Preliminary indications are that Stewart's district will be changed through redistricting, which, when looking at a map, looks like a golf terminate when both sides sign the new agreement, gives the district $47,000 a year, with slightly smaller commission rates. According to Brand, the present pact pays the district approximately $137,000 a year.

Booher, who was involved in an Oakland County beverage consortium while superintendent in Berkley, said this deal is much better much better.

"This contract's benefits surpass the offerings available to the countywide consortium I was involved with previously," she said. "At the same time, Plymouth-Canton was able to retain its control of when the machines are turned on, the locations of the machines and the percentage of carbonated beverages offered."

Coca-Cola views the contract as a partnership between the company and school district.

"We respond to the needs of the local school district. It's an opportunity for Coca-Cola to have a partnership and invest in the schools, as well as provide a wide-ranging number of products for students," said Kevin Morris, vice president of public affairs for Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Michigan.

District officials are conscious of studies which indicate that drinking too much pop can lead to poor nutrition, as well as health-related problems such as obesity and diabetes.

"I think it's up to the Board of Education, through our health and physical education courses, to re-emphasize the needs identified by many in the medical profession for the use of water, milk and other beverages that are more wholesome than carbonated beverages," said Trustee Roland Thomas. "I don't think we can regulate this through elimination, but I do believe that through education we can have a dramatic impact on the health of our children."

"I believe water and juice are healthier drinks, but I also know some of the discretion of what kids drink needs to be taken on at home, not just us monitoring what they are drinking," added school board member Susan Davis.

School officials report 43 percent of the beverages sold in vending machines are water and juice products, with the top selling product Powerade, followed by Coke, water, Cherry Coke and Fruitopia.

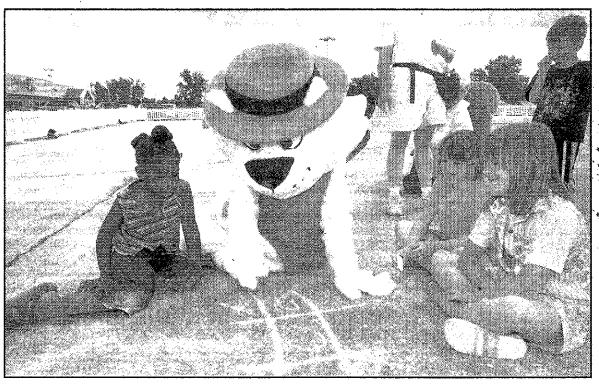

In the face of budget problems, many school districts see beverage contracts as a way to ease financial strains.

"This is just another example of ways we're looking for alternative funding to help our financial situation," said Trustee Steve Guile.

According to Booher, the Coca-Cola contract does not include the projected 50,000 units of milk that will be sold out of machines by the district's food service organization, Sodexo-Marriott.

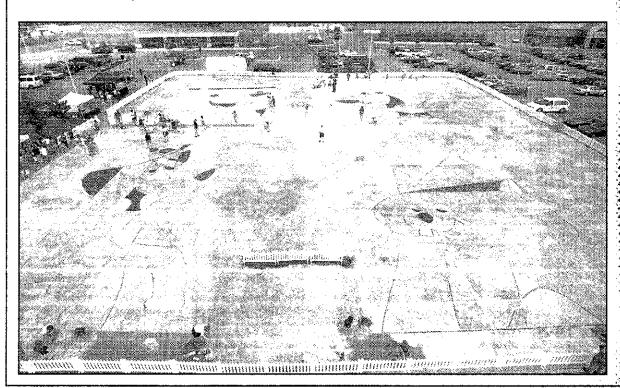

Brand said competing beverage bids weren't sought because the district felt, that after checking similar deals with other districts and consortiums, it had "far and above the best deal around."

A temporary sales trailer will be wheeled to the construction site for people hoping to join at special pre-opening rates, said Bryan Amann, the attorney for the developer.

"I've been getting bombarded with phone calls from people asking me where they can buy memberships," he said.

Amann approached the township about placing a sales trailer at the site.

"Developers have been able to sell their houses and condos before they're completed, but until now, no businesses that rely on membership money have been able to pre-sell them onsite," he said.

The township planning staff, planning commission and board of trustees agreed.

The changes to the ordinance allow the temporary sales offices for marketing and hiring. The trailer may stay on-site for up to 180 days. Any office proposed for greater than 180 days will require approval by the planning commission and the commission may place a limit on the time frame based on the scale and scope of the development.

The ordinance was updated to specify how many trailers may be moved to any development or commercial site.

There may be only one permitted at commercial sites, but residential developments may have one trailer per home builder, up to three total.

Van Buren Schools officials approved last week a $48.2 million budget for the 2001-02 fiscal year.

The new budget, which was unanimously approved by the board of education Monday, represents an increase of about 3 percent from the 2000-01.

The majority of the budget some $24 million - will go toward instruction and instructional programs. More than $6 million will be used for maintenance and operations. About $5.5 million will be spent on special education.

VAN BUREN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

About $11.6 million of the new budget comes from local taxes, including more than $1.4 million from a sinking fund millage that passed in 1998. Much of the sinking fund is being used to rebuild Rawsonville and Edgemont elementary schools.

Canton Township contributes about $519,000 in local tax money to the district's bud-

The rest of the money comes from the state. According to Marian Niner, the district's director of business, the district received a 5-percent increase for per-pupil funding from the state.

Niner said each of the district's nine schools will receive a larger budget to work with than they had last year.

"All the schools will receive a 2.6 percent increase in appropriation allocation. Each principal will determine where the money goes within the school," said Niner.

The 2001-02 fiscal year begins July 1.

ABVANCEMENTS

IN FOOT CARE

PREVENT ATHLETE'S FOOT Anyone can suffer from athlete's foot. It's a fungal infection that thrives in a warm, moist and dark environment. Shoes present an excellent environment for fungal infections to grow. The best prevention is to create a shoe climate least suitable for their growth:

 Choose a shoe made of a natural material that allows the foot to breathe Apply absorbing cornstarch to your shoes before and after wearing them.

Don't wear the same shoes on consecutive days.

Clean your feet thoroughly at least twice a day. Change your socks at least twice a day.

If you are prone to athlete's foot or other fungal infections, see your podiatrists. Fungus can cause severe nail infections, but new medications are available by prescription for this condition. *Early morning, evening, and Saturday appointments available

Richard Aginian holds a number of titles.

Professionally, he is president and CEO of Hometown Communications Network Inc., parent company for The Observer Newspapers.

As a volunteer, he's been a chairman, director and board member of numerous local organizations. His volunteer efforts brought him the 2001 Community Service Award.

The award was presented Tuesday by The Community House of Birmingham, where Aginian has been a resident for 28 years.

It recognizes Aginian's work as a trustee for William Beaumont Hospital and as vice chairman for the 2003 Ryder Cup golf championship, as well as his membership on the board of directors of the Corporation for a Skilled Workforce and Walsh College and other local and regional organizations.

Aginian "has done so many things for so many organizations, it's hard to list them all," said Shelly Roberts, executive director of The Community House

As a 10-year member of The Community House board of directors. Aginian led a major expansion project that added the Ruth Shain sun room wing to the downtown Birmingham building.

Aginian said he particularly relishes the opportunity to bring the 35th Ryder Cup to the Detroit metropolitan area.

ith the tick of the clock, it was over. Students went streaming (and screaming) down the hallways toward the exits, stopping only to hug a friend or shed a tear, as the official start of summer vacation began at 2:55 p.m. Thursday June 14.

And with it, the official end of the debut year of Canton's first Middle School, Discovery.

Since the grounds of the school have still not been completed, the students chose off-site destinations for their last day together as a class. The sixth grade visited the Skatin' Station II in Canton. The seventh grade spent the morning at Super Bowl on Ford Road. And, the eighth grade enjoyed most of their day at Livonia's Rotary Park.

It was a last fling where classmates could still enjoy the company of one another and the camaraderie of this particular school year. Yearbooks were traded and signed at each of the destinations, and again back at the school before the final bell.

And, then with that final tick

And, then with that final tick of the clock, it ended. Students jumped for joy, and teachers and staff breathed a collective sigh of staff relief.

"We survived a year of great stress quite nicely," said Principal

tor, in an interview the following week. "The tremendous change encountered by everyone was frightening at times, but overcoming it made us all stronger as an educational family. A number of new traditions were instituted, many a result of the many wonderful students we had at Discovery this year, which will be guides for us in the future."

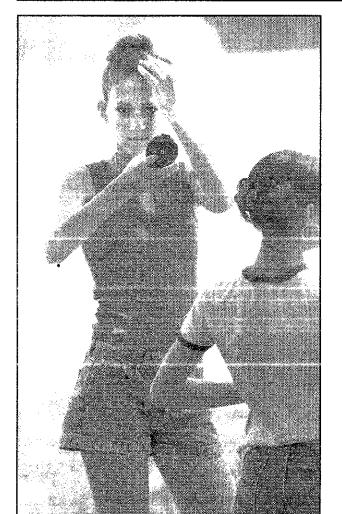

Asked if there were any problems or failures looking back over the year, he said, "No failures really, just more learning opportunities. Any real problems that we experienced were due to unfinished building items that should be remedied by the opening of the next school year."

And, for final thoughts, LaVictor replied:

"A special thanks to the voters that allowed Discovery to become a reality. Many, many thanks to the parents that shared their wonderful children with us. Thank you to Canton Township for the wonderful services provided to us."

Community leaders praise Schoolcraft's Dick McDowell

Goodbye, Dick McDowell. Friends, colleagues and politi-"cians alike all bid farewell last week to Richard McDowell, who retired after 20 years as School-

Art Rockalo, a Schoolcraft alumni who has a Schoolcraft art scholarship named for him, said one only has to look at how well Schoolcraft is run to see McDowell's legacy.

"He's run this school pretty effectively, and it doesn't have any debt," Rockalo, a former Northville resident said. "He's very personable and he knows how to deal with people and students. He's a great leader."

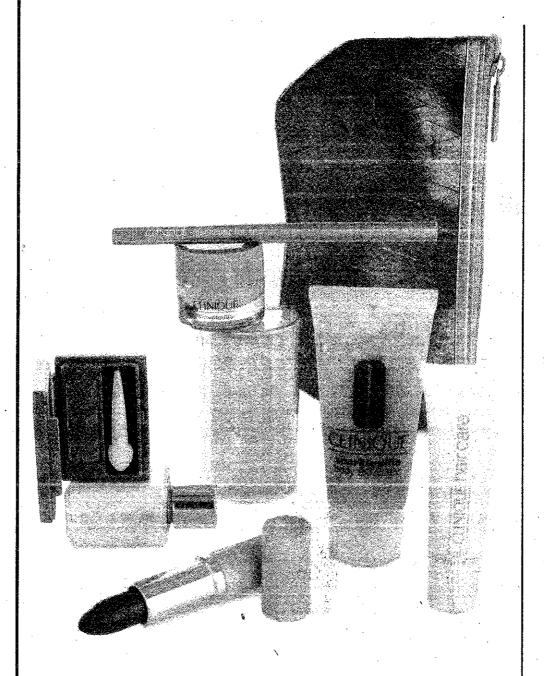

David Brandon, CEO of Domino's Pizza and a former Schoolcraft trustee, likened McDowell's leadership qualities to that of an eagle, a bird known for using the force of storms to fly higher.

"Not only is it a national symbol but eagles are also known for being fierce, tenacious and competitive," Brandon said, referring to qualities he attributed to McDowell.

When he became head coach of the Farmington Hills Mercy softball team in 1995, Jack Falvo's goal was to take the program to a higher level.

a 23-4 record and an impressive 0.62 earned

Fediuk also has amazing control; she recorded 201 strikeouts in 168 2/3 innings while issuing just nine walks.

Facing a total of 626 batters, she allowed 96 hits and only 26 runs, 15 of which were earned. Over the last two seasons, Fediuk is 39-9 with 327 strikeouts.

Ex-hockey player makes living on ice

Jason Carriere is finding a way to make a living doing what he loves -

Not playing, though no doubt the 27year-old native of Edmonton, Alberta, harbors secret desires to return to making a living through competitive sport.

"I'm skating four times week," Carriere said. "I'm trying to get back in shape. Who knows what can happen in the fall. "But for the most part my roots are set here now.'

Carriere is trying to make a living from teaching youngsters — he doesn't discriminate, he'll take oldsters on, too - some of the finer points of playing hockey.

"It's worth it," he said, "when you have a parent come in and say, 'You did a great job with my kid.' It means a lot when you hear something like that."

Carriere's company is named Pro Scout Hockey, Inc., and it's three just about the same age Carriere was when he first got going on skates.

PSH offers a full line of instruction. It accepts teams, lines, groups, individuals, and any position. It teaches on-ice skills and off-ice training. Carriere has his own office but does his on-ice work at the Arctic Pond

Arena. "I owe a lot to John Stanisk

(owner/operator of the Arctic Pond)," Carriere said. "He helped me get where I am."

Too close: Plymouth Salem's Kelly Jaskot, named to the All-Area

softball team, takes an inside pitch in this early May action.

Carriere most recently coached the Michigan Bantam AA Whalers, which won several tournaments and was a finalist in the State of Michigan Tournament.

As a player, he has skated at forward and defense for the Indianapolis Ice of the CHL, the South Carolina Stingrays of the ECHL, the Fort Worth Fire of the CHL and the Jacksonville Bullets of the Southern Hockey League. He also played on the Calgary Canucks of the Alberta Junior Hockey League, which won the 1994-95 Canadian National Tier II Junior Championship, the Centennial Cup.

"Since I've played both defense and forward," he said, "that gives me a good perspective for teaching both." One of his ex-coaches, former Detroit

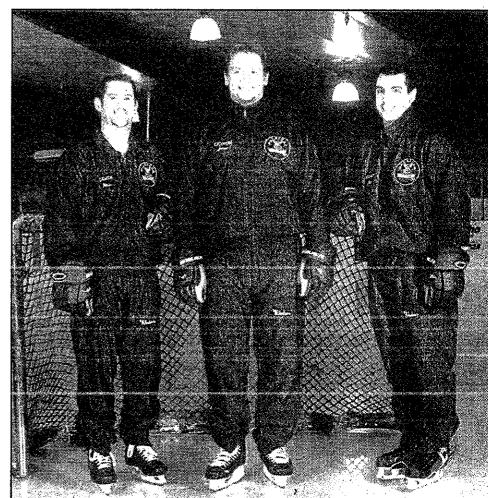

Red Wing Mike Krushelnyski, endorses PSH's program. So far Carriere is depending on his legs and results to spread the word.

"I don't have a lot of money for advertising, so word of mouth is what I have to go by," he said. "I get out to rinks, anywhere I can." He has worked with teams, gives private lessons, takes on kids or adults

Late coach's wife was a legend of her own

Coach John Herrington is the person most credited with making Farmington Harrison football synonymous with winning over the last three decades. But he had a full partner in that endeavor in Fran Herrington, his wife of 38 years and Harrison's No. 1

Aside from longtime assistant coach Bob

O'MEARA Sutter, Fran had more to do with the success of the program than anyone besides John.

And it wasn't simply because of her unflagging support for her husband.

So it was a profound loss for Herrington and the Hawks one that transcends the game of football and touches the collective soul of a community when Fran, 60, succumbed to renal cancer Wednesday following a three-month struggle with the illness.

There will be a memorial service for Fran, whose wish was to be cremated, at 1 p.m. today at McCabe Funeral Home on 12 Mile Road, west of Orchard Lake and a short drive from Harrison High School.

Anyone who has been to a Harrison game, no doubt noticed Fran.

She always wore a Harrison football jersey with the number 1 on it and her name on the back.

At home games, she was usually pacing back and forth along the fence, too nervous and too involved in the action to stand still or sit in the stands.

"She was the perfect wife; we shared the same interests, and she loved football at Harrison dearly," John said, recalling Fran insisted on driving him to school on game days.

"She would always say the same thing — 'Give me a kiss; Good luck to my Hawks, and I'll see you on the victory field.' It was a little ritual we had."

After Harrison had rallied from a two-touchdown deficit to defeat Marysville in a 1987 state

"She's crying because now we can't have Thanksgiving dinner," John said.

But I was mystified. Wasn't winning a good thing?

It turned out they were tears

Through her watery eyes, Fran explained, "No, I'm just so happy that you won!" But Fran was much more than a supportive wife who cheered for her husband's team. She was never a football widow.

John and Fran were a team and not just as a married couple. In a way, they were like the king and queen at the homecoming dance — the dance being the Harrison football program.

I don't mean that in an autocratic sense, because together they were ambassadors and not

If someone asks why the Harrison program has been so successful, Fran was one of the intangible reasons that helped make it so.

Fran never ran a practice or called a play — although I think she gave John some advice on occasion — but she was an active player in the overall program.

"They were best friends, too," said veteran booster club member and family friend Lance Pesci. "That was their life, not just John's."

Shared personalities

Fran shared John's genial personality, and that served her well as she performed many of the behind-the-scenes duties that got parents involved and created a sense of community, goodwill and common purpose in the program.

"Fran was a unique lady," Sutter said. "Fran was just a great football wife for John.

"She supported him totally in his coaching efforts, and she was a tremendous booster to our program and to our kids."

Using John's classroom at night, Fran taught the players' mothers about the game of foot-

She also worked with boosters to organize events such as pancake breakfasts, meet-the-team semifinal game, Fran was in nights and post-season banauets.

During the playoffs, Fran and some of the moms or coaches' wives would prepare a special meal for the Sunday coaches meeting. If the team made it to the state finals, the coaches had prime rib the last week.

"That was something to shoot for right there," Sutter said.

And every Tuesday night during the season, the Herringtons would meet with the parents to review film of the last game.

"Back in the old days, she used to run the projector back and forth before we had video tape," John said.

"Her involvement with the parents and the kids was tremendous.

"She loved the kids as much as I do, and many of them are grown now and are good friends."

Because she was involved and knowledgeable about the game, Fran was known to offer her opinion, too, if she thought the coaches had erred. "She knew the game of football better than most women did, and she certainly let John and us know when we screwed up," Sutter said. "Fortunately, there weren't too many of those occasions, but there were times we met the wrath of Fran.' "When we lost to Fordson in 1984 with a good team, she wouldn't talk to me for two days, because she didn't think I called a very good game," John said.

Had own career

Fran was a professional person, too, and had her own career. She worked in the medical field for 40 years and managed a doctor's office for the last 28 until her retirement in December.

John and Fran knew each other since the fourth grade, graduated from Waterford High School together in 1958 and began dating in college.

"We ended up getting married," John said. "We had a great life together."

And that life revolved largely around Harrison football. Of the 408 games in which John has coached over four decades, Fran Fran, who is also survived by her children, Layne and Leisa (Rob) Zelinski, and a brother, Dr. Jerry Goff, "was full of life and very outgoing," John added.

And it was her cheerful nature and friendly disposition that drew people to her and made her instantly likeable.

A warm greeting from Fran brightened your day, even on the

As many times as I went on the field to interview John after a game, Fran was always there, Whenever I think of Fran, I hear those words in her voice. And I know so many of you reading this have fond remembrances of Fran, the No. 1 fan, too.

Lady Crusaders hoop recruits

It's summer, but it's not too early to plan ahead for the 2001-02 Madonna University women's basketball season as far as coach Marylou Jansen is concerned. Jansen, who lost five seniors off last year's 18-12 squad, has added three new recruits. So far in the fold is 5-foot-9 guard Jen Hunley, who was Livonia Ladywood's sixth man; Courtney Rehbine, a 6-1 post player from Macomb Community College; and 5-10 forward Marwa Ayoub of Dearborn High.

Jansen also hopes to land two or three more players before school starts.

"Last year we got past more powerful and faster teams with our half-court offense and our half-court defense," said Jansen, who led MU to a Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conferenc cotitle (11-3) and the finals of the WHAC Tournament. "One of our goals is to become more athletic. What we're trying to do for next year is press and stretch out our defense a little more with some people who can run the floor.

"And so far I'm pleased with who we've brought in."

Hunley helped Ladywood finish 17-7 overall and reach the Class A regional finals. She had a season-high 23 points in a district tournament victory over Livonia Stevenson, hitting nine of 10 shots from the floor, including three 3-pointers.

"She's a cutting and slashing type of player with great funda- reserve Jackie Kocis.

mentals and good footwork,"
Jansen said. "She runs the floor well and she has a good attitude. And we love getting players from Lådywood."

Rehbine, a Clawson High graduate, played two years of volleyball at Macomb before switching over to the basketball court last season where she led the Eastern Conference of the Michigan Community College Athletic Association in rebounding with 13.8 per game.

Rehbine has three years of eligibility left at MU.

"She needs work on her skills on the offensive end, but she's aggressive on the boards and is getting good on her putbacks around the basket," Jansen said. "She's really a coachable kid, Ayoub gives MU an inside and outside presence offensively, according to Jansen.

"She'll bang inside, crash the boards and rebound, but she can also go out and hit the three,' Jansen said. "She's kind of like Kathy Panganis (MU's leading returning scorer). That's a nice combination to have, and she's a good athlete."

Jansen is looking to replace three starters who graduated including Plymouth Canton grad Kristi Fiorenzi, a 5-10 forward who averaged 15.1 points and 6.6 rebounds per game, along with Melissa Poma (from Ladywood) and Michelle Miela.

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

These guys find niche as acrobats

While my buddy and I waited along a northern stream bank for the sun to set, we were entertained by dancing

Watching them jump and twist in the air with only the sound of the rushing water to maintain a beat, made the time pass quickly.

They were probably chubs or darters based on their size. Most were estimated to be three to five inches long. Their silvery bodies reflected the setting rays of sunlight providing brilliant contrast against the reflected shadows of the willow and cedar trees along the shore.

As we watched the small mayflies skimming the water's surface laying eggs, they came within range of those finned flycatchers.

Typically the fish would jump out of the water and grab the insect as expertly as any feathered flycatcher. But there were variations on this theme.

During our show we judged the jumping of the fish like judges of a diving or gymnastics competition. We learned to train our eyes for details that were visible for only a fraction of a second.

Several fish easily compensated for the backward movement of the mayfly as it moved pass the fish. When the fish moved out of the water it had to adjust to the actual position of the mayfly as it passed overhead. This often resulted in a backwards somersault.

Most fish made this look easy, like a low difficulty jack-knife dive for humans. But there were a few that made some twists and turns while in the air to capture the mayfly in its mouth. After all the whole purpose of the jump was to grab the fly, so if they missed the fly points were deducted.

Most flies never flew again!

The height of the jump varied depending on the flight of the fly. A distance of six or eight inches, judged to the best of our ability, was getting into the Olympic category.

Remember, the fish are not very long. Height, twists and turns included in the somersault added points to their score.

But the unquestionable winner of the night was a fish with determination. As the mayfly fluttered near the surface moving downstream with the current, a fish jumped to reach the fly on its first aerial assault. Missed!

Then, before the fly moved very far, and before it was moved out of position, it quickly jumped higher and grabbed for the fly again.

Missed!

Immediately trying again before they mayfly had a chance to gain altitude or recover from the second assault, the fish jumped, twisted in the air and finally captured the fly.

The "flipper want to be" award goes to the fish that danced on its tail. Instead of jumping and then landing back in the water ready to jump again, this winner stood on its tail and pushed itself down stream with only the tail touching the surface, eyeing the fly every moment.

Upon grabbing the fly it made a successful "splashless" dive into the water.

Their accuracy in catching fish is amazing, as well as their gymnastic capabilities. Fish can see above water in a cone of vision that is about 97

This is caused by the transition between light rays passing from air into water. Their binocular vision is restricted even more because of where their eyes are located. Considering all these factors, the entertaining fish were very good at shagging flies. Fish watching can be very enjoyable, but you have to be in the field to see it!

God's fishbowl: Florida's finest catch

Prize catch: Livonian Dennis Wright shows off an 8pound crevalle during his recent trip to the Keys.

ALLEY

BY BRAD EMONS bemons@oe.homecomm.net

Dennis Wright calls himself a "blue collar fisherman."

Three years ago this so-called "novice" decided he wanted to explore backcountry flats fishing in the Florida Keys.

"I always wanted to catch a sailfish," said Wright, who owns Wright's Hardware in Livonia and has served as Livonia Junior Athletic League president and on the Livonia Parks and Recreation Commission.

Six trips later, Wright is hooked. He said there is something to the beautiful sunsets, turquoise water and the smell of ocean air while battling some of the fastest and strongest sportfish in the world.

"It's God's fishbowl," he said. "I've just had an incredible time. It's just incredible scenery. Because of the clarity of the water, you can't tell the water from the sky."And it's so quiet when you're out there.

There's such a variety out there. You'll pass porpoise, sharks, mangro, snapper and barracuda.'

When Wright heads to the Keys, there's only one place to go - out of Islamorada, billed as the "Sportfishing Capitol of the World.'

Wright's guide out of the World Famous Whale Harbor is Captain Steve Murray.

For Wright and his store manager, Dave Greager of Redford, there's enough fish stories to go around for months after their recent four-day, five-night stay.

Chartering a 171/2-foot flats boat from Murray, the threesome ventured out 22 square miles out into the Florida Bay, a section of water between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico.

They motored all the way over to Flamingo, which is part of Everglades National

And here is what Wright and Greager hauled in:

Day 1: A half-zone sea trout and other assorted fish, along with a 125-pound tar-

Day 2: Thirty-eight sea trout or ladyfish, along with a 7-foot, 155-pound tarpon which took 40 minutes to haul in.

Day 3: Approximately 75-80 sea trout, ladyfish and catfish. Also, six trophy sharks, including three bull sharks, ranging from 6 feet, 100 pounds to over 8 feet and 175 pounds, and three black tips, the smallest 4 feet, 45 pounds to the biggest estimated between 5-6 feet and 80 pounds.

Day 4: Thirty combination trout; an 8-foot crevalle; three small bonnet-head sharks between 18 inches and 3 feet; a 4-foot, 60pound nurse shark; a fiesty 5½-foot bull shark; and an 8-foot, 200-pound blacktip.

"It's weird if you catch something that could eat you, but really there's no art to it, you throw bait out there after you cut it in two," Wright said. "Physically it's a real challenge. Once we hooked into them we had to un-anchor and put the boat out.

"The last time I hurt a sciatic nerve in my back. This time I got ready for it. I worked out both my chest and my legs.'

Wright has done a deep sea charter, but prefers the backcountry flats.

"You can be in four inches of water or five feet," he said. "That's the beauty of it. Former President Bush fishes out of Islamorada. It's just like you used to see on TV with Curt Gowdy on American Sportsman."

As far as an outdoor excursion, Wright calls backcountry flats fishing "a very affordable vacation if you're looking for adven-

"I called the (Islamorada) Chamber of Commerce and got on a mailing list," he said. "They'll write back to you and give you all the information you need as far as motels, charters and restaurants.

"We usually stay at the Key Lantern Motel or the Blue Fin Inn. There are lots of great restaurants. The people are very friendly. They're very laid back. There's no pressure."

Wright says he has never had a bad experience since he made his way to Islamorda.

"It's premium fishing and you get what you pay for," he said. "With four charters, airfare and car rental (out of Fort Lauderdale), food, beverage, motel and tips, it's around $1,800.

"All I can say is that we came, we saw and we caught. I've never had a bad trip."

To learn more about backcountry flats fishing, or you can log on to www.tarponheadquarters.com. or call 1-888-827-7664.

This California view can't be beaten

I look out at the vast blue Pacific Ocean, the breakers coming in on shore as myriads of sea gulls soar overhead.

Then I turn around and here I am on the approach of lane No. 9 with ball in hand ready to roll another strike.

This is the scenario at Sea Bowl in Pacifica, California. It was only a short drive down the coast from San Francisco where I was visiting my son, Don, last weekend. Sea Bowl is one of only a handful of bowling centers docated in the Bay area. According to the manager on duty, Tom Stepp, Sea Bowl was voted as the bowling center having the best view of the ocean on the West Coast. This is a redo of an older center with some very attractive design features, mindful of a nautical theme. But inside, they really mean business with 32 synthetic lanes and retaining the wood approaches. Even on a busy Sunday night the lanes were well cared for and the shot was not at all bad. There was plenty of a mix, with young adults, some kids and a few seniors, everyone was having fun.

My son had a couple of good games and I was my usual

They had a nicely stocked Pro Shop, but it was not open at the time.

Even though West Coast rates are higher than back here, they offer a lot of specials and special rates for their league bowlers.

This is one of the more attractive houses I have seen lately, managed by Mark Ganduglia.

We also visited the Lanes at The Presidio, located on military base originally built by the Army. This 12-lane house called Presidio Bowling Center is on a historic site, no longer part of they Army, but there are many relics of our history remaining. The bowling center had also been remodeled recently, very nice and overlooking San Francisco Bay, right by the Golden Gate Bridge, yet another spectacular view. We did not have a chance to bowl there, but talked with a manager, Larry Mitchell, and discussed the non-smoking issue which I had written about two weeks ago.

In California there is no smoking allowed in any public buildings anywhere, and of course that includes all bowling facilities.

"It didn't really have much effect here," Mitchell said. 'Smokers can just step outside if they have to light up." It was not much of an issue at Sea Bowl, either, Our odyssey also took us to the Yerba Buena Ice Skating heart of the downtown area.

We just missed the manager, Barbara McBride, but spoke to the one in charge. Jeff Moyers. He also spoke of the smoking issue and how it has not seemingly affected their business.

It seemed odd to see people walking in and out with ice skates or bowling bags, but not both.

This again, a very nicely appointed and well designed bowling center with 12 lanes.

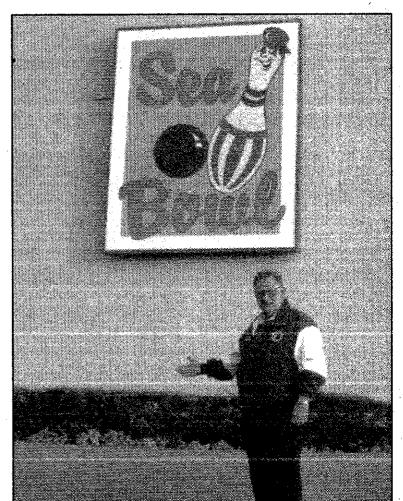

We also visited site of a former bowling center, which was transformed into a megamusic store.

This one had been a 40-lane center called Japantown, now gone by the wayside for a more lucrative business. From information gleaned from other sources, the transformation to non-smoking put a severe damper on the bowling centers in California. But since the San Francisco Bay Area has so few compared to our choices of over 100 bowling centers in the Greater Detroit area, people will go to bowl there regardless of whether or not they can smoke and bowl at the same time.

The only other bowling, of sorts we experienced was the electronic kind, a really wild game played on a giant screen called "HyperBowl," in which the player rolls a giant bowling ball all through the streets of San Francisco, dodging around the cable cars, and finally coming up to a set of and Bowling Center in the pins to knock down, a very bizarre, but entertaining display.

If you have a chance to travel to the San Francisco Bay area, it might be fun to bring along your bowling gear. This is a great place to visit, lots to see and do.

You can see everything from

Alcatraz to purple-haired people, ride the cable car, tour the bay by boat and enjoy some fine dining from every nation you can think of.

was fantastic," said Osburn, "but just as memorable was hearing Branford Marsalis (with the Orpheus Chamber Orchestra) in March. I decided I wanted to get a little bit more involved with an organization that was bringing some great culture to the Detroit area - bringing in virtuosos, masters of their instruments."

Osburn's expertise as Art Van Furniture's vice president of performance excellence and 20 years as a quality leader and consultant to numerous organizations will go a long way to helping him serve on the strategic planning committee for the Chamber Music Society of Detroit.

"We feel it's very important to have a vision," said Beznos who's beginning her 15th year with the organization. "We're always expanding as a way of staying healthy and thriving. We have a wonderful education program with a two-week string residency that visits multitudes of schools and universities and culminates in a performance in our series so that they know how to listen to and enjoy a concert."

Beznos has seen a lot of changes over the years because the organization keeps an eye on the future. Founded in 1944, the Chamber Music Society of Detroit is committed to presenting the highest quality of performers as well as encouraging new

Edward Lucius stops the music to get more pop out of the trumpets. The Thurston High School Band director is serious about preparing the student musicians for an upcoming European tour, but wants to make it fun as well. After all, this is supposed to be summer vacation and these kids rehearse from 8 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday. "I'm so proud of the kids," said

Austria, July 9. "They've been working hard after working all fall with marching band and during the winter and spring to perform at festivals and competitions.' None of the students seem to mind the rigorous rehearsal schedule though. Only a few have ever been to Europe before so they're excited about the trip. Cathy Rybka isn't really complaining when she says

African-American photographers were not only achieving success but recording the likenesses of leading political and cultural figures. C.M. Battey's portraits of Booker T. Washington (1908) and W.E.B. Du Bois (1999 print from a 1918 photograyure) were part of a series published and sold throughout the country.

Well-known studio photographer James VanDerZee captured the spirit of Harlem for more than 60 years and left an archive of more than 15,000 images, including a 1932 photograph showing a prosperous middleclass couple in raccoon coats posed with an automobile.

"There's great street photography and portraiture," said Barr. On the other side of the wall are Gordon Parks' portraits of Ella Watson, a cleaning woman struggling to raise grandchildren and an adopted daughter. The first section shows daily life in homes, the Tuskegee Institute. There are folks playing checkers, a baseball team. It shows the diversity of the community, all the different ways they lived. These are not just stereotypic. There's a lot of dignity."

Many firsts were included in the success stories. Cole was one of the first black studio photographers in the Cleveland area in the early 1920s. Augustus Washington was the first black to own a studio in St. Paul, Minn. Florestine Perrault Collins broke boundaries as well. She worked in a New Orleans studio in the 1920s and '30s but initially passed for white to work as a photographer's assistant in

"I've learned a lot in the process of preparing for and installing this exhibit," said Barr. "We were all waiting for Deb Willis' research to get published. We all knew these African-American photographers were out there but never knew who they were."

Section two showcases the work of Milton Hinton, a jazz musician as well as a photographer. His access to backstage and dressing rooms allowed him to make photographs where few lensmen had gone before. Hinton was in the television studio in the 1950s with Billie Holiday and Count Basie and on the streets of Harlem with Lester Young and Roy Eldridge.

Morgan and Marvin Smith documented a concert by Ella Fitzgerald and Chick Webb at the Savoy Ballroom in 1938. Ernest Withers captured the duality of life in Memphis two decades later. Withers' photograph of Elvis Presley and B.B. King is in sharp contrast to the reality of his image focusing on a colored waiting room sign in the 1960s.

"For a white rock 'n' roller to be seen with a black blues man was pretty unprecedented in this time," said Barr.

Ulysses Kay, and Charles Wuorinen. Over the years, such illustrious musicians as Itzhak Perlman, Jessye Norman, Leonard Bernstein, James Galway, and Jean-Pierre Rampal have appeared in concert.

"It had been all volunteer and now we have a talented staff," said Beznos, a Franklin resident who taught English at Wayne State University before joining the Chamber Music Society of Detroit. "We just announced a Charitable Planned Giving Campaign. We're building the organization to make it stronger.

"We're now selling our own tickets to increase the convenience for people and to keep prices lower."

And there's more variety in the series, said Beznos. This year, the eight-concert season spotlights the talents of violinist Joshua Bell, pianists Emmanuel Ax, Yefim Bronfman and Daniel Barenboim, the Shanghai Quartet, Fleisher-Jolley-Tree Trio, Borromeo String Quartet, and Miami String Quartet at the Seligman Performing Arts Center in Beverly Hills and Orchestra Hall in Detroit.

"It's going to be an extraordinary season," said Beznos. "Daniel Barenboim hasn't been in this area for decades. He performs very few recitals because he's conductor of the Chicago Symphony. There's lots of lead-up activities. He's a spokesperson for the Middle East so we're contacting local Jews and Arabs and creating a dialogue. We're reaching into areas of the community we haven't before.

"Some of the other highlights are Joshua Bell; he's a fabulous violinist. The Emmanuel Ax and Yefim Bronfman concert we'll have two stars performing. If we had either it would be wonderful but to have both and to do rarely heard two piano repertoire."

Beznos is encouraging chamber music lovers not to wait to purchase tickets. Subscriptions for the eight-concert series range from $158 to $482 for box seats at Orchestra Hall and on stage seating at the Seligman Center.

"I'm not sure everyone's aware how important this is to have in their neighborhood and not to wait. The best seats go first. We've already gone beyond last year's total subscription sales and the brochures were just mailed," said Beznos.

"I love the music and the Chamber Music Society is the 10th oldest such organization in the U.S. (recognized by Chamber Music America) with one of the largest subscription bases. It's important for metro area audiences who long to hear the music performed live."

"The reason I wanted to go was to experience all of the different cultures and languages," said Jessica Maxer. "I especially want to go to Venice because it's on the water and to hear the Italian language."

Reasons for going vary from an opportunity to meet cute foreign boys to Christopher Mumaw wanting to get "away from my parents and brothers for two weeks," but all agree this is the chance of a lifetime. Melissa Wafer is especially looking forward to the end of the trip when she, her mother and sister travel to Greece to visit relatives for the first time.

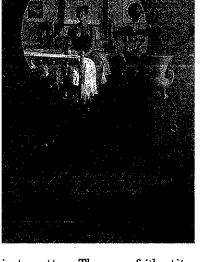

"It's nice because kids get the opportunity to share their music," said Lucius who took over as band director in 1989. This is his second tour with the students. "Many of these kids may never get the opportunity to go back. They spend the vast majority of their education reading about it. These kids have the experience. They're literally walking through history, standing where William Tell shot the apple. They get to walk through the palaces where people ruled the country."

But my favorite part is watching the kids experience these new surroundings, the incredibly beautiful setting that they tour and perform in. By the 1970s many African-Americans began studying photography and redefining the image but never forgot history. They brought insight to the past and challenged viewers to relate their own experiences to the subject matter. Themes of identity, spirituality and family are prevalent in contemporary African-American photography. New approaches to portraiture include Donald Camp's use of pigment to dissolve the image. He creates a mystery while speaking of the fear and distrust of men.

Sweeping history of Detroit tells story of triumph, hope

This Is Detroit

This is Detroit: 1701-2001 By Arthur M. Woodford Wayne State University Press, $49.95

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

"This is Detroit" is the last in a series of Detroit histories from the Wayne State Press to celebrate the city's tricentennial, following the timeline "Detroit in its World Setting" and the richly illustrated "Frontier Metropolis: Picturing Early Detroit, 1701-1838."

Woodford, a professional librarian, writes an easy-to-read survey of the city's history, actually beginning well before the French established a strategic post on the bend of the Detroit River. The large format provides for scores of pictures, including two attractive color sections. Woodford's purpose in recognition of the city's anniversary is to show Detroit's importance to the military, political, economic and cultural history of the coun-

Any history of Detroit is really a history of southeast Michigan, which slowly spread out from the core city. It is a history of a diverse population which has known both fierce combat and monumental cooperation.

Woodford arranges his book both chronologically and by subject, focusing on different aspects of the city such as its ethnic diversity, racial divisions and triumphs, the all important automobile industry and cultural contributions.

We are all familiar with Detroit's recent history. Since the 1967 riot, the city has been plagued by economic decline caused by the movement of middle-class white residents from the city and the pull out of major retail, office and industrial business; a frightening crime rate; a decaying physical presence; and a general sense of urban despair.

Upbeat view

Woodford doesn't flinch from discussing these things, but his purpose is not to make a deep analysis of what happened or why. In the spirit of an anniversary book, Woodford concludes on the upbeat, noting the developments in the Fox entertainment area, Compuware at Campus Martius and the Cultural Center; the steep drop in crime with the improved '90s economy; and a more positive suburbanurban alliance since Dennis Archer became mayor.

But it isn't recent history that makes the book most interesting or valuable. It is instead the rich history that has brought us to this point. This is such an attractive and easy to read book that it would serve well as a text for a high school course in local histo-

People have been living in the Detroit area for thousands of years. When the French began exploring this area, several Native American tribes were hunting and meeting in the Detroit area.

tary settlement was on Mackinac Island. But Antoine Cadillac decided it was important to establish a permanent settlement in a more hospitable area and he chose the advantageous area where the strait (le Detroit in French) connecting Lake Erie with Lake St. Clair makes a bend. French tradition

The first major French mili-

It was the French who began farming on "ribbon" farms long, narrow property, each having a front on the river. Following the French-Indian War, British flags flew over Detroit and the small but strategically well-placed town grew slowly.

Detroit became an American town after the Revolutionary War. This section of Woodford's account is enlivened by paintings, drawings, photos of artifacts and maps.

Steam-powered boats and the dvance work of Michigan's preeminent 19th Century political figure, Lewis Cass, helped bring new settlers to the bend in the river, where land was abundant. Though opinions of Cass as a national figure differ. Woodford notes his singular importance to the history of Michigan as political leader and cheerleader for settlement. Life for settlers wasn't always easy. There were several cholera plagues and a devastating fire in 1805 completely destroyed the frontier development, leading to a rebuilding and a redesign. Judge Augustus Woodward laid out a plan for the city based on Washington, D.C., involving a pattern of streets built around circles. Though eventually abandoned, the plan is still visible in the lay out of downtown Detroit. Woodford catalogues the changing city layout with several interesting maps.

Before the Civil War, Detroit promising future.

established itself as a crucial stop on the Underground Railroad, moving fugitive slaves across the river to Canada. During the war, Detroit and Michigan were among the first to volunteer for service at Lincoln's call. On the other hand, Detroit's Irish rose up and rioted in 1863 to protest the conscription law (as they did in New York). Woodford is careful about establishing the long history of racial problems in the city.

Arsenal of democracy

Detroit's importance to the nation grew following the war and the development of Detroit as a major industrial site, because of its central location on the lakes and its access to natural resources. It was not by chance that Detroit became the auto capital of the world. Woodford does a fine job of outlining the history of Detroit's most important industry in the context of its industrial background;

Detroit, of course, became critical to the country's war efforts in World Wars I and II as the "Arsenal of Democracy."

Woodford also chronicles the efforts of workers to achieve economic justice in a chapter on the development of unions, particularly the UAW. Another chapter tells the history of African-Americans' efforts to win social and economic justice.

Other chapters deal with the city's passion for all sports and its many champions and the city's cultural achievements dating from the esteemed Opera House built in 1868 (and once the first home of J.L. Hudson's store) to the dominance of Motown in the popular music of the 1960s.

It's nice to be reminded that we live in an interesting place with a great past and a still

Mall web site lets shoppers know about weekly sales

CARI WALDMAN

Ever wish you could find out what's on sale at the mall before actually setting foot in the door?

I took a trip to www.greatlakescrossing.com, the web site of Great Lakes Crossing, a more than 1-millionsquare-foot shopping center that houses outlet stores and entertainment and dining venues in Auburn Hills.

There, I found out I could do just that by browsing the site's sale listings from more than 200 retailers and a whole lot more.

The site, which is easy to use and uncluttered, is part shopping and part service.

With so much to do, and so little time to shop, come along on my tour of www.greatlakescrossing.com.

Download this

When I accessed the site for the first time, I wasn't a greatlakescrossing.com member.

The member service is a complimentary one, so I created a password for myself and registered for two site benefits bound to make my life - and any avid shopper's - easier.

The first benefit is a weekly e-mail bulletin that posts sales, new merchandise and promotions available at Great Lakes Crossing.

What I think is great about the email bulletin is it's a custom service. When signing up, I selected the mall stores which I want sale information about. In other words, no extra junk mail on my desk top.

And, right now, those who sign up for the e-mail bulletin will be registered to win a shopping spree giveaway. Each week for the next four weeks Great Lakes Crossing will hand over $1,000 in gift certificates to a site member registered for the email bulletin.

I also signed up for the gift-giving reminder service. Here, I simply typed in significant dates that I want to be notified about.

Local company makes swim wear for real women, takes custom orders

Sulting women: Debbie McKeown, a manager and suit fitter for Exelnt Designs Swimwear, talks about how the company's handmade swimsuits helps women hide figure flaws and showcase their best features. With retail locations in West Bloomfield and Warren, the business offers both ready-to-wear and custom bathing suits.

BY NICOLE STAFFORD STAFF WRITER nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

There isn't a woman on the planet who doesn't dread that fateful search for a bathing suit.

"It's the worst thing a woman has to do," says Debbie McKeown, a manager and suit fitter for Exelnt Designs Swimwear, a local business that makes custom bathing suits. The company also has two retail stores, one in West Bloomfield in The Boardwalk on Orchard Lake Road and another in Warren.

"Most women come in and say 'I want something up to my chin and down to my knees," says McKeown.

But just as sportswear and career apparel has evolved to better address the concerns and lifestyles of average women so has swim wear.

Long gone are the days when the two pieces of a bikini were exclusively sold as one unit.

Today, women in search of twopiece swimwear expect department stores and specialty retailers to stock separates in a variety of sizes and styles for mixing and matching.

Swimwear in West Bloomfield, which opened last December, not only stocks a generous selection of bikini separates but also creates bathing suits from scratch according to customer specifica-

Custom suits range in price from $100 to $180 and are ready to pick up between 10 days and two weeks after placing an order.

Swimwear designer and owner of Exelnt Designs Swimwear Trish Karalla, who lives in Harrison Township, started the business in 1984 after making a bathing suit for herself.

"I just couldn't find a suit for myself so I made one. Then, my girlfriends wanted me to make suits for them," says Karalla. "Eventually, it just got to the point where I was spending every evening cutting and making suits."

Because the majority of women find suit shopping difficult and so many go home dissatisfied, Karalla says her work is extremely gratifying. "I always say God put me on the earth to make women feel good in a swimsuit."

And all of Karalla's designs not just her custom garments are constructed with women's body concerns in mind.

All pieces are lined with a control fabric and have bottoms that are cut fuller around the derriere.

Many styles have under-wire support on top. Other designs feature wide-set straps to offset wide hips and bottom cuts that lengthen and slim legs.

Pleating and wrap styles are used to hide body flaws, while seams work to accentuate the female form.

Karalla also offers a sarong, wrap or cover-up piece for each of her suit collections.

Ready-to-wear pieces are priced $66-137, and store staff, much like traditional undergarment fitters, take an active role in helping customers select and try on suits.

The Exelnt Designs Swimwear store in West Bloomfield, 6883 Orchard Lake Road in The Boardwalk, can be reached at (248) 865-7330. The Warren store is located at 5751 East 13 Mile Road at Mound, call (810) 977-

Suit sense

■ Try on a size larger than you normally wear.

■ Keep in mind what you'll be doing in your swimsuit. Are you planning to sun bathe or are you racing after kids at the beach?

■ Bend over, sit, walk and even jump when trying on a bathing suit to make sure it fits and stays in

■ Take advantage of mix-and-match separates and special sizing. ■ Get a second opinion before buying a bathing suit.

■ Invest in a sarong or skirt to go with your suit.

■ Suits with spandex, 15 percent or more, help battle problem areas.

■ To distract from wide hips or a larger belly, buy a suit with a strategically placed color block. ■ If you're bigger on the bottom than the top, wide-set straps offset wide hips.

■ Enhance a smaller chest with a top that has texture, such as ruffles, padding or an underwire.

■ Minimize a larger chest with a neck cut that is high or square, but always opt for good top sup-

■ A wider cut bottom will counterbalance a larger top. Give short legs length with a suit cut high on the hip.

■ Boyish figures seem to have a waist in suits with a thin belt, wrap front or color blocking that accents the waist.

On the rocks: Part of what is considered the gateway to the Rocky Mountains is the Garden of the Gods, which offers visitors an almost-desert-like land-

Colorado's breathtaking views seem endless year-round

By Don Schelske Staff Writer

The mountains really appear to be purple.

When Katharine Lee Bates visited Colorado's Pike's Peak, she was inspired to write of the "purple mountain majesties" and other beauties of creation in the song, America the Beautiful. Each year, thousands of travelers discover the sensation of having their heads in the clouds while their feet are firmly planted on the ground.

In the I-25 corridor between Denver and Colorado Springs, both scenic and manmade attractions form the gateway to the Rocky Mountains. It's an area where frontier traditions and modern amenities seem to have mixed well.

Known as the "mile high city"
— an elevation of 5,280 feet, for those who remember from school

— Denver has its own attractions, but is nowhere near the pinnacle for sightseers. Colorado feet. Both pale in comparison with Pike's Peak, however, and other "points" of interest known collectively as "the Fourteeners," so named for their elevation of more than 14,000 square feet.

A trip to the top of Pike's Peak is made possible either by motor vehicle (with many advisories concerning potential damage by excessive braking or use of air conditioning) or by the Pikes Peak Cog Railway (a 3.5-hour round trip that includes a great view of the landscape and mountain wildlife). Regardless of the mode of transportation, travelers are strongly advised to brace for lower temperatures and thinner air at the summit. Drinking lots of water at the top helps make up for the lack of oxygen in the

Those not quite as adventurous can still enjoy a view of the heights without going all the way up. Several roads have been given "scenic" designation, and driving tour options are numerous. A loop of sorts is created by US-285 out of Denver connects with US-24 out of Colorado Springs. Along the latter are roadside turnouts allowing a great view of the "collegiate peaks" such as Mt. Harvard, Mt. Yale, Mt. Princeton, etc. The small town of Buena Vista is a pleasant place to stop, or motorists may choose to turn off onto a county road that leads up to the Continental Divide.

Tip: Many scenic drives carry cautions such as "weather permitting" or "falling rock zones," so plan alternate routes in advance.

US-24 also leads to the town of Cripple Creek, home of an abandoned vertical-shaft gold mine that gives tours and free ore samples which, if melted in a ceramic kiln, will likely yield a couple grams of the good stuff. The town itself, once a thriving center of commerce when prospectors filled the area, now lures tourists with a different kind of temptation to strike it rich; virtually the entire central business district has been converted into casinos.

If you're going...

B Planning ahead takes on new meaning for Rocky Mountain country. Expect cooler temperatures in higher elevations, and be sure your vehicle is prepared if you plan mountain driving. In addition to potential problems from heavy braking and use of air conditioning, some roads may be closed because of weather or falling rocks. Have alternative routes at the ready.

■ If traveling by car, Denver is accessible via I-76 from I-80. If a more southerly cross-country route is desired, I-70 to US-24 will lead to Colorado Springs. Air travelers can fly into either Denver International Airport or Colorado Springs Airport. Commercial bus lines serve both cities, while rail travel is possible to Denver only.

■ Because the area is also a Mecca for skiers, there are two brief "off seasons."

Lower lodging prices tend to be available in early spring and late fall.

■ More information is available from the Colorado Springs Convention & Visitors Center, 104 S. Cascade, Suite 104, Colorado Springs, CO 80903 (www.coloradosprings-travel.com); the Pikes Peak Country Attractions Association, 354 Manitou Ave., Manitou Springs, CO 80829 (www.pikes-peak.com); and the Denver Metro Convention & Visitors Bureau, 1668 Larimer St., Denver, CO 80202 (www.denver.org/visitors).

Other places of natural beauty include Garden of the Gods, a 1,300-acre park allowing tourists free access to a place where the Great Plains meet the Rockies. Red sandstone formations are the focus of awe for most, but a variety of flora and fauna provide diversity to the landscape

west of Denver, serving as a

Those looking for more urban attractions can be well served by destinations such as the U.S. Air Force Academy near Colorado Springs. In addition to seeing cadets in close order drill at various times of the day, the campus chapel is a place for both spiritual reflection and architectural admiration.

Winemaker travels back to the future

In vintage 2000, Napa Valley's Robert Mondavi winery literally went back to the future in a new state-of-

Several years ago, Michael Mondavi, president and CEO of the family winery, and his brother Tim, managing director and winegrower, discussed updating their flagship winery in the heart of California's Napa Valley.

Built in 1966 by their father Robert, as the first winery in the world committed to using stainless steel fermentors, and expanded in 1968 to make 50,000 cases annually, it was operating at 10 times that.

The visitor center originally constructed to greet 50,000 guests, was hosting 450,000 annually. Expansion of every aspect at the Oakville winery was not possible. Since it was most obsolete, the Mondavis agreed to redo the fermentation facility and to concendecided to go back to the future and begin to ferment our best red wines in oak fermentors."

Tim insisted there was a difference in red wines fermented in oak, rather than in stainless steel. Michael remained skeptical so Tim organized a tasting of several experimental cabernet sauvignons, where the only variable was the fermentor. The oak-fermented wines were more pleasing with better mouthfeel.

Oak upright fermentors are esthetically beautiful, cost 50 percent more than a stainless steel tank of the same size, but from a qualitative point of view, the Mondavis believe they give red wines a softness and elegance that sets them apart. From our tasting, we agree. As young red wines, they have a richer mouthfeel with greater flavor, complexity and intensity, yet delicate

The changeover

Crafted by Tonnellerie Taransaud in Cognac, 56 French oak upright 5,000gallon capacity fermentors were disassembled and shipped to the U.S.

In the summer of 2000, a team of 14 French coopers took three weeks to reassemble the oak uprights in the new Robert Mondavi Winery for first use in vintage 2000.

French oak uprights function similarly to a barrel, without adding oak character to the wine. Even though they are toasted inside, they do not add a toasty or a vanilla character, but do promote greater complexity and better integration of tannins. Grapes fermented in the new oak upright fermentors in vintage 2000 came from To Kalon, the Mondavis prized cabernet sauvignon vineyard, which has significant firm grape tannins.

Plate of color:Gucchi Takayuki, general manager at Noble Fish in Clawson, arranges eye-appealing sushi on a plate. Takayuki insists the average cook can make the Japanese food at home with a little practice.

By NICOLE STAFFORD STAFF WRITER

nstafford@oe.homecomm.net hether you're a seasoned sushi connoisseur or still mustering up the courage to consume your first tuna roll, the idea of preparing the bite size Japanese food at home seems a bit far-fetched.

With its bright colors, delicate size and ingenious presentation, sushi has the intimidating power of fine art. But just because it looks difficult to make, doesn't mean it is.

Having reached that very realization, an increasing number sushi lovers are purchasing the necessary tools and ingredients for home preparation, says Gucchi Takayuki, general manager at Noble Fish, a sushi bar and Japanese market in Clawson where the average lunch crowd exceeds 100 diners.

"They eat here for a while, then finally they buy the ingredients and make their own," says

Takayuki. Beyond the cost savings, making sushi at home is good, clean - the sticky rice can be awful messy -

A growing trend among Takayuki's customers is the sushi party, which allows family and friends to get together in the kitchen and prepare their own meal or appetizer.

As with all cooking, there are techniques for making sushi and, as they say, practice makes perfect. "Try often," jokes Takayuki. "That's the best rule."

But Takayuki is quick to dismiss the idea that sushi need attain a level of aesthetic appeal to be savored.

"Don't worry," he says. "It if falls apart, just enjoy making it and eating it."

If there's an attitude to take with sushi, it's a lighthearted one, he says. After all, the food is associated with revelry and merrymaking in his country. "In Japan, sushi is a celebration food. When somebody dies, we don't eat sushi. When something bad happens, we don't eat sushi. Sushi is to enjoy. That's what it's all about."

Before technique comes shopping

The best place to start is probably an Asian market like Noble Fish where you can purchase both the ingredients and the tools you'll need to make sushi at home. Noble Fish also sells a sushi cookbook (Quick & Easy Sushi by Heihachiro Tohyama and Yukiko Morivama, $19.95) with recipes, instructions and illustrations.

Required tools and ingredients are a bamboo mat to roll the sushi, short grain Japanese sushi rice, rice wine vinegar, nori seaweed sheets and fillings for your sushi. Sushi chefs work with a special sushi knife, but Takayuki says a chef knife will do the job.

Sushi accouterments include soy sauce (the type used in any Asian cooking will suffice), wasabi paste, a spicy horseradish that comes already pre-

Raw fish for sushi

Fish that is eaten raw as sushi must be prepared from fish that has been out of the water no longer than 24 hours.

Characteristics of fresh fish include: bright, clear and full eyes; bright red gills: bright sheen on scales; firm or rigid body when pressed with fingers; elastic flesh that does not separate from bones or indent; sweet taste; and cucumber-like odor.

■ Signs fish is old include: strong or "fishy odor; milky or sullen eyes; muddy, gray scales; blemishes on scales or a slimy surface; red patches on ventral area; leathery appearance; and yellowing, browning or drying of flesh.

pared in a tube or in powder form to mix with water, and sweet pickled ginger, which can be purchased at an Asian market.

And though you probably won't find a bamboo rolling mat at your neighborhood supermarket, many sushi ingredients are stocked in the Asian foods section of large grocery stores. When using raw fish, you must have no doubt what you're purchasing is fresh and suitable for sushi. And a fish market or fish monger is probably the best place from which to make your purchase. Raw fish in sushi ha been removed from the water 24 hours ago or less. Again, if you have any doubts, don't eat the fish in raw form. You can always use cooked fish in

Also, don't use fresh water species. It's not used in sushi because of the possible presence of parasites.

In the kitchen

The next step is preparing your rice and sushi fillings. What's crucial here is how the rice is prepared and handled.

Generally speaking, ingredients for sushi are cut into long strips. If you're including raw fish, ask your fish monger to prepare each fillet for use in sushi.

Before cooking rice, wash it in a big bowl of water, rubbing grains gently. Drain off the water and repeat this step until the water is almost clear.

In general, equal amounts of rice and water are sufficient when cooking sushi rice, but preparing two cups rather than one is preferable. And while an automatic Japanese rice cooker is ideal, a Dutch oven or pot with a fitted lid and good heat distribution will do the

Just be sure to carefully measure rice and water and allow your rice to sit for 30 minutes in the summer and an hour in the winter before cooking (For detailed instructions, see Cooking Sushi Rice and Preparing Rice for Sushi).

Ready to roll

When all your ingredients are ready, set them out in containers near a clean, dry work surface. Since sushi rice is sticky and difficult to handle, fill a small bowl with ice water and mix in about a tablespoon of rice wine vinegar. After handling rice, dip fingers into the bowl to remove rice and clean hands.

Once only grown in India, mangoes now are enjoyed worldwide

Mangoes have been cultivated in India for more than 4,000 years. The Indians believe that the mango tree was born from the ashes of the sun god's daughter.

The Portuguese were the first Europeans to discover the fruit and translated its Tamil name from mankay to manga. They introduced the mango tree into Africa during the 16th century.

From there, the tree made its way to Brazil and Mexico and then to the southern United States where production grew quite high.

Enjoy them fresh

Today, the mango is the third most frequently consumed fruit in the world and is considered an exotic species. Although they once required specific climatic and cultural conditions, selective breeding and new techniques allows consumers to enjoy fresh mangoes.

Mangoes present themselves in a wide variety of colors. The Indian Langra are jade-colored, the Romani are rose, the American Haden are purple, and the Sandersasha are speckled with gray. In Jamaica, they are black. The fruit's tough multicolored skin protects the sweet, juicy pulp, colored yellow or orange. The flesh surrounds a large, flat, fibrous pit, which smells like turpentine.

For varieties, Beznos hears "buzz words" like Irwin, Haden, Keitt, Kent, and Atkins.

Beznos suggests cutting the fruit in half, peeling it, and slicing around the large seed. Avoid buying the ones with bruises

Grief seminar

Ward Presbyterian Church is sponsoring a one-day grief seminar, From Grief to New Hope, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, July 21. The seminar will be conducted by Cathy Clough, director of New Hope Center for Grief Support. All adults learning to cope after the death of a loved one are encouraged to attend.

There is no charge for the seminar, but a $7 donation to cover the cost of a continental breakfast and lunch is requested. Ward Church is located at Six Mile Road and Haggerty in Northville. To register, call Dorothy at Ward Church at (248) 374-5966 or New Hope Center at (248) 348-0115.

Garden City Hospital

Garden City Hospital announced that its MedStop Clinic facility on Plymouth Road in Livonia will become part of the provider network of Midwest Health Center. Med Stop has been owned and operated by the hospital since 1988, providing family practice, urgent care and occupational medicine services to area residents and businesses.

Midwest Health Center, headquartered in Dearborn, operates several health care facilities and an HMO (Midwest Health Plan). It serves Detroit, western Wayne County and the Downriver areas. The Livonia location will be called Midwest Health Center - Livonia.

"For both organizations the timing could not have been better," said Mark Safar, owner of Midwest. "With our experience in occupational medicine and Garden City Hospital's recently expanded emergency department, we should be able to provide an improved occupational medicine service to employers in the Livonia area."

Bee sting allergies

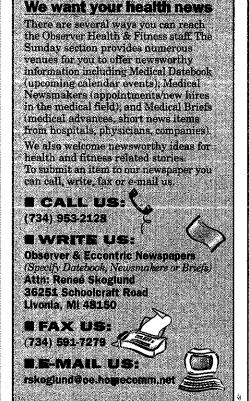

According to the American College of Asthma, Allergy and Immunology one to two percent of the population will suffer an allergic reaction to an insect sting. The reaction is characterized by hives, itching and swelling in areas other than the sting site; tightness in the chest and difficulty in breathing; dizziness or a sharp drop in blood pressure; unconsciousness or cardiac arrest.

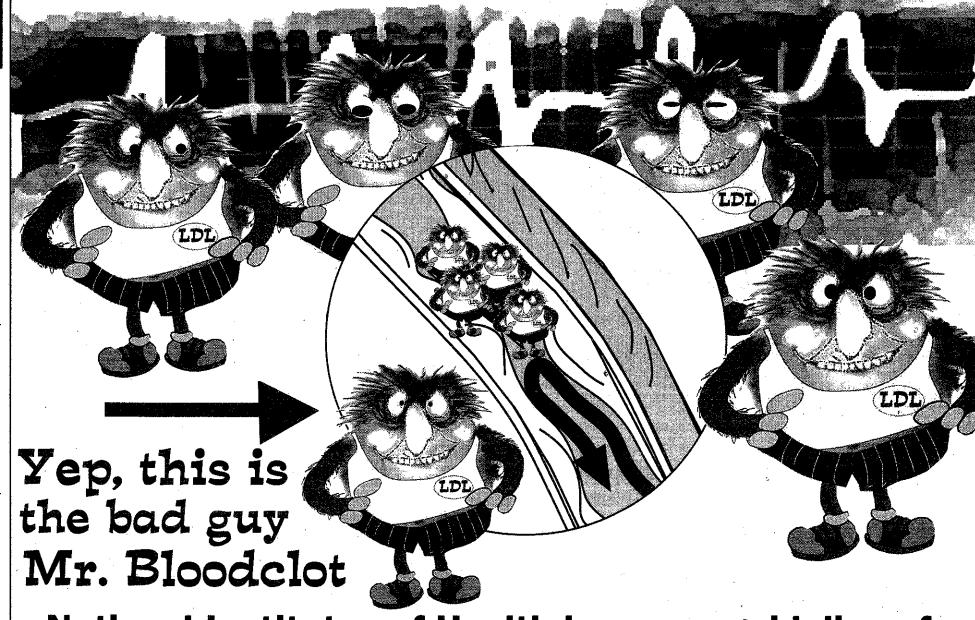

An allergic reaction can occur minutes after the sting and can be lifethreatening. Immediate medical attention is required and may involve the administration of certain drugs and in some cases intravenous fluids, oxygen and other treatments. Because there is a 60 percent likelihood of a recurrence upon re-sting, allergic patients should seek follow-up care from an allergist.

However, there is good news for the 2 million Americans who suffer from potentially life-threatening allergic reactions and the crippling fear associated with them.

The specialist may prescribe an insect sting kit for emergency treatment and/or immunotherapy, a highly effective vaccination program for lifelong protection against allergic reactions. A study recently published in the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology showed that most people allergic to insect stings who undergo a two-year vaccination program will have a permanent loss of allergy.

National Institutes of Health has new guidelines for

CHOLESTEROL MANAGEMENT

BY RENÉE SKOGLUND STAFF WRITER rskoglund@oe.homecomm.net

ust when you thought you had the numbers right, they go and change them. We're talking cholesterol – the good, the bad and the downright ugly.

New guidelines recently published by the National Cholesterol Education Program are expected to substantially increase the number of Americans being treated for high cholesterol, raising the number on dietary treatment from about 52 million to about 65 million and acreasing the number prescribed a cholesterol-lowering drug from about 13 million to about 36 million.

The new guidelines, summarized in a report known as the Adult Treatment Panel (ATP) III, are the first major update from NCEP in nearly a decade

To understand cholesterol, think of it in terms of "good" and "bad." High-density lipoprotein, or HDL, is the "good" cholesterol that sweeps through arteries, flushing out debris in its wake; low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, is the "bad" cholesterol, responsible for plaque buildup and blood clots. The higher your HDL number and the lower your LDL, the better your future of living with a healthy heart.

ATP III guidelines have lowered the desirable levels of LDLs. Even young, healthy people whose total cholesterol is less than 200 milligrams per deciliter (mg/dL) should not have an LDL level above 160 mg/dL.

The guidelines recommend that all adults over 20 have a 12-hour fasting cholesterol test. The fasting test is also recommended for anyone whose total cholesterol is over 200 and/or whose HDL is below 40.

Not pretty

To visualize the impact of LDL, consider this defi-

Americans need to act now to prevent that future heart attack or heart disease itself. Every risk factor needs to be treated."

-Dr. James Cleman

NCEP coordinator

"An LDL is the little particle in the blood that contains cholesterol. That particle infiltrates the wall of the artery. The cells injest those particles, swell and create the arteriosclerotic plaque. And when the cells rupture, the fatty material is just sitting there. It's not a pretty picture," said Dr. Melvyn Rubenfire, professor of internal medicine and director of Preventative Cardiology at the University of Michigan Hospital.

For doctors, total cholesterol is no longer the most significant factor in assessing a patient's risk for heart disease, said Rubenfire. "We're focusing on the LDL. If the risk of a coronary event is 2 percent a year or 20 percent over a tenyear period, you start treating people whose LDL is over 130"

Americans at high risk for a heart attack often go unidentified and don't receive aggressive treatment, said Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which coordinates the National Cholesterol Education Program.

"Yet, studies show conclusively that lowering the level of LDL, the 'bad' cholesterol, can reduce the short-term risk for heart disease by as much as 40 percent," he said. "Treatment may lower risk over the long-term, beyond 10 years and even more. That's why, while the intensity of treatment in ATP III is stepped up, its primary aim remains squarely on lowering LDL."

Assessing risks

"The ATP III approach looks at 'overall' risk for a heart attack, which means in the short and long term," said Dr. James Cleman, NCEP coordinator. "That's important because, although risk typically increases with age, the foundation for heart disease is often laid in adolescence and early adulthood. So Americans need to act now to prevent that future heart attack or heart disease itself. Every risk factor needs to be treated."

The quidelines urge physicians to:

Treat high cholesterol more aggressively for those with diabetes. Besides their very high short-term risk for having a coronary event, persons with Type 2 diabetes – non-insulin dependent diabetes, the most common form of the disease – also have a high risk of dying from a heart attack.

Use a lipoprotein profile, or 12-hour fasting test, as the first test for high cholesterol. A lipoprotein profile measures levels of LDL, total cholesterol, HDL, and triglycerides, another fatty substance in the blood. Healthy adults should have a

This year, Alex's brother Ben, 9, joined him at camp, held at Camp Cavell in Lexington, Mich. June 24-30. Both boys have a neuromuscular disease, but together and with the help of their attendants, they spent the week making arts and crafts, and playing sports. They also enjoyed squirting volunteers with squirt guns, much to Alex's delight.

"Camp is very uplifting and rewarding," said volunteer attendant Amy Hepper of Warren. "It's a lot of fun. There are so many different types of people here that there's no judgment."

Since 1955, young people ages 6-21 with neuromuscular disease have attended MDA summer camps. Hundreds of volunteers staff the camps and donate countless hours to ensure that each camper enjoys activities tailored to his or her special needs. Campers play a wide range of games, including euchre, football and softball. They also participate in a magic show and a tug-of-war.

It costs MDA $450 per child to provide the campers with this unique experience. The camp is underwritten entirely by the generous support of local corporations and individuals. These and other donors will be recognized on Labor Day weekend (Sept. 2-3) during the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon on WB20 Detroit. This year marks the 36th telethon.

Founded in 1950, the Muscular Dystrophy Association is a voluntary health organization dedicated to finding a cure for 40 neuromuscular diseases. MDA funds research worldwide and currently funds projects at the University of Michigan, Wayne State University and Michigan State University.

MDA operated 230 hospital-affiliated clinics across the country. Local clinics are located at Children's Hospital in Detroit and the Michigan Institute of Neuromuscular Disorders in Farmington Hills. Services include physical, occupational and respiratory therapy, genetic counseling and testing, social services consultations and year-round patient care.

A little sun goes a long way in causing permanent skin damage

Ann Arbor, Mich. - It's not just sun-worshippers basking on beaches and in backvards who should heed warnings about the damage the sun can cause.

Physicians at the University of Michigan Health System say everyone should beware. Any amount of unprotected sun exposure - for example, the walk from the car to the grocery store entrance - can contribute to genetic changes in the skin and lead to premature aging, brown spots, wrinkles, sagging skin, and eyen skin cancer.

"The sun damages the skin every single time it hits the skin," says John Voorhees, chair. Department of Dermatology, U-M Medical School. "It's simply a matter of degree. So, a tiny bit of sun gives you a tiny bit of damage and a little more gives you a little more damage and the problem is that it accumulates over time, causing the damage to be permanent.

The "healthy" tan that many people long for is anything but healthy. In fact, Voorhees says that a tan is the skin's way of saying that it's been damaged, and the darkening is the skin's way of providing its own sunscreen to block out further rays. Although a tan does provide a small amount of sun protection a sun protection factor, or SPF. of about two - that amount of protection is inadequate to prevent serious sun damage.

Many people think that if they do not get a sunburn, that How much is too much? they're home-free. "That's not the case at all," Voorhees says. "A sunburn is simply an indication of very gross, bad damage."

Sun protection for kids

"It is believed by many that melanoma, which is the worst form of skin cancer, is caused by exposure to sunlight when you're very young," Voorhees says.

Many believe that freckles just appear in children naturally. But in fact, Voorhees says, the majority of freckles, if not all, are sure signs of sun damage. "When you see that occurring in a child, of course, it's too late for those spots, but certainly that person needs tremendous sun protection."

Sun exposure causes damage to the genes in the skin, Voorhees says. And although the body has a mechanism that repairs the vast majority of the damage that occurs, it's not a perfect fix. Some of the damage always remains. A scar, called a solar scar, is left behind.

"You can't see these either in a microscope or with the naked eve." Voorhees says. "But, after exposure, after exposure, after exposure - maybe 100, 200, 500 exposures - these invisible scars in the skin coalesce to become a scar that you can see. That causes a wrinkle, or sagging skin, and essentially, you look old before your time because you have accelerated the aging process in your skin."

One or two damaging events are not enough to give someone skin cancer. But researchers have found that as the skin is subjected to more and more damaging events, the genes in the skin are mutated perma-

"And if you hit the right gene with the sun, you can end up with skin cancer," Voorhees says. "And skin cancer is the most common cancer in humans by a large margin."

Voorhees explains that the sun has some benefit. It helps to form Vitamin D that promotes the absorption of calcium and strong bones.

"One of the best protections is staying out of the sun during the peak brightness of sun from about 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.," he says. The second key item is when you're outside at any time, that you stay in the shade. And the third thing is to wear protective clothing; a large hat and longsleeved shirts.'

can't avoid the sun or wear protective clothing, use sunscreen as a fallback. "This is the opposite of what most people do. They use sunscreen first and then, if somehow they feel too hot or the sun appears too bright, they will go under a tree for a period of time or put on a hat. That is not the way it should be done."

He emphasizes that if you

Facts, resources regarding sun exposure

Excessive sun exposure can cause your skin to age prematurely, become leathery, wrinkled, and in some cases, may cause skin cancer.

■ The effects of the sun are cumulative over a lifetime. People usually receive most of their sun exposure by the age of 18, so protecting children from the sun is very important for their long-term health.

■ Researchers and physicians recommend staying out of the sun during the peak brightness of sun which is from about 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. When outside at any time, stay in the shade and wear protective clothing. The last line of defense should he sunscreen.

■ Sunscreens should be at least SPF 30 and broad-spectrum, blocking out both UVA and UVB. Read the fine print to ensure that one of the following two ingredients is present: Parsal 1789, or avobenzone. Apply sunscreen liberally!

■ Skin cancers are now the most common type of cancer. The most common type is called basal cell carcinoma. It is a slow-growing cancer that usually does not spread to other parts of the body. The secondmost common skin cancers are called squamous cell carcinomas. They grow more quickly and have been known to spread. The least common form, malignant melanoma, is the most serious. It arises on or next to moles. If it's not treated, it can spread - sometimes with fatal results.

Sunscreens

Sunscreens are not as effective as most people would believe, Voorhees says. The standardized tests used to determine SPF often use a larger amount of sunscreen than anyone would use when applying it to themselves.

"The problem is, that it's been shown by experimentation and by actual study that the average person puts on their skin somequarter the amount that is necessary to give them the SPF factor on the bottle," he says. "So, if you purchase a bottle of sunscreen that has an SPF of 40 and you put on one-quarter of the amount that it was tested under. you will be getting an SPF of 10 on your skin.'

"Be sure that what you're about to buy contains either Parsal 1789 or avobenzone," he says. "Those two terms describe the very same chemical. As long as you have one of those along with an SPF of 30 or greater, that's the best that you can do and apply it liberally."

OPERATING WHEN YOU ARE ALMOST WELL

You develop arthritis in your knees and possibly wrists or hands. Your doctor prescribes medicine, takes the fluid off your knees when needed, and recommends physical therapy to build up muscles and maintain your stamina Over a year or more, your arthritis resolves, but not quite. You need to return to the doctor repeatedly because one knee keeps swelling and requires repeated removal of excess fluid. You fee you may need more medicine to bring that knee under control. Instead, your doctor arranges for you to see an orthopedic surgeon for a knee synovectomy.

What happened was that the lining cells of the knee joint developed an exuberant synovitis for which the treatment is not more medicine, but removal of the excess knee tissue? The situation is like a lawn with thick high grass; the best solution isn't weed killer, but to mow the lawn.

Why the lining tissue grows excessively is unclear. What is known is that this tissue is not a cancer, and that once shaved down, the extra growth of lining cells does not return, This problem most often occurs in the knee, and people with psoriatic arthritis are most at risk for its occurrence. However, the same problem can appear with any arthritis, and oddly enough when Twenty years ago having a synovctomy meant your knee was stiff for and indeterminate period and required a rehabilitation period lasting months. Nowadays, orthopedists can perform a synovectomy via arthroscopy. You may stay overnight in the hospital and are walking well within

■ Pay attention to HDL levels. ATP III defines a low HDL as being less than 40 mg/dL. Previously, a low HDL was less than 35 mg/dL. New findings suggest a strong link between a low HDL and an increased risk for heart disease. An HDL level of 60 mg/dL or more is considered protective against heart disease.

■ Employ the guideline's "Therapeutic Lifestyle Changes" (TLC) treatment plan. The TLC diet includes limiting daily calories from saturated fat to 7 percent. However, it allows up to 35 percent of daily calories form total fat, provided most is from unsaturated fat, which doesn't raise cholesterol.

Encourage the use of foods that contain plant stanols and sterols (certain margarines and salad dressing) and foods high in soluble fiber (cereal grains, beans, peas, legumes, and many fruits and vegetables). Also, stress the need for weight control and exercise. Weight control lowers LDL and raises HDL, while physical activity improves HDL, and, for some, LDL.

■ Identify a "metabolic syndrome" of risk factors linked to insulin resistance. The syndrome includes factors such as too much abdominal fat (indicated by too large a waist measurement), elevated blood pressure, elevated triglycerides, and low HDL. Insulin controls the body's metabolism of carbohydrates, fats and protein.

"The metablolic syndrome has emerged as being as strong a contributor to early heart disease as cigarette smoking," said Dr. Scott Grundy, ATP III chairperson and director of the Center for Human Nutrition at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

■ Treat elevated triglycerides more aggressively. Recent studies indicate that an elevated triglyceride level is significantly linked to the degree of heart disease risk. Treat even borderlinehigh triglyceride levels with weight control and physical activity. Sometimes, for higher triglyceride levels, medication may be needed.

"The problem with triglycerides is that they are generally associated with a low HDL," said Rubenfire. A triglyceride level over 200 is dangerous and usually is associated with diabetes or excessive alcohol consumption, he added.

■ Advise against the use of hormone replacement therapy (HRT) as an alternative to cholesterol-lowering drugs. According to ATP III, studies have not shown that HRT reduces the risk for major coronary events or deaths among post-menopausal women who have heart disease. HRT also increases the risk for thromboembolism and gallbladder disease. In contrast, cholesterollowering drugs have been found to reduce coronary events in women without or without heart disease.

A warning

Although high cholesterol can be managed through lifestyle changes and medication, human nature may be physicians toughest patient. "People don't get too excited if they feel well. Young people don't think about mortality," said Rubenfire.

Yet, even moderate exercise can raise the levels of HDL, the "good" cholesterol, by 10 or 15 percent. It can raise it even more if you're overweight, said Rubenfire.

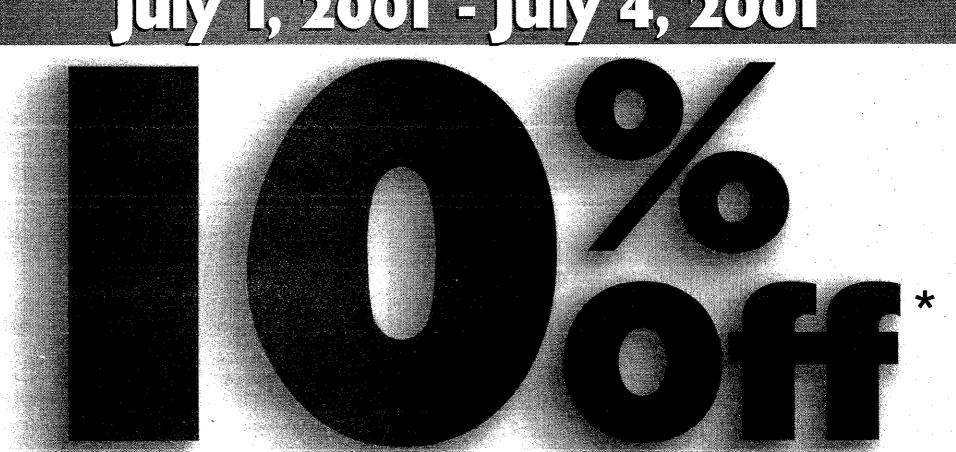

Prevention should begin people's 20s and 30s, he said. The arteriosclerotic process becomes very active in the 40s and 50s, and peaks in the early 60s. By then the damage is done.

And forget about blaming heart disease on heredity, he warned. "Seventy-five to 80 percent is lifestyle, not heredity. People blame it on heredity, but it's the interaction between heredity and the environment."

Amenities are big drawing card at Claremont

Claremont - one of five communities at The Oaklands - brings the reputation and tradition of luxury excellence of Moceri Builders to attached condominium construction.

Eighty residences, two together, are under construction off Silver Bell just east of Adams in Oakland Township.

"There's nothing like this in the area as far as luxury in a package in the condominium market," said Frank Moceri. "Nothing new with the high level of amenities we offer.

"This is a Mini-Me version of Carrollton Hills, one of the highest-end we're building," Moceri added.

We're including basically the same features in a smaller package for people who don't need as large a home but want the nice amenities we have in fine, luxury homes."

Moceri offers six floor plans at Clare-

They range in price from $430,000 for a ranch of 2,033 square feet with two bedrooms and two baths to $589,000 for a two story of 3,017 square feet with two bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

All include at base price two-car garage, first-floor laundry, deck, basement, fireplace and air conditioning.

Other basics include separate jet tub and shower in the master; double oven, cooktop, refrigerator and dishwasher in the kitchen Other luxury amenities include marble flooring in the foyer, wood in the kitchen/ nook, ceramic in the laundry and baths and carpeting throughout.

Crown moldings, recessed lights, solid core Masonite doors, wainscot paneling and columns also are stan-

Landscaping also is included.

Brick, wood siding and dimensional shingles are primary exterior materi-

"Equally important is exterior architecture design, the overall streetscape," said Karla A. Bodrie, sales associate. "The landscape package is going to be of high value.

"The privacy thing is important. You can have amenities like a walk-out (basement) and deck and still maintain privacy by the way the doors are positioned."

"The rear elevations were designed to look like a large home versus a multiple unit," Moceri said.

The grounds also will be attractive with fountains, ponds and a gazebo, Moceri added. I-75 is convenient, Bodrie said.

Four models have been constructed. Basements have been finished in all four. Everyone who has bought to date has selected the finished basement option that adds at least 1,100 square feet of living space.

Basements vary slightly and may include such elements as a bar, theater, bedroom, sitting area and bath.

Some highlights of the models: ■ The St. James, a two-story of 3,017 square feet excluding basement, features a two-way fireplace between the living room and hearth room/ kitchen/

The master features an optional step-up sitting area and fireplace, a pair of walk-in closets, two sink vanity and a separate sitting/ make-up area.

An optional elevator is available in the St. James for $40,000.

■ The Prescott, a story-and-a-half of 2,900 square feet excluding basement, features a library with cathedral ceiling, a great room with sloped ceiling, and two bedrooms upstairs, each with its own bath.

■ The Bancroft, a ranch of 2,033 square feet excluding basement, contains a living room with cathedral ceiling, dining room with pan ceiling and a master suite with an unusual hybrid ceiling.

■ The Whitehall, a story-and-a-half of 2,800 square feet excluding basement, features a two-way fireplace at the junction of the living room and dining room, a parlor and the master suite.

A bedroom, bath and room that can be used as a bedroom, craft room or exercise room are up.

Claremont is served by a well water system, sewers and sidewalks. It's within the Rochester school bound-

The property tax rate is $25.49 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $580,000 home there would pay about $7,400 the first

The monthly maintenance/ association fee, which includes water, is $360.

Vivian Wilson bought a home in Claremont..

"I do high-end real estate and had sold three of Moceri's homes in the last couple of years and knew what kind of builder he was - excellent," she said. "I bought a ranch and like the excellent use of space.

(NUE) - Think staying indoors will keep you safe from allergens? Think again.

Mold, house dust mites and animal dander may cause year-round nasal allergies with bothersome congestion, sneezing and itchy, runny nose.

But before you think of packing up and moving out, there's a better way to take control of the dust, mold and other allergens in your house. Just let "The Boss of Cleaning," Jeff Campbell, come to your home and clean it properly.

All you have to do is enter the Give Your Home the STAR Treatment contest, sponsored by Flonase (fluticasone propionate) Nasal Spray.

Campbell and his "Clean Team" will personally visit the homes of the three top winners and show them the Steps Toward Allergy Relief (The STAR Treatment) – a thorough, professional cleaning to reduce allergens. Campbell will also present each winner with a check for $5,000 to help them stock up on cleaning supplies.

"House dust mites, microscopic relatives of the spider, live in bedding, on upholstered furniture and in carpeting," said Jeff Campbell, president of The Clean Team, San Francisco's largest housecleaning service. "Other allergens, like pet dander and mold, are also prevalent in homes."

Dr. Deborah Fawcett, a Fellow of the American College of Asthma, Allergy and Immunology, will also visit the homes to discuss the health implications of an allergen-packed home.

"Indoor allergens are among the most common causes of nasal allergies, affecting an estimated 40 million Americans," said Fawcett.

"In fact, these allergens can linger in your home for a long period of time. For instance, it can take up to six months to get rid of cat allergen on your sofa. And, since dust mites reproduce rapidly, there may also be up to 2 million of them in your pillow, not to mention your bedding, upholstered furniture and carpets," Fawcett said.

For safety when walking can become more difficult, consider secured, low-pile carpeting instead of throw rugs and specify flat transitions between different kinds of flooring materials to reduce chances for trips and falls.

Don't let sprinkler systems leave you and your lawn high and dry

FROM HOME SERVICE STORE FOR AP WEEKLY FEATURES

There's no watering down the popularity of home lawn sprinkler systems, but homeowners can oversee installation without getting financially soaked.

It takes understanding of watering system options and a rational approach to dealing with installation contractors.

"If homeowners would take the time to look at the fundamental aspects of the job, the installation would go smoother, they'd spend less money and conserve water," says Sharon Mertins, a watering system expert for the Home Service Store.

Mertins says automatic spray systems are by far the most popular. Water pressure forces sprinkler heads to pop up to spray a 17-footdiameter section or full circle for a preset time.

Rotary and drip systems are other, lesser-used options.

"Rotary systems are great if you have a large unobstructed yard," says Mertins. Rotary heads provide a mammoth 70-foot swath of coverage. Drip systems conserve water although these are limited to reaching root systems in flower beds. The one system Mertins steers clients away from is a manual system which is more expensive to install.

Whatever system fits the bill, says Mertins, "It all depends on water pressure. If you don't have adequate pressure, you're sunk." The main water line in a home creates more pressure than systems connected to a sewer meter.

Spray systems boost pressure through a sequence of smaller and smaller diameter pipes as water nears the sprinkler head.

Contractors bid installation several ways. Most charge by the station the area covered by a spray head rather than running foot of pipe. Some installers bid on yard size or by materials and labor multiplied by a profit margin. Typical installation time for an average yard is 140

Any bid will include variables unique to each yard. Water-blocking obstructions, soil, slope of lot or labor-intensive work to run pipe beneath or around objects can increase your costs.

Mertins advises homeowners to ask for all-inclusive bids. "Make sure everything is included so you won't have surprises at the end," she says.

A turnkey bid isn't the only thing homeowners should demand from contractors.

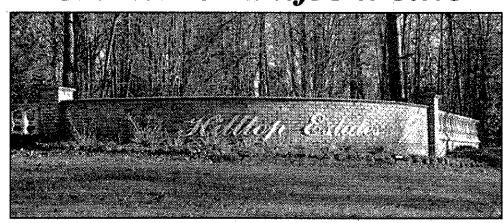

In a move to manage water resources, more than 30 states require that irrigation installation be done by licensed contractors. Homeowners should ask to see the installer's license. References and experience also count, says Mertins.

The homeowner also should insist that installers assume responsibility if utilities such as phone, gas and electricity lines are severed.

Contractors should also perform a back-flow inspection as part of their bid. Back-flow devices, also known as double checks, keep water flowing in one direction and stop the return of water into a city water system.

Mertins says homeowners should stipulate contractor grade materials be used throughout, especially if the installer must make a sudden trip to a home store for additional parts.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES INTERNET WOES

by GARY S. MEYERS

This week, The Meyers Report looks at ethics and the Internet, explaining how the challenges of tomorrow can and must be met with the philosophy of ages

ROOTED IN ETHICS

For all of its advancements the Internet's greatest trouble is ethics, an issue first raised thousands of years ago in the schools of ancient Greece. The risk is far more than philosophical, it is our present and future economy, and our personal freedom.

We seem to be hearing more and more about the dark side of the Internet — everything from pornography and fraud to massive break-ins and deliberate widespread damage. With every new report, politicians and computer experts scurry for answers, expressing shock and dismay, calling for measures to prevent future problems.

But are we truly justified in our horrified response? Perhaps not, said Charles Husson, a Virginia-based computer pioneer and Internet theorist.

"The Internet, for all of its attempts at security, still operates on the honor system," said Husson. "It was made to be totally accessible and userfriendly. The security systems are in place to keep honest people out, to turn them away if they stumble onto a site accidentally, or if they are not serious about causing trouble."
Husson likens the Internet's current state to a small town where most residents leave the doors unlocked, actually hoping for visitors.

"The problem is that there is no provision for ethical breaches," he said. "One assault in a quiet neighborhood terrorizes people for blocks around, when it was the very openness that invited trouble.

Husson, who teaches Internet technology in Virginia, explains that many of his college students regard ethics as irrelevant to the workings of the Internet.

Because the coding used for

Internet addresses employs very strict rules, he believes it is easy for anyone who understands them to misuse them. It can be as simple as hacking into a secure site, or as demonstrated recently, shutting down major Internet players by overloading their systems. The only thing holding most people back, is ethics.

"Ethics has to do with the ways in which we abide by our own moral code," Husson said.
"If one has no moral code, one has no ethics. Many of my students regard attacking secure sites as interesting challenges, or they rationalize it by claiming that they are helping to expose a site's vulnerability. They're street smart about the Internet, and that leads to a very pragmatic approach — in other words, an approach completely lacking in ethics. Too many young peo-ple do things, just to see if it can

This pragmatic approach takes the form of opportunistic and even predatory use of the web on a regular basis. In some cases, websites are used for fraud, to promote illegal activities, or simply to spread lies and propaganda to vast audiences.

"It's like in the early days of printing," Husson said. "There was a time when anyone with a cheese press and a set of letters."

cheese press and a set of letters could put out anything they wanted, and there was no way to protect authorship, ownership or the truth. It got so bad that Sir Isaac Newton refused to publish his theories after dishonest print-ers had stolen many of his ideas and forwarded them to other academics, who put them out as Printing guilds, which observed strict guidelines for their work, were established to solve the problem. The printer's "imprimatur" in a book was the assurance of integrity in its publication.

"One of the major problems we have with many of the Internet service providers is that the people who are doing the service, operation and maintenance are selected for their technical skill, and not for their philosophical depth," Husson lamented. "The imprimatur used by early guild printers is not likely to show up in any modern way. Ethics only plays a role in the operation to the extent that their own structures aren't vio-lated from within."

The issue of Internet ethics is not limited to criminals, hackers, and electronic wrecking crews, however. If it were, the discussion would be pointless, since they have already rejected any interest in ethical behavior. More important to the equation is the average user, who faces ethical questions every time he

"The law is being violated almost every time you turn on your computer," warns Husson. "Remember that copyright law prohibits duplication by any means. If you download copyrighted material without permission, be it a photograph from an online news service or an article passed along by a friend, you have duplicated it, and you have broken the law."

The key, says Husson, is for those who are aware of ethical concepts to be vigilant and not let pragmatism erode the morals that they follow outside the vir-

"If this thing is to truly have a chance," Husson warns, "those who have the capacity to act ethically must do so. If they do, many of the gaping doors will close and lock themselves. If they don't, they might as well invite the rest of the thieves and looters in for dinner.'

"Joint ownership can work successfully under most circumstances, but it's always smart to prepare for the unknown," says Richard Roll, president of American Homeowners Association.

"Joint homebuyers need a plan or document to clarify what happens to their respective financial interests in the home should something unforeseen happen and they have to sell," he said. Joining your fortunes together makes coming up with a down payment and monthly mortgage payments much easier. Lenders are happy to accommodate joint

Although the path to financing is smooth, the law is full of potholes when it comes to unmarried couples.

Typically when a spouse dies, the surviving spouse automatically becomes the full owner under joint tenancy with right of survivorship. And the divorce settlement provides the framework for deciding ownership.

That's not true for unmarried couples. Without some plan or document, the death of your housemate does not make you the automatic owner.

And if you break up, you're in uncharted legal territory and really ripe for disagreements over who's responsible for costs, whether to sell, or how to divide sale pro-

Under joint tenancy with rights of survivorship, the survivor becomes the sole owner and responsible for the mortgage.

Beyond that, you can get down to the fine print in a partnership agreement. This document spells out how the home sale would be handled in a breakup.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"HOW MUCH COULD YOUR RENTAL PAYMENT BUY?"

Have you thought about buying a home but felt you could not afford one now? Maybe you are right or you could be wrong. A lot has happened to home financing in recent years. We now live in a time when there are many different types of mortgage loans available. They are all designed to appeal to various types of buyers based upon their financial needs.

Most people who are now renting don't have much money saved up for the down payment on a house. There are some mortgage loans that have been tailored just for the low down payment buyer. If you think you need 20% of the purchase price in a down payment, you are mistaken. You can buy a home for 3% down. If you are a veteran with eligibility remaining, you can purchase with a zero down payment.

You may also be surprised at the selection of homes available in a price you can afford. Don't assume that you can't buy. Get the facts you need to know where you stand.

Go to a local mortgage lender and find out how much financing you could qualify for. After obtaining this information, contact a local Realtor in your area and ask him or her to show you the kinds of homes for sale in your price range.

If you see affordable homes that are appealing, you might want to seriously consider buying now rather than later. If you are discouraged by the selection in your price range, find out about how much higher down payment and or earnings you will need to buy the house you would want.

Either way, you will know where you stand and have a clearer idea of what you have to do to become a home owner.

A 2nd home shouldn't be merely a 2nd thought

By DENISE L. CARINGER FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Forget roughing it.

For a growing group of Americans, a second home is anything but Spartan. A previous generation in search of a little rest and relaxation may have bought into the charm of making do in cabins where running water counted as an "amenity."

But vacation home buyers in the 21st century want it all: simplicity, sensuality and functionality. And they want all the comforts of home.

Yesterday's rustic cabin is giving way to a state-of-the-art retreat that marries the getaway feeling of an oceanside cottage, a lake house or a mountain cabin.

Because of this move toward the be-all, end-all second home, *today's vacation home buyers Yesterday's rustic cabin is giving way to a state-of-the-art retreat that marries the getaway feeling of an oceanside cottage or a lake house.

■ Super-sizing. A one-room cabin with sleeping bags spread out on the floor doesn't cut it anymore. Instead, buyers are looking for vacation homes that include master suites, guests' suites and plenty of room for kids and grandkids. Kitchens and baths, too, echo the features that buyers enjoy in their primary residences.

■ Remodeling. Buyers eager to get their feet in the door of the growing second-home market are snapping up older cottages with prized views and waterfront sites, then renovating them to bring kitchens, baths and square footage up to date. Hot additions include new kitchen-family room combinations, and porches or sunrooms that scoop up the view.

■ Planning for the long haul. Because today's buyers are eyeing their retreats as eventual places for year-round retirement living and as magnets for big family gatherings, they want homes that will last. "Buyers are looking for something permanent and solid," says Bill Nolan. senior building and remodeling editor at Better Homes and Gardens magazine. "This goes along with the trend away from the cheapie kit-cabin look. In addition, resort property is getting pricier and, therefore, it's harder to justify doing something

That quest for quality also applies to decorating.

Comfortable, well-made furnishings, whether rustic or romantic in style, have replaced the kind of used or second-best. pieces that might have satisfied second home owners a decade or two ago. But the furniture and accessories aren't the kind found in primary residences, either.

After all, second homes are playhouses for adults - places to go to be witty, whimsical, bold, colorful or romantic. Who wants to be serious at a weekend get-

Sandra Soria, executive interior design editor at Better Homes and Gardens agrees. "The second homes that are playful and personal are scoring big among our magazine's readers," she says.

Popular vacation home interior design schemes include:

■ Rustic. This look is particularly popular for second homes because it signals ruggedness and casualness and it immediately establishes that "awayfrom-it-all" feeling. Log cabins and log furnishings, American primitives, Adirondack-inspired pieces, and cowboy or Southwestern looks allow people to use bold and gutsy woods, leather, stone and other natural materi-

■ Romantic. Think farmhouses with lace curtains, Carpenter Gothic cottages with country Victorian furnishings and French country charm. Creating these looks can be done easily by using soft fabrics, curvilinear furniture pieces and soft pastel hues.

■ Nautical. Pieces for these crisp schemes, often using shipstyle accessories and lighthouse motifs in red, white and blue have become easy to find at affordable prices.

■ Tropical. Bright florals, cabana stripes, tropical fish motifs, bowls of seashells, palm trees - even silk ones used as witty sculpture - and bold tropical sunset colors create an escapist vacation ambiance.

■ Fusion. This is about blending the unexpected. Light-pine log furnishings can be mixed with pastel hues and touches of lace for a room that's both romantic and rustic, or whitepainted farmhouse-style furnishings can be accented with tropical colors and fish motifs. People often feel more free to experiment with fun and humor when they decorate their second homes.

■ Easy-going. Simple, classic furnishings in neutral hues provide comfort but take a back seat to the fabulous view that is often one of the best decorative features of a vacation home.

Kids and attractive decor can share the same house

BY SAMANTHA CRITCHELL

NEW YORK (AP) - Kids might make a new house feel like a home and they'll certainly help contribute to a "lived-in" look, but that doesn't mean the house is destined to years of dirt and disarray.

"Parents need to change their expectation a little of what life is going to be. It's not going to be pristine but it can be pleasant," says

Anna Kasabian. The good news, according to Kasabian, is no matter how small the house, it is big enough to accommodate everyone's needs. The better news is you don't have to spend a lot of money to make it work.

"Integration is the key," she says. The kitchen, host of many family gatherings, is an ideal place to start. Kasabian suggests storing children's books, coloring books, and crayons and markers alongside the cookbooks so the household chef has company in the kitchen - while also keeping a watchful eye over the youngest family members.

If the kids are old enough to contribute to daily chores, the napkins, placemats and flatware needed to set the table can be kept on a low shelf making it easy for them to do their

A trunk or bench with storage in the main entryway invites cooperation from children looking for a place to put their shoes, balls and hockey sticks when they come home from school or a play date.

"Be realistic," says Boston-based Kasabian, who has written several decorating books. "Don't ask the kids to bring stuff up to their room every time they walk in the door, but ask them to put it in a dedicated spot near the door, that's OK."

And, she adds, if they decorate their "personalized" storage containers (maybe a bucket or basket with their names painted on it), the children will be more likely to use it.

In their bedroom, curtains with pockets provide "secret storage" and sturdy shipping boxes with the flaps cut off can be painted for instant bookshelves.

Storage is the biggest factor with kids, especially because they always seem to have a lot of "stuff" - no matter how old they are, says Kasabian.

Make them feel like a part of the family by mixing your trinkets with their toys on the same shelf. And instead of a glass coffee table, consider a wooden table with rounded edges and drawers, where kids can put their own treasures next to your photos, she suggests.

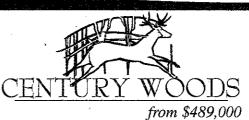

If there toys are an eyesore, and some of those big plastic toys are, Kasabian says hide them under a table covered with a pretty cloth or behind an artificial "wall" created by a piece of fabric that hangs from the ceiling by a wire.

Another creative interpretation of a "wall" is one covered with blackboard paint that can be an oversize canvas for a chalk-wielding child.

Children are going to draw, paint, spill things and make messes anyway, so it's best to give them a place where it's OK to do it.

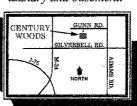

Kid-friendly fabrics and surfaces may not always be the most stylish, she says, but they are a compromise worth making.

Thermostat key to comfort, savings

Next winter's home heating tronic, programmable thermostat costs could be just as high as this year's, according to early predictions from the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

The most recent report from the government indicates that it will be a while, if ever, before natural gas prices return to levels seen one year ago.

"One of the simplest ways to save energy is to install a programmable thermostat to automatically change your home's temperature based on your schedule and lifestyle," said Sean McCarthy, director of the Aprilaire center for indoor air com-

"And, now is the time to take steps to reduce your utility costs, before summer cooling bills start rolling in," he said.

Studies show using an elec-can save up to 18 percent on your heating and cooling costs. Some homeowners believe a programmable thermostat will be too difficult to operate. That may have been true in the past, but today's models are much easier to use, according to McCarthy.

"If you have never been in the habit of changing the temperature while you sleep or when you're away, you'll be surprised at the energy savings a programmable thermostat can achieve.

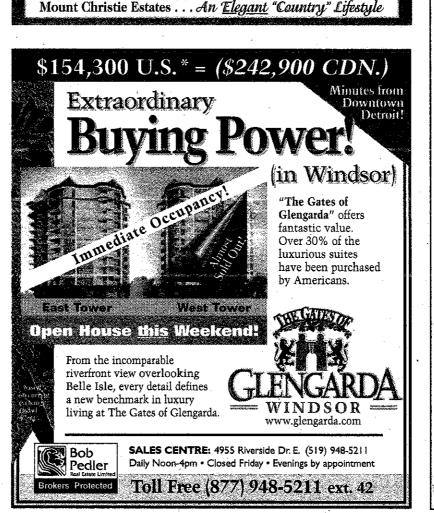

"For instance, raising your thermostat setting by just one degree this summer can save 5 percent of the energy used by your air conditioner. The suggested setting for summer energy savings is 78 degrees.

Some people know how to work for fun

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI

Thile the rest of the working world is counting the hours until we can take a few days off to spend time at the golf course or escape to the beach, others go to stress-buster oases for their summer jobs.

Imagine getting paid to go to a resort island or to watch concerts. Take Mary McGuire for instance. For more than a decade of summers, the 39-year-old Huntington Woods resident has worked on Mackinac Island and she loves every

Growing up, she visited the island with her family and when she was a little girl McGuire vowed she would live on the idyllic vacation spot.

While she adores the white picket fences, daily views of the lake and storybook surroundings, McGuire's dream comes with a lot of hard work.

During the day she's a bartender and at night she plays her guitar and sings in a couple of island bars. She even bought property on the island.

If this seems too dreamy, reality sets in during the winter when McGuire studies the history of art and architecture at Har-

While pouring a drink for a customer at a bar on the island, McGuire said: "I love it here. It's beautiful."

She especially prefers the slower pace provided by the island rule of using horses instead of cars. Most of all, she likes the positive "vibe" of being around people on vacation who aren't stressed out by the idea that they have to go to work the next day.

"They're here to have a good time," McGuire said. "Anyone can do what I'm doing. You just have to do it.'

That philosophy landed Mark Cirillo a spot on the baseball field summer nights. He's doing what most grown up boys long

Love of the game

As head umpire for the Livonia Parks and Recreation men and women softball teams, Cirillo's balmy evenings are filled with fly balls and the cracking sound of wood hitting a sphere and making it soar.

He has a crew of about 20 umpires and has 19 years experience with his summer-

"Money might be part of it," Cirillo said. "But, that's not why a lot of our umpires go to the field. They enjoy the game, they play it or are retired. When I played it, I always wanted to be an umpire. I can't recall any times that I didn't want to be there."

The best part of the job, he said, was talking to the players and knowing after a game that both teams, winners and losers, have said: "Good job,ump."

"I wouldn't put up with it for 19 years if I didn't enjoy it," he added.

Beach time

While Cirillo goes to the ball park at night, Kristy Simms, 22, of Harrison Township spends her days at the beach. Basically, she gets paid for doing what most of us can only find the time to do once or twice a year.

The Central Michigan University student has worked as a lifeguard at Metro Beach in Mount Clemens from Memorial day to Labor Day for six years.

"You come to work, you sit on stand and you get to watch over people all day and get some sun at the same time," Simms said, adding that her supervisors also provide a workout every week to keep her and all the other lifeguards fit.

"You have to stay in pretty good shape," she added. "It's a great way to spend your Oh yeah.

If the lake breezes, sun and the chance to go swimming every day don't seem like the description of a perfect job, how about looking at the noble side?

On average, lifeguards rescue between five and 10 struggling swimmers every season, Simms said.

Her response: "It's rewarding." Even though Mary Lopez's work is less glamorous than Simms' job, it's also a dream come true for the Westland resi-

She works all year on her business, Mary's Pals for Pets, but her hours increase during the summer when a lot of her clients go on vacation and need someone to look after their pets. She visits the pets two to four times daily and the starting fee is $10 to $12 per visit.

And the animals she sees aren't always cute, cuddly puppies, either. Add cats, rabbits, guinea pigs, birds and a four-foot iguana to the list. Ninety percent of her clientele is from Canton and Plymouth.

The bulk of Lopez's work is mid-day dog watch for people who are away for long hours and need someone to come into their homes to exercise, feed or medicate a pet. While she's upbeat about her job, she said, the down side is the clean up duty after

Q. I've had some uncomfortable moments in recent interviews and periods when nobody seemed to know what to say. How should I handle these situations?

A. Some people you meet in interviews may be excellent in their own disciplines, but poor conversationalists. Even managers who are engaging under other circumstances can find it difficult to relax in interviews. Others are terrified of saying something inaccurate or illegal. It is very common for an interviewer to be more nervous than the candidate.

While these folks have veto power, their discomfort doesn't have to work against you. Just be careful that you don't go into an interview with "guest syndrome," a conversational disease that is often fatal.

People with guest syndrome approach interviews this way: I, the candidate, am the guest here. You, the employer, are the host. This is your turf and you know what you are doing. It is up to you to make me comfortable, structure the discussion and carry the conversational ball.

My job is simply to answer questions. Have at it.

You will blow interviews by taking this posture. Your prime directive in any sales situation is to make the other person feel good. YOU must take responsibility for making the interview flow smoothly. Here's

Have four or five open-ended questions (who, what, where, when, why or how) stone cold memorized. These shouldn't be boilerplate questions from a book, but questions that are of real importance to you. When an agonizing silence occurs, reach down into your bag of questions and roll one out, just to keep the conversation going.

Ask about the interviewer personally. How long have you been here, Mary? What do you like about working here, Bob? Tell me about your career, Sue. Give people the easiest thing in the world to talk about themselves. Besides, it's usually a favorite subject.

"I've been an animal lover since I was born," Lopez said. "I love it and I wouldn't give it up for anything."

Lopez worked at a travel agency for 13 years and operated a licensed day care so she could remain home with her son for seven years until he started first grade.

Music fans

Angela Forte of Oxford will probably see more concerts this summer than any of her friends. That's one of the perks of working at Palace Sports and Entertainment, which includes the Palace of Auburn Hills, DTE Energy Music Theater and Meadowbrook. Forte and Marcie Lemke are interns in the human resource department.

While other new employees around the metropolitan area are asked to do less than desirable tasks, like cleaning out restrooms, Forte and Lemke were picked to work the U-2 concert. They passed out wrist bands for the standing area.

That was great," Forte said. "We got to see the band, while we were working and making money."

She and Lemke expect to "have" to work more concerts this sum-

Forte, a 22-year-old Oakland University student, has spent time writing the employee newsletter and is overjoyed to work at the Palace Sports and Entertainment.

"It's a lot of fun," she said. "The people here are wonderful." Lemke, on the other hand, is accustomed to landing extraordinarily ' fun jobs.

The 21-year-old Ionia resident also had an internship at Walt Disney World.

She worked as a greeter for eight months at MGM Studios. But, working at the Palace is a terrific way to spend the summer, too, Lemke said adding that she was thrilled to be working with the Palace Sports and Entertainment.

If going to concerts was a big enough draw, one of their other duties is to work company pizza parties during training and orientation ses-

"I couldn't believe how friendly everyone is," Lemke said. "My major is business, but I'd really like to get into human resources." Camaraderie is also a big part of Joe Feudi's job working at Fox Creek Golf Course in Livonia.

 Though he works staggering long hours, sometimes from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m., he said he wouldn't give up his job as a golf professional giving lessons and working as a manager, for anything.

"People always say we'd love to work at a golf course," he said. "It's a demanding task. It's the atmosphere and we have a love for the game, too. Basically, I've been in the golf industry my whole life. It's a

During the winter he organizes upcoming seasons and works on improving "everything." The grueling hours, however, only leave him time to play golf once every few weeks.

Have four to five "strong points" stone cold memorized. It's easy to interview people who know what they want to say. By strongly articulating skills and experiences, you save the other person the difficult task of having to dig for relevant information.

Take advantage of opportunities to smile and inject a little humor. You don't have to be a stand-up comedian, but listen for opportunities to lighten it up. Nothing provides relief like a good chuckle. It tells the interviewer that you might be a pleasant person to work with.

Focus more on connecting and less on impressing. So many candidates come across as being full of themselves, awed by their own accomplishments, wowed by their own experience. They naturally expect the interviewer to be awed and wowed, too. It's one thing to present salient selling points, it's quite another to state or imply that they are astonishing. How much better to concentrate on understanding the person on the other side of the desk, that person's needs and how you relate to him or her personally?

Remember to close almost every interview with a strong expression of interest. This tells interviewers that they did their job and "sold" the opportunity effectively. It makes them feel good - which is doing your job effectively.

Special note to those who are struggling through a tough period of unemployment: A number of employees who have been "downsized" have reluctantly concluded that they might have to take contract work or accept a lower salary for the time being. This is just to let you know that you are not alone. For a lot us, 2001 is a year just to get through - feed the kids, pay the rent and plant plenty of seeds that will probably bear fruit when times improve.

1948 CHEVROLET FLEETMASTER

Remembering a last chapter in the history of a model line

By RICK FEIBUSCH © AUTOWIRE.NET

he 1948 Chevy was a handsome car. It wasn't low slung and modern like the first postwar Studebakers, or streamlined like the contemporary Packard, but it certainly was handsome.

This car was the last chapter in the history of a model line that started in mid-1941. While the 1942 Chevy appeared quite new with its low, wide grillwork and headlights smoothly blended into front fenders that flowed Buick-like into the doors, the underpinings were much as had come before. Civilian automobile production shut down to make room for war production in early February after less than 260,000 cars had been built.

Between 1942-45 a number of 1942 models, held in storage for "High Priority" buyers by the Office of Price Administration, were slowly released after June 1943. These were all "blackout" models with painted brightwork.

The rest of the folks drove old cars or took the bus. (My mom couldn't drive at the time so she sold my dad's 1938 Master Deluxe while he was overseas boy was he mad!) Enter, the car famine.

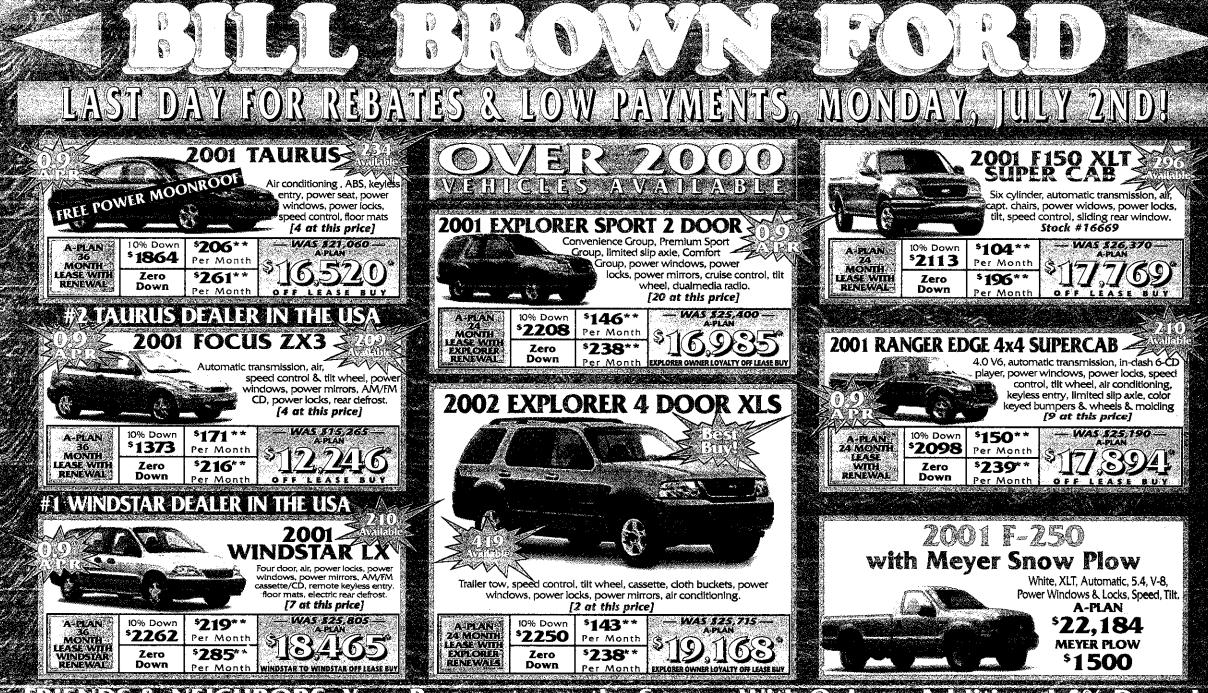

New cars needed

By 1946 America needed new cars. The old ones were worn out and replacement parts were in short supply. Most of the American manufactures just started cranking out facelifted 1942 models. Chevy installed a wider, less fussy grille and started selling all they could build. The '47 Chevrolets sported an even wider, much more attractive grille and some cleaner, more up-to-date side trim. Sales were booming. Chevy set an all-time convertible sales record when it produced 28,443 units.

But the Chevy started to look old by 1948. Not bad, just old. Nash, Packard, and Hudson had introduced their versions of Buck Rodgers space rocket and GM wouldn't be ready to show its next generation of cars until 1949. The '48 was the last and the best of its pre-war line. Chevrolet's venerable 216 cubic inch six had finally been updated with precision-type main bearings instead of the old rough fit and reamers, and a vacuum assist for the three speed column mounted shifter. In total, 776,000 Chevys were built that year before the lines were shut down to re-tool for the all-new 1949 models.

This particular Drive Report car is owned by Gerry Peter of Fairfield, Calif. Gerry found his 1948 Fleetmaster convertible in Redwood City. He bought it, in pieces, from the widow of the fellow that started the restoration years before. After sorting out the boxes of unlabeled parts, Gerry was able to find the missing bits and start restoration.

Every part was stripped, cleaned or sandblasted, and either plated, painted or replaced with brand new pieces. The car was then reassembled, using all new rubber and hardware. The rebuilt running gear was installed into a newly painted metallic maroon body. The interior features red leather seats while the power top is covered in tan. Options include the vacuum shift, a spotlight, and a rare set of factory 15-inch wheels painted body color and correctly detailed with beige striping.

The Classic Drive

This is not my first time around the block in a 1948 Chevy. In 1965, I bought a nifty Fleetline Aerosedan (fastback) from the local butcher for $75. Drove it to the local high school — and to visit my girlfriend on weekends. She had moved over 35 miles away and in the Chevy, with its maximum safe cruising speed of 50 mph, it felt like a hundred miles. I used the hand throttle as a primitive cruise control and watched the VW vans fly past.

My 1948 might have been slow but it never once let me down. A '48 Chevrolet somehow appears larger than it really is. It's high, the doors are big and heavy, and all of the styling components are large. The hood is big and so are the fenders if you count the part that is attached to the door.

Still, if you park one next to a Chevy from the mid-1950s, the 1948 looks like a compact. Quite an illusion.

This is one of those "armchair" cars that remind one of sitting in grandma's salon. I grabbed onto that bigger-than-life, white steering wheel, tugged the shifter into neutral and pressed my toe down on the floor mounted starter pedal. The little stovebolt hardly cranked, and ticked right over - just like my old fastback (damn, I wish I hadn't sold that car!).

The fully instrumented dash sprung to life, the little needles jumping to their appropriate places.

As I again found myself tugging at the shifter, I remembered that it was vacuum actuated. I'm not sure what the reasoning was for a gear change that could be easily shifted with one finger - very slowly. If one tries to shift faster, even using a complete hand, the assist slows the process down as well as eliminating the gate feel. Shifting feels much like stirring well beaten whipped cream. Someone must have thought this was a good idea, but it is absolutely lost on me!

A quiet strength

On the road, the car feels big and durable. Gerry's Fleetline sits high, rides soft and smooth and leans like a speedboat in the curves. You sit behind that really big wheel, shifting that easy but slow shifter while listening to the lethargic six moan through its low-endtorque-intensive power range. What it doesn't have in outright performance is made up for by a feeling of a quiet strength - sort of the Gary Cooper of cars.

This was obviously the last incarnation of a pre-war car. It was handsome, well fitted, and had benefited from the engineering and material advancements made since 1941. These cars were solid and hard to break.

Gerry's maroon beauty is a testimony to a time in America when things were built a bit better and life was a lot slower. A time before the interstates when a car trip was to be a comfortable adventure, rather than a high speed bore. A time many of us, down deep, would like to go back to — or at least visit for awhile.
