Police warn of 'zero tolerance' for fireworks violations this summer

Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

Canton police have received 586 complaints about fireworks since 2013, prompting a stern warning as the Fourth of July holiday approaches. "The Canton Police Department is going to take a zero tolerance approach to these complaints," Special Services Lt. Craig Wilsher said Tuesday.

Fireworks fans who refuse to follow the law could face a $500 fine for each offense. Canton has received numerous complaints about fireworks being set off late at night and weeks before and after holidays. Canton officials also warned that businesses selling fireworks could be fined and shut down unless they first receive a state permit. Kristin Kolb, Canton's corporation counsel, said illegal businesses haven't been a real problem in Canton. "I don't think we've had anybody not have a license," she said. Canton allows the discharge of certain fireworks only on national holidays and the day before and after — but only from 8 a.m. to midnight. Deputy Police Chief Scott Hilden said extra officers will be placed on duty during the Fourth of July holiday to respond to all fireworks complaints. "Last year, the department received an abundance of fireworks complaints; this year, by assigning officers to the special enforcement, it will allow shift officers to remain on-task with their regular patrol duties," Hilden said. "In the best interest of public safety and resident wellness, police officers will

Thrown off ballot, pair launch write-in bids

Two Republican candidates for Plymouth Township offices will run as write-ins after being thrown off the primary ballot by a Michigan Court of Appeals decision.

Judges Kurtis T. Wilder, Kirsten F. Kelly and Karen Fort Hood ordered Friday that Kurt Heise, who is running for township supervisor, and Don Schnettler, who is running for the Board of Trustees, be taken off the Tuesday, Aug. 2, primary ballot for failing to indicate their home precinct on their respective affidavits of identity filed for their candidacies.

Schnettler and Heise had won a Wayne County Circuit Court decision June 1, but the higher court overturned that decision and issued a "writ of mandamus" ordering county Clerk Cathy Garrett and the county elections commission to remove them from the ballot.

"It is undisputed that Schnettler and Heise failed to comply with" the law requiring their precinct number, the judges wrote. "Hence, the Wayne County defendants had a clear legal duty not to certify Schnettler and Heise's names."

Heise said Saturday he doesn't have the resources to appeal, but will run as a write-in Republican in the primary.

"They won this round, so what we're going to do now is take it back to the people," Heise said.

Heise, a Michigan House of Representatives member in his third term, is challenging Supervisor Shannon Price, who was appointed to fill a vacancy in April 2015. Heise cannot run for re-election to the House because of term limits.

Schnettler, who has run for township office several times, is among 10 Republican candidates for four spots on the board.

Voter backlash?

Heise said he has been getting many calls of support since news of the ruling began to spread late Friday afternoon. He said he will launch a drive to educate voters on

Liberty Fest deemed a huge success

Fireworks had barely stopped exploding over Heritage Park — ending Canton's 25th annual Liberty Fest — before organizers began looking ahead to next year's event.

Canton Leisure Services Director Debra Bilbrey-Honsowetz said festival planners next week will meet for a debriefing to discuss what worked and what needs tweaking after the three-day Liberty Fest wrapped up Saturday night.

"We've heard all very positive reports that all the guests had a great time," she said, calling it a "quality event that accomplished what we hoped for" by drawing large crowds for a family fun celebration of community.

Bilbrey-Honsowetz has said Liberty Fest draws an estimated 50,000 people, including repeat visitors, over a three-day period.

Despite large crowds, Canton police reported no serious incidents on the Heritage Park festival grounds.

"Overall, it went very well. We only had a couple of minor altercations and a couple of people were cited for being disorderly," police Sgt. Jim Harrison said. "We escorted them out."

"We had a great crowd, a very diverse and very friendly crowd," he said, adding that some patrons had their patience tested amid traffic bottlenecks after the fireworks show ended.

Harrison said it typically takes more than an hour to clear traffic after the fireworks show ends.

Despite hot temperatures, Deputy Fire Chief Christopher Stoecklein said firefighter paramedics encountered no heat-related illnesses or be using a zero tolerance approach to observed fireworks violations."

Wilsher said Canton received 164 complaints in 2013, 219 in 2014, 184 in 2015 and, this year, 19 to date, though major holidays such as the Fourth of July are still to come.

Wilsher urged caution when setting off fireworks.

"The biggest advice I would give is to not mix alcohol with fireworks," he said. "It impairs judgment."

Wilsher also warned against allowing children close to fireworks and strongly urged anyone setting off fireworks to use caution.

"Nothing should be held in your hand as you are firing off fireworks," he said.

State Fire Marshal Julie Secontine has issued a statement saying "fireworks are a risky thrill and are best left to professionals." For those who insist on using them, she said, misuse can lead to "irreparable injury and harm."

According to the state office, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that 230 people go to the emergency room daily with injuries from fireworks, and in 2014 at least 11 resulted in death. Most emergency room visits were for the treatment of burns with the most common injuries to the eyes, hands, head and face. Most injuries were to bystanders.

The Canton Public Safety Department this week issued a list of guidelines for fireworks:

» No fireworks should be ignited or discharged within 70 feet of any building or on any public street.

» Unless a permit has been issued by the township, consumer fireworks should not be set off except for the three-day period surrounding a national holiday. They also should not be set off after midnight or before 8 a.m.

» Fireworks should not be discharged on public property, school property, church property or on another person's property without their written permission.

» Minors are prohibited from having or discharging consumer fireworks.

» No one is allowed to use low-impact or consumer fireworks while under the influence of alcohol or a controlled substance.

» Township ordinance also prohibits the sale, storage or use of sky lanterns — small hot air balloons that float skyward holding a flame. Canton banned those last August, citing concerns about potential fires.

Police say any unlawful discharging of fireworks should be reported to the Canton Public Safety Department by calling 734-394-5400. When prompted, press 2 and then 1. Emergency situations should be reported by dialing 9-1-1.

how to write in his name on the primary ballot.

He said he expects to benefit from a voter backlash over being taken off the ballot because of a technicality.

"People are fed up with this and there's going to be serious change," he said.

"I think there was a fire, a good fire, but they just took five gallons of gas and poured it on it," Schnettler said Tuesday night of voter reaction.

"People are pissed," Schnettler said his "commitment level is way up" and that he is motivated because he wants voters to have choices after a court decision that takes some of those choices away.

The case was begun in May by Carl Berry, a township resident, Price ally and former township police chief, who filed a lawsuit seeking the writ of mandamus.

Berry said Tuesday that he doesn't define the appeals panel's decision as a "win," but simply as an adherence to the law.

"I don't have anything against those two, I really don't," Berry said. "They just need to fill out the paperwork correctly, that's all."

Berry said he's been the target of "vile, nasty threats" because of the court action, but wouldn't elaborate. "Whether they like it or not, it's a part of the law and that's the way it is," he said.

The attacks, Berry said, did not come from either Heise or Schnettler.

Price: Campaign is focus

Price said Monday "nothing's changed" for his campaign.

"I've said all along I'm just going to focus on my campaign and run my campaign," Price said. "(Heise) didn't fill out his form and he has to live with the consequences of what he did."

Asked if the decision could lead to a backlash in the form of voter sympathy for Heise, Price said, "That's for people to decide."

Conzelman said Tuesday that about 15,000 primary ballots had already been printed, with Heise's and Schnettler's names on them, and delivered to her office. They will have to be reprinted by the county.

Her office, Conzelman added, was able to meet a Saturday deadline for sending, via email, 28 overseas and military absentee ballots without Heise and Schnettler on them because Secretary of State Ruth Johnson's office, which provides the electronic ballots, updated the template for them late Friday following the appeals court's decision.

Schnettler and Heise, Conzelman said, have already filed the required paperwork declaring their intentions to run in the primary as write-ins.

A spokeswoman for Garrett's office did not reply Tuesday to emailed questions about reprinting ballots.

Pond, fire pit anchor garden filled with art, wildlife

Sharon Dargay
Staff Writer

Anna Graham and Matt Noble-Richardson like to sit by the fire pit in their backyard and listen to the crackling flames. They enjoy hearing water splash into the pond, the croaking toads and tree frogs, the chirping birds that feast from their backyard feeders and horn blasts from nearby trains.

At night, they're likely to see a raccoon or a passing skunk drink from the pool filled with orange and calico goldfish. During the day, cats from a feral colony that Graham feeds hang out on the lawn or visit the two-level deck that's furnished with trash-picked and re-purposed treasures, antique store finds and handmade tables.

Every planting bed along the garden perimeter tells a story or evokes a memory through handmade art and vacation mementos set amid perennials.

"I would describe this region of Plymouth as funky," said Noble-Richardson, who moved into the Old Village house 18 years ago. "And our yard is ..."

"I always say eclectic," Graham said. "And meandering, because it moves around the yard. It's not just in one spot."

"We enjoy the space. If you saw it at night, it's actually quite charming," Noble-Richardson added.

"This yard has been us for five years, working on it together. He'll come up with something. I'll come up with something. And in the end, we're working on something that is ours," Graham said. "We change it on the fly all the time. It's always evolving. We call it our secret garden."

The secret will be out Tuesday, June 28, when Trailwood Garden Club brings its annual garden walk, Flowers are Forever, to the couple's backyard and to several other home gardens in Plymouth. The walk runs from noon to 8 p.m. and will include complimentary treats and beverages. Master gardeners also will be stationed at each garden to answer questions. Tickets are $8 in advance and $10 the day of the walk. They're available at Specialty Pet Supplies, 1449 Ann Arbor Road; Sideways, 505 Forest; and Saxton's Power Equipment, 37980 Ann Arbor Road, Livonia.

DIY

Graham and Noble-Richardson have never attended a garden walk nor been involved as hosts, but that didn't faze them when the Trailwood Garden Club extended an invitation. They've worked on seven rooms in Noble-Richardson's house since they began dating five years ago. They finished basement bathroom construction while starting outdoor prep for the Trailwood walk last month.

Texture, light

Noble-Richardson said he and Graham have been working on the house, inside and out, to transform it into a home.

In the garden, they focus on textures and varying heights.

"We always talk about having different textures. We can see when there needs to be a change somewhere. It's looking at a spot and sensing what is missing," he said.

"You've got to know your lighting," Graham added. "You've got to know if you have short things, high things and texture. Then you think about color, after you've got your texture, because texture can be just as interesting."

CANTON CRIME WATCH

Man erred in reporting
5-year-old son missing

It started with a harrowing phone call to Canton police after a 24-year-old father claimed his son was missing. Turns out he had forgotten he asked a friend to care for the boy while he was inside the Home Depot store on Michigan Avenue in Canton, a police report said.

That's how the story unfolded about 7 p.m. June 17, when police went to the store. A police report indicated the father was "acting odd" and that a knife fell out of his pocket when he went to look for his cellphone.

Police also learned the man had a prescription pill used to treat anxiety, bipolar disorder and panic disorder.

He initially told police he couldn't remember the last time he had seen his son. He said a friend had dropped them off at the store.

He called the friend, however, and learned the child was with him. The friend was at a nearby restaurant with the boy. The report said the friend had taken the boy with him for misbehaving in the store.

The father told police he hadn't used drugs since he smoked marijuana earlier in the day.

Meanwhile, he had contacted other relatives who showed up at Home Depot store in a panic, fearing the little boy was missing. A short time later, the friend returned to the scene with the child in tow.

The father was ticketed for child neglect and possession of dangerous drugs. The report said the state's Child Protective Services already had begun an investigation.

Facebook flap

Ordered by a court not to have contact with his ex-girlfriend, a 67-year-old Canton man notified police to report that she has been trying to become friends with him on Facebook.

The woman, however, told police she hadn't made the request and that her Facebook account had been hacked.

The man told police he had been arrested in the past for harassing communications involving the 54-year-old woman. He said one of the conditions of his bond is to avoid the ex-girlfriend.

Police contacted the woman on the man's behalf to ask her not to send friend requests through Facebook. That's when she denied any involvement.

Police advised the man to notify authorities if any further action occurs.

Knife pulled

A Canton teen was accused of getting a steak knife during an argument with her mother inside a residence on Marine, in the Academy/West Point mobile home park on Canton's southeast side.

However, the mother told police her daughter never threatened her with it.

The incident unfolded about 12:40 a.m. Monday, after the mother told her 19-year-old daughter that she wanted her out of the house. A police report indicated the two have had problems.

The daughter notified police that her mother had slapped her and punched her. The mother denied the accusation and told police she pushed her daughter when she got too close to her during an argument.

That's when the mother said the daughter got the steak knife. The report indicated the teen later left the residence.

iPhone swiped

Never leave a purse unattended while climbing on a carnival ride.

A 20-year-old Canton woman learned the hard way Saturday night, when she set her purse down before getting on the Fireball ride at Liberty Fest.

She told police that, after she got off the ride, her iPhone was missing from her purse, though nothing else appeared to have been taken.

She later used a Find my iPhone app and learned that her phone was apparently in Bay City, about 110 miles away.

A Canton police report indicated Bay City authorities would be checking an address where the iPhone was supposedly located.

Ailing father

A Livonia man told police he has become concerned whether his 75-year-old father is able to take care of himself at home.

The man notified police and asked for a well-being check until he can remedy the situation.

Police received a call about 1 p.m. Saturday reporting poor living conditions inside a home on Chadwick, near Hanford and Canton Center. The son said he found food and dishes strewn on counter tops and possible feces on the kitchen floor.

The son said his father suffers from health conditions, including hypertension and congestive heart failure. He said he also fears his father isn't taking his medication.

A police report indicated the son was figuring out a solution for his father.

PLYMOUTH CRIME WATCH

Cash, phone stolen in locker break-in

Cash and an iPhone were reported stolen Monday from a locker at L.A. Fitness, on Ann Arbor Road at Haggerty.

The victim, a Westland man, told police he was at the fitness center Monday evening and returned to his locker in the men's locker room to find the money and phone missing, according to a Plymouth Township Police Department report.

The locker had been locked, the victim told police, and the lock was also missing.

Vehicle break-in

A purse was reported stolen from a Jeep Renegade one night last week after a window was broken out while the vehicle was parked outside the victim's home in the township.

The location of the break-in was retracted on a police report. It happened between about 8 p.m. June 14 and just before 8:30 a.m. the next day, the victim told police.

There were personal items in the purse, the victim said.

License suspension arrests

» A 45-year-old Detroit man was arrested for driving with a suspended license and on several outstanding warrants, after an officer spotted him on M-14 near Beck Road just before 4 a.m. June 14, a police report said.

Police say the officer stopped the driver, in a Pontiac Bonneville, after a check of the car's license plate revealed the registered owner was wanted on warrants and had a suspended license.

» A 21-year-old Oak Park man was arrested June 14 for driving with a suspended license after being stopped for having a burned-out headlight and no visible license plate on the car he was driving.

Police pulled over the man, who was in a Ford Taurus, after the car was spotted on Beck, near Port Street, just before midnight, a police report said.

The Taurus was not registered and a license plate from a different vehicle was lying below the back window, police said.

Canton police Sgt. Eric Kolke has successfully completed the Police Staff & Command School at Michigan State University.

The school is a 400-hour program designed to provide extensive training focused on the management, planning, analysis and administration of police departments and their personnel. The programs are problem-based learning, fostering critical thinking and philosophies applicable in today's law enforcement community.

The experience takes officers beyond traditional operational methods and exposes them to conceptual thinking, paving the way for their future success as a command officer.

Liberty Fest this year had a new fireworks company — Ace Pyro of Manchester — and Bilbrey-Honsowetz said the show was a hit with festival-goers.

"We're all heard very good things about that," she said.

She said groups raising money for charity also seemed to draw good crowds. Those included the Canton Firefighters Local 2289 Charity Foundation, the Canton Lions Club, the Rotary Club of Canton and, in its last festival appearance, America's Most Wanted Car Club, with its popular classic car show.

Although Canton Leisure Services employees are highly visible at Liberty Fest, Bilbrey-Honsowetz said all of Canton's municipal departments helped to make it a successful event. She said "a huge team" is behind the festival.

BMW celebrates anniversary with donation

Thin Blue Line receives check for $3,650

Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

John and Dawn Horner, owners of BMW Motorcycles in Plymouth Township – formerly in Canton Township – wanted to do something special to celebrate the dealership's 10th anniversary. An open house was sort of a given. But customers had long suggested that the dealership give away a bike.

That sealed it. A decision was made not only to give away a motorcycle, but to do it for a good cause: The Thin Blue Line of Michigan, a non-profit organization dedicated to helping and supporting families of injured or deceased law enforcement and public safety officers.

"This is a great charity," Dawn Horner said.

As hundreds walked into the dealership for the open house in late May, each adult was asked to purchase one of the 326 available raffle tickets. "They all responded pretty well," Dawn Horner said. "If they didn't buy a ticket, they had to learn about the Thin Blue Line."

By the end of the day, the dealership had a $3,650 donation from the Horners for the non-profit that was started in 1999 by the late Laurie Reinacher, wife of Scott, who is president of the Thin Blue Line.

And yes, a motorcycle – specifically, an R9T – was given away to the customer with the winning ticket. And the winner was no stranger to the Horners or Scott Reinacher and Kelly Pigeon, also of the Thin Blue Line.

John Santomauro, former Canton Public Safety director, and his wife Laura held the winning ticket and were handed the keys.

And the best part is that those who bought raffle tickets helped support public safety and law enforcement officers' families.

"My wife formed it. Her first husband, Byron, was killed in the line of duty," said Reinacher, a former Michigan state trooper. "Laurie realized there was a need. There are more sick and injured officers than those killed in the line of duty."

The Thin Blue Line raises funds for affected families, helps obtain federal death benefits for officers killed in the line of duty, helps with workman's comp benefits and offers financial assistance – there's a 20-percent wage loss when officers are on injury leave.

"We are unique with what we do," Reinacher said. "We make sure there is a need. We don't just hand things out. We check every 30 days. We do a lot of following up. Our job is to keep them as whole as possible."

The Thin Blue Line has a number of fundraising events each year. Coming up Oct. 1 is the Fall Color Run at Maybury Park.

For the Horners, the raffle for the Thin Blue

Line made sense. For some seven years, the couple had fundraisers for National Cerebral Palsy. And more than $3,000 was raised to help the family of motorcycle state Trooper Chad Wolf, who died in 2015 after being struck by a trailer.

"I honestly believe the community doesn't do enough," John Horner said about support for injured officers and families of deceased officers.

While raising money for the Thin Blue Line, the Horners also put on a great event to celebrate their 10th anniversary. A big draw was stunt rider Chris "Teach" McNeil, as well as demo rides for guests and plenty of door prizes.

"Sometimes, motorcyclists get a bad rap," Horner said. "People who were here donating were doctors, lawyers, skilled trades people – you name it. They are from all walks of life."

Experimac opens store on Ford Road in Canton

Everyone has their limits, including John Park. "I just couldn't get that excited and motivated about selling plastic resin anymore," the 50-year-old Novi resident said. "I've always had an itch to start my own business; I just needed the right vehicle."

For the 25-year veteran of the automotive industry and his wife Karen, that "vehicle" arrived earlier this month when they opened Experimac in Canton. Experimac is retail storefront that specializes in sales of pre-owned Apple® computers and devices; repair of laptops, phones and tablets; trade-ins of existing devices; software and system updates; and sales of accessories. Experimac's store at 42114 Ford Road is the only one in the state.

Park had spent his career in sales and purchasing, while his wife has a background in human resources.

"When my two-year contract ended at my last company, I wanted to do something different," Park said. "I knew that just about anything dealing with Apple® products would be a success. The more I found out about the business model, the more excited I got and the more I knew this was the 'vehicle' I was looking for."

The Parks have invested a large part of their savings into launching their Experimac franchise and are hoping to meet a strong need in the area for consumers. The technology sector is obviously booming. In 2014, about 302 million computers were sold worldwide, generating about $304 billion in sales revenue. At the same time, almost seven billion cellphone subscriptions were purchased worldwide by May 2014, nearly one for every person on the planet.

Because Experimac specializes in selling pre-owned Apple® products, products can be sold at a price point that is accessible to a much wider range of customers, according to the company.

"The strength and dominance of the Apple® brand is such a big plus," Park said. "And the life cycle of products continues to decrease as Apple® continues to innovate and introduce new products at a rapid pace, which is great for our business."

And though the Parks just launched their entrepreneurial careers, they are already looking ahead to establishing something more.

"We both came from the corporate world. We have a 12-year-old daughter and twin boys who are turning 16, so we will have the boys work part time," Park said. "Maybe someday, this will truly be a family business."

Graduates need crash course in establishing a budget

As high school and college graduations are behind us, for many graduates the reality of the world is at their doorsteps. Many of them will be leaving the safety of their parents' nest and, for the first time, starting their own household. Although it is wonderful to start receiving a paycheck, most peoples' initial inclination is to reward themselves by buying some of the things they have putting off. Unfortunately, it shouldn't work that way.

School may have taught the graduate many things, but one area that school, whether high school or college, does not teach well is personal finance. I cannot stress enough how important this area is. After all, if you make mistakes regarding your personal finances, you may find that it takes years and years to dig yourself out. It is important to get off to a good first step.

Rick Bloom
MONEY MATTERS

In our society, it is easy to spend money. The hard part is to be responsible ...

My recommendation for a new graduate is to first take stock of where you're starting from. What are your assets and your liabilities? If you have outstanding debt, you need to know what the interest rates are, what your payment is and whether you'll be able to deduct the interest or not. It is important to remember not all debt is the same. For example, a charge card debt where you're paying 18.5 percent and is not tax-deductible is different than a 4.5-percent mortgage that is tax-deductible. As far as I'm concerned, the first step along the way is to take stock of where you're starting from.

The next step is to establish a budget. Most people believe a budget is meant to restrict your spending. On the other hand, I believe that a budget allows you to spend money knowing that you can afford what you are purchasing. Unfortunately, for people who are just starting off and don't do a budget, they won't have that comfort and will tend to overspend.

In establishing a budget, it is important to pay yourself first. What I mean is that you starting saving for your retirement. For those who are just starting out in their career, it is doubtful they will have pensions and whether they will have Social Security is up in the air. That is why I always tell people the day you start working is the day you start saving for your retirement. Every year you don't save for your retirement means you will delay your retirement for at least a year. I recognize saving for retirement, which for many people may be 40 years down the road, is difficult, but let's face reality — life is difficult and it will be even more difficult for someone who does not take care of their finances.

In our society, it is easy to spend money. The hard part is to be responsible with money. For many graduates, this is the first time in their life that they will have disposable income. The temptation is to take that disposable income and spend it. What I encourage people to do is to be more responsible. Establishing a budget and living by it is responsible.

A budget is not a document you do once and forget about. It is something you constantly need to adjust to fit your evolving situation. A budget is a living document, which means it should change with you.

Once again, congratulations to those who are starting their career and entering the real world. I wish you the best of luck and I strongly encourage you to take your personal finances seriously.

Home Goods customers can participate by making a contribution at the register to "Help Families Fight Cancer," with 100 percent of the proceeds benefiting the Jimmy Fund. Customers also have the opportunity to purchase a reusable shopping bag for 99 cents featuring artwork by Dana-Farber's Jimmy Fund Clinic pediatric patient Allisa Freiburger, 9, of Westwood, Mass. Home Goods will contribute 50 cents to the Jimmy Fund for each bag purchased.

"We are grateful for the continued generosity of Home Goods' loyal customers, who have raised millions of dollars for the Jimmy Fund and Dana-Farber over the last 15 years," said David Giagrando, assistant vice president of corporate partnerships at the Jimmy Fund. "We are so appreciative of their commitment to finding cures for cancer and we're thrilled to partner with Home Goods again this year to help more families facing this disease."

"We're proud of the long-term partnership we've had with Dana-Farber Cancer Institute supporting the Jimmy Fund," said Robyn Arvedon, Home Goods spokesperson.

Sue Sargent of Livonia (left) and Chard'ey Woolfolk of Garden City were happy to volunteer Saturday for Kids Without Cancer during Canton's Liberty Fest. Sargent lost a daughter, Chrissy, to cancer at age 12 in 1993.

Sue Sargent of Livonia lost daughter Chrissy to cancer in 1993 at age 12. She got involved in efforts to fight childhood cancers, and was out Saturday at the Canton Liberty Fest's Kids Without Cancer booth.

"We're funding childhood cancer research," Sargent explained to a passer-by. She was with Chard'ey Woolfolk of Garden City, a Henry Ford Community College student who was also volunteering for the day.

"We envision a world of kids without cancer. Our organization is Kids Without Cancer," Sargent said. "We're going to make it happen."

The women were offering small rubber ducks for $2 or larger ones for $5 for "adoption." The ducks will be raced Sept. 10 at the water park at Red Oaks County Park in Madison Heights to support Kids Without Cancer.

Woolfolk, 25, has a good friend whose grandmother battles the disease. Woolfolk will transfer next year to the University of Michigan-Dearborn and is studying business administration and biology.

Sargent explained the organization began with parents of children who were patients at Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit. It was then known as Leukemia Research Life and later changed its name and focuses on all childhood cancers.

It's been around for 35 years with more information at www.kidswithoutcancer.org and Facebook.com/kidswithoutcancer.

There are student chapters at Michigan State University, the University of Michigan (both Ann Arbor and Dearborn) and Wayne State University that provide volunteers, Sargent said. She also has a daughter Jill, 29.

"It's a little slow, but it's OK," Sargent said of business at Liberty Fest in Heritage Park. "We pop up at different events throughout southeast Michigan" to raise money for the cause.

Their goal is about $25,000 for the Saturday, Sept. 10, Motor City Quack Attack race, the second such annual event. It is hosted by Oakland County Parks and will run 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sept. 10, with a grand prize of $1,000.

P-CCS district is getting it right for students

Limited Lansing financial support, charter schools and online and home schooling programs are all taking a heavy toll on our public school system. Many school districts in Michigan are struggling to keep their doors open as they deal with inadequate funding, coupled with declining enrollment.

The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district is no exception. Enrollment has declined from 19,000-plus in 2009 to 17,152 in 2015-16. Every student comes with the equivalent of approximately $100,000 in state funding over the 13 years they are in the district. A 2,000-student decline in enrollment represents $200 million in lost future revenue. This is devastating to a school district like P-CCS.

The district, led by interim Superintendent Monica Merritt, has embarked on an aggressive program to address the declining enrollment issue. Public school districts have never before had to compete and P-CCS is no exception. Suddenly, the district was thrust into a competitive environment that was foreign to its basic operating principles. To address this issue, the district decided to establish a "Blue Ribbon Panel" of approximately 25 business and community leaders to assess the situation and offer suggestions.

Don Soenen

It quickly became evident to the panel that P-CCS has terrific programs, staffed with very talented and experienced individuals who are dedicated to the education of our kids. The problem is that this information is too much of a well-kept secret.

All 999 P-CCS teachers are certified and have an average of 13 years of teaching experience in the district. Turn-over averages less than 2 percent per year. Eighty-six percent of the teachers have advanced degrees. This is an extremely well-educated, experienced and stable teaching staff.

The district offers a broad range of programs to satisfy every student's interests and capabilities. The elementary and middle school talented and gifted, or TAG, programs are very much in demand and have 700 students enrolled. The middle schools offer a broad range of extracurricular and athletic opportunities for kids of all skill levels. STEM labs are at all middle schools.

The P-CEP high schools offer an unprecedented level of programs for students of all capabilities and interests. The arts academy incorporates an arts-integrated approach to academic instruction. It's designed for musicians, photographers, actors, painters, sculptors and those who see the world from an artistic perspective.

The STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) academy offers two tracks: biomedical sciences and pathways to engineering. Students take focused steps to prepare them for a dynamic, technology-driven society. The International Baccalaureate Programme is a high-intensity, rigorous program that brings cultural appreciation and a global perspective to the studies. The career and technical education program teaches specific career skills to prepare students with the necessary academic, technical and work behavior skills to enter the workforce. Offerings even include a full-service auto and body shop program.

In 2015, more than 4,287 students in the district took Advanced Placement college credit classes, giving them a head start on college. The district offers more types of AP classes than any other school district in the region. This year's graduates received more than $20 million in college scholarships, a tribute to the success of these programs.

There are more than 100 extracurricular clubs and activities at P-CEP, including nationally recognized culinary, robotics, radio and marching band activities. Twenty-eight varsity sports are offered, with most offering freshman and JV teams as well. More than 50 alumni per year play a college sport.

The district offers extensive early childhood/preschool programs to back up the educational idea of "Pre-K to B.A." All teachers are certified and have a background and experience in early childhood programs. Extended day programs for elementary and middle school students are becoming increasingly popular with working parents.

With this extensive range of offerings and an experienced and dedicated staff, P-CCS has a lot to offer the Plymouth-

Canton community. The word is getting around. After several years of declining enrollment of 300-500 students each year, for the 2015-16 school year, enrollment stabilized to a very minimal loss. It's anticipated that this coming year, despite declining birth rates, enrollment could actually go up as students return from charters and the district more aggressively markets its programs.

We can't do much about funding from Lansing, but we can do something about enrollment for the district that we should all support. We need to offer the best educational experience and market it effectively. P-CCS has gotten the message and the current administration is doing the right things to turn it around.

We all benefit from a strong, vibrant, public school system.

Don Soenen is chairman of the P-CCS Blue Ribbon Panel.

We used a local hometown business, Image 360, and its project manager Belinda Pinto and had great help with the application process from Plymouth Township Community Development Director Jana Radtke. Fourth of July parade: Give vets a hug, a wave

Darrin Silvester
Correspondent

It was a cool, crisp New Year's Eve. The clock had yet to strike midnight, but one of eight boys lit a cigar early. The boys, all attendees of Plymouth High School, were standing outside the Plymouth United Savings Bank off Kellogg Park and talking, contemplating this new world and their place in it.

It was Dec. 31, 1941. Only weeks removed from Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor. A month before, these boys knew little about Pearl Harbor – little about its location and little about its importance. But this night, as they shared a Donald Folsom, a Plymouth High School graduate, in uniform has he heads to fight in the Pacific Theater during World War II.

cigar welcoming a new year, they knew how that event in that location would change the world immensely.

Before they left for home that evening, each swore to the other that they would enlist in the military and fight to defend their nation. All eight did just that.

By the time the war had concluded, almost four full years later, more than 400,000 American lives would be lost and hundreds of thousands of more lives would be impacted forever. Plymouth, only a microcosm of the rest of the nation, would lose its share of brave soldiers as well. More than 30 young men who were once Plymouth High School students would not return from their service. They each have a story, they each sacrificed greatly and they each deserve to be remembered for their service and their efforts.

Of the eight young men who brought in Jan. 1, 1942, outside the bank, only four would return home. The others would leave behind family and friends, never to return again. Donald Folsom was one of the four who would make it home.

After boot camp, freshly trained, Folsom would board a ship to serve in the Pacific Theater. His first real combat experience would be Nov. 20, 1943, in the Battle of Tarawa. He was a part of the largest force assembled for a single invasion at that time. It consisted of more than 35,000 men. Battleships and planes blasted the atoll for hours as landing craft made their way ashore. Red Beach One and Two were the initial landing sites. Folsom would land a little later on Green Beach.

By the time the battle ended, 76 hours later, almost 1,700 U.S. Marines had lost their lives, but Folsom survived. He had learned during the war that some of his friends had lost their lives. But it wasn't for a couple of years that he would learn that two of the boys from that New Year's Eve outside the bank, Donald Hunter and Keith Lawson, had lost their lives on the same day, at the same beach, where Folsom saw his first action. They had landed on Red Beach and did not survive the first day's battle.

Folsom is a tremendous man of 93 years. He served his nation and served it well. He has allowed me to visit and has shared his stories both in his home and in front of my students in the classroom.

In only a couple of weeks, Folsom, along with many other veterans, will be traveling in the Fourth of July Parade down Main Street in Plymouth. I can promise you that I know they love to hear your cheers and always appreciate a welcomed thanks. They begin the day of the parade outside of Bode's Restaurant, where they wait their turn to travel down Main Street. Please stop by this Independence Day and give Don Folsom and his fellow veterans a fine wave or a hug. They sure have earned it. Don't you think?

Beyer, Brindza head 'amazing' first class

Wildcats' best athletes, teams of first 14 years enshrined

Tim Smith
Staff Writer

When posed a question following Monday's inaugural Hall of Fame induction at Plymouth High School, Brennen Beyer glanced around him and smiled.

Now with the Baltimore Ravens of the National Football League, Beyer was asked if he thought any other school could surpass the level of talented individuals that made up Plymouth's debut class.

"Oh, I don't know," said Beyer, a 2011 grad who was a standout defensive lineman and receiver with the Wildcats. "We got some absolute studs out here. It's been fun to see everyone again and, yeah, there's some amazing athletes out here."

Beyer, Kyle Brindza and

Nate Emminger all were enshrined as individuals and as part of Plymouth's 2010 football team that reached the Division 1 state finals at Ford Field.

Brindza set school and league records in field goals while with the Wildcats, subsequently enjoying success at Notre Dame before turning

NHL DRAFT PREVIEW

NTDP alumni in high demand

Keller, Bellows expected to be picked in first round

Tim Smith
Staff Writer

When the National Hockey League Entry Draft unfolds beginning Friday night in Buffalo, count Scott Monaghan among those who will be glued to his television set or computer.

Monaghan, senior director of operations for USA Hockey's Plymouth-based National Team Development Program, expects a steady march of NTDP alums to the podium after being picked by NHL teams.

Bellows

Keller

"Our two head coaches and director of personnel will be there to lend support, to thank them and congratulate them," Monaghan said. "I like to just sit back and follow it online, watch a little bit of it on TV."

"I'll watch that first pick this year because I think it will be our guy."

That would be NTDP alum Auston Matthews, a 6-2 center from Arizona who is projected to go first overall Friday. Matthews last played for the NTDP in 2014-15, the program's last season in Ann Arbor before relocating to the former Compuware Arena (now USA Hockey Arena).

But two players from 2015-16, forwards Clayton Keller and Kieffer Bellows, also are solid bets to hear their names called during the opening round (when the top 30 picks will be completed) at the First Niagara Center. Keller and Bellows are ranked ninth and 10th among North American prospects entering the draft.

There are several other NTDP alums also on the radar of NHL teams, who might be drafted early. Those include Matthew Tkachuk (rated No. 2), Charles McAvoy (No. 6), Luke

ROCK-SOLID LEGACY

Swimmers from six decades return to help honor retired Salem coach Olson

Chuck Olson seemed visibly humbled by all the attention being directed his way during Saturday's ceremony in the Salem High School auditorium.

The 68-year-old Olson — who recently retired after a legendary career as swimming and diving coach for Rocks boys and girls teams dating back to 1969 — sat in a chair next to the podium, often with his head down.

When the Michigan High School Coaches Association Hall of Famer looked up, he saw countless standing ovations from several hundred who wanted to share the day with their favorite and most-influential coach.

Through their words and actions during the ceremony announcing the new Charles E. Olson Natatorium, as well as its inaugural event (an alumni meet that followed the ceremony and reception), it

WILDCAT VISIONARIES

Hall of Fame inductees Bee, Terry Sawchuk instrumental in Plymouth athletics' continuous success

Tim Smith
Staff Writer

The 14-year parade that led to Monday's Plymouth High School Athletic Hall of Fame induction began with a single step by Dr. Michael Bee in 2002.

Bee, the school's first principal, quickly joined forces with then-athletic director Terry Sawchuk and had a vision for not being an expansion team among Plymouth-Canton Educational Park and KLAA schools, but a contender. Both were among the school's first group of Hall of Fame inductees.

"It all started with Doc Bee and my brother's vision, of coming in to a brand new school and not getting your tail kicked," said Mike Sawchuk, head coach of the 2010 football team that also was inducted. "But getting in here and working hard, getting it done early."

Nearly 15 years later, the march continues with confidence — not to mention a constant stream of individuals and teams that are among the very best in the area.

"That was our vision from the beginning," Terry Sawchuk said. "We wanted to be competitive, but we wanted to do it the right way. We wanted to have good student-athletes, good citizens and work really hard.

"We felt we were getting the same kids the other schools in our district, our league, were getting. We felt we could be competitive as soon as we had four classes."

Terry Sawchuk then recalled the way Bee set a tone of administrative support that invigorated coaches and athletes from the get-go.

"I just think it was a great honor for everybody here tonight that was inducted and all those people that were there, all the kids and coaches. There's always good people, a good support system behind it," he said. "Doc Bee was a great support system for me and our coaches."

"The original coaches we had here at Plymouth, they were a tight-knit group and they pushed each other. They worked hard and they were competitive."

He credited Plymouth High School camaraderie, too.

"We are more of a family; all the athletes work together," Terry Sawchuk said. "As you can see right here, we have pro in 2015.

Learned so much

Although his NFL career is on hold (after being cut by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers last year, he suffered an Achilles injury), the 2011 Plymouth alum didn't mind looking back to his career with the Wildcats.

"I learned so much. I learned what brotherhood truly was," Brindza said. "I didn't have brothers growing up and those guys were my brothers."

"That was at the point I was being recruited by Notre Dame. They always kept calling me, calling me every week, saying, 'Good luck this week' — although they never thought we were going to win, because we were going up against a new No. 1 team every week. But we just fought through everything. You put a Goliath in front of us and David was able to conquer."

And now, several members of that brotherhood will forever be together down one of the hallways in the athletic wing at Plymouth.

"Those kids listened to everything we told them to do and they went above and beyond and represented our school," veteran Plymouth head football coach Mike Sawchuk said. "What great ambassadors they are, not only for football, but for athletics at Plymouth."

"Look what they've done in college. And then you look at (Emminger), who is the smallest in stature, but probably the best, purest football player we've ever had at the school."

Wonderful people

Also inducted Monday was Plymouth's 2010 girls soccer team (Division 1 state runner-up) and the 2012 girls golf team.

The latter won the school's first state championship. Also honored Monday was the 2012 individual champion, Kelsey Murphy.

"To win a state title, you've got to be good; things gotta go your way," said the coach of that team, Dan Young. "I just feel fortunate to have been with this group of girls. They were incredible."

"We had a great team and we're still close, we still talk. They're still a big part of our program today. Katie (Chipman) would be the last one graduating off this group. They're wonderful people, come from great families and deserve all the recognition."

"First state title in school history," he added. "You can never take that away."

Said Murphy, whose younger sister Sydney was also on the 2012 and 2013 state champion Wildcats (the 2013 team cannot be enshrined until 2017), "I couldn't ask for a better group of nominees to be here with. I'm very lucky to be here."

Murphy said being honored as an individual was a byproduct of the team success that the Wildcats pursued and ultimately enjoyed.

Monday night was a celebration of the many great athletes and teams over the first 14 years of Plymouth High School. Among them are Madi Lewis and Brennen Beyer, posing with their Hall of Fame induction plaques.

"Senior year, we were so focused on getting that state championship and being the first," she said. "That was always a goal of ours, to work towards."

"And being the individual state champ after that was just kind of like a cherry on top."

Stellar cast

Other student-athletes joining Beyer, Brindza, Emminger and Murphy among the inaugural Hall of Fame class (all unanimously inducted by a committee of coaches, Principal Cheri Steckle and athletic director Kyle Meteyer) were Kyle Rodes (golf), Jane McCurry (track, gymnastics), Colin Rolfe (soccer, hockey), Tyler Goble (football, baseball), Sarah Dombkowski (swimming), Madi Lewis (soccer, track) and Alyssa Dillon (soccer, basketball).

Plymouth's first leadership team when it opened in 2002, Principal Dr. Michael Bee and athletic director Terry Sawchuk, also were among the first group of inductees. All of the inductees will be recognized Aug. 26 before Plymouth's football game against Utica Eisenhower.

"Really it was a big project, a lot of work to get the pictures, get the information and figure out who was most deserving of these honors," said Meteyer, closing out his third year as athletic director. "But the impetus of it was, we have these other awards, the all-state wall and athlete of the year board."

"But we said there's some athletes like the 15 here tonight who are just above and beyond anything else we've got awards for. So we said we need a way to recognize, and then encourage, the next generation (to be) the best of the best."

In order to be automatically nominated for induction into the Hall of Fame, an individual or team must be a state champion or runner-up, be the top athlete in a sport (such as Mr. Golf or Miss Soccer, for example) or make a dream team.

For Lewis, a scoring machine for Plymouth's girls soccer team and a record-setter in track and field, it hasn't yet sunk in that her prep accomplishments always will be on display.

"It's just such an honor and

'HALL' OF A CLASS

On Monday at Plymouth High School, the first class of inductees into the athletic hall of fame was honored. Those individuals and teams are as follows.

DR. MICHAEL BEE: He was Plymouth High School's first principal when it opened in 2002 and continued until the late 2000s.

TERRY SAWCHUK: A fixture from the beginning at Plymouth, Sawchuk was the first athletic director and teamed with Bee to form a cohesive leadership group.

KYLE RODES: Named Mr. Golf in 2013, his senior season, Rodes also was on the all-state Super Team that year. He was on the 2013 boys team that was a D1 finalist.

KELSEY MURPHY: Part of Plymouth's first state championship team (girls golf in 2012), the 2013 grad also was MHSAA individual champion in 2012. She was on the All-State Super Team in 2010, 2011 and 2012.

BRENNEN BEYER: A 2011 grad, Beyer was honored for his football and basketball careers. He made his biggest mark on the gridiron, as a defensive lineman and wide receiver, earning a spot on the 2010 Dream Team. He played football at the University of Michigan, where he was a Big Ten all-academic recipient. Beyer was signed in 2015 by the NFL's Baltimore Ravens and soon will be going to training camp with the team.

JANE MCCURRY: A 2013 graduate, McCurry is one of only two student-athletes to have two photos up on Plymouth's all-state wall (gymnastics, track and field). In gymnastics, she was an all-stater and All-American. McCurry also was 2013 MHSAA state champion in the pole vault and is the school, Park and KLAA record holder with a mark of 12 feet, 0 inches.

COLIN ROLFE: The 2008 grad was inducted for his excellence in soccer (Dream Team, all-state first team in 2007) and hockey. He went on to play college soccer at Louisville.

KYLE BRINDZA: The 2011 grad was honored for his prowess as a high school kicker and punter, but also for contributions to the soccer and track programs. Brindza was a 2010 All-American and Dream Team member in football and is the MHSAA record holder for field goals in a season (19) and career (37). On the varsity track team, he set a school record in the shot put in 2010. He went on to kick at Notre Dame and played in the NFL last fall with Tampa Bay.

TYLER GOBLE: Inducted for football and baseball, the standout linebacker and offensive lineman was part of the 2011 football Dream Team and was an all-state first team player in addition to being captain. He went on to college at the U.S. Naval Academy.

SARAH DOMBKOWSKI: The 2014 grad was girls swimming state champion in the 500-yard freestyle in 2012, with a time of 4:55.82. The Eastern Michigan student-athlete holds Plymouth records in the 500 and 200 free.

MADI LEWIS: Honored for her excellence in soccer and track, Lewis was 2012 and 2013 Gatorade Player of the Year (soccer) and 2013 Miss Soccer, as well as being on the Dream Team in 2012 and 2013. She is Plymouth's record holder for goals in a season and was a four-year letter winner at Michigan. In track, Lewis set school records in the 100 dash and 1,600-meter relay.

NATE EMMINGER: The 2013 grad was a standout defensive back and wide receiver for the Wildcats, making the 2012 Dream Team. He is the Plymouth record holder in interceptions, with nine.

ALYSSA DILLON: The 2014 grad and soccer defender was an all-state first team player her junior and senior seasons. In 2013, Dillon was on the Dream Team. She plays soccer at Michigan.

GIRLS GOLF 2012: The varsity girls golf team became Plymouth's first team state champion, winning the finals at MSU's Forest Akers East Golf Course with a team score of 659. Coached by Dan Young, the team included Kelsey Murphy (148), Sarah Thompson (166), Kayla Whatley (172), Sydney Murphy (173) and Katie Chipman (183). Plymouth also won division and conference titles that season and followed up with a second state title in 2013.

FOOTBALL 2010: The team, led by stellar co-captains Brennen Beyer, Kyle Brindza, DeAngelo Brown, Phillip Emminger, Tyler Goble and Anthony Rhodes, made it to the Division 1 state final at Ford Field in Detroit, only to fall short.

GIRLS SOCCER 2010: The Wildcats, coached by Jeff Neschich, were KLAA South Division champions in 2010 and then went on a postseason run that nearly finished with a Division 1 state championship. Plymouth lost the final at Michigan State University's DeMartin Stadium. Co-captains were Meeghan Hughes and Jessica Heck.

such a blessing," said Lewis, going into her senior season with the women's soccer team at Michigan. "There's just so many great athletes in this room and it's awesome to be a part of it."

"It's awesome that I'm going to be on the wall forever."

She then delved into why she thought a school with a relatively brief lifespan (14 years) is highly successful in the world of athletics.

"Our school is just full of a bunch of hard workers and we're really dedicated to our sports," Lewis said. "When we make goals, we try to accomplish them in any way we can."

The right way

Both Beyer and Brindza said they are indebted to how their Plymouth coaches took them under their wing and guided them as athletes and people.

"I really think that laid the groundwork," Beyer said, listing Mike and Terry Sawchuk and basketball coach Mike Soukup as "really molding me at a young age and setting me up to carry over what they taught me into college and into the NFL. ... They taught me the way things should be done, how to succeed in a sport."

Brindza, who at Plymouth also was a soccer goalkeeper and thrower for the track and field team, said he and the other inductees couldn't have had the success they had without great coaches who inspired and encouraged them.

"You can be a great athlete, but it doesn't mean you're going to do well in the classroom, which means you're not going to get a Division I scholarship, possibly," Brindza said. "But if you're good, on and off the field, that's what we do here at Plymouth High School."

"You're put in with the best coaches to push you to be the best all-around athlete."

He then nodded that future Hall of Fame classes will be just as special, albeit smaller in scale. "Like Michael Jordan coming up (in the 2017 induction)," Brindza said. "He's a better guy than he is a football player."

JULIE BROWN

Nearly three-quarters of non-homeowners polled in the survey believe their student loan debt is delaying them from buying a home.

Survey: Student loan debt major obstacle for millennials buying a home

Seventy-one percent of non-homeowners repaying their student loans on time believe their debt is stymieing their ability to purchase a home, and slightly over half of all borrowers say they expect to be delayed from buying by more than five years.

This is according to a new joint survey on student loan debt and housing released June 13 by the National Association of Realtors and SALT, a consumer literacy program provided by nonprofit American Student Assistance. The results also revealed that student debt postponed four in 10 borrowers from moving out of a family member's household after graduating from college.

Nearly three-quarters of non-homeowners polled in the survey believe their student loan debt is delaying them from buying a home. Broken down by each generation and debt amount, the percent share is the highest among older millennials approximately aged 26 to 35 (79 percent) and those with $70,000 to $100,000 in total debt. Regardless of the outright amount of student debt, more than half of non-homeowners in each generation report that it's postponing their ability to buy.

The survey, which only polled student debt holders current in their repayment, yielded responses from borrowers with varying amounts of debt from mostly a four-year public or private college. Forty-three percent of those polled had between $10,001 and $40,000 in student debt, while 38 percent had $50,000 or more. The most common debt amount was $20,000 to $30,000.

Lawrence Yun, NAR chief economist, says the survey findings bring to light the magnitude student debt is having on the housing market and the budget of even those financially able to make on-time payments. While obtaining a college degree increases the likelihood of stable employment and earning enough to buy a home, many graduating with this debt are putting homeownership on the back burner in part because of the multiple years it takes to pay off their student loans at an interest rate that's oftentimes nearly double current mortgage rates.

"A majority of non-homeowners in the survey earning over $50,000 a year — which is above the median U.S. qualifying income needed to buy a single-family home — reported that student debt is hurting their ability to save for a down payment," he said. "Along with rent, a car payment and other large monthly expenses that can squeeze a household's budget, paying a few hundred dollars every month on a student loan equates to thousands of dollars over several years that could otherwise go towards saving for a home purchase."

Among non-homeowners who believe student debt is delaying their ability to buy, over three-quarters — including over 80 percent of millennials — said their delay is because they can't save for a down payment. Additionally, 69 percent don't feel financially secure enough to buy, and 63 percent can't qualify for a mortgage because of high debt-to-income ratios.

A little over a majority of those polled (52 percent) expect to be delayed by more than five years from purchasing a home because of repaying their student debt. One in five anticipates being held back 3-5 years as well as over 60 percent of baby boomers. Not surprisingly, those with higher amounts of student loan debt and those with lower incomes expect to be delayed the longest. "Realtors work closely with our clients and consumers every day; we understand the severity of the problem. This is not an abstract issue for us. This is why Realtors are leading the real estate industry in the discussion of student loan debt and its impact on housing by generating the most encompassing research on this topic," said NAR Vice President Sherri Meadows, a Realtor from Ocala, Florida.

Student debt preventing many young adults from leaving the nest

Mirroring other recent data on young Americans being more likely to live with their parents than in any other living situations, almost half (46 percent) of young millennials polled currently live with family (both paying and not paying rent).

Furthermore, 42 percent of respondents indicated student debt delayed their decision to move out of their family member's home after college.

Highlighting the difficulty many college graduates faced finding employment either before or immediately after the Great Recession, those who graduated 6-10 years ago had the longest delay, with 33 percent saying it took more than two years to move out of a family home.

"Nearly three-quarters of older millennials, many of whom graduated at the peak or immediately after the downturn, said their ability to purchase a home is affected by student debt," added Yun. "Add in the detrimental effects of low inventory as well as rents and home price growth outpacing wages and it's mainly why the share of first-time buyers remains at its lowest point in nearly three decades."

Student debt holding back some would-be sellers

The survey also found that student debt is affecting overall housing supply by holding back some current homeowners who otherwise would like to sell. Nearly a third of current homeowners (31 percent) said their student debt is postponing them from selling their home and purchasing a new one. Of those, 18 percent believe it is too expensive to move and upgrade to a new home, 7 percent have problems with their credit caused by student loan debt, and 6 percent are underwater because student debt has limited their ability to pay more than the minimum payment on their mortgage.

"It is imperative to the nation's economy that we find immediate and practical solutions to financially empower the 43 million Americans with student debt," said SALT President John Zurick. "SALT is committed to demystifying the college financing process by giving consumers information, instruction and individualized advice. No one should fail to realize the full potential of their formal education simply because of finances. We invite the higher education community, the U.S. government, the private sector and others to join with us in this movement."

In April, SALT distributed a 33-question survey co-written with NAR to 75,000 student loan borrowers who are current in repayment. A total of 3,230 student loan borrowers completed the survey. The survey had a response rate of 4.3 percent.

'Limited liability' protection exists; heed advice of attorney, CPA

Q: I am listed as a corporate officer in our Condominium Association's Articles of Incorporation. Being a non-profit organization, the association has not paid any taxes in past years. However, it is still required to file state and federal tax returns every year with the IRS and the State of Michigan. If taxes were owed for some reason by the association, would I have any personal liability if the association failed to pay?

A: As non-profit corporations, Michigan Condominium Associations are indeed required to file state and federal tax returns on an annual basis just like any other corporation. However, under Michigan's latest tax liability provisions enacted in 2013, similar to federal regulations, only a truly responsible person should bear liability. This "limited liability" protection means that generally an officer of a corporation cannot be held personally liable for the corporation's debts. There are exceptions to the statutory rules which include, but are not limited to: the business first failing to pay the taxes owed; the tax department determining personal tax liability based upon an audit or investigation; and the taxes being considered "trust fund taxes" (i.e., taxes that a business is required to collect from customers or employees and hold for the benefit of the government such as sales tax, use tax, etc.). Of course, if this situation ever arises, you should first consult with a CPA or a tax attorney to seek professional advice before doing anything further.

Q: There is a fast developing residential area of Italy called Puglia. They have estates or homes that can be developed. What do you know about it?

A: You are talking about their masseria, which is what we would refer to as villas, homes or other structures that were built hundreds of years ago, but have been converted to hotels, large estates, commercial properties and the like. These properties can cost in the hundreds of thousands of dollars and are being developed throughout the Puglia area. Many say it will be the Tuscany of the East having over six million "registered" olive trees, some hundreds of years old. As in any other situation, you are best to contact at least two or three Realtors in the area in which you may be interested to get a wide range evaluation of the properties available and the reasonable cost of them. Lecce is one of the most beautiful cities in the area and still offers good residential opportunities.

High-tech tools changing way homes are marketed

Not long ago, searching for a new home meant jumping in the car with your real estate agent and driving through neighborhoods, looking at house after house until you find "the one." While people still look at several houses before deciding which one is home, the chances are that they clicked from web page to web page to find it.

According to the National Association of Realtors, 89 percent of all home buyers used online tools and resources in their home search. This means for home sellers that embracing new technology when working with an agent to advertise their property is no longer just a good idea, it's a necessity.

"Technology has changed nearly every aspect of the way we live, so it is only natural that it affects the way sellers and their agents market and sell homes," said Debbie Z., president of the Greater Metropolitan Association of Realtors, for southeast Michigan. "Most potential buyers make their first impression of a home online, and with so much high-quality media online, the bar has been raised for online real estate listings to really 'wow' buyers."

Here are a few high-tech resources and gadgets that can help you and your agent sell your home:

» Social media. These days, nearly everyone is on at least one social media platform, whether it be Facebook, Twitter or Pinterest, so including a social media strategy in your home's marketing plan is becoming par for the course. "A well-placed post on Facebook or a properly timed tweet can place your listing in front of hundreds, possibly thousands, of potential buyers and usually costs the seller nothing," said GMAR's president.

» Virtual staging. If a seller has already moved out and left a home empty, visual effects software can let you fill the empty house with different styles of furniture, add art and light fixtures or even change the wall color with the click of a mouse. "This can help prospective buyers visualize a home's potential and see what the home looks like when it's tailored to their taste," she said. "A seller can't know what every buyer's taste is, and this allows the home to be staged in any style at a fraction of the cost."

» Drones. Unmanned aerial vehicles, more commonly known as drones, are aircrafts without a human pilot aboard and can be used to take aerial photos of your home and the surrounding property. "New drone technologies can help you and your agent to market your home in a way that may have been cost-prohibitive in the past," the GMAR president said in a press release. "If your home has beautiful mountain views or sits on a large piece of property, drone photography can highlight these features." However, GMAR reminds sellers that rules for commercial drone use have not yet been put into place by the FAA, so it is important that sellers either hire a professional drone operator or an agent with a Federal Aviation Administration waiver.

NAR expects the rules to be finalized this summer.

By using a few of these tools, you can make your home's listing more appealing to buyers and hopefully help sell it more quickly this summer.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
