A restitution hearing will be program, meaning that he'll be set, probably in December, to determine how much money Hill actually owes the league. Hill, who is accused of embezzling about $169,000 from the league and using the money for gambling in Detroit area casinos, was convicted in October in a second trial. The first, a four-day trial in September, ended in a hung jury.

In imposing the sentence, Sullivan told Hill that he deserved to go to prison.

"But if I send you to prison, you're going to lose your job and then you won't be able to pay back the money you owe the league," Sullivan said. Hill briefly addressed the court and asked the judge to show leniency.

The three-month long police investigation began in November 2003, when Canton police received a tip that Hill might have been taking money meant for the baseball/softball association.

He was accused of writing checks to himself out of association funds and using the money for gambling. In the September circuit court trial, representatives of Greektown Casino and Casino Windsor testified that records showed Hill had lost money in their casinos in 2003.

After the September trial ended in a deadlocked jury, Hill was convicted in October after a three-day trial. That jury deliberated less than an hour before coming back with a guilty verdict.

Hair to help Local girl donates hair for sick children

BY KURT KUBAN STAFF WRITER

Kristine Lentz's first haircut in three years was a doozy. Sitting in an old barber's chair in Redford Friday, the Canton 10year-old sat by silently and watched as more than 11 inches of her beautiful brown locks were shorn off and carefully placed into a plastic bag.

It's not that Kristine necessarily wanted to see her hair cut off. She actually likes her hair just fine.

But she made the decision three years ago that she wanted to donate her hair to an organization called Locks for Love, a Floridabased nonprofit that aids financially disadvantaged children with medical hair loss. Since its inception in 1997, the group has provided custom-fitted hair prosthetics to more than 1,000 children, mostly suffering from an auto-immune condition called alopecia areata, which has no known cure. To make these special hairpieces, which must be hand-assembled, the group uses human hair, and relies on hair donations nearly as much as it does on the monetary kind. These donated locks arrive by the thousands in little plastic bags, with the vast majority coming from children.

Women were 'captains' for Palace fight night

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFE WRITER

Gayle Weast of Plymouth and Patti Cappuccitti of Canton Township are fanatical Detroit Pistons fans. Enough so that Weast (who has season tickets), Cappuccitti and a couple of other friends attend nearly 25 games a year at The Palace of Auburn Hills to cheer on their favorite team.

The four have become quite popular at The Palace, rooting on the Pistons while wearing jerseys and buttons and slapping ThunderStix to make noise.

In fact, Weast, Cappuccitti and their friend, Bobbie Kraica of Bloomfield Township, were honorary captains at Friday night's game against the Indiana Pacers, meeting at center court with Pistons players Ben Wallace and Chauncey Billups and the Pacers' Jermaine O'Neal and Austin Croshere before tipoff.

The Canton Police Department recently donated about 60 used winter coats, previously used by officers, to the Salvation Army in Plymouth.

The coats were made available because the Canton police recently switched uniforms from their traditional navy blue that were standard issue for many years to all black.

Canton Police Sqt. Todd Mutchler delivered the coats, all of which are in good condition, to the Salvation Army last week.

This is why Kristine found her-self at Cardinal's Barber Shop in Redford last week.

The Tonda Elementary student learned about Locks of Love three years ago from a classmate, who talked about it during show-andtell. Impressed, Kristine went home and decided to get her own hair cut, so she could send it to the group.

But it wasn't just a hastily made decision. She had added inspiration. Both of her grandmothers have died of cancer, and she saw

So you can imagine how disappointed she must have been when she learned several weeks later that the hair she sent was too short for the group to use. What she sent in was seven inches long, but Locks of Love needs a minimum of 10 inches because of the way the

"I guess we didn't do a very good job," said Weast, whose group was treated to seats four rows behind the Pistons' bench.

With just 45 seconds left in the game, and the Pistons down by 15 points, a melee began as a confrontation on the court resulted in Pacers' players charging into the stands and fighting with fans in what is being called a "basket brawl."

"We sat just one section over (from the fighting), so we were pretty close to it," Weast, 62, said. "Television couldn't show the drama as much as watching it in person.

We grabbed our purses and coats, but I told the girls not to head toward the floor . because that's where it will probably end up," she said, "which it did."

At 4-feet-10-and-a-half-inches, Cappuccitti, 57, had a hard time seeing what was happening when fans stood up as Indiana's Ron Artest and Stephen Jackson raced into the stands to fight fans.

"I looked at the monitor and saw they were in the stands and I said 'Oh, my God!'" said Cappuccitti. "You could see the people rushing to the floor and the police came. It was unbelievable, but I didn't feel scared."

Tree of Life attracts shoppers

Angela Hospice's annual Tree of Life opened Nov. 22 at Laurel Park Place in Livonia, marking the 17th year for this fund-raiser, which supports Angela Hospice's programs serving terminally ill children and adults.

The Tree of Life has become a holiday tradition for many mall shoppers and Angela Hospice supporters," said Sister Mary Giovanni, Angela Hospice President. "It is very moving for people when they see the ornaments for their

Tears, cheers mark new citizens

BY CAROL MARSHALL STAFF WRITER

They came from 53 countries, spent at least five years learning the customs, laws and language of the United States. And Friday morning, 251 people became Americans.

The new citizens and their family members and friends packed the gymnasium of Smith Middle School in Troy. Shaking off their jackets, still wet from the cold drizzle outside, they listened, cheered and even cried during the swearing-in ceremony.

"This is a really big day for us," said Connie Khoshi, of Warren. Her husband, Rafid, moved to the United States from Iraq seven years ago. They've been married for two vears, and through the ceremony, the couple's 7-month-old daughter, Ciel, smiled and squirmed and tugged at her mother's blouse.

"When he was notified that he passed his (citizenship) test, he felt like a weight had been lifted from his shoulders. He felt more like he had the right to be here as a citizen, rather than as someone who just has permission to work here," Khoshi said. "He knows it's important to have the rights and freedoms and responsibilities of being a citizen."

Just moments after taking her oath, Yan Jiang, of Canton, barely felt like a citizen, she said.

"I feel a little American, but I'm just starting to," she said. Jiang has lived in the United States since moving here from China in 1995.

"I wanted to be a citizen because this is just a great country. I gave it a lot of thought. It is a little hard to give up Chinese citizenship, but it's worth it," she said. "It's just a great country."

The ceremony gave American-born citizens a chance to think about their own heritage and what it means to be American, said

"I've been waiting for this my whole life," the man told Martone, who asked where he was from, assuming the new citizen would tell him he had come from Eastern Europe or the Soviet Union. Instead, the man told him he was from Toronto. "It made me think about how important my own citizenship is," Martone said. "Before that, I always thought of myself as an Italian-American. # 2 plead guilty to income tax fraud

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A former Westland resident and her niece, formerly of Canton, have pleaded guilty to filing false tax returns totaling $61,000.

Linda Jean Taylor, 45, and niece Dwayna Allen, 27, admitted their involvement in a taxcheating scheme in which tax returns falsely listed dependents and bogus businesses, U.S. authorities said.

Taylor, now of Inkster, pleaded guilty to two counts of filing false and fictitious claims to the Internal Revenue Service. She also admitted her guilt in three counts of identity theft.

Allen, also now living in Inkster, pleaded guilty to three counts of aiding and abetting in the filing of false tax returns.

The women made their guilty pleas in front of U.S. District Judge Avern Cohn in Detroit, federal authorities announced last week.

On Monday, IRS criminal investigation spokesman Stephen Moore said federal authorities have recommended that Taylor receive 18-24 months in prison for her crimes and that Allen be given no more than a six-month term.

Their formal sentencings are pending.

According to court records, Taylor prepared 24 federal tax returns for 12 people that falsely listed dependents and nonexisting businesses during 1999 and 2000. Allen was accused of providing some of the information for the tax returns.

Taylor created fictitious cleaning services and child care businesses so that larger tax refunds could be obtained. Allen's former Canton address was used to receive refund checks.

(C) A3

When a check would come in, Allen would drive the taxpayer to a convenience store to cash it. Then, authorities said, she would collect a $1,000 fee for Taylor's preparation of fraudulent claims.

Taylor also was accused, without permission, of using the names and Social Security numbers of three people who had the same name as hers. She was accused of using the information to file false tax returns and to receive fraudulent refunds.

Taylor admitted signing and cashing those checks and keeping almost $7,000 in tax refunds for her own use. according to a joint statement from U.S. Attorney Craig S. Morford and IRS Acting Special Agent Sandi Carter.

"This investigation is an example of the havoc that an abusive return preparer can cause," Carter said. "When the IRS detects false returns, not only can the return preparer find themselves subject to criminal prosecutions, but the taxpayers can also be exposed to criminal actions, along with the responsibility to pay additional taxes with interest and penalties."

Residents: Developer left condominium project high and dry

BY JACK GLADDEN STAFF WRITER

A4

(C)

Residents of Creek Crossings, a small, 10-house site condominium project southwest of Haggerty and Cherry Hill roads, say they have been left ... well ... up a creek by the developer.

The problem, according to resident Randy Temple, is that the developer took off before the project was completed, leaving the street unfinished and a detention pond that is not being maintained.

The developer took off and left us high and dry," he said. "There's a four-inch drop-off on everyone's driveway. The sidewalk is unfinished. I've fallen twice. My dad has fallen."

Temple questions why the developer was not required to post bond money with the township in order to cover the cost of finishing the street in case he defaulted on the project

He claims the township has "washed their hands with us."

"If they're building in the township, why was there no money in escrow to make sure these roads were finished? Nobody from the township came out to make sure everything was completed," he said.

Township officials say the problem is more complicated than that.

Since the project was developed as a site condominium project rather that a subdivision, the road is private, meaning that it is not turned over to Wayne County once everything is complete.

The road, and the detention pond, become the responsibility of the homeowners associaition.

But Temple, who bought the ninth house in the development about four years ago, said the master deed called for a 10house homeowners association, which they could not form until the 10th house was completed. Although the 10th house was eventually built almost two years ago, the association was never formed.

"Ninety-nine point nine percent of what we want done is the roads," Temple said. "If somebody came though and fell, all 10 houses are liable. We can't get a snowplow down the road. They don't want to come down there. I'm at the point now I don't even want to live there."

TOWNSHIP'S HANDS TIED

Kris Sanders, Canton's neighborhood coordinator, says the township recognizes the problem, but their hands are pretty much tied due to the nature of the project.

She said she's been aware of the problem since at least November of 2000.

"I've talked with about half the homeowners," she said. "They didn't want to organize themselves to go after the developer. The court has done that through the condominium act with the state.'

She said the township has also been looking for the developer, Mark Freedman, but without success.

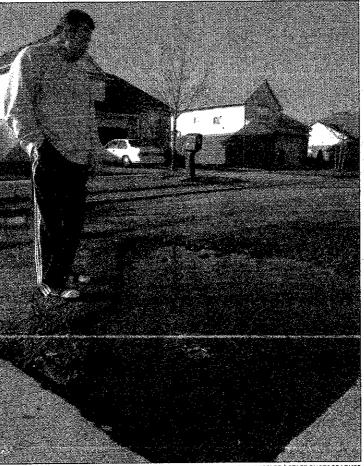

"Our attorney had a process server looking for him," she said. "But they couldn't find him."

As far as no bond money being put up by the developer, Sanders said that was not required at the time the project was started for private roads.

Charlie Mott, president of the homeowners advisory council, an organization of homeowners associations representatives, said because of situations like this, his group petitioned the township to require a bond for private road projects.

"Now they take money from the developer and hold it until a project is completed," he said.

"But in this case the township's hands are tied. There are certain things they can't do."

BILL BRESLER I STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Randy Temple is unhappy about the state of the road and other issues in his Canton neighborhood near Haggerty and Cherry Hill.

DEVELOPER DISAPPEARED

Canton Engineer Tom Casari said the township has been attempting to help out the residents but there is only so much they can do.

"We have pursued the developer for the last couple of years," he said. "We haven't been able to find him and get him into court. We're doing all we can do legally on our end."

Casari said as far as the detention pond is concerned, it is the responsibility of the homeowners (or the homeowners association) to maintain.

"We've done some minor work to sort of help them out," he said. "We've sent crews out to keep things working properly. But it's theirs to maintain."

Casari said as far as the developer is concerned, all the township could do, if they could find him, is to cite him for ordinance violations.

'That's a $500 fine," he said. "It hampers our ability to do anything."

Township Planner Jeff Goulet said the problem with the road was that originally there was not enough base put #### down.

The developer had to redo it," he said. "Once he sold the lots he was out of there. The problem is the road is deteriorating. Now it's going to cost more to repair it. If it had been done earlier it probably would only have cost them about $2,000 apiece."

Goulet said the homeowners felt that the township should have gone after the developer.

"We're trying to work with them," he said. "They should have gotten legal advice. They never collected dues for the association. They're supposed to collect dues and maintain enough money for maintenance of the road and a retention pond."

And therein appears to lie the problem.

Sanders said the developer never met with the homeowners to help them organize an association. He just left.

'We told them we'll work with you, but you guys need to organize yourselves," she said. "At some point in time, they're going to have to take responsibility for the site."

Gayle Weast of Plymouth, Bobbie Krajca of Bloomfield Township and Patti Cappuccitti of Canton were honorary captains at the Pistons' game Friday, shaking hands with Pistons Chauncey Billups and Ben Wallace before the game.

Weast, an astute fan, said the confrontation on the court between Ben Wallace and Ron Artest partially stemmed as a result of bad feelings from last year's playoffs. And, when Artest. laid down on the scorer's table with his legs crossed, Weast thought the Pacers player was taunting the fans.

"And when the cup was thrown on him by the fan, it was quite frightening the way he came up in the stands," Weast said. "He was totally out of control. I wouldn't have wanted to be in his way.

"And, as soon as Jackson came into the stands, it went from bad to worse," she said.

"Obviously, the fan was wrong, but Artest had no business going into the crowd," added Cappuccitti.

"The guy who threw the cup was a season ticket holder, so he should have known Artest was a nut case."

If the trio had been in their regular seats for the game, they would have been sitting near the opponent's entrance, where fans were throwing beer and debris at the Pacers as they left the court.

"A very small percentage, maybe 200, of them are idiots," said Weast. "They're not real Pistons fans. If they have season's tickets, they should have them taken away.

"There seems to be a different crowd this year, a lot of younger guys who seem to be drinking a lot," added Weast. "And then we thought about it. There's no hockey this year, so maybe those fans are coming to the Pistons games."

However, Weast and Cappuccitti said they aren't afraid of going back to the Palace to watch another game.

"I have never felt unsafe there, and I can't say I felt totally unsafe when this was going on," said Weast.

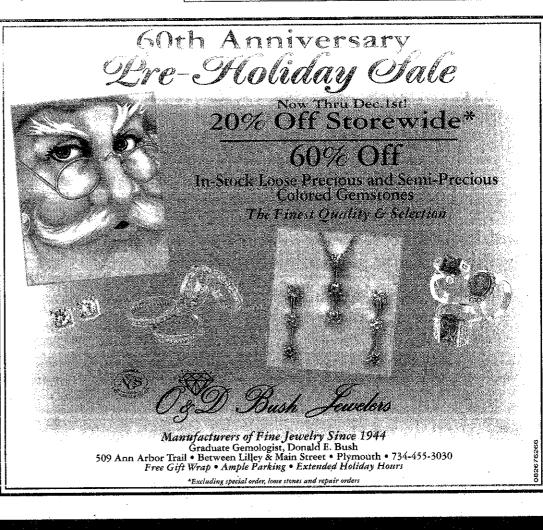

"Maybe if security stays at the level of that during the playoffs, it will be enough."

Cappuccitti, who went skydiving this summer, said, "I don't get afraid that easily.

"But, what makes me sad," said Cappuccitti, "is that it's nice to be able to get near the floor to see the players and the fans can get autographs, and that might be stopped."

Army kicks off kettle campaign

BY BRAD KADRICH STAFF WRITER

Despite the loss of one of its biggest supporters, the Plymouth Salvation Army kicked off its annual Red Kettle campaign with lots of music and a healthy dose of optimism that overcame even the rain Mother Nature dumped on the ceremony Friday.

Canton's Target store, like Target stores all over the country, won't be a kettle location this year, eliminating some $15,000 in kettle revenue collected there last year. Target's corporate officials decided this year to ban the Salvation Army from its storefront while enforcing corporate policy to prevent solicitation.

However, the new Michaels store in Canton and Parkside Gallery in Plymouth have stepped up to join some 25 kettle locations, leaving Kettle Campaign Coordinator Kelly Zmudzynski hopeful.

"You can't replace Target, because it was a favorite spot," she said. "I am optimistic the addition of Michaels, along with the tremendous support we get from everyone else, will allow us to meet our goal."

Last year's campaign drew some $158,000, but Zmudzynski said she left her 2004 goal at $140,000 in an effort to be conservative in the face of the loss of Target. The campaign also lost a popular Plymouth location when the Little Book Shoppe on the Park closed earlier this year, but Parkside Gallery owner

Maj. Kathy Hogg leads the crowd in a few holiday tunes during the Red Kettle Campaign kickoff Friday. Major Bill Hogg and Captain Curtis Windham add brass backup Kal Jabara immediately offered his store, at the hightraffic corner of Main and Ann Arbor Trail, to replace the bookstore.

In addition to the bellringers, there are two other ways for businesses to get involved in the campaign, which starts in earnest Monday and runs through Dec. 24:

Businesses can sponsor a kettle for a day for $100. The donation buys them a sign on the kettle at the location of their choice and is "a great way to support the community," Zmudzynski said.

Put up a counter kettle. These smaller versions of the regular kettles are small enough to place on countertops near cash registers. Zmudzynski said businesses can call her when these kettles fill and she'll get them replaced.

The campaign's 25 locations in Plymouth, Canton, Northville and Belleville are manned largely by bell ringers, 97 percent of whom are volunteers. Kettle locations are manned from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

"There is absolutely no way I could do this without my volunteers," Zmudzynski said. "We are absolutely blessed to have the volunteers we have.'

Symphony brings music to the children

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

It only took a few bars of music before the hands began waving like flags.

Most everyone in the audience knew what Antoine Hackney was playing on his viola. It may have sounded classical, but it was unmistakably Nickelodeon's Fairly Odd Parents.

And just as many hands shot up in the air with his second piece, the theme for the Powerpuff Girls.

"Wow, you guys are smart," Hackney said. "The coolest thing about playing music is that you don't always have to play the music the teacher tells you to. You can play what you want."

Hackney was part of a quartet of string and woodwind players from the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra who performed at Schweitzer Elementary School Thursday, one of 20 appearances the group made in Wayne-Westland 17 elementaries during the past 1 1/2 weeks.

Joining Hackney for the performances for thirdgraders were violinist Kathy Zuchniewicz, bassoonist Nina Flanigan and Susan Owen-Bissiri on the oboe.

While Zuchniewicz talked about the use of horse hair for the bow of her violin and led the group in a little of Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, Violinist Kathy Zuchniewicz demonstrates the sounds produced by drawing the horse hair bow over the strings.

Hackney was playing the Star Wars theme and telling students the violas "are right next to the cellos" in an orchestra. When not talking about their instruments, they were answering the students' questions. Questions like how large is an orchestra – 12 to 150 musicians – the purpose of the pegs on violins and violas – to regulate the sound of the string – and how long they practice.

"Thirty minutes day you play a few notes, if you want to be awesome," said Hackney. "But to make lots and lost of money you have to practice a lot. I practice six hours a day."

"Lots of times, they ask how long we've played and what the black thing (chin rest) is on the violin," Zuchniewicz said. "Sometimes they ask why

PARTNERSHIP

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra is collaborating with the Wayne-Westland Schools to bring the music enrichment program to elementary students. Organized by elementary music teacher Betsy Bartling and Cindy Swift, executive director of curriculum and staff development, it's being funded with several grants.

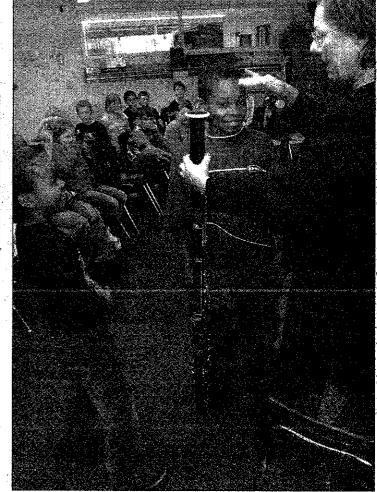

The program brings members of the orchestra to every elementary school in the district to talk about and demonstrate string, woodwind, brass and percussion instruments to third- and fourth-grade classes.

Members of the orchestra will visit the schools twice this year to talk to students about their instruments and how an orchestra works.

"There's a lot of connection to the academic program, it's not just a fun assembly," said Swift, who watched the per-comes from the cane fields of France.

"Because it's a short instrument, it has a higher pitch," she said. "The oboe tunes up the orchestra, so all the instruments have the same pitch as the oboe."

A high woodwind, the oboe plays melodies in the orchestra, she said, demonstrating with a staccato piece from the Nutcracker and a marcato, the Waltz of the Flowers.

'LOWEST VOICE'

The bassoon, however, is the "bass member of the woodwinds," Flanigan told the students. It has the lowest voice and can play a low E flat, its lowest key that can sound like a boat. And unlike the oboe, the bassoon has a double reed.

"I can play something smooth up high or short notes by tonguing the notes," she added.

Teacher Carol Osterling was excited about seeing the reeds, telling the performers how her students made their own reeds and sounds.

"They took straw and cut it and learned to use their lips to make sound," she said. "This is a wonderful experience that fits in with what the students have learned about pitch."

Youngsters also were treated to the sounds of Scott Joplin whose ragtime music was the foundation for jazz. The quartet played Joplin's Maple Leaf Rag, a catchy tune that had one student conducting the group from her seat.

"This has been a wonderful experience," said Zuchniewicz. "A lot of kids might not see a violin, if it were not for these programs. I've always wanted to try an organize a children's concert in the schools. We're very lucky to have the funding for this."

Swift had praise for the teachers who prepared the youngsters for the visit. She also hopes such visits will prick students' interest in instrumental music.

"Because we don't have instrumental music in the elementaries, but we do have it in the middle school, we hope we can build on this and have more transition."

Kiwanis sponsors sweat suit drive

The Kiwanis Breakfast Club of Plymouth-Canton is once again holding its annual Sweat Suit Drive. This is the seventh year of the event, which supports First Step, the Western Wayne County Project on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault.

We are pleased to once again sponsor this important program," said Dennis Heminger, chairman of the First Step Sweat Suit Drive. "Police will often confiscate clothing for use as evidence. This forces the victim to be discharged in nothing more than a hospital gown. The staff of First Step keep the sweat suits we collect in their cars, ready to give to victims when needed, filling an important physical, and emotional, need."

Donations of new sweat suits will be accepted throughout the months of December and January. All sizes and colors, including children's sizes are needed, since other members of a family may be affected by the assault.

"Since First Step services the entire Western-Wayne County area, we are looking for support from the entire community" Heminger said.

OUR VIEWS

When times are tough, we thank the helpers

With the war still raging in Iraq and U.S. troops still getting killed, with the economy in a wobbly mode at best, with jobs leaving Michigan at a staggering rate, it's time for our annual "What I'm Thankful For" editorial.

On the surface, that would appear to be a challenge. We talked to one secretary in a municipal office and asked her "What are you thankful for this year?" She thought for a minute and finally said, "I'm thankful to be here." After thinking about it a bit longer she added, "I'm happy to be healthy enough to have a job and be able to support myself."

That is a common sentiment among many people today. Just being healthy enough to have a job and keep afloat. But others aren't even that lucky. They're the ones who don't have jobs, who struggle to put food on the table, who have life-threatening illnesses, who can't begin to buy Christmas presents for their kids.

They appear to have little to be thankful for. That's where other people and organizations come in. And we're thankful for them.

The Salvation Army has already launched its annual Red Kettle fund-raising campaign in metro Detroit. And the Christian-based organization is already taking requests for the Christmas holidays.

In addition to that highly visible campaign, the Army also provides a variety of services for young people, the elderly and struggling families. At the Plymouth center alone, the organization assists about 600 families a year with various services. During the Christmas season, that number doubles.

And the Goodfellows organization has its "No Child Without a Christmas" campaign going strong. Each year, the Goodfellows provide food and Christmas presents for needy families in their local communities.

Last year in Canton, which is generally an affluent, growing suburb, the Goodfellows provided help to more than 500 families. This year, they already have more than 400 names on their list and the list continues to grow.

We're thankful for organizations like those.

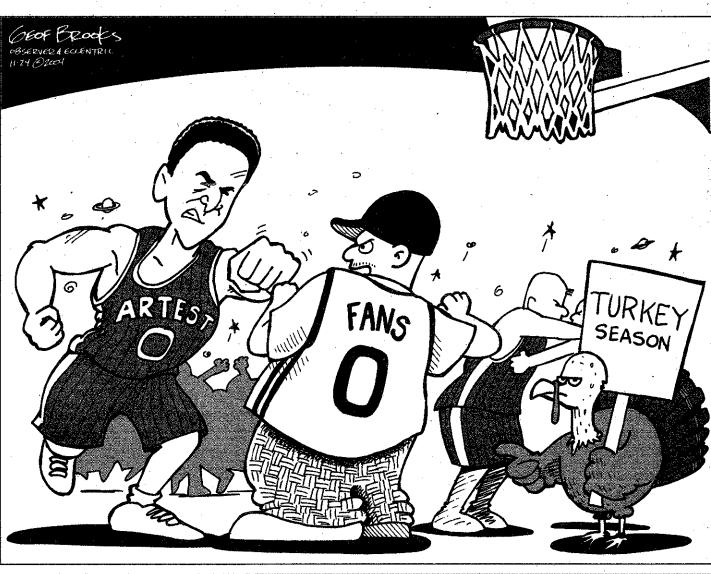

But other groups and individuals also deserve praise. When a 4-year-old Walled Lake girl who's been battling cancer for the last 15 months was contacted by the Make-A-Wish Foundation, she had a simple request: She wanted to be a princess for a day.

The foundation sought help from the Plymouth community to make the girl's wish come true. The community responded overwhelmingly. When the ceremony was held at St. John's Golf & Conference Center, the girl and her parents rode in a horse-drawn carriage behind Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, Snow White and Belle (from Beauty and the Beast).

The Make-A-Wish people hoped to get 1,000 people to line the streets for her parade. But when the parade took place, about 4,000 people lined the route, some carrying signs, others dressed in costume.

We're thankful for all those people who made a child's

Great sports stories

I am writing you to commend the new articles that Ed Wright has been publishing for your Observer newspaper for the past couple months.

I have been a Canton resident since 1988 and have always wondered why you never did "up close and personal" type stories about high school student-athletes. What a thrill for the young student-athletes and their parents! Also, it gives us readers in the community more of a sense of togetherness and being united in the uncertain times that we live.

Having coached in the community now for 15 years various sports (I actually coached against Ed and his son's soccer team when the boys and girls were combined about seven years ago), I have always heard of stories behind the athletes, yet no one took the time and interest to print them.

Some of the players whom I have

Headlee was a friend

Plymouth

The American Heart Association lost a friend last week with the passing of Richard Headlee. While much has been documented about his professional life through his leadership of the Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. and his active political life including term limits, the Headlee Amendment and his unsuccessful run for governor, Dick was also a long-term heart transplant survivor.

After his transplant and move to Utah, he became active with the American Heart Association playing a role in the start of the Salt Lake City Heart Walk and becoming a spokesperson for some unique endowment initiatives in Michigan. Speaking at a 2003 American Heart Association board meeting in Detroit, Dick credited the medical community for research advancements and the newer anti-rejection drugs that allowed him to remain active to the point ■ In class, we won't be so hyper because our energy will be used up.

At recess, we will talk more so we won't be so chatty in school.

We want the public to know we need a longer lunch period. I know the entire school would appreciate it.

Please print this letter. Thank you for reading our letters.

We would like a longer lunch and recess; let me give you some reasons why. Many children in the school eat slowly simple wish come true.

On the surface, it might seem there's little to be thankful for this Thanksgiving. But that's just on the surface.

Give thanks, lend a hand

If you had the means to provide the food for your Thanksgiving Day dinner today, give thanks.

A lot of people in Oakland and Wayne counties are not as fortunate.

More and more families have turned to food banks for help this year, as the heads of the household have been laid off, had their hours cut or their jobs eliminated.

Requests for assistance with food are up 30 percent over last year, according to Gleaners Community Food Bank in Detroit, which distributes food to agencies in southeast Michigan.

Yet donations are not keeping pace with the increasing need.

To help families not as blessed as your own, you can donate directly to Gleaners or to food banks or shelters in your area. Monetary donations are usually best because nonprofits can purchase the food at a discount and put the money toward what they need most.

Here is a partial listing of food banks and shelters in Oakland and Wayne counties that need help:

■ The Salvation Army, 16130 Northland Drive, Southfield, MI 48075. The Salvation Army operates 17 centers in metro Detroit and serves 6,000 meals a day. ■ Gleaners Community Food Bank, 2131 Beaufait, Detroit, MI 48207. Gleaners is about 5 million pounds short of the 25 million pounds of food needed this year to serve hungry families in southeast Michigan.

■ Redford Interfaith Relief, 15100 Aubrey, Redford, MI 48239. Redford Interfaith is assisting about 220 households per month, up about 50 more than a year ago.

Salary cuts

Plymouth-Canton Schools Superintendent Dr. Jim Ryan claims there is not much more he can cut out of the budget to meet Gov. Granholm's next executive order to reduce the district's foundation grant.

He does not want to cut transportation, athletics or increase class size. Duh.

Most sane people would expect athletics to be the first to get eliminated when it comes to cutting the school budget. After all, what is more important in the business of EDUCATION – playing sports or teachers, books, computers and decent class sizes?

Unfortunately, the minority of students who participate in sports have very vocal parents. Each time athletics is even considered for budget cuts, these parents protest for most of the night at the board meetings to get sports off the chopping block. And they always get their way.

If the members of the Board of Education really want to find some easy money to cut, they need to look at the inflated salaries of all the administrators in the district. It would be simple to cut $30,000 from each administrator in the entire district. Most taxpayers feel the $80,000-$115,000 salary many are paid is outrageous. This includes administrators, principals, vice principals, coordinators, directors, etc.

No one deserves to receive that kind of income when it all comes from taxpayers. If they can't accept a cut they should try to make a living in the private sector. I am sure it is safe to say none of them could even come close to finding a similar position for the same salary they make off the backs of the taxpayer.

of playing tennis several times a week at the age of 73. He viewed the last 17 years since his transplant as a gift and treasured each one, reciting the exact number of days he'd been given to spend time with his family and meet his younger grandchildren.

His transplant came at a time when survival rates were hoped to be in the five- to 10-year range. In fact, it is difficult to find statistics on long-range survivors. At 17 years, he marveled at how another man's heart was still beating strong inside of him. As he noted last year, "How do you measure a gift like that?"

Longer lunch

I am a fifth-grade student at Bentley Elementary School. I am writing this letter to you because I think our lunch period is too short at our elementary school.

I feel this way because I am an extremely slow eater. I have to throw away most of my lunch because I don't have time to eat it. My mother gets mad because I eat a lot at home. She tells me to stop eating so much and packs me an even larger lunch so I won't eat so much at home. My little sister makes fun of me and calls me a pig. My problems would be solved if only I had a longer lunch period.

These are a few reasons why we need a longer lunch:

■ I will not be famished in the afternoon.

■ I can eat slowly and have time to digest my food.

■ If you have ever seen a little kid eat, you'd undoubtedly know that they eat really slowly. They especially need extra time.

When I buy lunch, I have to wait in a long line. By the time I get my food, lunchtime is already halfway over. Maybe if we had two lines we could get our food faster.

We also need a longer recess because:

and need more time to eat. We often find ourselves leaving food because it is time to go outside for recess. Many times we have to make the decision to eat dessert first because there just isn't time to eat everything and when we buy ice cream we generally don't have time to finish it, which means throwing it away, a waste of money and good ice cream. Our mothers want us to eat the health:

Our mothers want us to eat the healthy part of our lunch while we want dessert. Limited time to eat means we have to make a choice, we are children and it is not hard to guess which we are going to choose. A longer lunch time would mean we could eat both, making everyone happy.

One solution could be to give us longer to eat but less time to play. However, we need time to run and play and socialize with our friends. I believe the ideal solution would be to add 10 minutes to the lunch time and 10 minutes to recess. This way we would be able to eat enough food to satisfy us for the rest of the school day and be able to work off excess energy in the extra recess time, allowing us to focus for the rest of the day.

I hope you will support us in our efforts and thank you for your time in reading this letter.

Country not so divided on values

e gather together to ask the Lord's blessing; He chastens and hastens His will to make known ... So goes the traditional Thanksgiving hymn. It was my grandfather's favorite, and I'll be singing it in our church on Thanksgiving morning.

It's one of the nicest services of the year: A small congregation in an old downtown Episcopal church, quietly united in giving thanks for our abundant blessings. As I reflect on that service and on my fellow parishioners, my mind keeps going back to the strange and consequential election just past.

Power

The exit polls and endless blather from the media have focused on the finding that a plurality of American voters put "moral values" at the top of their concerns and that most of them voted for President Bush. Combine that with the graphics showing so starkly the red states and the blue states, and it's easy to conclude that our nation is bitterly split between the godless and arrogant liberals and the hardline and intolerant religious right. Some of my fellow churchgoers voted for President Bush; some for Sen. John Kerry. But virtually all of them share a set of fundamental American values that go far beyond any partisan divide: God; family; right and wrong; patriotism; compassion; tolerance; responsibility. The list goes on and on. And I'd guess many observant readers have noticed that the gap between the red and blue states doesn't seem to show up as dramatically in their daily life as it does on the TV screens. What's going on here?

Part of the problem is the media's knee-jerk urge to find the most sensational way to simplify the story, which usually comes at the cost of either detail or context. Part of it comes from the triumphalist rhetoric we are hearing these days from Christian evangelical organizations intent on putting forward their claims. And part of it comes from Democrats, now firmly tucked into the fetal position, whimpering about the election results as a wholesale rejection.

The data (cited in a valuable article in the respected weekly, The Economist) are more nuanced and much more interesting.

The share of the total vote from people who put moral values at the top of their concerns this year was 22 percent, just a few points more than those who cited the economy or those who felt terrorism was most important. Moreover, the 22 percent share is lower than it was in the two previous presidential elections; 35 percent put moral values on top in 2000 and 40 percent felt that way in 1996.

Certainly, evangelicals voted heavily for President Bush, but so too did Catholics (Bush had a 5 percent lead), Hispanic Catholics (he lost them, but his showing was up 11 percent from 2000) and regular churchgoers including mainline Protestants (favoring Bush by nearly two to one.)

The only exception: African-Americans, who voted, as they generally do, for the Democrat by nine to one. The conclusion is fairly obvious: President Bush's majority is not just a bunch of right-wing evangelical Christians, but it comes from a broad spectrum of people who hold to traditional values and who are religiously observant. Much of the sensible political commentary since the election has made this point. For example, Brad Snavely, executive director of the Michigan Family Forum, wrote in The Detroit News: "One thing worked against John Kerry was people of deep faith and personal conviction don't necessarily expect their president to be their advocate, but they do expect him to understand why they feel so strongly about many moral issues. ... The majority in this country want a president who believes in right and wrong and who can speak with moral clarity without imposing his views on the country."

So does this mean that the country is deeply and irreversibly polarized between people who believe in right and wrong and those who do not? Most experts say no, that the country is in fact a complicated overlay of all kinds of differing interests and attitudes and that the enormous majority of Americans hold pretty straightforward traditional values.

Professor Wayne Baker, who teaches in the University of Michigan's business school and conducts national studies of values, echoes what psychologists and sociologists have known for a long time: People's core values are formed during early adulthood and tend to be very stable after that.

Baker told me that "Americans have clustered around traditional values for a very long time. The notion of a bitterly divided nation is a convenient fiction – quite possibly with a political purpose – but it simply doesn't comport to the facts."

A helpful way to illustrate this point was discovered by Jeff Culver, an information graphics expert, who tried to blend the red states and the blue states to show a "Purple America," a map that shows a gradient between the two groups.

Not surprisingly, it shows blue predominating on either coast with heavy red in the mountain West, but the Midwest and the South are slightly reddish purple.

"The United States is not as divided, geographically speaking, as it seems. Differences are still deep, but more so from one individual to the next than one region to the next. ... It's a real mistake for a party to write off a whole part of the country."

Quite so. Gov. Jennifer Granholm was quoted in The New York Times arguing that Democrats must have a message that is "strong and strongly pro-work, pro-responsibility, pro-child, pro-seniors. ... And not to be afraid of saying God. And not to be afraid of saying that this is a country based on faith."

My own conclusions? 1) While the religious right played a big part in this election, by no means does it hold a monopoly on Americans' moral values. 2) The country is much more united around stable traditional moral values than appears at first glance. 3) Any political party that either claims to be the only repository of moral values or is perceived as scorning them will certainly get into trouble.

Come, ye thankful people, come; raise the song of harvest home: All is safely gathered in, ere the winter storms begin. God, our Maker, doth provide for our wants to be supplied: Come to God's own temple, come; raise the song of harvest home.

Evidence shows students excel in single-sex classes

question to mull over, as the skies gray and the temperatures dip, is whether boys and girls during those turbulent middle school years could benefit from single-sex education.

Michael Gurian, a social philosopher, family therapist, educator and author, strongly urged schools to adopt such a course last month at presentations sponsored by Birmingham Bloomfield Families in Action.

Judith

Doner Berne

"My question to the human community is why do they have to be coeducational during those years?" Gurian said. Public education needs to head the new brain to heed the new brain research showing that boys and girls learn differently, Gurian told over 500 parents, educators, counselors and health professionals in talks at both Cranbrook and Detroit Country Day.

"Separate sex options can solve many problems at all grade levels ... we believe that a huge portion – perhaps at least half – of middle school learning and discipline problems would be curtailed or removed if middle schools were single-sex institutions," he said.

In light of the new research, the U.S. Department of Education in 2002 eased its rules against single-sex classes in public schools, established under Title IX. At least 10 single-sex public schools were set to open this fall in five states. Although the numbers are increasing, only about 100 of the 91,000-plus public schools across the country offer them.

Small scale studies conclude that student grade-point averages for both sexes increase in seventh and eighth grades when genders are separated, according to the National Charter School Clearinghouse.

Gurian's own findings show that boys benefit more academically, girls in selfesteem.

"The research is clear that single-sex classes make a positive difference," said Roxanne Reschke, a local educational consultant who has been following single-sex education since the 1980s. As more data comes in, "it's going to have to be a treatment at least to be considered."

Of course, parochial and many private schools have always offered single-sex education

Kingswood Cranbrook is this area's prime example of fully separated classes in middle school and a mix of single-sex and coed classes in ninth and 10th grades. The encircomment of the classroom is much more relaxed," said Cranbrook

Middle School Principal Larry Ivens, comparing it to his 21 years in coed middle school education. "Neither gender is on stage during a time in their life when they're very self-conscious. They will take "** positive risks that they wouldn't take in a "* mixed environment."

"Kids feel more comfortable being them selves," echoed Kingswood Middle School * Principal Fran Dagbovie, who also has taught both single-sex and coed classes over 30 years. "There are more options available to them. Girls can be more assertive. Boys can behave like boys.

"We oversexualize the kids in our culture. We love it that the girls aren't primping and don't wear makeup. There's a wider range of behavior that's open to them."

Kingswood Cranbrook sophomore Margaret Blanchard likes the separated classes so much she wrote a recent paper on the topic.

English and history classes should be maintained as single-gender throughout high school was her thesis.

"All students need a fair playing field so they can learn to the best of their neurological and psychological ability," Margaret wrote. "To keep pumping out new leaders into society we must allow them all the room for self-expression."

Same-sex classes aren't on the radar screen for either West Bloomfield or Bloomfield Hills Schools, both superintendents told me.

But in Birmingham, Berkshire Middle School offers two elective classes for eighth- grade girls and a full program of academics for low-achieving eighth-grade boys.

Teacher Karen Boyk is excited that now there is physical and physiological evidence confirming what she sees daily in the allgirls language arts and math classes she began eight years ago. "They just blossom," she said. "The boys curriculum, taught by teacher Allen Einstein, has been turning boys who were not successful around sinceit began in 2000."

"I think single-gender classes should be an alternative," Boyk said. "In my opinion, it's the wave of the future."

The Clarkston school district is looking to pilot such an alternative next fall in its newly configured middle school and junior, high, according to Deputy Supt. David Reschke.

"It certainly seems like an idea to consider as public education seeks ways to make No Child Left Behind a reality."

Lawmakers protest Canadian trash as security risk

BY ALEX LUNDBERG STAFF WRITER

A letter to the Department of Homeland Security from three powerful Michigan lawmakers bemoaning the increased flow of garbage trucks from Canada into the state warns of a potential chink in the country's armor against terrorism.

Senators Carl Levin, D-Michigan, and Debbie Stabenow, D-Michigan, and Rep. John Dingell, D-15, warn that the approximately 415 Canadian trash trucks — almost twice last year's 180 a day coming into Michigan every day constitutes a threat to homeland security.

"As you know, these trucks pose a unique homeland security risk, since by their very nature trucks full of garbage are extremely difficult for Customs agents to inspect as compared to traditional cargo. Therefore, this dramatic increase in Canadian trash trucks is extremely disconcerting. The problem is accelerating at an alarming rate and these shipments must be addressed immediately," the three wrote in a letter to Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge

Canton Township is home to a landfill. Township Supervisor Tom Yack said the company which runs it, Canton Waste Recycling, has made assurances less that one-tenth of one percent of the incoming waste is from Canada.

"I'm not for or against Canadian trash," he said. "(The controversy) is ridiculous. Think of all the trash that comes in from other communities, should every one of them have their own landfill?"

But, he contends, this is not about garbage, it's about making a lot of noise. Yack said arguments over Canadian trash are a political football both Democrats and Republicans pull out whenever they need a device to generate headlines. Considering everything else that's going on in the state right now, worrying about what comes over the Ambassador Bridge is pointless.

"There are much bigger fish to fry," Yack said. "Michigan is not keeping up with the recovery. Revenues are not keeping up with projections and Michigan is a donor state when it comes to roads."

Orion Township Supervisor Gerald Dywasuk has a Waste Management landfill in his community. While he's been reassured no Canadian trash has been dumped there, he knows the township has to take the company at its word.

He doesn't think there should be any trash imported from the north, but there's nothing that can be done on the local level.

"I used to see huge trucks coming along I-69 with Canadian plates all the time," Dywasuk said. "The only way that's going to change is if the federal government steps in."

What he is sure of is that there aren't enough people checking what comes through the borders - trash and goods alike. Unless some kind of fee is imposed or taxes raised to cover the cost of hiring more inspectors the situation won't change.

"It's like the container ships coming over from Asia, we don't know what's in all of those," Dywasuk said.

Legislation changes how trucks are fined

BY ALEX LUNDRERG STAFF WRITER

When Gov. Jennifer Granholm returns from her junket to Germany with County Executive L. Brooks Patterson, she will find a bill on her desk that could change the way construction traffic moves through the state.

House Bill 4358, which has passed the state house and senate, changes the rules communities use to assess and fine heavy trucks.

Washtenaw County state Rep. Gene DeRossett (R-52nd District) said the legislation would allow certain trucks traveling over main highways aggregate haulers — to be a bit longer than they would now. The change accommodates changes in technology and design already made by the industry.

"The industry has already made technological changes, moving the driver off the axle and extending the length of the truck's tongue," DeRossett said. "The extension means less chance of a rollover."

The primary thrust of the bill changes the way fines are doled out when a truck comes up heavy at a weigh station. Michigan is an "axle state," meaning the rules, and the fines for breaking the rules, for weight are judged by how many pounds each axle bears.

Under the current rules, judges will have the discretion to decide whether a truck is overloaded or misloaded, and therefore up to them to decide how much to fine a trucking company for violations.

The representative said aggregate haulers (gravel, for instance) are subject to fines if their cargo is misloaded. Even though the total weight of the vehicle is under the acceptable weight, a poor loading job can still generate a fine if there's too much weight on a single axle.

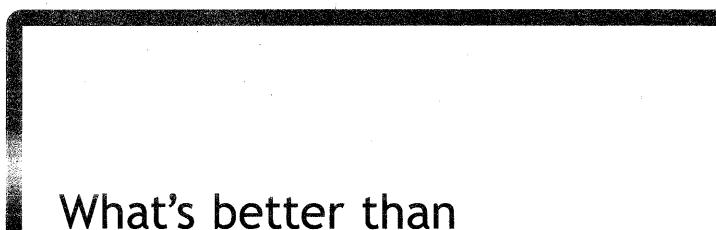

Under the proposed rule, if a truck is found to be misloaded the trucking company is given a $200 fine per axle up to three axles. At the same time, if the misload is more than 4,000 pounds per axle it is immediately ruled an overload and a per-pound fine is imposed.

The new rules do not change the consequences for overloading a truck.

These fines can range from six cents per pound to as much as 20 cents per pound, depending on how far overweight the truck is. Therein, he said, lies the problem.

'Some communities target gravel trucks the same way they target drivers by ethnicity, DeRossett said. "They use the fines as revenue enhancement tools." He said no one likes gravel haulers; they're loud and slow, but that doesn't mean a community can target them for ticketing. Excessive overloading tickets can cost a company its insurance coverage.

The bill's passage, or failure to pass, most likely won't affect her constituents. She said her district is built out and the kinds of trucks the bill addresses will be moving through rural and developing communities. Also, she said the new law would be there to help with the exceptions that prove the rule.

Southfield firm assists in home makeover

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

Earlier this month, ABC's Extreme Makeover profiled to the nation the remodeling of a home of an Oak Park family.

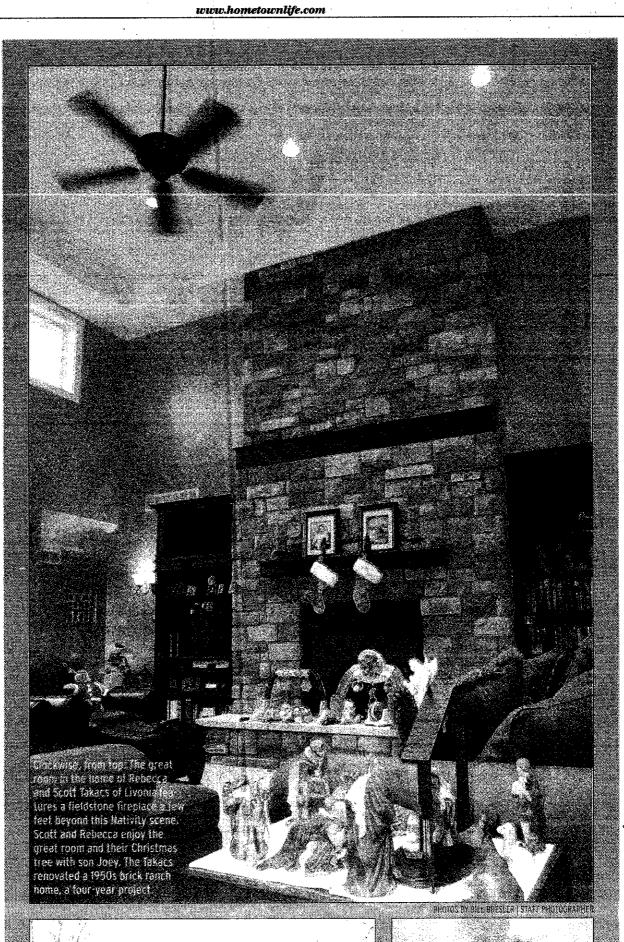

The remodeling required special equipment for the family. Larry and Judy Vardon are both deaf. A son, Lance, is blind and autistic. Another son, Stefan, can hear and see and communicates with them and links them to the outside world.

Family members were concerned about Lance, who tended to sometimes wander away from the home. The remodeling would need to include technology to better secure the home. Fairway Construction of Southfield, the project manager, contacted Guardian Alarm of Southfield to develop an integrated system for the Vardons. Soon Guardian met with producers from the ABC show to discuss the design of the house.

"They were really excited," said Matt Fraiberg, assistant general manager of Guardian Alarm. "They had never seen a project like this."

The remodeling project required that the home be renovated within one week. That meant more than 100 workers and contractors were working inside or outside the home at various times.

The house was originally 900 square feet,

Capable cabinetry James and Morris

Carey of AP Weekly Features write the following about new kitchen cabinets:

"Want to spruce up the kitchen with new cabinets? Today, lots of folks are taking on this do-ityourself project. Home centers are stocking up on all sorts of cabinets and parts, making things easier for you.

"First, find the highest place on your floor; it's your starting point. Then, everything else needs to be 'shimmed up' to equal that height. "Set corner cabinets first: then work out from there. Hang upper cabinets before lower ones. "Never use regular wood screws for hanging, or your stuff will wind up on the kitchen floor. Use special construction screws instead."

and the Vardons "didn't want to be overwhelmed with technology," Fraiberg said.

Six cameras were installed at the home. One views the kitchen and living room area, another in Lance's room and another is located in the play room downstairs. Exterior cameras view the pool, side of the house and the front door.

What really assisted the Vardons, however, was the strobes. "We had to differentiate what kind of alarms to set off," Fraiberg explained. "The white one went off when a door or window opened, while the red strobe alerted them to a panic situation, such as smoke or a break-in."

When those alerts activate, the Vardons only need to look at monitors in the kitchen. master bedroom and Judy's craft room to view the cameras. "They can switch cameras to see where Lance is at or they can look at all six cameras at once," Fraiberg said. "They can turn to the monitor in the room, and within seconds, they have (the situation) under control."

The Vardons didn't want to lock the craft room, but they wanted to ensure Lance didn't wander in there, either. Guardian installed an access system that requires a code to enter the room. (Anyone can exit the room by pushing open the door.)

Guardian's technology also extends to helping bedridden home patients in terms of security and well-being. A button and motion mats located near the bed notify family members and medical personnel when that person falls. Cameras also can keep watch over that person.

Guardian officials were thrilled to help with ABC's Extreme Makeover and the Vardon family.

"We showed them how to use everything," Fraiberg said. "They are always excited to see us. They are grateful. They are truly a deserving family."

Just add water (and fish)

The new Marina Goldfish Starter Kit by the Rolf C. Hagen Corp. is a stylish looking, plug-and-go, portable fish tank for goldfish.

The convenient new tank system comes prepackaged with everything needed to enjoy goldfish keeping, except the fish and water.

With its sleek styling, contemporary color accents (purple or orange) and high-tech features, the Marina represents a far cry from the plain old goldfish bowl that most of us remember from carnivals and state fairs.

Aside from its upscale appearance, the Marina offers a genuine aquarium setup that can provide a healthy environment for goldfish.

The turnkey tank includes an automated filter, flake food, a water conditioner, a silk plant and colorful gravel. Available in two sizes, 1.77 gallons and 2.65 gallons, the Marina makes an ideal desktop aquarium for an office, dorm room or den.

It can also serve as a "starter tank" for children, introducing them to fish keepina.

Available at leading pet stores, the Marina Goldfish Starter Kit has a suggested retail price of $30 to $40. For more information, visit www.hagen.com.

The refrigerator was hauled out of the house and we ended up getting a new one. (That's so long ago, I can't remember if they had warranties back then.)

The column indicated that if you had a certain refrigerator in your home it represented different traits in your character. For example, a side-by-side could brand you as the person who likes bells and whistles, icemakers and water dispensers.

I tend to think that homeowners purchase a side-by-side because they have finally reached the point where they can afford to buy it. They cost a lot more than a root cellar. In the early 1960s the big seller was the bottom-mount refrigerator and then the side-byside was created.

I think the world of a sideby-side and I think it will be a long time coming before it's dethroned as the ultimate image maker.

I read where the top mount refrigerator indicates you are "loyal," grew up with this style and don't want to change. I think that's a bunch of bunk! You mean to tell me that you like stuffing the freezer section with frozen food and, in order to access something in the back, remove food and putting it on the kitchen counter? Most top mount owners will purchase a side-by-side when they have the room to do so.

Kitchen remodeling and new home builders make that choice for you automatically. It wasn't so many years ago you could open the page of a newspaper and there would be a big cut out of a huge side of beef. A butcher shop would sell you a

Dear valued AOL member:

It has come to our attention that your billing informations are out of order. If you could please take 5-10 minutes out of your online experience and update your personal records so you will not run into any future problems with the online service.

At the end there's a handy link:

https://www.Aol.com/billing. Looks pretty legit, no?

Well, no. Although the message even includes an AOL logo, clues abound as to its fraudulence. One is the logo itself, which looks like a lowresolution copy.

Then there's the bad spelling. Big companies hire professional copywriters, so you're not likely to see "billing informations" in any official correspondence. Likewise, look for your name, not "valued customer" or something similarly impersonal. Finally, there's the link. Clicking it would likely take me to an official-looking Web site, where I'd be asked to provide all manner of personal information.

But I know better. In my email program (Outlook Express), moving my mouse cursor over the link reveals the actual Web address that's embedded in it: http://64.23.5.7/Aol.

That's bogus. AOL and other companies don't have numerical Web addresses. So before I even click the link, I've spotted plenty of red flags – any single one of which would be cause enough to trash the e-mail.

Unfortunately, not all phishing is that easy to spot. Take the recent stream of messages concerning my eBay account: Apparently someone has been using it to make phony bids, and would I mind clicking here to verify my personal information?

These messages looked indistinguishable from the real deal, even to my trained eye. The return address, the Web link, the small-print legalese at the bottom – all of it seemed genuine. So how did I know it wasn't? For starters, I know that AOL, Citibank, eBay, PayPal, and other institutions have expressly stated they will never ask for personal information in an e-mail.

I also know that phishing exists, so I'm naturally suspicious. Plus, I'd been using my eBay account regularly and knew everything was in order.

In other words, exercise common sense. When in doubt, call or e-mail the company's customer-service department, or login to your account manually, skipping the links in the e-mail. Don't make it any easier for the con artists.

that are a cross-section of the town and are located all over town," said Jan Bennett, organizer of the Greenmead Walk. "We try to get homes that are different."

RANCH DRESSING

The Takacs' house is unique in that their ranch conversion has spread by word-of-mouth in the neighborhood. "We have a lot of people who just randomly stop by to look at it," Scott said. "We thought it would be good idea to volunteer our home for the Christmas tour. We've gone on house tours for Greenmead and they are a lot of fun."

The Takacs always enjoyed driving through the neighborhood on Bell Creek Lane and liked the home sites and the large lots on that street. When they first purchased the home, it was smaller than their previous home. By the time they finished remodeling, it almost tripled the size of the house. "It now looks more like a Cape Cod house," Scott said.

The Takacs have worked to decorate their home for this year's home tour with a mix of old decorations and new ones.

The couple's 12-foot Christmas tree is decorated with blue ribbons and blue and white lights in the great room. The tree was purchased from Ray Hunter Florist in Southgate. "It took two cars to get (the tree) back," said Rebecca.

A manger scene given to them by Madie Takacs, Scott's grandmother, is tucked on a shelf of one of custom cabinets made by Scott. Two other manger scenes — one that Scott purchased years ago and one from Rebecca's mother, Betty Rodgers of Taylor – also will decorate the great room.

Each of the rooms have different themes.

A guest bedroom is the home's angel room with angels from Scott's grandmother. The Red room is another bedroom decked out in a nautical theme of lighthouse photos and lighthouses, which originated from a trip to the Upper Peninsula and lighthouse visits

Downstairs a Dickens Village is set up on a table. The couple, who met at and graduated from the University of Michigan, have created a maize-and-blue shrine downstairs, dedicated to their alma mater The kitchen displays Santa Clauses, Christmas dolls and bears. "Over the years we've collected lot of angels and Santas," Scott said. Rebecca adds: "People like to bring us Santas." On the table is a Christmas dish collection, all set for dinner, from Scott's mother, Patricia Nagy of Plymouth.

FAMILY TIES

Other homes are unique, too.

Debbie and Jim Arnett's four-bedroom colonial was selected by the Friends of Greenmead to be on the tour. "It's an honor, but it's also a lot of work, said Debbie with a laugh. "We like to decorate for the holidays.

The holidays carry remembrances of family members. Debbie puts up crocheted snowflakes from Debbie's Greenmead and its historical significance to the area. "I think it's a treasure for Livonia," she said. "It's great for Livonia. It's a great experience for anyone to help Greenmead. Our family loves historical things. It's great to have it close by."

Another home in the Rosedale Park subdivision consists of 800 square feet, but it is now an "enchanted land," Bennett said. "It makes me think of the French cottages, with the quaint artifacts on the walls," Bennett said. "She opened up the closet and the shelves in it have special charms.

"We have several other elegant homes, which will be all set up for Christmas."

FUN FUND-RAISER

The walk is critical for raising funds for the Greenmead development and renovations. "The walk is the main fundraiser each year," Bennett said. She expected that the Friends of Greenmead would give $20,000 to Greenmead this month.

"Each year or any other year, it's significant," Bennett said. "At this time, with the city budget being so tight, it's nice to keep this going," she said.

She expected funds raised will help with the renovation of the Old Blue House. "People will buy tickets because some of it will go to Greenmead, but they're also coming to people's homes to look at their homes."

There's a home with a military room, devoted to a World War II veteran and a granddaughter who recently graduated from West Point.

adorned with Christmas decorations.

The home owner has bordered the dining room with a beautiful toile print wallpaper, named Rosedale. This closet houses the owner's dishes and stemware. Cardwell Florist, 32109 Plymouth in Livonia, provided the floral arrangement for this home.

At a home on Pembroke this family is happy to be celebrating their sixth Christmas there. Nestled in the quiet Woodbrooke subdivision, the home was built in 1986.

Upon entering, a quilt custom made for the stairwell named Christmas Star hangs overhead and is displayed year round. The living room is the Santa Room, displaying the collection that began a dozen years ago.

Many additions to the collection have been gifts, and hold special memories.

Several of the home's decorations are handmade by loving family members and friends, and include Santas, snowmen, pillows and the crocheted snowflakes in the windows.

Two years ago, the homeowners made frames for the Christmas lights in the front windows.

Lights are permanently attached and the frames are easily put up and taken down for storage. Nature's Floral Gifts, 37464 W. Five Mile in Livonia contributed to the holiday décor in this house. Christmas is a very special family and friends. Trees are trimmed in reds and greens, while festive mantels glimmer and gleam with glitter and gold. Weber's Floral Gifts, 28301 Five Mile in Livonia, added a holiday arrangement to the trimmings of the Hill House this season.

A Cape Cod style home on Ladywood greets visitors with candles burning in the front windows and a collection of old fashioned sleds on the front porch. This beautifully decorated home owned by an interior designer is filled with many antiques and treasures.

> ie baking and sleepover. Other decorations include a handmade Santa on the tea table, a Byers caroler collection near the fireplace, a Santa grouping on the stairway landing, and a den specifically decorated for the children.

If you look up, almost anywhere in the house you will see velvet bows hanging from the ceiling. This has been a tradition for over 40 years.

The mid-1800s secretary in the great room, the rocker in one of the guest rooms, and the hand made quilts on the twin beds, are all antiques passed down through the family.

A festive holiday arrangement was provided by Vines Flower & Garden Shop, 30560 Grand River in Farmington Hills.

Endangered Historic Places sought for list The National Trust for Completed nominations Lists of endangered historic Places Sought for list

Historic Preservation is accepting nominations for the 2005 America's 11 Most Endangered Historic Places list.

Nominations are being accepted now to Jan. 19, 2005.

Each year, the National Trust issues this list to identify and raise awareness of historic sites at risk from neglect, deterioration, lack of maintenance, insufficient funds, inappropriate development or insensitive public policy.

Since 1988, the list has been one of the most successful tools in the fight to save America's irreplaceable architectural, cultural and natural heritage.

The 2005 list will be announced in May.

To ensure that the most threatened sites are chosen, the National Trust uses three primary criteria to determine the 11 finalists: significance, urgency and potential solutions.

For more information about the application process and to download the application, visit www.nationaltrust.org/11Most /nomination.html, or call (202) 588-6141.

"Ever since 1988, our America's 11 Most Endangered Historic Places list has been a powerful wake-up call, alerting people to treasures in trouble and galvanizing efforts to save them," said Richard Moe, president of the National Trust.

"The list has helped save some very significant pieces of our heritage, and we're enormously proud of that fact - but past successes are not enough. Important historic sites are still in danger, and we still must work hard to protect the places that tell America's story."

The list has brought national attention to more than 140 significant buildings, sites and landscapes.

At times, that attention has garnered public support to rescue a treasured landmark; at times, it has been an opening in a long battle to save an important piece of our history.

It has been so successful in educating the public that more than 20 states and many communities publish their own places.

Among the many sites that have been listed are the tobacco barns of Southern Maryland, Vieux Carré in New Orleans. Ellis Island in New York Harbor, the Kennecott Copper Mines in Alaska, the Bethlehem Steel Plant in Pennsylvania, and the village of East Aurora, N.Y. Each represents preservation challenges facing thousands of communities.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation is a private, nonprofit membership organization dedicated to protecting the irreplaceable.

Recipient of the National Humanities Medal, the Trust was founded in 1949 and provides leadership, education and advocacy to save America's diverse historic places and revitalize communities.

Its Washington, D.C., headquarters staff, six regional offices and 25 historic sites work with the Trust's 200,000 members and thousands of local community groups in all 50 states.

Geese. A work-

wife receives irritation from most of the things I do and say. I have several of these irritations, many of which I have to deal with on an everyday basis. Some in the clinic, some outside. Like when the person in front of me at the supermarket waits until the entire $120 order is run through before even taking out their check book.

Have they had occasion where their order was free? At the clinic, I get worn out trying to convince people to have their pet spayed or neutered.

Women tend to understand, as they have to deal with their reproductive tracts medically all the time.

Men often won't even hear of it. I can lay out all the reasons why neutering will help keep the pet healthier, all the problems it will prevent, but they often decline vehemently. I try to explain that the neuter is not retroactive to the owner, but they can't bear the thought of their little friend being "fixed."

Though this happens often enough that it becomes irksome, it's not every time. In fact, many men are comfortable enough in their own sexuality that they can do what's best for their pet. It's the others that wear on work I deal with a train. The tracks near my house must be the finest in the area, as the trains not only go over them, but often stop to enjoy the feel against their wheels. This turns the road into a long, thin parking lot.

It turns me into a Duke of Hazzard, thinking about jumping my car over the train in slow motion while shouting "Yee -ha!"

Once at the clinic, I'm amazed by the number of people who lecture their animals.

If a dog jumps up, pulls, or whatever else, people will shout their dog's name, then follow up with several sentences outlining how the dog should behave.

Remember, the dog hears their name, then Charlie Brown's teacher - "Fluffy, wa wa wa wa!"

If you want to correct your dog, you need to use a short correction word, such as "no."

This must be done immediately when the problem occurs, not a few seconds later. Then, when they stop, praise them.

Now they associate what they were doing with the bad thing, and associate your happy voice with not doing the bad thing.

Only use their name in praise...yelling their name will make them less likely to come when called, as it means they're in trouble.

My greatest pet peeve, telephone solicitors, can be controlled by the no-call list, but a few still sneak calls through. I try to get their name and number, then call them back to get my number removed from their list.

They're usually not happy to get my call, but I see it as returning the favor.

The new problem I have seen this year would be the rapid increase of people buying mixed breed dogs.

I've mentioned labradoodles before, as a number of new owners have asked me about their dog, and about when they can breed him or her

They seem very taken aback when I point out it is not a breed, and as such, it can't be "bred."

Breeding means making the next generation of a full breed dog better - in conformation, appearance, and in health.

People who make mixed breed dogs are not breeders, but are anti-breeders, making more mixed breed puppies like those that die at shelters every day.

We don't need more. I hope this stops soon.

(Mixed breed dogs are great! If you want one, go to a shelter. A new friend and you will find each other there!)

Lenawee Christian too much for PCA, 48-35

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK CORRESPONDENT

They lost the game, but coach Harvey Jennings' Plymouth Christian Academy team won, too.

Lenawee Christian used balanced scoring and a tenacious defense Monday night to take a 48-35 victory from PCA in a Class D Regional 26 semifinal game of the state high school girls basketball tournament.

But hey, the winner drew the defend-ing state Class D champion, Lansing Christian, Tuesday night for a berth in the quarterfinals. Lansing Christian, led by Tiffanie Shives (Michigan State), shredded Camden-Frontier, 69-22, in the other regional semifinal contest.

"We were last in our conference," Jennings said. "We won one conference game. But we had great seniors. For us to get this far ... based on statistics, we should have gone out in the first round.

"But what we have to do is not define our season by this one game. We have to focus on the hard work that started back in August."

The Eagles ended 11-12, the same record the winning Cougars took into the game.

Lenawee Christian didn't put a single player in double figures but had nine players score and five getting six points or better. Freshman Abbie Forman had nine, Haley Cisco scored eight and the trio of junior Brittany Wright, sophomore Katie Mullis and junior Elizabeth Davies had six apiece.

The Cougars scored the first eight points of the game and their zone defense kept the Eagles from penetrating or getting easy inside hoops. Lenawee Christian held a lead of 10-6 after the first quarter, 24-15 at halftime and 36-24 entering the fourth quarter.

Marian knocks Salem out of tourney, 49-35

BY ED WRIGHT STAFF WRITER

When Birmingham Marian's fast-break is running on all cylinders, the Mustangs can turn defensive rebounds into offensive lay-ups in a heartbeat.

Case in point: Monday night when the Mustangs pushed the ball up the court and Salem out of the post-season with a 49-35 victory in the Class A regional semifinal played at West Bloomfield High School.

Marian will take its 20-4 record and sizzling transition game into tonight's regional final against the host Lakers, who dismantled Pontiac Northern, 62-47, in the other semi-final match-up. Salem closed out its year with a 16-7 mark.

"I was disappointed in our team's effort at the district tournament, admitted Marian coach Mary Cicerone. "Before the game tonight, I asked them, 'What happened to my old team?' The effort was back tonight. We're at our

Lightning strikes

The Plymouth Lightning '96 select soccer team recently finished 8-0-1 to win the WSSL U9 Girls Division II title.

The team played really weil," said Lightning coach Brianna Sleek. "I am very impressed with their individual skills and overall talents and team chemistry."

The Lightning's defense - which allowed just 14 goals all season - was led by co-captain Emma Barterian, Terra Crown and Maria Pulice. Madeline Szuba and Allison First shined as the team's goalies. Offensively, the team was paced by Alyssa Dillon, Kate Morris, Samantha Riga, Alexandra Burkhart and Shannon Perry.

Cat skaters win

Plymouth's boys hockey team was successful in its first-ever varsity game, ousting Pinckney, 5-3, on Saturday.

Nick Rososchacki led the way with a pair of goals. Ryan Stamm, John Knoerl and Jason O'Guinn had one apiece.

Canton's Schmitt earns All-State status

Swimming in its own backyard, Ann Arbor Pioneer stroked to its fifth consecutive Division 1 state girls swimming/diving title last weekend at the University of Michigan.

The Pioneers accumulated 372 points, 167 more than second-place Farmington Mercy. Zeeland (202), Rochester Adams (170) and Okemos (121) rounded out the top five spots.

Canton finished in 18th place with 33 points while Salem (four points) tied for 36th with Battle Creek Central.

Chief freshman Allison Schmitt proved that she will be a force to be reckoned with on the state level for several years to come as she finished seventh in the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 1:54.26.

Schmitt's effort earned Canton 12 points.

Schmitt also captured eighth place in the 500 freestyle with a clocking of 5:14.33 in the final. The eighth-place showing was good enough for 11 points for the Chiefs.

Schmitt's efforts in both events earned the ninth-grader All-State recognition.

"Allison really swam great," said Canton assistant coach Ed Weber.

"She had her personal-best time in the 200 and she was close to her best in the 500. Our relay team performed well, too."

The Chiefs' 200 freestyle relay foursome of junior Izabela Paszkowska, sophomore Laura Landis, senior Susie Patrick and Schmitt just missed earning All-State honors when it finished 12th with a time of 1:42.21. The top 10 finishers in each event are consider All-State.

Salem's 200 medley relay quartet of junior Kelsey Lincoln, junior Kim Heaney, senior Ashley Aquinto and senior Amanda Newman finished 15th with a time of 1:54.61.

Other Western Lakes Activities Association schools also fared well at the state meet. Livonia Stevenson finished 10th with 91 points, Walled Lake Central was 29th (15 points), Walled Lake Western was 31st (14 points) and Westland John Glenn nabbed 32nd place (11 points).

Great shot

Canton resident Tony Vitale poses with the 12-point whitetail buck he shot Oct. 13 while bow hunting on land near Pinckney. The deer – which earned a mark of 142 on the official Pope & Young Club Scoring System - was one of the largest ever shot with a bow in Livingston County, according to Pope & Young.

But the friendship forged between the trio of hoop stars over the past several years will never diminish.

'These are my sisters for life," said Canale, describing the bond that has grown between the three since they all made the Rocks' varsity squad as sophomores in 2002.

"Alyssa is my right arm and Cat is my left arm. When I'm braiding my daughter's hair years from now, I'll think of them."

As the three players stood courtside just moments after possibly the most excruciating loss of their young lives, Guerin reflected on what a positive experience the past three months had been for her and her teammates.

"I'm sad that we lost tonight, but when I look back on this season, I don't think I could have played with better teammates," she said. "Everybody on this team played hard all year."

"My senior year of basketball couldn't have gone any better," Wheatley agreed.

"Before the season started, we talked about winning the district and we did that. I'm very proud of everybody on this team and what we accomplished."

Counting summer-league and high-school action, the threesome has played in well over 100 games together during their successful careers.

When you throw in the hundreds of practices they've sweat through together, it's no wonder they feel like family to each other.

"Al and I have been playing together since seventh grade," Canale said. "We met Kathryn in high school and our friendships have grown ever since."

Wheatley and Guerin will be teammates again in the spring when they compete together for the Salem soccer team. But the trio's hoop days together are over.

Or are they?

"I'm sure we'll play a little oneon-one against one another in the future," Wheatley said, smiling.

Invitational and Fun Meet will be held Dec. 3-5 at St. Edith's Gymnasium in Livonia.

The meet, presented by Euro Stars Gymnastics, is expected to attract 700 gymnasts in addition to family and friends. Competition will be held for airls USAG Levels 5-10 and Fun Meet Levels 2-Pre 5.

The Vietnam veterans will present flags for the national anthem. St. Edith's is located at 15089 Newburgh Road. Call meet director Diana Genrich at (734) 737-9500.

MU's Zathey hailed

Madonna University women's soccer coach Mark Zathey, who guided the Crusaders to a 11-5-4 overall record and a Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference title, was named 2004 WHAC Coach of the Year.

It was the conference's second honor for the fourth-year coach, a graduate of Livonia Bentley High School.

Three MU underclassmen also earned firstteam All-WHAC recognition including junior cocaptain Lacey Cattarino (Westland John Glenn), sophomore Kelly Japowicz and freshman Loren Tacconelli.

Japowicz, a forward, led the Crusaders this season with 11 goals and five assists, while Cattarino posted a team-high 11 assists. Tacconelli added six goals and four assists in her inaugural season.

Second-team All-WHAC selections from MU included freshman defenders Rachaelle Mirto and Julie Turner, along with the Crusaders' lone senior, midfielder Danielle Strickland.

CC skaters' goal to return to 'promised land'

Whalers making move in division

Observer & Eccentric | Thursday, November 25, 2004

After struggling early this season, the Plymouth Whalers are making a serious run at the top spot in the Ontario Hockey League's Western Division.

Sparked by solid goal-tending, the Whalers upended Sault Ste. Marie, 3-1, Saturday night at the Compuware Sports Arena before a sellout crowd of 3,904.

The victory improved the Whalers to 8-9-4-2 (22 points) and into sole possession of second place in the division. The Greyhounds slipped to 8-10-3-0.

Plymouth goal-tender Ryan Nie earned recognition as the game's second star after knocking away 30 Greyhound shots. On Friday night, Nie was the No. 1 star in the Whalers' 3-1 triumph over Erie.

Dan Collins, James Neal and John Vigilante all scored for the home team. Collins' goal was his team-leading ninth of the campaign. Jeff Carter scored the lone Greyhound goal.

Carter's power-play goal put Sault Ste. Marie ahead, 1-0, at the 10:31 mark of the second period. Collins tied the game 13:56 into the period before Neal tallied what proved to be the game-winner at the 11:13 mark of the third period.

Vigilante added an insurance with an empty-netter with 1:03 left in the game. It was the Dearborn native's third goal in as many games.

The sellout was the fourth of the season for the Whalers, who host the Windsor Spitfires tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Compuware Sports Arena.

Consider Redford Catholic Central on a mission to return to hockey's promised land.

That's judging by the drive and purpose shown by the Shamrocks during Monday's practice at Compuware Sports Arena.

According to CC second-year head coach Todd Johnson, a mix of talent, savvy and a strong desire to win provide many reasons why he is feeling good about what the 2004-05 season might bring.

Johnson also likes that he has 16 players coming back from the 2003-04 squad that went 20-7-3, claiming the Michigan Interscholastic Hockey League and Division 1 regional championships before falling short in the state title match. Monday, he put his squad through an uptempo workout and then talked optimistically about the season, which begins 7 p.m.

Friday at Compuware against Livonia Churchill.

We won five straight state championships and set a state record," Johnson said. "Then we got to the (D1) state championship game last year and came up a little short. I think the senior class wants to pay respect to the seniors from last year, and get back to the title game."

Seniors taking part in that 3-2 title defeat to Marquette, and perhaps with something to prove, include forwards Harrison Niemann, Jason Lewarne, Chris New, Mike Oakleaf, Mychael Evans, John Horal, Brett Storm and Bryan Giosa and defensemen/captain . Kevin Horal.

Add junior forwards such as Drew Kahle and Dan Barczuk to the mix and the Shamrocks have plenty of offensive firepower up front.

Lewarne, Kahle and Barczuk lead a cast of 12 returning forwards who figure to be dangerous on opposing goaltenders. Like Monday's practice, it will be wave after wave of Shamrocks.

"I like the experience we have at forward," said Johnson, calling the position a strength of the team.

Kevin Horal and junior Tim Buttery anchor the Shamrocks' blueline. When not protecting the CC net, they will each spearhead power-play units, providing booming slap shots from the point.

"They're both pretty solid," said Johnson. "They're about as good on defense as we've had." The rest of the Shamrocks' defenders are relatively inexperienced.

But Johnson sees a bright future. Among players expected to make a contribution include umors Mike Maviglia, Adam McGee and sophomores Doug Raymond and Dominic Scala.

Senior defénseman Colin Ronayne also is new to the Shamrocks.

"Our defense is a little bit young and inexperienced," Johnson said.

"But/I think they will come along fine."

But if the defense takes a while to get up to speed, they will have solid goaltenders backing them up.

Dividing netminding duties, at/least during the first part of the season, will be junior Ross Tashjihan and sophomore Brian Hogan.

"Both are very athletic with solid backgrounds," the coach said.

Johnson is confident Tashjihan and Hogan can pick up where last year's tandem of John Garza and Andrew Godoshian left off.

"Our goaltending is pretty solid," he said. "That's a huge plus."

The tour consists of 10 qualifying rounds and 10 tournament rounds, and is held on local private and public courses. "The top 40 qualifiers at each qualifying round play in the ournament round for free," said tour director Dan Thomas. "The qualifying field for each tournament is limited to 150 players. Additionally, the top 10 finishers in each week's tournament are exempt into the following week's tournament and will play for free. So a total of 50 players per week are playing free golf."

Scholarship awards are offered based on rules of golf exams, topical essays, sportsmanship and community service. Scholarship awards can be increased as a student's gradepoint average increases.

Play begins on June 11 and runs through the season-ending championship tournament on Aug. 8. The full schedule is posted on the tour's Web site at www.Top50jrTour.com. Call (248) 321-000 or visit the tour Web site.

SC men kickers sixth

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

A sixth-place finish in the National Junior College Athletic Association Division I men's soccer tournament couldn't dampen Schoolcraft coach Dominic Scicluna's spirit.

Two-time defending NJCAA champion Yavapai (Ariz.) won Sunday's consolation game in Tyler (Tex.) with a 2-1 win over the Ocelots, who finished the year with an 11-10 record. (Seven Schoolcraft wins this season were forfeited because of an ineligible player.)

Schoolcraft finished the match, played in standing water, with only nine players after goalkeeper Liam Curran and Justin Barnett (Salem) were both ejected for red cards in the first- and secondhalf, respectively.

"We outshot them, outplayed them and outhustled them," Scicluna said. "It was an unbelievable display. We were all over them."

As he did in the Central District championship final and in a 5-4 first-round loss to eventual champion Mercer County CC (N.J.), Lew Tripp (Plymouth Christian) had to move from his left-central midfield position into goal. Yavapai's Todd Brown scored his school-record 34th goal of the season in the third minute of play on an assist from David Oberholtzer to give the Roughriders a 1-0 halftime lead. Ten minutes into the second half, Yavapai took a 2-0 lead on Michael Randolph's goal set up by Daniel Pierce.

Schoolcraft's Runato Susjna then broke Yavapai keeper Robert Armstrong's shutout bid with eight minutes remaining on an assist from Rod Asllani.

The Ocelots were able to stay close because of their conditioning against 23-2 Yavapai.

"It was one of the most physically demanding seasons we've ever had, four-hour training sessions which take heavy dedication," Scicluna said. "We were the fittest team there and we also had the most creative movement of anybody. We also had the ability to bring people together."

Mercer County beat Georgia Perimeter for the title, 3-1, whle San Jacinto College South (Tex.) upended Johnshon CC (Kan.) for third place, 3-2.

The Schoolcraft College women's soccer team finished third in the 2004 NJCAA National Championship tournament that was held last weekend in at Paradise Valley Community College Phoenix, Ariz.

The Lady Ocelots, who finished 24-1, bounced back from a heart-breaking 2-0 loss to Monroe (N.Y.) Community College in Friday night's semifinal game to defeat Lewis & Clark (Ill.), 2-1, in a shootout in Sunday's third-place game.

The Trailblazers jumped ahead, 1-0, at the 15minute mark of the first half before Natalie Thomas (Salem) tied the match with a header with 10 minutes to go in the game. She was assisted by Jessica Saba.

Schoolcraft's Nicole Saigh was voted to the All-Tournament team.

Monroe went on to win the title Sunday with a Young Harris (Ga.), 6-2, which meant that SC lost to the eventual national champion two consecutive years.

The Madonna University women's volleyball team didn't come away with the Region VIII title Saturday at Indiana Wesleyan, but that doesn't mean the Crusaders' season is over.

In fact, it's just beginning as MU earned an at-large berth in the 20team NAIA Nationals, which begins Wednesday at Point Loma Nazarene (Calif.) in San Diego.

Despite being by Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference foe and nemesis Cornerstone in the Region VIII final in four games, 30-27, 32-30, 27-30, 30-26, the Crusaders will be making their seventh NAIA Nationals appearance since 1993 under coach Jerry Abraham.

MU will take a 40-3 record into the tournament and will be seeded eignan grouped in Pool A with No. Fresno Pacific, St. Mary (Neb.), Cedarville (Ohio) and Iowa Wesleyan.

MU and Cedarville tangle at 1:30 p.m. (PST) Wednesday in an opening-round round match. Pool play continues Thursday with matches against Iowa Wesleyan (11:15 a.m. PST) and St. Mary (8:15 p.m. PST); followed by Friday against Fresno Pacific (11:15 a.m.).

The quarterfinals are set Friday night with the semifinals and finals on Saturday.

Abraham's biggest concern before the trip next week to San Diego is the health of his team.

In Saturday's Region VIII semifinal, a 30-25, 30-23, 30-24 win over Taylor (Ind.), starting libero Stephanie DeNardin collided with teammate Jacqui Gatt (Livonia Churchill) while going for a ball in the second game

DeNardin, who leads the Crusaders in digs, had to leave with a separated shoulder.

The Crusaders also played for the second straight weekend without 6foot middle hitter Heather Spooner, who has a high ankle sprain. Preseason All-America candidate Laura Lesko, 5-10 senior middle hitter, also missed the entire season with a stress fracture in her back.

But helping to pick up the slack in the Region VIII tourney were a pair of defensive specialists, 5-6 sophomore Becci Crane and 5-7 freshman Amy Szymanski (Livonia Ladywood).

"We had some critical injuries missing two key players, but we had other people come in and step it up." Abraham said. "Amy and Becci came in a did a great job. I'm proud of them. "When you lose a player like stephame, it's like changing quarter backs. We had to do some adjusting because we already had other kids playing other positions."

Cornerstone, which has won three of five meetings this season with Madonna, improved to 47-3 overall as Shannon Burmaster had a teamhigh 23 kills and 43 digs. Setter Holly Punches finished with 51 assist-to-kills.

Natalja Tinina led MU with 27 kills, while Sharyse Bush and Caryn Inman added 20 and 17, respectively. Gatt had a team-high 31 digs, while Crane added 25. Setter Ashley Frost contributed 61 assists.

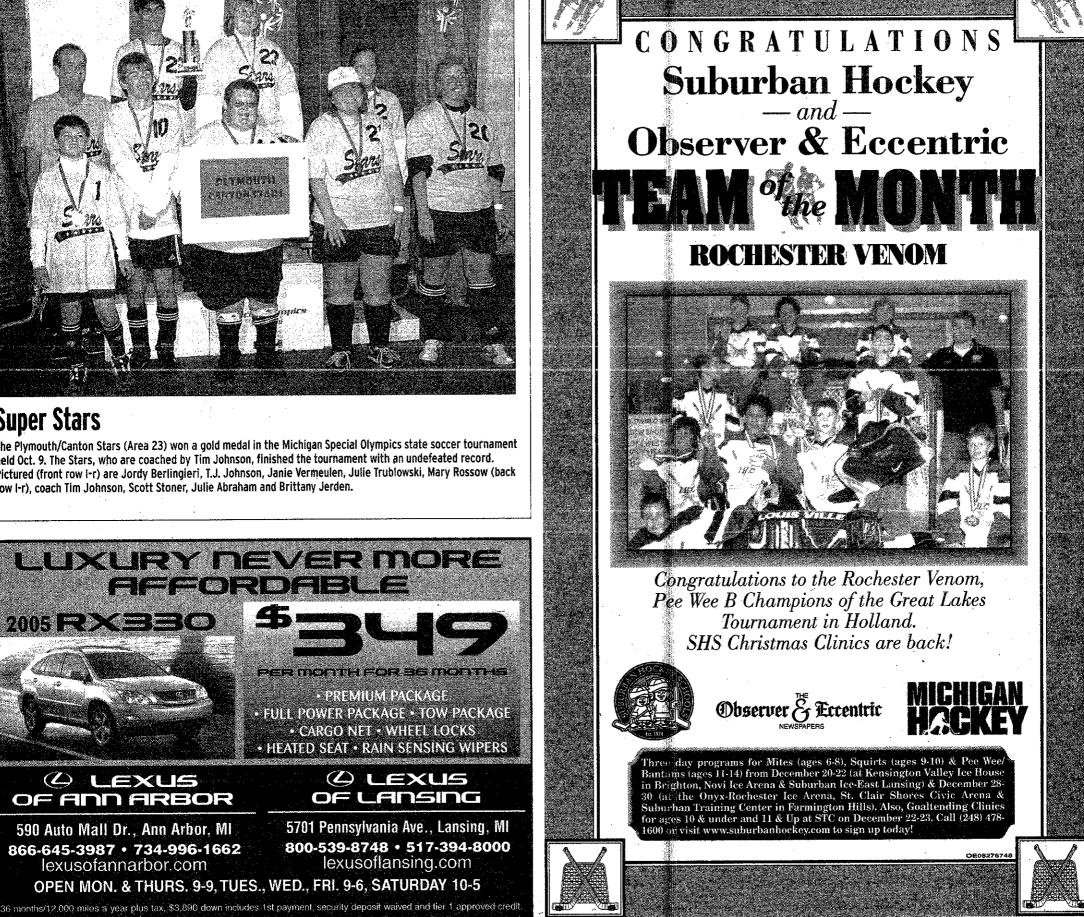

In the win over Taylor (33-9), Tinina collected 21 kills, while Bush added 15. Frost finished with 43 assists and Tera Morrill (Livonia Franklin) contributed a team-high 18 digs. Five Crusaders made the All-Region team including Tinina. Frosh, Sosh, Intman and Morrill

Lions Turkey Day tradition being tested by other owners

he Detroit Lions Thanksgiving Day game

has been a tradition around these parts for 70 years. It was 1934 when first Lions' owner G.A. Richards presented football on Thanksgiving. He even convinced the NBC Radio Network to carry the contest coast-to-coast. There was no television vet. Amazingly, football had survived all that time before the "hit" ABC show, "Desperate Housewives".

November 29, 1934 was the date of that first flying turkey trot. It was played at University of Detroit Stadium in front of an astonishing 26,000 fans. Yes, that was an astonishing number at the time and yes, there was once a University of Detroit Stadium. The Chicago Bears beat the Mark Lions in that first game, 19-16 and a tradition was born.

want to take that from you. They want a piece of the holiday action.

Lamar Hunt has been the ringleader. He has said for years that it's unfair that only Detroit and Dallas get to have home football games on Turkey Day. Hunt believes it should be spread around to every team beginning of course, with his beloved Chiefs. Maybe it's because Chiefs are Indians who were a part of the first Thanksgiving with the Pilgrims. He just wants to stick to the history books.

A more likely reason is money.

Thanksgiving Day is a showcase to the world. Lamar Hunt and other owners want to profit just like Detroit and Dallas profit from it. Lions' owner William Clay Ford has been able to hold off the charge from those nasty heathens. Ford once told me that something dating back 70 years should have a permanent stamp on it.

"It's our game and I don't want to see that change," Ford said. "Naturally, others want in but the only way that's going to happen is if we are scheduled to play them here.'

In his infamous spirited laugh, Ford makes it clear he has battled this attempt to take Thanksgiving football away many times in his 41 years at the helm. The Lions' owner has immense clout in the NFL and sporting community. Doesn't hurt to have a car company either.

"Thanksgiving football in Detroit is synonymous with the day itself now. As far as I am concerned, it's not going anywhere," repeated Ford.

The Lions ride a four game losing skid heading into the game. They are 4-and-6 but the tradition has never been about where the Lions are in the standings. If that was the case, Ford may have bought the team in 1963 without inheriting the Turkey Day tilt. The NFL loves its history and so far greed has not won out.

"I can't imagine Thanksgiving without the game in Detroit. Just wouldn't be the same," said Lions defensive tackle Kelvin Pritchett. This will be Pritchett's 10th turkey feast with the Lions. He has provided a lot of "stuffing" throughout the years.

We would be lost without the traditional Thanksgiving Parade on Woodward and the football game at Ford Field. It's just so cool to have the Lions back downtown. What started in the city will remain in the city.

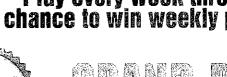

And not one desperate housewife can do a darn thing

Penn State's Vanderlinden well traveled as coach

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

The day following Penn State's season-ending 37-13 football win over Michigan State, linebackers coach Ron Vanderlinden was back in the office, 7:30 a.m. Sunday to map out his recruiting itinerary for the week.

By early Monday, the Livonia native was already on the road, driving through New Jersey and back into Philadelphia in search for new talent for the Nittany Lions, who finished 4-7 this season and failed to make a bowl.

"Recruiting is the name of the game," Vanderlinden said. "It's basically three weeks in December and three more with high school coaches and meet new people. But it's also tough being away from home and family. It takes its toll."

Vanderlinden has always been around the game of football since his days in the Livonia Junior Football League and St. Michael's Grade School.

He played high school football at Dearborn Divine Child under Bill McCartney and was All-MIAA center two years at Albion College where he earned a degree in Physical Education and Psychology.

"I played for 14 years of football," Vanderlinden said. "When I got out of school I figured I'd coach and teach and come back eventually and coach at DC."

Vanderlinden started his coaching career as a graduate assistant at Bowling Green (1978) before moving on to Michigan and Ball State. He was reunited with McCartney at Colorado where he spent nine years as a defensive assistant. He then joined Gary Barnett's staff as defensive coordinator where the Wildcats earned a pair of Big Ten titles (1995-96).

Vanderlinden then served as head coach at Maryland (1997-2000) before returning to the Big Ten in 2001 to join coach Joe Paterno's staff as an assistant. "I had a wonderful experience playing for Bill, sports was a way of separating myself, a way of getting some attention and getting noticed," Vanderlinden said. "When I got to Colorado there was no money in the program. They were way down and when I took the job there it was like minimum wage, but we were able to enjoy a lot of success.

"Coaching under Bill opened a lot of doors for me."

Gary Johnson continues to take his game to another level as point-guard for the University of Central Florida men's basketball team.

The 6-foot-1 senior from Wayne Memorial High and Schoolcraft College was named Atlantic Sun Conference Player of the Week after leading the 3-0 Golden Knights to the BP Top of the World Classic title in Fairbanks, Alaska.

Johnson had 15 points, five rebounds and two assists in UCF's 62-58 win Sunday night over New Mexico State in the championship game. He added 11 points, six rebounds and five assists the previousl night in a 55-52 semifinal victory over Utah State. (Junior forward Marcus Johnson, also of Schoolcraft, contributed seven points on 3-of-3 shooting from the floor in the win.)

UCF opened tourney play last Friday with a 74-63 triumph over host AlaskaFairbanks as Johnson scored eight points, snared four rebounds and added three assists.

For the tourney, Johnson averaged 11.3 points, 5.0 rebounds and 3.0 assists to earn tournament MVP honors. In two of UCF's three wins, he played turnover-free and was a perfect 6-of-6 from the foul line while shooting 39.3 percent from the field.

Johnson said he didn't mind lugging home the big MVP trophy despite the nearly 11-hour plane ride.

'We saw a lot, it was a good experience because I never thought I'd go to Alaska," said Johnson, only one of two starters back from last year's NCAA Tournament team. "It was cold, four degrees when we got off the plane. We visited North Pole (Alaska), rode snowmobiles and saw the (Alaskan) pipeline."

With UCF's top three scorers gone in Dexter Lyons, Robert Morentin and Josh Bodden, Johnson has assumed even more of a leadership role than his junior season. when he averaged 7.7 points per game (while shooting 77 percent from the line).

"I'm a senior and this is my last time around and there's a lot riding for me," he said. "My main focus is just not scoring, just leading and making sure everybody is ready for the next game. When you try hard and lead, you're only going to get good results."

Last season Johnson helped the Golden Knights to a school-record 25 wins, including a near-upset of Pittsburgh in the first-round of the NCAAs.

"Last year we'd get up on teams by 20 points and then try and hold on," Johnson said. "but I can tell by the collection of guys we have and the way they have responded this year that even when they're down, they have the ability to come back.

"I'm excited about that because of the way they love the game."

Lauren Soblesky and junior Kelsie Tietjen scored 12 points each to lead Plymouth Christian. Sophomore Joi Jennings had nine, leaving two points for Holly Johnson.

"We were concerned about Joi Jennings coming into the game," coach Cheri Smith of Lenawee Christian said. "She showed us a lot of skill. She's a good shooter and does well with the penetration game.

"We started out man-to-man for a couple of minutes just to get a feel for how it would go, then we switched to a zone. We were concerned about their ability to press and run." "Their defense was good," coach Jennings said. "Combined with the fact we did not play our best basket-

"That was how we were able to have a little winning streak heading into the districts.

"Our seniors gave up their minutes for underclassmen without a complaint. They didn't like it — I wouldn't have it any other way - but they didn't complain and didn't disrupt the team.

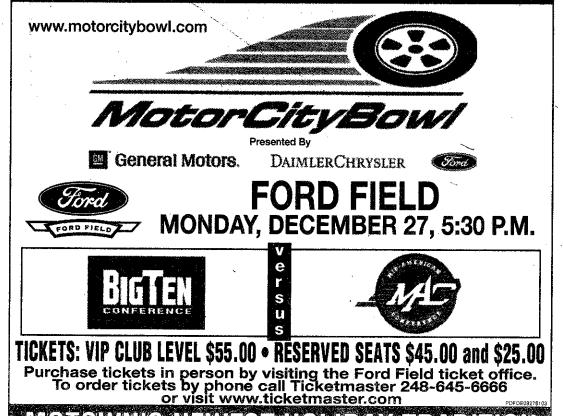

"They showed great leadership, great character."

They did something else, too. One by one, after filing out of the locker room at Whitmore Lake High School, they came up to give Jennings a hug and tell him how much they enjoyed the season. That's why 11-12 isn't always a bad season.

ROCKED

said his team was done in by missed shots and rushed shots.

"I thought we had an opportunity early on, but we couldn't make our shots," Thomann said. "Then later in the game we'd shoot too soon, we'd miss, and it fueled their fastbreak.

"We got to within five with the ball in the third quarter a couple of times. I thought we may have a chance if we could just make a shot and get it down to three, but it never happened."

Thomann told his Rocks to hold their heads high in his post-game speech to the team.

"I told them they should be very proud of what they've accomplished this season," Thomann said. "They won the (Western Lakes Activities Association Lakes) division, they won the districts and they made it to the regionals. I told them to keep their chins up because they played great."

Salem led 7-6 after the opening quarter as its trio of seniors – Ellen Canale, Alyssa Guerin and Kathryn Wheatley – combined for all the Rocks' points.

Whatever Cicerone told her team during the break between the first and second quarters worked as the Mustangs went on an 11-0 run to secure a lead they would never relinquish. Aubrey and fellow guard Katherine Johnson sparked the run by combining for 10 of the 11 points.

Salem received a jolt 29 seconds into the second quarter when Canale, its leading scorer this season, was whistled for her third foul. She sat out the rest of the half, which ended with Marian up 23-13.

Canale swished a triple to start the third quarter, but Marian's Katie Rashid countered with a three of her own to put the Mustangs ahead 26-16.

Salem cut its deficit to 26-21 on a Guerin pull-up jumper from the lane with 4:15 left in the third quarter, but a three-point play by Aubrey pushed Marian's advantage back to nine.

The Mustangs led 31-22 after three quarters. They sealed the victory by outscoring the Rocks, 9-2, in the opening moments of the final quarter.

"We got beat by a very good basketball team," Thomann said. "Any team that can go 20-4 can go a long way in the tournament."

Aubrey was complemented offensively by Rashid, who had 12 points, and Johnson, who twined 10. Brigid Mulroy tallied seven points and a team-high nine rebounds.

Guerin paced the Rocks with 14 points and six rebounds. Canale, who fouled out with 4:22 remaining in the game, was held to six points. Teresa Coppiellie scored eight and hauled down five rebounds.

Thomann said Canale's foul trouble damaged the Rocks' chances of advancing.

"When your vocal leader and arguably the best player on the team has to sit out most of the second quarter and play with four fouls for a lot of the second, it hurts," Thomann said. "But I thought the girls who came in off the bench played well."

Northern suffers painful blow in semis

BY ED WRIGHT STAFF WRITER

West Bloomfield senior point guard Maria Martin suffered a painful blow to the mouth early in Monday night's regional semi-final game against Pontiac Northern.

But it was the Huskies who could have used the Novocain after Martin and her teanmates laid a 62-47 hurting on waren gynaastatie.

I just had a tooth pulled, and I got hit in the same spot by the ball, said Martin, who scored six points, dished out 13 assists and played a spectacular floor than one occasion, she grabbed a rebound dribbled the length of the court, then threaded a pass to a cutting teammate. "Randall's been doing that for us all year," Moore said. "So has Nicole Clark, especially rebounding, which is always the key to winning.

"I thought Pontiac Northern played well. They have some very quick guards and they play good defense."

The Huskies were led by senior guard Ashley Jackson, who scored 17. Jackson's back-court mate, freshman Raina Chambers, chipped in with eight.

Hurst and Clark won the battle of the boards for the Lakers, hauling down 18 and 14 rebounds, respectively. Seaborn Basketball registration for the Westland Youth Athletic Association will be from 7-9 p.m. Wednesdays and

10 a.m. until noon through Saturday, Dec. 4. The WLAA offers leagues for boys and girls ages 7-14 including Right Start (7-8), Freshman (9-10), Junior Varsity (11-12), Varsity (13-14), Girls Freshman (9-11) and Girls Varsity (12-14).

The fee is $45 for Right Start ($105 buyout) and $65 for all other leagues ($135 buyout).

Tryouts, for evaluation purposes only, will be Saturday-Sunday, Dec. 11-12. The Right Start clinic (ages 7-8) will be on Saturday, Dec. 4. (You must be registered to try out and to participate in the clinic.)

game. "It was pretty painful, but when you get hurt in a big game like this, you just have to suck it up."

The victory vaults the 20-4 Lakers into tonight's 7 p.m. regional final against 20-4 Birmingham Marian, which knocked off Salem, 49-35.

"We're going to have to play well in every facet of the game to beat Marian," said West Bloomfield coach Larry Moore. "They are strong in every position."

Northern coach Leole Greer said the biggest difference in the game was the Lakers' superior height advantage.

"When their six-footers are going up against my five-footers, there isn't much doubt who's going to get the ball," said Greer, whose team was outrebounded 49-26. "I was happy with how we played. We didn't turn the ball over much (eight turnovers), we had a lot of steals (14), and we boxed out, but their size was too much to overcome."

Martin distributed the ball evenly among the Lakers' top offensive threats. Chelsea Seaborn led all scorers with 18. Randall Hurst had 17 and Nicole Clark netted 16. The 6-foot Hurst often ran the court like a 5-4 point guard. On more had six caroms for the winners. Kenesha Long and Bianca Williams both had a team-high six rebounds for Northern.

West Bloomfield never trailed and led 15-7 after one quarter thanks largely to Seaborn's seven points.

Northern hung tough early, scoring the first four points of the second quarter on a pull-up jumper from Jackson and a driving hook shot from Chambers. However, the Lakers shifted their running game into the next gear and went on to outscore their under-sized foes 17-3 over the next five minutes to take a commanding 32-14 lead.

West Bloomfield led 52- 30 after three quarters. The lead only dipped below 20 in the game's waning moments then Moore cleared his bench.

The Lakers hit 26-of-55 field goals (47 percent) and a sizzling 10-of-12 free throws (83 percent). Northern canned just 16-of-68 shots from the floor (23 percent) and 13-of-19 free throws (68 percent).

The Lakers won handily despite turning the ball over 21 times. ewright@oe.homecomm.net | (734) 953-2108 For more information, call the WYAA Lange Compound Building at (734) 421-0640.

Offering constructive criticism to others can be beneficial, but only if the other person is receptive to our It's Easy To Criticize...

comments. In teaching situations or during on-the-job training, constructive criticism is usually necessary to instruct and help a person develop a trade or vocation. However, correcting someone, even in a kind or skillful manner, can be very challenging, since we are never sure how the individual may react. Many friendships and families have been destroyed because someone has been overly critical of another person's words or. actions. Knowing when we should offer our comments can also be difficult, and we should be fairly certain that our comments are truthful and necessary. It often seems so easy to criticize others because we mistakenly believe that we are without fault or are such experts on most everything. The Bible tells us that we look at the speck in our brother's eye, but we pay no attention to the log in our own (Luke 6:41). Faultfinding and being overly critical of others, especially behind their backs, are wrong and can become habit-forming. However, kind words are good for the soul and help to build a person up.

The way of a fool is right in his own eyes, but a wise man listens to advice. R.S.V. Proverbs 12:15

RALPH DAVID WINEMAN April 30, 1915-Nov. 19, 2001. We all have our own memories of Ralph, and I would like to share some of mine with all of you. He is my grandfather and friend. He would always tell me I could call him anytime, and ofter times I would. Mostly, I would try to beat him to the phone at 6pm when he would usually call, (right after dinner) If it was after 6pm when my phone rang, I would tease him that he was late and he would laugh. I can't really remember too many days that I didn't talk to him over the 26 years. If I ever had something on my mind, I could call him and he would always listen and of course give his opinion. I lived with my grandpa when I was little. He walked me to and from kindergarten everyday. When I was too tired to walk he would put me on his shoulders and walk me the rest of the way home But not without stopping at the park to play on the swings for a little bit. In the summertime, I was able to pick the green beans from the garden. I thought it was so much fun, he probably thought it was great having some-one else do the work! He loved to stay in shape. We would jump rope together, he would have me count to 100 and then he would have me try it. As I got older I was able to keep up with him Then when I was able to drive, he would ask me "When can we go to Sebewaing?" So we would set days for a trip together. I would drive him to the grocery store and when his eyes started to fail, he would walk behind me so he could see where to go. I then had another chance to live with him a few years ago and everything came full circle. I was taking care of him. I'm so glad I was able to be there with him, as stressful as it was at times. He had to have his meals precisely at 8am, 12pm, and 5pm. In more recent years. would take him to see Larry for a haircut, and we would laugh trying to get him back into my van. On Sundays when I could, I would visit him and we would watch Lawrence Welk together He never really complained about how he felt, even though his health failed rapidly the last few years of his life. However, he would complain about the food or any new clothes we would buy him. He was very particular and set in his ways. I think it's safe to say the most important things in his life were God and all of us. For selfish reasons

I'm sure we would all like him here

Reading enhances wine enjoyment

asting is the best way to learn about wines and establish your personal preferences.

But how do you know what to taste and how to derive meaning from it? Read.

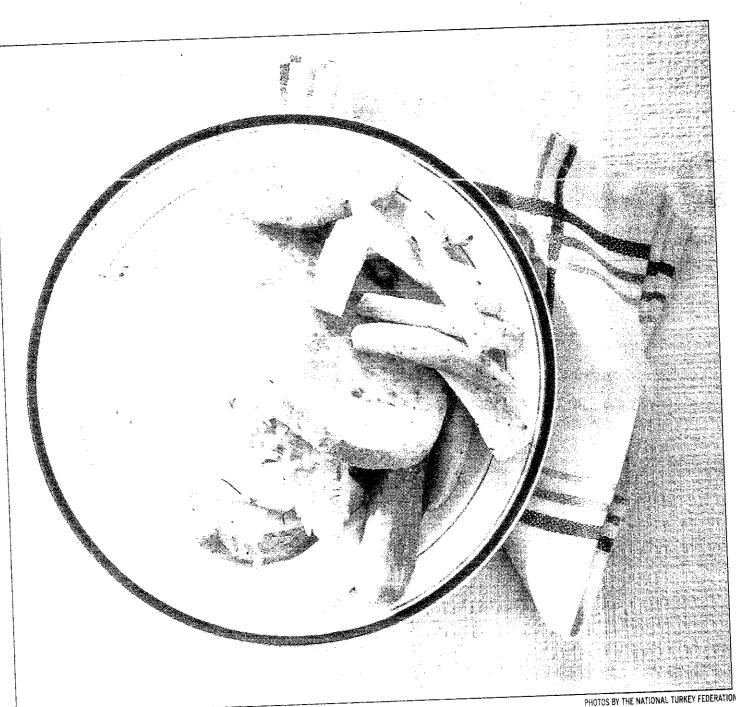

Among the wine books we've reviewed this year, five are standouts. Gift yourself or a wine friend with any or all of the following.

🖬 Vino Italiano Buying Guide by Joseph Bastianich and David Lynch (Clarkson Potter publishers, $13.95). The authors share a passion for Italy, its wines and cuisine. Bastianich is the son of renowned Italian chef Lidia Bastianich and a partner with chef Mario Batali in the restaurants Babbo, Esca and Lupa in New York City. Lynch is a well-known wine and food journalist who is now the wine director at Babbo.

Vino Italiano Buying Guide is one of surest ways to learn which are the exceptional producers and best vinevards in each region of Italy. If you're a fan of pocket guides and Italian wines, add this to your collection.

Hockey fans take note: Are you missing pro hockey yet? Renowned hockey legend Igor Larionov has a liquid hat trick for you! In May 2004, Larionov, a 27year hockey veteran, teamed with business partner Mike Davis and California vintner Dave Miner to blend his first proprietary wine Hattrick, made from the three primary Bordeaux varieties cabernet sauvignon, merlot and cabernet franc, grown in California's Napa Valley. With only 224 cases, it's nearly as rare as a hat trick, but it is available and worth your efforts to find a bottle or two.

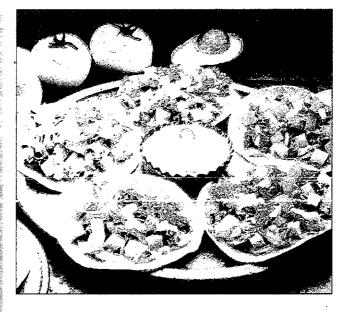

Here's a little trivia you can use when serving Hattrick. In his career, how many hat tricks has Larionov had? Answer: four in the United States and 10 in Russia. When will Larionov, who turns 44 in December, play his last hockey game? Answer: Dec. 13, 2004, in Moscow.

Bake whole wheat 'Sciscuits' Give your favorite oatmeal cookie a makeover

BY DANA JACOBI CORRESPONDENT

D2 (*)

What happens when you cross a biscuit with a scone? Simple: a "sciscuit." And why would you want to make this fresh-from-the-oven breakfast treat from scratch? Easy: It's quick to make, super-healthful, and a great way to celebrate a holiday from the get-go.

Sure, you say. With a million other things to do, you want me to bake something that has to be done at the last minute for breakfast?

I'm betting these sciscuits will entice you to try them, since only about 10 minutes is needed to whip them up. And the version below is a revamped, healthier but yummy reinvention that will help everyone in your household start the day - festive or ordinary - in cheerful spirits.

You can do it with these sciscuits because they are wholewheat and low in fat. The combination puts them between a biscuit and a scone, and they are easy to split so you can use your favorite toppings.

If you have kids, instead of demanding they have cereal, put out peanut butter or a lowfat cream cheese as well as their favorite jam to encourage them to have this high fiber, nutrient- packed treat. And remember, offering freshlybaked treats is a savvy way to relieve the tension that sometimes builds up by afternoon in the pressure to get all the holiday cooking on track. And don't underestimate the power

Stay slim this holiday season

PRNewswire – This may be the time of year dieters dread, but it is possible to enjoy the holidays and begin the New Year healthier and guilt-free, according to Certified Personal Fitness Trainer Brad

Ritter. Ritter, who also is a fitness model and motivational speaker, says healthy holidays begin with a commitment to indulge less. Ritter advises health- conscious revelers maintain their current weight by eating less at parties and at work, squeezing in physical activity and asking family and friends to support them in their quest for better health. See www.fitnessonthefly.com. "With so much concern about obesity, 'moderation' is the watchword for this holiday season," Ritter says He suggests setting a goal of main taining your current weight. "Too often, we use the holidays as an excuse to overindulge, telling ourselves we'll lose the weight in January," he says. "If you commit to maintaining your weight, it becomes much easier to stay focused on moderating your eating and drinking." Ritter offers these tips:

Eat a healthy snack or meal before parties, which reduces the temptation to overeat.

Arrive after parties start when the food does not look as appetizing.

Avoid congregating near the food and bar.

Keep fruit and vegetables in supply, and store the goodies out of sight.

Along with extra calories. the holidays bring more stress for many people, making exervise especially important. "You may not be able to exercise as much as you might like, but try to get some physical activity a few times each week," he suggests.

"Even brisk, 20-minute walks burn calories and relieve holiday anxiety."

With so much temptation during the holidays, it is important to ask family, friends and co-workers for support. "Don't be afraid to tell others of your commitment to improving your health," he says.

Studies show Americans gain as much as 10 pounds over the holidays.

Ritter says that often leads to a guilt-filled, holiday health hangover in January that can be avoided by making an effort to eat and drink moderately, and by making time to be active mericans eat over 17 pounds of turkey per person a year so what makes the Thanksgiving turkey special? Maybe it's not about the turkey but about the friends and family that are gathered together!

A beautifully decorated table, a perfectly roasted turkey, all the wonderful side dishes, traditional desserts, all make the meal special. Save time to visit or chat with your guests. Here are some suggestions to make the turkey safe and perfect for your guests.

How many guests are you having?

Figure about one pound of turkey per person. If you purchase a pre-stuffed turkey, then allow 1-1/4 pounds per person. Check and make sure you have a roasting pan large enough for the turkey. (Some of the foil pans are OK, but are lightweight and flimsy so you'll need to handle with care).

To stuff or not to stuff? Remove the bag of giblets from the cavity of the bird. (It's a little disturbing to find paper-wrapped giblets still inside when you start to carve!) The turkey roasts faster unstuffed, so put the stuffing in a greased, covered casserole, put in oven for the last hour the turkey is roasting.

If you decide to stuff the bird, do it just before you put it in the oven. Make the dressing ahead but refrigerate separately, stuff the bird and put it in the oven. Figure about threefourths cup of dressing per pound of bird. Don't overstuff the bird, it needs room to expand. The stuffing should be cooked to at least 165° F. to be safe.

Do I need a meat thermometer?

Yes, to be safe use a meat thermometer. Nearly one-third of food poisoning cases at home is because of inadequate cooking. Use an oven safe thermometer. Place the thermometer in the thigh muscle not touching the bone. The turkey is done when the thigh reaches 180 to 185º F.; and 170 to 175º F. in the thickest part of the breast. Make sure the juices run clear and not pink.

Can I roast in a bag? There are bags made especially for oven roasting a turkey. Put a tablespoon of flour in the bag to prevent it from bursting. Do not use ordinary brown grocery bags to roast a turkey. They are not sanitary, the glue and ink may give off unhealthy fumes. These bags are not food grade. Find a cooking bag that is safe for the oven.

Can I deep-fry my turkey? If you choose to deep-fry the turkey, practice extreme safety. Keep the cooker away from other flammable materials. Keep the children away from the cooker, the oil can burn very badly.

Do this away from the house, make sure you do not tip the cooker over, and never leave the cooker with the oil unattended. Allow three to five minutes per pound and use a meat thermometer to check the temperature of the turkey. Best advice is to follow the directions from the manufacturer of the turkey cooker. No time to cook?

Order a precooked Thanksgiving turkey but make sure when you pick it up, that it is HOT. Don't just keep it warm, keep it hot! Set the oven high enough to keep the internal temperature of the turkey at 140° F. or above. Eat within two hours of its purchase. If dinner is later, remove the stuffing from the bird and refrigerate in shallow containers so it cools quickly.

What about leftovers and clean-up?

After dinner, refrigerate leftovers promptly. Remove meat from the bone and stuffing from the cavity. Store them all separately. Reheat leftovers to 165º F, bring gravy to a full rolling boil, and stir to make sure it is all heated. Use leftover cooked turkey within two to three days, stuffing and gravy within two days or freeze if you can't use it that soon.

Wash your hands frequently, before, during and after handling raw poultry or any food. Use paper towels when cleaning up the juices from the turkey.

They can be used and thrown away after the clean up so harmful bacteria can not spread. Make sure your meal is delicious and unforgettable. Handle the foods carefully and safely.

Thanksgiving should be a happy day and not a day for a "hospital run" because you have made someone ill with your food. Practice food safety on holidays and all days.

Here are last-minute food safety tips Vegetarian recipe takes on chicken fried steak

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) ~ Children are fattening.

It took me just two months of fatherhood to figure that one out. And it already annoys me. For mothers at least there is that whole pregnancy excuse, though it irritates me to note that my wife already has rocketed back down to her prepregnancy 90-something pounds.

We fathers have no such crutch, and a sympathy belly seems less sympathetic once your wife's has disappeared.

So my son and his insatiable sleeplessness are entirely to blame. The sounds of the kitchen - the whirring of the mixer, the cadence of a knife on a chopping block, the hum of the dishwasher - seem to be some of few sounds that will quiet him.

Combine that with my foolhardy decision to take several months leave to bond with my joyful little bundle, and I now find myself carting around an extra bundle of my own to the tune of about 20 pounds. With so much time on my hands I have cooked and cooked and cooked. And while Parker sleeps, I eat and eat and eat.

First there were breads. What better time to perfect one's bread baking than when one is home for days on end? Then there were cakes and cookies, and curries and sautes, and pastas and pirogues, even a few

Thanksgiving test runs. And just as I was dreading the thought of returning to work and having to again fit into real pants (why get out of your PJ's when you never leave the house and constantly are spit up on?) I was warned it will get worse.

A friend cautioned that if I think it's easy to pack on the pounds now, just wait until the little one is eating solid (ood) and it becomes my job to clean his plate.

That's a fear I will deal with later. Perhaps by then I will have ventured outside long enough to have returned to the gym.

For now, I have committed myself to a lighter lifestyle, child be damned. I will get out and walk, pile my plate with whole grains and fresh vegetables, cut the fat. Heck, I'd even cut a few carbs.

As with all the best diets, that lasted about half a day. Now I can shift the blame from my son to Angela Shelf Medearis, author of The Ethnic Vegetarian (Rodale, 2004, $18.95), which focuses on foods with African-American and Caribbean influences.

When her book arrived for review, my first thought was to set it aside for, um, leaner times. Many of the recipes sound delicious, and deliciously fattening. A corn pudding with a cup of heavy cream would do me in.

Medearis offers plenty of recipes that don't push the scales quite so much, but frankly it was the likes of fruit and sweet potato fritters. Tanzanian baked bananas and a corn curry with three cans of coconut milk that had my eye.

I finally went over the edge when I saw her chicken-fried steak seitan. I had to try it, even if it was battered and fried. I've tried other versions of vegetarian chicken-fried "steak" and never was impressed Medearis' recipe calls for using cutlets of seitan, a meat substitute made from wheat gluten.

Large patties of seitan suitable for this recipe can be found in the frozen section of most natural foods grocers.

Unable to leave the house to get seitan cutlets (back to blaming the son) I substituted a similar meat-alternative patty. It worked well, and later tests with seitan proved just as 200d.

The result was phenomenal

- crunchy and spicy on the out side, tender on the inside. Even my wife, who generally avoids with meat substitutes, agreed that the chicken-fried steaks were terrific.

Medearis suggests serving this dish with gravy and mashed potatoes. They also arem excellent with a bit of ketchup or or barbecue sauce for dipping. And diets always can start tomorrow.

Show some savvy with your veggies

BY DANA JACOBI CORRESPONDENT

Italians eat vegetables as readily as we eat fat-laden chips, super-sweet desserts and soft drinks full of empty calories. What's more, they actually eniov them

Using fabulously easy Italian dishes might help everyone at home to eat more veggies. Here are a few tips for doing it in ways that may win over even a "veggie hater." First, combine vegetables with other ingredients that do please. If you have a meat-andpotatoes stick-in-the mud, feed them meat loaf. Just don't call attention to the fact that you have mixed a package of chopped spinach into the ground beef or turkey. This is one of my favorite tricks, using defrosted frozen spinach, squeezed dry and sautéed briefly with chopped onions and garlic. My neighbor's 10 year-old son, first presented with this meatloaf, declared, "I don't like spinach, but it's okay in this." For picky vegetable-eaters, of any age, who like pasta, sauté a shredded zucchini or tiny broccoli florets in olive oil, then add a jar of prepared pasta sauce. This works especially well if you use a chunky sauce containing mushrooms or a meat sauce. Pasta dishes are a great way, in general, to help people eat more vegetables. Start by using a vegetable-filled lasagna (the frozen kind is fine), adding extra, vegetable-spiked sauce over it. This way, it's too hard to pick out the vegetables. Worst case, remember that even if they eat around the veggies, tomato sauce counts as a vegetable.

If disliking vegetables is more a matter of taste than of principle, try this quick puttanesca sauce. No anchovies here, but olives, capers and garlic, plus chunky tomatoes, give it such robust flavor that the cauliflower I add usually goes unnoticed.

This sauce is excellent over whole-wheat pasta, either linguini or penne, which adds extra nutrients and health protection to a meal.

WHOLE WHEAT LINGUINE WITH CAULIFLOWER PUTTANESCA SAUCE

2 tablespoons extra virgin olive

1 can (28-ounces) plum tomatoes 2 cups small cauliflower florets 1 tablespoon capers in vinegar, rinsed and drained (optional) ½ pound whole-wheat linguini

Heat oil in a deep saucepan. Stir in garlic, and cook 30 seconds. Add tomatoes, with their liquid, using a wooden spoon to break them up. Add cauliflower and olives (and capers, if using). Cook for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Season sauce to taste with pepper.

While the sauce cooks, boil a large pot of water, and cook pasta according to package directions. Drain it in a colander, and divide pasta among 4 wide, shallow bowls. Top it with the sauce, and serve.

Makes 4 servings. (about 5 cups)

Note: To reduce their sodium content, use capers preserved in vinegar, which contain less sodium than those in salt. Soak them in water for 10 minutes, then rinse and drain them before using.

It's easy to make the perfect pizza

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated press writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) – It seemed like such a great idea at the time, and for that I blame those cursed home improvement shows.

I also blame the Italians, who so wooed me with their tasty wood-oven pizza during a vacation several years ago that I became obsessed with re-creating the experience at home.

When I proposed gutting the kitchen to make way for a fancy (and pricey) indoor wood-cooking oven, my wife proposed not. She instead found a book with plans for a do-it-yourself on-the-cheap outdoor pizza oven.

Building Barbecues and Outdoor Kitchens (Sunset Books, 2001, $14.95) says that its "simple adobe oven can be constructed in a matter of days (elsewhere it says two or fewer) and is great for cooking pizzas, roasts, vegetables and crusty loaves of bread."

Right. So I was just a weekend project away from perfect pizza.

Before construction could begin, there was the issue of where to put the oven. That's when the project grew.

The only logical place in our yard was behind a large and unused carport. And if we did that, why not build a deck under the carport, call it an outdoor dining room, and furnish it with a massive table with seating for dozens? The home improvement shows do it all the time.

THREE STEPS

Step 1: The deck. It was to be a simple 25-by-30-foot platform, roughly the footprint of the carport. But simplicity doesn't come cheap. Contractors wanted thousands and thousands of dollars to build it. How hard could it be?

So I harassed help from a friend. His day job: food photography. His deck-building clay. The oven cooks by heat retention, not direct flame. Start a fire, let it burn down, scoop out the ashes, add food, close door and cook using heat that has built up in the oven's thick clay-cement walls. I had my doubts.

The materials checklist was basic and a trip to the homerenovation superstore provided everything but the adobe. Web sites by others who have built this oven suggest digging the adobe from your back yard.

That's fine in the Southwest, but New England? Would granite work?

Sunset's book offers little guidance for finding sources of adobe clay. Three weeks and countless telephone calls later, I had one. For $4 per load and four loads, I had a huge heap of mud in my driveway.

Nearing the three-month mark, we began what should have been the second day of the project.

Making the form for the dome from the cardboard barrel and wire was easy. Making the cement-adobe mud to be packed over it was not.

The book says that the adobe clay and cement should be mixed in a 3-1 ratio. A hoe and wheelbarrow seemed insufficient for the quantity we needed, so we rented an industrial cement mixer.

This would have worked well if the clay didn't turn into a solid mass once water hit it, gumming up the bottom of the mixer and refusing to, well, mix in any way with any thing.

In the end, a combination of hand and electric mixing was the laborious winner.

Three and a half months later, the construction was complete. Pizza time? Not quite. The oven had to be carefully covered in wet towels and plastic tarps and allowed to dry for one week.

Two weeks later it was mostly dry and time for the initial firing, which finishes the drying and burns away the cardboard barrel form. Then a coat of exterior-grade latex paint to waterproof the oven. More than four months after the two-day project began, I had a pizza oven. But would it cook? The residualheat approach left me concerned. I was convinced that without an active flame it wouldn't stay hot long enough to cook.

Absolutely. The pizza is fantastic, and the oven is fun to use.

PERFECT PIZZA

Of course, the perfect pizza oven needs the perfect pizza. Toppings are too individual to dictate, but a good crust and sauce are essential. While store-bought dough is fine in a pinch, freshly made is best.

There certainly are more involved recipes, but the folks at Cook's Illustrated magazine have an easy-to-make winner in their recent book, Baking Illustrated (America's Test Kitchen, 2004, $35).

PIZZA DOUGH

(Preparation: 2 hours) ½ cup warm water (about 110 degrees Fahrenheit) 1 envelope (about 2-¼ teaspoons) instant yeast

1-¼ cups water, room temperature

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oll

4 cups bread flour (22 ounces), plus more for dusting work surfaces and hands

1-½ teaspoons salt

Olive oil or cooking spray for oiling a bowl

Combine the warm water and yeast in a 2-cup measuring cup. Let stand until the yeast dissolves and swells, about 5 minutes. Add the room-temperature water and oil and stir to combine.

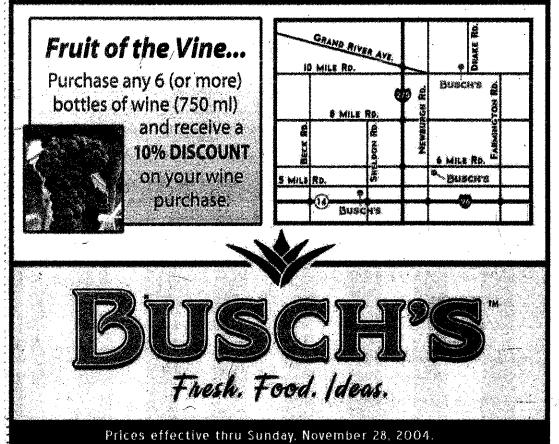

Process the flour and salt in a food processor, pulsing to combine. Continue pulsing while pouring the liquid ingredients (holding back a few tablespoons) through the feed tube.

If the dough doesn't readily form a ball, add the remaining liquid and continue to pulse until a ball forms. Process until the dough is smooth and elastic, about an additional 30 seconds.

The dough will be a bit tacky, so use a rubber spatula to transfer it to a lightly floured work surface. Knead by hand for a few strokes to form a smooth, round ball. Place the dough in a deep bowl that has been lightly oiled. Cover the bowl with plastic wrap and let rise until doubled in size, about  $1-\frac{1}{2}$  to 2 hours. Press the dough to deflate and shape.

experience: his own, unfinished for two years.

An afternoon project, he assured me. Six hours at the most. Right. A month later I had my simple platform deck.

Step 2: Furnishings. No wimpy table would do for a deck this size, so I spent a week designing, ruining, redesigning and finally building my own. Four 4-by-8-foot sheets of plywood, dozens of tiles and foot-long bolts later, I had plenty of seating.

Step 3: The oven. With the rest of the furnishings left to my wife, I enlisted my parents as laborers for the oven construction. We were now nearly a month and a half into the two-day project.

THE OVEN

Sunset's design calls for building a base of concrete blocks topped with heatresistant firebricks. Wire and half a cardboard barrel are used to form a dome over this base. The dome and base then are covered with about a foot of cement mixed with adobe

THANKSGIVING WEEKEND STRATA

- 2 cups leftover bread stuffing 2 cups cubed bread (any type will do, leftover dinner rolls are a great option) % cup whole milk
- 3 large eggs
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard 1 tablespoon hot sauce (optional) 1 teaspoon salt
- /4 teaspoon ground black pepper 1/2 tablespoon butter
- 2 cups white or assorted mush-
- rooms, quartered or diced 1 white or yellow onion, chopped 1/2 cup green onions, thinly sliced
- Squash those turkey leftovers

A good, healthful way to use leftover turkey is the base for a casserole. With a whole grain, you can make a flavorful and rich-textured but healthful one-dish meal.

You might start with barley – a grain that's been popular since the Stone Age. A single cup of this easy-to-prepare grain contains eight grams of fiber – the same amount of fiber found in seven cups of white rice. Barley also is rich in protein, potassium, calcium, iron and B vitamins.

Barley's nutty flavor goes well with onions, mushrooms, or peas. Butternut squash also is a good complement. This large, pear-shaped winter squash has sweet, orange flesh. With onion, green pepper and sage, you'll be glad you had turkey leftovers.

BARLEY, TURKEY AND BUTTERNUT SQUASH CASSEROLE

Cooking spray 2 small butternut squash 2 teaspoons olive oil 1 green bell pepper, seeded and diced ½ cup minced onion 1 teaspoon dried sage Freshly ground black pepper, to taste 2 cups fat-free, reduced sodium chicken broth % cup quick-cooking barley* % pound cooked turkey breast, cubed or diced % cup crumbled feta cheese

Preheat oven to 350° F. Coat a 4-quart baking dish with cooking spray.

In a large pot of rapidly boiling water, boil squash halves 5 minutes or until not quite tender. Drain. When cool enough to handle, scoop flesh from each half and dice. Set aside.

In a large saucepan, heat oil over medium heat. Add green pepper, onion and diced squash. Sauté 3 minutes. Add sage and pepper and stir to coat. Add broth and bring to a boil. Add barley and return to boil.

Reduce heat to low, cover and cook 10 minutes, until barley is tender and liquid is absorbed. Mix in diced turkey.

Transfer mixture to prepared baking dish and top with feta cheese. Bake, uncovered, 30 minutes, or until cheese is golden. Makes 6 servings.

CHANGE for the homeless and hungry

Take time to speak with a few homeless people and one thing becomes obvious: there's no single path that leads to life on the street. It could be a job loss or drug addiction, it makes no difference, to us. In the past year, The Salvation Army served 2,191,095 meals, or an average of 6,003 meals per day, and provided 595,015 nights of shelter, or an average of 1,630 beds per night. The numbers are staggering. The need is heartbreaking. And it all adds up to a huge opportunity to make a difference for the homeless and hungry in Detroit. Did you know that the number of people in metropolitan Detroit needing help with basics like food and shelter has increased by 33 percent over the past three years?

But our ability to protect and support our vulnerable men, women and children is at risk this holiday season. With fewer public locations available for our Red Kettles, we need your help to Make Change Happen for people who need us most . . .

Your gift will help The Salvation Army bring real and lasting changes to the lives of thousands of people in need this holiday season and throughout the year. By sharing with The Salvation Army, you help Make Change Happen... and bring hope where once there was despair.

Pears are the pick of the season

(NAPS) – With the prevalence of obesity and weight issues a major health concern, people are encouraged to eat healthier meals.

Low-carb and other restricted diets don't give the balance of fiber, vitamins and minerals found in food plans that encourage healthy fruits and vegetables. With that in mind, and to champion the importance of the dietary benefits of fresh produce, Weight Watchers launched the Pick of the Season, a public health initiative spotlighting one specific fruit or vegetable each season with nutrition information and delectable recipes. As part of Weight Watchers seasonal cornucopia of recipes featuring a select fruit or vegetable, this season's "pick" is the pear. In addition to its health benefits, pears are a great-tasting food that can be baked, sautéed, poached or eaten fresh out of hand. Here's an Acorn Squash and Pear Soup that reflects the food values inherent to the Weight Watchers philosophy that eating should be satisfying as well as healthful. For additional recipes, visit WeightWatchers.com.

Lime mini tarts fine for dessert

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Go ahead, have dessert. A sweet treat can be the perfect way to end a meal, especially if it's light and refreshing as a miniature lime tart can be.

This recipe comes from Family Circle: Eat What You Love & Lose (Regan Books).

Author Peggy Katalinich suggests using store-bought mini phyllo pastry shells (found in the freezer section of your local grocery store), which also makes this an easy dessert to whip - or, more accurately, whisk - up,

The total preparation and cooking time is about 20 minutes, then the tarts need to be refrigerated for at least two hours but can be refrigerated up to six hours before serving.

LIME MINI TARTS

Lime curd filling: 3 large eggs <sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub> cup sugat 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger ½ cup fresh lime juice 1 tablespoon grated lime rind Tart shells and garnish:

3 packages (2.1 ounces each) mini phyllo pastry shells (15 pre-baked shells per package, 45 shells total) 1 firm, ripe mango, peeled, pitted sliced and cut into 1-by-1/inch pieces 1 cup sliced strawberries

In a heavy-bottom, medium sized saucepan, whisk together eggs, sugar, ginger and lime juice. Cook over medium heat, whisking constantly, just until boiling and mixture is thickened, about 6 minutes. (Mixture should register 160 degrees on an instant-read thermometer.)

Transfer to a medium-sized bowl; stir in lime rind.

Cover surface with plastic wrap; refrigerate 2 hours or until chilled.

Once chilled, spoon 1-1/2 teaspoons of lime curd into each phyllo shell; top with a piece of mango and a strawberry slice.

Serve immediately or refrigerate up to 4 hours.

Garnish with additional grated lime rind, if desired.

Disclosing affiliation good business

Our insurance agent was recommended by our management firm. I just learned that a former employee of the insurance company is now a principle in the management firm, that was not disclosed to us. Our condo board wonders if that is any type of breach.

I have seen instances where former associates or employees of accountants and/or law firms have gone to work for management companies who then refer their clients to the accountant and/or law firm without disclosure. While there may not be an absolute obligation to disclose the relationship, it would appear that good business practice would require that any affiliation between the management company and your insurance agent regarding employees should be disclosed to you, if for no other reason than to avoid any appearance of impropriety and/or favoritism. I would confront your management company with this development and ask them why it was not disclosed to you. Depending upon their reply, I would decide whether I want to continue to do business with the management company and the insurance agent recommended by it.

Thinking about families celebrating their first Thanksgiving in new homes makes area Realtors and developers thankful. After all, people buying homes are their bread and butter. But they're not just in it for the money.

Charlie Jackson, a Realtor with Coldwell Banker Schweitzer in Northville, is thankful that "we are in the wonderful state of Michigan where earnest, hardworking people create a need for new condos and housing, and become lifelong friends along with creating a customer base for us."

Mary Lou Flatter, a Realtor with Prudential Cranbrook, Realtors in Bloomfield Hills, is thankful for her colleagues and loyal customers. This may shake out to be the best year ever at Snyder, Kinney, Bennett and Keating in Birmingham.

"I'm thankful to interact with quality people in southeastern Michigan's most soughtafter communities," said M. Michael Cotter, associate broker principal. "I feel lucky that we've been around 73 years and have maintained a successful place in the market. When you say thanks, it makes you remember to be thankful. It's a huge joy to have someone walk into a house and say 'You know, this one feels right.'"

Darlene Larsen is happy the election is over and the phones are ringing again at Prudential Cranbrook, Realtors in Bloomfield Hills. "It was slow, Now we "can get back to work."

Renters can be inflation savvy

hy rent a home when you can own one? Mortgage interest rates remain excellent and there is an abundance of homes on the market In fact, if you are currently renting and your lease expires in the next few months, you should review your home financing options right now.

GOOD REASON

There may be a good reason for you to rent year after year, but there is one huge reason not to rent for that long - inflation. To know inflation is to love inflation if you can get it working for you instead of against you.

Your inflation-savvy landlord owns property that will continue to gain value every year. If her operating expenses for your property squeeze her profit margin too much, she will tell you that you need to pay her higher rent. Your choices are then to pay more or to move out.

How can inflation compel you to own instead of rent? Well, in 1970 a U.S. postage stamp was 6 cents, a gallon of gas was about half a dollar, and a simple three-bedroom ranch put you back $30,000. Today, you can mail the letter for 37 cents. tank up for 30 bucks, and that same home costs about $150,000.

Using the same historical inflation rate ratios, in 2038 you will pay $2.28 per stamp, $1,800 to fill up stipulation was that the RV had to be a minimum of a certain length and certain age. Now after a number of years, the operators decided to turn it into a RV park for fifth wheels and motor homes only. We believe this is in violation of our original Purchase Agreement. What do you think we can do?

It depends on your Purchase Agreement and the Bylaws of the RV park. If it is a condominium, you may have recourse against the developer and the question then becomes whether the owner/operator had the right to amend the documents without membership approval. #### GIVE THANKS

David Jacobson of Jacobson Brothers Real Estate in Birmingham, is "thankful for being able to provide both renters and buyers a safe and pleasant environment, and for having established a solid reputation in residential real estate in the Detroit metropolitan area." He's also thankful for his employees.

"Talon Development Group has a lot to be thankful for as we wrap up 2004," said Michael V. Polsinelli, president and CEO of the Bloomfield Hills-based company. "We broke ground on the Maywood Pointe Condominium Project on Woodward Avenue in Pleasant Ridge. This proved to be the ideal project for people looking to buy in the thriving Royal Oak market as we only have a few units left to sell. We are also appreciative of the opportunity to develop a distinctive brownstone condominium project in Plymouth Township. Plymouth Village brings residents to the bustling Ann Arbor Road corridor and offers luxurious living at affordable prices. We are thankful for the assistance we received from city officials in Pleasant Ridge and Plymouth Township, the successful relationship we have with our real estate team, and to the buyers who loved our projects. We look forward to 2005 as we hope it will bring as much prosperity as we have experienced this year."

a cool $750,000 for that cute starter home. Look, don't yell at me, it's just math.

Unless your landlord agrees to "freeze" your current rent payment for the next 30 years, your decision is not whether or not to buy a home, it is how soon should you buy. At today's rates, your $1,000 per month rent payment should get you a mortgage of $110,000 to $145,000, depending on your credit, down payment, and loan type.

Mortgage lenders today have many innovative loan programs - bruised credit, small down payment, no income validation - to help renters realize their dream of home ownership. Create wealth for yourself, not for your landlord. If you are renting, contact a mortgage lender today. You may be pleasantly surprised.

Ford Freestyle and Five Hundred Deserve A look

Advertising Feature

Thursdav DriveTime

BY DALE BUSS

As Ford Motor Co. has sought to overhaul its new-product lineup this year, the company has gone in two divergent - but equally crucial - directions simultaneously. On the excitement end, Ford has introduced the racing-stance GT and soon will introduce a new version of the venerable Mustang, an all-new execution that promises to be the best manifestation of this nameplate in many years.

On the other hand, Ford also is using this season of lineup transformation to strengthen itself in basic, dependable, value-oriented vehicles the likes of which it has always provided, such as the Taurus and Sable sedans. In this case, for 2005 Ford has introduced two new mid-level entries, the Five Hundred sedan and the Freestyle sport-utility vehicles, companions based on a single mechanical platform.

In each case, Ford has hit the mark, offering transportation that performs, provides interior comfort, and looks good, all for reasonable sticker prices. They're the kind of vehicles that will carry Ford a long way toward stability in the highly competitive automotive marketplace.

A 2005 Freestyle served as the platform for a family weekend trip to Chicago recently, and it performed ably in all areas. Because it's based on a car platform, Freestyle displayed the best characteristics of a car-like vehicle, including easy ingress and egress, responsive handling, and very respectable highway mileage. And yet it presented the roominess for passengers and cargo that is crucial even for short trips. In accomplishing all of that, Freestyle established itself, for me anyway, as a true contender for best new executive of a "crossover" vehicle.

In Freestyle, Ford has combined a space consciousness with friendliness toward people and their needs that produces a very friendly totality. Three rows of seats provide either six- or seven-adult capacity, although the third-seat space is a little snug. Still, even with all three rows of seats deployed, there was enough room in the cargo well for several pieces of luggage and other accouterments for four people for the weekend. Each version of Freestyle depends on a new 3.0-liter, V6 engine that is rated at 203 horsepower. All are equipped with a continuously variable transmission, or CVT, that helps the modest-sized powerplant make the most of its available resources.

Freestyle comes in three trim levels, starting with the $25,0000 SE level that I drove. Yet even SE comes with features that you wouldn't always expect to find in a b ase model, including a six-way power driver's seat, cruise control, tilt steering wheel, fourwheel disc brakes with ABS and traction control, as well as air conditioning, power windows, outside mirrors and central locking, and AM/FM/CD stereo. Even all-wheel drive is optional on the SE version, for $1,700.

The Five Hundred is Ford's bid to take back a trailblazing position in the sedan market, which it last staked out in 1986 when it introduced "jellybean" styling to the world via the Taurus and Sable - and made them the best-selling cars in the country for many years. Toyota Camry and Honda Accord have stolen the lead in subsequent years.

The Five Hundred makes a credible stab at restoring some of Ford's past glory in this segment. Styling is crisp if not spectacular, featuring big wheels and sharply creased fenders, although some people believe it too closely resembles the Volkswagen Passat. The Five Hundred is built more like a crossover SUV than a sedan, with tall fenders, a high roofline (61 inches, five inches higher than Taurus) and an elevated position for drivers. In fact, the interior is probably the Five Hundred's best feature, providing ample headroom and backseat legroom, lots of windows and simple, understandable controls for the driver.

2005 Ford Freestyle

The Five Hundred's styling and stance, in those ways, are redolent of Chrysler's hot-selling new 300C sedan, although the latter is much more boldly styled. Camry is nearly a foot shorter, three inches lower and 650 pounds lighter than the Five Hundred.

The same continuously variable transmission that smoothes the path for Freestyle also is present in the Five Hundred, keeping the engine speed within a narrow range instead of distinctly shifting from gear to gear. Nevertheless, the car's acceleration proved barely adequate for some routine situations, perhaps indicating that Ford compromised a bit too much to achieve fuel-economy levels of 21 miles in the city and 29 miles on the highway, about matching the best of its competition.

Overall, with a base price of $26,145, Ford is back in the mid-size sedan game with the Five Hundred.
