Canton signs on to revising law

Ordinance change topic of joint session

BY CAROL MARSHALL STAFF WRITER cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

Canton officials gathered Tuesday to discuss solutions to the township's sign clutter issue.

Signs – on the ground, on store walls and in the air - are everywhere, and are creating visual chaos and potential hazards to motorists, they said.

"What we're trying to do is give businesses the opportunity to get their name out, but at the same time reduce the visual clutter," said Township Trustee and Planning Commissioner Melissa McLaughlin, at the board and commission's joint study session.

While several proposed changes to the township's sign ordinance deal with future signs, officials spent most of their time discussing what to do about signs that are already built and do not conform to Canton's current ordinance.

Many of the signs in Canton are not in compliance with the current ordinance, and if the proposed changes are made, almost all would be noncompliant, according to Township Planner Jeff Goulet.

Currently, any sign on a pole or pylon is noncompliant, and the proposed changes would shrink the size of signs in half - from 50 square feet to 24 square feet.

State cuts would cost district $900K

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

If Gov. John Engler goes through with his threat to cut school aid funding by 5 percent because of a decline in state revenues, it could cost Plymouth-Canton Schools nearly $900,000 in foundation grant money.

However, Rep. John Stewart, R-Plymouth Township, said he's working on compromise legislation to avoid that scenario, to be presented to Engler by his Oct. 1 deadline.

"I'll fight like hell to make certain the foundation grant doesn't get touched," said Stewart.

On July 12, legislators failed to reach an agreement on an $11.3 billion See related editorial, A10 school aid appropriations bill, then recessed for the summer. Engler then warned lawmakers that if they don't come up with a solution, he'll make his own cuts.

"The legislature didn't make significant cuts and threw the ball back in Engler's court," admitted Stewart. "We didn't think he would threaten a 5-percent across-the-board cut.

"I'm negotiating with my colleagues to get them to support the basic foundation grant," he said. "I would rather see other programs get cut."

Township adopts water restrictions

BY CAROL MARSHALL STAFF WRITER cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

A dry summer usually leads to water use restrictions.

Canton officials implemented them Wednesday, following weeks without rain and a request from the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department covering the eight southeast Michigan counties it serves.

"It's a voluntary restriction at this point, and we're asking Canton residents to comply," said Township Engineer Tom

In an effort to avoid water distribution problems the township is asking residents to limit their outdoor water use by following the odd/even restriction.

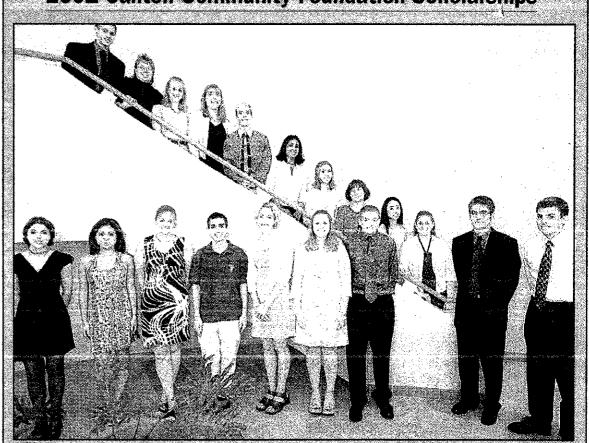

Residents with odd-numbered addresses are asked to do outdoor watering only on odd-numbered dates. Likewise, those having even-numbered addresses should water lawns, fill swimming pools and wash cars on even-numbered dates.

"It's dry everywhere, but we haven't had the same kind of problems other communities have had," said Casari. "We have received a few calls from residents about low pressure, especially between 6 and 7 a.m.'

Because water consumption is at its peak between the hours of 6-9 a.m. and 3-6 p.m. daily, the township is also requesting a voluntary observance to limit outdoor use of water between those hours. Cooperation in maintaining these water use restrictions will enable water customers to continue receiving

Vandal leaves calling card Sign ordinance from page A1

A Canton woman entered her south Sheldon Road home to find an unpleasant surprise last week. The 38 year old woman found a dead raccoon had been thrown into her kitchen.

Police noted someone had cut the screen on her kitchen window, and had apparently tossed the dead critter onto the floor without entering the home.

A dog toy was found next to the raccoon.

The woman told police she believes her 43-year-old neighbor is to blame, according to police reports.

The neighbor, whom the victim described as "mentally unstable," believes she had something to the disappearance of his dog.

The woman told police the dog toy she found in her kitchen belonged to her neighbor's dog. Police tried to question the man, who reportedly had a difficult time understanding the officer's questions, and could not

A Canton couple told police someone broke into their home while they were at work and stole $2,200 worth of jewelry, video equipment and CDs. The thief also made off with nude Polaroid's and videos of the redfaced couple.

The couple returned at 3:23 a.m. Saturday to their home and found the items missing.

someone stole 38 construction barrels from a work site near Canton Center and Ford roads.

The business owner told Canton Police two of his employees Tuesday witnessed two men taking the barrels and four signs. The items are valued at more than $800.

The men who were taking the barrels told the witnesses their employer had asked them to pick them up.

Their employer is the owner of a Canton construction company.

The witnesses told police they don't believe the men were stealing them for their own gain.

Stolen cycle

A 21-year-old Canton man reported someone stole his motorcycle while it was parked near his Adams Court home.

The man left the cycle in a parking lot while he was away from home from last Friday until Tuesday. When he returned the 1997 Yamaha, valued at $5,000, was gone.

Before the proposed changes, a committee hit the road to examine Canton's signs, said Township Supervisor Tom Yack.

The committee identified and measured each of Canton's signs, then took a road trip to Novi and Northville Township to examine their signs.

The committee compared Canton's sign ordinance with those from Farmington, Northville Township, Plymouth Township and Livonia.

"We came up with a pictorial tour of the size of signs we liked and size of signs we didn't like,' Yack said. "A lot of us have made the observation that one size does not fit all.'

A carrot or a stick?

Getting all of Canton's signs to comply with the current or future ordinance will require diplomatic efforts on the township's part.

Under the current ordinance, the township can condemn any sign that does not comply. One such sign is the tall pylon sign at Meijer on Ford Road. The sign is not in compliance because of its height. The township may also opt to phase out the non-conforming signs over a 10-year period.

The township is considering economic incentives to business owners, paying half of the cost of the sign if it's replaced within five years, said Goulet. Planning Commissioner Karl Zarbo said he prefers the economic incentive approach.

"I'm not sure if this is the image we want to portray," he said of the language that enables the township to con-demn a sign. "With a buyout at least we're offering some kind of incentive."

These are significant changes, and if we can come up with some balance and some incentive to address what we are about to do, that would be beneficial," agreed Trustee Phil LaJoy.

Even with the incentive, businesses have good reason to resist sign replacement, according to Zarbo.

He said new signs cost between $100,000 and $500,000.

"How do you address Meijer on something like this? With a hammer or with the approach of being a good neighbor?" said

Besides the sign at Meijer, other non-conforming signs include signs on vacant businesses, tall roadside signs advertising fast food and hotels, and banners.

Township is exempt

Canton is allowed by ordinance to display banners and streamers, and commercial property owners are not. They may display seasonal decorative banners for up to five weeks per Commercial signs are not allowed to have moving or flashing lights, but Canton Township's lighted sign could be described as "flashing," according to Zarbo.

"If it's dangerous to put one at Ford and Lilley, then it's probably dangerous on Canton Center Road," Zarbo said.

He added that prohibiting banners on commercial property while allowing them on township property may be seen by the public as unfair.

Township planners will examine the proposed ordinance before returning it to the planning commission and township

Two school board members, Mark Slavens and Judy Mardigian, have been at the forefront in pressing local legislators for help in increasing the foundation grant for Plymouth-Canton.

"I'm very disappointed Engler would take this position," said Slavens, a member of Michigan Citizens for Fairness in Public School Funding. "I'm not sure he's been a friend to public education. It's incumbent upon our legislators to ensure the cuts don't take place.

"Our budget is stretched pretty thin right now. The cuts would slice into our core business, which is educating kids,"

"I think the problem will take care of itself if everybody pitches in, but if it seems like there is widespread noncompliance, it could theoretically go to the board to become mandatory,' Casari explained. Because Canton passed its own water use resolution rather than Detroit's the Township Board of Trustees would need to pass a resolution to require limiting water use.

"But that's not the frame of reference for us right now. I think that voluntary compliance works pretty well and most people do their part," Casari said.

Homeowners in subdivisions with common areas are also asked to restrict watering their common areas to every other day. Residents should be aware that many public areas, such as parks and golf courses receive their water from ponds which are independent of the Detroit water system.

Casari said Pheasant Run golf course, for example, irrigates with water from a retention pond and from the Rouge River. The park at Denton and Proctor roads has wells which feed into ponds, and the park is irrigated with the pond water.

Westland blocks bill seeking new judgeship

By DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER dclem@oe.homecomm.net

Attacking a proposed state bill as irrational, Westland City Council members voted Monday evening to block a Lansing measure that sought to merge Westland and Wayne district courts.

The bill, proposed by state Rep. Bruce Patterson and state Sen. Loren Bennett, both Canton Republicans, would also add a third judgeship for the 35th District Court. But it contains a clause stating that Westland's council would have to approve the merger for the law to become effective.

by Westland judges and police officers, effectively killed a proposal to abolish Wayne's court and move its lone judge, Carolyn Archbold, to Westland.

The consolidation plan would've become effective Jan. 1, but local officials feared that Wayne's money-losing judicial system would start to drain Westland's financially sound court.

"This is a bad deal for Westland, because what it would do is take our very efficient court and turn it upside down," Councilman Dennis LeMaitre

Archbold has touted the plan as a

The council's 7-0 decision, supported way for local courts to become more efficient and to slash costs. She has said she isn't busy enough.

'The council's unanimous vote certainly is a strong statement of their wish to leave the court as it is," Westland 18th District Judge Gail McKnight said Tuesday. She said she has received numerous comments from residents, both in Westland and Wayne, who told her that they didn't support the merger, either.

"A lot of people have been talking about it," McKnight said.

Councilwoman Eileen DeHart dismissed the bill as a "back-door attempt" by Patterson and Bennett to sell the idea of a third judge not just for Westland but also for 35th District Court, which serves the Canton, Plymouth and Northville area.

The 35th District still could receive a new judge.

Westland's court, billed as the state's second-busiest district court, handles about 40,000 new cases a year compared to Wayne's 11,000.

Moreover, nearly 175,000 people passed through the Westland court's doors last year to answer to crimes, pay fines, see probation officers and handle other business, McKnight said.

Schoolcraft College appoints three new vice presidents

On July 1 Conway Jeffress, vice president for instruction, assumed the presidency of Schoolcraft College, replacing Richard McDowell, who had been president of the college for 20 years. He is the college's fourth president.

Jeffress, who's appointment was announced earlier, has been a vice president at Schoolcraft for 19 years, coming to school from Community College in Allegheny. Pa. He earned his bachelor's degree from Washington and Jefferson College and a master's degree in educational psychology and a doctorate in higher education from the University of Pittsburgh. He and his wife, Louise, live in Novi.

Jeffress' goals for the coming year as set out by the Board of Trustees include increasing enrollment, developing curriculum for a new high-tech center and developing long range goals and a mission statement.

To help him meet those goals, three new vice presidents have been appointed.

Louis A. Reibling became the vice president for instruction at Schoolcraft College July 1, succeeding Jeffress.

Reibling served as dean of instruction since 1981, after a short term as assistant dean for health careers. Among his accomplishments as dean of instruction, he was responsible for winning state approval of college programs and for establishing the general education goals, which require that all associate degree candidates have basic competence in 10 general areas. As vice president, Reibling's primary goal will be to prepare the curriculum for the new high tech center currently under construction. The project will house an expanded culinary arts department and an information technology facility that will interact with area companies and entrepreneurs.

Reibling grew up in Covington, Ky., and earned a bachelor's degree in English literature at Thomas Moore College, a master's degree in psychometrics at Catherine Spaulding University and a doctorate in allied health education at St. Louis University. He is a 20-year resident of Northville.

John B. Tomey became the vice president for enrollment management at Schoolcraft College July 1. The position is a new one for the college, created to bring the factors that impact enrollment into one office.

In his new position, Tomey will oversee 12 departments, including admissions, counseling, financial aid, career planning and placement, registration and the Learning Assistance Center. He said his primary goal is to sustain enrollment growth in the face of increased competition.

Schoolcraft's current enrollment, including credit and noncredit students is about 30,000.

Tomey joined Schoolcraft in 1974 as director of financial aid. He earned bachelor of science and master of business adminis-

Democrats challenge plan for congressional districts

BY TIM SMITH STAFF WRITER tsmith@oe.homecomm.net

A court battle looms over a GOP-endorsed plan that would see two U.S. Congressional districts in Wayne County merge into a new entity.

On Wednesday, July 11, the Democratic Party filed a lawsuit in U.S. Federal District Court in Detroit. According to 9th District state Sen. Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, the lawsuit puts on hold the new map.

"Now we wait for results of the judicial (process)," McCotter said last Thursday. "Hopefully, there will be a decision in a reasonable period of time, because we know people will be running (for legislative seats) in 2002.

As part of the contested plan, spearheaded by state Republican legislators, a portion of the 13th and all of the 16th U.S. Congressional districts - represented by Democrats Lynn Rivers and John Dingell, respectively would merge into the proposed 15th. If the new map sees the light of day, Rivers and Dingell would have to square off against each other in the 2002 election.

"Democrats have to sue," added McCotter. "They'd be remiss if they didn't.

Essentially, the map makeover followed results of the 2000 census in which population shifts continued moving away from the city of Detroit. There will be 15 U.S. Congressional districts instead of 16 under the new

Rivers' current district encompasses Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti and western Wayne communities such as Canton, Garden City, Plymouth. Westland and part of Livonia. Those suburban municipalities would be tacked on to the proposed 11th, which extends north into Oakland County. Both Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti would be included in Dingell's district includes all of Monroe County as well as downriver Wayne communities including Dearborn Heights and Dearborn.

Just the beginning

But Rivers' and Dingell strongly oppose the plan, labeled it partisan gerrymandering and indicated it would need to pass muster with various state and federal courts to be implement-

"These are the first few steps in what I expect will be a very long dance," said Rivers, expecting the plan - if passed - to be challenged up to the Michigan Supreme Court and "if need be, to the Federal District Court."

About the proposal, which would merge six Democratic districts into three, Rivers said it is an unfair way to grab majority status, that Republicans "want

GOP squabbles over plans

BY MIKE MALOTT HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE mmalott@homecomm.net

Before the redistricting plans for Congress and state House and Senate won final approval Thursday, July 12, and were sent to the governor for his signature, they set off a series of intramural squabbles in the GOP.

■ State Rep. Andrew Raczkowski, R-Farmington, contends the Senate drew plans for a new non-incumbent 11th congressional district for McCotter.

Although Raczkowski is also interested in running for that open seat himself, his current power base, in Farmington and Farmington Hills was specifically drawn out of the district. He contends the lines were part of deal between McCotter and Senate Majority Leader Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, in which McCotter led the ouster of David Jaye and will endorse DeGrow's bid for Attorney General, in return for that district. McCotter denies the charge. DeGrow called it "ludicrous."

Because in Congress candidates are not required to be residents of the district in which challenge McCotter anyway. ■ Rep. John Stewart, R-Plymouth, has been verbal in his objections over the way the state House plan for his district has been drawn. The new boundaries include Northville and Plymouth, connected to the City of Wayne by what Stewart calls a "14-mile dog leg."

His verbal objections turned into shouting at a conference

COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

By CAROL MARSHALL STAFF WRITER cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

ocal college-bound students get their inspiration - and tuition money - from about as many places as there are potential majors. The students have to find their own motivation, but the Canton Community Foundation Scholarship Program can help with the finances.

The Foundation distributed 25 scholarship to Canton and Plymouth students. Many of the scholarships are based on academic performance, choice of major and need, but the ones that impress foundation Executive Director Joan Noricks the most are those based on service.

Although the foundation can only distribute two of the President's Student Service Challenge scholarships, Noricks wanted to recognize all of the students who applied.

"They all did something worthy of recognition and valuable to the community," she said. "So for the first time, we decided we wanted to give them a certificate that recognizes those efforts."

Service-oriented

One of the President's Student Service Challenge scholarship recipients was Jason Singleton, who performed hundreds of hours of service teaching Sunday school at his church, Saint John Neu-

Singleton will attend Grand Valley State University and pursue double majors in Criminal Justice and German.

Singleton said he's an average student, and never expected to get a scholarship.

"I was completely surprised by it," he said of the $1,000 scholarship. "It is just a pleasure to help the kids. I mean, someone else did it for me, so I felt it was only right to do it for them."

Family influence

Other scholarship winners were inspired by their families to return to school.

Plymouth mother, Cindi Binder, was impelled by her daughter's experiences in the hospital. Binder was awarded the Harold Rosin/Canton Community Foundation Grant for non-traditional She'll study nursing at Madonna University in the fall. "I chose nursing because my daughter had five major brain surgeries since she was 6 years old, and I've been a player on her medical team," Binder said.

Binder's daughter, Brandi, developed a serious seizure disorder shortly after her 5th birthday.

"It progressed very rapidly and she was having up to 200 seizures a day," Binder said. "It was a nightmare. We thought we were going to lose her several times."

Brandi's only hope to get the seizures under control was a hemispherectomy, or removal of half her brain. Today, Brandi is preparing to enter her senior year and is an A and B student. "Working with my daughter and her recovery was a full-time, 24-hour, seven-day a week job," Binder said. Although Brandi has not recovered the use of her left arm, and has struggled with right-brain functions like math, sequential and abstract processes, she has far surpassed expectations from 12 years ago. "We were at the cutting edge. No one knew then how to deal with a child with half of a brain," Binder said. "I knew there were other families out there who needed to know what we've learned, so I thought if I could combine the knowledge I have with professional training in nursing, I could help other people.'

Teacher's pet

Sandra Koelzer, another mother returning to school, chose her career because of her children.

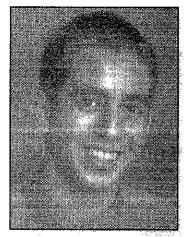

Koelzer will pursue a teaching degree, with a little help from the Canton Business and Professional Women $300 scholarship.

"When my kids were born, I started working evenings, so they wouldn't have to go to daycare. Then when they started school, I began working as a volunteer at the schools," Koelzer said. "Eventually. I got a job for (Wayne-Westland) school district, working as a secretary. And I started thinking, I think I could teach. I think I could make a career out of this."

The scholarship will make a huge dent in Koelzer's tuition costs. "It will help a lot," she said, adding she will continue to work full-time while she attends school in the evenings.

The $300 will pay most of her first semester tuition, and every little bit helps, she explained.

Scholarship applications for 2002 will be available Feb. 1, 2002. For more information about obtaining or providing scholarships, visit or call the Canton Community Foundation, 44237 Michigan Avenue, Canton in the Human Service Center on the southeast corner of Sheldon Road. Branding of schools raises health, ethics questions

The news media were among those raising red flags over the creeping commercialism in public schools more than 10 years ago. Well, we still have the same concerns - except for the creeping

The brand invasion in hallways, classrooms and even on athletic fields is an everyday fact of life in most districts, as evidenced by the Plymouth-Canton school board's June approval of a new, five-year pact with the Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

The contract effectively extends a previous deal with Coke to supply vending machines and soft drinks at Canton and Salem High Schools and will add Plymouth High School when it's completed in fall 2002. The district will take in as much as $1.5 million over the life of the contract.

The Observer understands the need to explore revenue alternatives in addition to state and federal funding, especially when the folks in Lansing are talking about spending less per student to cope with a shrinking budget. But neither should the pitfalls in these exclusive contracts be ignored. They range from health concerns; to marketing products to a captive audience of minors; to questions about the ethics of the companies themselves.

Plymouth-Canton officials say they have addressed the health issue and report that nearly half (43 percent) of the drinks sold are water and juice products. And those figures don't take into account the sale of milk in other machines placed throughout the high school complex. Some also stressed parental responsibili-what they are drinking," Trustee Susan Davis said during the discussion regarding the contract.

Detractors say the juice drinks, which include Powerade and Fruitopia, aren't much healthier than carbonated bever-

We know, too, that there's really nothing new in the idea of pushing products at young people to influence lifetime buying habits. Tobacco companies were doing it for years before the government starting cracking down on them in the 1990s. And if you think the proliferation of sponsorships and advertising at youthoriented venues like concerts or sports events is a recent trend, recall that outfield fences were plastered with ads and promotions almost from the day baseball was tabbed the "national pastime."

The difference is that by-and large those are private ventures, not publicly funded school buildings with a mandate from taxpayers to educate our children.

We wonder how closely Plymouth-Canton and other districts scrutinize the corporate policies and practices of commercial partners. For example, if Nike came checkbook in hand to the school board would there be any hesitation over the athletic footwear company's well-publicized poor treatment of employees in foreign factories? Should school officials consider the message they are sending with such deals - or is economics the overriding factor?

No amount of carping by the local newspaper - or anyone else, for that matter - is going to change the direction public schools have taken in searching out commercial tie-ins. Our hope is that in the rush for revenue Plymouth-Canton administrators and board members aren't blinded to the negatives of "branding" students, the supposed beneficiaries of this largesse.

In Wayne-Westland, a district already troubled by declining state test scores, the district is looking at $1.3 million in spending cuts and, crucially, a loss of funding for an early literacy grant to put a reading recovery teacher in each elementary school. In Garden City, Superintendent Richard Witkowski said the district will lose about $29.53 per student or of a decline in tax revenues that requires across-the-board cuts unless the Legislature acts to set priorities. "We had a shortfall in the school aid fund where we were spending more money than we had," according to Kelly Chesney, spokeswoman for the State Budget Office in Lansing. "We had to bring spending in line with available funds. It's very unfortunate that this had to happen."

In his statement issued last Thursday, Engler reminded the Legislature that they have had since May to work out an acceptable package for providing an adequate increase in funding for public schools (7.3 percent over two years).

The Senate approved a package of funding bills that the House found unacceptable.

While Engler is saying his action is final, state legislators are assuring voters that they will work something out when they return in the fall. State Rep. Ron Jelinek, R-Three Rivers, chair of the education subcommittee of House Appropriations, said a conference committee will meet over the summer to work out the differences between Senate and House bills that stalled the appropriations process. When the Legislature returns, they say they will have about a month to meet Engler's deadline.

In the short term, school districts will have to find other funding sources or trim back. Schools set their budgets by July 1 and many local districts had made plans based on the projected increase.

In Livonia, a healthy equity fund balance will make up the difference, at least for the coming year. Other school districts will be forced to make program $170,000. Last month the Garden City board passed a tight budget which left open whether funding would be available risk students. "It's devastating to us," Witkowski said. "To look for an additional $170,000 ... we certainly don't have it in fund equity. It's something that couldn't be absorbed.

for reading improvement grants or at-

Witkowski said the cuts would put the district in deficit.

School funding has become the state's No. 1 priority, especially since enacting Proposal A.

We are disappointed that lawmakers did not work hard enough to reach an acceptable compromise to preserve the originally projected increase in funding. We are also disappointed that the governor, despite his posturing, did not exert the necessary leadership in constructing a workable compromise before the Legislature slipped out of town.

It seems the Legislature had no trouble in agreeing on redistricting so that career politicians could position themselves for their next run for office. If only the interests of the public were as dear to their hearts.

We expect the "education governor" and the "education Legislature" to work things out when they "go back to school" so that schools won't have to make severe cuts in needed programs.

■ For free enterprise

I find it rather amusing that our Planning Commission is so wound up over the local business outdoor displays ("Sidewalk sales stir up debate." Canton Observer, July 8). Our township must be running so smoothly they lack for a challenge.

There is nothing un-American or un-Canton about outdoor sales. Free enterprise is the basis for our entire economy and I rather enjoy seeing active, hustling and bustling sidewalks with people pouring over shiny new merchandise. It gives me a feeling that our community is doing really well. I don't think it looks terrible at all. I applaud our local stores for taking the time and spending the money to move the displays outside.

Is our next requirement going to be to make car dealers store and display all vehicles indoors? It would seem this ordinance requires too much inter-

I hope we never get too proper that it gets in the way of what made our country great and makes a community feel so comfortable.

It should be pretty hard to not tell the difference between display and storage. Guys, if you see it out where the public can see, touch and feel, it's a display. If merchandise is stacked so as to keep people away from it, that is storage.

It is my guess that the Planning Commission is all alone on this one. William G. Pike

■ Law too strict

I appreciate how hard the township works to keep Canton beautiful, but some of the ordinances are really too strict ("Sidewalk sales stir up debate," Canton Observer, July 8). Every year I look forward to the clearance prices at the sidewalk sales. When I see the merchandise outside, I know it's time to go shopping. I have noticed that these sidewalk sales are becoming fewer and fewer. Now, I know why.

Why couldn't businesses have two weeks out of the year to display their merchandise outside during their clearance sales? As long as after the two weeks are up, they get the stuff back inside, even if their sales are not over. Then you could send out your ordinance inspector to make sure businesses comply.

■ Personal agendas

I agree that the businesses should not make the front of their buildings look tacky ("Sidewalk sales stir up debate," Canton Observer, July 8) but it appears that the members of the planning commission have their own personal agendas that I think are out of touch with the residents they serve.

It is time to get rid of the old group and put people in that look at the big picture. The planning commission should be more concerned about the developers in the area promising the sun and the stars, but in the end look at how much profit they can make without regard for the community!

Law a big mistake

The first weekend in July marked a difficult weekend for some citizens of Michigan as the Michigan State Supreme Court voted 4-3 to allow the relaxed CCW law to go into effect, ignoring the signatures of 250,000 petitioning Michiganders. This also set a very scary precedent by allowing a large special interest group and their legislators the ability to push a controversial state issue through during the lame duck session.

This law has nothing to do with sportsman or hunters - it has to do with people carrying weapons on their person in public. My dad is a hunter, and I learned from him to respect guns and hunters. However, having many more people carrying weapons through public streets is going too far.

I used to work on military bases and have gone through many FBI background checks myself. There were people that I worked that with that also went through these checks, however, some of them broke the law frequently - and until someone reported it, many of them had passed background checks for years. A background check will only show what someone has been caught and arrested

Many states that do use the FBI background checks are extremely backlogged, many of them surpassing the timeframe required to do a check before issuing licenses. It is not possible for these boards to actually know if a person is "clean or mentally stable" if the applicants do not report this on their applications.

During 1992-1997 the measured crime rate dropped 27 percent across the country, not only in Texas (a state with a similar CCW law). This is mostly attributed to the burgeoning economy, low unemployment rates and general health of this country's consumerism. The crime rate in the country did not drop because the citizens of Texas were packing heat! Be careful about not looking at the big picture when hearing statistics.

Putting aside the CCW issue, the misuse of power allowed that special interest groups now have free reign to influence and lobby legislators to get controversial issues put on our books with no concern to Michigan citizens opinions or right to petition for a referendum. Why couldn't the voters decide - what are these legislators and justices afraid of? Supreme Court Justice Michael Cavanagh commented, "The ruling threatens the right of the people to rein in the Legislature and circumvents the people's reserved referendum power. Whenever the Legislature wants to avoid the people's checks on its power, it need only insert some money into a bill.

This is a very scary precedent -Michiganders, you have just lost more power than you know, thanks to this misuse by some legislators and Michigan State Supreme Court justices! One legislator recently asked his pro-CCW promoters to "keep the high ground on the CCW issue," as reported in the Observer on June 28. That particular legislator has already blown that one himself!

CCW ruling 'worst case'

Phil Power in his column (Livonia Observer 7/12/01) concerning the Michigan Supreme Court's Ruling which deprives over 230,000 registered Michigan voters their Constitutional right to vote on the new CCW law has concisely analyzed the reasons why the American electorate today has chosen to have a national government divided equally among Democrats and Republicans.

What we have in this Michigan

Supreme Court's CCW ruling is the worst case scenario concerning what can happen when the legislative, executive and judicial branches of government are all controlled by one party. In this CCW situation, we have the Republican Party in Michigan controlling all branches of government. In so doing, the special interests which influence the party, here it is the National Rifle Association and the gun lobby, dictate the conditions under which the rest of us must live in the workplace, schools and daily walks of

As Mr. Power points out in his article, nothing corrupts as "absolute power." Fortunately for the voter in Michigan the "People Who Care About Kids" committee has vowed to undertake another referendum to force a vote on the CCW law. If you care, you can make a difference by supporting this referendum and those people trying to raise families in Michigan. Hillary and Margaret McLeod Livonia

In response to "no closure" (June 21) concerning the execution of Timothy McVeigh.

Sir, I would envision you to be hugging a tree as you read this. Who are you to assume that the fam-

The death penalty was not created for this touchy-feely "closure" culture anyway.

It was created so that human predators can be made an example of - not a...

State business halts while pols take care of their future

I have long suspected that the best way to figure out what's really important in life is to look carefully at the behavior of our legislative masters in Lansing. Last week's news comes as confirmation of the principle.

Lawmakers adjourned for their two-month summer vacation. (Two months! Yup. Our lawmakers don't go back to work until mid-September.) Before they left Lansing, the Ambitious lawmakers can now start making timely plans for their 2002 campaigns.

Failed to pass a budget for higher education. The fiscal year for Michigan schools and most colleges starts on July 1, the normal target date to decide how much money they will receive. But this year administrators will just have to twiddle their thumbs until the Legislature takes its own sweet time to work out a spending plan later this ■ Failed to pass a budget for K-12 schools. This is serious, too, because kids will be back in the classroom before the legislature reconvenes. Moreover, with tax revenues weak from a down economy, the state's promised foundation grant of $6,500 per pupil is at risk if the governor is the one who has to do the cutting. Lawmakers can save it, if only they pass a budget. So, for the first part of their fiscal year, school districts will be flying blind about how much they can spend.

■ Failed to pass legislation defining what constitutes a "failing school" and establishing appropriate responses. Mike Malott, director of the statewide news service that serves this newspaper, thinks this is the most important initiative now before the legislature. The senate passed the package earlier this year, but the house has yet to start work on it. Another school year will have started before lawmakers deal with the question of what to do about our worst-performing schools.

Failed to pass legislation on improving water quality by providing more money to fix up leaky sewer systems. Lawmakers started the year trumpeting about this critical issue requiring fast action. Not now.

A couple of other big issues fell off the table in the rush to adjourn, but I'm sure you get the

Certainly, we've all learned to admire the basic axiom of political life in the legislature: What's mine is mine and what's yours (or the public's) is

When it comes to serious matters like the boundaries of legislative and congressional districts that directly affect the political future of the political class, you can absolutely count on detailed and timely work by the legislature. But when it comes to relatively trivial matters like spending plans for schools and colleges for our kids and pure water for our state, there's plenty of time to wait. After all, the state's fiscal year doesn't begin until Oct. 1, so it's just their tough luck that the folks running schools and colleges have to begin their year without a firm budget from the state.

Of course, there's a lot of finger-pointing going on. Senators are harrumphing that inexperienced members of the newly term-limited House have no idea how to construct a budget when times are tough. And house members are grumbling that certain senior members of the senate - Dan DeGrow, who has a lot to say about school financing, is the main target - loaded up the budget bill with pork.

That's mostly spin. The fact is that lawmakers got distracted for much of this year by redistricting, a close competitor to money in the hierarchy of things that define political success. Republicans got tangled up in intramural fights between house members wanting to run for the senate, while Democrats have already sued in U.S. District Court about Gerrymandered districts.

As things stand now, the legislature is the body that makes decisions about redistricting. And when confronted with that issue, lawmakers seem to have trouble concentrating on anything

Mike Malott thinks that for the legislature to make redistricting decisions is an intrinsic conflict of interest. He's got a point. Certainly the business of the state ought not come to a grinding halt while the pols take care of their political

Rules are rules and they should apply to lawmakers

Mike Malott

Michigan's Supreme Court is apparently feeling the heat of the criticism being heaped on its recent ruling to block a referendum on the state's new concealed weapons law.

Justice Stephen Markman appeared Monday on the Mitch Albom Show on WJR to defend that 4-3 decision.

Frankly, he didn't do very well. And when a justice of the court has trouble justifying an opinion he helped write under the probing questioning of a sport-columnist-turned-talk-show-host, it might be taken as a sign the opinion isn't all it should be.

His appearance, along with dissenting Justice Marilyn Kelly, was a rarity because the court usually doesn't respond to criticisms, preferring instead to "let the opinion speak for the court."

Markman insisted the state Constitution has to be read in a strictly literal fashion, as the court ruled, and that you have to go by "the plain language" of its text.

Of course, previous courts and three justices on this one concluded that it doesn't make sense for the people of Michigan to "reserve to themselves the power to ... reject laws enacted by the legislature" and then leave a loophole in which the legislature can effectively block a referendum just by tacking on a few dollars. That, dissenting justices argued, would essentially eliminate the right of referendum.

But Markman points to Article II, Section 9, of the constitution, which states that "the power of referendum does not extend to acts making appropriations."

"How else are you going to read that?" Markman asked Albom.

A fair question. For myself, I might even be convinced by it if the court's "the-rules-are-the-rules" attitude was applied to the legislature as well as the people who took the trouble to pass petitions to challenge lawmakers.

But they weren't. I'm not a lawyer, but it appears to me there were a string of violations by lawmakers as they were getting this bill passed. If the rules applied to lawmakers the way the court chose to apply them to voters, the CCW law would never have been approved with the referendum-proofing appropriation in it in the first place. For example: ■ The $1 million was not in the bill when it passed the house. It wasn't in there when it passed the senate. The spending item was tacked on in conference committee. But Rule 8 of the Joint Rules of Senate and House clearly states that "the conference committee shall not consider any matters other than the matters of difference between the two Houses." Now, how else are you going to read that?

To be fair, such rules are routinely ignored by the Legislature, but then why are those rules there?

■ There are rules in the constitution intended to keep lawmakers from changing bills around too much, so that the public can keep track of what is going on there. Article IV, Section 24 states that "no law shall embrace more than one object." The law started out as a bill "to regulate and license the selling, purchasing, possessing, and carrying of certain firearms. ..." When the $1 million was added for the distribution of trigger locks, wasn't the bill given a second purpose? Several lawmakers pointed that out at the time but were ignored by the sponsors and the court. How are you going to read that one?

■ If the bill were an appropriation, protected from referendum, but it started as a regulation and licensing bill, then didn't the purpose of the bill change? Article IV, Section 24 of the constitution states that "no bill shall be altered or amended on its passage through either house so as to change its original purpose." How 'bout that?

To be fair, such rules are routinely ignored by the legislature, but then why are those rules there? To use the logic of the court, lawmakers could take action to change those rules if it doesn't like them, otherwise it should follow the plain language of those rules.

The court chose interesting timing to get picky about rules. It knew about the legislative history of the bill, but the justices of the majority decided to ignore it when lawmakers played fast and loose with the rules. They only applied the plain language of the rules when they were being applied to

I am suggesting a concept that could revitalize downtown Detroit, attract millions of tourists a year, boost the local economy, and retain Tiger Stadium as a baseball shrine. I have been thinking sporadically of this concept for nearly three vears - shortly after the Detroit Tigers owner said he would build a new stadium instead of renovating Tiger Stadium - but more intensely because of a July 8 New York Times story that destroys a myth about how and where baseball was originated.

5. While not important to out-of-towners, it would give the city of Detroit and its downtown section a major boost for tourists and local visitors – particularly for families whose children would not be legally allowed into nearby casinos because they are underage. The Hall of Fame in Detroit would be a logical destination for all categories of tourists and visitors who could tie it in with a game at Comerica Park (which I would prefer to be called the new Tiger Stadium). Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum, the Automobile Hall of Fame, to name a few. For true history buffs, visitors can also stroll through the nearby Corktown neighborhood and enjoy a meal at some of its new restaurants.

For downtown Detroit itself, moving the Hall of Fame to the stadium would give a major boost to the west side of that section, which certainly needs a catalyst for improvement.

Will Cooperstown and its chamber of commerce complain about such a proposed move? Of course! Detroit city and business leaders complained in 1973 when the Detroit Lions announced the team would move its games to the planned Pontiac Sil-

But let's face it. The local economy in Cooperstown was built on a myth.

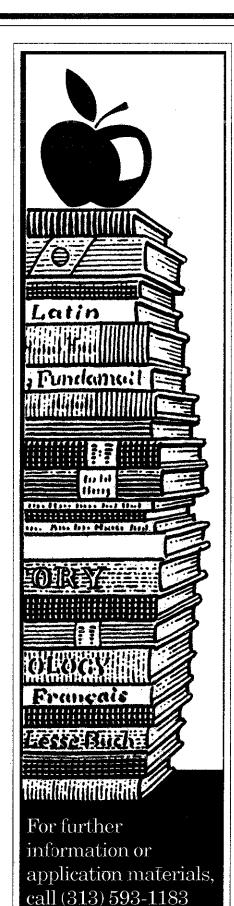

The recent New York Times story wasn't the first published questioning of Cooperstown being the birthplace of baseball. There have been serious questions about the true birthplace of baseball for many decades. Let's not be afraid to take a serious look at the hall's origins and consider a new location that would be vastly more convenient and closer to most of the Midwest and East Coast tourists coming by car or air. The concept represents an excellent chance for the Tiger Stadium Fan Club, city officials and true baseball fans to talk about the possible Hall of Fame relocation and prove to Major League Baseball officials that this is an idea whose time So now it is time to call Cooperstown's histori-map because "I'm the only Republican in southeast Michigan."

Fact of life

Knollenberg's district also is going to take on a new look and be known as the 9th. Longtime constituents in Livonia and Redford Township would drop out of Knollenberg's territory and join the new 11th.

Knollenberg cited disappointment in losing some of his long-time constituents.

"I'll miss those communities because they've been good to me," Knollenberg said. "But this is something that's a fact of life when you're in this business. You don't have permanent districts" because of population shifts.

On the plus side, Knollenberg said he will retain much of his home base (such as Farmington Hills) and gain a familiar chunk of central Oakland County, including the cities of Rochester, Royal Oak and Troy.

McCotter could be among those affected by the new boundaries, because it is widely expected he will run for the U.S. House, representing Wayne County communities that would be sheared off of Knollenberg's district if the map does take effect.

"Currently, I'd be interested in it," McCotter said, about what would be the new 11th. "... But right now, I don't know what the legislative statute says the district is going to be. It is intriguing, but it could change."

He added that he will continue operating as he always has "ever since I was elected as a trustee at Schoolcraft Community College. (You) prepare for all options and see what's left at the end of the day."

McCotter, summarizing redistricting efforts, said "What was a political process with legal constraints has now become a legal process with political consequences."

Rivers noted that four other Democratic districts would be boiled down to two if the new plan goes through. Those include: the adjacent 5th and 9th districts, represented by James Barcia and Dale Kildee; the 10th and 12th districts, represented by David Bonior and Sander Levin. Because Bonior is running for governor, the seat could be wide open for Levin.

"When you see that the goal was to create as many Republican districts as possible, then it makes sense," said Rivers, about why the proposed map was drawn up the way it was.

Setting Sail Tall ships celebrate Detroit's maritime history

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN STAFF WRITER Ichomin@oe.homecomm.net

t's two o'clock in the afternoon and John Jamian has been in and out of meetings all day to coordinate planning for the largest tall ships festival in Detroit's history. As executive director of the Detroit/Wayne County Port Authority and chairman of Sail Detroit. the Bloomfield Hills resident is responsible for organizing the event bringing 23 tall ships from the all over the U.S., France, Ukraine, the Bahamas and Canada to Detroit to celebrate the city's 300 years of maritime history.

The Port Authority began securing the boats with the first arrival on Tuesday. The 13 ships docked at Hart Plaza and 10 at Dieppe Park, Windsor allow visitors to experience first hand an era when Detroit loved boats more than cars. And yes, it's all right to call the tall ships boats. Jamian does it all the region's 300 years of history," said

"The reason why Detroit was discovered was because of its proximity to the water. It's why Cadillac discovered it. It was a major fur trading point with Europe and North America. This is a very international port on the Great Lakes."

Jamian expects plenty of languages and stories to be exchanged at the crew barbecue tonight. In fact, Jamian planned it that way. He knew ships from all over the world take part in the Great Lakes Tall Ships Challenge every summer so he contacted the American Sail Training Association to determine which vessels would be in the area then sent invitations. "Some were too big to maneuver under bridges, others weren't of historical significance," said Jamian.

We spent a year coordinating this. Imagine bringing 23 ships from all over the world, the immigration and Coast Guard issues, the logistics. Some sail across the ocean and through the St. Lawrence Seaway."

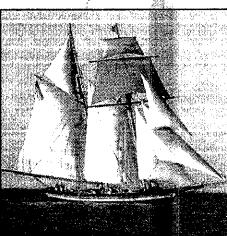

The 92-foot long Nina began its journey in Tortola, British Virgin Islands. The ship replicates the trading vessel Christopher Columbus used in his search for the New World.

The 114-foot long Bel Espoir, home port Brest, France, trains young sailors for sea-related careers. The top sail schooner, built in 1944 from wood in Denmark, originally provided an alternative for the troubled youth Father Javier and Father Gannon and their nonprofit Assoc. des Amis de Jeudi A.S.D. retrieved from different social and state institutions.

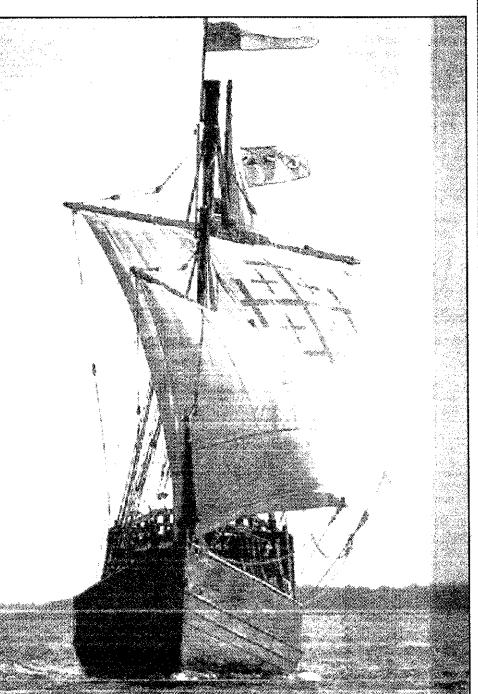

The 125-foot long HMS Tecumseh (Ontario, Canada), an honorary ship in the British Navy, is a full-scale replica of the original square topsail schooner built in 1814 in Chippewa

Once Jamian assembled his list of ships he was just a sail away from planning one of the biggest celebrations for Detroit's 300th birthday Sunday morning the 23 vessels head downriver to the Unbway anchorage near the River Rouge/Ecorse area, muster with the fire and mail boats, and Coast

"It's something that's never been done in Detroit," said Jamian. "We'll have all 23 ships plus 20 vessels of various historical meaning.

"It's going to be spectacular and all public events are free. You can watch from all along the river - Hart Plaza, Belle Isle, Historic Fort Wayne, any of the public areas on the riverfront. We're expecting a half-million to a million people."

"It makes this port director proud to see that many people interested in shipping."

While Jamian is delighted so many people want to see the tall ships, he asks that pleasure crafts follow a few rules of the waterway. Temporary anchorages have been set up near Hart Plaza, the Ambassador Bridge, Riverside Park and Historic Fort Wayne. At 12:30 p.m. portions of the Detroit River close along with the Belle Isle and Ojibway anchorages.

The U.S. Coast Guard has published a brochure specifically for the event listing all the do's and don'ts for the "Pleasure boats can not be within 100 feet of any of the tall ships," said Jamian. "We ask that people call the U.S. Coast Guard or the Port Authority for rules of the road. There's going to be lots of strict enforcement to keep the river chop down."

Young actors travel back in time, learn to appreciate history

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN STAFF WRITER Ichomin@oe.homecomm.net

Nancy Florkowski never dreamed she'd find herself researching the history of Detroit and writing a play. The Redford teacher usually directs tried and true Broadway musicals for her youth theater Tinderbox Productions.

But like the rest of the arts community, Florkowski felt inspired to present something special to help celebrate the city's 300th birthday. In December she applied for the Detroit 300 Partner Program to become one of the hundreds of recognized activities taking place during the year. Six months and nearly two dozen resource books later Joey's Field Trip to Detroit, A New World enlightens children as well as adults attending the 45-minute production at Masonic Temple in

The kids are really learning an appreciation for the history of Detroit," said Florkowski. "One of the things I didn't know was that Detroit was a large part of the Underground Railroad and was the last stop before Canada."

Joey Krupa especially enjoyed learning about Fort Detroit even though he has trouble remembering his lines about its history.

Vinnie Roberts couldn't agree more about liking "the

The only part of the play Lauren Martin doesn't enjoy is wearing a school uniform. The 9-year-old Northville resident is a student at Our Lady of Sorrows School in Farmington.

"I hate the school uniforms because they're kind of boring, kind of plain," said Martin who's taken lessons at Miss Harriet's School of Dance in Livonia for five years. This is her eighth production with Tinderbox.

Area:One gives you Oakenfold

By Stephanie Angelyn Casola STAFF WRITER * scasola@oe.homecomm.net

Like so many DJ's-in-demand, Paul Oakenfold finds himself constantly in motion. Just weeks before the start of the Area:One Festival – a convergence of rap, rock, pop and techno and the brainchild of Superstar Moby -London-born Oakenfold has but a moment to spare. You see, he's jetting off to Ibiza, Spain.

And it couldn't be a more appropriate pre-cursor to the major tour. Oakenfold first visited the island more than a decade ago and discovered his "Balearic beat," the sound that revolutionized dance music in the U.K. and household name in the States.

"I never wanted to be involved in a so-called band," admits the soft-spoken music guru. "I never wanted to play guitar. But I liked the thought of playing music.

When he encountered DJs mixing records and making beats in clubs, he saw the turntable as an instrument for the first time.

Oakenfold was a natural choice to join Area:One. "Moby asked me, so I said yes," he explains, "He sent me a nice little e-mail and I was like 'Yeah.' I like what Moby does."

The line-up, which also includes OzzFest veterans

Furtado and legendary Detroit Techno "Innovators" Derrick May, Kevin Saunderson and Juan Atkins, offers the most diversity on a single concert bill this summer. "The concept works nicely in England," says Oakenfold. He hopes it succeeds Stateside as well.

"I'm happy to be able to play to a completely different audience," he says. "It will be good for me."

Oakenfold should know well what's good for him. He's built his career from the ground up. Once a courier shuffling along the subways in New York City, he was drawn into nightclub culture, tempted by the birth of hip hop, and landed work at record labels like Champion and Def Jam where he'd get credit for signing acts like DJ Jazzy Jeff and The Fresh Prince and Salt and Pepa.

But Oakenfold sought more control, more influence over the dance floor. He began remixing and producing, launched his Perfecto label and made his mark on trance. He was even invited to open for U2's Zooropa Tour. With the recent release of his compilation, Another World, Oakenfold combines the unexpected. Timo Maas' Ubik falls alongside Led Zeppelin's Babe I'm Gonna Leave You. In Oakey's world Dead Can Dance is no longer alternative.

Oakenfold won't reveal much about his upcoming set on the tour. He hadn't gotten to planning for it when we spoke in late June. "I'm building my own DJ booth to take on the road," he says, reaching for an answer.

At present, he's inspired by film scores and British bands like Coldplay.

And Oakenfold is looking forward to returning to Detroit. The city has embraced him this year making his appearances at places like St. Andrews Hall a stunning success. "I really like Detroit," he says. "I think the

The Bigger Lovers breed warm, fuzzy pop sounds secret – I'm a person. Dogs? Dogs are fine. But I prefer to share my space with a 20pound, 12-yearold black-andorange feline named Nikki. She's awfully cuddly (most of the time) and has this amazing ability to sit almost upright on a couch. I've never seen anything quite like it.

What on Earth does this have to do with music? Stay with me.

You can imagine my surprise while shuffling through CDs in my car one day when I uncovered a photograph of Miles. Miles is an oversized cat belonging to Bret Tobias, singer of Philadelphia's best kept pop secret, The Bigger Lovers. He appears on the inside cover of the band's debut, How I Learned to Stop Worrying, sitting upright on a couch. Being the largest of Tobias' pets, Miles is often referred to as "the bigger lover." Are you catching on yet?

"People seem to like the cat," admitted drummer Patrick Berkery, "He has people now." It all started with a feline.

But it only takes one good listen to How I Learned to Stop. Worrying, to get you hooked. The instant those Beach Boys harmonies and The Who-style guit's no real tar riffs hit your ear drums you scope," said Berkery. "When the won't be able to resist it. I could-

> So I wasn't about to pass up a talk with the band's newest member, Berkery, who was busy in Philadelphia, anticipating a first visit to the Motor City.

> A music fan since age 4, he remembers when his relatives would buy him toy drums and guitars. By Christmastime, age 8, little Patrick unwrapped his first real drum kit and a musician emerged. "I really wasn't so good at baseball," is his only explanation.

His aunt exposed him to the sweet sounds of The Beatles. His sister loved Prince and The Police. Music was unavoidable. "I was coming of age when MTV just started to happen.'

When he's not playing music, Berkery is writing about other people who play music - as a journalist frequently gracing the pages of Magnet and Philadelphia Weekly. "It's the only other thing I can do."

I'm with the band

When fellow Bigger Lovers Bret Tobias, Scott Jefferson and Ed Hogarty roped Berkery in to play drums, around the fall of 1999, it looked as though they were on a road to rock stardom. Just about to make a first record, The Bigger Lovers got picked up by a major label. When I came to be in the band merger went down with Universal, we got the heave-ho."

But the band, and Berkery, stuck it out. "They are probably the best songwriters I've eyer worked with," he says of Tobias and Jefferson. "It was always important to me to be able to pull it off live."

It took some time to work out the kinks on stage, but the band discovered they had more to worry about. How I Learned To Stop Worrying almost never saw the light of day.

The Bigger Lovers recorded it nearly two years ago for Mood Food Records (home to bands like Whiskeytown). Completed with producer Daniel Presley (The Breeders, Imperial Teens) by February 2000, the record had an initial release date of March 2000. March turned to April and April to August. The label then lost its distribution. but still owned the rights to this record.

The band was forced to buy back their own record and shopped it around until they found a label willing and able to release it. Enter Black Dog Records (Marah, Continental Drifters), a small outfit based in Mississippi.

In March 2001 the long wait was over. "It was just a matter of being patient," said Berkery. Radio airplay in Philadelphia has helped bolster a following. Favorable write-ups in newspapers and magazines were another bonus. But The Bigger Lovers music speaks for itself. Songs like the addictive clap-along quality of I'm Here, the candycoated chorus found on Threadbare and Beatlesque build of Casual Friday are met by a pleasantly unexpected twang of a lap steel in the record's farewell, Out of Sight. It's a popdelight delivered by able, eager musicians.

Next on the set list...

The band's new material could be described as more "Kinksish." "It's a lot more immediatesounding," said Berkery. "It won't be as over-the-top produced." He's hoping this time around a bigger label will latch onto The Bigger Lovers.

"We don't have any delusions of grandeur that we're going to become The Rolling Stones," he added. They've come this far alone. No booking agent. No manager. And The Bigger Lovers survived it all without a hint of scandal fit for VH-1's Behind The Music.

"I'm past the point where I'm in my late 20s and I think 'I gotta be a rock star," he said. 'We can do this. If we have to have day jobs, so be it. People seem to really like what we do

Pumpstock 2001 comes to 'Town'

Tall ships won't be the only attraction this weekend in the city celebrating three centuries. One of Detroit's premier pubs, The Town Pump will draw attention for the fourth year with its mini music festival - Pumpstock. Beginning at 7 p.m. Friday through Saturday, outside the tavern, at 100 Montcalm in Detroit, owner Sean Harrington welcomes eight local bands to play a tribute all their

One highlight at this year's festival, The OrbitSuns will hit the stage behind the Town Pump at 10 p.m. Friday, July 20, just before the evening's headliners Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise. Detroit native Vinnie Dombroski, vocalist for twang-rock quintet, has never made it to Pumpstock in the past, but anticipates a good crowd.

Together for two years, Dombroski formed The OrbitSuns around a batch of songs steeped in Americana and country rock tradition. He is accompanied by Jimmy Paluzzi (formerly of Hoarse and Sponge) on drums, multi-talented Tim Duvalier on six string and lap steel guitars and the newest addition on bass, John

Though a country project might seem a strange fit for Dombroski, who is also known as head crooner for bands like the reunited Sponge and hard rock band Crud, he insists the sound has infiltrated his songs for years.

"There were smatterings of it in some of the Sponge music," he said, naming songs like 96 and Have You Seen Mary. "That kind of music, older style, country music, I've always been very fond of it."

Not one to stop writing, Dombroski found he had so many songs of that nature, he built The OrbitSuns around it. The band frequents Detroit area clubs and has established a fol-Naming influences like Hank Williams,

Johnny Cash and George Jones, he considers the style of music one that endures, one that hinges on American pop culture and has served to influence even Elvis and The Beatles. "The lyrics are sometimes very simple, but they cut to the bone," said Dombroski. When writing songs for The OrbitSuns, Dombroski finds he approaches it in a very different way. These songs are linked to something timeless and inspired by music that has remained more than relevant for the past 50

While Detroit's 300th Birthday Celebration kicks off coinciding with Pumpstock, what better time is there to celebrate music history and support the future of our metro area artists?

Pumpstock begins 7 p.m. Friday, July 20, and features Jettison Red, Metaphysical Jones, The OrbitSuns, Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise and continues 7 p.m. Saturday, July 21, with Harry Chronic Jr., Paradime, Stungun and The Howling Diablos, all outside The Town Pump tavern, 100 Montcalm, Detroit. Merchants include BDT Imports. Bag Lady Beads, Dick Clothing. Tickets $12. Call (248) 645-6666 for tickets or (313) 961-1929 for more informa-- By Stephanie Angelyn Casola tion.

cut nearly in half over the past few years, Housey seems hopeful that things will brighten soon.

Housey has run the restaurant/bar since his dad, Mitch Housey Sr., opened it in Livonia in 1964. When Housey Sr. wanted to branch out into Dearborn Heights in 1973, Housey Jr. assumed owner roll in Livonia with business partner Beverly Feuer, who lives in Taylor.

Housey Sr. has since passed away, but the restaurant continues on. Housey Jr. has no plans of shutting down soon.

Before his current endeavor, the father-son team both worked at Housey's Chop House in Detroit in 1955. The Chop House gave Housey Jr. the kick start he sought, even though he was only 13 years old at the time.

Since the opening of Mitch Housey's in Livonia, the open dining area and 150-person banquet facility have been hot spots for many locals. Housey said his business consists mostly of regulars, but because of nearby I-96 and the motel, there are a lot of first time diners.

A big dinner menu and daily specials have kept bellies full and mouths watering since day one. In addition, a full bar with a great top shelf liquor selection and beer choices compliment the friendly and fast service.

Unique dishes

Unique dishes such as mini tacos, broiled steak bits and fettucine alfredo with shrimp and crab add a flare to the menu. And don't pass on the famous prime rib ($16.95). It's slow roasted overnight to rare/ medium rare, carved and cooked to order and served with au jus. Server Nicki Swain noted, "We sell more prime rib than anything.'

Covering both surf and turf, there's a wide variety of seafood and steaks, including Alaskan king crap legs, lobster tails and filet mignon.

All of the dishes are homemade, Housey assures, even the soups, meat loaf and pasta dish-

"I use mine 365 days a year," said Bob McClain, department head at The Home Depot in Livonia.

What should you look for in a ceiling fan? "Longevity, style, you want one that's quiet," said Mike Kotecki of the electrical department of Lowe's in Westland. "After that it becomes a personal preference." Warranties range from 15 years, to 30 years to lifetime, he said.

The most frequently asked question from ceiling fan customers is what size to get, Kotecki said.

If the room measures 8 by 10 feet, the fan diameter should be 30 inches; if the room is 10 by 12 feet, the fan diameter should be 42 inches; if the room is more than 12 by 12 feet, up to 20 by 20 feet, the fan diameter should be 52 will have a tendency to break. It's very important to inspect your boxes before hanging (the fan)." The fan can be hung on a downrod, or close because I had the chance to visit the historic and lovely Magnolia Plantation and its Gardens near Charleston, S.C.

MARTY FIGLEY

The gardens, which opened to the public in the late 1860s, are regarded as America's oldest manmade tourist attraction.

The plantation has, for more than three centuries, been the original ancestral home of the Drayton family. It is believed that no other plantation in South Carolina is still under original family ownership from that time; 13 generations of the present owning family have lived here.

There are acres of gardens, formal and informal, mazes and statues, peacocks and guinea hens, miniature horses that graze in a field surrounded by a split-rail fence, and so much more to see and experience.

The plantings offer beauty all through the year, so a visit can be planned at any time. Each path leads to more beauty and the question, "What could be more beautiful than what I am now seeing?"

Visitors can observe plantation life as it was in the 1840s, with the vegetable garden near the domestic workers' cabins and guinea hens in the yard. The domestic workers were taught to read and their schoolroom is on the grounds.

Fun for all

Canoeing, bike and walking nature trails, picnic areas, a 125-acre rice field waterfowl refuge and a petting zoo of plantation animals will keep every member of the family busy and entertained

A leisurely stroll through the many gardens is a highlight. The lovely Crepe Myrtle was in full bloom when I was there. The present director, Taylor Drayton Nelson, says the Camellia collection—more than 100 years old—is magnificent toward the end of March and Rhododendron blooms aren't to be missed, nor are the Magnolia Grandiflora, the flower for which the plantation was named.

There are several theme gardens such as an enclosed Barbados Tropical Garden, a Topiary Garden and a Biblical Garden. There is also a large Indian burial mound and a plantation worker graveyard.

A neat experience is a 45minute ride on the nature train around the rice fields and wildlife refuge that borders the Ashley River.

All kinds of water creatures such as turtles, alligators, osprey, bald eagles and the like reside in this area. A nature boat plies the water of the ancient 150-acre flooded rice field, now a wildlife refuge for many waterloving birds and swamp inhabitants.

Gardens

Boardwalks and dikes lead through The Audubon Swamp Garden, 60 acres of blackwater cypress and tupelo swamp.

This is a most unusual major garden and wildlife preserve, and should be a must on the list of things to do. Try to spend at least 45 minutes to see alligators, anhinga (water turkey) and other wildlife as well as beautiful water lilies.

The Audubon Swamp Garden is independently operated by that Society and is reached through Magnolia Plantation. It is open to coincide with the plantation hours.

The Biblical Garden was most peaceful and bordered by boxwood with a religious statue standing in the center. Along one path in the woods, red and white impatiens had been planted under the Magnolias; quite a sight.

Another beautiful area is the formal Herb Garden, just inside a long hedge of Crepe Myrtle. Just behind this garden is the magnificent ancestral home with a collection of outstanding Early American antiques. Tours are available.

Live oaks are festooned with Spanish moss and are quite picturesque; the mist over the river, in early morning evokes a feeling of tranquility that radiates from this centuries-old plantation and gardens.

Putting Magnolia Plantation on your itinerary when you're traveling South is suggested.

Refreshments are available. A gift shop is filled with lovely things. Open 365 days a year, 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Call for November to February hours.

Magnolia Plantation is on Highway 61, just 10 miles from downtown Charleston, Route 4, 29414. Visit the Web site, www.magnoliaplantation.com, or call (843) 571-1266 or (800) 367-3517.

HOME WORK

Keep your lawn equipment in tip-top shape this summer

HARRY JACHYM

into summer, the excitement about lawn care of the spring tends to turn into drudgery. We sometimes ask ourselves why we fertilize and water because it

we're well

just makes the grass grow. We use the equipment we prepared in the spring to cut and trim our yards, and don't think about them until the next time they're needed. This complacency can lead to premature wear of the tools and make them harder to use. A power tool that runs well is easier and safer to use and produces less pollution.

Inspect equipment

Take a moment to visually inspect the equipment before each use. The vibrations of small engines can easily loosen the most secure fastener. Debris in the cooling fins reduces the unit's efficiency and can contribute to overheating of the engine, which can shorten its

Even though it's a simple matter of unscrewing one cap, we often don't bother to check the oil. Small engines can be notorious oil burners, especially with age. Add oil as necessary, but don't over fill. If you haven't changed the oil lately, do it now. Spray cables occasionally with penetrating lubricants, such as WD-40.

Just as a sharp knife is easier to use than a dull one, a sharp mower blade reduces the amount of work needed from the engine to turn it. This in turn reduces fuel consumption and places less wear on the engine.

Grass clippings that compress on the underside of the mower (especially true of mulchers) also create drag on the engine and hasten deterioration of the deck.

Rinse the deck after each use and avoid cutting the lawn when it's wet. My wife's friend sprays cooking oil on the underside of her lawnmower deck to help prevent this buildup. Be certain to disconnect the spark plug wire before working under the lawnmower deck.

Check filters

Engines need air to burn fuel. A dirty air filter reduces the amount of air available so fuel is burned with less efficiency.

Depending on the type (consult the owner's manual), the filter needs to be replaced or cleaned often especially in dry, dusty conditions.

Anything you do to keep your power equipment running better also will help reduce pollution it

Pollution controls on small engines can be difficult for the manufacturers since the cost of the control equipment often exceeds the cost of the engine. Use common sense when operating equipment. Because of summer's heat we may want to do our lawn work dressed like Jimmy Buffett. Sandals and shorts don't mix with power equipment. Wear eye protection, especially when using string trimmers and edgers.

And a final word of advice from an old shop teacher who asks "what?" a lot, use hearing protection.

Harry Jachym, a licensed builder, lives in Plymouth and teaches building trades to high school students.

Vatch summer electric bills

As energy rates soar, everyone needs affordable ways to beat the heat.

With hot weather already upon us, now is the time to give your home a "check-up." Here are six tips from the Comfort Institute to make sure your summer electric bills don't blow your

Don't run your clothes dryer when it's hot out. Your dryer blows air out of your house when it's drying clothes. And for every cubic foot of air it blows out, a cubic foot of hot outside air gets sucked in that your air conditioner has to cool down. Run your dryer late at night or early morning and you'll have lower electric bills. Even better, use a "solar powered" clothes dryer: a clothes line in the back yard.

Have your duct system tested for air leaks. Many think that windows and doors are the major cause of a home's energy wasting air leaks. But according to recent research by the Department of Energy, gaps, joints and disconnections in the typical home's duct system are much more significant. The DOE states that the typical duct system loses 25 percent to 40 percent of the energy put out by the central heat pump or air condi-

Leaks are usually the biggest problem. Authorities recommend having a contractor seal them with bushed on "mastic." Duct tape often dries out and fails. (It turns out duct tape is great for many things, but sealing ducts isn't one of them!)

Ask your air conditioning contractor to perform an Infiltrometer "blower door" test. The blower door is a computerized instrument originally invented by the Department of Energy. It pinpoints where your home's worst air leaks are, such as duct leaks, and also measures how leaky the overall house is. While most homes are still far too leaky, some are now quite tight, and need mechanical ventilation to ensure the air inside is fresh. Many contractors offer an Infiltrometer test as part of a "Whole House Comfort Checkup" that also checks insulation levels and overall duct performance.

For more information, visit the website www.comfortin stitute.org.

Replace your air conditioning or heat pump air filter. Most systems need this done every month to ensure safe and efficient operation. Some such as electronic air cleaners need to be thorough-

Have your air conditioner cleaned and tuned. A pre-season tune up is a great investment. It reduces the chances of breakdowns in the middle of the summer and more than pays for itself through more energy efficient operation. Make sure the contractor cleans both the indoor and outdoor heat transfer coils, and checks refrigerant gas charge by measuring "superheat" and "subcooling.'

For a free report: "How To Identify a Good Heating and Cooling Contractor", go to www. comfortinstitute.org.

Consider replacing your old air conditioner or heat pump. Just like a car, central cooling equipment doesn't last forever.

If your system is over 12 years old, and you are planning to stay in your home more than a few years, may authorities recommend replacing it before it fails permanently. A new system improves comfort, is more dependable, creates less air pollution and pays for itself through energy savings. New units are up to twice as energy efficient. Choose one with an EPA "Energy Star" label.

CREATIVE LIVING

Take care of your camera

FOCUS ON

MONTE NAGLER

Taking PHOTOGRAPHY good care of your camera will assure that it will perform satisfactorily for you for many years. Here some are basic tips to help you out.

Never leave your camera in a very hot or cold very spot. Temperature extremes can tings and distort mechanisms.

■ Keep the body free of dust and dirt. A soft cloth works fine. I've found that Q-Tips dipped in film cleaner solution are an ideal way to reach those hard-to-getat places on your camera.

■ It's easier than you think to accidentally have a camera knocked from your hands or bumped into a solid object. Accidents or rough handling can cause severe damage. So always use a camera strap. Having your camera securely around your neck prevents accidents.

■ Most cameras aren't waterproof and can be damaged significantly if water gets inside. Take care to protect both body and lens from water (especially salt water). If your camera should get wet from rain, dry it off immediately with a soft, clean cloth.

■ Don't touch the glass on the front or back of your lens. Fingerprints, if not removed right away, may eventually become permanent. Keep your lenses clean with lens cleaning tissue and lens cleaning solution.

■ Store your camera in a dry, ventilated place. The original box with its moisture-absorbing silica gel bag is an ideal means of safe storage.

■ If you're not going to shoot for a while, remove all batteries from your camera. This will prolong their life and eliminate any chance of battery corrosion that can damage your camera.

Try thinking of your camera as a best friend and treat it accordingly. If so, you'll enjoy a mutually rewarding and satisfying relationship that will last for many years.

Moving on after loss takes time

"In 4 days it will be seven months since David died."

"Stop it," my dad said with absolute concern and love. "It's OK to say, 'another month's passed' since David died, but you've got to stop counting the days, hours, minutes."

He's right, but I can't help

David died from complications of acute mylogenous leukemia at 3:56 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 17, 2000, 6 months,

Keely Kaleski Wygonik

9 days, 8 hours, 4 minutes before our 19th wedding anniversary.

I threw the first handful of dirt into his grave after the funeral luncheon Thursday, Dec. 21, and wondered how I'd live without him.

All by myself

I'm learning, but it's not easy. I've never lived alone, and have difficulty remembering when there wasn't a man in my life to love and take care of.

I lived with girlfriends in college, and got married 14 days after graduating from Michigan State University. In high school I met a guy, just before my 16th birthday, and didn't date anyone else. We broke up when I met David at Henry Ford Community College in

After David died I got help from professionals and have spent a lot of time thinking and looking at photo albums trying to figure out who I am and want to be. About two months ago I began including "Kaleski" in my byline.

Before I became David's wife, I was Keely Kaleski. Some people will say you can't change your name and change your life. But I'm not sure they're right. Thinking of myself as Keely Kaleski is empowering. It reminds me that I have roots that extend beyond marriage.

Making do

Women have this tendency to want to please others, and in doing this they lose themselves. It's the difference between being a "make time" woman - someone who makes time to do what they need to do to be good to themselves, and a "make do" woman - someone who puts the needs of others ahead of her own. I've always been a "make do" woman.

David and I led a pretty sedentary lifestyle. I gained weight, and was shocked in January 2000 to discover that I weighed 200 pounds.

I've lost over 60 pounds and dropped from a size 16 to a size 8. Instead of vacationing at a resort, I begged my dad and brother Mike to let me join them on a bicycle adventure along the Wisconsin River. I rode over 370 miles in six days, learned how to put up a tent, carried my own gear and made new friends.

When I came home I felt like taking care of things I'd put off like selling David's car and finding out what classes to take this fall at Walsh College where I'm an MBA student.

Friends have started to introduce me to their single, male friends. I celebrated my 19th wedding anniversary with girlfriends who made me laugh and told me about dating in the '90s.

I've read "Mars and Venus Starting Over" and "Mars and Venus on a Date" by John Gray, "What Smart Women Know" by Steven Carter and Julia Sokol, and Anthony Storr's "Solitude: A Return to the Self."

I'm learning a lot, embracing this new single life, and laugh thinking about all the things I did wrong on my first two dates in 20 years - poor guys.

Stop apologizing

My best friend's brother tells me that I must stop apologizing all the time, and gave me a copy of "The Awakening" by Mahlene Louis.

"Make a promise to never betray yourself and to never settle for less than your heart's desire," she writes. Another friend told me to "embrace this time. You don't have to worry about rushing home from work to make dinner. You can leave junk on the counter, dirty dishes in the sink." Instead of "making do" I'm learning to "make time." "A smart woman has the good sense to appreciate those times in her life when she is without a relationship ... when she can be utterly self-involved. I'm working on it, a day at a time.

Golden rule

Age is only a number to Canton senior

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON STAFF WRITER kmortson@oe.homecomm.net

'm a business woman. I've been working all my life and I've got to keep on working," said 89-year-old Susan Golden.

The Canton resident works three days a week as a senior aide with Help-Source of Ypsilanti. The Senior AIDES Program is funded by the National Senior Citizen Education and Resource Center and places income-eligible individuals (55 and older) in paid employment internships at local non-profit and governmental agencies.

Golden's involvement with Help-Source first started in 1988 when she worked as a job bank employee counseling senior citizens to find employment. According to Sally Kruger, Help-Source Senior AIDES program and Adult Day Services program supervisor, Golden has been a valuable asset to HelpSource since the very begin-

"I think it's great she's still working," said Kruger. For the past six years Golden has worked at the Plymouth Adult Day Services Program on the campus of Our Lady of Providence in Northville. "She keeps that program going as much as that program keeps her going. It has really given her a purpose to stay active.'

Three days a week from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Golden is transported to the Northville facility from her Canton home where adults with memory loss (dementia) and other special needs spend the day in a socially stimulating environment supported by recreational/cognitive activities. The 89-year-old says she helps serve coffee and a light breakfast, makes the guests comfortable, gets them anything they need and one of her favorite activities - sings

"I'm a ham at heart," admits Golden. "I love to sing and dance for our guests."

Special touch

Greg Perkins, site manager of Plymouth Adult Day Services in 6 Northville, is Golden's direct supervi-

"Some of our members have more needs than others. Some have a hard time eating," said Perkins. "Sally sits with them and guides and prompts them to eat which can be critically important for patients with dementia. She has a sensitivity for that and shows empathy toward these special human beings.

Golden attributes her ease in working with people to the lifetime she's spent involved with the public. After her family immigrated from Bialystok, Poland to the United States when she was an infant, they started a retail shoe business, J. Swed Shoe Company in Milwaukee. Eventually she and her husband were involved with the readyto-wear industry in both Wisconsin and eventually Miami in the early 1940s where she worked at a dress shop at the prominent Saxony Hotel. "I was there during the big 1945 boom," remembers Golden. "Desi Arnaz's troop was there and a lot of other very well known people." In 1953 Golden moved to Michigan with her two children, Alan and Sharon, where she joined her second husband. Life long goal

Having dreamt about being a nurse one day, Golden said she wanted to be a caregiver after her mother fell ill

when she was a teenager. She finished two years of her high school education but then dropped out. "It was always on my mind to get my GED. It was important to me because I couldn't finish school when my mother was sick."

In her late 70s Golden went back to school and completed the classes to receive her GED certificate. "I'm really proud of that."

In addition to working in retail, Golden said she helped open Mead-era Angélico knew she wanted to be an architect When she was just 6 years old. She might not have known what the word meant, but she was left with such a lasting impression after seeing the Catedral Metropolitana in Brazil's capital, that it would shape her entire educational and profession-

"My dad drove the whole family to Brazilia in 1962," remembers Angélico. "Architect Oscar Niemeyer was charged with designing a new capital for the city. I remember we went to the cathedral and entered it from a tunnel and it just exploded in front of us with all this color. I was so impressed. I saw people walking around so mesmerized. I knew I wanted to bring to people that kind of wonderment and joy."

For Angélico the trip to the South American city was all she needed to start her on a path to becoming an architect. The road, however, wasn't a smooth one and it would be nearly 40 years before she was able to fully realize her dream.

"I'm an avid reader and that started when I was very young," said Angélico. "My dad was very supportive and really fed my hunger for learning by buying me all different kinds of books about architecture and art."

Accomplished: Vera Angélico, AIA, president of Angélico Design Group of Plymouth, faced many obstacles before she became a registered architect last year.

After graduating from high school and receiving her degree in architecture from the University of Sao Paulo in Brazil, she began work as an architect. Her fiancé, however, was from the United States and he eventually moved his bride to Hous-The first of many disappointments came when Angélico learned her degree wasn't comparable to American standards. She was told she wouldn't be able to work here as an architect and would have to start her education over from scratch.

"It was tough. The language was very hard. I didn't have anybody to give me the ropes and being a woman ... a Latina woman ... was a big struggle, said Angélico.

Angélico then moved to New Jersey and in 1985 relocated to Michigan.

The Northville resident said she combined her love of art and architecture and began working as a design consultant. Being a licensed architect was still out of reach.

In 1989, Vera quit working at a Jackson architecture firm to help her husband start his own business. Then a call from a friend in San Francisco in 1996 forced her to do some soul searching.

"He and I went to school together in Brazil. He told me he was living in California and said he was registered as an architect. 'When will you be?', he asked. I told him forget about it.'

Please see ARCHITECT. C7

Angélico couldn't get his question out of her mind. "It took me one year to wrap everything up with my clients again," said Angélico. "I wanted a clean cut."

After a potential architect finishes approximately six years of school they must complete a three-year internship and then pass nine exams - Angélico referred to as "grueling" - that range in duration from five to seven hours long.

"I had no social life and my family never saw me but I knew I had to do this for myself."

Angélico graduated from Lawrence Technological University and in 1997 began the daunting task of looking for an internship as a woman in her 40s, entering a field that was very much dominated by people half her age.

She eventually found a good fit for her situation and her interest in medical office facilities projects by working at MAS Associates of Farmington Hills under the leadership of President Charlie Johnston.

According to Johnston, architecture interns are part of the internship development program, a requirement of the American Institute of Architects (AIA). The program sets standards for interns, including monitoring the hours an intern accumulates as well making sure they are exposed to an array of projects so that they may become licensed.

When we were looking for an intern to fill the position, Vera was simply the best possible choice for the job," said John-

MAS has a director of operations who is responsible for making sure interns fulfill their requirements, and reviews their work. Johnston said Vera got great reviews on the projects she was involved in and was known as a hard worker.

"Charlie was very supportive of my journey," said Angélico.

In 2000, Angélico began the licensing process and finished all nine tests in six months. "It was a major event when the envelope came in the mail. I started yelling that I passed. It was such a celebration. Everytime I see my name on a piece of mail with AIA after my name I just can't believe that's me."

Through a mutual acquaintance, Angélico met Danny Hancock, owner of a small Fowlerville carry-out pizza business. He was in the market for an architect to design a restaurant where a car dealership showroom once stood.

"She's the greatest," said Hancock. "She went above and beyond the call of duty.'

In the end Angélico designed Danny's Pizza Shack, a 1,650 square-foot restaurant that seats 50 in Fowlerville. Hancock said the project had its up and downs including a change in inspectors. "The new inspector wanted more and more drawings. All I would have to do was call Vera and she was on it. If it weren't for her I probably would have thrown in my hat.'

FUND RAISING & BENEFITS

Progress

In the last year Angélico has joined with Joe Labriola, director of design, to form Angélico Design Group of Plymouth. Her philosophy embraces both art and architecture. Recent projects have included both residential and commercial building.

"When you design something you have take into consideration the impact it's going to have on the quality of the environment and remember that a building is not a sculpture. We have to live with this everyday of our lives. You can't put it in the closet if you don't like it."

The Plymouth businesswoman's father passed away before she became licensed in the United States. She knew he was proud of her.

"After I called my husband and told him I passed the test, I called my mom in Brazil. She's so proud of me ... everyone in my family is. It took me a very long time and it was a very painful journey with many adversities. But I held onto my dreams and my passions and I've learned how to become a fighter."

A fighter and an architect said Angélico.

Being Helpful vs. Complaining

It is a wise person who knows when and how to tactfully speak up about a situation that may need correcting. When a person is critical of almost everything, they may be looked upon by others as being a "complainer". There is a significant difference between grumbling and honestly trying to be helpful. Most businesses have a customer service department to handle problems and complaints. They usually do not call them "complaint departments" because they know that correcting problems and providing good service are beneficial to good business, whereas complaining denotes a negative tone. In addition, no one likes to listen to someone who is always complaining. The Bible tells us in Colossians 3:13, "Be tolerant with one another and forgive one another whenever any of you has a complaint against someone else. You must forgive one another just as the Lord has forgiven you." We should try to be more positive to reduce the stress in our lives; God wants us to work and live in harmony with those around us.

Golden's daughter, Sharon Fuller of Connecticut, said the work her mother has done as a senior aide has really given her a reason to get out of bed each day.

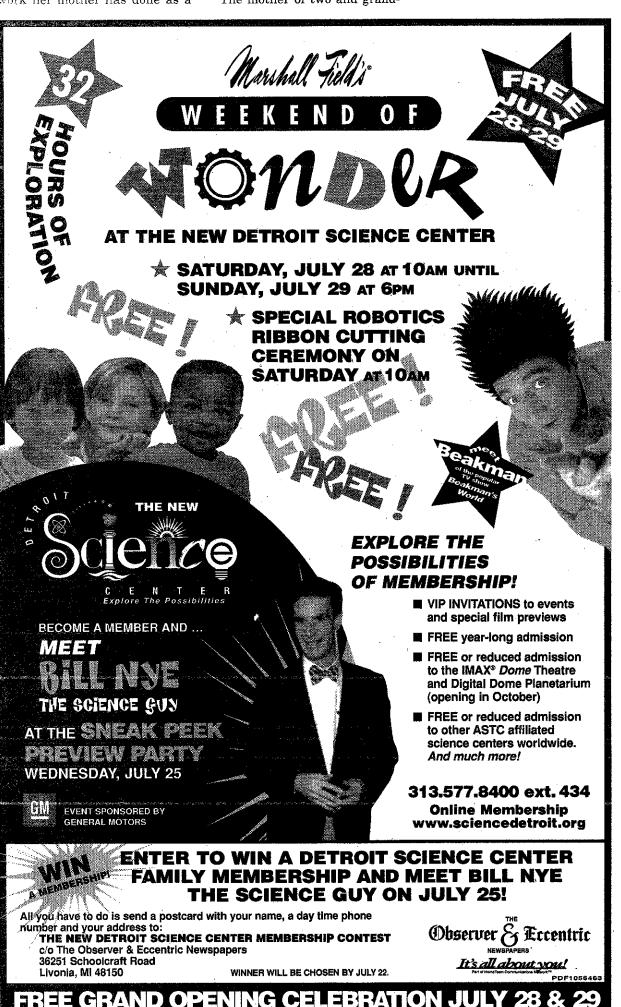

"Without transportation there is a population of seniors who are facing the situation of almost being prisoners in their own homes ... just like my mother. CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF PLYMOUTH NEWS MEDIA ADVERTISEMENT REQUEST FOR BID POLICE TOWING AND IMPOUNDMENT

Plymouth Township will receive bids to provide wrecker service for vehicle impoundment and storage at the direction of the Plymouth Township Police Department.

In 2000, the Plymouth Township Police Department experienced 850 traffic crashes and 818 arrests that resulted in more than 1,500 towed vehicles. It is projected that the number of accidents and arrests will continue to increase each years.

The basic requirements for a provider of vehicle towing for the Charter Township of Plymouth is the level of service provided to its customers, our citizens and the Township. The factors that determine the level of service are availability, effective professional vehicle removal, facility size and security and costs.

Bid packets containing specifics may be obtained from the Plymouth Township Clerk's Office, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, MI 48170. Sealed bids must be received by August 31, 2001 on 4 PM.

Good start: Crew members of 'Unplugged' - including Tim Clayson of Farmington (back) and Doug Andrews of Farmington Hills were optimistic at the start of last year's Port Huron-to-Mackinac race, but a blown-out sail 30 miles from the finish ended their adventure. This year's race begins Saturday in Port Huron.

Area sailors fired up for Mackinac

BY DEAN HAMRICK

If you heard someone talking about packing, grinding, tailing or "riding the rail," you might look at them like they were from a different world.

In a way they are.

Their world is on the water, not on the land. And for sailors like these, there is no finer place to be than the mouth of the Black River in Port Huron on Saturday morning, joining about 3,000 of their fellow competitors in the 77th-annual Bacardi Bayview Mackinac race.

As the largest fresh-water sailing race in the United States, the event takes participants anywhere from two to three days to complete their trek across Lake Huron to Mackinac Island for the finish.

And it's much harder than it seems. In last year's race, weeks of preparation, strategic planning and hard work were about to pay off for Tim Clayson, a Farmington Hills resident and skipper of a 30-foot Catalina, named Unplugged.

Clayson's crew, participating in their first Bayview Mackinac Race came in not knowing quite what to expect. Avid sailor that he was, Clayson had always been intrigued by the big race, but had never had the time, nor the permission to enter.

"I had wanted to do it for a while," said Clayson. "It seemed like a good thing to try, but my wife had always said to wait until I could take the kids."

Clayson's seven-man crew, including sons Chris and Brian, were nearly through with the 235 statute-mile Shoreline course, one of two courses racers can opt to take en route to the finish, when the weather finally got the best of their boat.

Just 30 miles away from the finish and the festivities on the grounds of Mission Pointe Resort on Mackinac Island, severe winds, rain and waves caused one of the boat's main sails to blow out. The turn of events left Clayson and crew with no other choice but to pull out of the race.

"The worst is definitely having to retire. There is a lot of disappointment in that," said Clayson. "Everyone handled it pretty well actually. I was probably the most nervous and the most affected by it, having the responsibility not only for results, but also for the safety of everyone."

Clarenceville tabs ex-EMU men's star as girls hoops coach

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK STAFF WRITER

BEAUDRY

Sometimes the grass is greener in your own yard. At least that's the thinking of Livonia Clarenceville athletic director Tim Wilson, who has hired Maurice Brantley to help grow the Trojans' girls basketball team.

Brantley was Clarenceville's Hall Monitor for the past vear and it didn't take Wilson long to realize the best place to go for his new girls basketball coach was right inside his own building.

"He's just really good with kids," Wilson said. "And he just wants to coach.

Brantley starred at Belleville High School during his own prep career, earning four varsity letters from 1985-89. He went to Xavier, where he averaged 5.6 points and 2.4 rebounds for three seasons before transferring to Eastern Michigan. He sat out a season but played in 1993-93, averaging 5.8 points and 2.7 rebounds per game for the Eagles.

Brantley got his degree in social work, played some basketball overseas but returned to Michigan to begin his post-playing life. "I was thinking I could get into the school system and

Polanski takes state Jr. PGA championship

In some editions of Sunday's Observer, this story did not run in its entirety. Here is the complete version.

It appears another group of area golfers will be advancing the tradition of strong play on the links.

Kristen Polanski of Livonia continued her already strong summer showing with a 164 total Wednesday to take first place in the Girls 13-15 division of the Michigan Junior PGA Championship at Bedford Valley in Battle Creek.

Canton and Livonia golfers had Top 10 finishes in all four categories of the July 11-12 event, which sent the lowest overall scorers on to the Westfield Junior PGA Championship July 18-21 at Westfield Center, Ohio.

Polanski's score was just five

While urge to race is a passion for some people, others try it on a lark and wind up

Mark Revers, a Plymouth resident and regional director for race-sponsor Bacardi, was sitting in a meeting two years ago when he first contemplated the idea of entering the race. He was familiar with the event but not with all that it entailed.

"I was actually just sitting in a meeting when I casually mentioned how neat being on a boat would be, as nonchalantly as if you were reading a National Geographic and you saw a picture of the Great Wall of China and you said 'how cool would it be to go there," said Revers. "The next day I get told that I've been put on a boat.'

Unlike Clayson, who had grown up around water and sailed most of his life, Revers had never set foot on a boat before. The idea of sailing intrigued him but at the same time made him apprehensive.

"As excited as I was, I was a little concerned about being seen as a greenhorn by the rest of the crew," Revers said.

Any reservations Revers had were quickly put to rest. In his first race of any kind, Revers contributed to the success of his crew, headed by skipper Norman Silverman. They finished first in their class as well as taking top honors overall for their division.

Revers had so much fun and got along with the crew so well, he maintained involvement and stayed with the team through the summer and fall. Last year, the sailors duplicated the feat by taking top honors in the Cruising Division once again at Mackinac.

Newcomers like Clayson and Revers have been fortunate enough to be part of the extremes Port Huron-to-Mackinac has to offer in their first races, but for someone like Farmington's Keith Turner, the stories have been long in the making.

Turner took part in his first Mackinac race 35 years ago and has sailed it ever since. Sailors of the Mackinac have fondly given the nickname of "Old Goat" to any participant who has been involved in the race for 25 years or more. Turner's one of the oldest Turner's crew covers three generations. There's a member of the crew who has been part of 49 races, two members with 18 races under their belt and the youngest, a 14 year old, participating for the first time.

"We just told him to stay out of trouble and keep his fingers out of the way," said Turner. "We've finished everywhere from first to last. One year I do remember, we didn't finish because we lost a rudder."

All of the sailors hold their own reasons for doing the race and have their favorite parts. Revers, after going through for two years has his own favorites on just what makes the adventure worthwhile.

"The beginning and the end are great," said Revers. "There's all of the fanfare and pageantry surrounding the start. Then at the end, you're pretty beat up and you're ready to see land.

"But when you're riding the rail, you're just sitting there with your legs hanging over the edge. It's a very timeless, unique experience. You're sitting there and you can see the water, maybe some land and the sky.

You're just sort of lost, in a good way, out there. It's a way to get away from the pressures of life. There are the most fabulous sunsets. The stars at night are just unbe-

Most sailors agree that the night portion A. is where the race is either won or lost. If you 🔯 can maintain your work ethic, wits and motivation while the sun is down, you're a step ahead of the rest of the field.

"At the start, everyone is very awake and ready to go," said Turner. "You've got to imagine there are 20 boats all maneuvering for the same position. "I took my father out ? for a race and he watched the maneuvering . at the beginning for five minutes and then he finally just told me to tell him when it was time to start. It's that intense."

There are over 260 yachts ranging from 26 in to 72 feet in length. The largest boat may ... have a crew numbering over 20 sailors. Many of the people in the Bayview event will be coming off a race that sends them from Chicago to Mackinac. After the two days of that race participants will drive to Port at Huron to compete in the Mackinac event.

Some, like Turner, are regulars, back for another go around. Others like Revers hope.... to have a good safe race while enjoying the... success of past years.

Then there's teams like Clayson's who, after two grueling days last year were left. with a bitter taste in their mouths from not -finishing and questioned whether or not town return.

"We were tired and hungry," said Clayson. 🗔 We didn't know if we wanted to eat first or 🛶 sleep first. We hadn't had much opportunity to sleep and we'd been living on cold sandwiches for two days. We ended up going to a local restaurant and about cleaned the place out. Immediately after (the race) there was. some hesitation about coming back, but? within a couple of days the disappointment was gone. It only lasted for a short time and we were ready to go."

HOLE-IN-ONE CLUB

■ Once in a lifetime? Not for Ara J. Horasanian.

The 74-year-old Plymouth resident got a hole in one Monday at Kensington Golf Course, using a 7-wood to ace the 146yard eighth hole.

Horasanian shot 89 for his 18-hole round. Oh yes — for the 53-year golf veteran, the hole in one was the third of his life.

Gary Barden of Livonia aced the 154-yard third hole at the Thunderhawk Golf Club, in Beach Park, Ill., on July 12. Barden used a 7-iron and shot a 52 for the round.

■ Jon Smith of Westland nailed a hole-in-one on July 10 at the 151-yard 12th hole at the Strategic Fox course at Fox Hills in Plymouth. Smith used a 6-iron for the ace, ■ Jeff Priest of Livonia used an 8-iron for a hole-in-one on the Foodland Course at Fox Creek on July 1. Priest, 61, aced the 124-yard fifth hole.

■ Kevin Biglane of Canton nailed a double eagle on the Par 5, 478-yard ninth hole at Fox Creek in Livonia on Tuesday. Biglane, who shot a 44 for the round, used a driver off the tee, then a 3-wood on the second shot from 220 yards out. It's his first double eagle in two years of golfing.

Ryan Nimmerguth of Plymouth collected his second holein-one ever as he aced the 177yard 14th hole at Tan-Tar-A Golf Resort and Spa in Osage Beach, Mo. Nimmerguth, 20, carded a 79 for the round.

Summer swimming a blast for kids

BY PAUL BEAUDRY STAFF WRITER

pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net There are a few ways for kids to stay cool in this dry summer

They can sit in the living room watching TV blasting the air conditioning.

They can run through the sprinkler with the rest of the neighborhood kids, which will not only keep them cool, but tick off the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department because it's asked homeowners, ever so nicely, to conserve water during this dry spell.

Or you can do what the cool kids do and bring them to Thurston High School starting Monday for four weeks of swimming lessons.

Once again, the Redford Township Parks and Recreation Department is holding swimming lessons for area youths in an effort to beat the heat and, more importantly, teach kids how to swim.

"It's been a fantastic program and our numbers have improved quite a bit," said Redford Union swimming coach Doug Schade, who runs the program. "Last year, we had about 60 kids per session and the first session this year (which ends today) had about 110 kids. So our numbers are up." While most of the kids who take part in the lessons come from Redford, the program is open to any child older than six - regardless of residency. Parents can register their children at the Parks and Recreation office at 12400 Beech Daly or call (313) 387-2650 for more informa-

Classes run from 10 a.m. to noon Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday from this Monday to August 16. The cost of the program is $30. There's also an open swim at the pool from noon to 1:30 p.m. and 3-5 p.m. from Monday through Friday until August 17 for $2 each session each day.

"The classes basically are our learn-to-swim program," said Schade. "They learn water safety, how to float, how to rescue people and how to improve their swimming. It's a gradual program."

Gradual comes from learning how to swim, but also from getting enough swimmers to make the next step in the swimming scheme - participating in the township's "Tidal Wave" swim club each summer. This summer's season is almost done ending with a meet on July 30 against the Taylor Pool Sharks and the Redford YWCA's team.

"But we'd like to get the kids into these programs each summer," said Schade. "A lot of swim clubs will charge $200-400 for 10 weeks of lessons and competition. We're offering the same program the swim clubs do, but we charge just $50.

"We're trying to run a competitive swim club for the kids."

The Tidal Wave is split into two groups - those entering the sixth through eighth grades and those going into high school. This year, the junior high group has about 22 swimmers - up from six last year – and the high school age group is at 24, compared to 15 a year ago.

"The whole idea is to get these kids swimming now," said Schade, "and when they're done with the swimming lessons, maybe they'll move on to the summer swim club, get to a certain level and graduate to their high school teams.

"The kids are getting better, no doubt about it. They're improving dramtically - especially the junior high kids. With the beginners, you can see it happen more. With the high school kids, you can see it not so much in their times, but in their technique. The bottom line to to get these kids swimming, have them improve and have fun doing it."

community.

Tip to the next mayor of Detroit – the boat races draw 10 times the people to the city that the Grand Prix does. Think about it.

■ I was amazed to find that Borgess girls basketball coach Monique Johnson bolted to Hamtramck without saying anything to athletic director Rodney Geter. Hey, I can understand looking for a new coaching job, but to say nothing after you get it?

Then, when Hamtramck athletic director Russ Collins went on about how Johnson being a quality person and right for the job, mirroring the sentiments of Borgess principal Sr. Joan Charnley last season when Johnson was hired, I kept thinking, "does a quality person avoid their boss for two weeks and not tell their employer they've been hired for a new job?"

■ On the other hand, I was disappointed to see that new Michigan basketball coach Tommy Amaker was going to reach out to the "Fab Five" and other estranged members of the U-M hoops family.

Only three of the Fab Five ever graduated, the other two – as well as upstanding student-athletes from the "Next Five" – are a big reason that the U-M program imploded in recent years. OK, Ed Martin is the biggest reason, but he had to give the money to someone.

They might be big reasons for Michigan's success, but they are as much to blame for its current problems. Instead of reaching out, Amaker should move ahead.

■ Will Channels 62 and 50 ever stop insulting our intelligence with their newscasts? When it bought 62 a few years ago, despite all the ballyhooed promotion, CBS had no intention of creating a local presence if it had to spend money to do it.

With Viacom now owning CBS, and by proxy Channels 50 and 62, this sharing of newscasts and programming is another embarrassing example of corporate penny-pinching greed. Just once, I'd love to see a group challenge stations like these for ignoring local groups when their FCC license comes up for renewal.

It almost makes Fox Sports Network's Seattle-based Detroit Sports Report seem tolerable.

■ Which will come first: The Tigers in a World Series again or the Ilitch family bidding for an All-Star game?

I remember everything about the one in 1971. I sat 19 rows up behind the National League bullpen, I tried for 30 minutes during the National League's batting practice to get Pete Rose's attention for his autograph, I remember the red, white and blue stars in the outfield, my dad explaining to me 30 minutes after it happened exactly where Reggie Jackson's home run hit the light transformer, and I even remember my Uncle Dave complaining about the upper deck.

The Tigers say that while they've talked about it, getting an all-star game is not high on their priority list.

splinters in his posterior from sitting on the wood bleachers in

Yeah, why would they want to get national exposure or help paint the city in a positive light? It's not happening on the field.

■ Speaking of all-star games and baseball, Comerica Park successfully dodged the potential for three more lawsuits this season. If you can believe this, the wizards who run the place kept a tarp on the field in front of home plate (the one usually used for pre-game batting practice) during the recent Michigan High School baseball Coaches All-Star game, as well as the Detroit Public School and Catholic League championships.

If some kid had slipped. caught a cleat, blew out a knee or an ankle, Mikey and his kids would be facing a serious money lawsuit.

Not to mention the fact, that while they have the chance to do some wonderful things for the players in metro Detroit, they've displayed once again an incredible ability to take a no-brain good deed and turn it into a negative.

■ Almost forgot about the Dream Cruise coming up.

It's the one event of the year that makes me appreciate the relative calm of the Ann Arbor Cattle Drive... oops, Art Fairs.

I'll go to a NASCAR race, I'll go to a short track, I'll watch a CART race, I'll go to a drag strip, I'd even watch an IRL race.

But the Dream Cruise? Not me, thank you. It's become too corporate and w-a-y t-o-o d-r-a-w-n o-u-t. One day? Fine. Two days? OK. Three days? You've had your fun.

But the people who drive up and down Woodward beginning on the Tuesday night, craving attention using their overblown motors — much like four-year-olds on a backyard swing while their parents try to talk to the neighbors — closing off business owners from their customers and screwing up already screwed-up traffic for the masses, should be ticketed, fined and subject to some kind of severe penalty.

Being tied to their bumper and nudged with a cattle prod is a good start. Being forced to listen to 24 hours of Jim Harper would be better.

Maybe some kind of public service is in order. Can people be forced to work the information booth at the Art Fair?

The interest paid towards the residential mortgage and any capital residence both receive favorable tax treatment. This favorable tax treatment can transform buying a home into a strategic investment that can enhance your overall investment strategies.

Home equity lending is another possible method of strategic liability management. For example, open-end lines for credit secured against residential property have been driving a move toward increased household liquidity since the mid 1980s.

Deals can fall in the cracks

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

All kinds of circumstances - big and small - break deals.

Messy showing conditions and overpricing on the part of sellers limit prospects right out of the gate.

Buyers not qualifying financially or having unrealistic expectations sabotage their own efforts.

And when a truculent buyer meets up with an intransigent seller, watch out. Lots of smoke, but no fire.

More typically, problems surface dur-Appraisals don out. A deadline passes unmet. Personal economics change. Pseudoexperts inject themselves into the Poor communication and an inability or unwillingness to compromise might also bring the Good Ship Transaction to a dead stop in the water.

Mortgage troubles

"Normally in this day and age, we get an approval letter before we even start," Dottie LeSeur, an associate broker with Coldwell Banker Legacy in Westland, said of buyers qualifying for a mortgage.

"But if one loses a job (or quits), and if approval is based on two incomes, it can kill a deal after both have qualified," she said.

"Most people understand right up front that you don't make any changes in your life when you start looking for a home. You don't buy a new car or get a new job until after closing."

Other roadblocks loom. "If you have a contingency on the sale of your present home in order to purchase a new home and your present home doesn't sell, you don't have a deal," LeSeur added. Sellers should know that just because they need a certain amount of money on the sale of the current house to move up doesn't necessarily mean they'll get it.

A related pitfall awaits. An appraisal ordered by a mortgage company may indicate that a home is worth less than the agreed price.

In that case, the seller can reduce the price, the buyer can come up with a larger down payment or the people involved can prove with comparable sales studies that the appraisal is wrong, LeSeur said.

Otherwise, no mortgage and, likely, no sale.

Inspection fallout

Betsy Lanman, associate broker with Century 21-217 in Oxford, identified two primary deal breakers.

"An inept inspector - they tend to scare a buyer out of it. They don't go into any detail about what can be remedied with a quick fix.

"Most inspectors are upright and honest. They will work with the buyer and seller, won't try to scare."

In cases where inspection issues arise, the parties will successfully renegotiate nine times out of 10, Lanman said. The others times, compromise doesn't happen because the buyers feel overwhelmed or the sellers insist on their price.

Mortgage approval is the other big sticking point, Lanman added.

"Ninety-nine percent of mortgage people will be really straight and say, This buyer is a little shaky. We'll do our best to get it through.'

"Credit has a lot to do with it, late pays - not being straight with mortgage people. They (buyers) say they make this amount and they don't."

Like Yogi Berra, Lanman realizes that it ain't over 'til it's over. In cases where the sale is real shaky, she'll keep the home listed until everything is signed, sealed and delivered.

"I don't take it off the market. I keep it going, let other agents know we'll look at back-up offers."

Ah, relatives

Inspections and relatives are the big deal killers experienced by Jacqueline Erlandson, associate broker with Max Broock in West Bloomfield.

"There's no such thing as a perfect house," she said, and that applies to inspections and family members prospective buyers sometimes bring in as advisers.

"An inspector can pan a house without comparing it to other houses in the same price range. Ninety-nine percent are very reasonable. I sometimes think they're too hard on a house."

Then, there's the relatives. "They get very protective. If they don't think it's right, you just find something else. You can't argue with a buyer. Their thing is to please." James Baker, associate broker with Real Estate One in Novi, said everyone must focus on the ultimate goal at all times - get the transaction done.

First-time buyers scared off by a lessthan-perfect inspection report and urged on by well-meaning parents or other "family experts" often will take flight quicker than a more seasoned purchaser, Baker said.

"The buyer has to give the seller an option to respond. My advice would be 'Be open minded, don't draw conclusions, be flexible and be willing to compromise a little bit." And that goes for sellers, too.

"If a buyer and seller want it to work out, it will work out. If they have that mindset, they won't scare the other one

Ask seller to pay costs for buyer

'IM 'TIMBO' PHILLIPS

Like most financial deals, there is a transaction price to pay for acquiring a home. especially if there is a mortgage involved.

While mortgage costs may vary significantly with different lenders and loan types, they generally fall into three categories: closing costs, escrow expenses, and down payment.

Closing costs normally include things like appraisals, surveys, closing and filing fees, title insurance, and required reports but may also include lender-imposed fees, discount points, and origination points. Some of these costs are negotiable; many are not.

A simple way to minimize these costs is to ask the sellers to pay for them. You will save a dollar for every dollar the sellers agree to cover. If they are not willing, you may ask them if they would cover some costs if you both agreed to increase the purchase price by the amount of these costs.

By "rolling in" the costs in this manner, you would be amortizing your costs over the life of the loan and preserving today's cash for other things. A thousand dollars in costs amortized over 30 years costs seven or eight dollars per month.

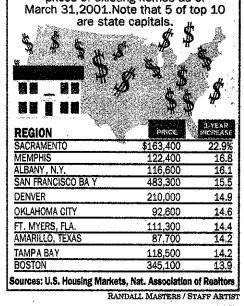

Lenders can sometimes cover some of your closing costs but will normally only do so by assessing a higher interest rate. This method may be a good strategy for larger loans, but the rate required to offset costs could be substantial.

Some lenders require borrowers to establish escrow accounts from which they will pay your next year's taxes and insurance. To pay your own taxes, you may incur an escrow waiver fee of up to 1/4-percent. Waiving escrows can be beneficial if you have high property taxes or if you plan to stay in your new loan for a long time. Your down payment is your minimum investment in your property. A small down payment sets you up for a better overall rate-of-return on your investment. However, many borro still like the security of owning a larger portion of their home.

Up your insurance to protect renovation

(NAPSA) - According to the Independent Insurance Agents of America, one in four home remodeling projects increases the value of a home by as much as 25 percent. In addition, three of four homeowners don't update their policies when making structural changes to their homes.

Whether it's architecturally designed floor plans for an expanded family room with an inset entertainment center or the cocktail napkin sketch for the do-it-yourself swimming pool and deck, it's a good idea to meet with your insurance agent before the construction begins.

"Unfortunately, if your homeowner's policy has not been updated to reflect new construction, more than likely you will be underinsured in the event of a loss," says Daniel H. Olmsted, senior vice president, Personal Insurance Division, Atlantic Mutual Cos. "Simple preventative measures, such as meeting with an agent on a regular basis, can help ensure that homeowners are properly insured."

When negotiating with a home remodeling/renovation firm or independent contractor, ask for a valid contractor's license and proof of liability and workers' compensation insurance.

"Any reputable contractor or firm will readily provide a license and certificate of insurance. Securing these documents will save time and money in the event of an unforeseen disaster," adds Olmsted.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

FORECLOSURE SCAMS CAN MAKE A BAD SITUATION WORSE

by GARY S. MEYERS

The scam artists are out there, preying on homeowners facing foreclosure and making the problems worse.

Imagine you are in financial trouble. A "mortgage consultant" or "foreclosure service" contacts you with an offer of help. You bite, and you end up losing your home. There's also bankruptcy proceedings you didn't even know you filed, because you didn't.

This week The Meyers Report looks into the growing problem of foreclosure scams — the flyby-night hustles and the get-richquick schemes that play on consumer greed, fear and ignorance.

"People facing foreclosure are in a stressful situation," said Sandra Rasnak, Assistant United States Trustee and National Bankruptcy Fraud Coordinator. "They want to believe they're not going to lose their homes. This is what the perpetrators play on.'

Rasnak works for a little known branch of the US Justice Department — the Executive Office of Trustees — which monitors the bankruptcy system to watch for fraud and other abuses.

In the world of mortgages, where the dollar amounts are high and the paperwork usually understood only by specialized lawyers, frauds and scams abound. People who want to buy or keep their dream homes will do just about anything, and believe just about anyone, especially if their judgment is clouded by emotion and they don't have the information they need.

"Many people get into trouble because they're afraid to contact their lenders when they get into financial trouble," says Dan Kaatz, Citibank's Illinois Martagge Director "Generally Mortgage Director. "Generally your lender is going to want to work with you, and they're a lot safer than someone you discover in a mailer."

A typical scam plays out this

A homeowner who has not been able to make payments learns he's facing foreclosure. He receives a letter or a flyer telling him that he does not have to lose his house, and he does not have to hire an expensive lawyer, if he simply follows the advice of the "counselor" who sent the letter.

The letter will tell you to call the people and set up a meeting with them," said Rasnak, "or it may all be done through the mail. The general concept is that if you pay them some money, they'll be able to help you save the house by getting a new mortgage or a debt consolidation loan. In anoth-er variation, they say that if you deed or sell them the property for a low price, they'll rent it back to you while you get on your feet. They may also tell you to send your mortgage payments to them while they look for a new loan for you."

No matter what the scenario, it always comes down to the perpetrator saying, "give me some money, and I'll fix your problem."

The problem doesn't get fixed, it just gets put off, Rasnak said. In an article written for the American Bankruptcy Institute Journal, Trustee Office spokesperson Jane Limprecht described the vicious twist used by the perpetrators of these

"Typically, a partial interest — perhaps 5 percent or 10 percent — in property held by a homeowner facing foreclosure is transferred to a real or fictional entity already in bankruptcy. Because the property interest is then held by a bankruptcy debtor, the original owner's creditor cannot foreclose until the bankruptcy court lifts the automatic stay when you don't show up for the hearing."

The calls and notices stop coming, and the homeowner thinks the problem has been solved. He does not realize that this is only a delay while the courts untangle the fraudulent bankruptcy filing. These schemes are intended to buy time for the perpetrator," Rasnak said. "They want to keep that rent, mortgage payment, or fee coming in as long as possible."

"Sometimes they'll put tenants' houses under foreclosure, and the tenants don't have any idea they are involved in the scam," she said. "Their rent goes into the pocket of the perpetrator, and the tenants will eventually be evicted when the house is finally foreclosed." How can you recognize the signs of a foreclosure fraud?

"There are some clues," Limprecht said. "But usually people facing foreclosure are in such a high emotional state that they're not thinking about looking for them. All they want is to have their problems fixed." Some of the signs of a scam may include:

• Letters sent to people on a foreclosure list.

"These lists are available in many cases from court clerks offices, or public notices," said Rasnak. "Notices may also be published telling when the sale will take place and what property will be sold."

• Letters from people calling themselves "mortgage consul-tants" or "foreclosure services," or similar names.

'If you can't pay your mortgage, call your mortgage lender said Limprecht. "Your state or local bar association may be able to help you find low-cost legal

• Requests for payment before services are provided.

"Instead of contacting your lender or refinancing your loan the scam operator pockets all the money you paid, and then files a sometimes without your name—sometimes without your knowledge," said Limprecht,
"The rule of thumb in this, and any case involving finances, is that if it seems too good to be true, it probably is," Kaatz said.
