Canton couple big on volunteering

When Greg Greene and his wife, Debi, decided that their residence in Farmington Hills was too small, they started looking for a new place to live. Debi found an apartment she liked at Fordham Green in Canton

"She said 'I found this place in Canton,'" Greg recalled. "I'm going Canton? Why Canton? She could have said Timbuktu. I didn't know anything about Canton."

Now, 13 years later, Greene is a self-proclaimed Canton Booster and there's not much he doesn't know about the township.

The 50-year-old sales agent for AAA Michigan is an active member of the Canton Chamber of Commerce, serves on about 10 committees (chamber and non-chamber) and this month was appointed to the newly formed Council for Community Excellence, Partnership for the Arts and Humanities and Canton Recreation Advisory Committee.

"Greg is a professional, hard-working guy," said Township Supervisor Tom Yack. "He and his wife love the community and volunteer in a variety of capacities. He's the kind of guy you wish there were 150 of."

And that kind of "volunteer spirit" is part of what Greene likes about the township.

"Canton residents are very active," he said. "There's a very large volunteers spirit here, which to me is very important for any community to have."

Yack calls governor 'clueless' on issue

■ Gov. John Engler's veto of a bill to give townships more control over speed limits on local roads has drawn the ire of Canton Supervisor Tom Yack.

BY JACK GLADDEN
STAFF WRITER
jgladden@oe.homecomm.net

A bill that would have allowed townships a voice in setting speed limits on local roads was vetoed by Gov. John Engler earlier this month and Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack is hopping mad.

In a written statement Yack said "the governor's action is a slap in the face of Canton residents and their elected officials."

Under current law cities have the right to establish speed limits on most roads in their communities, but in townships those limits are set by county road commissions or departments and the Michigan State Police. Township officials have no voice in the process.

House Bill 4022 would have allowed township officials to join with the road commission and state police in determining safe speeds on local roads. At least two agencies would have to agree on the speed limit.

The bill passed in the Michigan House late last year on a vote of 101 to 4. It passed in the Senate in February of this year 33 to 1 and was sent to the governor on March 5.

Last week Engler vetoed the bill and sent it back to the House with a letter explaining his action.

"I am concerned that, under this legislation, objective facts will be will be ignored in the face of emotional appeals to alter speed limits," Engler wrote. "This bill could result in decisions made not on objective fact but by two of the parties in agreement with the third dissenting."

In his written statement, Yack said, "This clearly shows the continuing contempt the governor has for townships and their residents. Township officials are called upon routinely to make difficult decisions regarding zoning and other governmental matters based upon objective data.

'Wall of Courage' is tribute to '69 graduate

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

When Sandra Sagear attended Plymouth High School in the 1960s, it was a daily showing of courage as the teen stricken with polio navigated the halls of what is now Central Middle School.

Sagear, afflicted with polio at an early age, couldn't climb stairs with her heavy crutches and braces. And, she didn't have the easy task of taking an elevator to the upper floors because there wasn't one in those days.

Instead, in order to attend classes, Sandra sat and lifted herself up each step, one-by-one, with her arms and hands, every school day for three years without complaining or asking for help, before graduating in 1969.

At 16 years old, Sandra became a spokesperson for the Plymouth Community Fund, the forerunner to the United Way. And, after graduation in 1969, Sagear became an office manager and executive secretary.

Her motto, "Can't never did anything. Can did it all." She lived every day like that until her death nearly 10 years ago.

To honor her resolve, the Sandra Sagear Memorial Wall is being constructed in the front hallway of the new Plymouth High School, which will open in the fall.

"The 'Wall of Courage' will honor those students who have demonstrated courage and perseverance in the face of extraordinary adversity," said committee member Debra Madonna of Plymouth Township. "The theme of the wall is 'Imagine.' In order to overcome obstacles, she had to imagine she could. And, she did."

The wall is being designed and constructed by Plymouth Township artist Dennis Jones. It will be a multi-media presentation which will integrate the

Career Night: Students cruise through possibilities

BY BRAD KADRICH

■ 'My counselors thought it might be cool to check it out.'
Val Miller
Discovery Middle School student

Discovery Middle School student Val Miller figured it's never too early to start thinking about a career, so Wednesday night she went "Career Cruising" at career night at Salem High School.

Some 50 booths were set up advertising careers ranging from commercial pilot to journalist, along with a keynote address by a pair of Schoolcraft College career counselors.

She's only an eighth-grader and isn't sure what she wants to do with her life, but Miller found plenty of information from a variety of sources.

"My counselors thought it might be cool to check it out," Miller said of the career night. "I'm still not sure what I'm going to do when I grow up, but it helps sort it out."

Which is exactly what the program was designed to do. Donna Nordman and Julie Puggini-Denhof of Schoolcraft College tag-teamed the keynote address, telling the hundreds of students in attendance what the work force of the future would look like, and what kinds of skills they'd need to be successful in it. Technology is going to play a key role, Denhof told them.

"It took radio 38 years to reach 50 million listeners, and it took only four years for 50 million people to hit the Internet," she said. "Work is becoming untethered by time or travel and replaced by technology."

Of the top 50 highest-paying jobs in this country, Denhof said, 48 require a degree. By 2010, she pointed out, the most-sought-after jobs are going to be in teaching, computers, biotechnology, nanotechnology, government and health care.

According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers, the top career and life skills workers entering the work force are going to need include communication, creativity, critical thinking, leadership and personal management.

While career nights such as the one at Salem don't necessarily help fill openings for companies, they're an excellent vehicle for dispensing information. For instance, there's a nationwide need for nurses, which was one of the reasons Bonnie Kalous was at Salem High School Wednesday night.

"I think it gets the information out," said Kalous, manager of endoscopy and minor surgery for the North Oakland

Report: Guns, jewelry stolen during break-in

COP CALLS

More than $20,000 worth of jewelry, guns and computer equipment was reported stolen from a house on Old Haggerty on Wednesday.

According to police reports someone smashed a bay window in the front of the house and ransacked the bedrooms.

Two rifles, two revolvers, a jewelry box and jewelry, a computer and computer accessories were taken. No one was home at the time and neighbors who were home saw nothing suspicious.

Police found muddy boot prints on the carpet, but were uncertain as to how many people were involved.

Anyone with information about the incident is asked to call Canton Police at (734) 394-5400.

Bomb scare

Employees at the Kmart Distribution Center at Joy and Haggerty were evacuated Wednesday night after security guards received two phone calls saying there was a bomb in the building.

The first call came in just after 8 p.m., according to police reports. A male with a raspy voice said, "There's a bomb in the building and it's going to go off."

Shortly after 9 p.m. another call was received saying "There's a bomb in the building."

Employees left the building while Canton police and a Michigan State Police bomb-sniffing dog searched the area. Nothing was found and no one was injured.

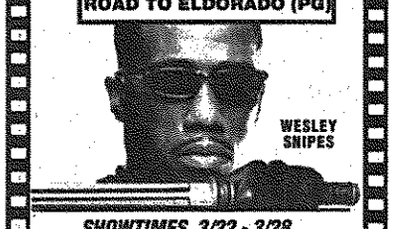

Cars damaged

■ Two employees at an assisted living center on North Canton Center reported their vehicles were damaged sometime in the last week.

Someone keyed the rear driver's side door of one car, causing $500 in damage. The other car was keyed and scratched on all doors and had small dents in the rear driver's side door. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

■ A resident of the 400 block of Springfield told police he parked his car in his driveway on March 16 while he was at home. He said he heard a loud noise about 10 p.m. but did not investigate.

When he went to his car the next morning, the rear window had been smashed out and there was a large dent on the driver's side rear fender. A rock was found on the driver's side floorboard. Damage was estimated at $500.

Women's Club alters scholarship focus

Some 20 years after the first Scholarship Invitational Ball, the Plymouth Women's Club must change the focus of its annual scholarship program.

After awarding some 600 scholarships to high school seniors over the years, the Women's Club will now offer them to women enrolling in college-degree courses, according to K.C. Mueller, the scholarship awards chairman.

The change is required because of an IRS ruling, which says because scholarships make up more than 15 percent of the total budget, the club is no longer a 501(c)3 organization.

"The government has chosen to consider us a social organization as opposed to a civic organization," Mueller said. "Therefore, we do not qualify."

According to Mueller, a limited number of scholarships will be awarded to women looking to advance their education. "Once again, we would be looking at the individual's involvement in the community," she said.

The application ask for information about education, reasons for applying for specific classes or courses of study, and a list of community involvement. A short essay is also required. Applications are due by April 15 and can be picked up at the Plymouth Observer office, 794 S. Main, (734) 459-2700. Applicants can also call Mueller, (734) 455-0075.

Keeping the faith

Love of God, people motivates area pastor

BY JULIE BROWN

On the grow: The Rev. Kenneth D. Lister hopes to fill the pews with more, younger families.

The Rev. Kenneth D. Lister has seen changes in his more than 40 years in the ministry, but some things stay the same.

"Churches have personalities just like people do," said Lister, interim pastor of Garden City Presbyterian Church. He's been at the church for about a year and a half, and has served one-10th of the churches in the Detroit presbytery.

Lister, former interim pastor at Canton's Geneva Presbyterian Church, felt the call to the ministry while in college at Iowa State. He'd grown up in Eagle Grove, Iowa, and was studying business when he felt the call.

"I finally made the decision. It was a difficult decision," the minister, now 67, said.

Lister earned a bachelor's degree in speech and philosophy from Monmouth College in Illinois, followed by a master of divinity degree from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary and a doctor of ministry degree from that seminary. His ministry has taken him all over.

"It began in 1960 here in Detroit at St. James Church on Six Mile Road." That Redford Township congregation was his first.

His ministry took him to Zanesville and then Solon, Ohio, then to Lower Burrell, Pa. He came back to Michigan for nine years as pastor of Lakeshore Presbyterian in the 11 Mile and Jefferson area.

Later, Lister decided to do interim positions, and is on his 10th such assignment. Nearly all have been in the Detroit presbytery.

An interim assignment is short-term; Lister analyzes the situation and prepares the congregation for its next called pastor.

The downside is having to say goodbye to good friends.

Lister said things that have worked in the past in mainline churches don't necessarily today. "It's quite a revolutionary time for the church."

The changes under way are scary but also exciting, he said. He sees the church as becoming more like apostolic times, going back to Scripture and prayer to bring people in.

"It's a new time." Churches that struggle with change are having a tough time, he said.

Reaching out to young adults is essential. "We've got to try new things."

Garden City Presbyterian has raised $100,000 to refurbish the church. The church, on Middlebelt one block south of Ford, has about 300 members. Lister has enjoyed his time with the church and community.

"I find the community to be very warm. I have nothing but positive vibes."

He does have a long daily commute, from St. Clair Shores. His wife, Marilyn, teaches fifth grade at Monteith Elementary in Grosse Pointe. They have four grown children and eight grandkids.

"I love to fish," Lister said. "Most of my fishing is done in Lake of the Woods, Minn., where I have a cottage."

He's also been on three cruises for Holland American Lines where he served as the Protestant chaplain. "It's a great way to see the world." The Baltic and Mediterranean cruises have taken him to 17 or 18 countries. He was responsible for Protestant worship services on board.

Lister retired a few years ago, but came back. "I just keep on going. I feel good, so why not?"

He loves preaching, but working with people is his favorite part of his ministry. "People are what gives life." The work with boards and committees is rewarding.

Lister believes the world needs all the Christian disciples it can get, and that the church is losing its influence. "We've got to get recentered."

He wouldn't do anything differently if he had his life to live over. One change he's seen and approves of is women in the ministry.

"Oh, definitely. That has enriched the church profoundly."

Lister is remembered fondly at Geneva Presbyterian. Dennis Delezenne of Canton was clerk of session and brought Lister in during the early 1990s.

"I hired him to be the interim pastor when Ken Gruebel left," Delezenne said. He's impressed with Lister's ability to step into different situations and bring peace.

"And he's done that so many times. He's been all over the place. He's very warm, very loving."

Delezenne recalled a sermon in which Lister dressed as John the Baptist. "I think he itched all the way through.

"He always preached from the word of God," he added. "He's just a wonderful man."

"The governor's comments also imply that elected city officials are more capable of dealing with speed limits than elected township officials. After all, cities have total control over setting speed limits on most roads within their community."

State Rep. Bruce Patterson (R-Canton) agreed with Yack on that point.

"That statement was an affront to certain townships in particular," Patterson said. "Canton Township has a population of 77,000 people. Canton, Plymouth and Northville townships all have very sophisticated governing units."

Census data show that nearly 50 percent of the state's population now live in townships. And it is local officials who field complaints about traffic safety and speed limits.

"It's a slap in the face to say that we can't be objective," Yack said.

"We deal with objective matters all the time. Zoning is a good example. We sit in front of a hundred people where we say 'Sorry, you can't do that.'"

The bill was supported by the Michigan Townships Association but opposed by the Department of State Police and the County Road Association of Michigan.

Yack said it seemed to him to be another local control issue.

"I don't think he (Engler) has a clue what goes on in local government," he said. "He has no local government experience. I don't think he can understand the services we offer."

Yack said that over the last 10 years revenue sharing funds for local governments have dropped by half a billion dollars.

"We just had a big discussion at a staff meeting last week as to how much longer we should contribute sizable amounts of money to road improvement projects due to revenue sharing cutbacks," he said.

In addition to the drop in revenue sharing money, Yack said the governor has added responsibilities to local government without adequate funding and has taken away local control.

"In the context I put it (the speed limit issue)," Yack said, "it's not about local elected officials ... it's about people living in townships not having a voice in projects they should have a voice in."

Yack was also upset that the legislature did not act to override the veto.

"I am very disappointed that Representatives and Senators did not assert their power on this very important local matter," he wrote.

But Patterson, House majority floor leader, said the bill is not dead yet.

He said it has been referred back to the Transportation Committee where it could be amended or revised.

"We don't have to go back to square one," he said.

Medical Center in Pontiac. "You target kids who may not know what they want to do, and it helps them to talk to someone actually in the field."

Commercial pilot Rod Jenkins, who captains an A320 air bus for Northwest Airlines, knows it's unrealistic to expect his company to gain any pilots from a career fair like this one. But they're important because they help draw kids to the field.

"They think it's a glamorous job, and it is a lot of fun," said Jenkins, a 35-year veteran and former Air Force pilot. "I didn't know what to expect, and I was handing out stuff as fast as I could staple it together.

"To talk to high schoolers about coming to Northwest Airlines isn't realistic, but I can talk to them about the career field."

names of students honored each year.

"We want to incorporate a sculpture with multiple figures, to represent other people who have gone through life with adversity and succeeded," said Jones. "The wall will address Sandra's personality, how she related to others, and how she dealt with her handicap.

"The alabaster stone will signify her strength and purity, and sense of her agility," he added. "The white mural also brings out a calm strength in its overall appearance, and I think that's how she approached life."

Jerry Trumpka, a Plymouth A.M. Rotary Club member who is a also on the fund-raising committee, can understand the importance of the memorial. Trumpka, like Sagear, suffered childhood polio.

"After getting to know her story, there were a lot of similarities and ways I could relate to her," Trumpka said. "In many ways, it's my story, too, and obviously it's the life story of thousands of people."

Trumpka said the "Wall of Courage" will cost $40,000. Of the total, $10,000 in donations were in-kind contributions. So, the committee needs to raise $30,000.

"So far, we're at about $8,500 in actual funds," he said. "After we finish funding the wall, we'll start a scholarship fund for kids who have overcome adversity, not just physical handicaps."

Plymouth High School Principal Michael Bee said the wall will signify one of the first traditions for the new school, and help connect the new school with the history of the old high school.

"I like the inspirational message as you walk in, that anything can happen if you believe it," Bee said. "Because we have a freshman class coming in and we're asking them to be leaders, it's an extremely important message we want to give them."

Charitable contributions can be made through the Educational Excellence Foundation in the name of the Sagear Project. Call (734) 420-7010 for more information. The Prom Fashion Show, a fundraiser for the Sagear Wall, will be held at Salem High School on Wednesday, April 10.

Easter is the central holiday for Christian believers

BY HUGH GALLAGHER AND KEELY KALESKI WYGONIK
STAFF WRITERS
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net
kwygonik@oe.homecomm.net

Without Easter, there is no Christianity.

"Without Easter, our faith is nothing," said Lucas Parks, youth and worship pastor at the Solid Rock Bible Church in Plymouth. "We celebrate the death and more importantly the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

"Without dying on the cross for our sins and rising again, our faith would be nothing. The significance of Easter is the foundation of our faith."

The Rev. Thomas Balzak of St. Valentine's Catholic Church in Redford Township said that without Easter, Jesus would be just another holy man or prophet.

"This is the proof that he was the Messiah and the son of God and that we would live beyond the grave, too," Balzak said.

Parks said a lot of emphasis is often put on celebrating Christmas, but Christians recognize that as important as that day is, it is not as significant as Easter.

Many Christians only attend church on the two major holidays.

"My feelings about that are two-fold," Parks said. "We're glad that people who don't come to church do come of those days and give us a chance to share our faith with them. Church is more a tradition for those people. For our church it's not about tradition but about a relationship with God and his son Jesus Christ."

Balzak said that "most people are faith filled" and those who come only on Christmas and Easter are trying to find a connection to something greater and higher.

"I always welcome them and make them feel a part of the community," Balzak said. "I try to use a little humor. I tell them it's great to see so many here and we'll here next Sunday."

The Catholic Easter Vigil on Saturday night is rich with symbolism, Balzak said. The ceremony starts in darkness. Balzak said a Pascal candle is lit.

"Christ has risen, Christ is the light of the world," Balzak said. "Everyone is even a taper and the flame is passed from person to person and the church that was in darkness is brightly glowing."

Balzak said the church is also decorated with spring flowers representing renewal and a new cycle of life.

Parks said his church would have special services today to mark Palm Sunday. On Easter, the church will invite worshippers to bring in Easter lilies in remembrance of someone who has died.

There are many traditions associated with the Easter season, some directly related to the day's religious significance and some predating Christianity and associated with celebrations of spring.

Easter bunny

Germans brought us the Christmas tree, and the Easter bunny. Easter's origins as a Christian holiday date back to 325 A.D. but it was not widely celebrated in the U.S. until after the Civil War.

The Anglo-Saxons were the first to welcome spring. Their pagan festival was called Eastre, and the goddess Eastre was worshipped through her earthly symbol, the rabbit.

Easter lily

Lilies were found growing in the Garden of Gethsemane after Jesus was crucified. According to tradition, the lilies sprung up where drops of Jesus' sweat fell to the ground in his final hours. Churches continue this tradition at Easter time by banking their alters and surrounding their crosses with masses of Easter Lilies, to commemorate the resurrection of Jesus Christ and hope of life everlasting.

Easter eggs

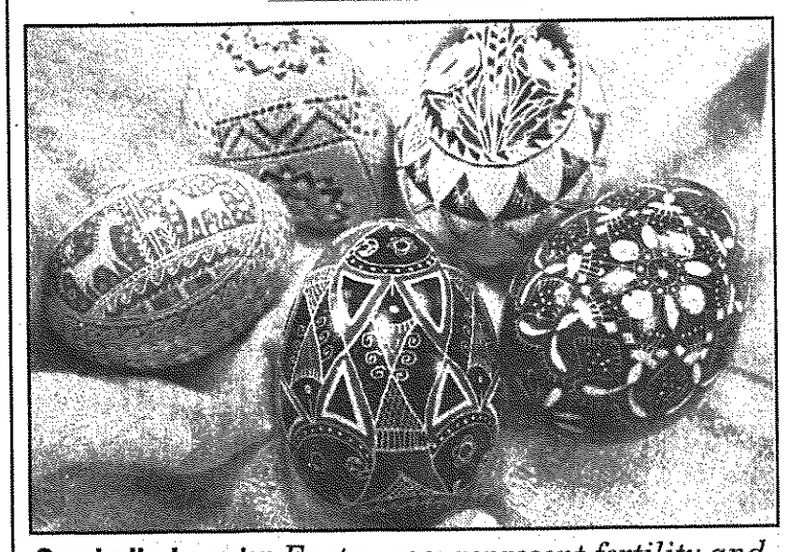

Eggs are a symbol of rebirth in many cultures. The exchange of colored eggs during the spring is a centuries old custom first celebrated by Christians.

Polish traditions

The Polish Easter celebration begins with a procession during mass on Palm Sunday. Holy Thursday and Good Friday are solemn days of prayer, in between there is much cleaning and shopping to do. On holy Sat-

Passover is celebration of freedom

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

Rabbi Daniel Nevins of Adat Shalom Synagogue in Farmington Hills calls Passover, which begins Wednesday night, a celebration of freedom.

"It goes back to the origins of our religion and the exodus from Egypt," Nevins said.

The Israelites were enslaved in Egypt during the reign of Pharaoh Ramses II. Moses pleaded for the freedom of his people but was ignored by the Pharaoh. According to the Bible, God unleashed a series of plagues upon the people of Egypt.

The final plague was the slaying of the first born. To protect themselves and to have the angel of the lord "pass over," the Israelites marked their doors with the blood of a lamb.

The Pharaoh finally relented but, after giving Moses' people their freedom, he sent his army in pursuit. According to the Bible, Moses parted the Red Sea to allow his people to pass and then closed the waters on the Pharaoh's army.

Nevins said the eight day Passover celebration is marked by many symbolic rituals. Matzoh, an unleavened bread, is eaten to mark the fact that the Israelites had no time to prepare bread with yeast when they fled the Pharaoh.

On Wednesday and Thursday, Jews will have special meals called seders. Nevins said these are home-based rituals and every family has their own traditions but that everyone is careful to avoid leavened breads during this time.

The meal includes certain foods such as horseradish to reflect the bitter affliction of slavery.

"And we dip parsley in salt water to represent the tears of the slaves.

"We also drink four cups of wine in the course of the dinner," Nevins said. "This commemorates the four phases of Exodus."

These phases are freedom, deliverance, redemption and release.

"God said I will take you out and redeem you," Nevins said.

In addition to home-based rituals, there are also prayer services at synagogues with special prayers of thanksgiving.

Holy week

Good news: The Rev. J.J. Mech addresses the congregation at Our Lady of Good Counsel in Plymouth at a Good Friday service in 2000.

urday, the day before Easter, Poles take baskets of food to church to be blessed. The food – traditionally ham, kielbasa, hard boiled eggs, sweet bread, and butter in the shape of a lamb – will be eaten on Easter Sunday after mass.

Swedish traditions

In Sweden, as in many other countries, Easter week starts with Palm Sunday, commemorating Jesus' journey to Jerusalem. Certain superstitions were attached to Easter. People believed witches were active and their black magic especially powerful during this week. Even in modern times people have believed that women who practice black magic ("Easter hags") were out practicing their craft. On Maundy Thursday they were thought to fly off on brooms to consort with the devil at some place called "blåkulla," returning the following Saturday.

On Easter morning people hesitated before starting a fire in the fireplace. The one who first got smoke up the chimney was believed to be one of the Easter Hags.

This superstition has evolved into something fun. On Maunday Thursday or Easter Eve Swedish girls and boys dress up as hags and visit neighbors. Some leave an Easter letter hoping for a piece of candy or coin in return.

Easter bonfires are customary in the western provinces of Sweden where villages vie to see who can make the biggest one.

Eggs are the most common Easter food, and hard boiled eggs are traditionally eaten the evening before Easter Sunday.

Bulgarian traditions

The bright red colored egg is the symbol of Easter (or Pascha) for Orthodox Christians all over the world. Eggs are colored on Holy Thursday after mass.

Easter breads are also a tradition. They are big and small and decorated. The bread is called "kolache" or "kozunak." One of these Easter breads is specially decorated with one or more (but an odd number) of red eggs. This bread is taken to church on Holy Saturday to be blessed.

The eggs are cracked after the midnight service and during the next day. One egg is cracked on the wall of the church (and this is the first egg eaten after the Lenten fast). The ritual of cracking the eggs takes place before Easter lunch. Each person selects his/her egg.

Then people take turns tapping their egg against the eggs of others, and the person who ends up with the last unbroken egg is believed to have a year of good luck.

The traditional Orthodox Paschal greeting is: "Christ is Risen!" The answer is: "Indeed He is Risen."

This is the greeting during 40 days after Pascha. Also, These greetings are exchanged during the tapping of the eggs, mentioned above: They are repeated 3 times and the actual tapping is after that.

Our family has adopted this custom.

My father-in-law, the oldest in the family, offers a slice of blessed egg to each guest at Easter brunch and says "Christ is risen," to which the person answers, "he is risen."

Finnish traditions

It's still winter in Finland during Easter. Children plant ryegrass seeds in little pots as a sign. Pussy willows are ancient Easter decorations, and birch twigs are placed in vases, where they soon start budding.

volunteering came about when they became friends with the apartment manager of Fordham Green.

"She was a chamber member and she invited me to one of the chamber breakfasts," Greene said. "I got to meet a few people and they were forming a volunteer community advisory committee when they were planning to build fire station Number 1."

He and Debi both volunteered for and served on that committee.

"The members were kind of ambassadors for the fire department to let people know what was going on with it and to dispel some of the fears like increased taxes and what not."

They also served on the committee working on bringing the archery tournament to Canton.

A board member of the Downtown Development Authority, Greene also serves on the chamber's education committee, government relations committee and building committee.

A participant in Leadership Canton, he serves on a subcommittee of that organization that is working as a cultural exchange group.

"We looking into a potential addition to the township's Web site," he said. "It would focus on the cultural needs of diversified users. If someone comes here from another country and they have a language problem but know how to use a computer, we can help direct them to things that are culturally geared."

The site, which he said would be called "Cultural Corners," would deal with such things as "geographical considerations – where the people come from – but also religious considerations and other ethnic breakdowns."

■ And when elections come around, Greene works as a precinct inspector at Precinct 20, where Debi is precinct chairwoman.

In 1999 the Greenes built a new home in River Meadows subdivision. And when elections come around, Greene works as a precinct inspector at Precinct 20, where Debi is precinct chairwoman.

"Then he works for me," she said teasingly.

Attorney Bryan Amann calls Greene "a tireless volunteer in a lot of different areas in the community.

"He's involved in the fabric of the community," Amann said. "He not only gives us the benefit of his thoughts and insight, but he pitches in and does the work."

And for Greene it's that pitch-in spirit that he likes about Canton.

"Tom Yack is so involved in every aspect of the community, but he's not the only one," Greene said. "The township trustees really work at making Canton better. They don't just sit at meetings. They have a dream and a desire to make Canton work and we saw that. That's probably what made us look at staying here."

Providers: Governor's broadband plan will do more harm than good

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

■ The plan is being criticized as one that would 'pick winners and losers' in the industry, based on who wins loans from that authority.

Not only is high speed Internet access already available here – making the effort by the governor and Michigan's Economic Development Corporation to encourage broadband development unnecessary – the push is actually doing the state damage, according to some in the industry.

"The MEDC, the very organization who is supposed to be promoting Michigan and encouraging economic development throughout the state, has done our state a great disservice by saying repeatedly that broadband is not available, when clearly it is. I believe this may already be impacting local economic development organizations and hindering their ability to market Michigan and encourage development across the state," said Charles Scott, president of Gaslight Media of Petoskey, before the House Technology and Energy Committee.

The committee is reviewing three proposed new laws, Senate Bills 880, 881 and 999, which would implement Gov. John Engler's proposals to encourage development of high speed Internet access, including the creation of a Michigan Broadband Development Authority.

The plan is being criticized as one that would "pick winners and losers" in the industry, based on who wins loans from that authority. Those borrowers are more likely to be larger, better financed firms, rather than smaller start up companies.

Scott's Gaslight Media is such a small firm in the business of providing Internet service hookups, and he contends the state's information on the amount of Internet service available in Michigan "shows only a very small portion of the Internet distribution capacity."

The MEDC's map of broadband "backbone" services "does include any of the numerous privately owned and operated networks," he said.

He said that a Romulus company, featured in news stories and state press releases in February as being unable to get Internet access for less than $1,800 per month, has since been able to obtain access for less than $250. Other areas cited by the MEDC as lacking services actually already have them, he contended.

"What these stories have in common is a simple solution that doesn't require a new state authority," Scott told lawmakers. "Simply pick up the local Yellow Pages and look under Internet. If, rather than portraying 'broadband' as some new type of animal that's only available over DSL and cable, the state would find ways to put customers in touch with providers, this problem would be solved."

Lawmakers have also heard from officials representing the "satellite Internet industry." With only 10 percent of American households getting DSL or cable modem lines, StarBand president David Trachtenberg said he believes satellite Internet access is "ready for prime time." His company is targeting 50 million households across the country, including many in rural Michigan. He estimates the cost of residential service will be $60 to $70 per month. Dish and installation will likely run under $700.

Lawmakers are not convinced such services eliminate the need for state action or a state authority. Rep. Jim Howell (R-St. Charles) said the authority's purpose would be to make loans to companies that are developing broadband infrastructure.

"When they first started building cars, there were winners and losers then, too, but we didn't pick them by building the roads," he said.

The senate bills would implement Engler's plan, known as LinkMichigan. Along with creating an authority, it would coordinate used of municipal rights-of-way by broadband providers.

The Technology and Energy Committee is taking testimony on the proposal before it sends the package to the House floor for a vote. State senators have already approved the bills.

Sheriff: Increase in online crime requires new efforts

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER
jbrown@oe.homecomm.net

Internet sex predators garner plenty of publicity, but Wayne County's sheriff knows that's only a small part of online crime.

Robert Ficano, speaking Tuesday to a Westland Chamber of Commerce audience at Joy Manor, said identity theft is also a major problem.

"Most hackers are of average intelligence," he said, disputing the notion of the supersmart teen boy as the typical hacker. Internet crimes, such as identity theft, tend to mirror those on the street, he said.

"These things are issues of the future." Metro Airport makes this area a natural for high-tech development, Ficano said. It's important that government get on board to keep up with e-commerce.

Ficano, a potential candidate for county commission, talked about how members of the sheriff's department became "cyber sheriffs." That came about when his daughter, then 16, was online in a chat room with someone her dad was concerned about.

Not providing protection against high-tech crimes is foolish, he said. He urged parents present to talk to their kids about Internet use.

"A lot of parents don't realize how much this is going on," he said of sexual predators. He thought the initial arrests would discourage such predators.

"We are now 55 arrests later" in a two-year period. There's really no profile of such predators, he said.

Ficano said government needs to make real estate and other public records available online. His luncheon speech, sponsored by the Westland Community Foundation, was well-received.

"I thought it was very informative," said Dennis Weese of REMAX Hometeam. He didn't know Internet predators were such a problem.

Weese has four children, including a 16-year-old son, and will use an Internet safety pamphlet distributed Tuesday.

High speed Internet access gets high speed approval

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

In rapid succession, Gov. John Engler's proposal for creation of an authority to encourage development of broadband statewide last week was approved by representatives, then senators, then signed by the governor.

Engler put a capper on that quick action by appointing William Rosenberg Thursday to be the chairman and president/ CEO of the news Michigan Broadband Development Authority.

Critics say the authority is not needed because the state has underestimated the amount of high speed Internet access already available in the state.

But there were few critics in the legislature last week.

The most controversial portion of the package, the bill to create an authority that will hand out low interest loans for the development of broadband in areas of the state that are currently under served, won approval in the House 98-9.

Senators followed suit, concurring 29-7.

Engler contends Michigan will be the first state in the nation to encourage development in this way.

He said experts estimate the plan will create 500,000 new jobs in Michigan and expand economic output by $440 billion.

"The fast lane to new jobs, new investment and new opportunities is now open," he said.

The package also creates an authority to oversee the use of public rights of way by telecommunications providers.

It sets a fee for use at 2 cents per foot the first year, 5 cents in later years, and the companies will get a tax credit to offset the cost of those fees.

Lawmakers also created a fund to encourage small telecommunications providers to participate in development.

The state will sell bonds to make the loans available.

The three bills — Senate Bills 880, 881 and 999 — were sponsored by Sens. Joe Schwarz (R-Battle Creek), Leon Stille (R-Spring Lake) and Valde Garcia (R-St. Johns.).

Rosenberg is currently the president of E3 Ventures, a consulting firm specializing in environmental and energy issues.

He has also served as the chairman of the Public Service Commission in the 1970s and was the first executive director of the Michigan State House Development Authority.

Sept.11 spurs work on training center

BY DAN WEST
STAFF WRITER
dwest@homecomm.net

Oakland Community College is building a premier training center to enhance the skills of police, fire and ambulance personnel throughout the Midwest.

The $14.5 million Combined Regional Emergency Services Training center (CREST) will provide a simulated city on 22 acres of OCC's Auburn Hills campus. This area will have homes, playgrounds, businesses, a gas station, store, school and appropriate infrastructure to provide real-life rescue situations and quality training opportunities for thousands of emergency professionals in and around Michigan.

OCC is in the midst of a fund-raising campaign that enables the CREST project to be completed this year.

The project's concept surfaced long before Sept. 11, but the terrorist attacks escalated the need for tighter working relationships among all law enforcement, investigative and emergency agencies. It also escalated the urgency and scope of the CREST project.

"September's tragic events signaled that emergency preparedness should not be taken for granted, and that cooperative training among police, fire, EMS and other agencies are imperative," said OCC Chancellor Richard T. Thompson.

CREST construction, OCC officials said, can be complete by December if fund-raising goals are met.

Through private, public and corporate donations, OCC needs to raise $7.5 million this year to complete the project. An initial $7 million was raised last year, thanks in part to a $2 million state grant.

Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson has lined up donations from business, political and community leaders, and Farmington Hills Police Chief William Dwyer is working to solicit public and private donations from neighboring police departments.

Others can contribute and buy raffle tickets for a 2002 Dodge Ram truck, donated by TAKATA, a global manufacturer of custom automotive safety systems.

Up to 1,500 tickets will be sold at $100 each. If all tickets are sold, that's $150,000 toward CREST. The winning ticket will be pulled Thursday, April 11, at the CREST site.

Additional donations can be made by purchasing commemorative bricks that will be placed at the CREST site. These bricks include space for engraved tributes to loved ones. Depending on size, the bricks sell for $100 or $250 each.

Tickets and bricks can be purchased by calling OCC Foundation Director Jill Dunphy at (248) 341-2130.

FOCUS ON WINE

RAY & ELEANOR HEALD

Zin odyssey shows passion

It's rare that we devote an entire column to a single newly-published book. But we're doing that with A Zinfandel Odyssey by Rhoda Stewart, published by PWV, Inc., 2002, $60, ISBN 0-9715820-0-9.

Have you ever developed fondness for a wine because you've met the winemaker at a tasting or visited a winery and learned the story behind passionate winemaking? If you have, then essentially, you don't care what wine critics think about the wine. These are your wines, personal finds with which you identify. They are treasured each time you pour them into a wine glass.

Stewart's book is like that. She's not a wine critic, nor does she pretend to be one. In her book, you will not find wines rated by numbers. There are no lists of "the best" anywhere in the book. Stewart uses words to entice you while she tells California's zinfandel story through the passionate eyes of its producers.

Over her years living in San Francisco and driving to north coast California wine country, Stewart developed a passion for zinfandel and a personal attachment to the wineries that produce it. She has been a professor of English at Napa Valley College since 1978 and along with her love of words, she honed a photographer's eye. All photos in her book serve to enhance her "romance with zinfandel," as she calls it. A romance, she reveals that began in autumn 1977.

A passion unfolds

"Inspired by the beauty of the vineyards," Stewart writes, "I began to sample many wines. More and more often, I would ask for zinfandel (the red stuff) in tasting rooms...Yet the more zinfandels I sampled and zinfandel winemakers I talked to, the more aware I became of symptoms that a deep ambivalence toward zinfandel had developed in the marketplace."

The late 1970s is the time frame for those remarks. Wine critics of the era considered most zinfandels to be alcoholic monsters and tannic wines that were very out of balance. Critic dislike depressed sales. Old vines were saved for today's zin lovers because Sutter Home "invented" white zinfandel.

In the last few years, zinfandel has exploded on the wine scene. Growers are bent on preserving old vines and a zinfandel that boasts "old vines" on the label, literally runs out the door in the arms of zin lovers around the country.

Get to know the producers

In case you haven't guessed already, we too, are passionate about zinfandel. So rather than tackling Steward's book from beginning to end, we started with the producers we like. Since the Amador area is

Wine Picks for Passover

Australia's forward wine style has been met with great American enthusiasm. Produced at Norman's Winery in Australia, Teal Lake wines are now available to accompany Passover celebrations, beginning March 27 this year. Wine has long played a part in Jewish ritual. Teal Lake wines, like other kosher foods, are made under strict rabbinical supervision and according to Jewish religious and dietary laws. After the grapes were picked, only strictly Sabbath-observed Jews handled the wine and the winemaking equipment. The wine is flash-pasteurized making it mevushal.

From Teal Lake, we like: 2000 Chardonnay $13; 2000 Shiraz $13; 2000 Pinot Noir $16; and 2001 Cabernet Merlot $13.

From California, we recommend two Herzog Special Reserve kosher wines, 1999 Russian River Valley Chardonnay $27 and 1998 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon $35.

New mom tackles 1st Easter dinner

BY SANDRA DALKA-PRYSBY
SPECIAL WRITER

Why did we agree to have Easter dinner for the whole family? Karie Pasternak of Rochester Hills has asked herself this question many times these past few weeks as she pours over cookbooks and looks through magazines in search of food recipes and table decorations. "I want everything to be perfect!" she says.

Married in Hawaii last year, Karie and her husband, Peter, became first-time parents on Christmas Day when 10-pound Nicholas was born.

"Christmas wasn't like I had planned," Pasternak said. "I was going to decorate a cake and make some new food dishes for the family celebration at my aunt's house. Instead, I spent the day giving birth to my son." Because she missed this holiday with family, she offered to have Easter dinner.

A Martha Stewart devotee, Pasternak likes to do a multitude of crafts, including painting personalized children chairs, and enjoys cooking and baking. The latter two interests are the other reasons that led to Easter invitations to 12 family members.

"I'm excited, but I'm also nervous. This is my first experience in entertaining such a large group! I want everyone to enjoy the day, especially the food."

New traditions

According to Pasternak, she is especially excited about the fact that since she and her husband are the hosts, they can establish their own Easter food traditions. "We can serve whatever we want!"

Pasternak has chosen to serve some Polish dishes to honor her husband's heritage. Also on the menu is a colorful, layered gelatin salad to mark the traditional dish that her grandmother, who passed away two years ago, always made for Easter.

"But the main dish – apricot glazed pork tenderloin – is my addition to the meal. I wanted to get away from ham and try something different. And the recipe I found is really easy to make."

Also different this year is the dessert the young mother has planned. "Usually someone in the family brings the dessert. This year, however, I am going to decorate a cake for Nicholas' first Easter and make this a yearly tradition."

Pasternak is a self-taught cake decorator who has garnished rave reviews for her creations. "This hobby, for me, is more fun than work. I like turning a plain frosted cake into a work of art."

Bunnies, flowers and other symbols of spring will find their way onto Pasternak's Easter cake.

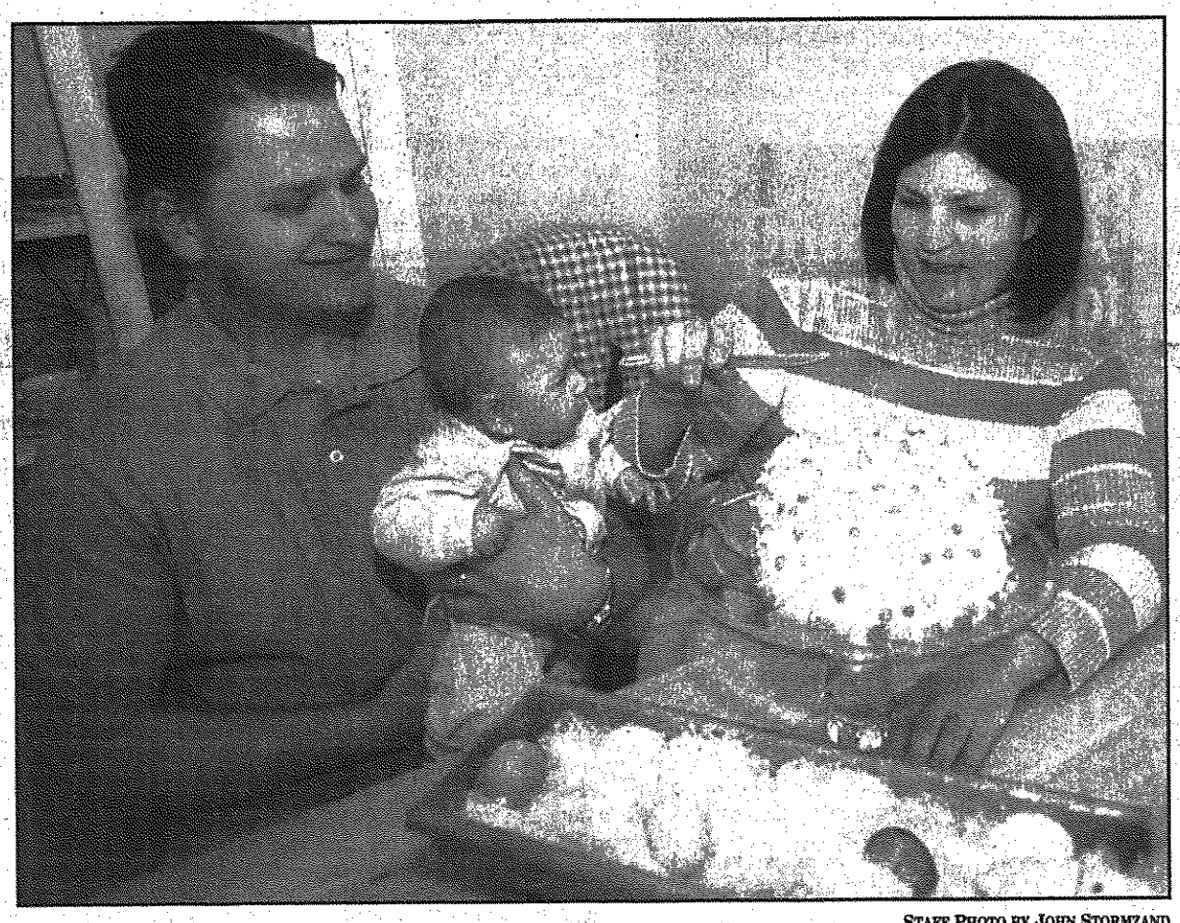

"I like to use candies, colored frostings and other sweets in my cake decorating. I like everything to be edible." She admits, however, that there have been times when she had had to used plastic figures to create certain cake themes.

All about family

Pasternak has discovered that caring for a baby and preparing for the Eastern celebration may be a little more difficult than she anticipated. "I thought I could clean, cook, bake and decorate the cake when Nicholas takes his long naps," she says. "But now he's into little catnaps and I can't seem to get anything done."

Pasternak said she's isn't too worried about this. "The baby's grandmothers – Pam Pasternak of Sterling Heights, and Kathy Barton of Troy – have agreed to help me make this a great Eastern celebration. And, luckily, they both love to baby sit for Nicholas."

Everything will turn out just fine, she keeps telling herself. "How could it not? I have a great baby, a helpful husband, and a wonderful family!"

Shoppe's frosted bunnies take the cake

So cake decorating isn't your thing! No problem!

The Cake Shoppe in Westland will do all the work – the baking and the decorating – for you.

According to owner Mary Denning, the sculptured, standout bunny cake is an Easter favorite. "The coconut and frosting-covered bunny, which comes in white, pink, blue, whatever color the customer chooses, makes a great centerpiece for the table. It's surrounded with jelly beans and kids just love it!"

She adds that with a special order, the cake batter flavor can be the customer's choice. Although for most of our customers, it's chocolate."

To satisfy her customers' passion for anything chocolate, Denning has an egg-shaped cake that is coated with butter cream frosting and then dipped in chocolate fudge. "The cake

■ Americans of all ages benefit from making healthful eating, physical activity, and lifestyle choices. This means that there is no one right way to eat or to stay healthy. Each of us has to make choices on a meal-to-meal basis.

Eating is one of life's greatest pleasures. National Nutrition Month® is celebrated each year in March to remind us of the link between food and good health. This year, start today for a healthy tomorrow.

The news stories are full of confusing and conflicting nutrition information. Sometimes the scientific studies contradict each other. It is often difficult to believe or trust these stories because one never does know when something to the contrary may become in vogue.

A few basic truths about food and nutrition have withstood the test of time. The most logical advice is to eat a variety of foods, in sensible portions, and get some daily physical activity.

Americans of all ages benefit from making healthful eating, physical activity, and lifestyle choices. This means that there is no one right way to eat or to stay healthy. Each of us has to make choices on a meal-to-meal basis. "Diets" with complex or restrictive food choices that lead to frustration, hunger and the feeling of being punished are not healthy for anyone.

"It took me some time to find the diet that worked for me," said Jason Klein of Royal Oak. "Once I changed some basic bad habits I had, such as eating too late at night, I began to lose weight."

Trying new foods and new physical activities can jump-start your plans for health.

Brandy Sereno of Ferndale likes to spend lots of time in the produce section of the grocery store. "It seems like I can always find some new or unusual fruit or vegetable to take home to try."

Many restaurants offer "healthy" choices, but also look at their "specials" for items that use lean meats, low fat cooking techniques, or have grains or vegetables as the foundation.

Finally, with warmer weather just around the corner, it's time to shed those thick layers of clothes and go outside. Enjoy the way it feels to move your body. There are dozens of ways to add movement to your day, but they all take time and a commitment to keep it up. Remember these simple guidelines regarding exercise...it should be – where and when you can do it.

Simple – You don't need fancy equipment, unless you want it, to get daily exercise. While it is better to do something than nothing, don't avoid physical activity because you don't have all the accoutrements.

Convenient – Joining a health club is a great idea, unless the health club is far away or requires major schedule juggling to get there. There is some benefit to exercising with others, but if you must choose a solitary activity because it fits into your schedule, you'll still get the benefits.

Personalize the Food Guide Pyramid as your roadmap toward eating a variety of foods, using moderation when selecting portion sizes, and balancing your choices over time. Pay attention to how food is affecting you. Listen to your body's internal signals rather than eating "by the clock." Be mindful of the wonderful flavors and textures of foods and enjoy every bite. Remember that food is not the enemy; make peace with your refrigerator.

Taking the first step toward making healthful choices can be easy if you enlist help from friends and family. Sometimes we use food to fill up more than our stomachs. Food fills in the empty spaces in other parts of our lives. The association between food, love and intimacy is inextricable. Notice a mother feeding her baby and you can see how powerful food is at nourishing both the body and the soul. The people around you play an important role in helping you stay healthy. Here are some techniques for including others in your health plans:

■ Ask for what you want – praise, feedback, cooperation, rewards, etc.

■ Teach family and friends the concepts of eating a variety of foods and enjoying them in moderation.

■ Request that affection and sharing not be in terms of food. Ask for non-food treats and gifts.

You can start today for a healthy tomorrow.

near the front of the book, Montevina and Shenandoah Vineyards (with its Sobon Estate zins) came first. Sadly, Sobon wines are not available in Michigan. Montevina is and Stewart tells this winery's rise to acclaim with great accuracy.

From Paso Robles, there's Eberle. It's Sauret Vineyard Zinfandel scores high in our books. At Saucelito Canyon, Bill Greenough is dedicated to preserving 120-year-old zinfandel vines. From Sonoma County, Stewart accurately relates the story of Rafanelli Winery that produces our all time favorite zin. It too is unavailable in Michigan. Most of the small Rafanelli production is sold via a mailing list.

Stewart unwraps the great history of Gallo of Sonoma zinfandel and the wines now labeled as single vineyards, each with a unique spin on the variety. Then there's Ravenswood. What a story of "no wimpy wines allowed"

This is! The comment applies equally to St. Francis winery.

So many great zinfandels, so many great stories, so little space to talk about them all. But Rhoda Stewart does in her serious book. Ham for Easter – consider the tasty choices

BY TOMMY C. SIMMONS
FOR AP WEEKLY FEATURES

BATON ROUGE, La. – Any way you slice it, cured ham with its smoky, sweet flavor is a favorite Easter menu meat choice. Now is the time to start shopping for a ham and thinking about how you want to season and garnish it.

Banish any idea that ham is a complicated meat to cook. It's easy.

In fact, if you get in a rush on Easter morning and don't do anything more than stick a cured, smoked or "city" ham in a 325 F oven for about 1 1/2 hours, you'll still get a moist and tasty meat to slice and serve.

Ham can be glazed, sauced or frosted to fit your family's taste preferences and your desire to prepare a dazzling entree for the Easter table.

If this is the first time you've bought ham, other than sliced ham at the deli, you are likely to be baffled at the choices you'll find in the supermarket meat case.

Not only will you find hams labeled "ham with natural juices," and "ham with water added," you might also see an economically priced ham called a "ham and water product."

There were hams at a local supermarket recently ranging in price from $1.59 per pound to $3.98 per pound, and a similar price range will probably be available in many markets.

Which ham should you buy?

Generally, the "ham and water product"' is recommended as a slicing ham for sandwiches. The ham is injected with a high percentage of water and brine solution during the curing process, which means that the meat will dry as the water cooks out during baking.

This isn't a problem if you keep the ham basted or glazed during the baking so that the meat retains some moisture and doesn't get too tough.

I baked a "ham and water product" that was labeled as having 23 percent of its weight in added water and brining ingredients. It turned out moist, flavorful and just fine for slicing and serving with vegetables. The key was keeping it basted during the cooking so it didn't dry out.

You'll also need to decide if you want a boneless or bone-in ham. While the boneless ham is easier to slice, the bone-in ham has more flavor.

In fact, almost all the "gourmet" hams, the popular spiral-cut and honey-crusted hams sold at specialty shops, are bone-in hams. Nutrients in the bone flavor the meat as it cooks.

Hams usually come either partially cooked or fully cooked. Even the fully cooked ham's taste and texture improves with additional cooking at home – the additional baking firms the meat.

Some hams are closely trimmed, meaning almost all the fat has been removed from the outside surface of the ham. The closely trimmed ham can be basted with juices or seasonings or glazed 30 minutes before the end of cooking time, but it shouldn't be scored before baking.

Scoring is when you cut diamond-pattern shallow slices through the layer of fat, 3/4-inch to 1-inch wide, all over the ham's surface. Scoring enables the fat to melt off the surface of the ham as it bakes and opens up surface areas for the flavors and spices from a glaze to penetrate the meat.

If you scored a closely trimmed ham, the juices of the ham would flow out too quickly as the ham cooks, and the meat would dry out.

Hams come from the rear leg of the pork carcass, though a small ham, called a picnic ham, is taken from the lower portion of the front leg.

Picnic hams are usually boiled to tenderize them. The picnic ham has plenty of flavor and is inexpensive, but it doesn't make a pretty Easter ham.

Since whole hams are quite large, much too large for most families, you'll often want to buy a half or portioned ham. These cuts will be labeled rump or butt half; shank half; rump or butt portion, and shank portion. The half size is larger than the portion size.

Hams should be refrigerated before cooking and after cooking. And, though most cooks claim that freezing a ham affects the texture of the meat, I haven't found that the texture change is that noticeable or objectionable.

Trust me: If you have a small family, freeze leftover ham after the second day or you'll be sick of it by the third and end up throwing away perfectly good pieces simply because you are tired of the taste. Frozen ham will maintain quality for up to two months.

There are dozens of recipes for baking hams. Following are two favorites:

PEACH-GLAZED SMOKED HAM

- 1 half, fully cooked, smoked bone-in ham (7 pounds)
- 1/2 cup peach jam
- 3 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- Rosemary sprigs for garnish

Preheat oven to 325 F. Remove skin and trim all but 1/4 inch of the fat from ham. Score fat, just through to the meat, into 3/4- to 1-inch diamonds. Place ham on rack in medium roasting pan.

Insert meat thermometer into center of ham, being careful that pointed end does not touch bone. Bake 1 1/2 hours.

Meanwhile, prepare glaze: In cup, mix jam, mustard and ginger until blended.

Brush glaze over ham. Bake ham 30 minutes longer, or until thermometer reaches 140 F. Place on warm, large platter. Let stand 15 minutes; keep warm.

Slice and serve with vegetables of choice (brussels sprouts and sweet potatoes go well).

Serves 12.

Cook's note: You may bake the ham ahead of time, store up to 2 days in the refrigerator, then reheat for 1 hour in a 325 F oven.

MONTE'S HAM

- One 15-pound smoked (partially cooked), bone-in ham
- 1 1/2 cups orange marmalade
- 1 cup Dijon mustard
- 1 1/2 cups firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon whole cloves

Trim tough outer skin and excess fat from the ham. Place ham, meat side down, in a large roasting pan and score, making crosshatch incisions with a sharp knife. Insert meat thermometer into center of ham, being careful to not hit the bone.

Roast at 300 F for 2 hours. Remove ham from oven and increase heat to 350 F.

For glaze, combine orange marmalade, Dijon mustard and brown sugar in a medium bowl.

Stud ham with cloves, sticking 1 clove at the intersection of each crosshatch, then brush with glaze, and return to oven.

Cook ham about another 11/2 hours, or until thermometer reaches 160 F, brushing with glaze at least 3 times.

Transfer to a cutting board or platter and allow to rest for about 30 minutes. Carve and serve warm or at room temperature.

Serves about 30.

(Recipe from It's Always Christmas," Food Focus booklet, October 1998).

Tips for baked ham

Read package label instructions to check whether ham is partially or fully cooked. This information determines cooking time. A partially cooked ham must be baked to reach an internal temperature of 160 F. A fully cooked ham can be baked to an internal temperature of 140 to 150 F.

If ham has a covering of a layer of fat, score it before baking. If the ham does not have a fat covering, do not score it. Baste it as it cooks and glaze it during the final 30 minutes of baking.

Bake hams uncovered on a rack in a foil-lined pan in the oven at 325 F unless recipe indicates otherwise.

As the ham bakes, turn it over in the pan at least once so that the brine in the meat doesn't sink to the bottom and make the bottom quarter of the ham too salty tasting.

Easter meal is talk topic at seminary

Why do some churches bless Easter baskets?

That's one of the questions that will be answered during a seminar on "The Easter Meal in the Polish American Home" at 7 p.m. Monday, March 25, in the Dombrowski Fieldhouse at SS. Cyril and Methodius Seminary, 3535 Indian Trail, Orchard Lake. Admission is free. For more information: (248)683-0310.

Father Czeslaw Krysa, the seminary's director of liturgy, will also probe other aspects of the holiday custom such as social justice and the Easter basket, ancient creation myths, what's really in an Easter egg, and the Polish roots of swieconka ("blessed Easter meal").

The liturgy as celebrated in the Polish American home is Krysa's area of specialization. The Easter Sunday meal was the topic of his doctoral dissertation that he defended last summer at St. Anselm Pontifical Liturgical Institute in Rome, Italy, Krysa has also authored a book, A Polish Christmas Eve, dealing with that season's Polish holiday customs and traditions.

ends up looking like a large chocolate Easter egg."

Another favorite Easter dessert, she says, especially for family celebrations, is a platter of cupcakes decorated with bunnies, chicks, bird nests and other such spring symbols.

"Some customers like to adhere to the religious meaning behind Easter. For them we have decorated cakes in the shape of a cross."

While the shop plans to have many of these homemade delights freshly baked and in stock for Easter, Denning suggests that customers place a special order to assure that they get exactly what they want.

The bakery, which celebrates its tenth anniversary this year, goes beyond providing great desserts. It is offering its first-ever parent-child baking class on April 6. For more information on the class and/or to place a cake order, call (734)261-3680.

The Cake Shoppe is located at 8036 North Wayne Road, Westland. Hours are 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays and Tuesdays; 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays; 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays; and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sundays.

Early morning is best for taking pictures

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

Ever wonder when is the best time of day to photograph? It's the early morning...without doubt!

Early morning has always been my favorite time of day to get the best shots. There's a stillness in the air, a calmness in the lighting and a mood in the sky that is available no other time of the day.

Here are some reasons why I recommend photographing early in the morning.

To begin with, there's usually an absence of wind and breeze meaning that tall grasses and tree branches will hold still for your camera. This means you can take full advantage of depth-of-field by placing foliage in the foreground of your composition and know that everything will come out sharp and in focus.

Early morning light and wispy clouds combine to help me get the dramatic cactus photograph shown here. Another time of day wouldn't have produced the same result.

Flowers, often covered with dew, are also very still in the morning and, if you're lucky, you'll find one with a butterfly. Because a butterfly's wings are weighted down with moisture in the early morning making it difficult for them to fly away, you should be able to move in close with your camera for an impact-filled shot.

PHOTOGRAPHY

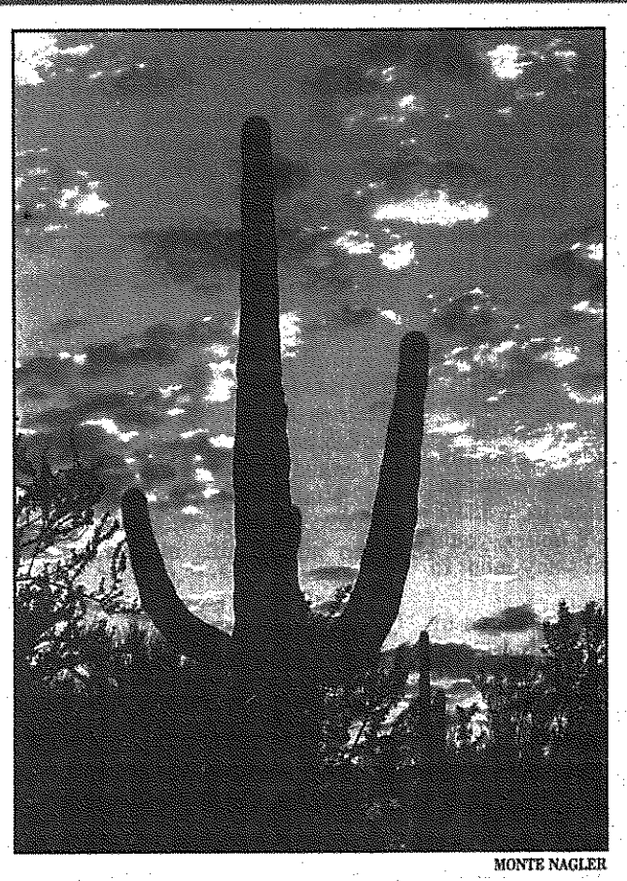

Another reason for photographing in the morning is that you'll often find fog and mist. Low lying mist over the lake or layers of fog in the countryside will give your photos an element of mood no other time of day will offer.

And keep on the lookout for cloud patterns. Clouds in the early morning will often have a dramatic mood that's easy to capture on film and could turn your picture into a winner.

Because of the low angle of the sun, morning light produces shadows, textures and tonal contrasts just not available under a noon sun.

So remember the expression: "early to bed, early to rise, makes someone healthy, wealthy and wise...and gives them a terrific opportunity to get early morning shots, too!"

Short stories of infidelity are disturbing, memorable

BY VICTORIA DIAZ
SPECIAL WRITER

A Multitude of Sins, by Richard Ford (Alfred A. Knopf, $25).

BOOK BEAT

VICTORIA DIAZ

Despite its title, this collection of sterling short stories by Pulitzer Prize winner Richard Ford (Independence Day) centers mostly around the transgression of infidelity in the opening days of this fast-paced 21st century.

In spots as diverse as a Michigan ski resort, a muddy Louisiana duck blind, a dark Connecticut road, and the lip of the Grand Canyon, Ford's characters are painted in colors both familiar and strange.

Familiar in that we recognize parts of ourselves in them; strange in that they have about them a touch of something akin to ghostliness – a kind of removed, shadowy quality.

Sometimes they are hard to figure. Often, they are "blind" and out-of-touch. What they "see" isn't really what is there at all. They don't really mean anyone harm, but they are seeking rather desperately to come alive, it would seem. And, in so doing, pain and suffering can often be the order of the day for those around them.

The lead-off story, Privacy, offers a brief, but indelible, view of a young married man involved in a kind of distant voyeurism, as his wife sleeps nearby. ("This was at a time when my marriage was still happy," the story begins.) Trouble is, when he encounters up close what he has been gazing at from afar, he realizes he hasn't been "seeing" the truth at all.

BOOK REVIEW

In Quality Time, a writer named Wales and a married woman named Jena rendezvous at The Drake Hotel in Chicago on a snowy night, after he has witnessed the death of a woman in a traffic mishap.

When they meet, the couple talk, make love, take a walk, have dinner, say good-bye in the "amber light" of the sumptuous Drake. (He never tells her of the woman's death.)

Somewhere in all this, a mysterious fellow named Jim recognizes Wales in the hotel lobby, but Wales fails to recognize him. At another time, Jena asks Wales if he would be willing to kill her husband. (His answer is " 'No, I guess I wouldn't.' ")

The only "real" aspect of this world seems to be their strong physical desire for each other. But, in the end, even that isn't lasting.

Creche is a Christmas tale set in northern Michigan, where a non-nuclear family has gone to spend a non-traditional holiday together at a cheesy little ski resort.

The family is made up of Faith (a "motion-picture lawyer"); her chubby mother, Esther; Roger ("Faith's sister Daisy's estranged husband"); and Faith's small nieces, Jane and Marjorie. Daisy is "a presence" here, but always an offstage one. As the little group "celebrates," it gradually becomes clear that Roger's interest in Faith goes far beyond familial.

Ford's characters in this story are probably the most vividly and subtly etched of any in this collection, and therefore, among the most memorable.

From the concluding story, Abyss, in which an illicit affair concludes with a death; to a strange tale titled Puppy, in which a New Orleans couple find a strange canine abandoned in their lush garden; to Under the Radar, a story about a young Connecticut couple and the effect of adultery on their "idyllic" relationship; this fiction will prove to be disturbing and unsettling to many readers.

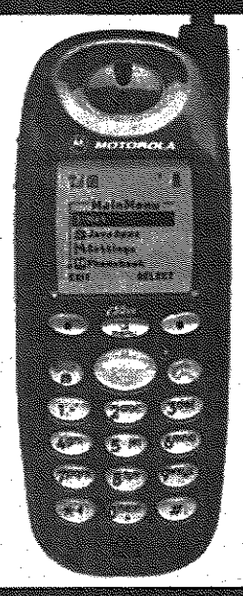

But there's not a dull story in the bunch. And each tale is enhanced by Ford's dazzling way with words, plus his thought-provoking "take" on our crowded world that leaves us, ironically, so very isolated from one another.

Once upon a time, The New York Times Book Review said about Richard Ford, "Nobody now writing looks more like an American classic."

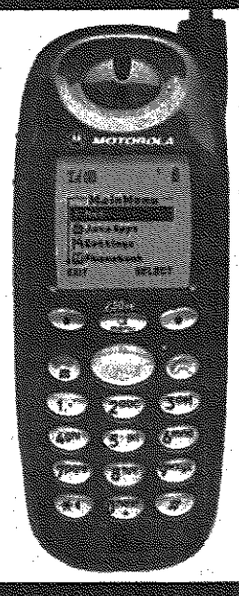

Read this collection. See if you agree.

Independent retailers to share successful strategies

The Michigan Retailers Association is joining with four Oakland County business groups to present a professional education seminar in Royal Oak for retailers and other business owners.

Successful Retail Strategies will take place 8-10 a.m. April 24 at the Baldwin Theatre.

This panel discussion will feature independent retailers who have found ways to make their stores thrive despite competition from the big chains.

Attendees will learn secrets from the front lines that can give their businesses an edge in today's competitive retail marketplace.

Co-sponsors are the Oakland County Small Business Center, City of Royal Oak Downtown Development Authority, Royal Oak Chamber of Commerce, and Woodward Avenue Action Association.

Cost is $15 for MRA and co-sponsor members, $25 for non-members.

To register, contact the MRA's Robin Gregory at (800) 366-3699 or rsgregory@retailers.com.

The MRA is the unified voice of retailing in Michigan and the nation's largest state trade association of general merchandise retailers. Its more than 5,500 retail business members operate more than 12,000 stores across the state.

'History of Hockeytown' captures Wings moments

As a member of the Original Six, the Detroit Red Wings have endured a rich and celebrated history.

In honor of the team's longevity in the city of Detroit, the Red Wings have released History of Hockeytown, a 374-page, hardcover, collector's book featuring the complete history of Detroit's hockey franchise.

Written by Windsor Star columnist Bob Duff, History of Hockeytown provides the quintessential story of how Hockeytown became what it is today.

History of Hockeytown traces the roots of Detroit's proud hockey history with an in-depth look at each of its first 75 years – from the purchase of the Detroit franchise on Sept. 25, 1926, to the stunning off-season acquisitions of future Hall of Famers Dominik Hasek, Brett Hull and Luc Robitaille in the summer of 2001.

Filled with never-before-seen photos, a full statistical record and features on all of Detroit's greatest players, History of Hockeytown is a must-read for any Red Wings fan.

History of Hockeytown is $40 and now available at Joe Louis Arena and Hockeytown Authentics.

Fans can also buy History of Hockeytown over the phone by calling (313) 396-7575, or online at www.detroitredwings.com.

"This book personifies Detroit's passion for Red Wings hockey over the past 75 years. Filled with memories and traditions," said former Red Wings great Alex Delvecchio.

Each of the 75 four-page chapters includes:

■ Back in Time – Significant moments that unfolded on U.S. soil and the world stage during that season;

■ Final Standings – Where the Wings finished up in the regular season and playoff chase;

■ Quick Cuts – Club leaders and award winners during the campaign;

■ Season in Review – A concise synopsis of the events that unfolded on the ice that year;

■ Hockeytown Moment – The most memorable occurrence during the season;

■ Wings of Legend – Profiles of individual Detroit stars, focusing on their special achievements;

■ Motown Classic – A significant event or record-setting performance that unfolded during the campaign;

■ Assembly Line – Major transactions and significant moves that helped shape the Red Wings;

■ Red Wings Facts – Informative statistical footnotes in Red Wings history;

■ Short Passes – Offbeat and unusual facts involving the team.

Sweet books for kids are Easter treats

BY SAMANTHA CRITCHELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

Wacky Witzy, the duck from Little Suzy's Zoo, and his pals find Easter eggs, chocolate bunnies and bonnets in Witzy's Backyard Easter Hunt (Scholastic, ages 2-4, $5.99) by Suzy Spafford.

Witzy invites young readers to help in their search, asking "Can you find Easter baskets?" and so on. He also encourages kids to count clouds in the sky and find the baby bunnies hiding under a bush.

And Witzy's board-book backyard is a colorful wonderland chock-full of blooming flowers, plush grasses and plenty of garden friends. It's an ideal place to spend Easter morning.

Friendly bunny

Bunny, the simply drawn star of Pat the Bunny, is back – and in the bath.

The soft white bunny gathers friends Tickle the pig and Squeak the mouse for a good time in the tub in Bunny's Bath Time (Golden Books, up to age 3, $9.99) by Edith Kunhardt, the daughter of Dorothy Kunhardt who wrote the original Bunny book in 1940.

Once Bunny and Squeak find Tickle, who is hiding in the laundry basket, they all enjoy splashing around and playing with enough toys that must make the tub a little crowded.

Illustrations are done in the soft colors that fans of this series expect to see.

Happy mouse

Little Owen is a happy mouse from the moment he opens his eyes Easter morning to find a basket full of candy in Owen's Marshmallow Chick (HarperFestival, ages 2 and older, $6.95).

The jelly beans are his favorite – until he eats the gumdrops. The buttercream eggs are even better than the gumdrops, and a big chocolate bunny is the best. But in the end, it's the marshmallow chick that wins Owen over.

Owen, in a series of simple but bright drawings by author-illustrator Kevin Henkes, learns that there's more to a "favorite" candy than sugar in this sweet story.

Just joking

The natural – and quick – proliferation of rabbits is the punch line to many jokes, but in Leo Lionni's board book Let's Make Rabbits (Knopf, up to age 4, $6.99), two bunnies are born using a little imagination.

Scissors, a pencil and some colored paper come together to make the best-buddy bunnies.

They live out the journey from being two-dimensional characters to real rabbits.

A warning to parents, though: This book is also a child's first tutorial in how to make rabbit-ear shadows.

Biblical story

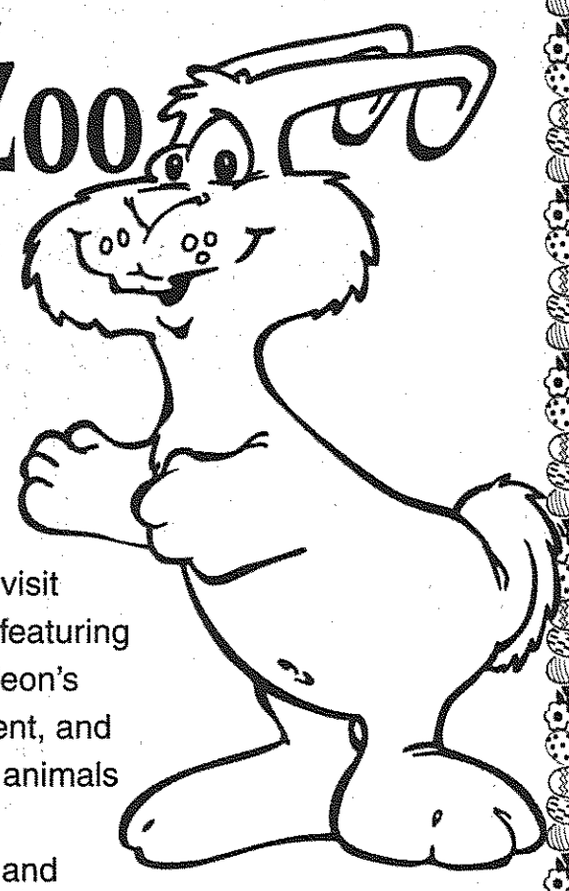

Easter (HarperCollins, ages 4-8, $15.95) uses stained-glass illustrations to complement Fiona French's telling of the Easter story, from Jesus' entry into Jerusalem, through the Last Supper, and ending with his ascension into heaven.

She uses words from the King James Bible, yet the complicated story should be understandable to children. The illustrations also explain the action described in the text.

The Easter story is told as just that – a story. It is not oversimplified into a kiddie book but it also is not preachy, making it a good introduction for children of all backgrounds in families who use and practice religion differently.

The Gabblers, proud-parent geese, invite all their forest-dwelling neighbors to see their first egg. But amid all the celebration, which Gabbler calls a "forest-fest," the egg disappears.

World-class Istanbul ranks high for sights, people, food

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE
SPECIAL WRITER

■ Turkey's Grand Bazaar, originated in the 1450s, made me wonder why it took us until the 1950s to build Northland, the United States' first covered shopping mall. The bazaar's winding streets host 4,000 storefronts, reportedly the most under a single roof in the world. But don't overlook the fine shops along Nuruosmaniye Caddesi, a major street leading to the Grand Bazaar.

Beautiful view: A visit to Hagia Sophia is one of the highlights of a trip to Istanbul.

I wonder if we are the only Americans who ever went to Turkey who didn't buy a Turkish rug.

We didn't – only because we had no place for one – but it wasn't easy. It doesn't matter what kind of shop you enter – jewelry, leather, ceramics – there's a rug connection somewhere. Furthermore, you absolutely can't walk down the street in Istanbul without being verbally pummeled by rug salesmen.

It's a game, yes, but it's also their livelihood. And with inflation rising 65 percent per year, what Turkey produces and sells is both a bargain for you and a necessity for them. Turks are a naturally hospitable people, as well as born to sell. Expect to be offered a glass of apple tea at every turn.

Istanbul is an exotic city. Virtually hovering on the edge between West and East, it is at once cosmopolitan and Old World.

One of my fondest remembrances is three Muslim women, heads covered, and wearing baggy harem pants, jogging together along the Bosporus. Another is hearing the Muslim call to prayer each morning and evening through the open windows of my hotel room.

Sights and shops

You could spend weeks wandering the various neighborhoods, but in five days you can visit most of the major sights and get a real feel for the city.

We deliberately chose the Four Seasons Hotel, a former Turkish prison, for its reputation – it's often at the pinnacle of the world's top hotels – and its location – in the heart of Istanbul's Sultanahmet area, also known as the Old City.

But since it was just a month after the tragedies of Sept. 11, it was only a quarter full. Friends stayed nearby at the Sari Konak, a tiny, more reasonably priced alternative with its own charm and good father-and-son management. It too was relatively empty.

From both hotels, you have close-up views of two of Istanbul's most famous edifices: the Blue Mosque and the Hagia Sophia, which face one another across a small park.

You are also within easy walking distance of Topkapi Palace and the very interesting Basilica Cistern, part of an underground waterway system from the 4th to 6th century that has been converted into artistic space.

Turkey's Grand Bazaar, originated in the 1450s, made me wonder why it took us until the 1950s to build Northland, the United States' first covered shopping mall. The bazaar's winding streets host 4,000 storefronts, reportedly the most under a single roof in the world.

But don't overlook the fine shops along Nuruosmaniye Caddesi, a major street leading to the Grand Bazaar. I got a buttery soft leather jacket at Rima Leder (Leather) at an amazing price from the sweetest Turkish shopkeeper I encountered.

You can't really window shop, because shopkeepers are on you immediately. He was the exception. He told me that they send a lot of their coats without labels to Italy, which the Italians sell as theirs. But even he wanted to take me around the corner to a carpet shop!

The Spice Bazaar is smaller and even more exotic with its bins of spices and nuts, as well as other foods and merchandise. They have yards of the confection known as Turkish Delight, which in truth is not a delight, even to a sweet lover like myself. It's also where, unlike the Grand Bazaar, you'll see more Turks than visitors.

Food

The food in Turkey is fantastic. The friends we traveled with, Bill and Ellen Sachs of West Bloomfield, agreed. So when we came home we gave a Turkish dinner party.

The Turks begin the meal with a group of appetizers called mezes. We served eggplant puree flavored with garlic and lemon; yogurt salad that combined plain yogurt with cucumbers; and shepherd's salad that is chunks of seedless tomato, cucumber, onion, green pepper, radish and parsley in a vinaigrette dressing.

Turkish soups are fabulous. This one, a cream of vegetable soup, contained no cream at all. The soup was pureed to acquire its thick texture.

Kebaps (Turkish spelling) encompass much more than what we think of meat and/or vegetables on a skewer. In fact neither of the kebaps we served was on a skewer at all. Ellen made kofte kebaps – meatballs made of minced lamb mixed with rice or bread crumbs.

I was able to fashion a resemblance to my favorite Iskander kebap – that usually is sliced lamb (I used grilled chicken strips), awash in tomato sauce, yogurt and melted butter – all on a bed of pita bread. Fresh Turkish yogurt is incredible, but we made do.

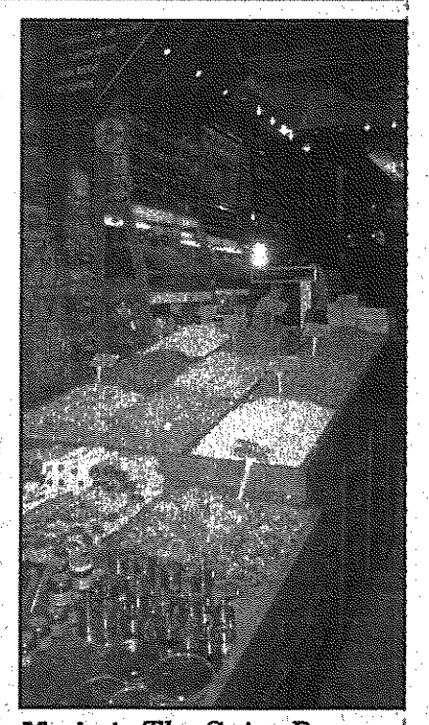

We actually never had in Turkey the amazing glazed apricots filled with creme fraîche that Ellen made for dessert straight out of the Turkish cookbook she brought back.

■ When to go: Spring and fall.

■ Hotels: Four Seasons Hotel, U.S. phone (212) 638-8200; Sari Konak, through its Web site or the Turkish Tourist Office in New York, (212) 687-2194.

For its place in the world, its sights, people and, yes, food, I'd have to rank Istanbul No. 3, just back of New York and Paris, among the cities to which I've been. Like all world-class cities, you see so much and there's so much left to see.

Whalers open playoffs with win over London

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

It took awhile — about a period, to be exact — for the Plymouth Whalers to adjust to the kind of game their first-round opponent in the Ontario Hockey League playoffs, the London Knights, planned on playing.

Very chippy.

A bit of reorganization between periods did wonders for the Whalers. Trailing 1-0 after a period, they tied it a minute into the second and then scored twice more before the period ended, enough to gain a 3-2 victory in the first game of the best-of-seven series which opened at Plymouth's Compuware Arena Friday.

Game Two is at 2 p.m. today in London, with Game Three returning to Compuware at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Stephen Weiss, the Whalers' leading scorer during the season, scored what proved to be the game-winning goal and assisted on another. Chad LaRose and John Mitchell also scored for Plymouth.

"It got a little bit carried away in the first period," said Weiss. "There were too many penalties, both ways. If we keep taking penalties, they're going to score."

And even though during the season London had converted on just 1-of-40 power-play chances against them, Plymouth could not afford to keep giving the Knights man-advantage opportunities. They did in that opening period; the Whalers had 11 penalties, the Knights had eight.

OHL PLAYOFFS

"That's the way they play," said Plymouth coach Mike Vellucci. "We have to play more disciplined. We talked about it all week long. They're the most penalized team in the league."

When LaRose went off with teammate Damian Surma already in the box with 3:45 left in the first, it gave London a two-man advantage for :25. It took the Knights just :13 to capitalize, with Mike Stathopulos jamming the puck past Whaler goalie Jason Bacashihua on the left side of the goal. Rick Nash and Bryan Thompson assisted.

A penalty to Nash with five seconds left in the first allowed the Whalers to open the second period with a man-advantage, and they pounced on the chance. Weiss triggered it, taking a pass from Cole Jarrett near the top of the right circle and threading the puck through to LaRose on the left side for the tap in.

By then, the Whalers' dominance was beginning to emerge. Their 11-7 shot advantage after one period had grown to 22-9 with 8:00 left in the second, which meant they had outshot London 11-2 in the period.

And worse was en route, at least for the Knights.

With 2:22 left in the second, John Mitchell got loose down the right wing and beat London goalie Chris Houle with a shot to the far side, giving the Whalers a 2-1 lead. Jonas Fiedler and James Wisniewski (from Canton) assisted.

The boost to Plymouth — and conversely, the deflating of London — was evident. When Weiss dug the puck out of a scramble in front of the net and slapped it past Houle 43 seconds later, the Whalers' lead had grown to 3-1

End of a dream

Title hopes end for SC with loss in semis

BY THE OBSERVER STAFF

There will be no national championship for the Schoolcraft College men's basketball team this year.

The top-ranked Ocelots had their 34-game winning streak and title dreams shattered Friday night in the semifinals of the National Junior College Athletic Association Division I tournament in Hutchinson, Kan.

Behind a 30-point effort by Jaime Lloreda, No. 4-rated Dixie State of St. George, Utah, pulled off the upset with a 72-69 win over Schoolcraft.

"I give Dixie credit," Ocelots coach Carlos Briggs said. "They kept fighting and fighting and eventually won the game.

"But I think the officiating took us out of our game. They let you play at one end but not at the other end."

The Rebels (33-3) benefited from an advantageous foul situation. The Ocelots (34-1) were called for 26 fouls while the Rebels had 16.

NJCAA BASKETBALL TOURNEY

With 10 minutes to go in the game, Schoolcraft's five starters were on the bench in foul trouble until six minutes were left. Rulon Harris later fouled out with 3:17 remaining.

Dixie was 18-of-32 at the line and Schoolcraft, which had a 48-34 rebounding advantage, 12-of-16.

"It changed our whole style of play," Briggs said of the officiating. "It was a competitive game, but the officiating was not that good.

"Early in both halves, we had 10 fouls to their four. They were playing man-to-man; we were playing half zone and traps.

"Even despite that, we had a chance to win the game."

The Ocelots led at halftime, 31-23. Their biggest lead was 41-29 on a basket by Yaku Moton-Spruill with 15:24 left.

Mike Williams, who led Schoolcraft with 18 points, got his fourth foul right after that, and the game began to turn around.

Dixie took the lead with 7:26 left. Kevin Woodberry's basket with 20 seconds to play gave the Rebels a 71-67 lead.

Schoolcraft's Javon Clark hit two free throws to make it a two-point game, and Woodberry hit one of two for Dixie with 9.8 seconds left.

The Ocelots rushed the ball down the floor and got it to Clark in the corner for an attempted three with 3.3 seconds remaining.

But the shot was blocked by Lloreda, who grabbed the ball in the air and called timeout as he was falling out of bounds. The Rebels kept possession, threw a long pass and ran out the clock.

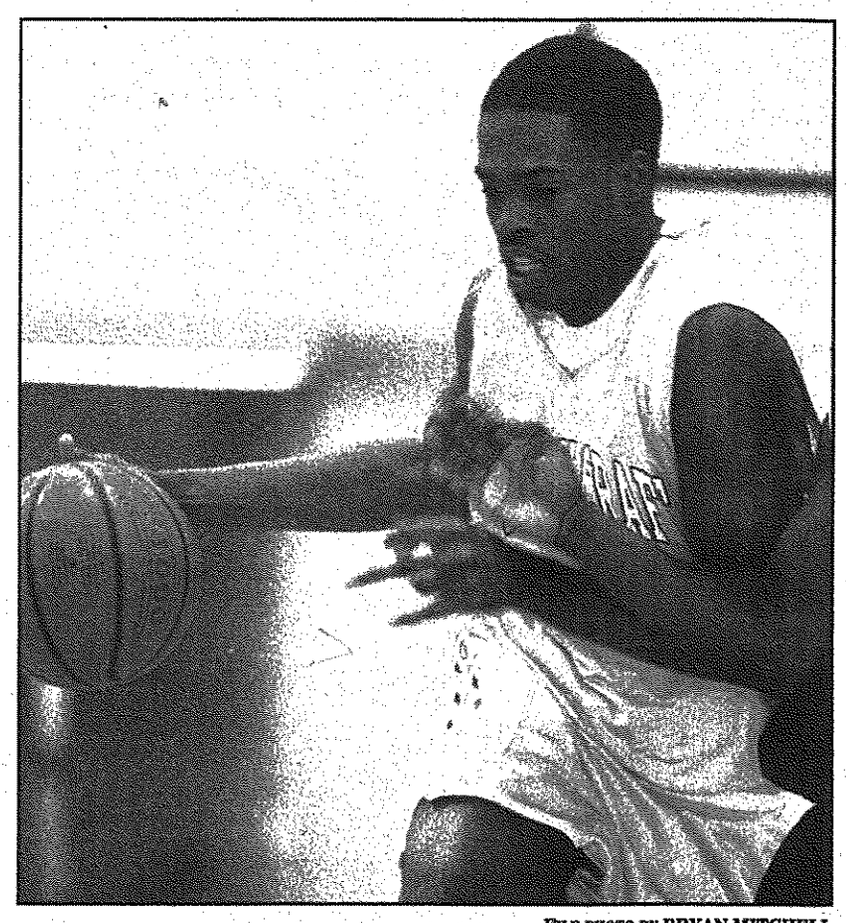

"In the second half, we got our press in," Dixie coach Jeff Kidder said. "We wanted to get them playing faster, because Schoolcraft did a great job in their half-court sets.

"When they got in foul trouble, we wanted to keep pounding it inside, and Jaime did a great job of recognizing the double teams."

Moton-Spruill and Harris had 10 points apiece, Clark and Delvar Barrett eight each. Williams also had 15 rebounds, Clark and Barrett five apiece. Harris had six assists.

Hoskins, Meagrow rank with Observerland's best

John Fenbert took about 10 years off coaching in the 1980s. But since he returned to the sidelines, his Redford St. Agatha program has seen many more wins than losses.

Fenbert was named the 2002 Observerland Coach of the Year after guiding the Aggies to Catholic League C-D Division and district championships as part of a 17-6 campaign in boys basketball.

Completing his ninth season with the Aggies, and arguably the most successful, Fenbert said the different parts of his team fit together extremely well in the second half of the season after a tough start that was marked with several close losses.

"This team knew it had a lot of heat on them to win, and they responded," Fenbert said. "We had to realize that Dan (Boulter) and Chris (Mayers) couldn't do it all themselves, then we had different guys every night stepping up."

Fenbert has racked up eight straight winning seasons at St. Agatha, and has captured two straight district championships.

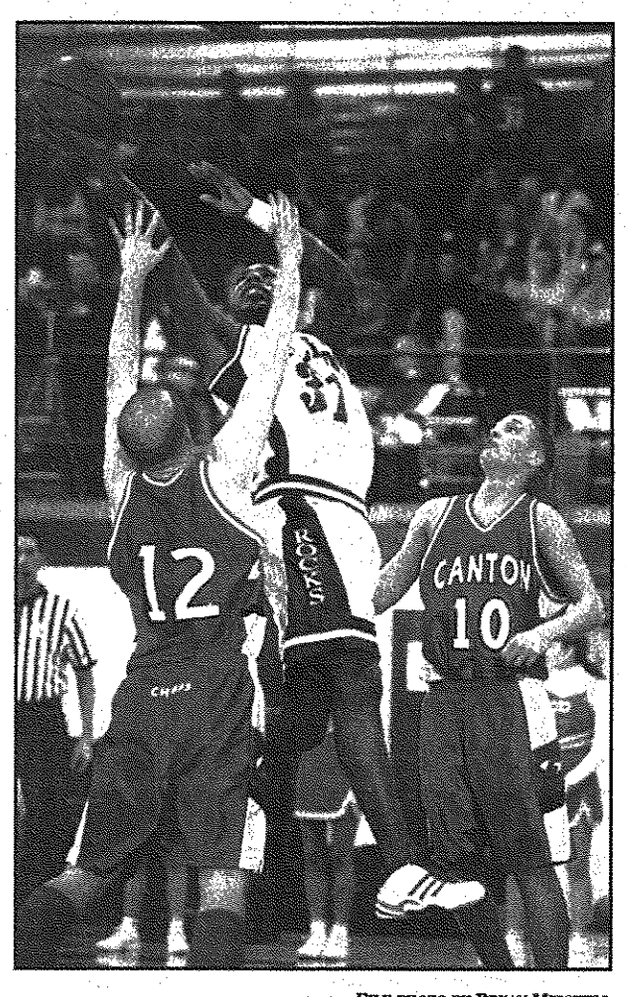

ALL-AREA FIRST TEAM

David Hoskins, Salem: Some first-rate players have come out of coach Bob Brodie's program at Plymouth Salem, and Hoskins rates with the best of them. His numbers certainly are impressive: He led the Western Lakes Activities Association champs in scoring (19.4 points per game), rebounding (9.8), steals (2.2) and blocks (2.0) and was second in assists.

"He's a very complete player," said Brodie of his all-conference player.

But his greatest development, the Rocks' coach thought, was mental. "This season we saw some maturity in him, some leadership," Brodie said. "We knew he had physical ability,

Waza club seeks structure for soccer

It was a natural progression.

Start by learning to play the game of soccer. Next, start teaching it to others, those eager to learn the game.

CJ RISAK

Then expand your own knowledge by studying how its taught in other countries.

Do all that and, as Mario and Dominic Scicluna have discovered, the next logical step is to provide a place for these kids you've been teaching to hone their skills.

Which is what they've done by establishing the Waza F.C., a soccer club has made tremendous strides in just two seasons of existence.

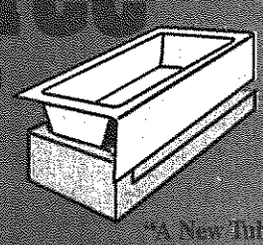

"We started last year," said Mario, a Redford Catholic Central grad, like Dominic. "And when you start a new club, you start at the bottom with the leftovers."

That's because the players the Scicluna brothers had been working with in their summer Waza camps at Schoolcraft College were already associated with club teams. While they may have appreciated what they learned with the Sciclunas, they were still part of another team.

When Waza F.C. (which stands for Flo Club) was formed — it operates out of Schoolcraft, where Dominic coaches the men's squad — a few players left their former teams to join. That but we wanted him to take charge more and he did."

Several NCAA Division I schools have shown interest in Hoskins, including Central Michigan, Eastern Michigan, University of Detroit Mercy, Michigan State, Iowa and Drake.

Darnell Wilson, John Glenn: The 6-foot-5 Wilson averaged 20 points, 14 rebounds and three blocks per game for the WLAA playoff champion Rockets, who finished 15-7.

Over the final 12 games, the All-Western Lakes selection averaged 22 points per game.

"One of Darnell's greatest assets is his work ethic and his attitude," Glenn coach Joel Lloyd said. "His practice habits and his games don't vary. He's a hard worker day-in and day-out."

Darien Bynum, Bishop Borgess: The only thing more impressive than senior Darien Bynum's numbers was his consistency.

At 6-foot-8, 250 lbs. Bynum was a load inside for Borgess this season, averaging 22 points and 12 rebounds per game. His season-high in scoring was just 30, showing how often he scored close to his season's average, and he had just one game with fewer than 10 rebounds. He has all the physical tools to someday compete at the Division I college level, according to his coach Lloyd Praedel.

"He is a very well-rounded player," Praedel said. "He can play with his back to the basket, and he's quick enough to guard players on the perimeter. He has the full game."

Chris Mayers, St. Agatha: When it counted the most, senior guard Chris Mayers delivered.

Mayers, a four-year starter for the Aggies, turned in a terrific senior season, averaging 18.2 points, 3.4 rebounds, 2.9 assists and 2.9 steals per game in leading St. Agatha to a 17-6 record. He also led the team in field goals made (158) and 3-pointers made (51).

"We struggled early, and it was because of the leadership of our seniors that we turned it around," said Aggies coach John Fenbert.

Andrew Meagrow, Canton: The improvement in Meagrow's game between his junior and senior seasons was phenomenal, certainly leaving some college coaches thinking the best is yet to come.

An all-WLAA selection, Meagrow led the Chiefs in scoring (13.0 points a game) and rebounding (6.0) while making 45 percent of his shots. Perhaps his most impressive ability was his range; left unguarded, Meagrow would often hit three-pointers from well behind the arc.

"He really improved from his junior year," said his coach, Jeremy Rheault, "to come out and lead us in scoring, make all-conference and now all-Observer. He worked at it, and he worked at his inside game, too. We needed him to pick up his rebounding and he did."

SECOND TEAM

Matt Bartnick, Stevenson: The 5-9 senior point-guard was Mr. Clutch for the 14-9 Spartans.

The All-Lakes Division pick averaged 12 points and six assists per game, while shooting 75 percent from the free throw line (45 of 60) and 42 percent from the field (85 of 203).

"Matt has been our leader the last couple of years," Stevenson coach Bill Dyer said. "He showed a lot of character when the game was on the line. He took care of the ball and made free throws down the stretch. In big games he made the big basket."

Dan Boulter, St. Agatha: Mr. Everything for St. Agatha turned in a senior season that lived up to everyone's high expectations.

Senior forward Dan Boulter led the Aggies to the C/D Catholic League championship as well as a district title. He averaged 18 points, 9.8 rebounds, 3.9 assists and 3.9 steals per game, and had a season-high of 43 points. He also shot 45 percent from the field and 76 from the line, and provided excellent leadership to the team.

"These guys knew, with all the experience Dan and Chris had, that there was a lot of pressure on them to win," Fenbert said. "Once we relaxed, things came easier for us."

Mike Leach, N. Farmington: Despite being an under-sized post player, Leach was successful battling and competing against bigger players in the paint.

He averaged 15 points per game to lead the Raiders, shooting 69 percent on free throws (116-of-168) and almost 45 percent from the field (103-230). The all-WLAA player also averaged five rebounds.

Coach Tom Negoshian cited "the great effort and attitude he brings to practice every day. He leads by example. He missed two practices in two years, and both of those we had to get him to say home.

"He consistently was able to demand double teams and score in the post. Through hard work and dedication, he learned the skills and fundamentals to be able to overcome his lack of size."

Tim Shaw, Clarenceville: The football standout, bound for Penn State, also made his presence known en route to All-Metro Conference honors.

Shaw, a four-year varsity player and three-year starter, was his team's leading scorer with an average of 18.2 points per game.

He is second in career scoring over the last decade with 730 points, second only to Scott Wion's 986. Shaw also averaged 9.2 rebounds and 3.5 steals. He was Clarenceville's best defender, too.

"He's just an all-around natural athlete," coach Kevin Murphy said. "Any time you're 6-2 and can do a 360-degree dunk, that's pretty impressive.

"He told me, when the season was over, he wished he had worked harder in the off-season, because he could have been really good. He put most of his time into football and it paid off. But his numbers are pretty darn good."

Ryan Clark, Catholic Central: On a team full of pinpoint outside shooters and ballhandlers, someone had to do the dirty work for Catholic Central, and that someone was senior center Ryan Clark.

Clark and the Shamrocks came within a few seconds of defeating Class A state semifinalist Detroit Redford in the first round of districts, culminating an excellent season for CC. Clark averaged 11.3 points and 11 rebounds per game, providing the tough interior defense that any successful team needs.

"Ryan was our best rebounder and best defensive player," said coach Rick Coratti.

Threats

Many heart patients have a prescription to take aspirin, Coumadin (warfarin) or Plavix (clopidogrel), to thin their blood, prevent clotting, and reduce their risk of heart attack, stroke or other problems. But dietary supplements like gingko biloba, ginseng, garlic, vitamin E, fish oil or coenzyme Q10 can also cause blood-thinning (anticoagulant) effects, and doses aren't carefully studied and controlled like those for medicines. The total anti-clotting effect from taking both at once, or other interactions between drugs and supplements, are what worry experts.

Other complementary or alternative medicine (CAM) treatment approaches, from prayer, meditation and yoga to chiropractic and acupuncture sessions, do not pose a specific hazard when combined with conventional heart treatments. Many patients find them to be beneficial at reducing stress or increasing body function. They were also included in the U-M study.

The survey gave some surprising results. "Of the 145 patients surveyed, 74 percent reported using some sort of CAM therapy," says Kline-Rogers. "Sixty percent of the surveyed patients used supplements, vitamins or herbs, while 43 percent used mind-body or body techniques. Many patients used both."

Even when multivitamins and prayer, two widely used and accepted "alternative" approaches, were subtracted, 60 percent of all the patients used at least one remaining CAM technique.

Among all the patients who used CAM techniques, 31.8 percent used at least one blood-thinning prescription medication and one diet supplement that could reduce clotting. This particular statistic troubles Kline-Rogers and her colleagues most. In the study they're now conducting, they're asking heart patients about their use of prescription medications and CAM techniques, their intake of beverages such as green tea and red wine that can also interfere with clotting, and their incidence of minor bleeding symptoms.

Informing the doctor

The vast majority – 75 percent – of people who chose food supplements, vitamins or herbs told their doctor what they were taking. The rest said they didn't think it was necessary, or didn't care to discuss it, or that their doctor didn't ask. Kline-Rogers and her colleagues were pleased by the high percentage of those who told their doctors. But they note that both clinicians and patients need more education about the importance of talking to one another about CAM use, due to the potential risks of bad interactions between CAM techniques and conventional ones.

When asked about their greatest concerns about CAM techniques, a majority of CAM users said they were worried their chosen approaches wouldn't work, or were a waste of money. On average, using prices from local stores and practitioners, patients spent about $10 a month on dietary CAM approaches, and $98 a month on body-based or mind-body approaches performed by practitioners such as chiropractors, acupuncturists, Reiki masters and yoga instructors.

I learned to speak up, live in the moment, take a few risks, collect kisses along the way, and always remember that what makes time on Earth so precious is that none of us gets out of here alive, so I had better learn to live.

A lot has changed since then. I sold my skis. The kisses that keep me going are from a gorgeous 4-year-old, the son I didn't think I'd have.

And today, my surgeon's philosophy may not be so uncommon. I would be able to find a network of support, as I learned at the Center. I could throw pottery. I could attend yoga and nutrition classes, and find support groups. There are a host of options and opportunities and help for people who want them.

Success isn't always measured in months or years or survival or death. The process is as important as the results. Still, my trip to wholeness was a success. I prove it every time my wee one asks me to pick up that old guitar and play.

human contact or connection. That's your soul brain," Weissman said. "We try to address the five parts of the whole self: thinking self, the creative self, the physical, loving and spiritual self. Unless you can address all, you've missed the boat."

The Reflection Spa, which Weissman said is the soul of the building, addresses patients who respond best with their soul brains. The spa serves as a calming refuge to patients.

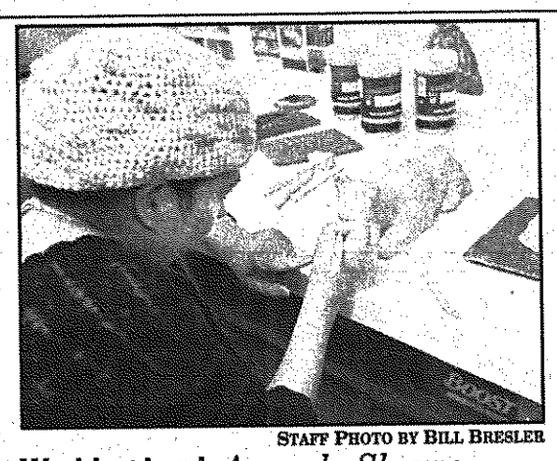

Sculpture and artwork depict the stages and complex emotions of the soul's journey, from wholeness, to loss and sorrow, to redemption, and a return to wholeness.

In the center of the spa, a still reflection pool reminds those who gaze into it that whatever else is raging in their lives around them, there is a place of serenity in the center. A singe drop of water disturbs the perfect calm in the pool, a reminder that even in the midst of peace, there is always change.

The spa serves as a place for patients to meditate, relax or just sit. "Some people just come in and read the paper," Weissman said.

Every week the spa, with its heated tile floor, is the site for yoga classes, music therapy and support groups.

The offerings at the center are so unique, Providence developed a monthly program known as Boost Camp. The camp is an all-day introduction to everything the center offers and is open to all cancer patients, whether they are being treated at Providence or not.

"It's kind of like our own version of a Whitman Sampler," said Weissman. "Patients come in and we give them an empty wooden toolbox. Throughout the day they are introduced to nutrition therapy and meditation and massage therapy. And everywhere they go, we give them something to put in the box. They are the 'tools' for survival."

Although Weissman and the center's staff know the camp and the center's programs help patients and families, Weissman said the program needs more statistical credibility. So Providence sought, and was awarded a $300,000 grant from the National Institute of Health to conduct studies and collect empirical data on the program's effectiveness.

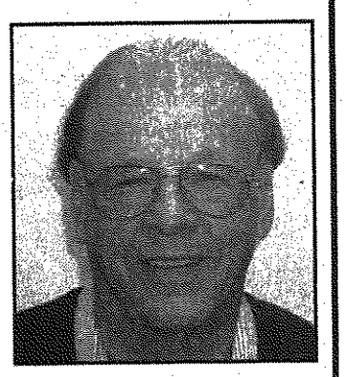

"This is the largest grant we have ever won, and it gives this center a lot of credibility. A lot of doctors are still hesitant to recommend massage or meditation for their patients," Weissman said. "But we're looking to do the research and to meet the same standards as other evidence-based medicine. We want our programs to be evidence-based as well so they need to meet the same rigorous standards."

Ask the Orthodontist

"Cosmetic Braces for the Teeth"

Perhaps the most significant esthetic advance in orthodontics over the past decade involves bonding brackets directly onto patient's teeth. Brackets are tiny devices that are used to attach the main wire known as the archwire. In the past, individual stainless steel rings, known as bands, were wrapped around and cemented to each tooth. Although this method was effective, it made for a mouth of metal that was often referred to as a "tin grin". Today, use of bands is usually limited to the posterior or back teeth, where they can sustain greater forces and serve as anchors to the wire. The front teeth are treated with tiny brackets, which can be available in clear, silver, gold or even titanium. These less visible brackets all but eliminate the self-conciousness that used to be associated with the larger metal braces.

The small brackets allow for lighter and more comfortable forces to be applied to the teeth in addition to the benefit of easier oral hygiene for the patient. Even the brackets can be extra small in size depending upon the orthodontist's selection, usually based on his dexterity and size of his hands.

The new bracketing system can make placement of the orthodontic appliance quicker and more comfortable. For many it can be made fun with the different color rubber rings that hold the wire to the bracket. These colors are changed each month and helps make orthodontics fun!

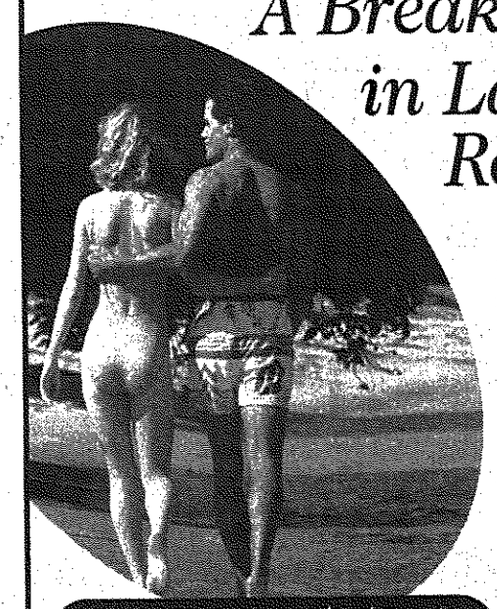

Parents with any orthodontic concerns for their children should consult an orthodontist concerning the need for orthodontic treatment. As dental specialists, an orthodontist has elected to limit his practice to this specific area of expertise and has received additional training by an accredited dental school for advanced education. Our office is located at 35200 Schoolcraft Rd. in Livonia. (734-261-8860).

Popular donor-advised funds benefit donors and charities

More than ever, Americans are seeking ways to help others. And a growing number of individuals are going beyond the traditional means of supporting charities by establishing their own charitable giving legacy through donor-advised funds.

ERIC ZIMMERMAN

Donor-advised funds, which allow individuals to easily establish a charitable giving account, have soared in popularity during the past few years.

According to a 2000 survey by The Chronicle of Philanthropy, assets in donor-advised funds jumped from $2.4 billion to $7.5 billion between 1995 and 1999, and individual accounts more than doubled from 16,242 to 36,308 during that time.

Unlike trusts and private foundations, donor-advised funds typically cost less to set up, take less time to administer and offer similar tax advantages.

"Most donor-advised funds are designed for individuals or families with assets of $250,000 or more who wish to create a charitable legacy without the administrative hassle," says Craig Brimhall, vice president of American Express Funds. "Once you initially fund the account, your future involvement is as great or as little as you want it to be."

What Is a Donor-Advised Fund?

A donor-advised fund is a charitable giving product through which an individual makes irrevocable contributions to a non-profit organization that administers the program. The donor advises the non-profit how to invest the money in designated pools of mutual funds with different levels of risk.

The donor can then advise the non-profit to make grants from the account to qualified charities. The contributions are tax-deductible in the year the non-profit receives the assets, and growth in the account is tax-free.

A donor-advised fund is different from a foundation.

With a donor-advised fund, donors can immediately deduct contributions of up to 50 percent of their adjusted gross income for cash donations in the year the fund receives the donation and up to 30 percent of adjusted gross income for gifts of appreciated assets. By comparison, deductions for cash and appreciated assets given to private foundations are 30 percent and 20 percent, respectively. Unused contribution deductions can be accrued for up to five years.

Unlike the requirements for forming a private foundation, creating a donor-advised fund does not entail start-up costs, excise taxes or annual tax-reporting obligations. And annual expenses, which are often substantial with a private foundation, typically range from 1.3 percent to 3 percent with a donor-advised fund.

Once an account is funded, any potential asset growth in the account is tax-free, enabling the donor to make potentially larger future charitable gifts. Donors can make charitable gifts from the account anonymously, if they wish, and can name successors and counselors to the account who would be able to make grants from the account after the original donor(s) death.

Choosing a Donor-Advised Fund

Because they require donors to make an irrevocable gift, donor-advised funds typically request that a donor has the demonstrated means to fund an account, with common initial funding requirements set at $10,000 or more. However, that amount is typically far less than the assets required to start a private foundation.

When comparing donor-advised funds, Brimhall recommends potential donors pay particular attention to a fund's:

- Investment options. Are there multiple investment options and do they seem compatible with your goals for asset growth? Are you able to recommend how your account assets are invested?
- Expenses. Do annual administrative expenses and fees seem reasonable?
- Reporting process. What type of records will you receive and how often?
- Donation process. How simple is it to recommend a charitable donation from your account? Who can assist you?

Funding a Donor-Advised Fund

Donor-advised funds can be ideal for individuals who have recently received a large amount of cash, such as through an inheritance or the sale of a business, or for those with substantial appreciated securities.

Individuals who don't have sufficient assets to start a donor-advised fund, but who want to establish a charitable legacy, may wish to pool their funds with family members or friends to create a sufficiently large account.

Even with the recent fluctuations in the stock market, millions of Americans hold appreciated securities, making them potential candidates for opening a donor-advised fund. And philanthropy continues to grow. According to Giving USA, a leading source on national charitable giving, individual Americans gave 5 percent more to charity in 2000 than they did in 1999: An astonishing $152.07 billion.

"Americans are very generous in their charitable giving, as evidenced by the outpouring of generosity following the Sept. 11 attacks as well as their continual commitment to local and national causes and organizations, Brimhall says. "Donor-advised funds are an excellent option for those looking to incorporate charitable giving into their comprehensive financial plan."

To learn more about the tax advantages of donor-advised funds, check with your tax advisor. If you'd like to determine if a donor-advised fund is potentially appropriate to your charitable and financial goals, work with a knowledgeable financial advisor.

Contributions to the American Express Charitable Giving Program are irrevocable gifts made to the National Philanthropic Trust, a public charity. Individuals considering contributions to the Program should consult their legal or tax advisors. Information about fees and expenses is available from your American Express financial advisor.

ARTHRITIS WITH NO NAME

There are over 100 different types of arthritis. The list begins with osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, lupus arthritis, gouty arthritis, psoriatic arthritis, etc. Textbooks on arthritis often take up two volumes of over a thousand pages each volume. A text will fill a CD full with another CD needed for tables and illustrations. Revision and additional information of the CD will occur every four to six months.

With all this material at hand it would seem impossible that you could see a doctor with your joint pain, and have the doctor say: "I know you have arthritis but I can't determine what it is." But this scenario occurs all the time. Moreover, you are most likely to hear such words from the arthritis specialist who has read the textbooks, reviewed the CD's, and passed board examinations in rheumatology.

First, the complexity of the individual exceeds the vastness of knowledge of medicine. Second, the specialist is in position to realize when your presentation of joint pain is different or unique. Third, the specialist usually has enough self-confidence to be able to admit when you present a problem that stumps him. Finally, if your physician doesn't know what your condition is, he has a good idea what it isn't. Reassurance itself is excellent therapy.

Having an arthritis that is different, does not mean that it cannot be treated. Usually your doctor can undertake a plan that relieves your pain and improves your joints while working toward a diagnosis.

Kirklands links other Moceri communities

Kirklands, one of several communities in the Oaklands development in Oakland Township, continues the tradition of luxury living provided by the Moceri Companies.

The family-owned firm offers 49 single-family lots off Adams between Dutton and Silver Bell interconnecting with the Claremont, Kings Ridge and Cloisters developments.

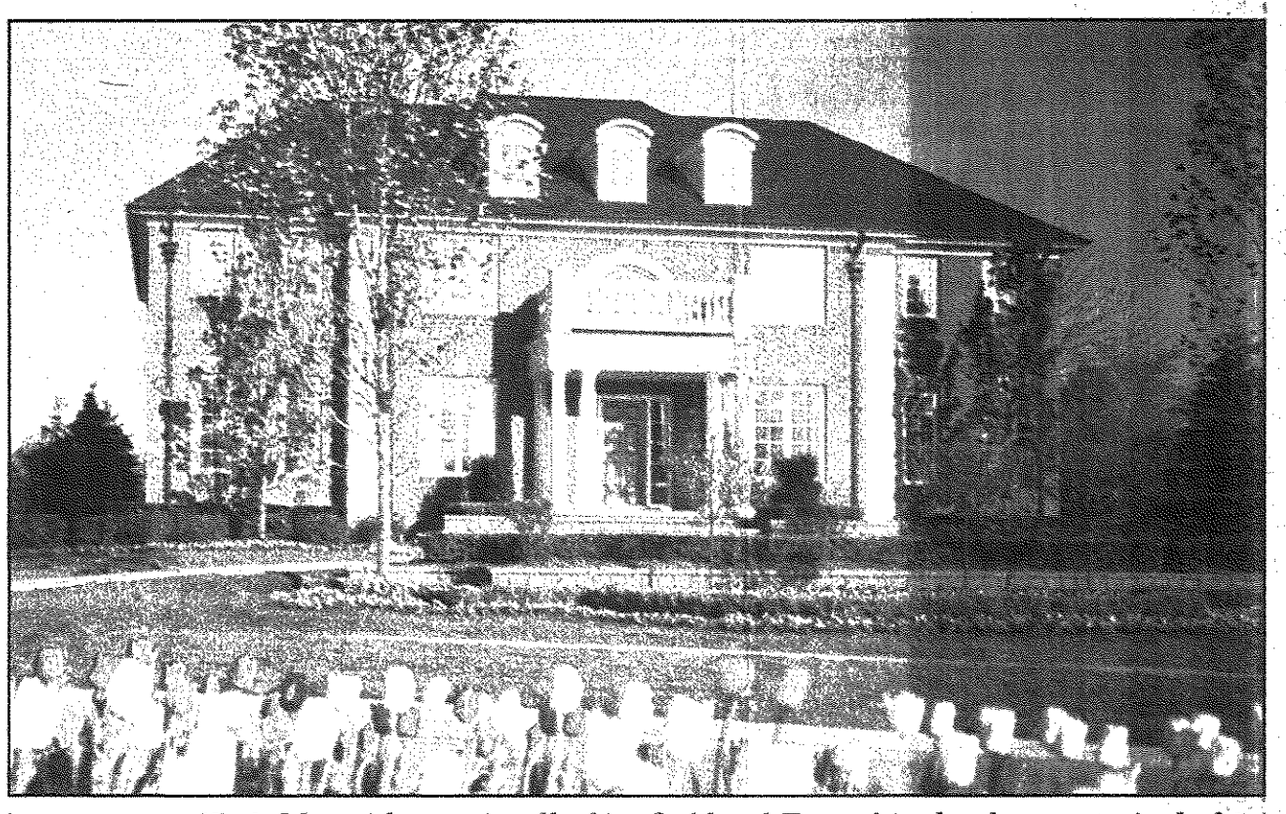

And that's a big draw – "quality, reputation of the builder/developer and being on the Billion Dollar Mile (the projected aggregate value of homes along that stretch of Adams) ," said Joseph Vitale, sales representative.

"This is a natural move-up for people on the Adams Road corridor," said Frank Moceri. "People who have the notion they can't afford this don't realize how affordable we are."

Base prices range from $650,000 for a story-and-a-half of 3,602 square feet to $700,000 for a colonial of 4,064 square feet.

Four floor plans – all with four bedrooms, three full baths and two half baths – are available.

"Some people want to add a room, a fireplace, a closet," Moceri said. "We have the ability to do that as custom builders."

Luxury personified: Moceri homes in all of its Oakland Township developments, including Kirklands, feature many amenities.

Impressive

Visitors like what they see, said Elaine M. Pierce, sales rep.

"They're impressed with the quality of workmanship, molding, floor plans. People are familiar with the Moceri name. They expect quality and get it.

"Something in every house appeals to everybody," Pierce added. "It's custom features that sell these homes.

"They love the way (the (Oaklands) communities are put together," she said. "Fountains, flowers and stone work sets the stage for the houses."

Other factors recommend Kirklands.

"The site, itself, has three cul-de-sacs," Moceri said. "We have walk-out sites, sites that back up to ponds. A bike path connects all the (Oaklands) communities. There's walking paths, nature preserves, bridges."

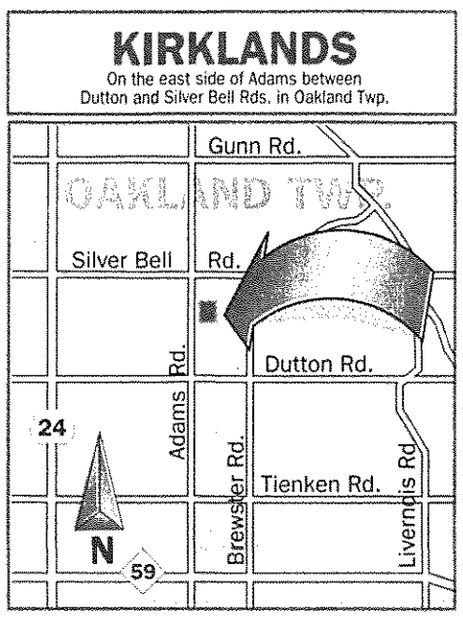

"Rochester schools are very highly regarded," Vitale said.

"Private schools are close by, too," Moceri said. "Notre Dame Prep and Marist Academy are 5-7 miles away and we're not too far from Oakland Christian."

Oakland University, Meadowbrook Theater, the Palace of Auburn Hills and Great Lakes Crossing also are fairly close, he added.

A three-car garage, basement, first-floor laundry, fireplace and air conditioning are included at base price in all four plans.

KIRKLANDS
On the east side of Adams between Dutton and Silver Bell Rds. in Oakland Twp.

So, too, are energy-efficient furnace and water heater, Nelson energy seal package and a 30-year warranty on basement leakage.

Wood flooring is in the foyer, hallway, half baths and kitchen/nook, ceramic in the full baths and laundry.

An oven, cooktop, microwave and dishwasher are included in the kitchen. A separate jet tub and shower are in the master.

Brick and wood, cement or shake siding are primary exterior materials.

Features

The model, the Britanny, is a colonial of 3,756 square feet. It features a traditional style with library, living room, dining room, kitchen/nook with island and family room with two-story ceiling.

Loft opens door to all kinds of possibilities

The Conqueror (409-21) has a versatile, unique layout.

This home could be built on flat land with a regular basement or on a back-sloping lot with a walk-out basement.

The exterior is contemporary and has a loft room that sits above the main roofline, adding a great look to this 2,139-square-foot home.

Advancing through the covered porch, the entry double doors open into a small foyer. To the right is the master suite set off by itself.

Stairs, one going up to the loft, the other down to the basement are conveniently tucked out of the way.

The master suite has large windows on two sides and sliding patio doors facing the rear. The master bath has an oversized shower, dual sinks and a large walk-in closet.

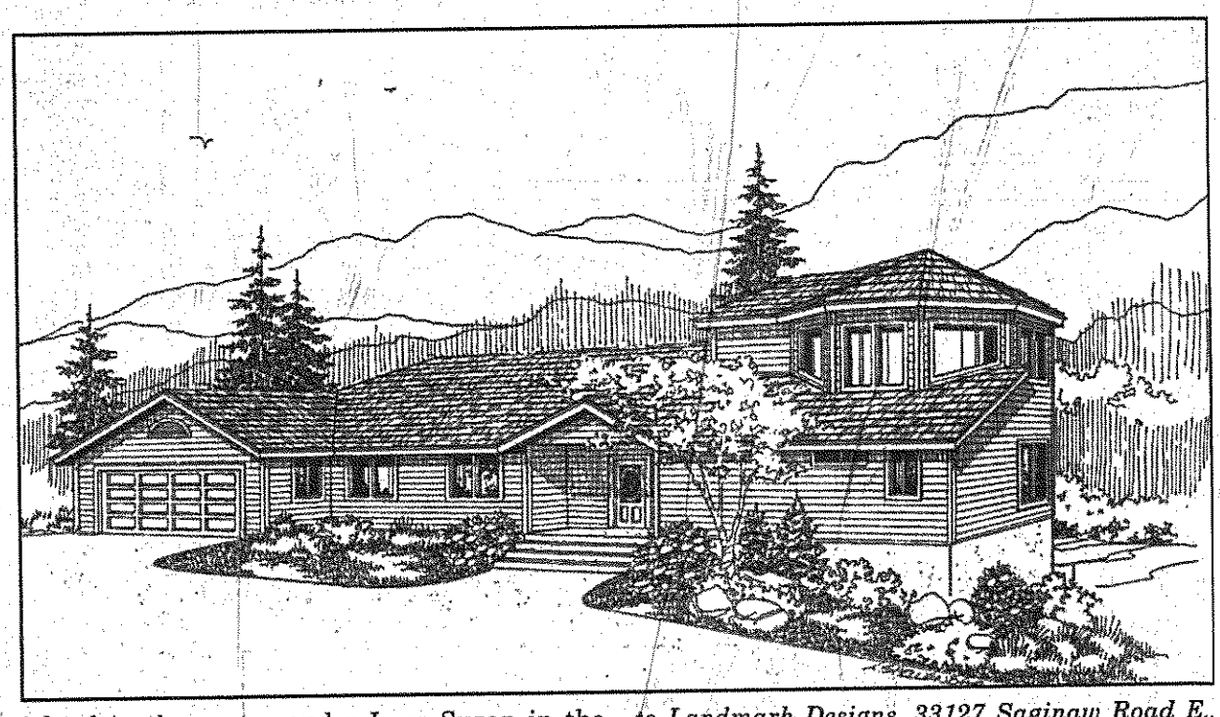

The loft is vaulted and could be used for an office, sewing room, den or library. It would be great to use as a computer room or study area for the kids, as it is easily accessible from the main part of the home.

Two other bedrooms and a second full bath are to the left of the entry. A large linen closet and walk-in storage closet are just outside the bath.

The living and dining rooms form a large great room, completely open and spacious. There is a wood stove in the corner of the vaulted room with three patio doors, side-by-side, opening to the rear of the home.

If this were a walk-out basement, a deck over the basement could be formed. A deck to the back yard if the basement is underground would make these three doors invaluable.

The left rear corner of the Conqueror is dedicated to the kitchen and nook. The L-shaped kitchen has a large window over the sink, an island in the center and a Lazy Suzan in the corner. Across from the sink is a large wall pantry. The nook has three big windows to provide natural light. There is a door opening to the side yard. The utility between the nook and two-car garage has a sink and folding table.

For a study plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations and an artist rendering, send $24.95 to Landmark Designs, 33127 Saginaw Road E., Cottage Grove, OR 97424. Please specify plan name (Conqueror) and the number (409-21).

A catalog featuring hundreds of home plans is available for $12.95, or save by ordering both for $29.95. For faster processing, call (800) 562-1151 or visit the Web site at www.landmarkdesigns.com garage and laundry.

A dual staircase leads upstairs where a loft overlooks the family room.

Two bedrooms share one jack-and-jill bath, while another jack-and-jill bath layout is between the third bedroom and the upstairs hall for access from the loft.

The master with pan ceiling contains a couple of walk-in closets, two-sink vanity and compartmentalized toilet.

Base price of the Brittany is $665,000. The model, with upgrades, recently sold for $725,000.

"One of the keys to our business is spec homes and getting ready for quick occupancy," Moceri said. "We want to have one model of each (plan) for people to see."

Kirklands is serviced by Oakland County well water and sewers. Sidewalks are along the main interior road.

The property tax rate is $27.27 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of $700,000 home there would pay about $9,550 the first year.

The annual association fee is $1,000.

Moceri is building a home in Kirklands for Guido and Mary Kay Dinverno and their sons, Bryan and Jeff.

"It's just first class – that's the feeling you get," Guido said. "Attention to detail and quality of craftsmanship pretty much sold us. They worked with us from day one getting issues resolved."

The sales model/office at Kirklands, (248) 601-4595, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily.

When older parents join household

FROM HOME SERVICE STORE FOR AP WEEKLY FEATURES

Elderly parents sometimes move into that new home as permanent guests.

When that kind of reverse relocation happens, adult children become part-time caregivers, landlords and companions as well as full-time children.

It's not an easy situation, but it can be dealt with.

According to a firm that oversees remodeling projects necessary to ready homes for live-in parents, adult children can undertake a number of projects to provide a safe and secure environment while assuring the least interruption to family life.

Think safety first.

- Install exterior handrails to all steps into the home. This includes front and back doors, and garage entries. In some cases you might want railings on both sides of steps.
- Install bright exterior lights above all entryways.
- Make certain interior stairs are well-lighted.
- Non-skid steps reduce the chance for slippage. Low-cost adhesive strips are available.
- Carpet interior stairs and hallways.
- Place emergency numbers near a phone installed in the parents room.
- Fire and carbon dioxide alarms should be in working order.
- Railings are a good idea in showers, bathtubs and along walls.
- Install bathroom rugs with rubberized bottoms. They lessen falls.
- Place non-skid strips in tubs and showers.
- Add lamps to the parents' room for extra light, but keep cords out of the way.
- If possible, locate parent rooms on the first floor to minimize use of stairs.

Family dynamics are a significant issue. The schedules of you and your children will differ markedly from those of your parents. Consider adapting your parents' quarters to allow them as much privacy as possible.

Family dynamics are a significant issue. The schedules of you and your children will differ markedly from those of your parents. Consider adapting your parents' quarters to allow them as much privacy as possible.

A small bathroom, television set, telephone and even small refrigerators offer parents a semblance of self-reliance without excluding them from family life.

Of course, every home has unique challenges as it is readied for aging parents. Visit with local contractors for advice on heating and cooling spare rooms, insulating rooms against noise and other ideas you might not think about.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"THE TWO BEDROOM HOME"

Have you considered buying a two bedroom home? In the past, two bedrooms were not very popular nor considered a good financial investment. This is not the case today. A two bedroom has much greater demand than ever before. Here are some of the reasons:

More Single Homeowners

There has been a significant trend toward increased home ownership by single people. As we all know, it is more difficult to save money. Yet, home ownership provides one of the few tax shelters that remain. Coupled with the natural inflation in home values, more and more single people are turning to home ownership. Of course, a two bedroom home is usually adequate for the needs of most single buyers.

Single Parents

As single parents become an increasing percentage of our population, they too drive the demand for two bedrooms. This increase in demand drives the prices of two bedroom homes higher as well as the price of condominiums. Remember, real estate values always reflect only one factor, demand.

The Elderly

As people are living longer, they are remaining in their two bedroom homes, thus shrinking the number of two bedrooms available. With a shrinking supply and increasing demand, it doesn't take a great mathematician to understand why two bedroom homes have become a player.

ADVICE

If you are in the market to buy your next home, and you don't need more than two bedrooms, you may want to consider a two bedroom home as a good choice and a good investment.

Banking jobs making a comeback in state

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

The next 12 months should be better than the last couple of years for people looking for jobs in banking and finance, according to local analysts.

The need for bank employees in metropolitan Detroit rose at nearly one-fifth the rate of other industries. The experts point to three major reasons, which include the purchases of local banks by out of state companies, increased technology and Michigan tax laws.

From 1991 to 2000 there was a 3.9 percent increase in the numbers of people employed in finance and banking in the Detroit metropolitan area that includes Wayne, Oakland, Monroe, Macomb, St. Clair and Lapeer counties, according to Jim Rhein, Michigan Department of Career Development labor market analyst.

However, in Michigan overall, there was a 7 percent increase in banking and finance during that same time period. The state has nearly double the employment in banking and finance compared to metropolitan Detroit, because Grand Rapids and communities on the west side of the state have seen an increase in bank jobs dealing with loans as a result of residential growth in those areas, according to David Littmann, senior vice-president and chief economist of Comerica Bank.

Nationally, Michigan is lagging in terms of employment growth, because it isn't known to offer comparatively low tax rates for businesses looking to build or relocate, Littmann said.

"It's not often the first choice for corporations looking to expand," Littmann said. "We used to offset things, like weather and being off the beaten track, by having no income tax to give businesses a chance to compete effectively. We're above average for state tax."

Slow growth

The banking and finance industries have grown at a much slower rate than in other occupational fields.

Total employment for the Detroit metropolitan area increased 19.5 percent from 1991 to 2000. Littmann explained that the increase was largely driven by the auto industry and its suppliers during a time when auto sales broke all time records.

From 2000 to 2001 the employment rate in banking and finance was flat with no significant increase or decline. The stable figure is significant, however, considering that from 2000 to 2001 there was a 1 percent decrease in overall employment.

"Obviously 2000 to 2001 was a fairly poor year for wage and salary employment, while there was fairly strong growth from 1991 to 2000," Rhein said. "In the banking category you're seeing less growth, but on a good note, with the downturn during the recession, the banking industry stayed flat and you didn't see the decrease. There was no change as opposed to the state decreasing in wage and salary slightly."

Acquisitions

The lower growth rate in finance and banking in the metropolitan area was also caused by acquisitions of local banks by out of state banks, Littmann said. These purchases led to cost cutting rounds that trimmed most departments, but significantly in accounting areas, lending functions and data processing to eliminate redundancies.

The local banks that were bought out, however, caused an increase in employment for cities, like Chicago, Raleigh and New York, which are the headquarters for many of the purchasing companies.

"The winners were headquartered elsewhere," Littmann said. "Those cities gained considerably, especially in management employment."

Also, the recession locally affects the financial institutions that are forced to trim staff to correspond to the reduced growth rates of loans and other assets in order to maintain efficiency, Littmann added.

Meanwhile, Comerica, the largest bank with headquarters in Michigan, has expanded. Comerica has made considerable bank acquisitions in California and is the fourth largest bank in that state. These purchases in California have also caused more activity at the Comerica headquarters in Detroit, said Littmann adding that the future employment status in the banking and finance industries will improve, but will come at a slow pace.

"I suspect as the economy recovers we will see a 2 percent growth in employment statewide in banking," he explained. "I know we'll be expanding in employment, but I don't know how much. It reflects the growth in the economy. Economic growth, nationally, will be 2.4 percent and the banks should be picking up on that."

Some of the decline in the banking and finance employment can be attributed to a relaxation in interstate banking restrictions in 1994, according to Anjan Thakor, University of Michigan Edward J. Frey, professor of banking and finance and chairperson of the finance department at the U-M business school.

"Now we can have out of state banks acquiring local banks," Thakor said. "The other reason is that financial services in general have been consolidating around the globe."

Increased technology has also lowered the need for employees, he added.

"More and more banks are cutting back on how many tellers they have," Thakor said. "They're going to ATMs and remote banking and they need fewer people."

The Easter Bunny just got cuter, because of your child!

There is an old advertising saying that claims Babies and Puppies are the two cutest things imaginable. We at The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers disagree. We feel that Babies and BUNNIES are much cuter!

Send in a picture of your infant with the Easter Bunny, and a short message to the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. We will put the picture and your message in all of our 16 papers throughout Wayne and Oakland Counties. If you don't have a picture of your child with the Easter bunny, another picture will do. We would still like to see their smiling faces in the paper for this special holiday.

KELLY age 5
You make being a Grandparent fun! Have a special Easter and don't eat too many jelly beans!
Love Grandma & Grandpa

The cost is $25 for a 1x2

Or $50 for a 2x2
(4.25 inches x 2 inches)

So, just send in that picture and don't forget to place your special message next to the picture.

The deadline for this promotion will be on Wednesday, March 27th at 6:00 p.m. The actual run date will be on Easter Sunday, March 31st. You will be able to see the children on Easter Sunday in one of our editorial sections.

Samson is an eleven-month-old Rottweiler male with plenty of energy and strength. Due to breed and size, he is recommended for a home with children at least twelve years old. Although he is good and friendly dog, it is important to know that time will be needed in order to get him adapted to your home. He will need some obedience training and he will also need regular exercise and playtime to stay in good health. Please be aware of the time and energy needed to make Samson a part of your home. He's not the kind of dog you can just put in the yard to entertain himself. He will need lots of attention & love and in return he will be a pet that you will cherish!

To bring Samson into your life, visit the Michigan Humane Society Westland Shelter, (734) 721-7300

If your message isn't in front of the people who are ready to buy, it's like trying to run a dealership without cars on the lot

What's the best way to reach the people who are ready to buy what you have to sell?

Our network of newspapers:

■ When, without prompting, more than eight in 10 adults choose newspapers as their primary source of local shopping information…

■ When more than three in four adults agree that newspapers are their "most useful" source of shopping information…

■ When more than six in 10 adults say they look at newspaper advertisements before they shop…

■ When we reach more homes in our hometowns combined than any other newspaper

…it's time for you to make us a big part of your advertising strategy.

We're a whole lot closer to home.

Tree-lined streets. Lawn sprinklers making rainbows in the late afternoon sun. The community gathered for its annual festival. Cheering for the home team as they make the winning touchdown. Calls of neighborhood kids playing until dark. The guy next door who quietly shovels your walk. Taking the kids for ice cream.

Hometown.

Our hometown classifieds bring people together in another special way. They're there when you're looking for a bargain. And they're there when you want to sell something you no longer need.
