attached cushion backing is cheaper and easier to put down, but isn't recommended for stairways. Since you want a long, narrow runner, you may be able to buy remnants of high-quality carpeting at much less than the going rate for a room-size piece.

The runner need not be one length. Two or more sections can hide the seam under the tread nosing where it will be unnoticeable.

Remember, the pile on each piece should always lie facing toward the bottom of the stairs. Both ascending and descending, the pressure of your foot is mostly toward the tread nosing, so unless the pile faces the same way, wear will be excessive – perhaps doubled.

Feel pile direction by running your hand lightly across the carpet.

The most common method for carpeting a stairway with a closed wall on one side and open balusters at the other is to roll both edges under.

Allow about one inch from the wall with 1-1/4 inch roll under at the edges. If your carpeting won't unravel at a cut edge, you can butt it against the sidewall without rolling under.

Determine the total length of the runner by measuring one tread and one riser, wrapping the tape measure around the nosing and holding it against the riser below the tread with your thumb.

Add one inch to allow for the thickness of the padding under the carpet. Multiply this figure by the number of steps. Remember to allow extra carpeting if your runner is in two or more sections, since each section must join under a tread nosing.

To get width, measure from the wall to the base of the balusters, or whatever portion of the step you will be covering. Add 2-1/2 inches for rolling the edges under 1-1/4 inches for each side. Since you will probably need to trim at least one edge along the runner's length, allow an additional inch for this.

If your carpeting has irregular edges, be sure you have enough material to trim the full length of both sides straight.

Measure a stairway with a landing as if the landing were one deep step. Ideally, cover the landing and the first riser above it with one piece.

If you can't, include the riser with the steps above it. Winder steps – wedge-shaped steps that turn a corner – require carpeting about 50 percent wider than a straight runner, and waste considerable material.

You need a separate piece for each step and the riser above it. The pile on each tread must be at right angles to the nosing and facing downstairs.

If your stairs have been carpeted, remove old nails or tacks and any quarter-round trim or molding, check treads and risers for looseness and secure any that need it using glue and 8d finishing nails.

Refinish the parts of the treads and risers that will show before putting down carpeting.

Easy ways to cut energy bill

(NAPSA) – It doesn't take a lot of work to lower your energy costs. Here's a simple checklist from Earth Share:

■ Reduce the temperature of your water heater to 120 degrees. You'll save energy and avoid scalding your hands.

■ Install an insulating blanket around your water heater. It will pay for itself in a year or less.

■ Use energy-saving settings on refrigerators, dishwashers, washing machines and clothes dryers. Air dry your dishes instead of using the dishwasher's heater.

■ Clean or replace your home's furnace, air-conditioner, and heat pump filters to improve air flow.

■ Seal up the largest air leaks in your home—the ones that feel drafty or whistle on windy days.

■ The worst energy-drainers usually are holes in walls to accommodate pipes and gaps around chimneys.

Michigan Mortgage Reality Check

Consumer Mortgage Advisory #10:
Know all of the fees.

Lender mortgage fees typically run $600 to $800, plus the cost of title insurance. However, some companies may charge $2,000 to $4,000 or even more. Higher fees should buy you a lower interest rate. Know what your true costs are; what you're getting for your money and whether it's worth it. Always check at least three lenders.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

by GARY S. MEYERS

It's another refinance boom. And, as with every refinance boom two things happen, more people want new mortgages and are prepared to lay out cash for them and more mortgage companies spring up to take that cash. While most will provide reasonably priced products that work, too many don't. The problem for consumers is that they can't tell difference until they are committed. No pun intended.

This week The Meyers Report begins a new series of the "rules" for wise mortgage hunting and what can go wrong is you choose badly.

(RULE #1) PICK THE RIGHT LENDER FIRST. Before you look for the lowest interest rate, choose a lender that you know will be there at the closing table with enough money to close, at the promised rate and with the promised closing costs. "You also want to know that, in the event of problems, the lender will be there when you need them today, tomorrow and next year," said Peter Boomer, vp/regional manager for Chase Manhattan Mortgage.

(RULE #2) CHOOSE THE RIGHT MORTGAGE PROGRAM. All mortgages are not alike. Even in the computer age, we are still unique. Some of us need smaller down payments, or higher income ratios to qualify. Perhaps you need to rehab or upgrade your new dream house to increase its value. Different lenders have different programs to meet those needs. Choose the lender who has the best program for you. If the lender is honest, the mortgage rate will be competitive and the fees will be relatively low.

(RULE #3) THE TRUST RULE. Don't just follow the lowest rate advertised. The wise borrower should first find out if, "they can trust the loan officer and their their company? And, can they help you?" Unless you are absolutely assured of a yes to both of those questions, the lowest advertised interest rates are irrelevant, or worse, dangerous to your financial health.

But there is a problem with Rule #3, the trust rule. There is no local, state, or federal agency banking for an Office of the Commissioner of Banks and Real Estate.

The sad fact is this: A state license to do business in a state is no guarantee of performance, strength or integrity. However, banks, thrifts credit unions, and insurance companies are heavily regulated and routinely examined by state and federal agencies, such as the FDIC, the U.S. Controller of the Currency and the SEC if they are publicly traded. The longer a company is established, the more it is tied into the community and the more it must be responsive to good and bad press.

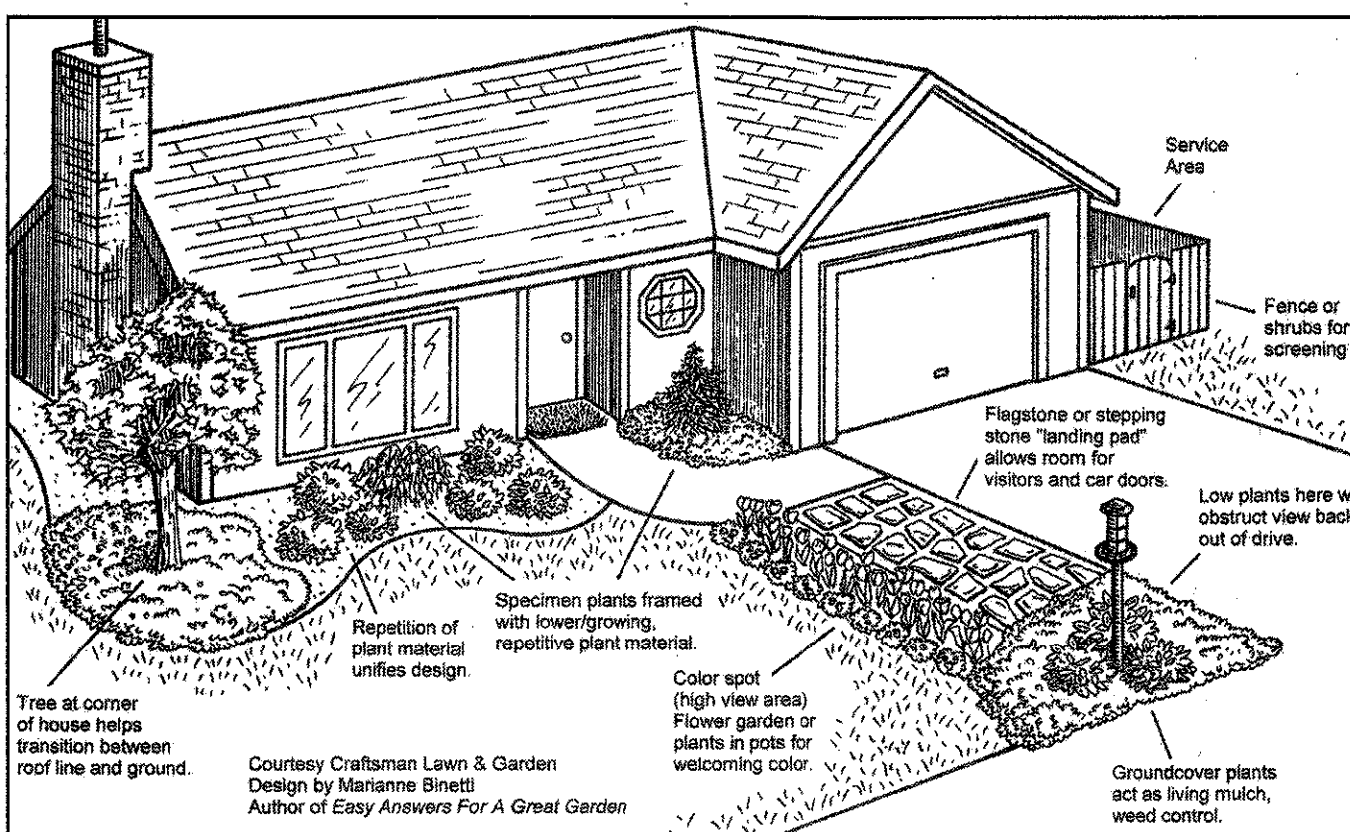

Our advice for consumers: Stay with name brand lenders, who have been around for a long time. These companies have a lot to lose if any of their employees behaves badly. They also have the financial strength to correct mistakes made by their employees, others do not.

Does this mean that all mortgage brokers are bad? Absolutely not. Just be sure to know with whom you are dealing and know what is a fair price, including closing costs. Above all, remember, if the offer is too good to be true, be very careful.

that will tell you if a lender is in trouble, has numerous complaints against them or is under investigation for anything, even criminal activity.

"We are prohibited by law from releasing any information about any mortgage licensee who has complaints against them or is under investigation. We can release information only if there is an indictment, conviction, revocation or surrender of licenses, because only at that point is the issue public record," said Dea Brennan, a director of mortgage

Owners of new homes commonly ask how to simplify landscaping projects. Begin with a design - the easy answer to landscaping success.

Usually, the best approach is to hire a professional landscaper or knowledgeable local nursery to draw up the design, according to Bob Misevich, Sears buyer of non-powered lawn and garden equipment.

"A well designed and maintained landscape can provide years of family enjoyment and add 15 percent or more equity to your property's value," says Misevich. "With a design in hand, many homeowners can complete most of the initial work and upkeep as a do-it-yourself project."

Public, Private Areas

For example, the accompanying drawing by Marianne Binetti, author of Easy Answers for a Great Garden, shows a design for the public area of a home on a typical suburban lot.

The public area is that part of your property regularly seen by guests and passers-by. Trees should frame the house, and an attractive arrangement of shrubs and other foliage should be planted along the foundation.

The foundation planting should accent your home's entrance, but not appear overgrown or cluttered. Repetition of plant material helps to declutter the overall look.

Also, plants need to be in proper scale with your house. Choose compact or dwarf shrubs for small houses.

Using slower-growing, disease-resistant plants specific to your climate cuts down on maintenance. This is where your local nursery can help with specific recommendations.

Your landscape also requires private space with quiet retreats, pleasant views and recreation areas. Every home also has service areas containing such necessities as garbage cans, air conditioners and firewood that need to be screened from view.

Extension of house

Think of your landscape as an extension of your home's interior. Look at the views from each window as you develop a design with your landscaper.

Walk over your property, noting both its good and bad features. Where are drives, walks and utilities located? Do you want to modify the way sun and wind strike the house by planting shade trees or windbreaks? Would you like to accentuate some views and hide others?

Consider how your family will use the property. Do you need an open, grassy recreation area? Would you like to have a patio or deck? Is anyone in your family allergic to plants, pollens or insects? Will you plant flower beds or a vegetable garden? How much time are you willing to spend on yard maintenance?

Soil composition and sun exposure are crucial. Put the right plants in the right place, with drought-resistant plants in hot spots and shade-lovers on the north or dark side of the house.

Basic tools

Quality tools make do-it-yourself landscaping projects fun growing experiences. Sears, which sells tools with both fiberglass and hardwood handles, suggests beginning with a round-point shovel or spade, bow rake, trowel, pruner and wheelbarrow or garden cart.

A round-point shovel should be the first garden tool you purchase. It has a curved blade, usually 8-1/2 in. wide and 12 in. long, attached to a long handle. Its primary purpose is to cut roots and break topsoil. Round-point shovels also come with shorter handles and D-shaped grips.

A strong, rectangular blade with a rolled top for footing makes the spade ideal for digging, cutting, trenching and turning soil. It has a short handle and D-shaped grip for good leverage.

General purpose garden spades are equipped with flat or slightly curved blades, 7-1/4 to 8 inches wide, and 12 inches long. A tree-planting spade has a 16-inch-long tapered blade with a wide footrest on top. The blade is slightly curved for digging holes to plant trees and shrubs.

■ The bow rake has a long handle and 14 to 18-inch steel head with tines for breaking up soil. It's used for separating roots and loose stones, spreading heavy or loose material and leveling topsoil for seeding.

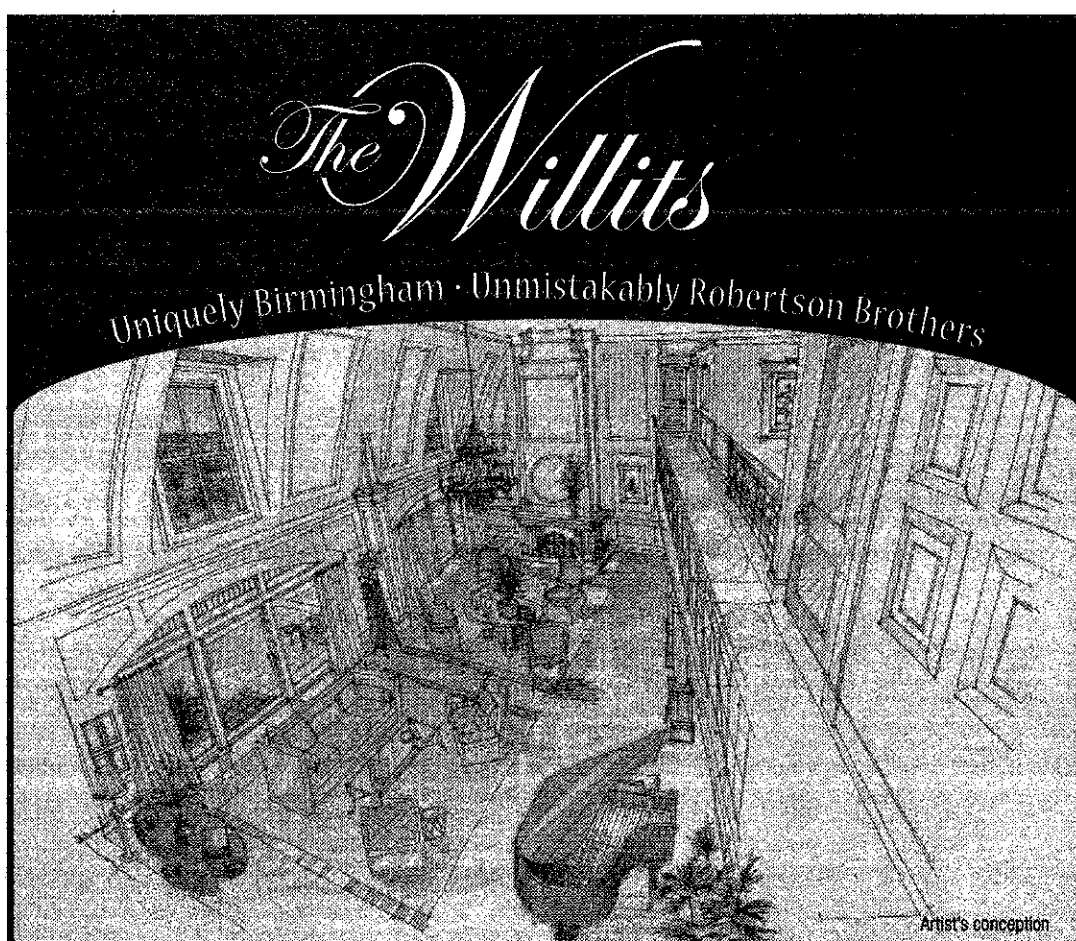

■ A trowel is essential for digging small holes, planting flowers and container gardens, moving soil and transplanting. It has a narrow, V-shaped blade of stainless steel, aluminum or resin plastic, attached to a short handle.

Pruning Trees, Shrubs

In mature landscapes, you'll need to prune spreading or low-branched trees and shrubs that block walks and infringe on patios and decks. Plantings also should not block outdoor lights or obscure the house.

A nylon strap engages the tree pruner's cutting blade when you hook a branch and pull on the long extension handle. The pruner also has a 16-inch-saw blade for cutting thicker branches.

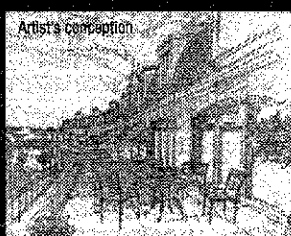

Wheelbarrows keep landscaping projects moving along.

LARRY KAUFMAN

The cooling season is just around the corner and weather forecasters are predicting a hot summer. For many homeowners the question is not if they will cool their homes but how they will cool them — air conditioner, attic fan, ceiling fan or dehumidifier. When making the decision on how to cool your home, I suggest that homeowners be aware of the seasonal energy efficiency rating (SEER) of their selected air conditioning system as well as the cost per hour of operation.

The SEER is calculated by dividing the BTUs by the wattage. A BTU is a measurement of the amount of energy needed for heating or cooling. Both ratings usually can be found on the unit nameplate.

Compare two equal-sized central air conditioning units of 30,000 BTU.

An air conditioning unit with a SEER of 6 will use 5,000 watts and cost about 44 cents an hour to operate. A newer air conditioning unit with a

■ Regardless of the approach you adopt, keeping the windows closed during the day and evening, except when operating an attic fan, will prevent the outdoor humidity from entering your house.

SEER of 12 will use 2,500 watts and cost about 22 cents an hour to operate. The higher the SEER rating the more efficiently and less expensively a cooling system operates. (A charge of 8.71 cents per kilowatt-hour was used to calculate the operating cost).

An attic fan uses 370-watts per hour and costs about 3 cents per hour of operation.

For an attic fan to work most efficiently, all the windows in the house should be open.

The open windows will avoid a back draft on the water heater flame that could start a fire in your house.

A room ceiling fan using 130 watts and will cost 1 cent per hour to operate. All ceiling fan installations should have a reversible switch. Most experts agree that during the summer the fan should be set to blow downward — feeling the breeze makes you more comfortable.

A dehumidifier using 580 watts costs 5 cents per hour.

Regardless of the approach you adopt, keeping the windows closed during the day and evening, except when operating an attic fan, will prevent the outdoor humidity from entering your house.

If you open your windows in the evening, it may cost you more money as the air conditioner will have to run more the next day to remove the humidity. A constant level of humidity will result in more efficient operation of the cooling system.

How's that deck looking?

FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

If you're like many homeowners, the back yard deck is the focal point for warm-weather activities.

But as with most parts of your home, a certain amount of routine maintenance is required to keep your deck structurally sound, safe and looking its best.

While other types of lumber may have been used, chances are your deck is built of either cedar, redwood or pressure-treated yellow pine. These are the most commonly used materials because they are resistant to rot and insect damage.

When exposed to the elements for extended periods, however, any wood will show signs of weathering. Even if the deck was originally treated with a stain or preservative, this treatment eventually needs to be renewed.

The first thing to do is inspect the surfaces of the deck and railing for excessive splintering. If splintering is a problem, sanding the surface is the simplest solution.

Use a belt sander to smooth the boards on the deck surface. Sand only in the direction of the grain, and keep the sander moving evenly to avoid gouging. Finish with a sanding block to remove roughness and hazardous splinters.

You'll find many stains and sealers designed specifically for your deck. Several manufacturers offer products called deck brighteners (actually bleaches) which remove stains and weathering from the wood surfaces.

Apply these products according to the manufacturer's directions, usually with a stiff bristle brush, and rinse off thoroughly before applying any top coat. Be sure to wear gloves and eye protection when using these products.

Sealers protect your deck from moisture and are available clear or tinted to act as a stain. Sealers need to be renewed periodically to offer continuous protection.

Stains are offered in a range of opacities for either hiding the grain completely, or allowing it to be visible. When it comes to choosing a stain and sealer for your deck, check that the products are compatible and that they're suitable for the type of wood your deck is made with.

After a new deck has been exposed to the weather for a year or so, shrinkage of the lumber can cause nails to pop up above the deck surface.

If the boards are still flat, reset the nails slightly below the deck surface using a nailset or punch which matches the size of the nail heads.

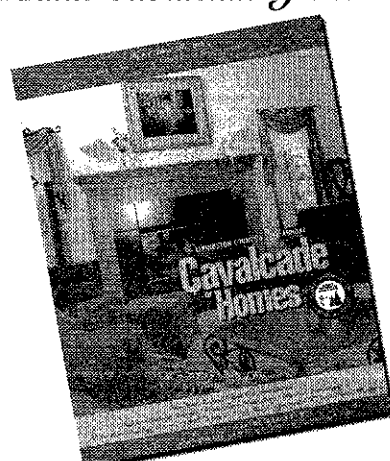

If the deck boards have cupped due to drying, there are several ways to approach the problem. If the cupping is not too severe, first remove the nails with a pry bar. Then, install galvanized decking screws to pull the board flat. If the board is too severely cupped for this technique, use a pry bar to remove the board.

Then use a circular saw to make a series of relief cuts along the back convex surface of the board, equal in depth to about one-third of the board's thickness. Replace the board and fasten with galvanized decking screws.

If this technique fails to bring the board flat, install a new board in its place. Remember to always use galvanized nails or screws when working on a deck.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"BITING THE BULLET ON PRICE"

Most people would like to receive more money than their house is actually worth. You may not be willing to admit it, but it is true. For this reason, most homeowners overprice their home at the outset and reluctantly price it more reasonably after they are convinced that no one will pay their inflated price.

They usually agree to a price reduction after the original excitement about the house has long since passed in the minds of Realtors and their customers. This is regrettable because homes have a much better chance of receiving a higher price early in the listing period, not later. There is usually a relationship between the time a house is on the market and the decline of its eventual sales price. There are three occasions when you may have to bite the bullet on price:

AT TIME OF LISTING

This is the most ideal time to price the house correctly. It is not yet market weary in the minds of Realtors and buyers. It is fresh and exciting. This excitement could translate into a good sales price. For this reason, the original offer is usually the best you will ever receive.

AT TIME OF STAGNATION

If the house is getting no or very few showings, your chances of an offer are not good. The most dramatic thing you can do is reduce your asking price to make your home more attractive when compared to other properties also for sale.

AT TIME OF OFFER

You may have to accept an offering price less than you really want. As painful as this is, it may be your best alternative.

ADVICE: Ask your Realtor to provide the market facts you need to make the best possible decision.

Home's elevation presents Southwestern motif

The Abilene has a tiled roof with a covered veranda visible behind archways.

This home has two stories with the master suite downstairs and the other three bedrooms upstairs. It has the accented facade of a Southwestern home, but would fit in almost anywhere.

Crossing the beautiful veranda, one enters into the formal foyer of the Abilene. Just beyond the entry are the staircase to the second floor and also an optional staircase that could go to a basement, if one is desired.

To the right of the foyer is the formal dining room. There is a large archway from the foyer and a smaller one at the rear that goes into the kitchen.

A large window overlooks the veranda in the front and the room has an added amenity of a built-in hutch

that runs the length of one wall. This would be ideal to display one's best dishes or collectibles.

The kitchen occupies the left rear corner of the Abilene along with the breakfast nook, the utility and a half-bath.

The kitchen has a corner walk-in pantry as well as a Lazy Susan between the range and the dual sinks. This makes spices, canned goods and the perishables easier to reach. A snack bar faces the breakfast nook.

The nook has bay windows that provide extra sunlight. A built-in desk is on the opposite wall with the half-bath behind.

A cozy feature that adds warmth to both the breakfast nook and the great room is a see-through fireplace in the back corner.

Along with this extra, the great room has two large windows across the back, overlooking the back yard, and a door to the covered patio. It is also open to the roof with an 18-foot ceiling.

Opening off the great room is the master suite. It runs the full length of the left side of the Abilene. It has a huge master bath with an oversized shower, a whirlpool tub and dual sinks. A large walk-in closet behind sliding doors will hold an ample supply of clothes.

Upstairs is dedicated to the three remaining bedrooms, each with a wall closet and large windows. A full bath with a tub and single sink is at the end of the hall.

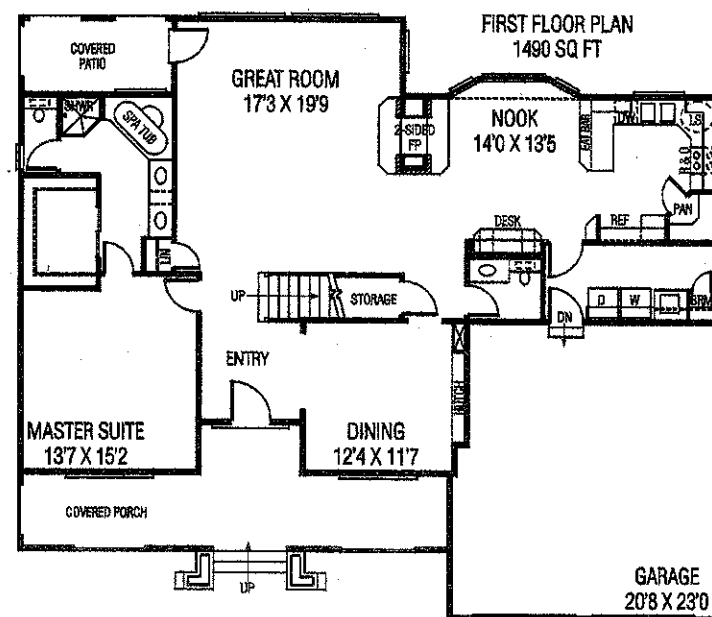

For a study plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations and an artist rendering, send $24.95 to Landmark Designs, 33127 Saguaw Road E., Cottage Grove, OR 97424. Please specify plan name (Abilene) and the number (D6805).

Gas fireplace is an option

Today's gas fireplaces not only give us the ambiance and charm of a warm fire at the flip of a switch or a click of a remote.

They also allow a clear view to the outdoors through windows above the firebox where chimneys used to be due to direct venting.

Layoff could open doors to better things

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

Using a job doesn't have to be a devastating omen of worse things to come, according to experts who say the bad luck might be an open window to fulfilling goals and a chance to find careers that pay more.

As stories of unemployment increase, more and more people are turning to state and private agencies for help.

"When someone loses a job maybe this is a time to explore some goals that have been set aside," according to John B. O'Reilly, Jr., executive director of SEMCA, Southeast Michigan Community Alliance covering Monroe and Wayne counties except Detroit. SEMCA is one of 25 Michigan Works! agencies created by the state to simplify public and business access to education, training self-help and economic development opportunities.

"What they want to do is see that there is a future," O'Reilly said. "While it's devastating news, there are resources that will move them along in their next phase of life and in a new career."

The first step is to register with the Unemployment Agency, which provides temporary financial help. Applicants must be unemployed, able to work, available to work and actively seeking full-time work, according to Norm Isotalo, UA media relations specialists.

The weekly UA benefit is capped at $300 and can't be less than 14 weeks or more than 26 weeks. In some cases,

UA applicants can accept part-time work while receiving unemployment benefits, however, the payments will be reduced.

Michigan Works!

Unless instructed otherwise by UA staff, you must also visit your local Michigan Works! Agency office to register for employment. The SEMCA Michigan Works! is touted as a "One-Call, One-Stop" system that connects individuals and businesses at no cost.

A Michigan Works! Agency counselor assesses personalities and interests while trying to match callers to careers. Their resumes are also posted on the statewide Internet based talent bank.

Some people want to get back to work as soon as possible and aren't willing to take time to consider changing careers or taking the necessary training, O'Reilly said. Others are intimidated.

"Some people are afraid of the concept of going back to school," he added.

"The truth is it's easier than it's ever been. We try to make them understand they have the ability and they can benefit from training."

A lot of people think they wouldn't be suited to a computer related field, yet it's an area with burgeoning opportunities, he added, stressing that a minimum amount of training can increase their earning power by thousands of dollars annually.

"People with associates degrees in computers are starting in the $80,000 and $90,000 range," O'Reilly said adding that sometimes the training is only for six months or one year. "We have jobs. There are more than 1 million jobs in the information technology (field alone) in the United States. It's a matter of matching the people with the jobs."

Many times employers in the United States seek people outside the country to fill these positions, O'Reilly said.

Keep in mind, too, that the unemployment rate is still relatively low. In the last few years the numbers dipped to record lows of 3.2 percent and today it's hovering at 4-4.1 percent in most of Wayne County.

"For years we used to live under the impression that 5 percent unemployment rate was full employment," O'Reilly said adding that issues like mental illness and drug use preclude some people from getting jobs.

Earlier in the year, SEMCA held a reception congratulating people, like Michael Burton, of Westland, and Daniel Spears, of Dearborn Heights, who were representative of the people SEMCA helped.

Burton recently moved to a motel in Westland from Kentucky with his wife and three kids when he was referred to agency. His resume was posted on the Michigan Talent Bank, which connected him with U-Haul where Burton was hired as a full-time mechanic. Michigan Works! also served as a link

Touchy-feely

Candor seems to be a function of confidence. Confidence frequently comes with age. When my mother was young, she was all sweetness and reticence. She came from dire circumstances and never expected much out of life. She was more concerned with keeping relationships "nice" than getting satisfaction. Faced with idiots and manipulators, she would smile politely and agree, then complain to me privately.

Something happened. As years went by, my mother seemed to grasp that nothing could really hurt her unless she let it. She became more forthright, then bold, and then downright outspoken. Just before the end, Gene Marie would tell you exactly what she thought of a situation, your opinion or your actions. She was never rude, but neither was it wise to cross her. And she had at her disposal an arsenal of colorful metaphors to italicize her points.

This occurs to me as I feel my own toleration for nonsense waning. Or could it be that the septic tank is really getting fuller?

I met an outplacement consultant from another city a few weeks ago who scoffed at my nuts-and-bolts approach to getting a job. She informed me that HER firm got candidates into a series of self-exploration programs including the spiritual part of re-employment, the holistic aspects of a job campaign, and the aesthetic considerations of career building. I bit my tongue.

In another case, I attended an all-day "training" program for staff members. The whole day was spent listening to a nut with an ego problem extol for Burton to other state supportive services that got him tools for his job and a car for the family.

Spears, who is hearing impaired, was referred to the Wayne Service Center after the company he worked for 11 years closed. He decided to pursue a career in printing, because he had experience.

Malloy Lithography in Ann Arbor wanted to hire Spears and met with Michigan Rehabilitation Services to address safety issues. Flashing lights replaced buzzers and an interpreter gave him job orientation. Spears is earning more than at his previous job.

Short resumes

Government agencies also work with the private sector to find jobs for people, like Burton and Spears.

Arlene Heter, a Permanent Staff recruiter with offices in Farmington Hills and Troy, recommends keeping resumes to no more than two pages. One page is better, she said explaining that most human resource people spend between 20 and 30 seconds looking at each resume.

"It's a composite piece of bait that will attract employers," she said.

"Make it light and strong and gear it to what you've accomplished so the employer can see what you can do for their company."

She also suggests telling family and friends that you're looking for work.

"You start networking with every living soul you know," Heter added. "Don't make any judgements about whether they can help you at all. The next door neighbor who might not like you very much might have a husband in the human resource department of a very big company."

Contacting a good employment agency is good idea, too, she said.

"We're professionals and we can help," Heter said explaining that some people have unrealistic ideas about how much they should be paid and the type of job they want.

Always remember to follow up with phone calls after sending resumes.

"And, keep a positive attitude," Heter said. "Don't spend an entire day job hunting. Do other things that you want to do."

"If you're depressed or angry it's all going to come out in the interview," Heter said. "They're going to feel it and not hire you. Work it out. Go hit some golf balls."

Jennifer Senda, staffing coordinator for KPM Group in Livonia, says she knows exactly what it feels like to be unemployed and looking for work. She was a single mother of two children when she lost her job. Senda turned to the Internet for help.

"Most recruiting now a-days is done through the Internet," Senda said. "It's a great tool to get your resume out there."

She posted her resume on www.monster.com

Everyday Senda said she went on-line to improve her resume "until I thought it was perfect."

the virtues of teamwork. Later, we were encouraged to share personal things about ourselves. Let's really connect. It was particularly silly because there was no team that needed building. The firm consisted entirely of a loosely affiliated group of consultants with disparate business objectives. I bit my tongue.

Is it me, or is this touchy-feely stuff getting out of hand? All the emphasis on euphemism, tact, political correctness and the ascendancy of relationships over results strikes me as a new form slavery, worse than anything associated with the Company Man so reviled in the 1960s. I took my gripe to Mike Cortese, a consultant with a Ph.D. in psychology.

"Mike," I said, "I don't want to suggest that I'm above anything. But this is starting to become nauseating."

Only from a friend.

So what does this have to do with getting a job and career development. A lot, I think. As employers and employees, we are rapidly becoming more shallow and less honest. We are certainly not more independent than our fathers. We are the same sheep - just more polished.

Some people are shocked when they discover the amount of gamesmanship required in a job search or expected in a new job. Offers seem to hang more on how interviewing questions are "handled" than on the content of the answers. And later, political skill and conformity seem to outweigh merit when it comes to compensation and security. How can we enjoy our labor and get better at it when the work itself matters less than the nonsense?

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

Using a job doesn't have to be a devastating omen of worse things to come, according to experts who say the bad luck might be an open window to fulfilling goals and a chance to find careers that pay more.

As stories of unemployment increase, more and more people are turning to state and private agencies for help.

"When someone loses a job maybe this is a time to explore some goals that have been set aside," according to John B. O'Reilly, Jr., executive director of SEMCA, Southeast Michigan Community Alliance covering Monroe and Wayne counties except Detroit. SEMCA is one of 25 Michigan Works! agencies created by the state to simplify public and business access to education, training self-help and economic development opportunities.

"What they want to do is see that there is a future," O'Reilly said. "While it's devastating news, there are resources that will move them along in their next phase of life and in a new career."

The first step is to register with the Unemployment Agency, which provides temporary financial help. Applicants must be unemployed, able to work, available to work and actively seeking full-time work, according to Norm Isotalo, UA media relations specialists.

The weekly UA benefit is capped at $300 and can't be less than 14 weeks or more than 26 weeks. In some cases,

UA applicants can accept part-time work while receiving unemployment benefits, however, the payments will be reduced.

Michigan Works!

Unless instructed otherwise by UA staff, you must also visit your local Michigan Works! Agency office to register for employment. The SEMCA Michigan Works! is touted as a "One-Call, One-Stop" system that connects individuals and businesses at no cost.

A Michigan Works! Agency counselor assesses personalities and interests while trying to match callers to careers. Their resumes are also posted on the statewide Internet based talent bank.

Some people want to get back to work as soon as possible and aren't willing to take time to consider changing careers or taking the necessary training, O'Reilly said. Others are intimidated.

"Some people are afraid of the concept of going back to school," he added. "The truth is it's easier than it's ever been. We try to make them understand they have the ability and they can benefit from training."

A lot of people think they wouldn't be suited to a computer related field, yet it's an area with burgeoning opportunities, he added, stressing that a minimum amount of training can increase their earning power by thousands of dollars annually.

"People with associates degrees in computers are starting in the $80,000 and $90,000 range," O'Reilly said adding that sometimes the training is only for six months or one year. "We have jobs. There are more than 1 million jobs in the information technology (field alone) in the United States. It's a matter of matching the people with the jobs."

Many times employers in the United States seek people outside the country to fill these positions, O'Reilly said.

Keep in mind, too, that the unemployment rate is still relatively low. In the last few years the numbers dipped to record lows of 3.2 percent and today it's hovering at 4.4.1 percent in most of Wayne County.

"For years we used to live under the impression that 5 percent unemployment rate was full employment," O'Reilly said adding that issues like mental illness and drug use preclude some people from getting jobs.

Earlier in the year, SEMCA held a reception congratulating people, like Michael Burton, of Westland, and Daniel Spears, of Dearborn Heights, who were representative of the people SEMCA helped.

Burton recently moved to a motel in Westland from Kentucky with his wife and three kids when he was referred to agency. His resume was posted on the Michigan Talent Bank, which connected him with U-Haul where Burton was hired as a full-time mechanic. Michigan Works! also served as a link Candor seems to be a function of confidence. Confidence frequently comes with age. When my mother was young, she was all sweetness and reticence. She came from dire circumstances and never expected much out of life. She was more concerned with keeping relationships "nice" than getting satisfaction. Faced with idiots and manipulators, she would smile politely and agree, then complain to me privately.

Something happened. As years went by, my mother seemed to grasp that nothing could really hurt her unless she let it. She became more forthright, then bold, and then downright outspoken. Just before the end, Gene Marie would tell you exactly what she thought of a situation, your opinion or your actions. She was never rude, but neither was it wise to cross her. And she had at her disposal an arsenal of colorful metaphors to italicize her points.

This occurs to me as I feel my own toleration for nonsense waning. Or could it be that the septic tank is really getting fuller?

I met an outplacement consultant from another city a few weeks ago who scoffed at my nuts-and-bolts approach to getting a job. She informed me that HER firm got candidates into a series of self-exploration programs including the spiritual part of re-employment, the holistic aspects of a job campaign, and the aesthetic considerations of career building. I hit my tongue.

In another case, I attended an all-day "training" program for staff members. The whole day was spent listening to a nut with an ego problem extol

Millionaire's ride on a Working-man's budget

Hyundai Santa Fe looks more expensive than it really is

© AUTOWIRE.NET

Korea's Hyundai has entered the sport utility market with its new Santa Fe. Recognizing an uphill battle to be competitive in this already crowded market segment, Hyundai is offering an SUV with many premium features at a very affordable price.

For starters, the styling has an upscale, yet aggressive look, than many will mistake for a luxury SUV if they don't look closely at the Hyundai emblems. As the name might imply, the Santa Fe was designed specifically for sale in North America.

The Santa Fe is available in several versions and with either two- or four-wheel drive. These include GL, GLS and LX. Two engines are available, a four-cylinder only in the base GL 2WD and a V6 in all other 2WD and 4WD models.

The 2.4 liter, four-cylinder produces only 149-horsepower at 5500 rpm and 156 ft.-lb of torque at 3,000 rpm. This engine is really not sufficient for a vehicle that approaches the two-ton mark especially with the optional automatic transmission. The GL

The V6 provides adequate, but not breathtaking performance. All V6 Santa Fes use a four-speed electronically controlled Shifttronic automatic transmission that is of the type used in much more expensive vehicles, and can be used in a clutchless manual mode.

The full tank holds 17.2 gallons. The very close fuel economy for the four-cylinder and V6 with the automatic transmission points out the false economy of choosing too small an engine in a particular vehicle.

In keeping with the goal of offering premium features for a low price, all Santa Fes come rather well equipped.

Standard equipment includes air conditioning, power windows, 16-inch alloy wheels, 225/70R-16 BF Goodrich Long Trail T/A tires, a roof rack, privacy glass, premium-quality cloth seats, and an AM/FM/CD stereo. With the GLS you get an AM/FM/Cassette/CD stereo, power door locks, remote keyless entry and alarm, fog lights, cruise control, and heated power exterior mirrors.

The top-of-the-line LX features leather upholstery, a limited-slip differential and chrome door handles. Anti-lock braking and traction control is an $890 option. Also in "going first class," Hyundai turned to recognized 4WD experts, Steyr-Puch in Austria, for the full-time four-wheel-drive system. Like many SUVs that are not meant for serious off-road duty, there is no low range in the transfer case.

The Santa Fe has a more-expensive-than-it-is feel and high quality materials are used throughout. Ride is very carlike because the Santa Fe shares mechanics with the Hyundai Sonata sedans. Handling is good, though the steering is a bit heavy and sluggish feeling. Wind noise was low, but the tires were on the noisy side. The instrument panel and controls are especially noteworthy with all but the somewhat tiny radio controls being too small for an SUV.

In good SUV fashion, visibility is great and the mirrors are very good. You get the impression that you are behind the wheel of a luxury SUV, rather than one whose base price starts at $16,934, and even

The EPA numbers are:

	City MPG	Highway MPG
Four-cylinder Engine:
Manual.....	21	28
Automatic.....	20	27
V-6 Cylinder Engine:
2WD Automatic.....	19	26
4WD Automatic.....	19	23

a loaded Santa Fe will come in at under $23,000. There are nice touches in all versions like floor and overhead consoles, tilt steering wheel, ignition key on the dashboard and three power outlets. All Santa Fes will carry four passengers in comfort and five for short distances.

If the experience with other Hyundai's holds true, the Santa Fe may depreciate faster than SUVs of other brands because of the Hyundai's less than stellar repudiation. In all fairness, part of the reliability problem came because their low price brought buyers who could barely make the monthly payment, let alone afford preventative maintenance.

If they lavished the attention Corvette and Mustang owners give their investments, it probably would be a different outcome. Helping here is Hyundai's outstanding warranty policy. The Santa Fe comes with a 10-year/100,000-mile powertrain warranty in addition a 5-year/60,000-mile bumper-to-bumper warranty.

There also is roadside assistance for five years. And this is a "Best in the Industry" warranty.

Hyundai Santa Fe looks more expensive than it really is

© AUTOWIRE.NET

Korea's Hyundai has entered the sport utility market with its new Santa Fe. Recognizing an uphill battle to be competitive in this already crowded market segment, Hyundai is offering an SUV with many premium features at a very affordable price.

For starters, the styling has an upscale, yet aggressive look, than many will mistake for a luxury SUV if they don't look closely at the Hyundai emblems. As the name might imply, the Santa Fe was designed specifically for sale in North America.

The Santa Fe is available in several versions and with either two- or four-wheel drive. These include GL, GLS and LX. Two engines are available, a four-cylinder only in the base GL 2WD and a V6 in all other 2WD and 4WD models.

The 2.4 liter, four-cylinder produces only 149-horsepower at 5500 rpm and 156 ft-lb of torque at 3,000 rpm. This engine is really not sufficient for a vehicle that approaches the two-ton mark especially with the optional automatic transmission. The GL

2WD is the only Santa Fe available with a five-speed manual transmission. The 2.7 liter V6 is a dual overhead camshaft (DOHC) design with 24 valves and is rated at 181 horsepower at 6,000 rpm and 177 ft-lb at 4,000 rpm.

The V6 provides adequate, but not breathtaking performance. All V6 Santa Fes use a four-speed electronically controlled Shiftronic automatic transmission that is of the type used in much more expensive vehicles, and can be used in a clutchless manual mode.

The full tank holds 17.2 gallons. The very close fuel economy for the four-cylinder and V6 with the automatic transmission points out the false economy of choosing too small an engine in a particular vehicle.

In keeping with the goal of offering premium features for a low price, all Santa Fes come rather well equipped.

Standard equipment includes air conditioning, power windows, 16-inch alloy wheels, 225/70R-16 BF Goodrich Long Trail T/A tires, a roof rack, privacy glass, premium-quality cloth seats, and an AM/FM/CD stereo. With the GLS you get an AM/FM/Cassette/CD stereo, power door locks, remote keyless entry and alarm, fog lights, cruise control, and heated power exterior mirrors.

The top-of-the-line LX features leather upholstery, a limited-slip differential and chrome door handles. Anti-lock braking and traction control is an $890 option. Also in "going first class," Hyundai turned to recognized 4WD experts, Steyr-Puch in Austria, for the full-time four-wheel-drive system. Like many SUVs that are not meant for serious off-road duty, there is no low range in the transfer case.

The Santa Fe has a more-expensive-than-it-is feel and high quality materials are used throughout. Ride is very carlike because the Santa Fe shares mechanics with the Hyundai Sonata sedans. Handling is good, though the steering is a bit heavy and sluggish feeling. Wind noise was low, but the tires were on the noisy side. The instrument panel and controls are especially noteworthy with all but the somewhat tiny radio controls being too small for an SUV.

In good SUV fashion, visibility is great and the mirrors are very good. You get the impression that you are behind the wheel of a luxury SUV, rather than one whose base price starts at $16,934, and even

The EPA numbers are:

	City MPG	Highway MPG
Four-cylinder Engine:
Manual	21	28
Automatic	20	27
V-6 Cylinder Engine:
2WD Automatic	19	26
4WD Automatic	19	23

is Hyundai's outstanding warranty policy. The Santa Fe comes with a 10-year/100,000-mile powertrain warranty in addition a 5-year/60,000-mile bumper-to-bumper warranty.

There also is roadside assistance for five years. And this is a "Best in the Industry" warranty.

a loaded Santa Fe will come in at under $23,000. There are nice touches in all versions like floor and overhead consoles, tilt steering wheel, ignition key on the dashboard and three power outlets. All Santa Fes will carry four passengers in comfort and five for short distances.

If the experience with other Hyundai's holds true, the Santa Fe may depreciate faster than SUVs of other brands because of the Hyundai's less than stellar repudiation. In all fairness, part of the reliability problem came because their low price brought buyers who could barely make the monthly payment, let alone afford preventative maintenance.

If they lavished the attention Corvette and Mustang owners give their investments, it probably would be a different outcome. Helping here
