Canton Police will ticket anyone riding a motorized scooter on township sidewalks, streets or other public pavement. Scooter riders nationwide have experienced a rash of accidents and injuries.

"The law isn't new, but the Go-Peds are," explained Lt. Pat Nemecek.

hile sleeping in, part-time jobs and goofing off may be summertime favorites among the teenage crowd, equestrians Katie Lindow and Catie Filios have spent their summer preparing for riding competitions.

Lindow, 15, of Canton, and Filios, 15, of Plymouth, along with teammate Sarah Engel, 15, Northville, will ride in the Honey Run Team Challenge Horse Trials in Ann Arbor this September.

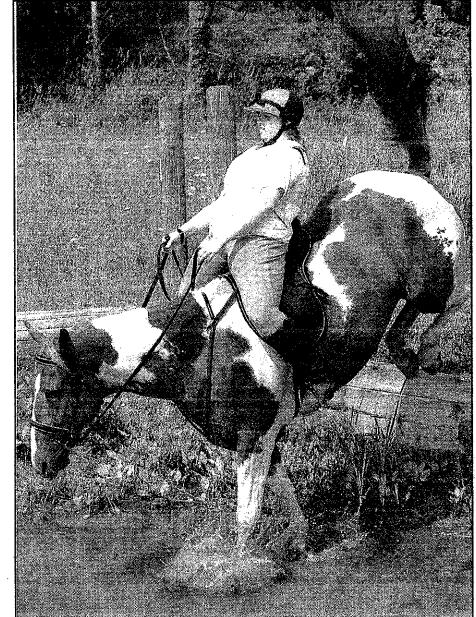

The competition is unique because participants and their horses earn points as a team event rather than as individual riders. The competition will challenge the riders to dressage, which is "sort of like ballet without the music" according to Lindow, and cross-country and stationary jumps.

To prepare, the girls attended a training clinic in Ann Arbor last

"When we go to training like this it helps a lot," said Filios. "When we go into competitions, we get nervous because we don't know what it's going to be like, and the horse gets scared and doesn't want to do the jumps, so the more you've schooled on the jumps, the better and more confident your horse will be."

Filios began riding when she was just 7 years old.

"I started out riding at a pony camp, then began taking lessons,' she said. "Then I started competing

"Go-Peds can only be used on private property," said Captain Laura Golles. "In most subdivisions that generally means the home owner's driveway.'

Nemecek said not only are Go-Peds banned from streets and sidewalks, they are also not allowed in township parks.

"Our parks prohibit motor vehicles, so it seems like the kids who have these are out of luck," he

Non-motorized scooters and skateboards are allowed in some parks, but users should be sure to check postings at the park.

Scooters and skateboards are also allowed on sidewalks, but Nemecek cautioned skaters to be mindful of pedestrians.

"Pedestrians have always had and will always have the right of way on the sidewalks," he said. "People have to remember that."

Under state law, a Moped/Go-Ped is defined as a two- or threewheeled vehicle which is equipped with a motor that does not exceed 50 cubic centimeters piston displacement, produces 2.0 brake horsepower or less, and cannot propel the vehicle at a speed of greater than 30 mph on a level surface.

Theoretically, if a Go-Ped were street ready, it could be driven on public roads, Nemecek said. Registration and licensing are required for Mopeds and Go-Peds. The vehicles also require a headlamp, stoplight, brakes; horn, exhaust and mirror.

"I'm" not sure how that would go with the licensing, though because they may not be able to get up to the proper speed," he

Violators of the law regulating Go-Peds will receive civil infraction tickets for driving or moving in an unsafe vehicle. The ticket will carry an $85 fine.

"That fine applies to Go-Peds because they do not have the necessary equipment," Golles said.

Go-Ped drivers create a hazard for other motorists and put themselves in danger, she added: She noted that motorized scooters were responsible for 3,600 emergency room visits and two deaths nationwide between January 1999 and October 2000.

family didn't hear until two weeks ago, when Raycraft said Montero called home. Montero had been staying with friends in Arizona, and said her friends had urged her to call her mother sooner. "I didn't call because I was scared of what my mom's reaction would be," she said.

After she called home, Montero eventually asked her family to send her bus fare.

The last time she had seen her mother was June 14. Montero called her mother that evening saying that she was headed for Westland Mall. Canton Police teamed up with Detroit Police and began looking for her. Her last known location was at a southwest Detroit house party she attended with a friend at about 9 p.m. that evening.

Michigan State Police recovered her vehicle, a green 1995 Ford Escort, June 15 in Southgate. A 21-year-old Detroit man was driving the vehicle.

On June 19, Canton Police and the Detroit Police Department's Fourth Precinct Special Operations unit executed a search warrant in the 4800 block of Trenton Street on Detroit's near west side. The purpose of the warrant was to look for the 16-year-old. Police learned that Montero had been at a residence on Trenton. The search was unsuccessful.

Canton police began to suspect Montero may have headed back to Arizona after detectives found a family the teen had stayed with in Detroit.

"We talked with them, and found out she had been staying with them for a couple of days. Then we found out she had made some calls to Arizona from her cell phone," Raycraft said. "We also found out someone had wired her money from Arizona right around that time."

Although Canton Police suspected she was in Arizona for the last few weeks, they were limited on releasing information for fear she would flee. They were also unable to search for her because of the distance and difficulty dealing with a major metropolitan police department in another state, according to Ravcraft.

The two-week program, which was designed to teach young children the importance of safety, is put on by both the township fire and police departments, in conjunction Plymouth-Canton with Schools.

Minister will follow music dreams to Nashville area

Opportunity has come aknockin' on Otis Johnson's door again. And once again he's answering the call.

Johnson, his wife Gloria and children, Christian and Cristina, will leave their Canton home for the Nashville suburb Antioch, Tenn., in the fall so he can grow his record company.

"I like the opportunities and challenges down there," said the singer/songwriter who in June released his fifth album, Pray

Johnson has been dreaming about the move for decades. Since his days at Inkster High School and after graduation when he and his classmates swarmed on Motown Records to find fame, Johnson has had music on his mind.

But before he could launch a music career, he had obligations. A 30-year career at Ford Motor Co.'s Wayne Assembly plant, raising children and a call to ministry all needed tending

After that, multiple trips to the Philippines to enable his new bride, son, and baby girl to come to the United States, called him away from the move to Tennessee again.

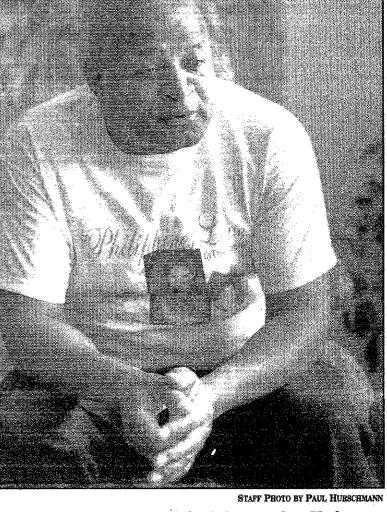

He learned the trips to the Philippines were just part of a greater plan not only to bring home his family, but also to strengthen his faith.

"In the Philippines, life is so hard, but the people are happy. They're so dedicated. Then I came home and see how dedicated we are here, which is not at all," he said.

A year ago, his young family was finally able to settle into Johnson's home of 10 years and they're now ready to make the move south.

"I told God that I just needed to take care of this first, to bring my wife and children here, then I could devote myself to His work," said the gospel singer. "I don't know what He has planned for my life, but I like the work and look forward to the chal-

In response to this information, the Michigan Department of Education developed the Reading Plan for Michigan, which is designed to help every Michigan student read by the end of third grade. Our August Store of Dreams will be filled with important Information on local and state programs and resources that focus on growing healthy children, preparing children to go to school READY, literacy programs and activities, and local community efforts supporting these areas.

Schoolcraft studies four plans to develop property

tsmith@oe.homecomm.net

They came and the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees listened. Now, the board will spend the rest of August analyzing whether any of four distinctly different development proposals are enough of a potentially good fit to pursue further.

On Wednesday night, a special four-hour meeting enabled the developers to talk about their plans for a 45-acre parcel on the south end of Schoolcraft's Livonia campus. Board members also interviewed the firms to get a read on issues such as whether Schoolcraft would have input on project design and work around wetlands and the nearby Newman House.

After listening to presentations from Hines, Walkon/Etkin Partnership, DeMattia Group & Village Green Companies and Lincoln Property Co., the board decided to schedule a study session for 7 p.m. Wednesday, Aug.

"The biggest thing is we have to talk about whether we want to do anything" with the property, said board Chairwoman Carol Strom.

Schoolcraft College President Conway Jeffress emphasized to the board how important it would be to take a good, long look at the proposals.

"You need to sit down and meditate on these proposals and see, A, if you like anything and B, if you like some things more than others," Jeffress said, shortly after the fourth presentation/ interview concluded.

How to proceed

Trustee Gregory Stempien acknowledged the variety of concepts, and said perhaps the best way to go about choosing one of them – if any at all – might be to You need to sit down and meditate on these proposals and see, A, if you like anything and B, if you like some things more than others.'

> Conway Jeffress President of Schoolcraft College

proceed "by process of elimination of concepts."

Schoolcraft is looking to lease the property and generate income in a way similar to Seven Mile Crossing, on the opposite end of the campus. Jeffress recently said such revenue would ensure the college staying progressive for many years to come in areas such as facilities and faculty training - without raising student tuition above the rate of inflation. Hines was the first developer to meet with the board, discussing what would be a fivephase, "campus style" office park. Each phase would bring 100,000-to-150,000-square-feet of office space, with construction being staggered over five years.

"We view this as an excellent site, right on (Interstate) 275,' said Hines project manager John Wood. "With the expansion of the airport to the south, we see that as the driving force for economic development along the 275 corridor."

The office park would be linked to the campus by way of pedestrian pathways and landscaping.

"We're looking to develop something that's complementary to the campus here," said Hines vice president Chuck Waters. "We have a strong desire on our part to do that."

■ The Walkon/Etkin Partnership detailed what would be know as Schoolcraft Commons, called a mix of high quality retail and office that would annually pump $1.1 million into the college's coffers.

"I've developed in this area for 11 years," said Marvin Walkon. "I'm not an unknown commodity in this area."

Walkon said his firm developed Livonia's sprawling Millenium Park, built on the former Ladbroke DRC site near Middlebelt and the Jeffries Freeway service drive.

He underscored that the Schoolcraft board would be in a partnership with Walkon/Etkin. "Retail is the engine that drives the greatest (economic) return for you, pure and simple,' said Doug Etkin, noting that Schoolcraft Commons would feature major retailers, shops and restaurants.

■ Gary Roberts of DeMattia and Jonathan Holtzman of Village Green described a unique office-residential project that would feature the kind of "livework community" concept taking off in other areas of the United DeMattia would develop hightech buildings for offices and laboratories, while Village Green would build luxury apartments and a 6,000-square-foot university clubhouse. The latter would feature a resort-style swimming pool, racquetball courts, coffee bar and picnic area, attractive both for Schoolcraft students and office workers, Holtzman said.

The issue of adding to existing traffic loads on Haggerty and other surrounding roads was brought up by Trustee Patricia Watson.

But Holtzman assured that because more people would be living and working in the same location, they would not need to drive as much. Such a facility would be "encouraging people to walk everywhere.'

■ A residential project called The Crossings would bring something not available in the Schoolcraft district, stressed Lincoln Property Co. executive Kevin Keane. He and other members of his team discussed a development of building about 200 single-family apartments, all with individual garages, on 40 of the available 45 acres.

Asked about benefits to Schoolcraft, Keane said such a complex would provide "built-in student housing" and apartments for faculty. Although one board member said such an apartment likely would be too expensive for a student's limited expenses. 'They could live pretty good and walk to class," Keane said.

Unlike the other proposals, Keane said Lincoln Property Co. would not develop the entire parcel. About five acres would be left to be built at the college's discretion.

Whoever is selected would have to spearhead legal costs and take the project through necessary approvals with the city of Livonia, board members emphasized.

CAN FEET CAUSE BACK PROBLEMS?

If you're having a problem with your back, it might surprise you to learn that poor foot function may be causing it. Poor foot function can also be the culprit in hip pain, stiff neck, knee problems and other aggravations. Sometimes an abnormal shortening of one leg develops. This can happen when one of your feet flattens out, dropping the ankle close to the ground. You can imagine what this does to the rest of your body. It throws it out of kilter. The only way to be sure your feet are functioning properly is to have them examined ished by the Michigan High School Athletic Association and borne out of the grueling two-aday football practices.

"A lot of it is making sure that kids drink fluids and eat well," said Garden City trainer Cindy Brandau. "The biggest thing is weight loss. If they lose more weight than they can replace in one day, then there's problems. Six years ago, we had several 100-degree days. What we did was weigh the players before and after practice. And if they came back the next day and didn't gain the weight back overnight, they didn't practice."

Warning signs

The players need to be aware of the warning signs as well as being consistent with replenishing fluids.

"Kids don't understand that prevention is a big part of it," said North Farmington football coach Rich Burrell. "Even if they feel good, if they don't get a drink when they have the chance to, five or 10 minutes later they might not be the same.

"At conditioning (on Thursday) some of the kids said they didn't want water and our coaches said, 'Go and drink right now. Even if you don't feel like it, drink.' They can't worry about not being macho. They haven't had that many experiences with heat issues, so sometimes you have to make those choices for them."

Three football players have died since the beginning of the year and 18 high school or college football players have died of heat stroke since 1995.

Stringer is the only NFL playler to die of heat stroke. University of Florida freshman Eraste Autin died on July 26, six days after falling unconscious upon conclusion of a summer conditioning session. Florida State linebacker Devaughn Darling died in February after a workout. On Wednesday, the death of an Indiana high schooler that was originally blamed on heat stroke, was determined to be a brain aneurysm.

And the worst part about heat is it's a silent enemy.

"But you can tell what's going on if you watch and pay attention to it," said Brandau. "If you start talking to the player and you think they're having problems, a lot of time you can tell

Cool tips

To avoid heat illness, during extremely hot conditions, you should:

■ Limit physical activity to cool morning or evening hours.
■ Spend more time in air-conditioned rooms.

Drink plenty of water for proper hydration.

■ Wear lightweight and light-colored clothing.

■ Wear a hat and sunglasses to shield yourself from the sun. If you suspect a person is suffering from a heat crisis, the health department recom-

Achieve rapid cooling by removing unnecessary cloth-

Spray the person with lukewarm water and position fans to blow air on the person's body.

Apply cold compresses to the wrists, ankles, groin, armpits and neck.

Have the person drink cool water.

"If the person vomits after the intake of fluids, or is confused, get prompt medical attention and continue to rapidly bring down the person's body temperature," said Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk, Wayne County medical director.

pretty quickly that they're just not with it. If you watch it, then you can catch it."

One way coaches can help avoid it during the preseason conditioning stage is to practice during the cooler times of the day or running conditioning stages without helmets or shoulder pads, which can trap heat instead of letting the body release it.

Coaches and trainers can only do so much. It's up to the parents and the players to do the right thing as well.

"They can't be afraid," said Hage. "You can't put reins on an athlete. They know their limits and we have to respect that. But kids have to watch things. They have to watch their diet, their body fat and weight as well."

It's something that also has to start well before any on-field training.

"Players need to get proper fluids throughout the day, every day," said Gordon. "They need to eat properly all the time. For years, we've had a doctor come in and address our teams with nutrition and eating properly. Everyone needs to be involved."

Starting young

And it has to happen at an early age. Madonna University's men's soccer coach Pete Alexander makes sure the 5- to 18-year-old youngsters at his summer camps learn how to deal with the heat.

"Kids don't necessarily know their bodies at this age. We give them water breaks," said Alexander, who also encourages the youngsters to use sunscreen and makes the boys wear their shirts all day.

"If they need water, they don't even have to ask. We try to educate the kids as much as possible. Every 15 minutes or so, it's a mandatory water break. We try to let the kids relax and it's actually good for the coaches to relax and get out of the sun."

The final week of the kids camp and the first week of practice for the men on Madonna's soccer squad begins Monday.

The collegians will have two-aday practices, but Alexander will also stress the problems with the weather to them, provide plenty of water breaks and use shorter segment games, rather than the full 90-minute training, in deference to the heat.

Players need to know their limits. Stringer, who'd been battling a weight problem throughout his career, told teammates he needed to work harder in practice the day he died, to make up for what he felt was a bad practice on Monday. The loss of internal fluids forced Stringer's core body temperature to 108.8 degrees, which caused a cascade effect of his vital organs shutting down

"Years ago, if you needed water, it was a sign that a player wasn't very tough," said Gordon. "Now, it's important to make sure they get enough water or Gatorade and to be sure that the players know when they need it. If a player is telling you they're having a problem, then a coach needs to accept that at face value that the player's not being soft and address the concern."

degrees and possibly death.

At St. Mary Mercy Hospital, the heat has been bringing in patients. "The last few days we have seen quite a few patients with heat exhaustion," said Dr. Ash Gokli, Emergency Room chairman.

Many have been younger people - out on the golf course, working construction jobs - in the intense heat, he said.

While no cases of heat stroke have been reported at Garden City Hospital, three people with mild cases of heat exhaustion were treated in the past week. The victims have been younger.

"People tend to get in trouble when they overdo it," said Dr. Mark Bacigal, an emergency room physician at Garden City Hospital. "And it seems to be the younger ones. The older folks seem to know what to do. Usually, it's people who work in the heat who know when to back off."

Treated and released

Two people were admitted to Canton St. Joseph Mercy Health Systems' emergency room Thursday, one was a construction worker, both were suffering from dizziness and lightheadedness. They were hydrated and released.

That isn't a lot of reports, according to spokeswoman Lesia Golden.

"When we don't see a lot of people for heat exhaustion and heat stroke, that's a good sign. It means people are aware, and are taking precautions and taking care of themselves," Golden said. "They're staying inside, drinking fluids, taking frequent breaks from activity or staying in the shade."

Bacigal said people tend to be more cautious when the temperature and humidity are high, but don't realize that those humid 80-85 degrees days can be just as lethal.

"We see as many people then as we do with this kind of weather," said Bacigal. "People don't realize that when it's hot and humid that the sweat doesn't evaporate. You can't cool down when it's humid."

Lawrenchuk reiterated the importance of prevention steps, including drinking plenty of fluids to avoid dehydration. He noted the recent death of Korey Stringer of the Minnesota Vikings showed no one's immune.

"We still see fatalities." Heatrelated illness is clearly preventable, Lawrenchuk said.

'Use your brain'

A hot environment and high exertion can lead to heat stroke, and things like alcohol consumption and medications like antihistamines and diuretics can make it worse and make people sensitive to heat, Bacigal said.

"What people don't understand is that some of the medications they're taking can pre-dispose them to that," he said. "So the important thing is to use your brain. Sometimes, when it's hot you don't have to do a lot to get heat exhaustion or heat stroke."

Gokli noted that people should be aware alcohol consumption the night before. "If you have a big night out with a binge of alcohol, that tends to dehydrate you the next day," he said.

With heat exhaustion, people need to rest, drink cool – not cold – liquids. Bacigal recommends water and athletic drinks for the liquids and staying away from pops like colas which have high salt and sugar content and don't quench the thirst.

As for cooling down, "one thing that cools you down fast is a cool mist, not cold, and a fan." he said. "You don't want to jump in a tub of ice."

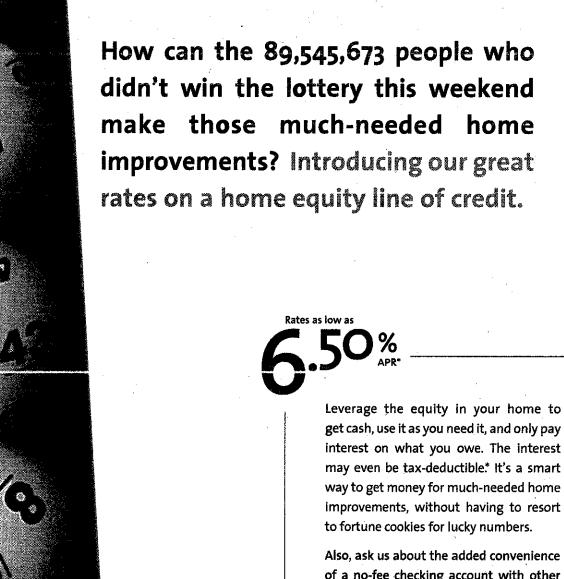

Since heat stroke is a medical emergency, he recommends getting the victim into a cool place and calling 911.

"You need to get medical treatment quick. You need to get those temperatures down," he said. "Basically, the liver and brains start to cook at the high temperature."

Johnson breaks mark; Loesch gets 1st win

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

Thing was, Vic Wunderle was happy. And why not? The native of Mason City, Ill., had come within a point of bettering the national record in the Senior Male Recurve competition at last week's National Target Championships, hosted by the National Archery Association at Canton's Heritage Park.

"I shot really, really well," Wunderle said. "I was just one point off the national record.

"But Butch just shot spectacular. He deserved it."

And he got it. Butch Johnson, from Woodstock, Conn., claimed his secondstraight title Thursday with a recordshattering score of 2,699 — besting the former national mark by 37 points. Wunderle was a distant second at 2.661, followed by Jav Barrs (Salt Lake City, Utah) with 2,610 (see results).

It seems to be an annual rite, the duel for top honors between these two. Johnson, who won the championship last year with a record-setting performance and now has four national target titles to his credit, was beaten by Wunderle in 1999.

Both competed at last year's Olympics as members of the U.S. Team, with Wunderle coming home with a silver medal.

In the Senior Women's Recurve, Kathy Loesch of Fresno, Texas, maintained the slim lead she held from the opening day of competition to claim her first-ever national championship. Loesch finished with 2,607 points to hold off the challenge of defending champion Karen Scavotto (Enfield, Conn.), who ended up second with 2,600 points. Janet Dykman (El Monte, Calif.) was a distant third with 2,578. Jessica Carleton, from Redford, slipped a bit after a strong start to the tournament. She finished fifth with 2,574 points (she was second after two rounds, just six points out of first), one point behind Jessica Peterson.

Johnson, who was hounded by Wunderle throughout last year's tournament before finally winning the title by 10 points, had no such problem this time around. He led from start to finish, building a 19-point lead after two rounds and then doubling it by the tournament's completion.

Which is just the way he liked it. Loesch would have enjoyed a bit more of a cushion, too.

"It was hard," she admitted. "I just think it's harder to be ahead by less than 10 and try to keep it up. You slip once and people are right there on top of you.'

Loesch had been to nationals five times as an adult (also once in the Intermediates), but had never won, placing second twice before - the last time in 1997.

"I worked really hard this summer," she said. "I don't think I ever wanted anything more."

If there was an element that favored her, it might have been the weather. "I live in Texas, so the heat didn't bother me at all," she said in reference to plus-90 degree temperatures. "It wasn't really a problem." At least not for her. Loesch led by six at the tournament's midpoint and increased it to 10 after Wednesday's third round, with Scavotto moving into

In Thursday's final round, Loesch got a bit of additional support from her family.

"It was funny today," she admitted. "My daughter started saying real softly, 'Go Mommy.' People told her she could cheer louder if she wanted to, so the next time I heard her yell, 'GO MOMMY!' real loud."

One thing the tournament provided for all involved was a solid warm-up to the World Tournament, scheduled for September in Beijing. "This was nice to see, with the Worlds coming up," said Wunderle.

U.S. Open

On Friday, the U.S. Open Tournament — an elimination event - found pretty much the same people at the top of the scorer's board in recurve competition.

In the Senior Male Recurve, Glenn Meyers (from Grand Rapids), who finished third in the National Tournament, bested Johnson in

Evitts wins a title in compound

Sunday August 5 2001

BY BRAD EMONS SPORTS WRITER bemons@oe.homecomm.net

Melissa Evitts has one rule of thumb when competing in an archery tournament.

Have fun.

The 16-year-old incoming junior at Livonia Churchill High School won by the narrowest of margins in the Intermediate (ages 15-18) Female Compound portion of the 117th U.S. Target Championships held last week Heritage Park in Canton Township.

She edged fellow Michigan competitor Annie Haffey by six points after four rounds while shooting at distances of 60, 50, 40 and 30 meters

2,588 to 2,582. Erin Macomber of Massachusetts was a distant third 2,549. Rounding out the top seven were Amber Smith (Michigan), 2,546; Ashley Butler (Pennsylvania),

Melissa Evitts Title-winner

2,485; Samantha Davoll (Ohio). 2,476; and Monica Mosko (Ohio), 2,441

It was the first national title for Evitts, who was coming off a state Junior Olympic Development Archery conquest last month in Oakland County. "I always have fun," Evitts said.

"If you don't have fun, you shouldn't be doing it."

Evitts' parents, Perry and Larraine, along with family friends. watched her battle shot for shot with Haffey.

To help alleviate the pressure, Evitts talked to her family and fellow competitors in between shots. (Her brother Christopher. 14, competed in the Junior Male Compound and finished 13th overall 2,583 points.)

Evitts led by eight at the halfway point (two rounds), 1,304-1292. She also trailed by one, but through the four total rounds, Evitts hit a total of 100 tens, while Haffey had 89.

"I got a medal, I was really happy, and my parents were, too," said Melissa, who celebrated with family and friends after Thursdays' final round at a local Chinese restaurant. "The heat played a big part. Everybody was getting tired. It was a long day."

Evitts was determined to win on her home turf after placing fourth in last year's Junior Compound Division in Canton.

"I tried to work on different things, but I basically practiced a lot more," she said.

This fall, Evitts will compete in the Fall Classics at Michigan State University.

As for next year, she'll move up to the Women's Open compound division and will be shooting at 70 meters.

DCI banking on better pitching competition, then won the U.S. Open Tournament.

Double-winner: Kathy Loesch had never won in five previous trips to nationals, but last week she finished first in the Senior Female Recurve

That's why DCI, the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League champion, left Friday morning and practiced Saturday at a local high school in nearby Breezewood, Pa.

"Our sponsor realizes the importance of our kids coming in and getting used to the surroundings," said DCI manager Mike George, who is taking his team to the 20-and-under Tourney for the fourth straight year. "It's a seven-hour ride and we have to report by 2 p.m. on Sunday anyway. He was gracious enough to put us up a couple days early and so far it's been raining ever since we hit Ohio.'

Last year DCI finished 2-2 as the New Orleans (La.) Recreation Boosters won the double-elimination tournament. In 1998, George's DCI squad finished 4-

AAABA BASEBALL

"This team has the best pitching we've ever had," George said. "We have five left-handers and four right-handers. Without a doubt, that's our strong suit."

Left-hander Ryan Ford of Eastern Michigan, who led DCI with a 10-1 record, will get the start on Monday in the opening round. (DCI's opponent will be determined Sunday night at the AAABA banquet.)

Slated to pitch Tuesday is Derrick Peterson, a 6foot-3, 205-pounder right-hander from EMU.

George also picked up three additional hurlers made available from the LCBL to take to Johnstown - right-hander Dale Hayes (Madonna University), who went 9-1 with the Michigan Lake Area Rams; right-hander Jason Lukasik (University of Detroit Mercy) from Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury; and righthander Brad McCloskey (University of Michigan) of the Rams.

Hayes played his high school baseball at Westland John Glenn, while Lukasik is a Plymouth Salem High graduate.

McCloskey, who prepped at Birmingham Brother

Rice, picked up a win in relief last year for DCI in Johnstown. Two additional players George wanted to pick up never materialized.

Rams utilityman Mike Macek (Redford Union) had to complete summer course requirements at Saginaw Valley State, while Michigan Bulls pitcher John Picco (of Villanova H.S. in Ontario) recently signed with the New York Yankees.

So George will not have to tinker with his starting lineup which posted an LCBL-best 27-6-2 record.

The starting infield will be Randy Ortiz (Michigan State) behind the plate; Peterson at first; Mario D'Herin (MU) at second; Jim Nowicki (Ball State) at short; and Dave Lusky (Eastern Michigan) at third.

One's not enough: Golfer gets 2 aces

BY PAUL BEAUDRY STAFF WRITER

pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

Brian Bedgood first took up golf six years ago to get closer to his soon-to-be stepson.

After the last three weeks, his stepson won't have anything to do with him - at least on the golf course.

See, most people go a lifetime without seeing, let alone hitting a hole-in-one. Bedgood has two to his credit - both on Sundays and both in the last three weeks.

"I'd never even seen one before," said Bedgood. "And now I've done this. I've been so pumped up over this."

The first ace for the 43-year-old came on July 8 on the 152-yard 14th hole at Dearborn Hills Golf Course in an outing that included his stepson, Brian Harnos - who was a standout golfer for Garden City High School and now Schoolcraft College.

Bedgood used his 6-iron, swung, watched the ball hit appear to roll off the back of the green. It didn't.

"I didn't think it was going in, I thought it was rolling off the back," said Bedgood. "But everyone else was going nuts. They ran to the hole before I got there and made sure it went it. It was such a charge to have Brian there and my brother-in-law, because they're both such good golfers. "

At that time, Bedgood was also introduced to that time honored golf tradition - paying for drinks after hitting his hole-in-one. As luck would have it, the beverage cart came rolling around the corner right after the ball went in the hole.

"It was worth it, the whole experience was," said Bedgood. "I got a plaque made with a picture of the hole, the date, the ball and all of that. I mean I figured I would do every thing to remember. It wasn't like I was going to do it again."

At least, not for another three weeks. For this very Sunday, at the 17th hole at Hilltop in Plymouth, 144 yards from tee to pin, with the same 6-iron, the same thing happened.

"It went right at the flag, came down, rolled five feet and dropped in the center of the hole," said Bedgood. "I was golfing with people from work (General Fasteners in Livonia) and they rushed to the hole before I could get there. They went nuts too.'

Being the benevolent golfer, Bedgood also bought the beverage rounds that day. Being the benevolent stepfather, Bedgood also called Harnos while he was working at Westland Municipal to imform him that lightning had struck twice.

"He took it well," said Bedgood. "He told me this has to stop right now. He's a good golfer and this put the hurt on him. The funny thing is I picked up golf because of him. I figured it was something we can do together, so I bought clubs and learned to

He's also been thoroughly bitten by the golf bug.

"It is the most awesome feeling," said Bedgood. "I love to golf so much and now it's even more. I never would have thought I would get one, let alone two. You read about the people who get one what they shot for the round, then you realize that all it is is one shot."

Bedgood, who carries a 43 average at Warren Valley, doesn't remember what he shot for the round the first time. And he barely remembers what he shot the second time -

But you can bet, right now, that he'll have plans to golf on Aug. 19. If he hit two, three weeks apart, you know he has to try for his third in six weeks.

"I absolutely will be golfing that day," said Bedgood. "I don't know where, who with, or where I'll be. But I will be golfing. I doubt it will happen again, but I can't tempt fate and

Teacher picked as new Borgess basketball coach

BY PAUL BEAUDRY STAFF WRITER pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

Redford Bishop Borgess officials didn't have to go far to fill their vacant girls basketball coaching position. Jim Zabawski, a history and physical education teacher at the school, was named the new coach on Tuesday. Zabawski replaces Monique Johnson, who left the post earlier this month to become the head coach at Hamtramck High School.

"I'm looking forward to it," said Zabawski, who was also a finalist for the vacant boys basketball coaching job, filled by former Redford Union coach Lloyd Praedel earlier this summer.

"I was interested in the position last year, but they really wanted a woman coach to come in, so that left me on the outside. But I'm looking forward to this."

The hiring is none too soon. Not only does practice officially start on Monday, but the Spartans have to replace five of their eight players from last year's 18-3 team that was ranked No. 1 in Class C for much of the season.

Amber Taylor graduated and Joie Clyburn, Ashley Gibson, Raechelle Hampton and Queyata Hines all transfered to Detroit Benedictine after the first semester last year. Only three players return from the team - Tara Charles, Lizann Charles and Natosha Smith.

"We're not going to be as talented as last year, but we're trying to get more depth," said Zabawski. "We're going to really lean on the girls who are coming back. It doesn't look like we'll have a freshman or junior varsity team, but we'll just try and get as many players out as we

Zabawski, 35, hasn't coached at the varsity level, but was an assistant at Berkley High School under long-time boys head coach Steve Rhoads.

"He's coached before, knows the girls he's going to be coaching and knows the situation he's walking into," said athletic director Rodney Geter. "We only have three experienced players back and there's a lot of green players out there. He knows that and still wants to do it. He's been pretty loyal to the school and wants to take a step up and help rebuild the program. He's got a good rapport with the kids at school and hopefully that will transfer to the court and we can do something with it."

"We've had only six homers as a team, so we've tried to be aggressive by running the bases, going with suicide squeezes and delayed steals."

The AAABA Tourney in Johnstown at one time was a hitters paradise, but no more.

"The wood bats evens out things a lot," George said. "You used to see 18-14 games, now it's more like 5-4, 5-3 and 6-4 type games."

A cardinal flower offers color, history

Red is a very noticeable color to humans. Stop signs and stop lights are red because it draws our atten-

Hunters used to wear red so they would be seen by other hunters. Most animals, except primates and birds, cannot detect red. But for advertisers to humans it is a powerful color.

The other day I was walking around a wet forest at the developing Lyon Oaks County Park near Wixom identifying some flowers. I came upon some swamp milkweed which has a reddish-pink colored flower. It attracted my attention, until I saw the cardinal flower out of the corner of my eye. There is no red like the cardinal flower red in the wildflower world.

A streak of sunlight hit one of the flower stalks and made it glow against the lush green background of grasses and other plants. Several red blossoms were blooming along the upright stem.

Below the spike were long lance shaped leaves that radiated from the main stem. Each plant in this cluster of three stood about four feet tall. High enough above the surrounding plants to boldly stand

Cardinal flower is native to North America and was one of the first plants to be shipped back to Europe. By the 1600s it was cultivated in gardens. Its common name was derived from the similarity in color to the robes of cardinals in the Catholic church. The same can be said for the name of our red color finch the cardinal.

Once cardinal flower became popular in Europe it developed a lore and myth of its own. Certainly the showy color of the flower made it very distinctive and matched the color of passion.

Folklore indicates that the plant was used as a love charm. After a root of the plant was removed and cleaned using a ceremonial procedure, the root was touched on all parts of the body. Though it was suppose to work on all people, it reportedly worked the best on elderly ladies.

Native Americans had a more practical use for the plant. They boiled the root and made a tea which was suppose to cure intestinal worms. Too much of this tea would cause sweaty palms, irregular pulse, dizziness and nausea.

Like the milkweed nearby, cardinal flower has a white milky fluid in its leaves also. This does not mean they are related. Cardinal flower is in the lobelia family, while milkweed is in the family of its own namesake.

Long tubular blossoms of cardinal flower make it impossible for bees to pollinate. Although some bees have been observed chewing the side of the blossom to get into the nectar at the base of the flower. Unfortunately for the cardinal flower, this does not allow pollination.

Pollination of cardinal flower is primarily accomplished by hummingbirds. Birds of course see color very well, and red is particularly attractive to hummingbirds, as those of you who feed them well know. They are able to hover at each blossom and probe into the tube with their long tongue.

While they are probing for nectar, pollen inadvertently collects on the forehead of the hummingbird. As the hummingbird flies from flower to flower it pollinates the blossoms.

This is the beginning of the season for blooming cardinal flower.

If you canoe, watch the river bank for the bright red cardinal flower, or if you walk near wet forests; keep your eyes open. Discovery of a wild cardinal flower can be very rewarding.

A chance to play with pros

BY JOHN WUKOVITS SPECIAL WRITER

Sports fans sometimes criticize golfers on the PGA Tour for being stoic-faced automatons so intent on their work they allow little emotion and/or fun to interfere with their work.

That was not the scene at the TPC of Michigan in Dearborn, where area teenagers played nine holes of golf with Senior Tour fixtures like Vicente Fernandez, Jim Colbert and Gary McCord.

One of those fortunate teenagers happened to be 16-year-old Aaron Friedman of West Bloomfield. Friedman, a star on the West Bloomfield HS golf team, navigated the tricky front nine at the TPC with Fernandez, a veteran Senior player and winner of three Senior PGA Tour tournaments.

"Fernandez was great," gushed Friedman after his round. "He gave me some tips on how to improve my game, but mainly we went out and had a good time."

Friedman joined 47 other area teenage golfers who had been selected to play based on a combination of factors. Foremost among them were a grade-point average of 2.5 or better and a golf handicap below 25. The tournament is held each year on the Monday before the Ford Senior Players Championship to honor the memory of golfer Larry Gilbert, who died of cancer in 1998.

The idea of the outing is not so much to groom the teenagers for tournament golf, but rather to have fun and keep an interest alive in the sport.

"My main purpose is to bring enthusiasm to the game," said Colbert, the winner of 27 tournaments on both the regular and Senior PGA tours, including the 1993 Ford Senior Players Championship. "So many kids play golf until age 18 or so, then give up the game until they are in their 30s.

"Maybe this will help keep interest

McCord, who also provides commentary as part of the CBS television golf team, agrees that fun is the emphasis in this brief event.

"You talk to the kids to see what's going on in their lives," McCord said. "It's more to have fun than to get serious."

The day began for Friedman with a practice session at thdriving range. Fernandez and 15 other Senior Tour professionals handed out golf tips to the three teenagers with whom they would play.

Fernandez did not have to offer much to Friedman, who started playing at age five and normally shoots in the upper 70s to low 80s for 18. He watched the youth's rhythm as Friedman hammered a number of balls 250 yards and more down the driving range, then focused his attention on the other two teenagers in the group, Ryan Bishop from Big Rapids and Justin Jackson from Detroit.

Friedman and the other two youths in his foursome then headed to the first tee with their professional golfer, where they were greeted by a small gallery, including Friedman's proud parents, that walked with them.

"I loved watching how the professionals interacted with the teenagers," said Mrs. Friedman. "I was not too nervous as Aaron played, not as nervous as during some of the tournaments he enters during the school year."

Once on the course, Aaron noticed the conversation swayed from golf to other topics. Fernandez kept the group loose with questions about their lives and comments about fellow players. If his intent was to relax the teenagers in his group, the tactic worked. 'On the first tee I was a little nervous, but then the nerves were gone after that," Aaron said. "The professionals tried to make us have a good time."

The round of golf proved to be as fun and exciting as Friedman had hoped. His biggest fear, he admitted, was making a fool out of himself by hitting the ball only a few yards, but that fear never materialized.

"I hit the ball really well off the tee and made one or two good ones from the fairway," he said.

Friedman will relish the par-four fifth hole for quite a while. He split the fairway with a perfect drive that traveled even farther than Fernandez's drive, then followed that by arcing a beautiful wedge shot to within four feet of the hole and draining the putt for a birdie.

On the next hole, Friedman attempted a shot he would not normally try - a drive directly over 275 yards of water to the green on the par-four hole. Friedman barely missed pulling it off when the ball splashed into the water only a few feet from the green's edge.

"I figured it was a fun day and I had nothing to lose," he explained, adding he would never attempt such a risky shot during serious competition.

Friedman enjoyed his day in the sun with the professional athletes and other teenagers. He claims he will always retain fond memories of his opportunity to play nine holes with a pro golfer like Fernandez and talk with McCord and other Senior PGA stars.

"It was fun," he said. "I hope I can pursue golf as a career someday.

French jazz group needs host families ill Cameron is running out of time. As chairman of Friendship Exchange for the Livonia Rotary Club, Cameron must find enough families and singles to host 19 musicians and 10 family members of Ecole de Musique d'Improvisation Jazz from Elbeuf, France - Friday-Sunday, Aug. 10-12.

The French jazz group, which is part of the Blue Lake International Exchange Program, will perform at 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 12, at the Rotary Community Barbecue at Rotary Park on Six Mile Road in Livonia. The event will also feature performances by Ron Coden and a bluegrass group, and games for kids, 5 p.m. dog show, and antique car display.

"I like people, I like music," said Cameron, who has volunteered to coordinate the hosting of more than a half dozen international music groups over the last several years. "I like the organization of it," he said. "The hardest part is finding hosts for the musicians. This year we have 29, but we've hosted as many as 54 so I'm running out of friends."

Cameron, a resident of Livonia, is hosting a mother, father and son, but families and singles can open their home to as few as one of the musicians

They play a variety of big band tunes from Duke Ellington to Glenn Miller and Count Basie. The musicians, from the School of Improvisational Jazz in Elbeuf, recently released their first CD. Before playing in Livonia, they'll stop in Bay City for a performance.

Reunion

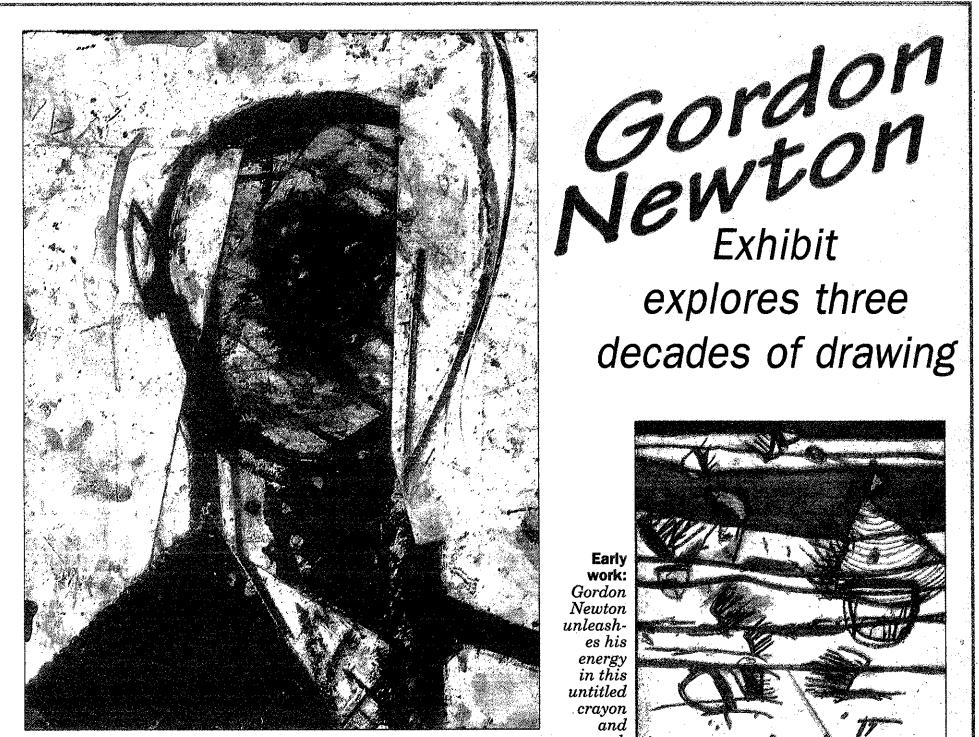

Trisha Taylor originally heard them play last year when she toured Germany, Denmark and France as a saxophonist with the Blue Lake Fine Arts Jazz Ensemble's International Exchange Program. Taylor thought she would never see any of the musicians again, and is excited about them coming to the U.S. for a two-week tour.

Taylor plans to host two of the musicians in her Livonia home. She thinks they'll especially like going out to dinner because that's what she wanted to do the most when she was in Europe.

A graduate of Stevenson High School, where she played with the jazz band, Taylor spent three summers at Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp in northern Michigan, and one summer in the international touring program.

"They play old style jazz – big band and swing," said Taylor, who will begin studies in music education and French settling in Port Huron. After taking art classes with Vincent McPharlin at the Port Huron Community College boathouse on Lake Huron, Newton was inspired to move to Detroit and enroll at the Society of Arts and Crafts (formerly Center for Creative Studies, now College for Creative Studies). He didn't stay long, and eventually became a student at Wayne State University where he "rarely attended class."

Restless spirit

That restless spirit and energy shows in his early black and white drawings in the first gallery. Along with the sensitive, almost animated shapes and forms, Newton creates highly-controlled graphite works in which he uses tape to achieve a hard edge.

Newton continuously experimented with materials and tools. For a 1972 landscape, he told curators Nancy Sojka and MaryAnn Wilkinson, he used his hands and feet.

Newton met on several occasions with the DIA curators to sort through 500 drawings and sketchbooks 40 donated to the museum by James F. Duffy, Jr. in 1999. A massive undertaking, Sojka and Wilkinson began selecting drawings for the 150-piece large body of work last fall. Gordon ues to Sunday, Nov. 4 at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"What you see is a tremendous imagination at work, terrific composition, creativity," said Sojka, associate curator of graphic arts. "For over 30 years he has never stopped thinking. It's idea after idea. There's a certain harshness and brutality and yet a beauty.

PRESERVING TRADITION

Locals keep spirit of ancient dance alive

BY LANA MINI STAFF WRITER lmini@oe.homecomm.net

The Shawaza tribe has a goal: To preserve and uphold the integrity of the world's oldest dance.

In America, it's known as belly dancing. In Arabic it's called raks sharki, meaning "Oriental dance." Others know it as Middle Eastern dance. Whichever the term, it's a dance that celebrates femininity.

Shawaza, meaning "enchantment" or "bewitchment," is a performing belly dance tribe comprised of women from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb Counties and Windsor.

With precision and controlled movement, Shawaza will artfully perform ancient belly dance moves at local corporate and community events, charity fund-raisers, libraries, bookstores, hospitals, weddings, festivals and birthday, retirement and engagement parties.

The tribe's leader, Cedena Boukraa of Westland, also teaches the uplifting dance to children at birthday parties, summer camps, Boy and Girl Scout events and libraries. Registration is open for fall classes for young girls.

Sojka and Wilkinson succeed in showing Newton's broad range of concepts. From adding color and varnish to Roller Coaster III in 1977 to the latest work in the center galleries, the exhibit traces more than 30 years of imagination and creativ-

Abstract to representational

"Gordon flips in and out of abstraction and dealing with recognizable themes," said Sojka. "By 1974 we're starting to see things more recognizable. The Fuselage series plays on the tail of an airplane and deals with specific structural themes. In the Construction series from 1974, he's exploring media and bizarre constructions of media on paper. Tape holds the pieces together and echoes the drawings on the opposite wall. In 1972 he was drawing shapes, sometimes tearing up drawings he didn't care

Materials

Tape, yellowed from age, provides the only color in a 1972 drawing. Newton mixes abstraction, color, collage, and sculptural elements in other works. Primarily known as a sculptor, Newton, like other Cass Corridor artists, created works from found objects. A Plexiglas, cardboard and resin assemblage constructed in 1974 shows him thinking about structure.

"Gordon told us about the medium, the early works with a litho crayon, later ones with Conte or oil stick, the materials picked up in a hardware store," said Sojka. "Materials are so interesting but in the end don't matter. He used whatever was lying around that might have an

Subject matter

While Newton never left Detroit, he dreams of designing and building a perfect living space in his On the Thames, English Cottage series from the early 1980s. Like all of his work, Newton draws subject matter that holds meaning for him.

A few of the series in the early 1980s seem open to interpretation like Anthology with its black scenes and architectural themes, and Untitled Family Tree where he achieves texture by combing wax with paint. In the 1980s and 1990s, Newton explores the machinery of agriculture and warfare. In fact, Newton returns to the military tanks nearly 10 years later to darken his palette and abstract the form to make it appear more sinister.

The Cast Cement drawings

began as a proposal submitted to then DIA director Frederick Cummings for a sculptural garden on the grounds of the museum. The project fell through but Newton revamped the drawings by adding firecrackers and figures. They seem to tell a story related to chaos and rioting. The Cass Corridor artists were deeply affected by the 1967 riots which took place in the streets of

"He speaks enthusiastically about the Cass Corridor era, said Sojka. "Several of the early works in the first gallery look botanical. They're representations of energy. He talks about how he felt alive - everybody going to each other's studios and meeting at night, bouncing ideas off each other, but it left little time to work."

"The Cass Corridor movement was a wonderful moment in time locally but reflected so much going on internationally. The artists looked at a completely untraditional way of making art. It's 2001 and we're used to so much. Perhaps it doesn't look as radical as it did 30 years ago but it's all about creativity and imagination. It's exhilarating to see how open minded he was. That one person had such a broad range of ideas. It's the pleasure of seeing the mind at work."

Sculpting line, shape, form

MaryAnn Wilkinson sees the drawings as being "more about building and making." Newton creates drawings systematically as if constructing an assemblage or sculpture.

Wilkinson first became familiar with Newton's work 20 years ago. In 1989 she wrote an essay for joint exhibits by Newton at the Susanne Hilberry (Birmingham) and Joy Emery (Grosse Pointe) galleries. It was at that time Wilkinson spent hours talking to Newton about his art. She also interviewed him extensively in March and April of this year for an essay in the catalog accompanying the DIA's exhibi-

"Gordon was part of the Cass Corridor group that influenced a whole generation of artists and established what has followed," said Wilkinson, curator of modern and contemporary art at the DIA. "Gordon's never had a big show. Most of the things have never been seen by anyone but Gordon and Jim Duffy. It shows how strong he is as an artist and intellectual.

"The early abstract drawings are beautiful, very complicated but very immediate, fresh, like they were just done," said Wilkinson. "The heads are so mysterious. They're beautiful but kind of eerie and balance the notion of being human and abstract all at the same time."

Food writer shares surprises

"Comfort Me With Apples," by Ruth Reich! (Random House, $24.95).

By VICTORIA DIAZ

Reading this memoir by the editor in chief of Gourmet magazine is a little like having dinner at a trailblazing restaurant. Some of the fare may delight, some may prove a mite disagreeable, but practically none of it will be less than intriguing to experience.

Ruth Reichl, who has been the restaurant critic for both The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times, started her restaurant career at a tiny bistro in Ann Arbor, and went on to become a professional chef at a West Coast dining spot called The Swallow. (She wrote about early times in a debut memoir, "Tender at the Bone.") "Comfort Me With Apples" opens in the San Francisco Bay area in 1978, as she begins to try her hand at restaurant reviewing, with an eye toward leaving the kitchen behind.

Along the way, she meets up with the likes of chef Wolfgang Puck (readers can witness the absolutely frantic opening of his new restaurant in Tinseltown). popular food writer M.F.K: Fisher, and Alice Waters of the highly lauded California dining spot, Chez Panisse.

We also get to know some lesser-known lights in Reichl's life – her husband, artist Douglas Hollis; her slightly dotty mother; a few colleagues; her housemates at a Berkeley commune; people she encounters on her assignments; Michael Singer, who eventually plays a large role in her life; and many others.

She travels to rural China, sweetly scented Spain, romantic Paris, "the sexy stew of Bangkok," and other fun spots eating all the while, of course, and more than you can imagine sometimes. (Actually, you may wonder, while reading this book, why Reichl doesn't tip the scales at around 500 pounds. One meal she describes goes on for six hours, another starts at lunch and continues through dinner events that may leave some readers shaking their heads and mumbling about world hunger.) Reichl obviously delights in food, glorious food - in fact, it's a little startling sometimes just how worshipfully she (and her co-workers) regard it. At the drop of a hat, they can wax poetic about such things as an asparagus tip, or grow rapturous at the sight of raw calves' brains offered at a butcher shop. It's part of the secret, I suppose, of being an effective food writer, but, to an ordinary diner, the prose can seem a little gassy and over-rich at times. (Foie gras is 'molten velvet." A forkful of scrambled eggs is "like biting off a piece of the sun." Some Thai soup tastes "as if lemons had once gone gliding through and left their ghosts behind.") Most of the time, though, Reichl makes it fun to read about the pleasures of dining on such exotic fare as slugs, jellyfish salad, goat honey, Swiss pumpkin, and Wolfgang Puck's oyster feuillete with beurre blanc. She also adds to the fun by peppering the book with several recipes.

Love and life

"Comfort Me With Apples" is most definitely not a cookbook, though. In fact, sometimes it is not even about food, but more about Reichl's own joys and disappointments in love and life. We learn of her painful separation from her husband of 11 years, an adoption gone awry, her complex relationships with her parents, even a couple of heated, romantic trysts. (She has a real knack for capturing on paper the characters who play a role in her life - even if they're not all particularly likable.) Her description of her break-up with her husband is a highly articulate and sensitive account of how two people can grow apart, though they still love each other. And the brief story of how she loses an (almost) adopted child is powerfully written and genuinely heart-wrenching.

This is a book with a deliciously satisfying ending, though. Its closing pages may make many readers believe in the old adage that life is full of great surprises - and that some of us do, indeed, get our just desserts. Victoria Diaz is a Livonia resident and writes about books, theater and movies for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

FREE CONCERT/CLINIC

Admission is free but ticket reservations are required. Call (313) 494-5800.

The concert includes the premier of Haas' new jazz suite Motown Mosaic, commissioned for the Detroit 300 celebration. Haas began composing the work last year.

"With Motown Mosaic, the music broadens in scope to include a variety of ethnic influences that are a part of today's Motor City vibe - Eastern European, Middle Eastern, African American and Hispanic all in a contemporary improvisational context," explained Haas. " It's a more traditional style of suite in terms of structure, based in dance forms with reoccurring melodic motifs. But a lot of the music is contemporary, sometimes edgy. Add the intensity and soul of these musicians and you definitely have a musical celebration."

Haas will also give a free clinic for elementary and middle school students 2 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 8 at the museum. The group will perform several of Haas' compositions and talk about using music to promote better understanding between people. The composer/bandleader will also talk about his motivation to compose music that combines the vibe of Jewish music with jazz. For reservations, call (313) 494-5820.

Aug. 26 concert features Benny Goodman's music

BY KEELY WYGONIK

STAFF WRITER kwygonik@oe.homecomm.net Playing Benny Goodman's music accompanied by a 17-piece orchestra isn't something you get to do every day, and Jim Wyse is looking forward to the challenge. On Sunday, Aug. 26 Wyse will join Paul Keller's 17-piece Bird of Paradise Orchestra, vocalist Susan Chastain, and the Keller/Kocher Quartet, for an afternoon concert of Benny Goodman's music at the Monaghan Knights of Columbus Hall

"We did the program in April at the Bird of Paradise in Ann Arbor, and it was a success, said Wyse a Livonia resident. "We're trying to recapture what they were doing in the 1930s and 1940s. It was the pop music that was happening at that time. It was arranged, but left room for people to improvise. There was a lot of good musicianship, people liked the music, and supported it

- it was all pretty good stuff." A retired Wayne County prosecutor, Wyse was born a week before Goodman played Carnegie Hall. He chose the clarinet in fourth grade and has been playing ever since. The Aug. 26 concert will include some of the tunes that were played at that concert.

the familiar "Don't be that Way," but they might not have heard "The Camel Hop." "We've always done his most famous songs, but the more research we did, the more we kept rediscovering these great swing tunes," said bandleader Paul Keller who did a lot of research at Wyse's house. "I couldn't believe how much I didn't know about Benny Goodman," he said. "Jim is such a great clarinet player, he really is an authority on the music of Benny Goodman."

Goodman fans will recognize

What: A tribute to the music of Benny Goodman When: 3-6 p.m. Sunday, Aug.

Where: Monaghan Knights of Columbus Hall on Farmington Road between Seven and Eight Mile Roads, Livonia Tickets: $12 in advance, $15 at the door, call (248) 476-

The show will be bigger than the one at Bird of Paradise. Phore will be two sets, each an hour and 15 minutes long. Wyse will be featured on a number of tunes, so will Chastain, owner of Ann Arbor's newest jazz club, the Firefly,

Paul Finkbeiner on trumpet and pianist James Dapogny. The Keller/Kocher Quartet will also perform. It's part of the Goodman tradition. Cary Kocher plays vibraphone just like Lionell Hampton, a Goodman

"A lot of people don't get to hear a big band. It's a rare occasion," said Wyse. "It's just a thrill. Here's an opportunity to hear the music Goodman did. You can hear a zillion recordings, but it isn't the same as hearing it live."

Something different "This is a big departure from the Dixieland formula we have been following," said Bill Knowles of Farmington, president of the New Windsor/Detroit Jazz Club, which is presenting the program. "Dixieland remains our main love, but we may have reached the point where we will want to include other forms of 'our kind of music,' starting with swing. We hope some people will want join our club. This may generate revenue to allow us to bring in nationally known headliners and leading vocalists."

Jim Wyse

Keller's Bird of Paradise Orchestra is leaving for its second European tour on Oct. 25. "We're getting our new CD ready," said Keller. "We hope to have it done by the end of September. It's called 'Paris Blues," after a Duke Ellington song.' For more information about the artistic and cultural aspects of the dance, which creates more freedom for personal expression. Not to say that discipline isn't important, because it certainly is. But children also need to be accepted for who they are as individuals, not merely for their accomplishments alone."

Boukraa also teaches the dance to help build self-esteem in her dancers.

"This is especially true for young girls, so that they develop self-confidence and a positive body image early on in life, she said. "The need for social conformance and acceptance starts at a very early age. Young students develop a perception that a dancer ought to be thin — even to the point of malnutrition. But with belly dance, there is no such thing as an ideal body type. Positive body image is an important virtue for young ladies to learn, and hopefully, I can use that aspect of the dance to help make a difference."

The dance, she said brings people together of all ages. The Arabic music, upbeat in nature, is fun for the children who are motivated by happiness.

They're also attracted to the colorful and eclectic costumes, and noise-makers such as finger cymbals and coin belts. Part of the children's classes are spent making jewelry and decorative plates, which the girls love.

Universal language

"Together, music and dance create a universal language which enables us to better understand other cultures. For young children, cultural diversity is another important benefit they can derive from their lessons.

Whether it's intriguing belly rolls, isolated hip shimmies, elegant "snake" arms, or mesmerizing body waves, traditional and modern forms of "Oriental" belly dancing are alive worldwide.

Vanessa Vogler, a Shawaza member and student of Boukraa, discovered personal expression and femininity through belly dancing with her sister Paula Vogler. Ironically, Boukraa, who has danced professionally for eight years, also discovered the dance along with her sister.

dance along with her sister.

Boukraa, also a drummer, teaches students several styles of belly dance including veil and zil (castanets) dances. Shawaza recently performed Boukraa's own zil composition and dance at the BellyJam dance convention in Cincinnati, a prestigious event for "Oriental" dancers.

Boukraa and her students in Shawaza have formed a bond of encouragement and support — and that touches the Vogler sisters.

"The tribe is very close. We all enjoy dancing together as well as the social company. I love the new friends I've made," said Paula Vogler. "We all learn through each other."

While belly dancing is exotic,

Shawaza is adamant to break myths that it's erotic. Boukraa works to bring tradition back to the stage with elaborate costumes, creativity and ethnic music.

The group is serious about the art form, speculated to have originated as a birth ritual in Mesopotamia. There, the dance was performed by temple priestess as a sacred, highly esteemed ritual to celebrate the magic of birth. As civilizations evolved, so did religious beliefs and practices. The birth ritual then endured as a cultural religion and has become a common form of entertainment for special occasions in America and overseas, Boukraa explained.

The term "belly dance" was coined in 1893 by promoters of the World Fair in Chicago where America's first Oriental, or Middle Eastern, dance was performed. Today Boukraa is dedicated to promoting Middle Eastern dance and culture in the metro-Detroit area.

The interest in Middle Eastern dance and culture is strong in the area, Bourkraa said, but there aren't many instructors available At the International Women's Show in Novi this year, the Navel Academy promoted Middle Eastern dance and culture to women of Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw Counties.

"The number one thing we heard from visitors at our booth was that they wanted to take lessons for years, and could never find an instructor. Our presence there was very significant for those communities throughout the state where Middle Eastern dance was previously not accessible."

Shawaza also brings the dance to many local communities through public performances, which are free to the auidence. Recent appearances include the Westland Public Library, Borders Books & Music stores, and Gilda's Club.

Dancing for improved health "Even pregnant women benefit from the dance," Boukraa said. "Mothers who belly dance are known to experience less difficulty during labor and have a faster

Student dancer Katherine Vincent, of Berkley, is currently pregnant and has been encouraged by fellow Shawaza members to dance throughout her pregnancy. Part Iraqi, she appreciates the dance as her heritage.

Exercise

"It's a good form of exercise and it's very beautiful," Vincent said.

For seniors or women described as obese the dance is beneficial because it isn't aerobic but tones muscles and builds stamina, Boukraa said. Since it's low-impact, there's little risk of injury

And most students aren't Middle Eastern. Boukraa says she enjoys instructing American students and teaching about Middle Eastern culture, because students then learn that many common perceptions of Middle Eastern people are untrue.

"Cedena is our mentor. We look for approval from her all the time and we all fight for her attention." Vanessa Vogler laughed. "She is so encouraging. The chemistry of all us together is something unheard of for a group of people. I love this bunch of women."

Use makeup brushes for the best results

DISCOVERING

MARY ANNE TOCCALINO

It's probably a good time to take inventory of our makeup brushes. We have all the summer essentials in our makeup kit and are awaiting the debut of fall colors.

Brushes are the secret behind makeup that looks like it's been done by a professional, and makeup artists are extremely attached, figuratively and literally speaking, to their makeup brushes.

A brush brings life, dimension and precision to the application of color cosmetics.

I believe the right brush can transform a less than remarkable face into a work of art. Brushes come in different shapes and sizes, from a thick dome of European goat hair to a fine strand of Russian sable hair, for a variety of uses. So the question is: Which brush is the right one for a

Unfortunately, the answer to that question varies as much as the brushes themselves. There are no set rules about makeup brushes, only guidelines. Beyond those basic guidelines, however, makeup artists do consider certain characteristics when selecting brushes. They are: hair type, density, cut, shape, size and handle weight. In the end, matching up particular characteristics is a personal choice based on how the brush feels. But, generally speaking, makeup artists are looking for balance, control, strength and swiftness when using the brush.

Splitting hairs

The type of hair used to make a brush is probably the most important factor for consideration.

There are three general categories of brush hair: synthetic, natural and bristle.

Manufactured (acrylic) hair has a coarse feeling and a tendency to get stiffer, rather than softer, with use. Therefore, they usually are not the best choice.

Natural animal hair brushes in general are ideal. Natural hair has a middle structure called the medulla, which is covered by a thick sheath and covered by a shell of scales called the cuticle. The scales in the cuticle structure hold and trap various makeup matter when picked up. They then release the matter when pressure is applied through the brush.

Bristle is a category of natural hair most often made from a hog or a boar. It is stiff and firm in texture. Its interlocking structure give the hair a natural curve and a split tip called a flag. The flag allows the brush to hold a maximum amount of color and act as a "paint brush" during application. Both of these features make it ideal for grooming and laying down makeup at the same time.

Hair type has a tremendous effect on brush prices. A fine Kolinsky Russian sable hair brush, for instance, is one of the most costly available. A common boar bristle brush, on the other hand, would be relatively inexpensive.

While expensive brushes are nice to have, you can own a set of high quality brushes without spending a fortune.

Decent quality brushes are made from pony and goat hairs. Hair blends such as squirrel, mink and weasel, are also used in higher quality brushes.

In general, the better the grade of hair, the better release and control (of makeup product) afforded by the brush. A good release gives you the control needed to apply and blend

Hair texture has a great deal to do with the amount of product it holds. The softer the hair, the less it picks up and delivers to the surface for blending, which nets a lighter, more sheer application.

The method used to harvest hair also makes a big difference in brush quality.

Top grade brushes use the softest hair of first-cut animal fur. Brushes using first-cut hair are made from the tip of shorn animal fur, a process considered to be cruelty-free. Less expensive brushes are obtained using the blunt-cut process. which involves a second cut of animal fur. Though these brushes are cheaper, their hair is more coarse in texture.

Basic kit

There's an overwhelming selection of makeup brushes from which to choose. I recommend purchasing a core set and relying on them for consistent results. Based on my own use I suggest the following basic brushes:

A powder brush should have soft hair, a full dome shape and a beveled tip. It can be used to apply loose or pressed powder or to dust off excess powder.

■ A blush brush with a small, compact dome shape, tight hairs and rounded tip works best for sweeping color across the cheeks.

■ An eye shadow brush with a chisel style is a popular choice. Those with a "fluffy" shape sweep on color, while a flatter brush will define and blend.

■ Look for a crease/contour brush with an angled chisel shape and either a flat or small round head. Use the brush to create depth in the eye lid crease and blend a contour on to the eye area's outer corner.

■ Eyeliner brushes come in a variety of styles. It's ideal to have two, one with a plume shape tip for blending and the other with an ultra-fine tip like a pen for applying eyeliner. Small angle or bullet type brushes are my favorites.

■ Lip brushes, either one with a nylon tip that is round, has a knife-shaped edge and flat sides, or one with a natural bristle tip that is flat but more rounded. These brushes enable high definition lining of the lips and aid in shaping and making corrections.

■ A camouflage or concealing brush made with a synthetic blend like taklon work best. You will need a brush that enables you to take up and move creams and oils on the skin without absorbing them. It should also remain firm and flexible when used.

Regardless of chosen hair type and cut, these essential brushes will deliver speed and accuracy when applying makeup, not to mention, beautifully finished results. With practice and the right tools you'll be looking like a pro in no time.

Tahari favors a plentiful dose of denim and classic black

Don't' toss out those black wardrobe basics; retrieve denim jackets, skirts and jeans from the back of the closet, too.

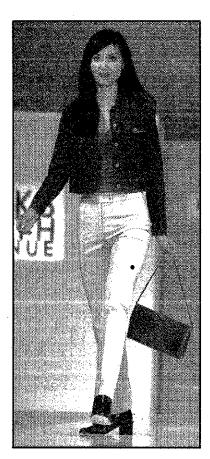

At least one major designer, Elie Tahari, is reviving the comfortable classics. His fall 2001 collection and designs for the Theory label, both of which were shown Friday at the annual Concours Du Mode fashion show at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester Hills, seemed to revolve around black and denim, the most

But Tahari's denim dodges any association with ordinary blue jeans. In shades of blue and chocolate, it looks more like a heather fabric. Shaping and design produce a good and tidy stretch fit, too.

Aside from traditionally cut denim jeans and jean jackets, of which there were many in his collections, tied-at-the-waist trench coats and even a tailored jacket were done in denim. Other denim jeans were embossed with modern jacquard prints, which created texture and sheen.

All but three of Tahari's evening ensembles were black, and of course several pairs of denim jeans were black.

Cleveland Rocks!

Beatles exhibits add new dimension to musical legends

BY ALICE RHEIN STAFF WRITER

y 3-year-old son is an absolute Beatles fanatic. He knows the Fab Four by name, he sings the lyrics to entire songs, and even recites dialogue from A Hard Day's Night, the band's seminal movie.

I don't mind. It's better than that smarmy toddler music, and it does make for interesting — albeit embarrassing — trips to the grocery store when he's bellowing Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds.

So when I told him we'd be taking a trip to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland, he naturally didn't know what the heck I was talking about. He is, as I mentioned, only 3.

John Lennon exhibit

But when I told him there was a special exhibit about John Lennon, well then, we couldn't get there fast enough. Is the "Are we there yet?" marker been isolated by geneticists yet?

This summer, the I.M. Peidesigned museum on the shores of Lake Erie actually is host to two Beatles exhibits, both well worth taking the two-and-a-half hour drive.

Lennon: His Life and Work features artifacts from the personal collection of Yoko Ono Lennon. Clothing, including the white tuxedo from Magical Mystery Tour and numerous guitars owned by the late musician's son, Julian, are among the many items in this special exhibit that extends over three floors of the six-story pyramidal structure.

With the remaining Beatles still making headline news daily
— Ringo's All-Starr Tour,
George's cancer and Paul's recent engagement — it seems only logical that light be shed on

If you go...

The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum is located at One Key Plaza in downtown Cleveland, Ohio.

Museum hours: 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily, Wednesday evenings until 9 p.m. You should allow three to four hours to view the exhibits.

Admission: $15 adults, $11.50 children 9-11 and seniors, and free to children under 8. Many Cleveland hotels include free admission to the museum as part of their overnight stay package.

John's memory. It was, after all, 20 years ago that he was shot outside the Dakota in New York City.

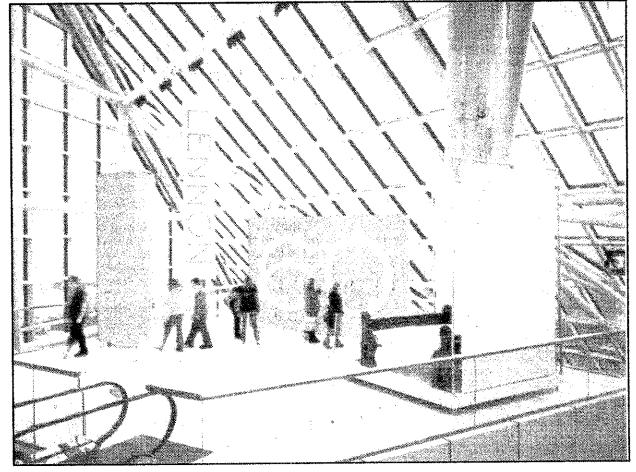

Let it Be

The exhibit includes a movie that chronicles John's life during and after the Beatles, with narratives from Yoko, Julian and John's first wife, Cynthia.

For those who grew up with the Beatles, the information is nothing new, and the colorized version of the Shea Stadium concert is downright pandering. But for those who are new to the Beatles' mystique, it's an engaging visual history lesson. Lennon's Steinway piano, the bed from John and Yoko's famous "bed-in" and school report cards are also among the memorabilia. There's also nearly 40 original drawings, collages and paintings by Lennon, many which he drew for his son Sean.

The top floor is devoted to handwritten lyrics, which are the best example of the musician-as-artist. It's interesting to see that the lyrics to Glass Onion were first penned on the back of a brown envelope. Yet the room is strangely silent, making you that much more herr, the exhibit contains numerous drawings, paintings and sketches by the artist. And

It's got a Backbeat

Along with the Lennon exhibit, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame is also featuring Stuart Sutcliffe: From the Beatles to Backbeat. The exhibit documents the short life of Sutcliffe, a founding member of the Beatles who left the band in 1961 to pursue painting. He died in 1962 of a brain aneurysm.

In addition to photographs of the band that were taken by Sutcliffe's girlfriend Astrid Kirch-herr, the exhibit contains numerous drawings, paintings and sketches by the artist. And these works serve to show that what Sutcliffe lacked as a bassist, he made up for with a paintbrush.

His bold abstracts convey a sense of timelessness and brooding. And his drawings capture a range of emotions. The bombardment of other rock artifacts is strong on the lower level where this exhibit is located, but it's worth the effort to glance briefly at Bono's and Madonna's stage outfits and spend a little more time with Sutcliffe's work.

When the 150,000 square-foot

Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum opened in 1995, many dismissed it as a ruse. Won't having a museum devoted to a genre that's inherently rebellious signal its spiraling decent into the mainstream?

Well, that hasn't happened. The emergence of rock 'n' roll unites the boomer generation in the same way that World War II does for its predecessor. And let's face it, visiting the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum may not be as historically significant, but it sure is a lot more fun than seeing a Civil War battlefield. Any 3-year-old can tell you that.

ave you ever enjoyed wines from southern California? How about the Santa Barbara area? Too warm you say? Let's talk geography.

Most mountain ranges in California run north-south, but the mountain range that creates the Santa Ynez Valley, in Santa Barbara County, runs west to east from the Pacific Ocean. This means that the marine influence creates a cool climate at the western end. Vineyards further inland get gradually warmer.

Cool climate varieties such as pinot noir are favored at the western end of the Santa Ynez Valley, while the eastern end is warm enough to grow Bordeaux varieties. All of the preceding is important because we'd like to introduce you to the wines of Babcock Winery and Vineyards, made in Santa Barbara and new to Michigan.

Bryan Babcock uses the myriad climates and exposures of the Santa Ynez Valley to produce the grapes needed to make great wines. He describes what he does for each.

These grapes produced effusive tropical characteristics, while the fruit from another warm, eastern vineyard gave flower potal and citrus notes. A vineyard nearer the ocean contributed delicious apple aromas and flavors while the estate vineyard yielded spice, citrus, mineral notes and crisp acid.

The 1999 Babcock Grand Cuvee Chardonnay Estate Grown $25 is a sensationally seamless wine with incredible balance. All elements are in harmony.

With all of the great chardonnays in the market today," Babcock emphasized, "we need great farming, great winemaking, and a great vintage to compete. We practice an integrated method of determining what the vines need and respond to those needs as quickly as possible. This means more effort and the financial risk is greater, but it is the only way to produce world class fruit.'

The 1999 Babcock Eleven Oaks Sangiovese $40 is a superb wine from a very difficult-to-grow variety. It took Babcock 15 minutes to illustrate to a grower how to prune a sangiovese vine for low yields. After he finished, the grower said, "there are 1,000 more

Tomatoes impact markets

Hannah Stevens, a horticultural agent for Michigan State University Extension Services, is in agreement. Stevens said that locally grown tomatoes are coming late, but coming nevertheless. Once they do, she said, area supermarkets will feel the pinch.

crop that will arrive a little later than usual.

"It's the one garden crop that seriously impacts supermarket produce sections," Stevens said. "They taste so much better than what supermarkets carry that supermarkets don't even attempt to compete with them."

Stevens said the reason for the taste difference between store bought and locally produced tomatoes has to do with refrigeration.

Much of the produce available in supermarkets is cooled during shipment and temperatures below 50°F can ruin a tomato's rich flavor. Large commercial farms also pick tomatoes when they're green and let them ripen during shipping, Stevens said.

"Most home growers are smarter than that, though," Stevens said.

According to Stevens, the most common mistake home growers make is in picking their tomatoes too late.

"Believe it or not, a tomato can be picked when it shows its first blush of pink," said Stevens, who instructs growers to let the tomatoes ripen for a couple of days in a dark, warm area.

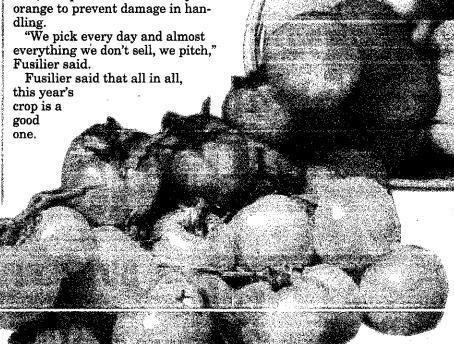

"They're going to be very tasty, and firmer," she said.

Selecting them

Tomato pickers should choose a firm, ripe tomato without blemishes and the tomato should give slightly to gentle palm pressure. They should be stored for only a day or two. Tomatoes should not be refrigerated or set in the sun.

Kathy Fusilier of the Fusilier Family Farm in She said the tomato crop usually comes in

Tips for preserving tomatoes

Michigan State University Extension Horticultural Agent Hannah Stevens suggests canning, freezing and drying those excess tomatoes that you're not able to eat right away, or making salsa.

To dry tomatoes you'll need a forced air dehydrator. Use Roma tomatoes for best results. Dried tomatoes should be packed in airtight containers. They should not be packed in oil for more than one or two days. Store dried tomatoes in the refrigerator.

Frozen tomatoes are best used in cooked sauces, soups and stews. Before freezing, wash tomatoes, remove stems and cut out the core. Leave tomatoes whole or quarter them and pack into freezer bags.

"They're tasting good and they're looking nice," The popularity of the freshly harvested tomato in this area is predicated on the plant itself, which readily grows and flourishes in the summer heat and humidity akin to southeastern Michigan.

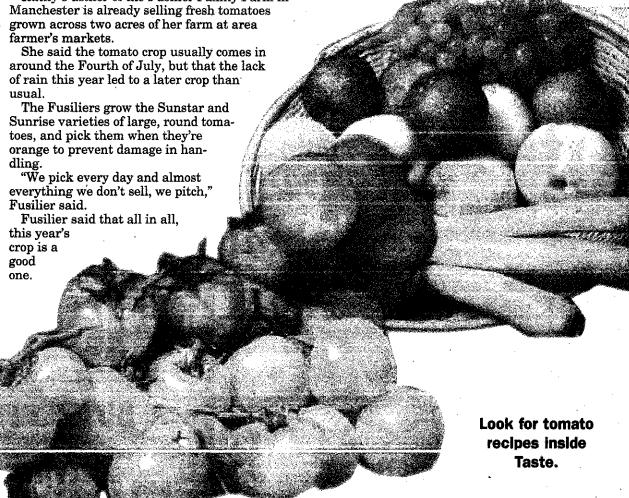

On top of that, you'd have a hard time killing the plants, which tend to do a little better when underfed and underwatered – a bad gardener's dream.

Just a few plants produce more than enough of the juicy fruit to satisfy the average family. So, with the abundance of tomatoes, whether grown on your own or picked up fresh at a local market, the tomato paradox becomes clear: so many tomatoes, so little time.

Harvest them

In the community gardens at Greenmead Historical Park in Livonia, gardeners are anticipating the arrival of ripe tomatoes.

one of the fastest growing segments of United States agriculture in the last decade. In 1999 organic food sales were estimated at approximately $6 billion. The number of organic farmers is increasing on an average of about 12 percent per year.

Late last year Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced national standards for the production, handling, and processing of organically grown agricultural products, making them the strongest, most comprehensive standards in the world.

What is organically grown food? Organic foods are grown and harvested on farms that do not use any fertilizers containing synthetic ingredients or any commercially blended fertilizers con-

Organic farming is taining natural poisons such as arsenic or lead salts. The use of nitrogen, sulfites, or heavy metals is prohibited, along with the use of any packaging materials or storage containers that contain synthetic fungicides, preservatives or fumigants.

Meeting standards

Organic farms must meet the following standards: All products labeled organic must originate from farms or handling operations certified by a state or private agency accredited by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, except farms that sell less than $5,000 worth per year of organic agricultural products. They cannot use genetic engineering methods, irradiation or sewage sludge for fertilization to be classified as "organic."

kashi cereal, granola - to my diet in May," Lifton said. "I did so because I felt sick from all of the processed foods in my diet. I had been eating processed cereal, breads that were not wholewheat, artificial sweeteners, canned fruits and frozen veggies." She finally consulted with a registered dietitian.

"All she had to say was time to eat organic, and she knew I would listen," Lifton said.

Today, Lifton is down 10 pounds from eating healthier foods. Although everything she eats is not organic, her choices are much healthier, including whole grains and lots of fresh vegetables. "I feel like I am 10 years younger, feel very good about my self,

and I have a lot of added energy," Lifton said.

Where to buy

Where can you purchase organic; foods? Surprisingly, many full-service. grocery stores are carrying a wide-variety of organic foods along with specialty grocery stores and health food stores. Some neighborhoods organize: "co-ops" to purchase organic foods, therefore saving money through a buying group which delivers right to your doorstep.

Is "natural" food the same as "organic?" Just because something is natural does not mean it's organic. Natural could mean that a fruit drink is made from fruit, but that still doesn't mean that the drink is made from fruit grown on an organic farm. The term is used very loosely.

The 20-by-20-foot garden plots at Greenmead are relatively large in relation to the normal backyard garden and the pungent smell of the tomato plant permeates the air.

Doda Sinishtaj of Novi tends about 100 tomato plants in his garden. For the most part, he grows the large Big Boy and Beefsteak varieties, but he's already harvesting grape and cherry tomatoes, which he also includes in his garden.

Sinishtaj said he grows all his plants from seeds that he culls from previous harvests.

"They're going to ripen in a minute," Sinishtaj said.

He said that he has no problem getting rid of his crop. He cans a quite a few of his tomatoes and he see a lot of familiar faces come harvest time.

"I have a lot of relatives and they all come and visit me around this time for tomatoes. We find out we're related," Sinishtaj said.

Maria Pasqualone of Farmington Hills has about 45 tomato plants, many of them the pearshaped, Italian varieties.

Her plants are tied to stakes set up in a teepee-like structure and are about 6 feet tall. She said last year that too much rain made for a bad crop, but this year should be different.

"This year looks good," Pasqualone said. "They're not ripened yet, but once they start to ripen they should be OK."

Pasqualone doesn't even know anymore what varieties of tomatoes she's growing. Friends give her seeds and they end up in her garden. Once they come in, the tomatoes land on sandwiches, in salads and in spaghetti sauce.

"You name it. I use tomatoes," Pasqualone said.

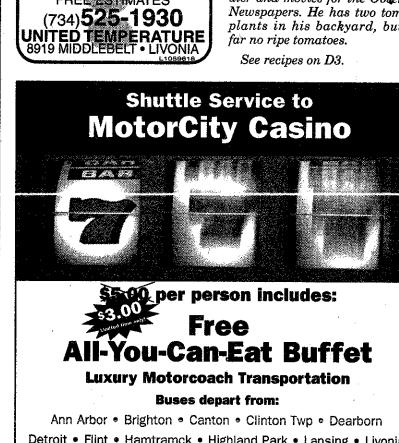

Gard Andresen of Northville is a lot more scientific when it comes to tomato growing. His garden contains a smorgasbord of tomatoes and he's well versed at naming them.

There's the Early Girl, Big Boy, Celebrity, Rutgers and Fantastic. And then there are the Roma types as well as four different types of cherry or grape tomatoes.

The reason he grows them might be the most important reason of all.

"For the fun of it," he said. "Everybody likes tomatoes, and the ones you grow yourself are so much better than the ones you buy in the store."

Mike Murphy is a Livonia resident and writes about food, theater and movies for the Observer Newspapers. He has two tomáto plants in his backyard, but so

Delight in summer produce with this apricot kuchen

AMERICAN INSTITUTE FOR CANCER RESEARCH

Sweet kuchen: This apricot kuchen, moist as pudding in the center, has a light, cake-like crust. With their thin skins, apricots needn't be peeled first. BY DANA JACOBI

In these days of industrial agriculture, when luscious but fragile Blenheim and Royal apricots have been replaced at the supermarket by cardboard-dull, reliable Pattersons and firm Castlebrites, enjoying delicious apricots becomes rare.

Fortunately, a careful shopper can still enjoy them.

First, shop knowledgeably, selecting apricots showing no tinge of green, and offering at least some aroma. Store firm fruit in a brown paper bag until it feels soft and ripe, usually two to four days. Apricots ripened this way, particularly when poached or used in baking, yield rewarding results.

(For poaching, bring to a boil one cup of water with a half-cup of sugar and a vanilla bean. Add four halved fresh apricots and simmer gently 3 to 4 minutes. Leave the fruit in the syrup as it cools. Serve it warm or at room temperature. Any extra syrup can be used to flavor iced tea and lemonade.)

About 95 percent of the fresh apricots grown in the United States now come from California. Every summer I feast on heavenly, scarlet-cheeked, velvet-skinned apricots grown in upstate New York. David Karp, a California-based fruit expert, says improved, commercial apricot strains are being developed, including sugar-sweet white apricots.

Kuchen, a casual, cobbler type of fruit-topped cake that is usually made with Italian plums, is delectable made with apricots. Kuchen means "baked good" in Yiddish and German, and there are probably as many versions as there are bakers from Alsace to Vienna. This one, moist as pudding in the center, has a light, cake-like crust. With their thin skins, apricots needn't be peeled first. Enjoy this kuchen even in winter, using fresh apricots from Chile.

SUMMER FRUIT KUCHEN

- Canola oil cooking spray
 1 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
- 1 cup cake flour
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar, plus 2 tablespoons

2 teaspoon baking powder

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup non-fat milk
- 1 large egg 1/3 cup canola oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract 2 pounds fresh apricots (or fresh plums or peaches with skins removed, or
- canned Italian plums)
 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/4 cup confectioners sugar for garnish (optional)

Set oven rack in middle. Preheat oven to 350° F. Generously coat jelly roll pan (15 1/2- by- 10 1/2 inches) with cooking spray. Cut apricots in half. (If using plums or peaches, cut into eighths.)

In large bowl, combine flours, 1/2 cup sugar, baking powder and salt. In separate bowl, whisk milk with egg, oil and vanilla. Pour mixture into dry ingredients. Beat vigorously until batter is stiff and smooth, about 1 minute.

Transfer batter to prepared pan and spread evenly. Reserving a 1inch border of batter, arrange fruit in rows, (skin side down for apricots), placing fruit close together to cover batter.

Combine remaining 2 tablespoons sugar and spices in small bowl. Sprinkle evenly over fruit. Drizzle lemon juice on top. Cover cake loosely with piece of baking parchment or foil.

Bake 15 minutes. Remove covering. Bake 20 minutes, until sides are brown and pick inserted in center comes out clean. Fruit should be cooked and topping bubbling. Remove from oven. Cool on rack until warm. Cut into 12 pieces. Serve warm or at room temperature, dusted with confectioners sugar, if desired. Makes 12 servings

- 1 small white onion, chopped
 1 green onion, top included,
 - 1 to 3 jalapeno peppers, finely chopped

Using a serrated knife, chop tomatoes. If using plum tomatoes, add 2 tablespoons water.

garlic mixture, 2 1/2 tablespoons oil, 4 tablespoons chopped tomato puree, and salt and pepper to taste. Mix well.

Put tomato shells in an oiled baking dish. Fill with stuffing, mounding slightly, and cover with hats. Pour diluted tomato paste around tomatoes; sprinkle them with remaining oil.

Cover and bake 20 minutes. Uncover and bake, adding a few tablespoons water to pan if it becomes dry, for 10 to 20 more minutes or until tomatoes are tender. Serve hot or cold, garnish with mint sprigs.

House Head injury accidents can be prevented n estimated one million children in this country sustain a traumatic brain injury each year. Every 21 seconds, a head injury occurs in the U.S. The majority of these are mild closed head injuries, also called concussions. A concussion is a head injury in which the skull has not been broken. The brain can be injured from the inside by banging and bouncing against skull walls. Sudden move-

MCCULLOCH ment within the skull can cause bruising, tiny tissue tears, swelling, and chemical changes. Very often, x-rays will not detect the damage. However, the impact on a child's functioning can be drastic.

It was previously thought that the head had to hit something for there to be a concussion-like injury. This myth has been proven wrong during recent years. A whiplash-like motion of the head back and forth can cause damage. A loss of consciousness is not necessary for the brain to be injured and this myth has been repeatedly disproven in research and clinical studies. Actually, any disruption in consciousness no matter how brief, such as mildly dazed, contitutes concussion. And repeated concussions can have a cumulative effect as often seen in boxing. Even more dramatically, it takes only three seconds to permanently damage a child's brain as in the so-called shaken baby syn-

Common after-affects of significant concussion injuries to children can include: problems with attention and concentration, with memory and learning, frustration, irritability and anxiety. These may not show up immediately after injury but may develop as weeks and months pass and chemical changes that take place inside the brain become more pronounced.

It can be a good idea to have a child who has experienced a head injury to be examined by a neuropsychologist. He would conduct tests that measure memory, intelligence, verbal and nonverbal reasoning, perception, motor skills and emotional functioning.

Then the neuropsychologist would consult with the school and might work in conjunction with a rehabilitation specialist to develop a treatment plan. Special education laws now include programs for traumatically brain injured children. Treatment could consist of individualized cognitive exercises, memory retraining, and psychological therapy for emotional trauma often acquired in accidents. After accidents from motor vehicle collisions, assaults, falls and sports related concussions, there may also develop post traumatic stress reactions, commonly seen after a sudden traumatic experience.

More resources than ever are now available for children, parents and teachers to learn about these conditions and ways to remedy the consequences of such injuries. In addition to the natural process of brain heal-tain health problems. For instance, studies show mothers who breast-feed for even a few months are less likely to develop breast cancer, than women who have given birth, but never breast-fed, Socha said adding that breast-feeding also protects against ovarian cancer, urinary tract infection and osteoporosis. Despite the rewards of breast-feeding, a lot of women in the United States tend to wean early, because women who nurse their children past a year are sometimes seen as odd, Socha said.

Two months ago, after the birth of her second child, Calisa O'Keefe, attended a LaLeche League of Plymouth-Canton meeting hoping she could avoid the pitfalls, including painful infections, that she faced while she breast-fed her first child for two

The Northville mom didn't have friends and family members to ask questions about breast-feeding.

"Nowadays your pediatrician is recommending that you breast-feed, but at the same time you don't have the wisdom handed down from mothers or sisters," she said. Tou don't have the community that people did a long time ago."

That could be changing. The number of mothers who initiated breast-feeding at birth grew to an all time high of 62.4 percent in the United States in 1996, according to a September 1998 "Mothering Magazine" article. O'Keefe credits LaLeche for giving her the information and "loving support" she needed to continue breast-feeding even during times she was ready to quit.

In 61 countries, every month LaLeche League International gives guidance and information to more than 300,000 women, like O'Keefe and Boyer Hanley. The Plymouth-Canton leaders take upwards of 30 to 40 calls monthly.

"We get so many calls when people leave the hospital and there's no one there to help them," Socha

Moms ask anything from how to get started to what they should do if they want to return to work, or how to breast-feed a two-year-old and how they can get rid of infections. Some moms wonder what they should do if they have a medical illness and what medications are safe to take. Or, if they can breast feed after a breast reduction. Most moms want to know if their children are getting enough milk.

There are legal issues, too. For instance, what does a breast-feeding woman do if she's called to jury duty? Usually, all it takes is a letter of explanation to the court and the mom is excused, Socha LaLeche League International says that breastfeeding relationship should continue as long as it's mutually desirable by mother and child. Some cultures nurse until the children are 3, 5 and 7 years old, Socha added.

Lowe's, YMCA sponsor safety program

Rover, the home safety hound, is opening the doors to Lowe's on his "Great Safety Adventure."

In his giant house children can walk through an interactive exhibit to learn how to spot and prevent dangerous safety hazards in and around the home. This "field trip on wheels" is rolling into the Detroit area from Aug. 17-26, visiting Detroit area YMCAs and Detroit Lowe's stores.

Complete with a 20-foot entranceway, living room, kitchen, bathroom, bedroom and backyard, Lowe's Great Safety Adventure educates children about how to prevent common household injuries. The tour focuses on four primary hazards: fire, poisons, choking and falls. The exhibit also includes animated productions and hazards that magically disappear when children yell Rover's safety battle cry, 'Code Red Rover, grownup come over!'

For a preview and virtual tour of the Great Safety Adventure, visit loweshomesafety.org

All the events are free and open to the public 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 23 at the YMCA in Livonia (14255 Stark Road) or Lowe's Home Improvement Warehouse (6555 Newburgh Road, Westland) 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 25-26.

other words, more children are affected by home injuries than by all childhood diseases combined. Lowe's Home Improvement Warehouse and Lowe's Home Safety Council created the Great Safety Adventure to help decrease the number of children affected by household injuries -90 percent of these injuries are preventable.

Children, dubbed as safety rangers, are given special flashlights to help them identify various hazards in Rover's home. Once a hazard is located, safety rangers call out, 'Code Red Rover, grownup come over!' and the hazards magically disappear. Children also reenact an actual emergency fire escape when Rover's bedroom fills with simulated smoke.

Once passing that examination a doctor could consider himself "board certified" for life. New sub going up west of Ann Arbor

Westridge in Dexter may seem dis-

But it took just 30 minutes during a recent Monday afternoon from entering M-14 at Sheldon Road in Plymouth to get to the detached condominium development 26 miles away just west of Ann Arbor.

(Exit 167 off I-94, take Baker Road north until it dead-ends in town, then go west under bridge to Westridge.)

"We have two different communities within one, two different markets, really," said John Shekerjian, president of JR Homes and the more widely known John Richards Homes, a builder of custom, upper-end houses.

"It appeals to a wider ... a little broader ... market, definitely," he said.

The Preserve, Park

Four floor plans, all less than 2,000 square feet (less optional upgrades), are available in The Preserve section of Westridge.

They range in price from $188,900 for a 1.619-square-foot two story with three bedrooms and 2-11/2 baths to $230,900 for a story-and-a-half of 1,919 square feet with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Five plans, all more than 2,000 square feet, are available in The Park section of Westridge.

They range in price from $245,900 for a two story of 2,165 square feet with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $293,900 for a 2,832-square-foot two story with four bedrooms and 2-1/2

A fireplace is standard in The Park, a $2,900 upgrade in The Preserve. A separate tub and shower in the master and first-floor laundry are standard at homes in The Park.

All homes at Westridge include a two-car garage, basement, dishwasher and carpeting throughout.

Air conditioning ($3,000) and textured ceilings ($1,000) are extra in all. Buyers will be attracted to Westridge for a variety of reasons. "Dexter is very close to Ann Arbor for those who do business there or shop," Shekerjian said. "It's a little more rural in nature. The downtown Dexter feel is great." "There's two important things people are impressed with," said Teresa DeHart, sales representative. "The inside of the home, the craftsmanship, completeness of the product.

"The other thing is the site. We try to keep as many trees here as possible. We didn't come in, bulldoze everything and start all over."

"The (Dexter) school system is very good," Shekerjian said. "Brand new schools have been built in the last couple years.'

"A lot of people don't understand or realize how close we are to Ann Arbor two exits (off I-94) west," DeHart added.

"It's the best of two worlds, a small community but two exits away from Ann Arbor. It's just a small-town setting I think people want to get back to," she said.

"The John Richards name, itself, over the years has lived up to quality," DeHart said.

Metroparks nearby

Three Metroparks, Dexter-Huron, Hudson Mills and Delphi, nearly surround Westridge . A cider mill is near-

Two models have been constructed.

The Elderberry, built for The Preserve, is a two story of 1,995 square feet. It features a living room with volume ceiling, dining area, kitchen/nook, family room and laundry on the main

The master with sloped ceiling has a two-sink vanity, walk-in closet and separate tub and shower The other two bedrooms up have sloped ceilings and share a bath with combination tub/ shower.

Base price is $219,900, the model as is with upgrades about $260,000, which includes finished basement, landscaping and premium lot.

The Briarwood, built for The Park, is a two story of 2,500 square feet. It features a library with sloped ceiling, great room with volume ceiling, dining room, kitchen/nook with island, firstfloor laundry and three-car garage.

Four bedrooms are upstairs. The master with cathedral ceiling, contains a two-sink vanity, separate tub and shower and a pair of walk-in closets. Three other bedrooms and a full bath also are up.

Base price is $280,900, the model, as is with upgrades, including finished basement, landscaping and premium lot about $370,000.

Other tangibles

Westridge is served by Dexter's water system and sewers. The community has sidewalks.

Briarwood: This two-story of 2,500 square feet contains four bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths and plenty of volume ceilings.

The property tax rate is $42.23 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $250,000 home there would pay about $5,300 the first

The annual maintenance/association fee is $200.

Joe and Deanna Semisero moved into a story-and-a-half in the Preserve with children, Jay and Alexandra.

"The school district played a big part," Deanna said. "We really liked the site. It appeared nicer than others we looked at. We like the community being close to Ann Arbor, but far enough away to feel like country.

"The great room we have is 17-by-19 and the master bedroom is on the main floor away from the kids," she said.

The sales office/models at Westridge, (734) 424-1500, is open noon to 6 p.m. Friday through Tuesday, closed Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Paying bills with mortgage money can make sense

There is an undeniable connection between home ownership and other sectors of our economy, such as employment, interest rates and the expansion and contraction of credit. When one area "moves," another must respond.

The economy has certainly moved these past two years, and so has consumer debt. One financial resource that many families have utilized to pay off debt during these turbulent times is the non-conforming

Conventional mortgage lenders such as banks must follow strict regulatory guidelines.

Oftentimes, a person who has lost a job, had a late payment or is carrying too much debt must be turned down for a home loan. This can happen even when creditworthiness is affected for only a short time, perhaps due to a family illness or interruption of

In contrast, non-conforming lenders, who aren't subject to the same regulations, can and are willing to assume greater risk. In return, a non-conforming loan may carry a higher interest rate.

A borrower can use a non-conforming loan to roll all outstanding balances, including home mortgage debt, into one package with one monthly payment, at one interest rate. For those whose financial picture is troubled, this loan may be the second chance they need to help them return to financial stability.

Although the interest rate on a non-conforming mortgage is typically higher than that of a conventional mortgage, it is usually lower than the interest rate on most credit cards. In addition. because total debt service is tied to a home mortgage, the interest paid may be tax deductible.

Additionally, many non-conforming lenders are licensed to issue second mortgages on a percentage of a home's value. This lets a homeowner tap into builtup equity, while still retaining an existing, lower-rate first mortgage. The home's entire value need not be refinanced.

Here is an example.

A Southfield couple has monthly mortgage payments of $860 and $30,000 equity in their $90,000 home. The couple also had accumulated credit card and other debts totaling $30,000, on which they were making monthly payments of $750.

Using their local bank's loanto-value (LTV) ratio, the couple only qualified for a $5,000 loan. This was $25,000 short of what they needed.

With a non-conforming second mortgage, the couple was able to access 100 percent of their home's equity. They kept their low first mortgage rate on the larger $60,000 balance, and utilized the equity loan of $30,000 to pay off bills. The $750 monthly obligation was reduced to

Non-conforming lenders can set their own loan standards catered to meet the needs of the consumer. Most banks have strict lending guidelines that must be followed. In our industry we must be able to think 'outside that box.' When a loan makes sense and it helps the consumer, we work hard to make the loan.

While non-conforming loans are not for everyone, as niche products, they can function as an important "relief valve" for people who have overextended their credit. Conventional lenders are becoming more flexible but remain stuck with an 'in the box' banker's mentality. By contrast, non-conforming lenders are simply the most flexible when considering the special needs of the consumer.

Bob Pilcowitz is president and CEO of Southfield-based Franklin Mortgage Funding, a wholesale non-conforming mortgage lender. Franklin Mortgage Funding works with more than 200 brokers statewide. He can be reached at (248) 799-4000.

Good-looking house

The Falcon Crest (G24-710) with its many roof angles is very distinctive to the eve. The use of brick and shutters around the large windows with fanlight transoms overhead adds to the attractiveness of the home. Twostories containing 2,439 square feet with an optional basement of 1,383 square feet could make this home spacious for a large family.

Entering the Falcon Crest across a covered porch brings one directly into a formal foyer. To the right through French doors is the study/guest room. By its convenient location, this room could also be used as an office. It does not have a closet, however, one has been noted as an option. Beyond the study down the foyer hall is a full bath with a shower, also ideal for the guest room concept.

The laundry room contains a large broom closet as well as a door to the two-car garage. On the opposite hall wall is lovely landing staircase to the second floor as well as stairs to the optional basement. Just past the stairs around the corner is large pantry, easily accessible to the kitchen.

The entire back of the Falcon Crest is open with the kitchen on the left and the family room on the right. The kitchen is Lshaped with an island in middle. The breakfast nook has large windows bathing the area in light. A wonderful feature has been in a see-through fireplace between the kitchen and the family room. French doors opento the back yard off the family. room. It adds warmth and a great aesthetic look.

Consumer Mortgage Advisory #26: Know your Lender

Whether its a computer, washing machine or a mortgage, if you're not an expert, you're better off going with a name brand. Mortgage lenders who have been in business for a long time, such as Premier Mortgage Lenders, invariably have a financial stake in the community and a reputation to protect. If there's a mistake, they have the best consumer protection and problem solving policies. It pays to play it safe. Use a Premier Mortgage Lender.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

DON'T LET SMALL ROOF PROBLEMS TURN INTO BIG ONES by GARY S. MEYERS

The answer may seem simple: "Call a roofer and have it fixed." But how do you get the most for your roofing dollar? With a little homework, you'll be surprised at how much time, money, and aggravation you can save.

To Model & Sales Office: Exit Ford Rd. Off I-275.

(Go West to Lilley) South 1 mile to Cherry Hill,

Developed by Morgan Creek, L.L.C.

Aside from simply keeping you dry, your roof also holds the entire house together and gives the whole structure its strength. This is so important that in hurricanc-prone areas, special fasteners are required by insurance companies to ensure that the roof stays on the house in extreme conditions. If the roof blows off, the rest of the house will collapse within minutes or even seconds. Now, do you really want to mess around up there? With proper care, a well-installed roof can last as long as 20 years before it needs replacement. That doesn't mean, however, that it may not need repair once in a while. Roof damage can begin in many ways. Tree limbs, high winds, hail, or even a carelessly-hit baseball can take their toll on the best roof. "A lot of damage comes from normal freeze-thaw cycles," says Tom Bollnow, Technical Director for the National Roofing Contractors Association (NRCA). "And, if you try to fix a roof yourself, you can often make the damage worse."

While the damage may not be apparent at first, it can grow until the precious shield between you and the elements is breached, and it's usually at the worst possible

Okay, I'm awakened in the middle of the night by a leak in my ceiling. What's the first thing I should do? A. The first thing you should

NOT do is put a pan under it and forget about it until morning. You can save a lot of time if you do some investigation right away," says Bollnow. "First, if you have an attic space that you can get to, go up and see if you can find where the water is coming in. Often it will come in at one point and follow the pitch of the roof or the insulation to another point before coming through your ceiling. Once it stops raining, you may not be able to find the leak."

Once you have found the leak, says Bollnow, mark it for the contractor. While you're in the attic, go ahead and set up your bucket. It's better to put a catchhelp preserve the ceiling below.

"You also should note the weather conditions," Bollnow advises. "There are several questions you can answer that will help the contractor:"

• Did the leak start right away? If not, how long after the rain started did the leak begin?

 Was the rain light or heavy? · Was the wind blowing, and if so, from which direction? Did the leak accompany the wind? If so, the wind may be blowing the rain under a loose shingle.

Q. Can't I just leave the bucket in the attic?

"It's not a good idea to just forget about it," warns Bollnow. "Even if the leak is small, there may be dirt or debris in it, and the next heavy rain could wash it away, revealing a much bigger problem." Besides, untended problems never get better. Q. How do I start looking for a contractor? Bollnow advises that you start with your local contractors association if your area has one. "One thing they can do for you is recommend two or three contractors in your area," he said, "and it's better to get someone relatively close, because they can respond more easily."

Bollnow adds that your own neighborhood can be a good source of information.

"Find out if any of your neighbors have had work done on their roofs recently, and if they're happy with the job," he says.
"Word of mouth is still one of your best resources. Q. What do I do if the contractor tells me my roof needs to be replaced? A. A little knowledge goes a long way here. If you know when your roof was replaced last, you can pretty much tell if he's on the level.

"The average roof lasts about 20 years," said Bollnow. "So, if you're close to the end of that, he's probably right. If it's only three or four years old, it would have to suffer some major damage to need replacement. In any event, you will want to get a second opinion, and maybe even a third.'

If there is a problem with a new roof, it probably is under warranty. You immediately should start with the installer.

Even if the roof is in dire need, Bollnow adds, "there's usually something he can do about the immediate problem until you can get some estimates and do it right." Q. What is my liability if the contractor gets hurt on my roof? A. Whether you're just getting an estimate or having major repairs done, you should make sure your contractor carries general liability and workers compensation.

"Your homeowners insurance will cover it, but it shouldn't have to," said Bollnow.

Remember, your roof is the key to the entire house. Take care of it while it's still in good shape, and it should give you years of good service. Neglect it, or try to fix it yourself, and you could be letting in a world of trouble.

Inexpensive ways to lower cooling bills study indicated that rising energy bills hit them harder than rolling blackouts.

You can make a few quick and inexpensive home improvements that immediately go to work to beat the rising costs of natural gas and electricity.

Consider these from the CertainTeed Home Institute:

■ Upgrade your attic insulation. If your home was built before 1980, chances are it needs more insulation to meet today's Department of Energy-recommended levels for residential insulation. Don't forget the

The majority of Californians in a recent joints of corner trim and siding and the joints of roof eaves.

■ Install an automatic setback or programmable thermostat. Programmable thermostats can help control a home's temperature around your living schedule. When you're working away from home, program it to a higher temperature in the 80s. Before you return home, it lowers to the 70s. ■ Plant trees and shrubs. Strategically planted landscaping in your yard can help reduce your energy costs. Hardy, low-lying evergreens and shrubs planted close to the foundation of a home helps slow conditioned air from escaping during the summer. This won't make much of a difference this year, but it will in the future.

■ A plant that shades your air conditioner compressor (but does not block air flow) will ease the strain on your air conditioner andyour budget.

■ Wrap exposed pipes and HVAC ducts. For additional information on energy saving projects, write to the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482, or call (800) 782-8777 for the "Tips to Avoid Higher Air Conditioning Bills" pam-

Get the dust out

Getting rid of dust and allergens would make the biggest improvement to indoor air, according to a survey conducted by the Aprilaire Center for Indoor Air Comfort.

"More than 37 percent of homeowners surveyed said removing dust, pollen and other allergens is the one thing that would most greatly improve their indoor air," said Sean McCarthy, director of the Aprilaire Center for Indoor Air Comfort. "And that's not surprising, given the rising number of people with allergies."

The next most popular responses were adding humidity to the air in winter, and heating or cooling more evenly throughout the house, according to McCarthy. Others said they'd like to remove stale air and odors, or reduce indoor air pollution.

"Homeowners seem to be more demanding these days when it comes to the quality and comfort of indoor air," McCarthy said. "We know more homeowners are concerned about indoor air pollution, and this survey shows that most of us can identify at least one area of improvement we'd like to make to our indoor air.

"Fortunately, it's not as difficult as it once was to keep our indoor air clean and comfortable," McCarthy said. "New technology makes it easy to deal with household problems like dust, allergens, dryness, odors and more.

For instance, a variety of air cleaner models are on the market. The latest technology allows some high efficiency air cleaners to capture not only dust and other allergens, but the very smallest particles such as bacteria and viruses, according to McCarthy.

"Technological advances have also taken whole-house humidifiers to the next level. We recommend looking for one that has a built-in computer to automatically maintain the proper level of humidity in your home," McCarthy said.

For more information about how to improve your indoor air, visit the Aprilaire Web site at www. aprilaire. com

Thomas Ervin Let's Talk About Real Estate

"THE REALTOR HOLDS THE DEPOSIT"

When buyers make an offer on a property, their Realtor asks for a deposit before presenting the offer to the seller. This deposit is in the form of a check made out to the real estate company.

Each state mandates that these monies are to be put into a separate account and not co-mingled with the general funds used by the real estate company to pay its ongoing expenses. These sums are held by the Realtor until the closing of the sale and then paid to the seller as part of the purchase price. This procedure of asking for a deposit serves two purposes:

DEMONSTRATES THE SERIOUSNESS OF THE BUYER

Money talks! A buyer who is not willing to submit a deposit along with a signed offer is not a buyer who should demand a serious response from the seller. Deposits are often referred to as "earnest money" deposits. The buyer must be willing to put some of his or her money up as proof that he or she is prepared to follow through on the promise to complete the sale.

PROMPTS THE SELLER TO BARGAIN IN GOOD FAITH

The seller wants to be assured that the house is definitely sold after the negotiations with the buyer are complete. A deposit by the buyer shows a serious intent to purchase the property. The deposit also may provide the seller with monetary damages if the buyer is found in violation of the purchase agreement and must forfeit the deposited amount to the seller.

ADVICE: The Realtor plays many valuable roles in the negotiation and sale of real estate. One of these roles is as a third party to the transaction who can hold the earnest money deposit until the closing or forfeiture, whichever the case may be. It is to both the buyer's and seller's advantage that a knowledgeable and accountable professional provide the service.

rates and the expansion and contraction of credit. When one area "moves," another must respond.

The economy has certainly moved these past two years, and so has consumer debt. One financial resource that many families have utilized to pay off debt during these turbulent times is the non-conforming mortgage.

Conventional mortgage lenders such as banks must follow strict regulatory guidelines.

Oftentimes, a person who has lost a job, had a late payment or is carrying too much debt must be turned down for a home loan. This can happen even when creditworthiness is affected for only a short time, perhaps due to a family illness or interruption of

same regulations, can and are willing to assume greater risk. In return, a non-conforming loan may carry a higher interest rate.

A borrower can use a non-conforming loan to roll all outstanding balances, including home mortgage debt, into one package with one monthly payment, at one interest rate. For those whose financial picture is troubled, this loan may be the second chance they need to help them return to financial stability.

Although the interest rate on a non-conforming mortgage is typically higher than that of a conventional mortgage, it is usually lower than the interest rate on most credit cards. In addition, because total debt service is tied to a home mortgage, the interest paid may be tax deductible.

Additionally, many non-conforming lenders are licensed to issue second mortgages on a percentage of a home's value. This lets a homeowner tap into builtup equity, while still retaining an existing, lower-rate first mortgage. The home's entire value need not be refinanced.

Here is an example.

A Southfield couple has monthly mortgage payments of $860 and $30,000 equity in their $90,000 home. The couple also had accumulated credit card and which they were making monthly payments of $750.

Using their local bank's loanto-value (LTV) ratio, the couple only qualified for a $5,000 loan. This was $25,000 short of what they needed.

With a non-conforming second mortgage, the couple was able to access 100 percent of their home's equity. They kept their low first mortgage rate on the

When job hunting, experts say don't give up

By Diane Gale Andreassi

nne Wagner was beginning to wonder, after four months of lookwonder, and red ing, if she'd ever land a job.

Her confidence plummeted when she mistakenly thought she found the position she was looking for as an office manager with a husband and wife sales

After the first interview Wagner sensed that the wife was impressed by her work experience and other qualifications. Her confidence escalated when she went for a follow-up meeting, this time about 45 minutes, with the hus-

But, when she hadn't heard from them, Wagner said: "I called back and they said they ended up going with someone else."

Her heart sank and self-doubt set in. "You wonder what you did wrong," Wagner said. "What's wrong with you? and What's wrong with your resume?"

She learned about the job from Harper Associates, a 30-year-old permanent placement recruiting firm based in Farmington Hills.

Her luck changed, however, when she got a call from Gloria Bobrowski, Harper director of clerical placement. Wagner thought she was going to be sent out on another job possibility, but it turned out that Bobrowski wanted her at Harper as an administrative assistant.

"I love this job," she gushed. In retrospect, Wagner said, she's happy she didn't get the other jobs that she thought were the right fit.

Don't give up

Her advice to other people who are looking for work: "Don't give up. It's hard, but eventually, you'll find the job you want."

That's exactly what Bobrowski tells rejected applicants.

"A lot of times if this one doesn't work out for them there might be something better waiting," Bobrowski explained. "We're looking to make the best fit for them, as well as the clients. So, maybe it wasn't meant to be."

She tells applicants to try to improve their interviewing techniques in order to increase their chances of success.

Understanding that other people are being considered for each job, the best ammunition is to investigate what is entailed in the position and find similarities between what the company is looking for and what you want.

Makesure the interviewer knows that you're a good match.

"If given the opportunity, they need to highlight their personal traits that make them a valuable employee and they should give examples of some of their work achievements," Bobrowski said. "Basically, they should remain confident and avoid desperation."

Something will come

Barbara Cusmano, a recruiter with Snelling Personnel Services in Roseville, said newcomers to the job market are usually the most sensitive when it comes to rejection.

"If they're rejected the first time, if they're not a really strong, strong personality, they're just absolutely devastated," Cusmano said. "Those who have been in the marketplace for awhile, generally speaking, handle it well. There may be disappointment if they

Employees want constructive criticism

Q. Here is a different kind of question for you. I need more constructive criticism on the job. My boss never suggests improvements in my work or behavior. At first I thought it was great, but I don't think I'm learning very much. I'm considering quit-

A. Has the premium placed on being "nice" caused some managers to walk too softly and, in some cases, abandon their responsibility to correct subordinates? Maybe. I once worked for a guy who, from the day I started, never offered a hint about how I was doing. Like you, I kind of suspected that I wasn't perfect. Finally, I confronted him. "Tell me I'm great, tell me I'm stupid, but Larry, please – tell me something!"

Polite silence happens in relationships between organizations, as well.

For example, a consulting firm could provide a valuable service to a client for years and naively think that everything is going along just swell. Suddenly, the contract is cancelled despite the obvious and significant savings to the client. Without question, it is a service provider's responsibility to constantly solicit performance feedback.

But what if you ask and meaningful complaints or suggestions are still not provided?

The failure to communicate negative information is cowardly and self-serving. We certainly don't do employees or vendors a favor by ignoring their shortcomings and letting them slide. Have you ever wondered how some people can be such jerks? In many cases, it is because nobody told them early on that certain behaviors and outcomes were den't get the offer, but they say: 'There's something else out there. for me."

- Some people may have all the right personal traits and work experiences that are needed for the job and still lose the offer, because they just don't interview well.

"You're either a good person to talk to and you're a good listener, or you're not," she added.

Some applicants talk too much during the interview and others sit there like a lump and don't participate at all. The job seekers who do the best give the personnel manager a wealth of information about themselves without saying, too much.

"Once you start saying, When do I get my first vacation and first raise?,' they're participating in the wrong way," Cusmano

Ask about position

Instead, ask questions about the position and the responsibilities. Extra points are made if you can tell how your experience will benefit the company or how a personality trait, like having an uncanny ability to stick with something, will get the work done.

Most novices, Cusmano said, ask themselves the same selfdoubting questions Wagner did: "Why didn't they like me?" and ",What did I do wrong?"

While the applicant shouldn't take the rejection personally, asking themselves where their weaknesses were during the interview might help the next time.

Never stop trying, Cusmano added.

"Make a concerted effort and don't ever feel that any company is rejecting you as a person, but as a candidate, and probably along with several other people," Cusmano added.

Above all, Cusmano said: "Always be yourself and don't try to be somebody else.'

Having a friendly demeanor is the first rule to follow in an interview, she said. Always shake hands and thank the people interviewing you for their time. And sending thank you notes is a good way to keep your name in their minds just when they're making the hiring decisions.

Barbara Oliverio, administrative support, with Dorsey Staffing based in Madison Heights, said her company usually sends four or five applicants out for each job opening. For every person who lands a job, Oliverio is dealing with at least four rejected applicants.

"We explain that we're still going to keep looking for them," Oliverio said.

"We never discourage them, whatsoever."

However, if recruiters believe that the applicants didn't get the jobs, because they didn't have adequate training, they refer them to Dorsey Business School, which is affiliated with Dorsey Staffing.

She also tells applicants to pursue a lot of possibilities at once. "Never keep all your apples in the same barrel," she said. "They should check other services and have more than one agency working for them at the same time. Keep very upbeat all the time and never be negative."

unacceptable or, at least, needed some adjusting. It's conceivable that a person could carry on for years as a total loser, abuser or slacker, surrounded by people too hands-off or too genteel to perform the requisite upbraiding. Then, when somebody points out the flaws, the incredulous and logical reaction is: "What do you mean? This has never been an issue before.

While criticism doesn't have to be framed negatively to be effective, it sure works on me if it stings just a little. The best boss I ever had was a genuinely nice guy, but he certainly wasn't cuddly when it came to stating what I had done wrong and how I should do things in the future.

By embarrassing me a little, he got my attention and caused me to think.

Would I be mad? Sure. But I learned how to conduct myself with senior level people, how to prioritize projects, how to organize my time, how to communicate with my associates, and when to keep my mouth shut. I thank him every day for his directness and

Make one last effort to open a candid dialogue with your supervisor. If the silence continues, get a resume together and start looking. It sounds like you are anxious to grow. Go do it.

Subaru Impreza true performance car by any measure

BY BRUCE HOTCHKISS © AutoWire.Net

've always like Subarus. Heck, I'm one of the few writers who liked the Impreza 2.5 RS just the way it was. Sure, it could have used a little more power, but what car couldn't?

But it was a very impressive and fun car to drive just the way it was. And now Subaru has finally responded to all the comments. The 2002 Subaru Impreza WRX is a true performance car by any measure.

A 2.0-liter, 227-horsepower turbocharged engine powers the WRX. Like all Subaru engines, it is a flat, opposed design. It seems that Subaru has followed the European tradition of making its turbocharged engines smaller than the regularly aspirated one it replaces (the RS had a 2.5-liter). Why I don't know, but who can argue with 227 h.p.? And with 217 pound-foot of torque at 4,000 rpm the WRX accelerates from 0-60 mph in just 6.1 seconds with the manual transmission.

The standard 5-speed manual transmission is teamed with full-time viscous-coupling All-Wheel Drive (AWD). The optional four-speed electronic automatic transmission (4EAT) comes teamed with Variable Torque Distribution All-Wheel Drive (VTD). For my money, you should stick to the 5-speed manual in the WRX, it's more fun to shift for yourself, and the fuel economy is pretty good at 20-mpg city and 27 highway.

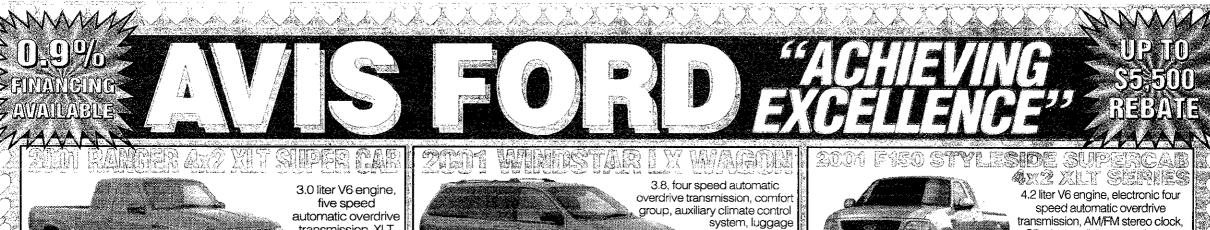

Like all Subarus, the WRX is equipped with full-

What this means to you and me (and your kids, should you buy them a WRX) is that it's really hard to get into trouble. That doesn't mean that you can't get in over your head. But if you drive prudently, the WRX will not let you down or embarrass you.

The down side to AWD is that you can't do any smokey burnouts. Do you have any idea how tough it is to get all four wheels spinning when you leave a stoplight? Common sense and respect for the machinery limited my attempts.

Just in case someone else runs into you (say one of those oversized SUVs) every 2002 Impreza has three-point seatbelts for all five seating positions (pre-tensioners and force limiters in front), a four-chanmel and four-sensor anti-lock brake system (ABS), and dual front airbags. The WRX models add standard front seat side impact air

To help you be seen, every Subaru has daytime running lights. And in case your kids like to play in the car's trunk, there is a self-illuminating internal child safety trunk release handle.

Bet you were wondering what WRX stood for, weren't you? I know the WR stands for World Rally (Championship). I'm not sure about the X (experimental?). The World Rally Championship is kind of like the X-Games on wheels. Madmen (and women) drive over, through, and around impossible terrain at ungodly rates of speed in quasistock vehicles

The Subaru Impreza World Rally Championship racecar won the World Rally Championship for three consecutive years. The WRX is inspired by the race car. That's why it's got those muscular, blistered fenders.

The WRX is only available as a four-door whereas the Impreza RS 2.5 was a two-door. Standard high-performance equipment in the Impreza WRX includes sport-tuned four-wheel independent suspension, four-wheel disc brakes with twin-piston front calipers and 16 by 6.5-inch alloy wheels with 205/55 R16 Bridgestone Potenza RE92 tires. Your dealer can installed accessory 17 x 7-inch alloy wheels and 215/45 R17 tires for a price.

Inside the WRX you'll find bolstered front sport seats (to help keep you centered behind the wheel), a Momo four-spoke leather-wrapped steering wheel and aluminum alloy pedals with rubber grips. To add a little luxury to your rallying the WRX has air conditioning, an 80-Watt six-speaker stereo, six-disc in-dash CD changer, keyless entry, power windows and door locks, and a fold-down rear center armrest.

During the time I had the WRX I also had another press car. This was one of the few times I've allowed two cars to be delivered at the same time. The other car had already been scheduled when the WRX became available.

I was not going to miss the opportunity to drive the WRX. So one car sat out front and while one wracked up the miles. Any guesses as Much of my real road time was on the highway back and forth to Sacramento, not really what the WRX was designed for. But it was fine. Sometimes sport seats aren't real comfortable on the long haul. These were. I also made some time forsome back road driving. Great fun. A couple of times I purposely dove into a corner that was wet or sandy, downshifting into second gear and nailing it for a quick exit. No problem, no wheel spin, just rapid acceleration towards the next

Price for the WRX is competitive, if the dealers don't get too greedy. One complaint I've heard is that most WRXs on the lots have automatic transmissions and most buyers want a manual. Maybe Subaru misjudged the mix.

The base price is $23,995.00 plus $525 destination charge and delivery. Subaru is on a definite roll. Every since the Outback's introduction, it seems it can do no wrong. Now Subaru seems to have found performance. The rumor is there are more good things to come?
