Condo conversion presents attractive appearance

Savannah Court, an apartment-to-condo conversion, offers buyers a renovated twobedroom townhome with basement and access to an outdoor swimming pool on well-landscaped grounds in the heart of Farmington Hills.

The residences, off 12 Mile Road between Orchard Lake and Farmington roads, formerly were known as Williamsburg Townhomes, built in 1970.

Premier Communities will refurbish 47 two-bedroom units, half with 1,150 square feet and 1/2 bathrooms (base price $163,990), half with 1,300 square feet and 21/2 bathrooms ($179,990.)

The condos are clustered together four to nine units in seven buildings. All have private

"The community has everything within walking distance shopping, post office, library," said Steve Carson, Premier president.

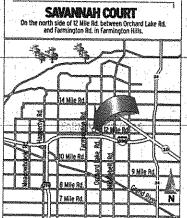

"If you combine the size of the condo with the character of the community, its location and its value, I think it's absolutely one of the best opportunities for an entry-level homebuyer or even a family," he said. "We wanted to make it look like a quaint community in the middle of everything at an affordable price.

Jim Morse, sales representative at Savannah Court, shows prospective purchasers around.

"Some come in thinking this is new construction, it's so fresh inside and out," he said. "They will build equity here where they won't in an apartment."

Who's looking? "Young couples coming out of apartments, single moms. female professionals, young professional men as well," Morse said. "They like the lifestyle. They can lock the door and

Large, elegant ranch contains formal spaces

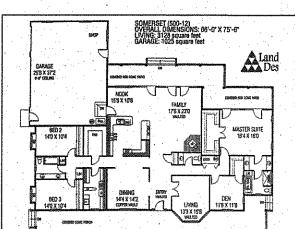

Looking for an elegant and classic rambler with a wrap-around porch? The Somerset, a ranch of 3,128 square feet, has those features and many more.

It has a large, three-car garage. There are two covered porches/decks with pillars and railings. The roof lines complement the rest of the home and provide good street appeal.

The vaulted entry is centered between the living room and the dining room. French doors separate the living room from the rest of the rooms. Bay windows add to the luminescence of this vaulted room.

A den/bedroom with a full walk-in closet is adjacent to the living room.

The master suite is on the right side of the home. It has doors that open onto a rear deck, a huge walk-in closet, separate spa tub and oversized shower plus his-and-her

The vaulted family room also contains a wood stove and three sets of doors that open to the rear deck. A nook with windows is so full of light that having morning coffee there would make the day shine.

Two L-shaped counters form the kitchen. The outside counter has an > eating bar that backs to the family room. The dishwasher and sink face the nook and allow people to interact during meal preparation and clean-up. Two bedrooms with a full bath in between make up the left side of the home. Each room has its own window seat and a long wall closet.

A large pantry is between these bedrooms and the kitchen. The laundry with counters, cabinets and built-in ironing board is opposite the pantry.

The entire home is designed for entertaining in a formal way with a large touch of informality and convenience. It has many extras and unique touches.

Simple is as simple does with treehouse living

(AP) — With a chain saw, a rope and a hatchet, Tony Detmer built his dream house — suspended 20 feet up, in a stand of Douglas fir and cedar.

Detmer, 31, often starts his day with a headfirst dive into the snow below. In the deep chill of a mountain morning, he said, the jolt is better than a cup of coffee. "There's something about being off of the ground," he said. "I feel lofty. I want to fly. This is the closest I can Detmer knew 3 1/2 years ago that he'd found a home when he spotted the patch of trees near Stevens Pass in the Cascade Range east of Seattle, Wash.

Down a slope, the stand parted perfectly. Perhaps much like wooded property up north in Michigan.

Detmer began working on the treehouse in the fall of 1999. The deck went up first. Then straps were wrapped around several trees to hold up other parts of the house.

The whole thing cost less than $2,000, most of which went for a 3,000-watt generator to run a saw and a television.

"I never used a level; it's all by eyeball," he said.

The three-story treehouse sleeps three. Detmer's girlfriend, Betsy Delph, 23, and another roommate, Brett Hoisington, 19, also live

There's a wood-burning stove and a deck with a rope swing. Detmer owns the 3.5-acre plot with a college friend who has a cabin on the other side of the property. When snow hit the first year, Detmer barely had enough time to get a roof up. He hung a bed from rafters and fell asleep to the sound of a nearby stream and trucks' engines as they climbed Stevens Pass.

"I don't want to be like the masses," said Detmer, who spent most of his youth in Ohio before his family moved to Missouri and later Washington.

In 4 1/2 years at the University of Washington, Detmer studied architecture, engineering, business, geology and psychology. But college wasn't his thing, he said, so he quit.

He worked construction, traveled and found a job as lift operator, and now as an instructor, at Stevens Pass Ski Area.

Inside the treehouse, the aroma of freshly cut tree limbs and wood smoke lingers. Dozens of candles line the windows, and packages of pasta are stacked on shelves.

Here, at an elevation of 3,600 feet, winter storms pound the mountains every year. When the tree tops dance in fierce winds, the treehouse sways back and forth and moans. Last February, 10 feet of snow fell in about a week.

Detmer sleeps on the third floor. The only way to get there is by climbing over a couch, up a wall and through a small, square

There's a propane light and a stove where most of the cooking is done. Marshmallows, bread and canned food spill out of a two-door cupboard.

There's the television and a VCR, powered by the generator.

Detmer's roommates moved in about a year ago. During the ski season, all three work at Stevens Pass Ski Area. In the summer, Hoisington and Detmer work at Kahler Glen Golf Course.

Living in the wild takes patience, Detmer said. There are no bathrooms. Showers come once a week at ski area facilities.

"The main thing is we're living by example, Hoisington said. "It's just simple living. You don't need all that chaos."

This isn't Detmer's first treehouse, and it won't be the last, he said.

The first one he built as a boy in Ohio — two platforms and a firefighter's pole. When he got older, he added rope swings.

His vision is a worldwide community of treehouses. In the meantime, he wants to build a village in the trees, and have rope swings connecting them all.

"I've pretty much been a monkey all my life," he said. "This is what makes me happy."

Owning a home out of many Californians' reach

BY JIM WASSERMAN AND SANDRA MARQUEZ ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITERS

Low mortgage rates have triggered a home-buying binge that's grabbing headlines and remaking neighborhoods. Yet millions of Californians remain locked out of the American dream of homeownership, stymied by endlessly climbing prices or unwilling to commute hours to homes they can afford.

The Golden State has the nation's fourth-lowest rate of homeownership, some of its highest prices, and a combination of forces that seem certain to make the problem worse rather than better in the coming decades.

The victims cover the spectrum of Californians: poor immigrants and thirtysomething professionals, recent college graduates and blue-collar working families. While Californians who already own are building equity, those on the outside wonder if they'll ever get in.

Tammie Gibson, a single mom and child of Dust Bowl migrants to the Central Valley, feels she's letting her own three children down because that first home stays stubbornly out of reach.

She lined up a loan through a nonprofit group to buy the older, 3-bedroom house she now rents in Atwater. Then she watched the price climb from $89,000 to an unaffordable $123,000 when plans for a college campus in nearby Merced lit a fire under property values.

Gibson, working a second job and still in the market, wants "something that I can pass down to them. That's important to me. I don't want to think I worked all my life and didn't have anything to show for it."

The price that's out of reach in Merced would seem modest to most househunters in the San Francisco or Los Angeles suburbs, where prices for similar homes can be hundreds of thousands more. As for the desirable neighborhoods in big cities and along the coast, for-

The median price of a home in California - the point at which half the houses cost more and half costs less - was $338,110 in December. That's up 20 percent in just the last year, and up from $189,990 just five years before, according to the California Association of Realtors, which tracks sales of existing homes.

The state has three of the nation's five most expensive housing markets, according to the group: San Francisco (1), Orange County (2) and San Diego (4).

Just over 58 percent of Californians live in homes they own, according to a 2002 Census survey. That's well below the national rate of 68 percent and behind every state except Hawaii, New York and the District of Columbia.

California may be, for the first time, breaking a hopeful tradition that hard work and ambition leads to homeownership, stability and upward mobility.

"Earlier waves of migrants to California - from the homesteaders to the Depression-era

Can I qualify for a mortgage? How much home can I afford?

Dust Bowl refugees, to the post-World War II generation all found a California that could reward their hard work with the prospect of buying a home," write Joel Kotkin and Thomas Tseng in their 2002 Pepperdine University study, "Rewarding Ambition.' They say Hispanic immigrants, who face greatly inflated prices with less schooling and low wages, are the first broad group, through no fault of their own, to suffer the closing of that dream.

Fewer than one-third of immigrant Hispanics own a home, compared to two-thirds of native-born Hispanics. At least half the state's middleclass Hispanic households are tapping three, not two, incomes to pay the mortgage, according to University of Southern California demographer Dowell Myers.

If current trends continue, housing prices could drive out much of the state's middle class, leaving a society polarized into housing haves and havenots, say Myers and other .

The imbalance between supply and demand results from a host of forces that hold back construction.

Prime real estate near the job centers in the big cities is largely built out, and a confusion of laws scares builders away from old industrial sites that might otherwise be redeveloped into homes. Desirable land near the coast gets harder and more expensive to develop as existing residents fight development that would affect their quality Less obvious forces also are at work. Since Proposition 13 limits local governments' ability to tax property, many jurisdictions work instead to attract commercial development and the sales taxes it brings to government coffers.

Condominiums - traditionally the first step into homeownership - have been avoided by developers through the '90s because of big payouts in lawsuits over alleged construction defects. The Legislature took a first step to remedy the problem last year, but the law hasn't had an impact yet.

Apartments also are in short supply, driving up rents and draining the savings of those at the bottom of the economic ladder. That puts that first down payment even farther out of reach.

As grim as this equation looks for first-time buyers, the out-of-whack market benefits the millions of Californians who already own homes. Half a million homes sold in the state last year, up 12 percent from the year before.

For every frustrated renter, there's a homeowner who's able to sell and trade up, or cash in to pay for college or a retirement home in a cheaper state.

Insulate closet space to attic addition

BY MORRIS AND JAMES CAREY FOR AP WEEKLY FEATURES

Henry asks: My remodeling contractor didn't insulate the closet space to the attic addition. I assume he wanted to cut costs, and he figured the air in the closet space would be its own insulation for the main attic room. However, I cannot store plastics or aerosols or sensitive equipment in there due to the extreme temperature. Also, there is no access to the other side of the closet walls in the roof area. Can inside of the closet wall?

We suggest you ask your remodeling contractor how he intends to resolve the uncomfortable state that he left you in.

If he is not available, we have a solution for you:

Cut a small access hole in the closet wall and fill the wall cavity with bat insulation. The recommended R-value for walls in attics is R-11, but we suggest R-30. The latter doesn't cost you tell me how I might insulate the much more than R-11, but the resultant insulation value is amazing.

Use craft-backed insulation the kind with paper backing is best. Place the papered side toward the inside of the home. This will help reduce condensation at the interior side of the wall. Also, consider leaving the hole for the insulation work for future access to the attic. When cutting the access hole be careful to make perfectly horizontal cuts (a razor knife works well) at the center point of two adjacent wall studs. Horizontal cuts, making up the last two sides of the opening, can be backed with solid wood blocks and used in conjunction with the half-exposed wall studs to create a solid base to hold the previously removed wall board. If you are careful not to damage the piece of wallboard during removal, you can use four screws to replace it, saving the cost of purchasing new wall board.

Do some thorough research before buying any appliances

Q: Margaret asks: We are planning to remodel our kitchen and will need all new appliances. There are models. Is there any simple way that I can make comparisons?

A: Since appliances are among the most important components of your kitchen, we would suglook at the type you want and what you're willing to pay.

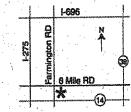

You can get a basic electric cooktop for about $300 or you can spend $750 for a top-ofwill work well in your new configuration, and the ease of use associated with the appliance and its placement. Many major appliance dealers have displays and floor models that permit you to closely

Subaru SUV gets makeover for 2003

Advertising Feature

CARebori

BY ANNE FRACASSA AVANTI NEWS FEATURES

Anne Fracassa

This is already the second makeover for the Subara Forester SUV, and believe me, everything is new -- except one thing. The tried and true All-Wheel-Drive powertrain that makes everything about this Subara fun to drive and leaves you with no worries, no matter what kind of weather you'll encounter.

The best thing about the makeover is that the 2003 Forester now boasts a lot more standard equipment, which means added value for you.

The Forester is part of the auto industry's new movement into what is called "crossover vehicles." It blends the creature comforts of a passenger vehicle with the versatility and people-carrying abilities of a minivan, while providing the attributes of a sports utility vehicle.

The best of all worlds, right? You might say so. But Subaru has always been known as the passenger car with all-wheel drive. That's precisely what put the company on the map here in the states -- affordable all-wheel-drive in a passenger car.

Not since the AMC Eagle graced our roads had that been possible, I think (memory's a little fuzzy here - I was a kid back then).

What Subaru has done here is created a vehicle that allowed it to win the prestigious "highest possible rating" for crashworthiness in a 40-mph frontal offset crash test. But then again, previous Foresters had done the same. There's something to say about "safety first."

Especially when you have precious cargo in the cabin. There are three distinct models of the Forester to choose from, depending on your needs and your pocketbook. There's the 2.5 X, 2.5 XS and 2.5 XS with an optional premium package that gives you a power moonroof and leather-trimmed upholstery.

All Foresters are powered by a 2.5-liter four-cylinder "boxer" engine that promises and delivers 165 horses. Allare equipped with all-wheel-drive. Standard transmission is a five-speed manual, but a four-speed electronic automatic is an option. By the way, the five-speed manual is outfitted with Subaru's own Hill Holder clutch, which aids you starting off on an incline easier and safer.

2003 Subaru Forester: Vehicle class: Special purpose SUV 4WD; Power: 2.5-liter 4-cylinder boxer engine; Mileage: 21 city/26 highway; Where built: Japan; Price as tested: $25,970.

Enough about the power stuff. Take a look at the way it sits on the road. The design is bold, sporty, aggressive and pretty in the same breath. The aggressive front design, including the larger-than-life bumper and cool foglights, give it the look of "get out of my way

The rear treatment lends itself to curves and lines that are not harsh, but not soft, either. The thing that's so surprising is that looking at it at street level, it looks small.

Nothing is further from the truth. The interior is roomy and comfortable. This is, by no means, a cargo hauler. It is, however, adequate for almost any family on the go. Roof rails are also standard equipment for that extra cargo you may have.

Here in Michigan, we are at the stage of winter where you no longer can judge the ride or suspension of a vehicle. Every road is so bad from potholes to asphalt patching for broken water mains that judging is a moot point. Even our side streets are heaved everywhere because of the bitter cold we've experienced this winter.

So, although Forester was one of the first sport utilities to ride on four-wheel independent suspension that normally gives it a car-like ride, I frankly can't tell anymore. Sorry. Talking about handling is even a stretch because you're constantly dodging chunks of cement in the road.

In a few weeks, I'll take a few up north where they know how to take care of their roads and I'll be better able to comment.

We touched on safety for a second. well, Forester has a four-channel, four-sensor anti-lock braking system that's standard. There's also a new system on the 2.5 XS that greatly increases braking performance and stability.

There are, of course, dual airbags with dual-stage deployment and front seat head/chest side impact airbags, upper-trim head impact protection and frontseat active head restraints are now standard equipment.

Configuring the Forester to your individual needs is easier this year. The rear 60/40 split seat back comes down with a single touch of a lever, providing a flat, level floor. Cargo floor and seat backs are also carpeted for a cleaner look.

The center console provides a side storage compartment on the passenger side, a 12-volt outlet in the box and dual cup holders.

In the front doors, there are netted storage pockets and there are two more on the seat back of the XS model. In the front overhead console, you can hide two pairs of sunglasses. An invaluable tool was the illuminated ignition switch that activates after you enter the vehicle. Quick to find on the dark, starless night.

Suffice to say, I won't bore you with the seemingly endless list of standard equipment you'll get when you buy the Forester (but I will, if you email me). Let's just say it's extensive. I would have liked to see better mileage numbers out of this vehicle (21 mpg in the city and 26 mpg out on the highway).

The economy and value you'll receive with the Forester will knock your socks off. Go take a look.
