Napier crash claims 2 lives

■ Police say excessive speed was the likely cause of a fatal crash on Napier Road at the western edge of Canton early Friday. Two former Plymouth-Canton students died in the accident.

BY CAROL MARSHALL
STAFF WRITER
cmarshall@oe.hometowncomm.net

Two former Plymouth Canton High School students died early Friday in a one-car crash on Napier Road. Washtenaw County Sheriff investigators say speed is what killed them.

Justin Holderer, 19, of Plymouth and Jason Rambo, 20, of Canton were traveling at about 80 mph on the dirt road just north of Ford Road at about 3 a.m., said Cmdr. Anderson Brown. Holderer was driving a 2001 Oldsmobile Alero.

"Part of the car went airborne and struck a tree," he said. "They both died on impact."

Among friends

The two young men had just dropped off a friend after returning from an evening in Canada, according to Rambo's longtime friend and former high school classmate, Scott Stabe.

Stabe described Rambo as an outgoing, likable man with friends nearly everywhere he went.

"He was the happiest person I ever met," he said. "Everywhere he went it seemed like he always knew everybody."

Mike Petty's philosophy moved him to open his own veterinary clinic 16 years ago. Good timing moved him to Canton this week.

Petty and office manager, wife Beth, moved the practice Arbor Pointe Veterinary Hospital from Livonia.

"This is a very young community with lots of growing families."

young community with lots of growing families. And we wanted a Ford Road location and this one was available. It all just came together."

Petty said it's his attention to his patients' families that motivated him to open his own practice in 1986.

"I wanted to be able to practice my own style of medicine," he said. "There are many different practice philosophies. Mine is to be very tuned in to what my clients and patients want and need."

Petty said the attention can be time consuming, but is essential. He said often people bring their pets in to be treated for a rash or an infection. But that's not always the end of the story.

Instead of treating only the illness or symptom, Petty explores its history to determine whether it's recurrent or an isolated problem.

Voters choose Wysocki

In an election that saw voters stay away in droves, Tom Wysocki of Plymouth captured 45 percent of the ballots cast to win a four-year seat on the Plymouth-Canton school board.

Wysocki, a former president of the Plymouth-Canton Marching Band boosters, collected 1,170 votes, outdistancing three other challengers Monday for the board seat being vacated

What do you think?

by Roland Thomas, who didn't seek re-election. "I had a lot of people who supported me," said

Wysocki. "The band boosters spent a lot of time and effort getting people out to vote. And, a lot of friends in the community came out to support me."

Unofficially, the election came down to the two candidates with the largest blocks of supporters. Wysocki, supported by the band boosters, versus Fred Libbing, the 30-year high school teacher and counselor who was backed by the Plymouth-Canton Education Association. Libbing finished with 873 votes, followed by Veronica Fox with 306 and Sheila Stirrman with 216.

Wysocki said there's a lot of work to do, and it's time to get down to business.

Customer service blooms brightly at her shop

BY CAROL MARSHALL
STAFF WRITER
cmarshall@oe.hometowncomm.net

In a business where making someone's day special is commonplace, one Canton florist saved the day, or rather saved prom night.

Her grateful customer nominated this Everyday Hero.

Canton resident Penny Pilkiewicz wrote to the Observer about Samantha Williams, owner of The Flower Pot, 6575 N. Canton Center Road.

Pilkiewicz received birthday flowers her husband bought from The Flower Pot a couple of years ago. She was so happy with them, she continued to buy from Williams when school events or holidays rolled around.

In May, she broke tradition and ordered son's prom date's corsage from another florist.

"I ordered the corsage from someone else because I didn't want to deal with the construction and backups on Canton Center Road," she explained. "But when I picked up the flowers Friday afternoon, I was so disappointed."

EVERYDAY HEROES

Even though Pilkiewicz wasn't happy with the corsage, she kept her cool.

"I didn't say anything to the salesgirl because she was so young and I didn't believe anything would be accomplished by upsetting her," she explained. "Instead I came home and called the Flower Pot. The owner said, 'Get your butt over here. We'll fix you up.'"

Mending woes

Only hours before the prom, Pilkiewicz braved the construction traffic, hoping for the best.

She said Williams took one look at the sad little corsage and invited Pilkiewicz back to her work room, where the two chatted while Williams worked.

Canton motorcyclist killed in I-275 crash

Canton resident Dwight Hayes, 30, was killed early Wednesday after being struck by a car on I-275 near I-94. At about 12:24 a.m., Hayes stopped his motorcycle in the gore of the exit ramp from I-94. According to a Michigan State Police press release, a vehicle struck Hayes and he was thrown into the center lane of traffic on northbound I-275. He was then struck again by a northbound tractor trailer. Hayes was taken by Med-Flight to Saint Joseph Hospital in Ypsilanti where he was pronounced dead. The accident remains under investigation. Alcohol is not believed to be a factor in the accident, police said.

Strawberry Festival is regional draw

BY CAROL MARSHALL
STAFF WRITER
cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

Only a hop, skip and a jump from Canton, The National Strawberry Festival in Belleville begins tonight. The 26th annual event is one of the premiere celebrations in southeast Michigan, according to Strawberry Festival Committee Chair Ralph Nodwell. He said about 250,000 people will attend this year's festival to enjoy the carnival rides, free entertainment, 125-piece parade and hundreds of craft booths.

"We've got a lot of new and exciting things going on this year," he said.

Topping Nodwell's list of new festival features is the Team Extreme motorcycle program with world champion Tommy Ahvala.

"This guy's an event all by himself," Nodwell said. "He performs motorcycle acrobatics. Like what the kids do on skateboards, except on a motorcycle. He's really spectacular."

Nodwell said the festival activity that remains a favorite every year is the parade, which will make its way down Columbia Avenue and Main Street Saturday at 11 a.m.

The festival will host two sites for rides and amusements. A few rides will be running at the north end of Main Street, but the real action will be near Belleville High School and Saint Anthony Catholic Church, west of Main Street on Columbia Avenue.

The Strawberry Festival is definitely worth the 10-minute drive from Canton, said Nodwell, but he encourages people to avoid downtown parking.

He suggested taking advantage of the free shuttle service. Easy parking for folks coming from Canton is right on Belleville Road at the Belleville Presbyterian Church or at Trinity Episcopal Church. Those attending the Saturday morning pancake breakfast at Belleville High School can also catch a shuttle from its stop on West Columbia near the school.

The Strawberry Festival runs through Sunday afternoon.

First Summer Fest hits Compuware

BY KURT KUBAN
STAFF WRITER
kkuban@oe.homecomm.net

Today marks the beginning of the inaugural Plymouth Community Summer Fest at the Compuware Arena in Plymouth Township. The event, which runs through Sunday, features a number of family oriented activities.

The festival is a co-production between Compuware and Watts Up Inc., a Plymouth-based entertainment company that produces a number of festivals, including the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Watts Up president Michael Watts, a 20-year township resident, said the idea behind the event was to give the residents of Plymouth Township their own festival.

"The city of Plymouth has a number of festivals. Canton has a festival, and Livonia has the Spree. Plymouth Township really doesn't have anything like this," he said.

"I love the city of Plymouth and all the festivals and events they have there, but most of the growth in our area is now in the township. So we decided to step up and have something that will be identifiable with Plymouth Township. We put our heads together and came up with what we think is a great event."

The festival offers a number of free activities, including an entertainment schedule featuring some well-known local musicians. Jill Jack, Mudpuppy and Thornetta Davis are the three acts scheduled for Friday evening. On Saturday, Black Market, Sunny Girl & the UV Rays, and the Brothers Groove will perform into the nighttime hours.

The festival will also feature a number of children's performers on Saturday afternoon between 1 and 4 p.m. The acts include Magician Amazing Jack, Lovely the Clown and Spirit of Country Dancers.

"These acts will really entertain the kids. I think they will be surprised how much they enjoy it. Kids spend so much time in front of the television these days, most never get the chance to see live entertainers like these," Watts said.

The Ginopolis Parthenon Restaurants will be on hand to serve plenty of food and beverages, including beer. In addition to the standard carnival fare, a variety of ethnic cuisine will be available for consumption.

In addition, there are a number of arts and crafts booths, as well as a classic car show. And of course there are a bunch of carnival rides.

With school getting out, Watts is hoping the rides and children's entertainment attracts a younger audience.

"It's the end of the school year and the kids will be looking for something to do, so we kind of geared this toward them. This is a family event. I'm a family man, and my belief is anytime you can do something for the family it's good for the community as well," he said.

Voters return incumbents

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER
dclem@oe.homecomm.net

A mere 1.5 percent of Wayne-Westland voters decided Monday's school board election, returning incumbents Ed Turner and Mathew McCusker to office for four-year terms.

In a sprawling district that has 74,069 voters, only 1,063 people bothered to cast ballots in a three-way race. Political newcomer Patricia Mitchell narrowly lost her first bid for public office.

Turner soared to a first-place victory and earned a second consecutive term. He won 703 votes, followed by McCusker's 575 and Mitchell's 536.

"I'm elated - very, very happy," Turner, 67, said. "I had a good committee helping me out. I give an awful lot of credit to them."

Turner, a retired American Airlines employee, attributed his top vote-getter position to a promise he made four years ago to make students his No. 1 priority as a school board member.

"That's what I've tried to maintain," he said Monday, inside election offices at Wayne Memorial High School. "I've tried to get out to all of the schools, and I'll do that again during the next four years."

Turner cited two major goals for the next school year: initiating a new math curriculum and improving communication between the district and its citizens.

McCusker, 65, learned of his 39-vote victory over Mitchell as vote totals trickled in by telephone at district offices on Marquette.

"I'm pleased, but I'm disappointed with the turnout," said McCusker, accompanied by his wife, Marjory, and two of their adult children, Michael and Colleen.

"I think the people of the district are satisfied with what we're doing," he said, "but we could probably do better. I think we'll be working on that during the next year."

McCusker held out hope that the district will improve as officials buy new textbooks and continue to align local instruction with state curriculum guidelines. He also said he wants to see completion of a $108.3 million bond issue that voters passed in 1998 to improve buildings and enhance classroom technology.

McCusker, a Ford Motor Co. retiree, already has served 17 years on the school.

"I'm very humbled that the people have given me four more years," he said.

McCusker cited goals such as improving student scores on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) tests and trying to improve the district's sometimes-battered image.

"We're as concerned as anybody else about how the district is perceived," he said.

Mitchell, 62, had voiced deep concerns about the district's image, which she said has deteriorated. She had called for an investigation into the problems and said she wanted to find solutions.

Mitchell, a retired executive secretary of Metro Home Health Care Services, had received backing from United Auto Workers locals. She also was involved with and drew support from former recall workers who waged a successful movement last year against four Westland City Council members.

"A lot of problems can be traced back to an allergy or something that could cause chronic problems," he explained. "There are other times when Petty can't determine what the malady is. He said that's when his commitment to progressive medicine and technology pays off."

"If I don't know what's going on, I can send X-rays or test results via the Internet to a specialist who may be somewhere in Texas and we can get a second opinion without the pet ever having to leave this building," he said. "I've spent a lot of time and money to learn about the technology and I'll probably never get it back. But that doesn't matter because it's important to practice good medicine."

There were some things that were upgraded simply as a result of the move.

The sound-proof dog kennel was constructed as a courtesy to patients as well as the restaurant next door to the clinic in a busy strip mall. The old X-ray from the Livonia office was replaced by a brand-new, state-of-the-art machine in Canton. Petty also constructed three exam rooms, an in-house pharmacy and a dental lab.

"A lot of people don't realize how important it is, but dental health is a real big issue of mine because it has such a profound effect on the rest of the body," said Petty, adding dental disease is the leading cause of heart disease in dogs.

Petty has a staff of veterinary technicians as well as another veterinarian, Kimberley Maisie, working with him. Chiropractor Aaron Gray also takes weekly appointments for veterinary chiropractic at Arbor Pointe.

Arbor Pointe Veterinary Hospital is located at 42043 Ford Road. For more information, call 844-8844.

Election results

Here is how residents of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district voted Monday.

Tom Wysocki	1,170
Fred Libbing	873
Veronica Fox	306
Sheila Stirsman	216

Tom Wysocki

Vote from A1

"Funding from the state, that's an area I'll start attacking. There are some things the district is pursuing now, and I'll lend my support to that," he said. "As far as the budget, it's going to be a lot of work. Much of it will depend on the administration, with direction from the board, to come up with ways to meet our budgets, provide quality education, and still have some value-added programs."

School board president Darwin Watts said Wysocki, because of his knowledge on how the district operates, will have a shortened learning curve.

"He'll have to intensely learn and study the issues," said Watts. "Plus, he already has good relations with people throughout the district."

Besides the 1,800 registered voters who made an effort to make it to the polls, and the 821 residents who filed absentee ballots, most of the 73,000 registered voters in the district continued a trend of staying away from the polls on school election day. That was evident in all the precincts.

The polls were open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., but only 19 people showed up at Fiegel Elementary. Other low-turnout precincts included Eriksson, 45 voters; Field, 52; Isbister, 71; and Bentley, 76.

The busiest precincts were West Middle School, 158 voters; Central Middle School, 150; Canton High School, 149; and Pioneer Middle School, 147.

Thomas, who has served 17 years during two stints on the school board, said the district is in good shape, despite some budget predictions indicating deficit spending.

"We'll overcome those challenges. We always have, we always will," said Thomas. "We've got to tackle the issues one step at a time. You build your budget, then work on a three-year plan. That's how business does it, and that's how we should be doing it."

Thomas said this year has been a real team effort among board members.

"This group of seven people has really worked well together," he said. "We've really been more collaborative, open and direct with each other than in years past."

Meanwhile, voters in the Van Buren Public Schools district re-elected trustee Ralph Nodwell to a second four-year term. He was unopposed.

Davis move to leave open seat

Plymouth-Canton Schools already have a vacancy for one of two board seats to be decided by voters in June 2002.

Trustee Susan Davis, who is completing her second four-year term on the board of education, will not be seeking re-election as she'll be leaving the district to retire with her husband on the east coast.

However, Davis said that barring any unforeseen circumstances, she plans to finish out her stint on the board.

"There are a lot of issues to be decided in the upcoming year with the opening of the new high school, as well as the budget," said Davis. "I made a commitment to the voters for four years, and if all goes well I want to fulfill that obligation."

Meanwhile, board president Darwin Watts, whose four-year-term will also come to an end next June, said he hasn't decided whether he will seek re-election.

"There are a lot of issues on the table right now, and that's what I'm focusing on," he said. "I won't make that determination for a while."

Crash from page A1

Rambo's father, Frank, of Canton said he was surprised by how many people knew and liked his son.

"Jason was always very social, but we were really shocked at the number of kids that were at the funeral home who came and then stayed afterward," said Frank Rambo.

The funeral, on Monday, was on the one-year anniversary of the day Rambo graduated from high school.

"Another irony is the accident was on our 28th wedding anniversary," he added.

Stabe said after the funeral about 100 friends stayed around, listening to Rambo's favorite CDs and playing Billy Joel's Only the Good Die Young.

"We always joked around and

said if anything ever happened to any of us, we would want that to be played at our funeral,"

Stabe said, his teary blue eyes revealing he wasn't ready to play the song just yet.

Brown said while the crash is still under investigation, he believes speed was the only factor in the fatal accident.

"There's nothing present for us to jump to the conclusion that alcohol or drugs were a factor. There were no open intoxicants in the car. Right now speed is the major factor," he said.

Treacherous road

It wasn't the first time speed claimed the lives of young people traveling along the stretch of Napier Road.

Longtime Canton resident Luke Kremer said he's seen his share of tragedies in the 34 years he's lived near the crash site.

"Since 1970, there have been nine people that have died in crashes here, all within a mile of each other," Kremer said.

Kremer said he's been keeping a file of information about deadly crashes near his home, in hopes someone will take notice and find a solution to the problem.

"It's a problem with young people," he said. "They drive so fast and they think they're invincible. But they don't know you just can't drive that fast on a dirt road."

Kremer said he was on his way to church several years ago when he found and reported the aftermath of a crash that killed three teenagers and left another paralyzed.

"I just don't know what can be done to make it safer out here," Kremer said.

"It's such a tragedy what happened," said Benny McQueen, Rambo's supervisor at his job at the Valvoline Oil Change in Canton. "I thought he was a really good employee and really good kid."

McQueen said Rambo was a bright young man and had impressed him as a hard worker.

"Only a couple of days before the accident, I talked with him about moving up into management," McQueen said of Rambo.

McQueen reported Rambo was well-liked by his co-workers, and the company had to call in workers from other franchises to cover shifts on Monday, the day of Rambo's funeral.

"A lot of these guys are taking this really hard. He was just a great guy," McQueen said.

Holderer attended Plymouth Canton High School for two years before finishing high school abroad. He was a sophomore aeronautical engineering student at University of Michigan. Rambo, a 2000 graduate of Plymouth Canton High School, was a Schoolcraft Community College student.

Services for Holderer were held Wednesday at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth with the Rev. Dean Klump officiating. Burial was at Knollwood Cemetery in Canton.

Services for Rambo were at St. Michael Lutheran Church with the Rev. Joseph Bonno officiating.

Area automotive supply firm owner 'Wally' Smith, 72, dies

By TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

Wallace Lee "Wally" Smith, the founder of E&E Manufacturing in Plymouth, was the type of person who liked to do things without a lot of fanfare.

Take, for example, when Smith secretly enlisted in the Marines as a teenager to serve his country in World War II. Or, when he quietly helped a number of local kids by paying for their college education. Or, the cruise he took to Haiti, where he met a Catholic missionary and decided to financially support him.

Smith, 72, died June 6 after a bout with pneumonia. According to family members, he lived a life that was a continuous stream of dedicated service to others.

"We knew he helped many people, but there was a lot he kept confidential," said his son, Wes Smith, of Novi. "My mom didn't even know he helped pay for the addition to our church

(St. Michael's Lutheran in Canton.)

Mom is Shirley, who helped Wally Smith build E&E Manufacturing into a major Tier Two progressive die metal stamper, supplying specialty fasteners to the automotive industry. In 1963 they opened E&E Manufacturing, naming it after Edwin Ewald, Smith's father-in-law, who was part owner of a metal stamping plant where Smith worked for a period of time.

"My father was the only boss I ever had. He really loved the business," said Wes Smith, who now runs the company. "But, other people saw him as a man devoted to his wife, children and grandchildren."

"He had the ability to make you feel you were the most important person in his life," said Wes Smith.

Survivors include his wife, Shirley, of Brighton; a brother, Robert Smith of Canton; two sons, Wes Smith of Novi and Martin Lee Smith of Southfield; a daughter, Sue (Smith) Gabriel of St. John, Mich.; and six grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at St. Michael's last Saturday. Memorials may be made in Wallace Smith's name to Providence Cancer Institute/Brain Cancer Research, 22301 Foster Winter Dr., Southfield, Mich., 48075.

McNamara beats Reaume for Schoolcraft seat

By TIM SMITH
STAFF WRITER
tsmith@oe.homecomm.net

Two major factors apparently contributed to the defeat of incumbent Richard Reaume in Monday's Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees election.

One was generally low voter turnouts throughout most of the area served by Schoolcraft, due to a lack of contested races or other issues in public school districts. But probably more than anything else, name recognition is what defeated Reaume and elected challenger Kevin McNamara — who finished third in the race for three six-year terms.

McNamara, the son of Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, tallied 4,546 votes to edge Reaume (3,841 votes) and challenger Fred Bolden (2,331 votes). Finishing first and second were incumbents Mary Breen and Brian Broderick, with 5,797 and 5,074 votes, respectively.

Tuesday morning, McNamara was tired but happy with the outcome.

"I've never been a candidate (before) and I was scared to death watching those numbers go up and down," said McNamara, about monitoring election results with a group of 40 friends and family members at O'Malley's in Livonia. "But I am glad it's over, I can't wait to get started. ... I feel bad for Richard, he is a good man."

Breen

Broderick

The election's top vote getter, Breen, also expressed disappointment that Reaume lost. "I feel badly for him (Reaume) because he's been a very good board member. But the McNamara name is very strong, for obvious reasons. I'm sure Kevin will be a good board member, too."

Breen noted another reason why Reaume fell short. "There was no big issue anywhere, the voting was so low."

McNamara concurred that the recognition of his family name probably contributed to the victory, although not to the degree others might think it did. He added that people randomly telephoned by his campaign workers said they really weren't that interested in the name. "They were more interested in what the candidate is doing."

One of McNamara's campaign stances was he intends to aggressively market the college and find alternative sources of revenue, important to keep Schoolcraft viable in the long-term.

He did say one of his strategies paid off. "The key to the election is getting your friends out to vote. Not enough people vote in these elections."

Staying connected

Tuesday morning, Reaume congratulated all three candidates who were victorious and

'I've never been a candidate (before) and I was scared to death watching those numbers go up and down.'

*Kevin McNamara
New Schoolcraft board member* vowed to stay involved with Schoolcraft in some capacity.

"Most everybody who is touched by Schoolcraft College stays connected and participates in the college, even as a volunteer," said Reaume, appointed to fill a vacancy in November 1999. "I expect to stay connected to the college."

Reaume also agreed with Breen that McNamara's name recognition contributed to the result. But just as crucial was the fact only one school board seat was up for election in the Plymouth/Canton and Northville school districts, keeping voter turnouts low.

Two school districts where turnouts were higher, and where most of the margin of victory for McNamara originated, were Garden City and Livonia.

In Garden City, where a $36 million bond issue was approved, McNamara finished second with 1,325 votes. Reaume placed fourth, with just 840.

In Livonia schools, where voters had seven candidates to choose from, McNamara and Reaume finished third and fourth, with 2,140 and 1,700 votes respectively.

"I love education and I loved my time I served on the board," said Reaume, adding he had no regrets over how he campaigned in recent months.

The other victorious candidate, Broderick said he is "very pleased to be returning to the board. I'm looking forward to working with the rest of the board and Dr. (Conway) Jeffress in the coming years."

Jeffress, as of July 1, will take over the Schoolcraft presidency from Richard McDowell, who is retiring.

Although Bolden did not win a seat, he said the experience of running for the board was a positive one.

"I did my homework and knew the issues," Bolden said. "I just felt voters thought the incumbents were doing a good job and they liked to see that continue."

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON - BOARD PROCEEDINGS, JUNE 5, 2001

A regular study session of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Canton held June 5, 2001. Supervisor Yack at 7:20 p.m. called the meeting to order.

Motion by Bennett, supported by Burdziak to move from closed session to open session. Motion carried by all members present.

Members Present: Bennett, Burdziak, LaJoy, Shefferly, Yack

Members Absent:

Kirchgatter, McLaughlin
Staff Present: Director Conklin, Director Santomauro, Chief Michael Rorabacher, Scott Daniel

Director Santomauro explained that the Department of Public Safety, in its annual report provides for Canton's elected officials and the community a summary of all police and fire activities. Included in this report are accomplishments made in the areas of crime activity, fire suppression and emergency medical responses. The year-end report is also used by the department as a tool to reinforce its philosophy of defined goals and objectives and pro active vs. reactive service. The reporting of accomplishments provides a means for the department to focus on the year's achievements by individual divisions and, specifically, community policing teams.

In the year 2000, the department began testing the concept of directed patrol, specifically, where crime and traffic activity was occurring, hour of day, day of week. The community experienced, in the 2000, the highest decrease in Part I offenses in Canton's history. Although some of this may be attributed to a national economy, this twenty-seven percent reduction reflected a much higher reduction in crime than experienced at the national level. Much of this can be attributed to the efforts of the individual community policing teams in evaluating crime statistics and providing the strategy for dealing with crime in their individual team areas.

Canton also experienced a one-percent decrease in overall accidents, with a sixteen-percent decrease in fatal accidents. This directly correlates to a twelve-percent increase in traffic enforcement.

The department held approximately eighty-eight training classes, (internal and external), in 2000, generating revenue of $93,628.00. The department has coordinated 14,985 hours of in-house training hours for outside agencies with 831 officers attending. Internally, Canton officers were trained for 4,458 hours.

The Fire Division's emergency medical service provides transportation to eight hospitals. The Fire Prevention Unit provides fire safety programs and fire prevention instruction, including a mobile fire safety house. During 2000, the fire department had 5,025 runs. Of that total, 3,744 were emergency medical runs, 1,912 were transports and 1,283 were Advanced Life Support transports.

Through the continued support of the community and Canton's elected officials, the department has continued to professionalize its work force through education, training, and development, and focus its resources on its primary mission - to protect life and property.

Motion by Bennett, supported by LaJoy at 7:50 p.m. to adjourn. Motion carried by all members present.

The above is a synopsis of the study session of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Canton held Tuesday, June 5, 2001. The full text of the approved minutes will be available following the next regular meeting of June 12, 2001.

Hero from page A1

"The finished corsage was exquisite - cream colored roses with glittering baby's breath and rhinestone accents. I was so grateful that she had saved the day for my son's prom I would have gladly paid any amount of money," she said. "She refused payment saying that I had already paid for one corsage and shouldn't have to buy another."

Williams can't believe Pilkiewicz was astounded by the gracious gesture.

"Honestly, I didn't charge her for that corsage because she didn't chew out that other salesgirl," Williams explains with a shrug. "We're nice to everybody but when you're nice to us, we'll walk on our lips for you."

Service history

More than a decade ago, Williams got her first job at a flower shop.

"I never thought about being a florist, but I was looking for a job and saw a Help Wanted sign in a store window and thought I'd give it a shot," she said.

Soon after, her inner artist emerged. Along the way, she's developed a very strong philosophy on customer service. She worked toward certification as a Master Florist and learned about service and educating customers.

"When customers come in, we listen to them and talk to them. We get to know them," she said. Often she spends nearly a whole day with a bride planning her wedding, and can spend an hour with a customer buying a corsage.

Four years ago Williams bought her own store in Canton after launching and developing an 11-store grocery chain's floral department.

"I was exhausted," she said, explaining she had worked two jobs to save up money to buy the store. "But it was time to get out and do the kind of work I wanted to do. This is so satisfying to be able to employ people and run this business."

Williams' work is much more physically demanding than most people know, she said. "There's a lot of standing, lifting, scrubbing," she said. "And you can always tell a florist by looking at her hands. They always look so awful."

But she explains the creative nature of the business and her desire to please her customers keeps her dedicated to the business.

Bad bouquet day

Williams admitted there are days when she's less inclined to kindness than others.

"Not long ago, I had a day when one too many people had told me what to do," she said. A customer came in late in the afternoon and asked for three bouquets.

The customer peering over her shoulder with a raised eyebrow nearly got on Williams' last nerve, and when the woman asked Williams to use white paper instead of the red she'd just laid out on her bench, she'd had enough.

"I turned around and said as patiently as I could, 'You know, I'm a master designer. You might want to give me a shot at this,'" Williams said. "I know it could've gone either way. She could have just walked out. Or she could have stuck around and let me make her something really nice."

The customer did just that, and by the time she left the store, told Williams the flowers were the most beautiful she'd ever bought.

The customers has returned a few times. She wrote the store after a recent purchase, and Williams said she signed the letter, "The White Paper Lady."

Williams said building customer loyalty takes plenty of hard work, but it's worth the trouble.

"That's the thing about small businesses," she said. "I see that arrangement - every one of them - before it goes out the door. And I'm the last person to see it before I deliver it to you. And if there's ever a problem you need to work out, you're talking to the owner when you call. That means a lot."

Physical Therapy UPDATE

Presented by Hands On Center For Physical Therapy

BOOMING INJURY RATES

Many baby boomers believe they can pack a week's worth of exercise into two weekend days, while others are still trying to keep up with their teenage children. As a result, exercise injuries among baby boomers, which mostly consist of minor strains, sprains, and bruises, have shot up 42% in the past decade. Bicycling, inline skating, running, and skiing are the activities most likely to cause injury in older adults. People can hurt themselves doing just about any activity, however, if they are not in proper condition. Boomers are advised, therefore, to warm up/cool down before and after participating in exercise, wear protective gear, and to the "no pain, no gain" motto. Jumping into physical activity without proper warm-up, or without taking proper precautions such as wearing protective gear, can result in long term injury and reduced physical ability. At the HANDS ON CENTER FOR PHYSICAL THERAPY, our supportive, experienced staff of physical and massage therapists will not only help relieve your symptoms and speed recovery, but they will also show you some simple ways to avoid re-injury. Ask your physician for a referral, or call our center, conveniently located in Plymouth, at 470 Forest Avenue, Suite 20, at 455-8370. Blue Cross and Medicare providers.

Library's consultant deal deserved closer scrutiny

Just when did the Canton Library drop the word "public" from its name?

We ask this question not because the library has closed its doors to township residents or anyone who seeks entree to its collections. And not because of some drastic change in its mission or goals.

But we ask – somewhat facetiously – in light of the Canton Township Library Board of Trustees' recent decision to hire an outside consultant to identify ways in which the library can raise money and save taxpayer dollars. The Observer questions how wise the spend-now-to-save-later argument is in this case. Looking at it another way, the library will start out any potential fund-raising effort $48,000 in the hole, the cost of securing the services of the Farmington Hills-based Mark R. Fisher and Associates for a one-year contract.

But our real concern is how much scrutiny did the move receive from township officials and the public. This is especially important in light of the fact that few libraries in Michigan hire consultants for such work. That much was admitted by Fisher, who said his firm has never worked for a library.

Now before we go any further, we note the deal wasn't exactly struck in secret. The six-member library board is an elected body that holds monthly meetings, open to the public. In fact, the consulting deal was called to our attention by Canton resident Roy McCutcheon, a recent regular at board meetings.

The board, according to President James Gillig, put out a requested for proposals and interviewed three firms before selecting Fisher's.

There is a contract that spells out requirements for both parties. Fisher will have to submit a plan and help identify potential donors, Gillig said. But the specifics of the arrangement haven't been reviewed in detail by members of the township board of trustees or faced questions in posted public hearings.

And competitive bidding wasn't required before Fisher's firm was selected by the library trustees.

All those provisions would have been a part of the process if, for example, the township were hiring a consultant on a building or computer software project. The township requires competitive bidding on materials or services in excess of $10,000.

Fisher, in an Observer story last Sunday, called the project "cutting-edge" and a move that other libraries will soon be copying. But beyond his spin, the public doesn't really know what it's getting.

Gillig's sentiments – that the library be endowed to the point that taxpayer support can be eliminated – are admirable. But where are the facts, based on previous experience at similar institutions, to back them up?

The money for the contract will come from the library's operating fund, which consists of state aid, local property taxes and library fines. The contract's value is nearly 10 percent of the figure the library spends annually on materials, a high price to pay for an unproven concept.

The Observer has long been a booster of the Canton Public Library and its programs and will continue to support those efforts. We recognize it as a leader in its field and a true asset to the community.

But that backing doesn't translate into a carte blanche approval for every decision made at 1200 S. Canton Center, particularly those that haven't had a full public airing.

Name change, new focus show progress on Rouge

What is a river?

That is the fundamental question we must ask ourselves as we continue down the road of restoring the Rouge River watershed. Do we want ecologically diverse waterways that sustain and nurture life? Or do we want open, lifeless drains that flush our runoff water out to the Detroit River as quickly as possible?

Since volunteers began wading into the Rouge some 15 years ago with the first Rouge Rescue, literally tons of debris have been plucked from the river.

Like all the cars, appliances and shopping carts that found their way into the various branches of the Rouge, logjams and downed trees have traditionally been viewed as something to be removed as well. Over the years volunteers have hacked away at them with chainsaws and used ropes to pull them out of the water.

In recent years however, ideas have evolved about the natural role that logs, sticks and other woody debris play in a river ecosystem. First and foremost, they provide habitat for fish and insects. Logs also add oxygen to the water when the current rolls over them, which is an important factor in the health of a river.

In addition, Rouge Rescue volunteers are now beginning to use woody debris as a way to fight the constant battle against erosion.

With the rapid rate of development in western Wayne County, more and more demands are being made on the Rouge. With each new strip mall or office building, there is more pavement sending ever more runoff water rushing into the Rouge. This added water rips at the river banks, causing both erosion and the water to be silted.

Rather than take the logs and fallen trees out of the river, many volunteers are starting to secure them to river banks. Steel cables are used to hold them in place. This technique provides bank stabilization, as well as the natural benefits of habitat and water quality.

Despite this, many people, particularly some property owners who live along the Rouge, still see logjams and downed trees as a nuisance. Many believe they are responsible for flooding and erosion.

In some cases, logjams do cause erosion if they form in a way that pushes water directly toward the banks. However, flooding and most erosion is a direct result of the amount of water we are diverting into the river during rains.

Until those issues are resolved, property owners will continue to lose property during flooding, regardless of the amount of debris in the river.

For this year's Rouge Rescue, now known as River Day, four volunteer sites, including Westland and Canton Township, scheduled some kind of woody debris management or stream bank restoration projects. Rescuing the Rouge is no longer just about pulling garbage from the river.

Clearly there is a new vision. We are beginning to take the next step of turning the Rouge into a sustainable ecosystem that offers recreational opportunities such as fishing, boating and hiking.

That is a far cry from the polluted, open sewers we had just a couple of decades ago.

Full picture needed

Re: "Mix-matched," the story about my acculturation project in the Canton Observer (June 3, Page A1). I would like to see the following clarifications:

1. The line under the picture that defines the philosophy of acculturation should have stated that I hold workshops in acculturation, a philosophy of two-way communication that believes in retaining one's own cultural capital along with getting Americanized.

2. The whole idea of the new philosophy is to suggest an alternative to the Melting Pot. So there is no sense in making your readers e-mail to you a question that just says: To Melt or Not? Then further asks should immigrants assimilate into American culture or should maintain the ways of their homeland. Instead the question should have been: To melt or acculturate? Should immigrants assimilate into the American culture totally or should they try to mix and match the two cultures while they Americanize.

This would be in coordination with your headline ("Mix-matched") and also bring out the two-way aspect of acculturation, which is more of a cultural exchange between the immigrants and the American society. I hope you understand in this era of growing globalization and Internet technology a cultural exchange would be more appropriate than making the immigrants assimilate into a melting pot. Acculturation philosophy takes us closer to the American ideal of cultural pluralism rather than assimilation.

3. I have no concerns about my kids being left out as Asian kids. I have full faith in the culture sensitivity of the Plymouth-Canton school district, its staff and students. I have been personally in touch with the guidance and counseling office at Salem High School. They understand acculturation and agree with my philosophy.

4. As I have repeatedly told your reporter, I work as an acculturation specialist for the International Institute of Metropolitan Detroit along with my teaching assignments, and this agency provides me an opportunity to work with different immigrants and provide them with services.

It was my first experience with your newspaper, and I am very uncomfortable with the way the whole thing was reported. I was looking forward to you to popularize my new concept and develop an ongoing relationship with your paper for future reporting. This incident has shaken my confidence in your newspaper – and not just mine but that of other Canton residents within the Indian community and outside it.

U.S. is best

Immigrants should assimilate into the American culture ("To melt or not," Canton Observer, June 3).

We've been doing it for years, and it worked and created the best country on Earth. Each group can keep their particular culture and customs for their own use and enjoyment (as they should). But, if they don't become Americans, what kind of country we are going to have? A bunch of hyphenated-Americans?

Schools need plan

By the time you read this, it is likely that the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools board of education will have voted to adopt the school district budget for the 2001-02 school year. This is an annual occurrence and by law must take place by July 1 for the upcoming school year. The law requires this budget to be balanced but does not require the school district to meet this budget. In addition, it does not require a school district to develop any type of financial plan beyond the current budget. While the law does not specifically require either of these from a school district, sound fiscal responsibility demands these of a $110 million business, and it should be no different if the business happens to be a school district.

I would like to call the community's attention to our school district's apparent lack of concern for either of these fiscally responsible practices.

First, a quick review of the district's recent inability to meet its budget in the most recent school years. In both the 1999-2000 and 2000-01 school years, the board of education passed a budget that met the legal requirements to be balanced and in both cases failed to meet this budget during the school year. In other words, taxpayers were told that our school district would meet a certain budget and then the school district failed to live up to that promise.

As fiscal planning is not an exact science, some variance is expected.

However, the variance for the past two years has resulted in budget overruns of more than $3 million in 1999-2000 and over $1.5 million in 2000-01. In both of these cases the school district administration has cited numerous reasons it could not meet its budget, but the bottom line is that the district did not deliver on the promises it made in passing a balanced budget.

The second – and potentially more disastrous issue – is the lack of a sound financial plan. This type of plan would clearly demonstrate the implications of present day budget approval on the future financial health of the school district. By the administration's own projections, the passage of the proposed budget will put our school district on a course that will result in the need for millions of dollars in cuts to balance future budgets.

These projections indicate that the cuts will need to begin in the 2002-03 school year to allow the new high school to open. The administration reaction to its own dim financial projections has been to paint this as simply a "conservative administrative tool" and our dim financial future as one where they "hope" enough change will occur before 2002-03 that our financial future will become miraculously brighter. All of this adds up to a frightening scenario where we bet our children's educational future on some, as-yet-unknown intervention, instead of using these "administrative tools" to manage our own destiny.

This community deserves an accurate assessment of its school district's financial future from those who are hired and elected to deliver its long-term success. This assessment, along with the associated plans and contingencies for the long-term viability of the district's financial health, should have been securely in place prior to the passage of any budget for the upcoming school year. They were not.

In addition, I believe that the board needs to make a formal commitment to the public that the budget it has passed will be the one it will live to for the fiscal year and that it will enact formal policies to prevent these overruns from occurring again.

Collectivism is dead

Open letter to school board, lawmakers and all local newspaper editors:

Get used to a grass roots freedom-in-education movement because we will not stop until we liberate all kids, all families from the violence of force that you use to get your plunder. Voters need to get in touch with our rich heritage of 220 years of no government schooling.

A full separation of school and state is needed now, and we will win. Collectivism will as always destroy itself; it's just a question of how soon we can save the kids and families.

We understand that schools can't be reformed because they're not broken. They undermine politically weak parents today just as they did when they were founded on bad principles in the 1840s: 1. Collectivism, the idea that government should own and administer the means of production (e.g., schooling); 2. Welfare, the notion that you're entitled to your neighbors money (by force) for your children's education; and 3. Compartmentalism, the notion that it's OK to dis-integrate academics and religion by keeping them in separate compartments called school, church, temple and family.

Government monopoly schooling in America can't be fixed any more than government farms could be fixed in the Soviet Union.

* Collectivism is dead! Long live freedom!

Schoolcraft's McDowell leaves legacy at college

Sure, Michigan's big-time universities are among our crown jewels. But for everyday use, I'll take our system of local community colleges — a system that has grown and flourished remarkably over the past 30 years or so.

Take Schoolcraft Community College, tucked in between Livonia and Northville Township in western Wayne County. When I started my newspaper company back in the mid 1960s, the original campus site on Haggerty north of Six Mile was mostly rolling country. Today, it's filled with new buildings and crowded with students at nearly all hours of the day.

Schoolcraft was founded in 1961, an early expression of the general idea that people in Michigan needed something cheaper, more accessible and more flexible than the four-year universities. The thought was to give high school graduates who were not going on to college another two years of practical training. Indeed, the idea of financing community colleges through a local property tax looks a lot like the financing system for K-12 schools. Schoolcraft's tax rate of 1.8195 applies to property in Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Northville, Novi and Garden City.

Schoolcraft progressed steadily for a time, but 1978 saw a bitter strike between the college, at that time led by President Nelson Grote, and the faculty and clerical staff. The wounds were deep, and all eyes were on the new president, Dick McDowell, who was hired in 1981 from the Community College of Allegheny County near Pittsburgh.

In short order, McDowell figured out it was better for management and labor to work together by adopting a new system of labor relations.

Called "cooperative collective bargaining," the idea was to try to solve problems as they came up rather than hold grudges until the contract expired. McDowell sent teams of his staff, the board and the union to a workshop to see how cooperation at the bargaining table might work. They came back converted, and labor relations at Schoolcraft have been excellent ever since.

In fact, the relative placidity of McDowell's term has obscured the fact that he is retiring on June 30 after 20 years on the job — the longest and by any measure the most successful president in the history of the college. Consider these milestones:

■ McDowell inherited an annual budget of around $14 million. The coming fiscal year's budget will be just over $48 million.

■ Schoolcraft today has a total enrollment of around 30,000 students per year, with 17,000 students involved in the continuing education and customized training programs for businesses, up from 1,800 when McDowell started.

■ McDowell has been a fantastic fund-raiser. When he arrived in 1981, a meager $1,700 in contributions was booked. He was the main force behind the Schoolcraft College Foundation, which today has an endowment of nearly $10 million and distributed almost $400,000 for scholarships.

In short order, McDowell figured out it was better for management and labor to work together by adopting a new system of labor relations.

McDowell is quiet, thoughtful, an inclusive delegator. For a president who's been around for a long time, he is astonishingly well-liked. I called Bill Nichols, the chemistry professor and former president of the Faculty Forum, the teachers' union. His take: "It was a great experience working for him. We had our differences, of course, but we always found a way to work them out between us. Those years of his presidency were precious ones at the college." Those are amazing words from the union leader who led the bitter strike in 1978.

When I asked McDowell what sticks in his mind after 20 years, he talked of the visit last year of the North Central Association of Colleges, the group that pays accreditation visits to member campuses. "They were very thorough," McDowell says, "so I was nervous, sitting on the edge of my chair when it came time for them to give their report. Their leader said, 'We haven't found a perfect community college yet, but Schoolcraft College is as good as we've seen,'" McDowell said.

What McDowell's done deserves to be better known around our state, for he's been as good a community college president as they get, and he deserves a happy retirement.

Opponents dial wrong number in battle against cell towers

They always forget to ask a key question at these public hearings about where cellular phone towers should be built. They forgot again last week, as Trintel was turned away by the Canton Township Planning Commission for a site on residentially zoned property, across from the high schools.

Its simplicity is almost blindingly stupid. All right, by a show of hands, how many of you in the audience either own or use cell phones?

Duh!

Now wouldn't that take the wind right out of the sails of those planning commissioners, not to mention the residents who line up at the microphone to talk about aesthetics, property values, radiation, child safety and traffic (Who can concentrate on driving while jabbering away?). Not to mention the dozen or so other issues in the official NIMBY handbook. About the only thing more amusing would be if one of those detractors had to stop in the middle of his or her harangue to — you guessed it — answer a cell phone call.

Of course, the communications companies could take a few notes too. I'm not sure Trintel representative Bryce Kelley gave Canton planners much of a choice when he said the company wasn't interested in tabling the petition but wanted only an up or down vote.

Now, I don't mean to poke too much fun here. I realize there are serious issues at play in the tower-ing (excuse me) debate. Well, serious in the context of suburbia, anyway. And the emotions that sometimes run over in a planning commission meeting point up a weightier philosophical question.

It is awfully interesting how most of us are more than willing to adopt the technology, tap into the convenience it provides and then decry the harm it's causing to the landscape — especially our personal slice of it.

Here's a challenge to the Forest Trails residents who spoke up at the June 4 hearing: Join your brethren everywhere and speak up about the towers being built in Livonia, or Detroit, for goodness sakes. After all, there's strength in numbers and maybe, just maybe, you can stop this evil scourge if you try.

But I would suggest a change in tactics. Some of the typical NIMBY arguments are getting kind of stale and others don't hold much validity anymore, if they ever did.

■ Property values — Can anyone in Canton tell me the last time their assessment went down? Didn't think so, none of you are that old. In fact, even in the last really tough automotive downturn of 1981-83, most local home prices either remained stable or increased slightly. And the '90s — when cell towers were going up here, there and everywhere — saw them skyrocket.

■ Aesthetics — True, cell towers aren't exactly Albert Kahn or Frank Lloyd Wright-inspired masterpieces. But then neither are many of the strip malls, cookie-cutter subdivisions and giant SUVs that dominate the vista. Speaking of SUVs, why is it that we build, buy and can't seem to get enough of them while at the same time bemoan the cost of gasoline?

■ Radiation — I'll almost concede on this one, since the jury is still out. But proponents of the theory need to concentrate more on providing valid statistical studies than just bringing up the R-word as a scare tactic.

■ Traffic — Oh, come on. Will Canton's notorious congestion disappear overnight if township officials put a moratorium on cell towers? No. But it certainly would decrease if they halted all other residential, commercial and industrial building, not that I'm advocating any of that.

So here's my plan for cell tower opponents:

■ Plane crashes — Those tiny, single engine planes that take off from Mettetal Airport are no match for a 170-foot cell tower, like the one Trintel proposed. How about a plane in every driveway?

■ Terrorist staging areas — In the movies, they always seem to infiltrate a skyscraper, ship, Air Force One or some other super-sized structure.

■ Attractive nuisance — Now that Canton Township Police and Plymouth-Canton school officials have zero-tolerance for springtime pranks on the P-CEP campus, teens will discover the endless possibilities for nighttime mischief at cell tower sites.

I'd even be willing to host a strategy session (but not in my backyard) for interested residents to augment these suggestions.

State jumped the gun by naming MEAP 'cheaters'

If you think about it, Richard Jewell got better treatment from the FBI than students, teachers and administrators did last week from the state Department of Treasury.

Jewell, you may recall, was the security guard suspected of planting the bomb that killed two and injured more than 100 in Atlanta in 1996. The FBI leaked his name to the press as their top suspect, which then put it out everywhere and broadcast the FBI's search of his home. Those who leaked the information knew that would happen, of course.

But later they could find no evidence linking Jewell to the bomb. At least they knew at the time there really was a bomb.

That's a lot more than state Treasurer Doug Roberts appears to have known last week when he called a press conference to name 71 schools across Michigan where cheating may have occurred on the Michigan Education Assessment Program test.

That's more than treasury knew when it posted the list of 71 schools with "irregularities" in their test results on the state Web site.

"We're not saying there was cheating," one treasury official said. "We're just saying there were irregularities that need to be looked into."

The comparison would be if the FBI had named Jewell as their bombing suspect when an abandoned duffel bag was noticed sitting in the middle of Olympic Park. Yes, it's irregular. Yes, it bears some looking in to. But we don't even know if it's a bomb yet.

The Department of Treasury released the list of 71 schools where irregularities were spotted. Those irregularities included essay question answers in which a number of students used similar phrases and sentences in their responses. According to Bridget Medina, Treasury Department spokeswoman, some of responses were so similar, with long sentences identical, that it "demands a response."

Fair enough. But schools didn't get that chance to respond before the information came out. In fact, they got their first look at the irregularities the morning after their schools had been publicly named.

It is already clear one school was included on this list in blatant error. Brighton's Hornung Elementary was put there because treasury got the wrong school code on the responses. Apparently, those irregularities came from another school altogether.

In Northville, the irregularities can be easily explained. On a question in which students had to pick their own topic, three chose to write about a current issue in their school, the fact a playground had been taken over for parking lot space. The similarities in answers were a few phrases and sentence fragments.

As Northville Record reporter Jennifer Norris put it, the only thing surprising about it was that more students didn't choose to write about that, topic.

Medina blames the whole thing on leaks to the media. She explained that leaks about the information had reporters on the story and that forced the department's hand.

But it still doesn't fully explain. The treasurer could have confirmed that his department was looking into concerns about cheating without naming names. The department could have said it was reviewing test results at 71 schools for possible cheating without saying which 71 schools were being reviewed.

The release of names of suspect schools could have waited until there had been at least an initial reaction from the principals and superintendents at the schools where irregularities were found.

Medina said treasury now plans to review responses from school administrators, expected to arrive later this week, and that it will take its time to do a thorough review.

That's great, but it should have happened before names were named and fingers were pointed.

School districts got a pretty raw deal, and they have every right to be angry.

If the current administration in Lansing has a reputation for being anti-public schools and anti-teacher, this incident is a perfect example of why. It is hard to conclude anything other than that the department was in a big rush to say it had found cheating going on in the MEAP tests.

Lawmakers angry over release of MEAP list

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

It was like issuing a list of suspects before knowing whether a crime has occurred. That's how state lawmakers are characterizing the Michigan Department of Treasury's handling of its announcement last week that it had found "irregularities" in the answers given by students on the latest Michigan Education Assessment Program test.

Those "irregularities," identical or similar answers to essay questions given by several students, may indicate cheating, according to the Department of Treasury.

"The examples were very com-elling," Bridget Medina, spokesperson for Treasury, said. "It was not our purpose to cast undue suspicion on schools, but there were similar sentences, similar phrases, identical down to the placement of the word 'the' in some cases. They went through three sets of hands, including retired teachers and MEAP experts who agreed that at a minimum they demand a response ... Some of the superintendents have said that the examples at their schools did not rise to that level. OK, give us an explanation. We'd be curious to know."

But the list of 71 schools was released before superintendents and school administrators had a chance to respond. State Treasurer Doug Roberts held a press conference Thursday, June 7, to release the list. Garden City's Memorial Elementary was included, although most of the schools included were in Detroit.

Superintendents were sent a package explaining the irregularities seen at their schools, which they had a first chance to review Friday, June 8.

No time for review

That's what has state lawmakers mad.

"It's unfortunate. I don't know what the fire was that they could not have let superintendents have at least 24 hours to review the irregularities before releasing the information," Rep. John Stewart, R-Plymouth, said. Northville's Winchester Elementary was on the list and is located in Stewart's district.

Sen. Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, also represents that area and was equally unhappy with the Treasury department. He questioned why a release was issued before schools had an opportunity to respond to the "allegations."

Medina explained that releasing the information on that timeline had not been the way the Treasury Department planned it. Leaks to the media about potential cheating led to early articles and forced the department's hand, she said.

"We felt it was going to come out anyway," she said. "We wanted school districts to hear it from us rather than read it in the newspaper. All we had time for was to give them a phone call and let them know the information was coming."

Official responses from school districts and superintendents had not begun to arrive at the state as of Tuesday. Medina said she expected to receive them late this week.

"I hope that the manner in which this information was rolled out does not overshadow what we are trying to focus on," Medina said, "which is that everyone has to play by the rules and that the 98 percent of schools who are doing it right aren't penalized for following the rules."

Medina said that if cheating is found, student's scores on those tests will be disqualified. Students would also be disqualified from Merit scholarships based on those tests. But she said state aid to schools or school districts will not be impacted.

Error found

One error in the list has already been identified. Brighton's Hornung Elementary was incorrectly placed on the list because of an incorrect school code. Roberts has already issued an apology.

Rep. Judith Scranton, R-Brighton, said she was "absolutely disgusted" by it.

"I think Doug Roberts and (Merit Office director) Mark Leyda have a lot to answer for. They will never be able to make up for the damage they did to the staff and students at Hornung Elementary. It is unconscionable that a high-powered state agency has so little concern, and could so quickly judge before checking their facts," she said in a Press & Argus interview.

Scranton was scheduled to meet with the Treasury Department Tuesday on the subject.

Garden City Superintendent Michael Wilmot was to have met with treasury officials today. The state singled out the tests of five students in one class at Memorial for their response to one question on the written portion of the social studies test.

The students used the words descendants and Native American in answering the question who would use the immigration routes to North America shown on a MEAP map and why.

According to Wilmot, the word descendant is in the students' textbook which also includes the same map, and the politically correct Native American was gleaned from a lesson about Native Americans and why they want to be called that, taught by a teacher who is married to a Native American.

Northville administrators told The Northville Record three students at Winchester had written about the same topic, a topic discussed in class earlier that week and one students cared about intently, their playground. While similar phrases appeared in their answers, identical sentences did not.

Motives questioned

"Is this the level at which we put the black cloud of suspicion for cheating on a school system?" Stewart said.

He thought the release of the information by the treasury might be politically motivated.

"I would hope that the motivation for Lansing is not to use the MEAP test as a political weapon to put down a school district in order to pressure the legislature to raise the cap on charter schools," Stewart said. A vote on the cap is scheduled in state House this week.

McCotter said he also thought the department was "playing politics."

"No, absolutely not," Medina said to the charge that politics played a role.

"If I respond further, I'm afraid my answer will be angry. So, no, absolutely not."

Teacher job fair on June 18

In response to the 10,000 teachers that Wayne County will need in the next five to eight years, Wayne RESA (Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency) will host its third annual Teacher Recruitment Fair 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, June 18, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Dearborn.

"A consistent message from our school districts continues to be the need for quality teachers," said RESA Superintendent Marlene E. Davis. "Teacher shortages are not just a local issue. the lack of certified teachers is being felt nationwide."

More than 50 Wayne County public school districts and public school academies will conduct on-site interviews to fill at least 1,000 open positions.

High need fields include math, sciences, vocational education, computer science, special education and foreign languages.

AMERICA'S HOMETOWN CELEBRATION

LOCAL ACTORS BRING HISTORY TO LIFE AT GREENFIELD VILLAGE

People mover: Daniel Showalter drives visitors to designated stops at Greenfield Village in a 1930s Model AA bus.

Christian Overland paints a picture of Greenfield Village that comes alive with every bristle of his brush. Elijah McCoy, W.E.B. Dubois, and Marie Therese Cadillac, wife of Detroit founder Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac – visitors meet all of these historical figures while walking through the streets during the village's America's Hometown Celebration June 18 to Aug. 19.

"What we have is street theater," said Overland, director of Greenfield Village. "You can come inside and spend six to eight hours watching street theater, things that happened in the street like the Wright brothers. What makes this so special is this is 300 years of history. Guests have the ability to walk through time. You could spend two to three days learning about Elijah McCoy's invention for activating a lubricator on a steam locomotive. He holds 57 patents for the 'real McCoy.' Before his invention, they had to stop their engines every so many miles and lubricate them.

"And because this is Detroit's tricentennial we're having Madame Cadillac talk about what it was like to hit the frontier."

Fun weekends

Overland could go on and on about the celebration that includes an old-fashioned parade featuring transportation modes ranging from a Model T to an oxcart. Greenfield Village not only offers the opportunity to view the progress of America's love affair with the automobile on a daily basis, but also spotlights everything from a 1930 V8 Ford to a 1970s Pacer during a special Father's Day weekend Motor Muster. The event, which celebrates 40 years of Motor City history with over 500 cars, is one of the fun weekends Overland is overseeing at the village.

From July 1-4 the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will salute America with a rousing program of patriotic music and fireworks. Saturday-Sunday Aug. 4-5, the village celebrates African American culture with storytelling, reenactments, and music – blues, jazz and traditional spirituals.

Living history

"It's one of America's great history parks and the only place where you can meet George Washington Carver and railroad engineers, see people actually doing things people did 110-150 years ago," said Overland. "They're shoveling the coal. They're living history the way it was."

"It's also a chance to go back to a slower pace where families can do things together – play games on the green such as participate in hoop races, and walk on stilts. Take a day off and spend it with your family. We pass out flags to children. It's a lot of fun. Come out and taste the shortcake. One of the things that's unusual is the eating oppor-

Notable African Americans such as writer Langston Hughes and novelist/anthropologist Zora Neale Hurston come to life in the project co-sponsored by the Arts League of Michigan.

"W.E.B. Du Bois was the first African American to receive a Ph.D. from Harvard University, and founder/editor of Crisis Magazine, a literary magazine founded in 1910 to give voice to a lot of African American poets and writers at that time," said Lucas who first played the role during Black History Month at the museum in February. ### GALA EVENING

'Sunset' benefit gives guests glimpse of new polar bear digs

Look out for icicles dripping overhead and bear prints tracking across the paths in the new Arctic Ring of Life exhibit at the Detroit Zoo. Fortunately for visitors, the tracks and most of the ice, are simulated. The exhibit only makes visitors think they're roaming the tundra with the polar bears and Arctic fox.

When it opens in September, the new $13.6 million exhibit, which is housed on more than four acres, will be the world's largest polar bear den. Until then, visitors will have only a handful of opportunities to view the new digs designed by architects Jones & Jones of Seattle.

One of them is "Sunset at the Zoo" on June 19, a fund-raising event when guests will get to glimpse the three pools even before the bears do.

Lucky for the foxes Scott Carter said "it will only appear as if the Arctic foxes are living together with the bears but a dry moat will separate them." Carter, curator of mammals, recently led a tour of exhibit which will also be home to snowy owls as well as harbor and harp seals.

"It begins with an early 1900s Inuit village and the first view of polar bears in the southern range of the Arctic and moves north," said Carter.

everything to mimic the environment there, including cooling pads to give bears places to go in the summer. Inukshuks, sculpture-like rocks assembled by the Inuits as way finders, guide visitors as they make their way from the summer tundra past a fresh water pool where cubs could learn to swim if the zoo decides to do captive breeding.

On the trek north there will be opportunities to see bears in the southern tundra, open water and on pack ice. Just follow the trail where fox and bear prints descend to the seals in the pool at the bottom.

The first indoor exhibit teaches visitors about Inuit culture. Nunavut Gallery is filled with Inuit art and artifacts curated by Gerry Craig. Alongside the stone sculptures of polar bear, caribou, wolf, seal, falcon and an Arctic fox, floor to ceiling glass panels give visitors their first underwater view of polar bears and seals who are separated from each other by acrylic panels.

THEATER

Play expresses the truth according to Ron Allen

BY KEELY KALESKI-WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER
kwygolik@oe.homecomm.net

Like his friend, artist Tyree Guyton, Ron Allen's a "city guy" plugged into Motown's rhythm.

His newest play Eye Mouth Graffiti Body Shop, performed by the Thick Knot Rhythm Ensemble, with set design by Guyton, opens Friday at the Metropolitan Center for Creative Arts in Detroit.

"Tyree and I have been wanting to work together," he says.

"We have this stuff all over the theater. It's illustrative of urban life. Tyree is how you build community, how you serve a part of us that's connected. He's speaking my truth through art."

Allen and I meet during rehearsal at the First Unitarian Universalist Church on Wayne State University's campus in Detroit where he is the campus minister and cultural coordinator.

Rhythm of life

Spending time with Allen and watching his play, is a spiritual experience. We talk about rhythm, how life has a beat, and agree the most oppressive thing anyone can do is take away your rhythm.

"It's a medium that gives you information about your experience," he tells me. Rhythm is liberating, it defines one's self, the way you understand light, color, sound, movement. When your sense of self is altered, rhythm stops, life stops.

Allen's latest work is complex, multi-layered. He describes it as being like a jazz ensemble where everyone's playing their instrument at the same time.

"There's a lot of stuff going on," he says. "Words liberate or entrap people. There's too much information to take in at one setting. The text is difficult. You might want to see it a couple of times."

Eye Mouth Graffiti Body Shop

looks at urban culture, the death and destruction of a city, relationships, technology, language, how we speak, and develop insight.

Village from page B1

Plowshares Theatre's production of Neale Hurston's Mule Bone. "The magazine helped to bring about the Harlem Renaissance of the 1920s. He was well known and respected and liked visiting Idlewild which was a resort when things were still very much segregated in the early part of the 20th century. It was a popular place for African Americans to go to socialize, for entertainment, and probably to network. Langston Hughes and Zora Neale Hurston eventually collaborated on a short story."

Mrs. Cleveland favored the not quite so northern resort of Waterford. The fictional character is played by Maureen Dorrington of Beverly Hills. Visitors will recognize Dorrington from her role in Marathon's Men in Black commercial.

"She's the wife of a Detroit doctor who comes to the country," said Dorrington, who has performed with the Jewish Ensemble Theatre, Meadow Brook Theatre and The Attic over the last 10 years. "She's based on a person who made the newspapers as a sports fisherman."

Disagreeable customer

Visitors can find Dorrington at J.R. Jones General Store on the green next to the carousel. She's one of three actresses playing Mrs. Cleveland, the disagreeable customer.

"She's kind of batty so it's kind of fun," said Dorrington. "I'm known as the loon calling Mrs. Cleveland who talks about Loon Lake during the show. She's so taken with Waterford. On weekends and summers in the mid-1800s she would go out to Waterford to stay at the hotel called the Exchange."

"It's interesting to present historical information to the public. It's given me a great perspective of what Oakland County was about back then."

Learning by doing

Daniel Showalter enjoys learning about the history of Michigan as much as Dorrington. One of the dozens of presenters, Showalter works in transportation at the village. Depending on what day it is, visitors can find him conducting the Edison steam locomotive built in 1863, giving tours in a Model T, or driving a 1931 Ford AA bus. He also takes tickets in the train station and helps artisans make brass candlesticks on a turret lathe in the machine shop.

"We have manuals that go with every location we work," said Showalter, a Garden City resident and substitute teacher for Wayne Westland Schools. "They're like a history book. But it's going to the location; it's going to the Edison Laboratory to see how he made that first light bulb and seeing the first building with all the wires hanging down."

"You can see one of the houses from the 1640s with nine people living in it. Back then the houses were smaller than our smallest house now. I appreciate more how they lived, what little they had and how rough their life was. We keep saying how wonderful it was back then. It was a lot of hard work."

"But one of the things I like most is meeting people from around the country and world - Germany, Australia, England, Israel, Japan. We get people in who used these old items. One man drove one of the diesel engines. I like driving the old vehicles and trains, and especially having to share roads in the village with horses."

inches thick.

"It was designed to be able to withstand the 300,000 gallons of water or a bear standing on top," said Carter. "Staff will be trained to dive in the pool and keep the acrylic clean."

Next visitors exit to an ice cave to cool down from the exhilarating experience of bears swimming overhead. Real ice covers the walls.

"This is state of the art and addresses what bears need," said Carter. "Bears by nature are curious."

Carter hopes that curiosity will help when it comes time to move the seven polar bears from the old exhibit behind the Arctic Ring of Life.

"We've been training the bears to go into crates which will be picked up and moved," said Carter. "Others will wake up from their annual physical exam in a new exhibit."

Then it's down another path and into the exploration station where a big panel looks into the bear pool. Here, docents will share exciting stories about research while visitors experience first-hand how radio telemetry is used to track animals. Research equipment, such as a thermal imaging camera, provide hands-on learning opportunities.

Small icebergs

On the other side of the wall, an ice machine turns out six 300-pound cubes every couple of days. It will be hoisted into the bears environment and should last a while in the 50 to 60 degree water. Smaller blocks of ice with fish in them are meant to amuse bears.

"Bears are very manipulative," said Carter. "Ice is a good indestructible toy we can give them to play with."

Next it's on to the tundra or pack ice. Designers have incorporated environmental stimulation into the artificial ice which looks cold and barren.

"There will be food hiding spots and gravel beds for digging," said Carter.

Sadly, this is the last view of the bears before the tracks lead off to a building where life support technicians monitor the quality of water in the three pools. Here, heat exchangers maintain the temperature between 50 to 55 degrees. While bears probably won't care if the water warms a degree or two, one of the design elements they will love is the live fish which will be piped in from a trout holding system.

"It will be interesting to see the polar bears reactions," said Marcus Zevalkink, life support technician. "They'll have to catch the fish."

Fishing is just one of the experiences bears will enjoy as if they were living in the wild.

Ruth Glancy thinks the natural habitat is what makes the Arctic Ring of Life a special addition to the zoo. In fact, Glancy is so convinced the exhibit will favor bears as well as visitors that she's chairing "Sunset at the Zoo" with hopes of raising $150,000.

"There's so many educational components," said Glancy, chairman of the Detroit Zoological Society which has already raised $10 million for the Arctic Ring of Life. "We're hoping to build Sunset into a major event. There'll be a live auction with Joe Walker which includes an opportunity to name an animal, a safari to Kenya, and birthday parties at the zoo."

Strolling supper

A strolling supper will feature tasty treats from the Rattlesnake Club, Gayle's Chocolates, Fishbone's Rhythm Kitchen Cafe, the Golden Mushroom, and NO.VI. Chophouse & Lobster Bar, to name a few. After they've eaten, visitors can tour the exhibit, and watch Inuit sculptor Charlie Inuk turn a chunk of granite into a 9-foot-tall standing bear for the entrance of the exhibit.

Those are just some of the highlights of the evening. Bear Benefactors ($500) receive an invitation to the future Polar Bear Splash Party to swim in the pool before the bears do.

"It's a wonderful evening in the park with lots of different restaurants, an auction, raffle and music," said Glancy. "We're asking people to wear (ice) blue or (polar bear) white to tie in with the theme."

Sounds like one "cool" party.

Allen from page B2

"It's about the breakdown of institutions and humanity," he explains. "How we try to survive, a very basic thing. We're trapped in the literal, we live in a very physical, material world."

Challenging experience

Nelson Jones Jr. portrays mouth, one of the characters in the play.

He was drawn to Allen's work because it's new, and because he's a writer/poet, sort of, and hopes experiencing another poet's writing will rub off on him, make him a better writer.

ence his writing," said Jones. "The writing at first was kind of difficult to understand. I play one of the characters that symbolize the city."

Describing the play is also difficult. "It's a presentation of poems, his outlook on the destruction of the city and what causes it," said Jones. "A portrayal of ingredients in society that either cause the city to rise or fall. He talks about things we go through in society that cause destruction, but in destruction we also have creation."

As a poet and playwright, Allen challenges himself to speak his truth, his language. "That's how you find God," he says. "But when you do what you feel you'll have less people at your shows."

Eye Mouth Graffiti Body Shop is poetry in motion. The actors speak sometimes at the same time, shout, proclaim their truth, demand attention, and move in a way that defines the rhythm of Allen's words.

"You have to suspend your notions and ideas about what art is," he said. "And be willing to let me take you on my journey. Hopefully it will be rewarding."

He wants people to seriously start taking risks and explore parts of their life - to see that there are possibilities they haven't considered.

Building community

Ultimately, Allen is about building community - finding out how we are connected, not separate.

"We're taught how we're different from one another, not the same," he says. "This is a colorful play. I think it's a gift to see art and appreciate it. I hope people will say 'I went to see this play and I left with another consciousness.' Hopefully, a pleasing consciousness."

STREET SCENE

Britpop Bliss:

Don't miss: Britain's The Clientele is touring in support of its Merge Records debut, "Suburban Lights." Winning comparisons to wistful Glaswegian darlings Belle & Sebastian, the somber-pop of Felt and noted influence of Boston's Galaxie 500, the band is making its first Detroit appearance. Catch them now, or regret it later. The Clientele performs with openers, the Mercury Dime, Saturday, June 16, Detroit Contemporary, 5141 Rosa Parks Blvd., north of Warren in Detroit. Tickets $8. Call (313) 898-4ART. For more, see www.theclientele.co.uk.

Judah Johnson strikes a new sound

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

Rings of smoke swirl around and the setting sun shines at eye-level through the window of the bar where I've agreed to meet Judah Johnson. Despite its five members, no one in the Detroit-based post rock band actually goes by that name. For the band, the name itself is meaningless, and without boundaries.

But it sounds like someone you might know.

Together since last spring, Judah Johnson has gotten off to a strong start — performing at some enviable venues like the Magic Bag in Ferndale and Detroit's Magic Stick, with some local darlings, The Atomic Numbers, and national up-starts, The Push Stars.

Don't deem Judah a pop band, though its distinctive sound meshes well in such a setting. Vocalist Daniel Johnson, keyboardist Nate Cavalieri, drummer Charlie Koltak, guitarist Brian Pierson and bassist Zach Roberts defy classification.

If you haven't heard Judah Johnson, you haven't heard anything like this.

Moving Midwest

The band's Midwest roots stretch rather far. Roberts and Koltak grew up together in Midland, Mich. They met Cavalieri while attending Central Michigan University. Pierson grew up in Missouri and met Johnson while attending college there. The first spark of this line up, though, came when Koltak and Johnson met during an open mic night at Hamtramck's Holbrook Cafe. They began working on songs together with Roberts, which soon led to recording a demo with producer Don Dixon (REM, The Smithereens). Slowly linking these associations, Judah Johnson grew from a trio to a five-piece.

"In some ways it's easier," said Daniel Johnson. "When you're a three-piece, it's kind of spare. When you have more musicians, you can do a lot more."

While songs often originate with him, each member puts his own mark on them, a certain spin or style. There exists an equality in the band. Pierson said it's one reason he's happy to be part of Judah Johnson. "I don't think anyone is afraid to bring up a new idea," he said.

From Tom Waits to the super-speed beats of Autechre, the bands influences vary greatly. There's no telling what this group might be into next — or what direction their own music might take. "This is like the ideal band for me," said Pierson.

"When you see what your friends are passionate about, what they get excited about, that's the best part about music."

When it comes to music, Judah Johnson doesn't stick to rules, time signatures or any tried-and-true pop formula. They won't win many comparisons to bands hovering at a top the Billboard Hot 100s chart. And that's the point. "We try to be aware of what's going to make the song effective," said Roberts.

On the album's first self-titled EP, this is represented in the moody, lilting piano that wanders into The Silent Treatment, the opening track, and the easily addictive sonic landscape of Tel Aviv. Just six songs long, the record makes you feel like it is the start of something good.

Have you heard

"We're trying to do something you haven't heard anybody do," said Johnson. In Judah Johnson that often translates into unusual arrangements and song structures. "I write as I go through the day," he said. "I kind of have to live with the stuff. I let it percolate, write over weeks." Lyrics, he said, reflect "things we've all been going through."

The EP was recorded digitally from August to January. "We just did it as naturally as we could," said Pierson. It was mastered at Rustbelt Studio, where producers Al Sutton and Bob Ebeling praised the outcome. "It was really flattering," said Cavalieri.

The record is one of the first to be released on Chicago's Flameshovel Records label. Jesse Woghin has been a longtime friend of the band and also completed the record's artwork. "He had some idea of what we were trying to do," said Cavalieri. "We're not talking about getting rich."

Woghin said he and Flameshovel cohort Nash Static are proud to work with the band. "In a lot of ways you could say that Judah Johnson is the reason that Flameshovel exists right now," he said in an e-mail interview. "I had been thinking idly of starting a label for a while, mostly as a pastime, something to break up the monotony of the 9-5. Yet, when I realized that I had the opportunity to release music that I really loved and believed in by a group of some of my best friends, that pretty much jumpstarted the genesis of the label. Within a few weeks of getting the Judah Johnson record, Nash jumped on board and we were in high gear."

Judah Johnson is good music for music's sake. It delves into a dark, dreamy place, one that feels at once familiar and brand-new. At a time when pop music is barraged by well-designed boy bands you can barely tell apart, here is a glimmer of hope and originality on our side.

GETTING TO KNOW JUDAH JOHNSON

Nate Cavalieri (keyboards, vocals, percussion)

"I grew up in (Clare, Mich.), way outside the city. I started playing in bands because it was required...There was nothing else to do."

Nate's parents asked if he'd like to take piano lessons when they found him banging on keys at Kmart. He was 12.

In his CD player: Rufus Wainwright, Ted Leo, Clem Sinde

Dan Johnson (vocals, guitar)

"My parents were both musicians. My dad played guitar, my mom played piano. I was kind of raised on music."

Dan's uncle bought him his first guitar.

In his CD player: U2, PJ Harvey, Rufus Wainwright

Charlie Koltak (drums, vocals)

"I don't know why I gravitated towards drums. I was just a really angry kid. When I started playing drums the goal was not to make music, the goal was to break things."

Charlie is now a jazz studies major at Wayne State University.

In his CD player: Blonde Redhead, John Coltrane, The Jayhawks

Brian Pierson (guitar)

"The first time I decided I was going to play guitar was in the fifth grade. I remember...watching Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure. Me and my best friend, we pretended like we were Bill and Ted."

Brian wanted a Flying V guitar he saw in a Sears Catalog, but he never got it.

In his CD player: Radiohead, Weezer, Tortoise

Zach Roberts (bass, vocals)

"I started off playing piano when I was really little. I didn't like my teacher. I was 5 or 6 when I started playing. Then I started playing guitar. I think guitar was important because I was an introverted kid."

Zach's parents encouraged his talent and by the time he was 12, country and Chicago blues had drawn him in.

In his CD player: Wilco, Rufus Wainwright, Marvin Gaye

Judah Johnson celebrates the release of their self-titled E.P. on Flameshovel Records, along with performances by The Climax Divine, Document, Sunday, June 17, Magic Stick, Detroit. Call (313) 833-9700.

Kasey Chambers conquers country

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER
scasola@oe.homecomm.net

At 24, Kasey Chambers seems poised to explode on the alt-country scene. Born and bred in Australia, Chambers has toured and traveled the world. In 1999, she released her first solo effort, "The Captain," to rave reviews. Now touring with her idol, Lucinda Williams and ready to release a second record this summer, Chambers can become a household name yet. As she told the Observer & Eccentric in telephone interview, where she goes, family stays with her.

Observer & Eccentric: How did you become interested in making music? I know you come from a musical family.

Kasey Chambers: "They are all on the road with me. My dad plays guitar, my brother does our sound and he produced my album. They're all there on the road. My dad mostly played music all his life. I remember music always being around us, really. Listening to music was the only form of entertainment."

O&E: When did you start singing?

K.C.: "When I was about 9 I was onstage. We would always sit around the campfire singing songs, but my first gig was when I was about 9."

O&E: Who were some of your influences early on.

K.C.: "My dad brought me up listening to Hank Williams, Emmylou Harris and Graham Parsons. Later on I started listening to Lucinda Williams, a lot of what I'm still listening to now."

O&E: It must be exciting right now, preparing to go on tour opening for Lucinda Williams. Have you performed with her before?

K.C.: "Not like a big tour. I've known Lucinda for a year or two. We've been catching up every time I go to Nashville. I've played a couple of gigs with her before. Going on tour with her is like a dream come true."

O&E: You're music is not so easily defined. It has elements of country, but also pop and rock. How do you describe it?

K.C.: "I guess the way to describe it is alternative country. It's so hazy what country music is these days."

O&E: What inspires you when writing your music and lyrics?

K.C.: "It's kind of different. Sometimes it's going to new places, traveling a lot, meeting new people. I'll probably write a lot of songs after I come off tour with Lucinda. That's such an inspiring thing. Something emotional brings out the creative side."

O&E: Tell me about working on your album, The Captain, which you recorded with your brother.

K.C.: "I've never really worked in music without working with my family. I kind of have nothing else to compare it to. When it came to my album, the songs had a lot to do with my family. They are all about my life story. I kind of felt Nash, my brother, knew how I wanted to sound. He lived all these songs with me."

O&E: You have a follow-up record due out in July. What is it called? Will it sound much different than The Captain?

K.C.: "It's called Barricades and Brickstones. I think it is different. I think I made this album with a little bit of a different attitude. I think my songwriting is different. I wrote the songs on The Captain when I was 17 or 18. My lifestyle has changed as well. It's kinda hard to tell. I'm so close to it. My manager has been listening to it and he said: 'I think the difference in this one is the country is country and the rock is rocker.' I guess it's a lot more varied. I've learned a lot about music. I've been listening to a lot of different songwriters."

O&E: Who are you listening to right now?

K.C.: "Patty Griffin's Flaming Red. It's been around for a while but I only just kind of discovered it. And Ryan Adams Heartbreaker."

O&E: What are your plans for the future?

K.C.: "I'm just kind of enjoying the ride. We'll be back (in the states) here in September and October. I'm taking every day as it comes and just having a lot of fun. I feel very lucky that I'm getting to do this."

See Lucinda Williams with opener Kasey Chambers, 5 p.m. Saturday, June 16, Phoenix Plaza Amphitheatre, Pontiac. Tickets $25. Call (248) 645-6666.

Pleased with work: Linda and Gary Nimmerguth stand in the doorway of their bathroom, which they converted two years ago.

Brighter days: Lights and off-white accents brighten up displays of burgundy dried flowers, oil bottles and perfume bottles. The bathroom features a double sink, a hamper with sliding racks and two sets of outlets.

Couple opens closet to create spacious bathroom

By KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Married couples who use a small bathroom with one sink know the morning cleansing rituals all too well. Jockeying around cramped quarters to access a toothbrush or hair dryer is hardly the way to start a workday.

Gary and Linda Nimmerguth, 57, grew up in ship home.

"When we each needed to use the sink, we would run into each other," said Linda. "We decided this just wasn't going to work."

Located in a corner of the master bedroom, their bathroom measured only 4-feet wide by 8-feet long. An adjacent walk-in closet was used for storing clothing for work and evenings out.

Gary thought why not convert the walk-in closet into a bathroom, then switch the bathroom into a walk-in closet. Linda perused magazines for other decorating ideas.

Contracting out

Kitchen & Bath Design Center in Canton to talk to employees there about their idea.

"I showed (a clerk) a picture I liked and she said, 'we just did something like that in another house,'" Linda said. "She brought (plans) up on a computer and printed it out for us."

The old bathroom featured the basics: a shower, sink and toilet. The Nimmerguths, the original owners of the 1985 home, looked to get going on the project. Eventually they hired Mike Painter through N.A. Mans, after they received three bids, two of which were "pretty high," said Gary.

Contractors installed a dust barrier wall with a zipper so the couple could access their bed and the remaining area of the bedroom. They removed the sink, shower and toilet and ripped out drywall.

They soon added a double sink and shower from Marble-Lite. The shower now has a solid surface that gives it a "cleaner look" than tile, Linda said.

A hamper installed between the two sinks features sliding racks for washcloths and towels. Two outlets can be used for hair dryers, toothbrushes or razors. There's plenty of room for sundries in the cabinets. The sink now sits higher, similar to the height of a kitchen counter, adding to the room's convenience and comfort as items are now within an arm's reach without straining, stretching or bending.

A new towel holder is, of all things, a converted wine rack. Light and off-white accents brighten up displays of burgundy dried flowers, oil bottles and perfume bottles.

Changes in plumbing were minimal due to the location of the previous bathroom and the children's bathroom next door.

Efficiency is key

You would think that the old Nimmerguth wardrobe wouldn't fit into a smaller closet area, but organization and efficiency helped in storing clothing and shoes. The couple also removed and got rid of a few clothes. "We really got as much in the new closet as the other one," Gary said.

The storage area of the closet was divided into two separate areas with two rods — one upper and one lower — to allow for even more efficient storage.

The new closet also houses a window that the Nimmerguths kept from the old bathroom. "I like the window in the closet," Gary said. "It keeps things fresh."

For the renovation, there were no structural changes, even though the closet ceiling height now measures 8 feet. "It was a drop ceiling, so there was no change there," Gary said.

Today, the Nimmerguth's new bathroom measures 8-feet wide and 9-feet, 4-inches long. With the conversion and renovations, Gary and Linda nearly doubled the floor space of their bathroom.

The job cost between $15,000 and $20,000. "We are extremely happy that we did this," Linda said. "It really adds value to the house."

Their advice to other remodelers? "Seek out dependable people to help you," said Gary. "Get references and call people they

New fixtures: The renovated bathroom features a double sink and shower from Marble-Lite. The old bathroom (the two photos at right) wasn't in bad shape, it just was too narrow for the Nimmerguths.

Open space: The bathroom's floor space nearly doubled in width.

GARDENING

Get the most out of garden tours to brighten summer

GARDEN SPOT

MARTY FIGLEY

We are right in the middle of garden tours and I encourage you to take the time to participate in as many as you can.

Take a camera to capture interesting plants, plant combinations, colors and textures, and features that you find inspiring and/or amusing. We always think we will remember, when often after seeing many gardens our memory gets fuzzy.

Keep a record of your photos when you take them. You'll be glad you did, especially when you get the photos back from the developer.

Perhaps you are planning to change your garden completely and need a new direction. Or you are just starting from scratch and have loads of space to fill.

Notice the size of the garden, surrounding vegetation, the view beyond the boundary line and where and what was used as "stopping places" to rest and reflect.

Have the family play places been planned? Is there a place for garden tools and trash? Does the entrance say "Come in"? Which direction does the garden face?

Notice, too, if there is a lot of sun and/or shade, and if the proper plants are used. Have the flowers been regimented in rows, or planted in drifts of color?

Although now it is considered "correct" to plant in drifts, some designs call for a more formal or rigid planting. Which do you like best? You can find examples to help make up your mind.

Take notes about certain plants you see. For instance, has a ground cover been used in a rose garden? What is it?

Have some of the trees been limbed to provide more sun? Could this be done in your garden? What kinds of paths and walks are there? Look closely to get an idea of how they were constructed.

Don't be afraid to ask questions of the guides. They are there to help answer questions you might have. Most of all, take time to enjoy the experience.

You may still be able to make a reservation for the Michigan School of Gardening tour, taking place Friday-Sunday, June 22-24, featuring several area gardens and a critique of them by Allan Armitage. Reservations are absolutely necessary; call Martha Ferguson of the Michigan State University Extension office at (248) 858-0887. Goldner Walsh Nursery is the third sponsor.

A gift of a garden tour or two might get the "man of the house" interested in gardening. It often puzzles me that men aren't more involved in garden clubs. I have found that if a man is interested in gardening, especially in flowers, he will concentrate on just one. I wonder why?

Garden art

Speaking of men, Father's Day is just around the corner. A very special statue set in the garden might be just the ticket for good old Dad.

Plan a place for your choice so that it can be viewed from several windows, or where it will be a feature in a particular part of the garden such as near the patio or the front entrance.

Campania International Inc. offers a line of exceptionally lovely pieces for the home and garden. These are way beyond cement rabbits! A wide range of garden ornaments are carefully crafted of quality cast stone, polyethylene and terra cotta in classic original designs.

Hand-applied patinas that replicate the graceful appearance of antique garden sculpture add dimension to the pieces. High-quality molded polyethylene planters that will readily "fool the eye" are amazing. As more people are using art in the garden they want quality pieces.

Campania has expanded its selection of imported Italian terra cotta planters in a wide selection of styles and sizes.

The terra cotta is produced in artisan workshops in Tuscany, Italy, the center of ornamental terra cotta production since the Renaissance. Each piece is hand-finished. The classic design, quality of detail and distinctive rose-peach color of the fired clay are world renowned.

Tiffany Florist in Birmingham, gardenviews in Northville and Goldner Walsh in Pontiac are local distributors. Each has a large selection. What a great surprise for Dad!

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone. Her fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Attract butterflies to your yard

GUEST GARDENER

JULIE LEIGEBER

Butterflies are magical. With the right plants and proper environment, you will attract lots of them. A group of potted plants on a balcony or patio works great. Butterfly gardens don't have to be located in a large area. Provide butterflies with an area that receives at least 6 hours of sun. Partly shaded areas for them to hide and cool off in also are needed. Provide rocks for them to rest on and create shallow sources of water such as a dish filled with damp sand.

When choosing an area for the butterflies, remember to keep butterflies protected from direct wind. They also like overripe fruit. Don't use any pesticides.

Plant host and nectar food sources. Host plants are where butterflies will lay eggs. Larvae plants are milkweed, hollyhock, fennel, dill, parsley, aster, dogwood, snapdragon, spicebush, lupine, butterfly weed, cherry, oak, willow and violets.

Butterflies will get their food from nectar plants. Some nectar plants include azalea, butterfly bush, lilac, coneflower, marigolds, zinnia, daisy, yarrow, black-eyed Susan, sunflower, bee balm, lantana, verbena, mints, trumpet vine, Lithonia, lavender, hibiscus, rosemary, cosmos and veronica. You can share these plants with the butterflies and have a magical garden.

Julie Leigeber grew up in Livonia and enjoys gardening. She now resides in Dearborn.

HOME WORK

The world of appliances evolves

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

Maytag has tried to purchase Amana Refrigeration for the past 40 years, and finally, Amana Refrigeration agreed recently to a purchase price of more than $300 million. The transaction will be completed this fall, and you can expect Maytag to make a big splash with the classy Amana refrigerator.

It was only eight years ago that Maytag purchased several other manufacturers with low end prices and slapped the name "Maytag" on them. The end result in the past few months has been a clean sweep of management and people coming out of retirement to again run the company. I predict Maytag will come out with an even stronger image than they've shared with consumers in the good, old years.

Consumer aid

State Attorney General Jennifer Granholm continues to go after cases of the "little guy being ripped off." A retail chain was nailed for not offering consumers a rain check for when the chain ran out of an advertised product. This is a very serious offense in the retail sales world because it sometimes leads to the old "bait and switch" routine. Today's consumer is smarter than ever, so these incidents are recognized rather quickly.

The appliance repair industry continues to fall on hard times. For the past eight years, many repair companies have gone out of business and the trend continues to grow. With the recent closing of Montgomery Ward stores, the percentage of service technicians who have changed professions is well over 30 percent. At this rate, it won't be long before the appliance service you receive will come from a certain major retailer.

Cleaner than ever

A testing laboratory has established safety guidelines for dishwashers and now manufacturers will decide how to implement these improvements. When these products become available, homeowners in the United States will have the cleanest dishes and silverware in the world. Thanks to the people behind the scenes who make this happen.

The U.S. Department of Energy has set goals for manufacturers of washing machines. Washers in the next few years will save energy consumption and water usage and will cost the consumer a lot more money than today. We must always be concerned about the earth, but the question remains, will it wash my clothes better or not?

Joe Gagnon can be heard on WJR-AM 760 every Saturday and Sunday mornings. He is a past president of the Society of Consumer Professionals. His second book, "The Words and Wisdom of The Appliance Doctor" is available in book stores. His telephone number is (313) 873-9789.

Maintenance certification course scheduled for June 22

Apartment Association of Michigan's (AAM) Property Management Council (PMC) will sponsor a professional maintenance course June 22.

The class will take place 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan (BIA) headquarters, 30375 Northwestern Highway, Suite 100, in Farmington Hills.

Registration fees, including lunch, are $85. For registration information, call (248) 862-1004 anytime.

Check your ladder for safety before you climb and work

ASK DAD

using ladders than from walking under them.

If you need to use a ladder, use it safely. Here are a few tips and friendly reminders before you venture up the ladder.

Inspect the ladder before each use. Look for damaged or loose parts, cracks or anything that just doesn't look right in the ladder's structure. If a problem is found, repair or replace the ladder. Avoid painting wooden ladders because the paint only hides potential defects.

Be certain the ladder is rated to carry your weight, which should include any tools or materials you're using.

Don't climb too high

Don't climb beyond the third step from the top on extension ladders and the second step from the top on stepladders. If you must reach to either side of the ladder, keep your belt buckle or mid-section in the area between the rails, which will keep you balanced and you won't reach too far.

Avoid using metal ladders in the vicinity of electric lines. There's almost always a chance of electric contact. Many safety agencies recommend to avoid metal ladders altogether.

Set up the ladder on a firm, level surface. When using a stepladder, make sure the ladder is fully open with the spreader bars locked. Extension ladders should be placed so the feet are one quarter of the working length away from where the ladder contacts the building. A simple way to do this is put your toes on the ladders' feet. (Your fingers should just touch the rung closest to arm level.)

In high traffic areas, barricade around the ladder. Keep the ground around the base of the ladder clear. If there is a chance of the ladder moving, tie it. Avoid ladder work on windy, stormy or rainy days.

Always face the ladder when climbing or descending and maintain three-point contact with two feet/one hand or one foot/two hands on the ladder. (Actually four-point contact is safer, but you won't move very fast.) Carry tools in a pouch, or raise them with a line.

Don't leave tools on the steps or rungs. These can easily drop on someone if the ladder is moved.

Avoid wearing loose clothing.

Never allow another person to use the same ladder you are using.

Never, ever "walk" a ladder. Get off a ladder to move it. What may have been funny in the movie "Animal House" wasn't on a job site where I watched a guy attempt this.

And probably the one tip that says it all is use common sense.

Volunteering

For the past several days my wife and I have been working on what I would consider the most rewarding construction project I've ever been involved with. We started June 2 to build a home with other volunteers in the Habitat for Humanity of Western Wayne County's Plymouth Blitz Build and we plan to turn over the keys to the owners on June 17.

This project is near completion, but there are still others continuing. If you can spare some time, please contact Habitat of Western Wayne at 734-459-7744. It's a great experience.

Harry Jachym, a licensed builder, lives in Plymouth and teaches building trades to high school students.

INTERIOR DESIGN

Luxury 'home, garden' on display

This year's Home & Garden Show at the Somerset Collection in Troy has a different look.

The Grand Court of Somerset North, Big Beaver Road and Coolidge, is the site of a luxury, two-story home facade and lavish garden. They will be on display through June 24.

The exhibit is connected to a year-long, $2 million design and charity fund-raising campaign at two model homes in The Oaklands, the master planned residential development in Oakland Township by the Moceri Companies.

Visitors looking through the windows of the facade will see photographic portraits of representative rooms and furnishings at The Oaklands models. A study and a kitchen are on view.

The model homes were designed by Dominick Tringali Associates Architects and Planners. They feature furniture and accessories from Somerset Collection retailers.

The study at the Somerset display is dressed in deep wood shelves and molding, with fluted columns between the sections of shelves. Among the lush furnishings are a large leather ottoman, and plump chairs and sofa. A potted fern, and a table lamp with a camel figure and palm tree shape, add subtly adventurous accents.

the walls of the kitchen. Creamy cabinets are nestled in a corner. The island is topped in dark granite.

A 5,000-square foot garden adjoins the display home. The garden was designed by Gerald Salerno Ltd. of Rochester Hills and Jim Meyers' Historical Courtyards and Gardens of Southfield and Petoskey. It was patterned after Isola Bella, a 17th century garden on Lake Maggiore in Italy. The statuary is by Historical Courtyards.

Italian gardens draw on texture and structure for their effect, rather than rely on color from flowers for their impact, Salerno said.

The garden at Somerset features a large terrace area with terra cotta urns, arranged by Cranbrook garden volunteers.

Meyers designed the parterre, which contains crushed gravel in a pattern of massed, contrasting plantings. Four quadrangles include cast limestone statues representing earth, fire, water and air. A multi-tier fountain surrounded by lush plantings is in the center. An elegant pavilion designed by Tringali is in the far end.

The Michigan Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Center and Gilda's Club Metro Detroit will receive proceeds from an auction of the furnishings and accessories donated from the Somerset merchants. The auction is planned for next May.

Show house: Prominently positioned in the Somerset Collection's North Grand Court, this two-story home facade is part of Somerset's Home & Garden Show.

Keep pets comfortable

Pet owners should remember to keep their animals comfortable and safe during the hot days ahead.

Rather than place animals at risk during periods of extreme heat, there are preventative measures owners can take to insure their pet's safety.

Never leave a pet alone inside a vehicle, even with the windows down. On an 85-degree day, the temperature inside a parked car can reach 120 degrees within a matter of minutes leaving your pet susceptible to heat stroke, and possibly even death.

Keep your pets as comfortable as possible. During these hot days, an animal is much more likely to enjoy a cool spot on the kitchen tile or basement floor, rather than sun-soaked cement of a driveway.

Bring pets inside if at all possible. If animals must be left outdoors for any length of time, adequate shade and drinking water is essential.

Elementary years gone, not forgotten

A colleague at the Observer once told me that when you have children in school the new year begins in late August and ends in June.

So for our family and many others in the Plymouth-Canton school district, the year "ends" this week when my son, Ian, leaves Bird Elementary School. It's been a wonderful experience and I couldn't let this milestone go by without acknowledging the experiences my child and other children and parents have as they leave a school that has been "home" for several years.

A caring and hardworking group of teachers, supported by principals committed to the education of all children, have made the last five years some of the most exciting, formative and enjoyable school years for our son and family.

Every year brought a new teacher, new challenges and new projects. Each year culminated in Curriculum Night, a celebration of everyone's accomplishments.

Shopping around

Five years ago, I was concerned about leaving what had been a nurturing and supportive atmosphere of The Leaning Tree in Livonia. My husband and I shopped around for schools and looked at several options — Montessori, private or parochial school. We had many fine choices. We opted for our local public school — Bird Elementary.

I had been an education reporter in my early years at the Observer and I carefully examined test scores, facilities, resources, staff and curriculum. Bird also came highly recommended from teachers, parents and administrators in other school districts.

When the first day of school arrived I was overcome by that same wave of emotion that sweeps over every parent in the process of letting go. When I walked Ian to school on the first day of kindergarten back in late August 1995, we talked about school and learning. I kissed and hugged him as he walked into school urging him to enjoy his new adventure. I walked home with tears in my eyes knowing that "my baby" was starting a new chapter in his life. He was growing up. I was apprehensive, sentimental and proud all at the same time. It was, after all, a rite of passage in his life and mine.

A good start

Ian's kindergarten teacher, Alice Chrenko, was everything a parent could want in a first teacher — enthusiastic, loving but firm and very comfortable in a room full of young children.

Alice left Bird and now teaches at Bentley. I hope she still uses the volcano science project in her classroom. I suspect it's a staple for kindergarten teachers.

Bird's Principal in 1995 was Claudia Kulnis. Our family enjoyed her weekly newsletters packed full of school news and in-depth information on trends in education. Claudia set high goals for students, teachers and parents.

Then came first grade and it was down to the business of learning all day with Jo Sniderman, an experienced, caring teacher with a calm voice and a firm, but fair, guiding hand. Her "Save the Rain Forest" campaign continues today at Bird and will be forever hers in our memory.

First grade also brought a new principal, Jane VanSteenis, a hands-on principal whose quick smile, boundless energy and enthusiasm made her a favorite of students and parents. I was amazed and impressed at how soon after the start of school she came to know the names of all Bird students and parents.

On to second grade and an exciting year with Linda Bright and the Bright family. A warm and loving teacher, she was and continues to be one of Ian's favorites. Mrs. Bright will forever be remembered with fondness in the Barnaby-Rosiek household. Her name characterized her personality. She was quick with praise and always had a smile on her face.

Our family enjoyed those stories of ## Raising the bar

Agapé Christian Academy strives for excellence

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER

Jude Barlage believes that God has a plan for everyone — and it's their job at Agapé Christian Academy to follow it. "Each child is unique unto themselves and our teachers have a heart for the success of each student," said Barlage, the elementary principal of Agapé in Canton. "We are in partnership with the parents, local churches and the school. All three have a job to do and that has a lot to do with our success."

A non-denominational Christian school, Agapé Christian Academy is a ministry of Agapé Family Worship Center in Canton and the vision of founding pastor J. Earl Moore and his wife Bobbi. Together, with their son Pastor Mark Moore, the family established the Agapé ministry in 1978 and the school in 1982.

Today, Pastor Mark Moore is the full-time pastor of Agapé Worship Center and chief administrative officer of the academy. His parents continue to play an active role in both, and travel as public speakers on family and marriage. Working with Moore are Mark and Diane Rickles — directors of the children's ministry and Buddy and Shelby Shuh coordinators of the teen (youth) ministry.

"I'm so sold on Christian education," said Moore from his school office. "It's the best thing around. I have always wanted to be involved with Christian education and I've been lucky enough to see the fruit of our labors."

Strong foundation

Moore is proud to boast little or no turnover with his teaching staff who are required to have at least a bachelor of arts degree and state teacher certification. "We hire teachers because the building is expanding, not because of turnover. I tell the staff this is not only a job but a special calling," said Moore. "You can find a job anywhere but at the end of the day you know you've accomplished something here."

Secondary education principal Clark Sexton recently observed his sixth year at the academy and his second as an administrator. He and Barlage oversee the daily activities of the school.

A Livonia native and a graduate of Grace Emmanuel in Detroit, Sexton said he never had a desire to teach in the public school setting.

"I wanted to make a difference in kids' lives and as cliché as that sounds, I really meant it," said Sexton who continues to teach at the academy and occasionally leads in devotion during chapel service. "I hope when students leave here to go onto college they continue to walk in the precepts and values they've learned here."

The 10th graduating class of Agapé Christian Academy attended commencement services earlier this month with a class of 12 students. Barlage expects the number to rise into the 20s in the coming years. With an enrollment of 360, the elementary principal, who originally served as the children's minister for 11 years, said the academy on Geddes Road has seen steady growth in the last 10 years.

Barlage said the academy was started to start a Christian academy. "A place that served to nurture the academic and spiritual merits of each child as well as serving as an extension of their home."

Humble beginnings

Sixty-six people gathered in February 1978 for the first meeting of the Agapé Family Worship Center at the Novi Community Building. Church offices and worship services were moved to Plymouth in the fall of 1978. With a growing ministry and a lack of space, the church moved to a former car dealership building on Main Street in Plymouth that was remodeled in just five weeks.

While they weren't in the financial position to build on 20.5 acres they owned in Plymouth Township, they knew something would have to change. With two Sunday services, an expanding congregation, and the desire to open the academy they bought the building adjacent to the car dealership and remodeled it to include a children's ministry room, kitchen facilities, bathrooms and classrooms.

In September of 1982 approximately 25 students in grades kindergarten (4 and 5 year olds were divided into different classes) and first grade started. By February of 1987 Agapé purchased Plymouth Church of the Nazarene on Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth and held their first services that July.

In less than 10 years the church purchased 10 acres on Geddes Road in Canton and two existing buildings on the property were renovated to house the junior and senior high.

Barlage said ground was broken in 1997 on Phase II that added an additional 21,000 square feet of space to house the church and academy (K4/K5 through 12 grade). Phase III will bring the total square footage of the facility to 60,000 and include a sanctuary, gymnasium and administrative offices. Currently the gym serves as the sanctuary and the school cafeteria.

"It is a privilege for us to be established in this community," said Barlage. "Canton is an exceptional community with exceptional people."

Teaching the Abeka curriculum, an accelerated phonics-based program with a strong foundation of enrichments and manipulatives, Barlage said students consistently keep pace with state standards and are on the cutting edge of technology. Agapé also offers an after care enrichment program starting at 7 a.m. and concluding at 6 p.m.

Elementary age-children have a bible class each day and attend daily chapel services.

Twelve-year-old Kristen Kitti, has been an ACA student since kindergarten. "It's safe here," said Kitti of Plymouth. "We learn a lot and have a good biblical curriculum ... and it's fun."

High school students have daily bible class and meet for chapel service, which is often student-lead, once a week. Course offerings and extra curricular activities include foreign language, music, art, physical education and athletics (basketball, baseball, fast-pitch softball, volleyball and soccer) and a mime troupe.

Lauren Paul of Canton, says she "enjoys the size" of ACA. "It's small and I've been able to develop a more personal relationship with my teachers," said the 16-year-old junior.

The academy is a member of and in candidate-status with International Christian Accrediting Association and are also a member of the Association of Christian School International. Once the dual accreditation from ICAA and ACSI is achieved, an accomplishment that will set them apart from other Christian academies in the area, they look forward to completing accreditation with North Central Accreditation in July of 2002.

"Accreditation ensures that policies and procedures are in place that reflect sound business and educational procedures with a Christian distinctive," said Barlage.

the Bright family. We followed honor student Matt Bright's high school career, the wise sayings of Mr. Bright and the adventures of the award-winning PCEP Marching Band. Matt, who will be a senior this fall at the University of Michigan, is a product of the Plymouth-Canton School District. His mom, a proud teacher of 24 years in the district, is quick to point that out.

Third and fourth grade years were filled with projects and and challenges them to be their best.

Bug collecting in Mrs. Luedy's class along with book talks were challenging but fun in our family. Connie Luedy has a knack for making all of her students feel very special.

Saying good-bye

We end the year and our Bird experience with Stacey Francis, an intelligent, articulate young woman whose keen interest in technology and teamwork have made a lasting impact on her and her family.

Educators today are under a microscope and their actions are scrutinized on a daily basis. They often are expected to solve all of society's problems with little help or support.

Our family's experience has been that of a hardworking staff of educators who are dedicated to making every child to be successful.

As Bird gets ready to celebrate its 50th anniversary this fall, our family is pleased to have a soon-to-be Bird alum in our household. For the families that enter Bird or any other school next year, or begin a new life at another school, there's so much to remember and so much to look forward to.

And now it's on to the sixth grade and a "new year" for Ian and our family at West Middle School. There's a new adventure around the corner.

But first — let's enjoy the summer!

OBSERVER SPORTS SCENE

Cougars finish 1st

This tie meant something. The Canton Cougars battled the Birmingham Blazers to a 1-1 draw last Sunday, which earned them a first-place finish in the Boys U-13 Premier-2 Division for the spring season. The Cougars had a 6-2-2 record.

In their match against the Blazers, the Cougars dominated and led until the very end, when Birmingham converted a penalty kick as time expired. Their first-place finish means the Cougars will move up to the U-14 Boys Premier-1 Division in the fall, the top-level Premier Division of the Michigan State Premier Soccer League.

Cougars team members are Victor Ammons, Sean Cavanaugh, Andrew Ciantar, Alex Duca, Blake Foster, Joe Halewicz, Chris Lidster, Trey Love, Jon Pomorski, Curtis Rose, D.J. Russell, Justin Sheridan, Nick Siekirk, Jeff Skeans and Brad Zonca. Coach and trainer is Sean Bowers and the team manager is Jeff Lidster.

All-MIAC selections

For the fourth-straight season, Plymouth Christian Academy has the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference's most valuable player in baseball. And chances are, they will again.

That's because the player so honored this season is sophomore Clay Welton. Welton, a pitcher/shortstop, had a .537 overall batting average for the Eagles, with eight doubles and 28 runs batted in. In MIAC play, he hit .462. He had a fielding average of .972.

On the mound, Welton was 6-3 overall with two saves and a 2.12 earned run average in a team-high 66 innings pitched. He allowed 45 hits and 21 walks, striking out 92.

Also selected to the all-MIAC team were PCA's senior third baseman Jim Morrison and junior catcher Brian Carnevale.

Morrison, the Eagles' lead-off hitter, batted .431 and had a .530 on-base percentage overall, scoring 21 runs and stealing 18 bases. In conference play, Morrison's batting average was .619, his on-base percentage .696.

Carnevale batted .469 and in conference play he threw out nine of 18 baserunners. Carnevale finished the season with seven doubles, two triples and 27 RBI.

Crusaders shine

The Madonna Junior Crusaders under-12 volleyball team completed a top-notch season by finishing third overall in the A-team 12-and-under Open Division at the state tournament June 2 in Grand Rapids. They followed that with a first in the 13-and-under Select Division at the upper division state tournament last weekend.

In the Open Division competition June 2, the Junior Crusaders were unbeaten in pool play (4-0) but lost to Rogers City in the playoff round.

In four tournaments prior to the states, the Junior Crusaders finished first three times and second once.

Team members are Mikayla Armbruster, Diana Bajdo and Lauren Kurtz of Canton; Lauren Boehmer, Michelle Kwiczen and Jordan Pilut of Livonia; Justine Bennett and Brooke Burmeister of White Lake; Charly Norton of Farmington; Laura Schroeter of Plymouth; and Michelle Szymanski of Redford. The team is coached by Laura Brauer.

Mudcats go to 6-1

The Plymouth-Canton Mudcats, a 14-year-old travel baseball team, improved to 6-1 with a 12-1 victory over the Howell White Sox. Brian Whiting earned the pitching victory with three hitless innings; he struck out six.

Whiting also went 2-for-3 at the plate with a double, a triple and four runs batted in. Jake Powers added two hits and three RBI.

Volleyball camps

Madonna University will host a series of summer volleyball camps including: 8:30 a.m.-noon (elite) and 1-4:30 p.m. (general players) Thursday through Sunday, July 5-8; 8:30 a.m.-noon (setters) and 1-4 p.m. (youth) Sunday through Thursday, July 9-12; 8:30 a.m.-noon (hitters session I) and 1-4:30 p.m. (defensive specialist), Sunday through Wednesday, July 15-18.

Canton returning to finals!

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjriskak@oe.homecomm.net

The decisive moment.
There's less than six minutes left in the opening half of Wednesday's Division I state semifinal in girls soccer, and Plymouth Canton is getting knocked around by a determined — and talented — Brighton squad. Anne Morrell, the Chiefs' all-state forward, goes after the ball but instead trips a Brighton player, knocking her flat.

The official calls the foul and gives Morrell a yellow card, sending her to the bench for the mandatory 10 minutes.

"I think if they would have scored on us," said Canton coach Don Smith afterwards. "That was a key. Brighton played us tough. They came out and knocked us on our heels."

With Morrell out and Canton already struggling, this was the Bulldogs' chance to take complete command. But they fail to do so. Oh, they control play in the first half — as Smith added, "They played us really well in the first half. But I don't remember them getting any good scoring opportunities."

Brighton's scoring chances in the second half were more frequent, but nothing came of them, either. The Chiefs, on the other hand, withstood Morrell's 10-minute absence and, when she returned, she was focused.

Her two second-half goals gave Canton the boost it needed, carrying the Chiefs to a 3-0 victory in a match played in 90-degree heat at Okemos HS.

For the second-straight year, Canton advances to the state finals, and once again the opponent will be a Troy school — this time Troy HS, which defeated Saginaw Heritage 1-0 in Wednesday's other semifinal.

Last year, Canton was beaten by Troy Athens 4-1 in the final. The Chiefs, now 18-3-1, will host Saturday's championship match, scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m. At 11 a.m., Harbor Springs (21-1-1) will go against Clawson (20-0-3) in the Division IV final.

A battle all the way: More than a couple of players got knocked around in Canton's win over Brighton, something the Chiefs' Stephanie Johnson (24 at right) and the Bulldogs' Rachel Bondy (19) discovered in a battle for a header. In the end, however, the difference was Anne Morrell scoring two goals (her second one in photo above).

Troy takes an 18-4-2 record into Saturday's match, including a 3-2 victory over Canton May 4 at Troy. Both Morrell and Erica Aherns got red cards in that match.

"I think that 10 minutes helped me," Morrell said of her break during the win over Brighton. "And it helped the team. I told my teammates at halftime, 'This is do-or-die.'"

If a highlight film of this game was broadcast, it would feature Morrell's two incredible scoring runs that stretched more than half the field. And they were fabulous.

But this victory required an entire team effort. Because while the offense struggled in the opening half and the midfield was unable to do much against their Bulldog counterparts, the defense — from keeper Briana Wolcott to defenders Janine Guastella, Lindsey Lasher and Arielle Bryant — stood its ground.

"This game's real funny," said Brighton coach Deepak Shivraman. "You do all the right things, all the give-and-goes, and the end result isn't what you want."

"We were ready. We were pumped up for it. We thought we didn't get much

Late rally beats Salem

BY ED WRIGHT
STAFF WRITER

Plymouth Salem was so close to earning a spot in the Class A regional final softball game Saturday afternoon the Rocks could taste it.

However, a sweet-opening six innings were wiped out by a sour seventh when Temperance Bedford scored four runs to nip Salem, 6-5, in the Region 8 semi-final game played at Taylor Kennedy High School.

Riding the solid pitching of Kristen Miller (zero walks in six innings), the torrid hitting of Dawn Allen (4-for-4) and the vacuum-like fielding of Katie Kelly (several superb defensive plays), the Rocks took a comfortable 5-2 lead into the final frame. But the Mules proved to be too stubborn, drilling five of their nine hits during the game-deciding inning.

The season-ending loss dropped Salem's final record to 21-15, but it failed to diminish coach Bonnie Southerland's glowing opinion of her competitive team.

"I am very proud of this team," Southerland said. "We played with a lot of heart all year and we won the first district championship for Salem in 19 years, so there's a lot to feel good about. We also won two tournaments and beat Canton under the lights, so it was a successful season all around.

"We were real close to beating Temperance Bedford, but their bats came alive in the sixth inning and they put together four hits in a row to beat us."

At one point in the seventh, Southerland thought Salem had actually won the game. With one out, runners on second and third, and the Rocks leading 5-4, the Mules' Anne Vandercook hit a shot that was speared by Kelly, who then fired the ball quickly to third in an attempt to double off the runner and end the game.

Unfortunately for Salem, the umpire ruled the runner beat the ball to the base.

The next batter then rocked a two-out double, scoring the game-tying and game-winning runs.

Eagles can't match Crusaders' defense

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjriskak@oe.homecomm.net

Sometimes the breaks just don't go your way.

On Saturday at the Division IV State Baseball Regional hosted by Allen Park Inter-City Baptist, Plymouth Christian Academy came within a foot or so of reaching the final.

But Taylor Light and Life Christian used that foot to great advantage, making a half-dozen catches on defense that, given another inch or two, would have fallen in for PCA.

The result was a 4-1 victory for the Crusaders in the regional semifinal, putting them into the final opposite Southfield Christian, a 10-0 winner over Dearborn St. Alphonsus.

In the championship game, Light and Life prevailed 2-1 over Southfield Christian in eight innings.

"Their fielders made the plays and ours just couldn't quite get to theirs," said PCA coach Don Shumaker. "But I have to give them a lot of credit. They beat the top two pitchers in our league (the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference) in the same day."

"I have nothing bad to say about them."

For PCA, which finished its season at

BASEBALL

15-7, the game figured to be an uphill struggle. Light and Life had won 23 of its previous 24 games, one of those by a 9-3 count against the Eagles, a game that featured the only home runs hit in a PCA game at Griffin Park this season by either team.

The Crusaders jumped out to an early lead and never surrendered it, bunching all four of their runs in the first three innings off PCA starter Clay Welton. Welton went the distance for the Eagles, allowing four earned runs on six hits and four walks, striking out seven.

The Eagles had chances to cut into that 4-0 deficit — indeed, they had baserunners in the third-through-seventh innings.

But they could never quite put it together. Example: In the third, Mark Erickson gets a lead-off single, but gets picked off base.

In the fourth, Clay Welton is walked with two out and reaches second on a wild pitch, but is stranded there.

In the fifth, PCA opens the inning with a walk to Xander Younce and a single by Aaron Boone. A fielder's

Schedules: What's so difficult?

C.J.
RISAK

So it's Friday night and I'm standin' on the sidelines of the Canton-vs.-Northville soccer match, talking to Canton athletic director Sue Heinzman.

I ask her if, by chance, she had heard anything regarding a change in Salem's regional softball game, scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday.

Salem's coach, Bonnie Southerland, wanted to move the starting time back because a few of her players had to take their ACT tests that morning. Heinzman thought a change would be a longshot; knowing the AD at Taylor Kennedy, the regional host, she felt such a switch would be nearly impossible.

This does not convince me — you'll understand why in a moment or two. Anyway, at half-time of the soccer game, I ask Brian Wolcott, the overall coordinator for all Plymouth-Canton school sports, the same question. I mean, geez, this guy should know, right? His office handles the scheduling.

"I'm not sure," he admits, adding he had heard it might be changed. He assured me he would make a call and that the information would reach me at my office later that night.

It didn't. The next day the Observer sports reporter assigned to cover the game, Ed Wright, shows up at the assigned time. He's informed the game won't start for another two hours.

What's going on?

A screw up, right? Miscommunication? Hey, stuff just happens sometimes.

I can accept that, when the mistakes are rare and isolated. Heck, spring sports are conducive to messed-up schedules, with the weather wreaking havoc on when and where.

Observerland can boast of having two state champions in boys track and field — Lutheran High Westland and Farmington Harrison.

In recognition of their achievements and for jobs well done, Lutheran High's Mike Unger and Harrison's John

Mike Unger
Luth. Westland

Reed have been chosen Observerland Coaches of the Year.

"I think we were able to do the best possible things we could do with the kids we had, and we're really proud of that," Reed said.

"We didn't have a full dual-meet team, which is a different kind of team. But, with the athletes we had, we got the most out of their potential.

John Reed
Harrison

"The kids had tremendous attitudes the whole season. We had wonderful kids to work with, and the most important part of coaching is developing kids with great attitudes."

The Hawks, who were third in the Western Lakes Activities Association meet, also won a Division II regional title before winning the first track-and-field state title by a Farmington school.

"We met with all our leadership kids back in January," Reed said. "We never said specifically we thought we could win a state meet, but the goal for our track program was to move it to a higher level."

"We didn't know what that level was, but our goal was to do something that was going to move us to a new performance level. So we're pretty proud of that accomplishment."

Seven of the nine Harrison athletes who participated in the state meet will return for the 2002 season.

"We're going to have a nice team next year," Reed said. "Our first goal is to be an improved dual-meet team. I think we have a good track team, but it's called track and field."

"Our field-event kids are good. But we need to move to a new level in the field to compete with Canton and Churchill, because those teams are very good in the field events and setting the standard."

Unger is no stranger to success on the track.

Although he and assistant Dave Ruth guided the Warriors to their first state title in school history, Unger also led Detroit Lutheran West to state Class C crowns in 1981, '82 and '87.

"The key to this year's success was that we had a very cohesive team," said Unger, whose Warriors won both the Metro Conference and regional crowns. "The team that went to the state meet were all pulling for each other the whole time."

"(Sprinter Mike) Clark's contention was, 'I'm going to run as fast I have to and not worry about the place. Everybody did the best they could so the team could succeed.'"

"Sometimes you do well in one event and the meet's over, but these guys wanted points in every event they competed in. I'm real proud of them."

Unger also praised his assistant Ruth, who was named the 2000 Michigan Interscholastic Track Coaches Association Assistant Coach of the Year.

"We would not have the success we would have had this year without Dave Ruth."

Introducing this year's All-Observer squad:

ALL-AREA FIRST TEAM

Mark Snyder, shot put, Salem: A senior, Snyder proved to be one of the highlights in an otherwise down season for Plymouth Salem boys track.

Consistency was one of his strongest attributes. He ranked among the Observer's best weight men throughout the season and proved he was equal to the challenge of the big meet by finishing first in both the discus (145-feet, 2-inches) and shot put (53-7) at the state regional meet.

Snyder also won the shot at the WLAA Championships (53-8 1/4) and was third in the discus (134-0). His season's best marks: in the shot, 54-4 1/2 (best in Observerland); in the discus, 145-2 (second in Observerland).

land: The senior excelled both as a thrower and a sprinter on the Warriors' relay teams.

The 6-foot-7, 225-pound Meckes broke the Metro Conference record in the discus with a throw of 165-4. He was also regional and MITCA meet champion in that event and runner-up in Division IV.

Meckes was state champion in the shot put with an area best throw of 54-9. He was also regional champion in that event.

Meckes was also a member of Lutheran Westland's third-place 400- and 800-meter state meet relay squads.

"Nate was very team oriented," Lutheran Westland coach Mike Unger said. "He would do what was needed to help the team. He also ran on the 400 and 800 relays."

"I have never had a weight man with his throwing ability possess that kind of foot speed."

Meckes plans to play basketball and compete in track and field at Calvin College.

Eric Scott, long jump, Churchill: that area's top long jumper repeated this year with school-record leap of 21-3 1/4.

Scott also posted bests of 10.9 in the 100 dash, 22.9 in the 200 and 51.7 in the 400. He also ran legs on the 400, 800 and 1,600 relay teams.

This year, Scott captured the WLAA title and was Livonia City champion. He qualified for the state meet this year in both the 100 and long jump (after being regional runner-up).

He was the 2000 WLAA champion.

"Eric was an excellent athlete who was very versatile," Churchill coach Rick Austin said. "He focused on the short sprints this season to help his team. He competed on three division championship teams."

"Eric is a solid kid who comes from a great family."

Scott will play soccer and compete in track next year for the University of Detroit Mercy.

Jordan Chapman, high jump, Canton: We haven't heard the last of Jordan Chapman.

A 4.0 student who is headed to Yale in the fall, Chapman has excelled in the high jump, pole vault, long jump and 300-meter hurdles for the past two years. He repeated as WLAA champ in the high jump and pole vault this season, and was the regional winner in both events.

At state meet, Chapman placed second in the pole vault and fourth in the high jump, earning all-state honors in the former. He was also named academic all-state for the third-straight year. His 14-foot, 3-inch effort in the pole vault is a school record.

Jordan leaves Canton High School as one of the finest athletes in the history of the school and the WLAA Conference," said his coach, Bob Richardson. "All of his successes were the result of many hours of preparation, dedication and hard work."

Kevin Peterman, pole vault, Churchill: The senior cleared 14-5 this season to lead the area. He was Observerland Relays and Livonia City meet champion.

He was the 2000 WLAA champion.

as well as runner-up in the Western Lakes.

Peterson was also undefeated in dual meet competition and excelled in the hurdles with season bests of 15.8 (in the 110 highs) and 42.5 (in the 300 intermediates).

"Kevin is one of the most coachable athletes I've ever had," Austin said. "He is a tremendous athlete and a tough competitor. He is a technician in two highly technical events, the hurdles and pole vault."

Peterman plans to vault next year at the University of Michigan.

Shannon Simon, pole vault, Garden City: Simon went out on a high note this season. The senior was eighth in the state, setting a school-record 14.4 in the Division 1 finals. He was also second in the regional and went through the Mega Blue season undefeated.

"Shannon really work hard to improve this year," said Garden City coach Rob Phillips. "He improved by 16 inches from last year. He's got good runway speed and good kinesthetic sense when he gets inverted."

Tom Grant, 110 hurdles, Redford CC: Grant burst onto the scene in strong fashion this year, winning the Catholic League A-B meet, the Observerland Relays, not losing a dual meet all year and qualifying for the state meet. His best time throughout the year was 14.9. Grant, a junior, was also the CHSL high jump and long jump champion.

"Early on, he concentrated on minimizing his mistakes in the 110 hurdles and he improved from week to week as the season progressed," said CC coach Tony Magni. "By the time of the state meet, he was ready and he ran his best time."

"There were many times his other events held him back in the hurdles, but it never deterred him from working harder and advance throughout the season."

Mike Leach, 300 hurdles, N. Farmington: Leach was the WLAA champion in the 300 hurdles and shared the claim to having the area's best time at 40.4 seconds. He was fourth in the regional with a 40.7 time and just missed qualifying for the state meet.

He was a member of the shuttle hurdle relay team that set a school record this year, and he set a single-season school record himself with 161 3/4 individual points.

Leach, who also stars on the North soccer and basketball teams, was second in the WLAA in the 110 high hurdles and was third in the high jump.

"Mike is a tremendous athlete and competitor," North coach Jeff Simpson said. "He will do anything for the team. He's hard-working, dedicated and a great leader."

Darryl Anglin, 100 dash, Bishop Borgess: The junior had another powerful season, figuring in three state crowns — winning the 100 dash outright in a new Division 4 state record of 10.9

and running in the 400 and 800 relays. Anglin also won the 100 dash in the C-D Division of the Catholic League and finished second in the regional and state meet in the 200 dash.

"Darryl is a power runner," said Borgess coach Rodney Geter. "Once he got his block work down, his times improved. He's a very motivated kid and I'm looking for tremendous things in his senior year."

Tim Shaw, 200 dash, Clarenceville: The junior, known more for his football prowess, left quite a mark as a sprinter this spring winning the Division III state 100-meter dash in 11.03.

Shaw was just edged by Andrew Montague in the state finals in the 200, going 22.57.

The Metro Conference champion and Almont regional champion in both events, Shaw posted an area best of 21.99 in the 200 and second-best with a 10.81 in the 100.

He was also Observerland runner-up in the 100 to Anglin.

"Tim improved steadily from beginning to the end," Clarenceville coach Greg Hudkins. "It culminated with him winning the 100 at the state meet.

"He has natural ability, but he's also worked so hard. Last year he ran an 11.8 or 11.9 and has knocked off almost a second. He proved you can get faster with hard work."

Terrill Mayberry, 400 dash, Harrison: Mayberry finished second in the Division II state meet and set a school record in the process with his time of 49.4 seconds.

He is the Farmington city-meet, WLAA and regional champion in the 400, and he was a key member of the Harrison sprint relay teams.

"Terrill is a wonderful young man," Reed said. "He works very hard and has a tremendous focus on his performance. He's a joy to coach and to watch run."

Ryan Gail, 800 run, Churchill: The junior recorded the ninth-best time at the Division I state meet.

He set a school record in winning the WLAA title with a time of 1:55.9. He also was Livonia City champion and regional runner-up.

Gail also ran the 1,600 (4:36.0) and was on both the 1,600 and 3,200 relays teams.

"Ryan is a tremendously talented athlete," Austin said. "He has an awesome work ethic — we have to scale back his off-season regimen."

"He also has a great desire in the last 300 meters of the race and does not recognize failure or pain. I love his attitude and desire to win."

Gail is an honors student in the MSC program carrying a 4.3 GPA.

Dave Novara, 800 run, Stevenson: The junior sprinter ran the 400 in dual meets and ran the 800 in weekend events, placing seventh in the Division I state meet with a time of 1:57.12 after winning the Dearborn regional title with a clocking of 1:57.81.

At the Western Lakes meet, Novara was runner-up to Gail with a time of 1:57.6.

Novara anchored Stevenson's 1,600 relay quartet at the state meet (3:27.2) and ran a couple of sub-49 second splits.

"Dave's a real hard worker and follows the race plan and race strategy to the letter," Stevenson coach John Gores said. "He has a good sense of racing as far as competing once he's out there. He's able to take advantage of opportunities and stay out of traffic, always aware where he is on the track."

"He's a pretty sharp kid who is willing to put in the work during practices. He gives 100 percent and pushes the other kids to help them achieve their goals as well as his own individual goals."

Ryan Lowry, 1,600 run, Redford CC: For the last two years, Lowry has run in the shadow of his teammate Matt Daly.

"Most runners would be frustrated by that and likely become complacent," said Magni, "but he fed off the competition of his teammates and opponents to become one of the top distance runners in the area."

Lowry placed seventh in the 1,600 run at the Division I finals in 4:21.0 and won the regional in 4:23.1. He was second in the Catholic League, won the Operation Friendship meet, ran 9:34.1 in the 3,200 at the state finals and helped set an Observerland Relay record in the 6,400 relay.

"Ryan is the next leader of the CC distance group," said Magni, "a challenge he anxiously awaits."

Matt Daly, 3,200 run, Redford CC: One of the top three distance runners in the state, Daly — who's headed for North Carolina in the fall — proved he's one of the best in the Midwest as he won the Midwest Meet of Champions in Dayton, Ohio, on Saturday in 9:17.56.

Daly placed third in the state in the 3,200 run at the Division I meet in 9:17.7, won the regional for the second-straight year — the same number of times he was the Catholic League champ in the 1,600 and 3,200 runs and the 3,200 run at the Observerland Relays.

"His best race was at the state meet," said Magni, "but he's a leader on the track and in the classroom. He's academically sound and was a National Merit semi-finalist. His dedication extends beyond daily practice sessions. His confidence is built on good judgment and mental preparation."

RELAY TEAMS

400 relay, Farmington Harrison: The team of Agim Shabaj, Chris Roberson, Charles Pickett and Marcus Woods won the Division II state title and set a meet record with its winning time of 42.66 seconds. The Hawks are city, league and regional champions, too.

"They're the fastest 400-meter relay team ever at Harrison," Reed said. "They're awesome to watch and a joy to coach. They're top quality young men."

800 relay, Bishop Borgess: The team of Anglin, DeJuan Kea, Jose Kincannon and Jason Smith led the Spartans to their second-straight state title in the event — and set a new state record this year by finishing in 1:29.69. They ran even faster in taking the regional crown, finishing in 1:29.3, and also won the Catholic League C-D title.

"These young men stayed on each other to perform to the best of their abilities," said Geter. "Add that with pure athleticism and we have a strong relay team. Each student brought a different talent to the relay: Jose a good pop-off, Jason, a strong second leg, DeJuan, a determination to build or maintain and Darryl, power and a strong finish."

1,600 relay, Farmington Harrison: The team of Fermon Tate, Brian Coats, Mayberry and Shabaj won the Division II state championship while running the best time in Observerland at 3:23.6. The Hawks also won city, league and regional titles.

"It's the finest 1,600-meter relay team ever at Harrison; they were undefeated the entire season," Reed said. "They're tremendous youngmen who know how to pull together in big meets."

3,200 relay, Livonia Churchill: Phil Johnson is the only graduating senior among this school's record quartet, which also includes juniors Ryan Gail, Will Chapman and Jean Harris.

Churchill finished seventh at the Division I state meet with a time of 7:58.72 after winning the Dearborn regional with a time of 8:02.52. They were also WLAA champions and undefeated in dual meet competition.

The four also made Academic All-State.

"They run as smart on the track as they work in the classroom," Austin said. "They have an average GPA of 4.0. They are excellent kids from tremendously supportive families. They get after it on the track."

Salem D1

Jenn Allen, Jenn Warnick and Miller go out with a district title and a good showing in the regional. Southerland said. "They had great careers here."

Dawn Allen was instrumental in helping build Salem's early lead, stroking four hits, including two doubles. She also knocked in two crucial runs early in the game.

"That was probably the best offensive game I can remember Dawn having here at Salem, and it was even more impressive because it was such a big game," Southerland said.

Junior Amy Szawara also sparked at the plate, ripping three hits while knocking in two runs. Sophomore Maggie Tudor (2-for-4) was the only other Rock with multiple hits.

Salem, which outlit the Mules 10-9, jumped on Temperance Bedford starting pitcher Vandercook early, scoring two runs in the top of the first.

Salem led 3-2 when it pushed across single runs in the fifth and sixth innings. Miller, who finished with a 16-7 record, was brilliant heading into the seventh, having allowed just four hits and two runs to an offensive line-up that had been explosive throughout the season.

But the Mules needed only two of their final three outs to pull off a dramatic final-inning rally.

Vandercook was the winning pitcher for Temperance Bedford, which eventually lost in the regional final to Lincoln Park, 6-3.

The sixth features similar frustration for PCA. James Morrison opens the inning with a single; Brian Carnevale follows with a blooper to left that Crusaders' shortstop Jacob Pawlak, with his back to the infield, manages to chase down.

Welton's double over the center fielder's head brings home Morrison, making it 4-1. After that Ryan Johnson walks, putting runners at first and second with one out. A pair of ground outs ends the inning; however, if Pawlak drops that blooper, two runs score and perhaps a third on a groundout.

Erickson, the only Eagle with two hits, reached base to start the seventh but could not advance — which seemed to summarize PCA's fortunes on this day.

"We had the tying run at the plate in the sixth," said Shumaker. "This was only the second regional game we've ever been in. Our goal is to go one game further next year."

With only three seniors on the 16-player roster, PCA just might manage it.

But this isn't rare. And therein lies the problem.

There have been enough alterations this spring to make anyone feel like a drunkard walking on jello. Nothing is certain.

And the changes aren't in some inconsequential regular-season game; these are in the state tournament.

Just too strange

It's as if the ADs at hosting schools are purposely changing things with no notice to anyone outside the teams involved.

But why? Is it a government conspiracy? Are aliens involved? Someone call Mulder and Scully!

All right, all right . . . Take a deep breath. Stay calm. But this is weird.

Here are just a few examples:

- In mid-May, Canton and

Salem were to play their annual showdown soccer match at 7 p.m. on a Wednesday. On the afternoon of the game, I got a voice mail from Salem coach Joe Nora regarding another game that had been rescheduled for that Saturday.

As an afterthought, Nora mentioned, "By the way, I don't know if anyone told you, but our game today has been pushed up to 5 p.m." Some sort of honors program that night, he said.

No, Joe, no one said anything to me.

■ The state district soccer tournament started day after Memorial Day. Canton was hosting a district. The brackets came out of Wolcott's office. The Chiefs were supposed to play their first district game at Livonia Churchill at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 31.

Don Smith, the Canton coach, told me the game had been changed, that it was going to be at 5 p.m. Wednesday, May 30. On the previous Friday, I called Wolcott's office to verify this.

According to his schedule, it was 7 p.m. Thursday, the 31st. He knew of no schedule changes.

Four days later, the "official" official word trickled down: The game would be 5 p.m., the 30th.

Wolcott, whose daughter Briana is the starting keeper for Canton's soccer team, apparently found this out from her.

■ Baseball and softball state districts, and soccer district finals, are slated for Saturday, June 2. Rain was predicted for the entire week. Thunderstorms caused baseball and softball districts to be cancelled and rescheduled for Monday, June 4.

Tom Willette, Salem's athletic director, told me the Novi officials had called off the districts on the previous Friday. Nobody bothered to let us know, but what's surprising about that?

So the baseball and softball district semifinals are re-scheduled for Monday, with both finals the next day. All of the games will be at Novi.

I get there at 5 p.m. Monday in time to see Canton take on Novi — in the district baseball final. You see, sometime that morning the decision was made to play the semifinals in each sport simultaneously, one semi at Novi and the other at South Lyon (South Lyon?), with both finals Monday at Novi.

Uncertain weather for Tuesday made this change seem logical, at least to those who made it. But once again, no one outside the teams involved was notified.

Who do you call?

So what's a guy to do? Just give up?

Heinzman had a real helpful solution. "You should call to make sure," she suggested.

But call who? I've tried calling the people who do the scheduling, and they don't even know what's going on. Or where. Or when.

My boss wants me to hand in a schedule of when I'm working. I think I'll just give him Wolcott's phone number and say call him and try figuring it out.

I sure as hell can't.

respect, not being ranked in the state."

Remembering the shootout loss to Canton in last year's state semifinal also left some bitter feelings among the Bulldogs. Certainly they played like it Wednesday with an aggressive style that seemed to catch the Chiefs off-guard.

What lit a fire under Canton was Morrell's yellow card. And she isn't the type to give a speech at halftime without backing it up; when she returned to play with 35:23 remaining in the second half and the game still scoreless, her determination was almost palpable.

With 28 minutes to play, the ball was cleared out of Canton's defensive zone to Morrell on the left wing. She beat one defender, then another, and took off toward the Bulldog goal. She finished her 60-yard sprint through the Brighton defense with a hard drive that got through keeper Ashley Willis, putting the Chiefs up 1-0 with 27:28 to go.

"She got that little bit of rest," said Smith, without feeling it necessary to add that's all she needed.

Morrell's goal gave Canton the boost it needed. The Bulldogs pushed forward, looking for the equalizer, but they couldn't get it; instead, with 10:39 remaining, Morrell got a carbon-copy breakaway, this one started by Beth Sandusky deep in the Chiefs' defensive zone.

Again, Morrell beat a pair of defenders and then Willis on a run that started from beyond the mid-field line, making it 2-0.

"Once they scored their first goal in the second half, we pushed people up," said Shivrman. "We had to take chances. But we let Morrell come in too close to our goal. There's a time when you have to step up and tackle her."

Easier said than done. Brighton continued to apply pressure, something Canton feeds on. With eight minutes to play, Rachel Perry got loose on a counter on the right side; her shot went over Willis and into the net, making it 3-0 with 7:47 left.

And sealing Brighton's fate. The Bulldogs had surrendered just five goals in their previous 21 games.

But they hadn't played anyone like Anne Morrell.

Michigan's fighting addiction

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

on that?

Yes.
I am advised that there is a far more comprehensive program in Michigan, than does Iowa have. This program is run by the Michigan Department of Community Health. There is a Detroit-based neighborhood service organization to answer a 24-hour, toll-free help line (800) 270-7117. The telephone number is staffed by real, live human beings (not just recordings). These answer people help coordinate free initial assessment consultations for compulsive gamblers and their families and to provide outpatient treatment for those caught up in this addiction.

The neighborhood service organization coordinates its consultation and treatment efforts with groups such as Gambler's Anonymous and the Salvation Army to better meet the needs of compulsive gamblers.

Because of the high quality of this program, the National Council in Problem Gambling is now forwarding its help line to calls originating from Michigan.

Robert M. Meisner is an Oakland County area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation.

You are invited to submit topics that you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph, Suite 467, Bingham Farms MI 48025. His e-mail address is bmeisner@mich.com, and his Web site is www.meisner-law.com. ### Realtors find ways to manage their long hours and hectic schedules

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER
dfunke@oc.homecomm.net

It's become a popular message — 24/7/365.

But no one person can be available at top form 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year. Not even a Realtor.

The pros who are at the beck and call of clients buying and selling houses have different ways of getting control of their most important tool — time.

"It's one of the biggest problems in this business," said David Gauss, a broker with Remerica Realteam in Troy.

Time is something that everyone receives in the same amount. Folks just choose to spend it differently and with varying degrees of efficiency.

Darlene Darby, associate broker with Coldwell Banker Schweitzer in Clarkston, admits to working too many hours. She's a 21-year veteran.

Sometimes, there's addition by subtraction.

"I don't do Sunday open houses," she said. "That's the one day a week I can be with my family."

However, because she's seen the market as sluggish in recent months, Darby has pulled some Sunday duty.

"I work a zillion hours," she said. "Can we be consumed? Absolutely. It's your life."

Plan, plan, plan

Richard Rosen, associate broker with RE/MAX in the Hills in Bloomfield Hills, puts a lot of stock in using the highly-structured Franklin planner/calendar system.

"You kind of plan your whole life out," he said. "You schedule personal stuff first. I've been married 24 years and I've learned that to stay married, you have to plan family activities first."

In the same vein, Rosen has learned to say no but offer alternatives if he can't accommodate business here and now.

"I think, personally, customers and clients have similar concerns. They have kids. It can be a little disappointing to say, 'I can't do it tonight, when is the next available time you have?' Most of the time, they're willing to do it."

Rosen also takes 15 minutes to a half hour in the morning or evening to plan the upcoming day and review the previous day.

"You're supposed to prioritize objectives," he said.

Get going

Diane Hartley, a Realtor with Century 21 Town & Country in Rochester, finds that jumping out to a quick start every day, giving full attention to one task at a time and delegating some minor tasks works for her.

"I work out of a home office a lot, get up early and get a lot done before phone calls start coming in," Hartley said.

"You probably have five or six files going at one time with different items for each," she said. "You can end up with papers all over your desk and not know what you're doing."

"I try to concentrate on one item, one file. I understand you're going to be interrupted by phone calls. But clean up one thing before you get to another."

"I think it's very important to have a to-do list to keep yourself organized whether it's electronic or on paper," Hartley said.

"If there's something on your list you didn't get done the day before, it needs to be put on top of the list the following day."

Asking assistants, family members or neighbors to help with more mundane but necessary chores, like mailings, frees her up for more important duties, Hartley added.

Treat yourself well

Harry Wolfe, a 36-year veteran affiliated with Century 21 Hartford South in Livonia, believes in looking beyond the next day and scheduling time for nonwork events.

"I think you have to plan a lot farther ahead — three or four days in advance," he said. "I need things to look forward to. Maybe it's business appointments, but there's other things that tie into daily life."

"When I plan things that I enjoy, not just business, it leads to business because I enjoy talking to people," Wolfe said. His favorite diversions include golf outings and long weekends Up North.

Eric Rader, an associate broker with Real Estate One in Livonia, said he's turned his vehicle into a traveling office.

"Cell phones for number one," he said. "Driving in a car I can just cut so many things. Ninety-nine percent of my business I operate out of my car now. I'm a traveling road show. Files are always with me."

Rader said he also listens to books on tapes while driving to help him unwind between appointments and home.

Another endorsement

Gauss finds that technology is a big help to him, too.

"I use a computer quite often to track my clients," he said.

Other advice? "Plan every day. Schedule yourself for some down time," Gauss said.

Jackie Hawley, a 10-year veteran affiliated with John Burt Realty-GMAC in Oxford, makes sure to take a day away from the daily grind once a week.

She finds that she's better able to serve others by making some time for herself.

"I don't carry a pager, my car phone isn't on. I don't call the office and they don't call me," she said.

Hawley schedules the day off in advance and leaves that information on her phone message system. She enjoys putting around her farm and watching football.

"I'm around people six days a week," Hawley said. "Cows don't talk back. They don't have questions."

Find way to wiggle away from PMI

MORTGAGE BITS

TIM 'TIMBO' PHILLIPS

Private mortgage insurance enables homebuyers to secure mortgages for which they would not have otherwise qualified. PMI protects the lender until the buyer has a sizable stake in his new home.

Because this extra payment is an expensive nuisance, lenders have developed some interesting alternatives to the traditional PMI model.

Traditionally, PMI is required until the homeowner owns 20 of his home. Then lenders usually drop the PMI premium.

PMI programs have morphed into a variety of derivatives.

Some lenders now allow borrowers to choose their level of PMI protection. These borrowers may opt to pay the normal monthly PMI fee with a competitive interest rate, or they may select a higher interest rate with reduced PMI fees.

Borrowers with 5 percent or less down should consider the FHA's option. The FHA mortgage allows buyers to have reduced monthly payments with draws from a pool of money that is created when they buy their home. This "up-front" premium is actually financed into the loan and keeps the borrowers' monthly costs lower. Any unused portion of this reserve is refundable to the borrower when he sells or refinances, and it sometimes is enough to pay for the cost of a refinance.

Since PMI payments generally offer no income tax advantage, paying a higher interest rate in lieu of such PMI payments may be a good idea. The downside is that after the borrowers have a 20-percent interest in the property, they are stuck with a higher interest rate.

In areas with rapidly appreciating homes, borrowers may be well served to take a lower interest rate and the higher PMI payments. The idea, of course, is to dump the PMI as soon as the borrowers reach the magical 20-percent threshold.

Know closing costs, exec says

Surprise parties, surprise gifts and surprise promotions are all fun, but surprise fees aren't, especially when buying a house.

"Closing on a new home is very exciting, but it can also be intimidating for home buyers who don't know what to expect," said Robb Sutton, regional manager of Wells Fargo Home Mortgage in Livonia.

"It's important to visit with a reputable lender and learn about the loan options available and the costs involved with purchasing a home to avoid any surprises at the time of closing," he said.

Sutton provided the following tips to help home buyers prepare to close on their home:

■ Select a loan.

There are many loan options available today, so it's important for home buyers to understand the benefits of all the products in order to select one that best meets their financial needs.

If home buyers understand the loan products, rates and terms, they won't find themselves making a rushed decision just before the closing.

■ Determine how much the closing will cost.

Before the closing can take place, many lenders will complete due diligence to ensure that the transaction is legitimate.

This may involve ordering a property appraisal, conducting a title search, filing title insurance and obtaining the deed. It's usually the home buyer's responsibility to pay the costs associated with these services at the time of closing.

■ Inquire about additional fees.

In addition to the closing costs, home buyers are typically responsible for an origination fee, which is generally 1 percent of the mortgage amount.

Ask your lender to prepare an itemization of any additional fees that will be assessed.

■ Know what to bring to the closing meeting.

Home buyers often need to bring documents, such as proof of home-owner's insurance, to the closing meeting. A bank's certified check for the closing costs may also be needed. To reduce anxiety, home buyers might find it helpful to create a checklist of the documents they need to present at the closing so they don't forget anything.

■ Review the paperwork and ask questions.

Carefully review all the documents presented at the time of closing. Take as much time as needed. Make sure the product, rate and terms are correct.

Home buyers should seek clarity on any items they don't understand.

■ Obtain the proper paperwork.

At the closing, the home buyers should receive several documents. These include a settlement statement, a truth-in-lending statement, the mortgage note, mortgage or deed or trust and a binding sales contract. Plus the keys to the house.

"Home buyers want to be comfortable and confident with their decision to purchase a home," Sutton said.

"By taking the time to evaluate the options and inquire about the fees and process involved, home buyers can avoid any surprises and make the experience more enjoyable."

Lender mortgage fees typically run $600 to $800, plus the cost of title insurance. However, some companies may charge $2,000 to $4,000 or even more. Higher fees should buy you a lower interest rate. Know what your true costs are; what you're getting for your money and whether it's worth it. Always check at least three lenders.

ADD VALUE TO YOUR HOME WITH A HOME NETWORK

by GARY S. MEYERS

One of the best investments you can make in your home today is almost invisible, and its full potential hasn't begun to be realized. It's a home network, and it can add thousands to your home's value and keep it marketable well into the future.

This week, The Meyers Report helps you untangle your questions about home networks and how to get wired for the 21st century.

Unless you work in a cave, you've probably been exposed to a modern office network, where computers, printers, telephones and other essential equipment can be moved around, reassigned, and linked up with the ease of plugging in a lamp. Thanks to networking technology, office communications are faster, more direct, and more effective than ever before.

Now, that technology is moving into the home, over the last five years, more and more networking components can be found alongside the trusty circuit breaker panel, telephone jack, and cable television outlet. And, it's only going to get bigger.

There've been some big players coming in [to the home network market], says Tim Iafolla, president of Home Information Networks, which serves the metropolitan Washington, D.C. area, "and a lot of action over the last couple of years. Three years ago, builders didn't know what I was talking about, and now home networks are going into new home construction."

What is a home network?
"A home network — it's also called a 'structured wiring package,'" said Iafolla, "is a very specific layout of wiring that gives the homeowner the capability of having flexible phone, fax, data, video, audio, Internet — all of those services — come into the house and be distributed everywhere in the house. They come in at a central point, and all the wires emanate from that point to all of the wall jacks."

Iafolla adds that home networking implies a certain level of wiring in the installation, a high quality wiring that can handle high-speed data and high-quality voice transmissions.

"That means," he said, "Category five cable for voice and data, a certain quality speaker wire for your stereo, and high-end coaxial or, in some cases, fiber optics as well."

Why do I need a home network?
You may be comfortable with the level of service in your home now. A home network, however, will enable you to "prepare for services that you may not have now, but will be available soon," said Iafolla.

Some of those services include: broadband Internet, DSL cable modem, and fiber optics. "Without a home network," said Iafolla, "those services can be brought into your house and used in only one location. With a network, those services can be brought in to a central panel and distributed throughout the house."

"In addition," he says, "even though you may not want to take advantage of a network, it's a good bet the next owner of your house will, and you can add as much as $20,000 to the value of your home if you have a well-designed, well-installed network in there. Of course, it depends on the interest of the buyer and what kind of things they want to do in that house. People who grew up with computers are entering the age of buying homes, and they want to come home to a well-wired environment."

What does it cost?
If you're installing a network in an existing home, it's not cheap, warned Iafolla. However, the investment is definitely worth the money.

"If the home already is built," he said, "you can figure on $1 to $2 per square foot. The cost goes down to about a third of that for new construction, and it's easier to design around electrical service, ductwork, and other obstacles if we can be in on the design phase of the house. We're usually the last contractors in the house before the drywall is installed, so it's good if we can plan around everything else that's going to be there."

Will my service be obsolete in five years?
You would think that as quickly as computers and other electronics become yesterday's news, a home network would fall by the wayside as new technologies arrive. Not so, said Iafolla.

"The standard for telephone and data cable is category five," he said. "We try to strike a balance between a good, practical installation and one that's going to be useful for a long time. In the commercial world, there's an enormous installed base of category five cable, and all of the hardware that's out there supports that, so it would be unlikely that it's going to change any time soon as a standard."

All of the jacks and plates and network cards are following a standard that's going to be very difficult to change in the near future. But we do hedge our bets a little bit. We install fiber optic cable, even though its use is a few years down the road. It adds a little to the installation costs, but if it's ever needed, it's right there."

Will my appliances be on the network?
You may have heard about appliances that will be able to talk to one another or be accessed by the Internet to call for repairs or be turned on remotely. According to Iafolla, they will only be linked to the network to get on-line.

"It's a bit of overkill to hardwire a refrigerator to the network," he said. "Most of the appliances are going to be on a wireless standard, but they will be connected to the phone line at some point to get on the Internet."

How can I get wired?
"This still is a new business," Iafolla said, "and what we do may not be readily available in some places, although you can find it in most metropolitan areas."

He added that other companies are starting to install home networks as sidelines. "Electricians are getting into the act," he said. "Home security companies are getting into the act, and commercial networking companies are moving into residential, too."

"You want to make sure," he cautioned, "that they are qualified for this kind of installation. Any electrician can pull wires, but you have to adhere to certain standards for running category five cable. You have to terminate it properly, attach it to jacks with the right kind of connectors, and make sure it only curves a certain amount. Don't let just anyone do it."

"If it's well-planned and well-executed, though," he said, "It can add functionality and value to your home for many years."
