Plymouth's Fall Festival set to return

Event was canceled in 2020 due to pandemic

Ed Wright Hometownlife.com USA TODAY NETWORK - MICHIGAN

It won't be long before the mouthwatering aroma of barbecued chicken is floating through the air in downtown Plymouth.

Following a one-year COVID-19 pandemic-created hiatus, Plymouth's much-loved Fall Festival is scheduled to return Sept. 10-12, bringing back a much-anticipated sense of normalcy to its Norman Rockwell-esque downtown.

"I'm excited it's back," Plymouth

Mayor Oliver Wolcott said. "I give a lot of credit to our team or organizers who have worked hard to make sure the event will go on while keeping people safe.

"Art in the Park was fantastic this year with a ton of visitors. I expect the same for the Fall Festival."

the COVID-19 pandemic, some level of an annual fall festival was held in downtown Plymouth every year since 1960, when an estimated 2,800 chicken dinners were served.

"It's a tradition that was sorely missed in 2020," Wolcott said. "The Fall

Coffee + Cream in Livonia begins to get busy about mid-morning Aug. 23. JOHN HEIDER/HOMETOWNLIFE.COM

Local indie coffeehouses can be perfect work, study setting

It's the little things. And for me, coffee will always be one of the little things. It's a pause; it's "Gilmore Girls;" it's catching up with friends; and it's something my sister and I have bonded over for years. All of my mornings have something to do with coffee.

Reporters do a lot of work out in the community, and for people working remotely, coffeehouses are a go-to temporary office away from home. I recently set out across Hometown Life's Observer footprint — Farmington, Farmington Hills, Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Wayne and Westland — to find the best coffeehouses western Wayne and Oakland counties have to offer.

I ordered a hot caramel latte everywhere I went made with almond milk. As someone who works remotely in coffeehouses, I also judged a place based how comfortable it is to sit in for a longer period. Things like available seating, WiFi quality, music playlist

Eateries sweeten the deal to entice new workers

David Veselenak Hometownlife.com USA TODAY NETWORK - MICHIGAN

Joe Spencer was ready to bring Cajun flavor to Farmington Hills earlier this summer.

But difficulties in finding employees has delayed the opening of his restaurant, Louisiana Creole Gumbo at 29216 Orchard Lake, by several months.

"We've been ready to open for a very long time," he said. "Ever since late May, early June, we've been ready.

"It's challenging just to try to find people ... I've never seen it like this."

Spencer, who's been with the Detroit-based restaurant for nearly 40 years, isn't alone. The labor market has seen shortages when it comes to workers, especially in customer-facing jobs such as in restaurants. Seeing those shortages has employers being more aggressive to attract workers, including increased wages, signing bonuses and other offers to lure workers out and onto the payroll.

While the unemployment rate in July dropped to 4.8%, the lowest it's been since the pandemic shutdowns last spring, many businesses have still struggled to find workers.

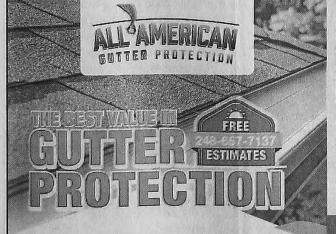

Spencer has advertised higher wages than he previously offered to help lure in good employees. Now, instead of offering a range of $11-$12.50, the longtime Detroit restaurant that's expanding into Oakland County is pushing wages between $14-$18. He's also looked at expanding medical in-

Westland police dedicate training center to 'two great legal minds'

Courtesy of Westland Police Department

The Westland Police Department recently dedicated its police community training center to two legal minds that helped Westland to become the community it is now: the retired Honorable Judge C. Charles Bokos and the late longtime City Attorney, Angelo A. Plakas.

The police department applied for and was awarded a Michigan State Police JAG grant for the newly-dedicated room to be used as a police community training center for youth academy's, citizen's academies, special needs open house, community discussions, as well as specialized CALEA training on mental health first aid, fair and impartial policing, cultural diversity, de-escalation, and many others.

C. Charles Bokos graduated from Wayne State University in 1961 with a Bachelor's Degree, and in 1964 from Wayne State School of Law with LLM and Juris Doctor degrees.

He was admitted to the Bar of the State of Michigan in 1965 and began the general practice of law.

Angelo A. Plakas, born and raised in Detroit, the son of Greek immigrants, graduated in 1960 with a bachelor's degree from the University of Detroit. Plakas went on to be a history teacher at Plymouth High School, where he was twice voted by the students as "Teacher of the Year."

While teaching, Plakas put himself through law school, taking classes during the evenings at Wayne State, and ultimately receiving his law degree in 1967.

In 1968, Bokos and Plakas formed a law partnership that was rooted in their respect for one another and spanned nearly 25 years.

In 1976, Bokos was appointed Westland City Attorney, with Plakas as the Assistant City Attorney, and the firm thereafter represented the City of Westland in all of its legal matters, including the handling of the prosecution at the 18th District Court.

In 1992, Bokos was appointed by the governor to the position of judge of the 18th District Court, where he was reelected multiple times and served in that capacity until his retirement in 2012.

Plakas received the appointment as Westland's City Attorney in 1992, and later represented Westland in a complicated lawsuit that resulted in the city receiving significant state funding for the William P. Faust Public Library.

Plakas served as city attorney until he died from cancer in 2010.

Between the two of them, Judge Bokos and Plakas have five children, all of whom attended the same high school.

Judge Bokos is the godfather to Angelos' daughter, and five other attorneys who learned the practice of law while under the guidance of these two men have gone on to serve as judges in different communities throughout Wayne County.

Trial set for Farmington Hills man accused of killing mother

Susan Vela Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK - MICHIGAN

The Oakland County trial for a Farmington Hills man accused of killing his mother in 2017 is scheduled to happen this week.

His behavior toward women could take center stage.

According to court documents, in early 2017, several months before his mother's body was found on the patio of their Farmington Hills property, Altantawi had a physical altercation with his sister

Prosecutors said Altantawi, who was 16 when his mother Nada Huranieh, 35, died, demonstrated a propensity for using physical violence with his mother and sister to control their behavior and have them submit to his will, which culminated in Huranieh's death.

"This evidence will also aid the jury in understanding the adversarial, domineering and intimidating relationship (he) sought to impose on his sister and mother and the consequences they faced when they failed to obey – which played a significant role in (the) defendant's motive to murder his mother," prosecutors said in documents. "This evidence will also debunk any notion that the death of Nada Huranieh was an accident of any kind."

The Oakland County Circuit Court trial is scheduled Sept. 7.

Prosecutors have submitted a potential witness list that includes Muhammad's sister, law enforcers, Oakland County Medical Examiner Ljubisa Dragovic and Huranieh's former attorney, Robert Zivian. Zivian has described Huranieh as a "lovely woman."

Defense attorney David Steingold plans to counter with questions over whether the prosecution has presented enough evidence to prove Altantawi's guilt.

In his mind, prosecutors didn't spend enough time investigating other sources. The teen's uneasy relationship with his mother was normal, considering his age, his upbringing as a devout Muslim and his parents' pursuit of a divorce, the attorney contended.

"Here's his mother getting tattoos and taking off her (Muslim attire) and dating other people besides his father," Steingold said. "That's going to upset anybody. It doesn't amount to a motive for murder. That's what they're trying to suggest."

Planning to call witnesses, Steingold expects the trial to last days. Altantawi will have to decide whether to take the stand.

"In the unlikely event that he is convicted, we will most certainly appeal," his attorney said. "But I don't think about appeals. I don't think about sentencings. I'm thinking about one thing and one thing only. That is beating these false charges against Muhammad Altantawi."

The prosecutor's office did not respond to a request for comment, and Hometown Life was unable to directly reach Altantawi's father, a former Canhammad's sister, law enforcers, Oakland County Medical Examiner Ljubisa ton-based doctor who pleaded guilty in a medical fraud scandal.

Altantawi was supposed to start his senior year at International Academy West in White Lake Township when Farmington Hills police took him into custody because of his mother's death Aug. 21, 2017.

Dispatched first responders found Huranieh, a mother of three, on the patio. She had apparently fallen out an upstairs window but subsequent autopsy results determined she had been smothered.

Altantawi spent time in Oakland County's Children's Village as attorneys argued his case in 47th District Court, Oakland County Circuit Court, Michigan Court of Appeals and the Michigan Supreme Court. He was transferred to Oakland County Jail after his 19th birthday.

A coup came when the state's highest court determined that Altantawi's conversation with police at his Howard Road home could not, for the most part, be used as jury evidence because the teen's Miranda rights were violated.

Since then, Muhammad has been denied bond and another preliminary examination. His attorneys' attempts to keep cell phone evidence away from the jury also failed.

"We are confident in the quality of our investigation and moving forward in the criminal justice process," Farmington Hills Police Chief Jeff King said, declining further comment.

Wendy Kacsmark has been welcoming Livonia students onto her bus for more than 40 years. JOHN HEIDER/HOMETOWNLIFE.COM

Bus driver in Livonia has been driving kids to school for 40 years

Shelby Tankersley Hometownlife.com USA TODAY NETWORK – MICHIGAN

The bus pulls up to the stop, and she's there with a smile and a "good morning."

There might be some 1980s music playing, and the driver has some rules. She expects kids to stay in their seats, keep their voices at a reasonable volume and not leave any trash behind. But she's aware students' school day starts with her, and she's always looking to make someone smile.

Welcome to Bus 131 — Wendy Kacsmark's school bus.

Kacsmark, who graduated from Livonia's now-closed Bentley High School in 1977, is in her 41st year as a bus driver for Livonia Public Schools and is the transportation department's most senior employee.

"I love my job," she said. "I love driving and I love children. That's what's kept me."

Kacsmark wanted to become a driver at 18 when she graduated from Bentley, but the district didn't hire divers that young at the time. She had considered becoming a teacher like her mother, but jobs weren't available due to declining enrollment.

She finally got the driving job at 21 years old and has stayed with the district ever since. In the early 1980s, the district only had nine automatic transmission buses, so Kacsmark learned to drive a stick shift school bus. the radio or stuthen they did 2 one memory the happen today: "One year, or "One y Kacsmark's base group today is students who have severe physical and cognitive disabilities. She's been working with that program for 30 years and has a bus equipped to board wheelchairs.

"I've been learning the entire time I've been here," she said. "The kids will teach us something every day."

Kacsmark says her job isn't something just anyone can do. Sometimes, drivers need to get creative to keep the peace. Kacsmark recalled one day of subbing for a friend who drove Holmes Middle School students that required a little imagination.

Apparently, this bus had an especially loud, rowdy group.

"A couple of girls get on and ask where their driver is. I say, 'They sent me because you guys are bad. I'm the enforcer,'" she remembers. "That is what I said.

"And I'll tell you — that was the best ride I ever had."

Things have, of course, changed over the years. Kacsmark says people get offended more easily by what's playing on the radio or student disciplinary action than they did 20 years ago. She recalls one memory that she says could never

"One year, one of the radio stations was giving away a Harley at Christmas," she said. "I go, 'Boy, I would sure like to win one,' and one of the kids goes, 'Well pull over and call right now.' This is when there were pay phones. So I pull over and was like caller nine. I get back in and I tell the kids I didn't make it. The kids were all disappointed because I didn't win the Harley."

She said the bus was on time to school that day, thank you very much.

But as times have changed, Kacsmark says her goal of making those around her smile has never waned.

"Things get you down here sometimes," she said. "People aren't happy all the time when they go to work. That's been my goal here all along – to keep people happy. I try to keep the peace because we work way better when everyone is happy."

Kacsmark plans to keep it up as long as she can. Livonia heads back to school Tuesday, and she's ready to do it all over

"I like my job and as long as I'm healthy, there could be another 10 years," she said.

surance offerings and paid time off, benefits that interviewees have expressed a desire for in their place of employment. Spencer restructured his bonus program as well.

Improving the compensation is just one way he hopes to attract and grow the longtime business, which originally opened in 1970 on Detroit's east side and also operates in the northwest part of the city near Seven Mile and Schaefer Highway.

"We're really trying to raise the bar for people who may be looking at food service as a career," Spencer said. "As we expand, we're going to need people who know our food."

Hiring hardships expected to continue

Hiring is a problem that will probably stick around for a while, said Terry Harvill, an adjunct professor at Madonna University in Livonia who teaches economics. The result comes after a combination of many factors at a macro level from the federal government and on a micro level with more people opting not to return to the traditional labor force.

"We're definitely in a time where (what) we're seeing is an outlier event," he said. "You saw that migration early last year and just accelerated when it got to last spring."

It's also a pivotal time in the American economy, said Harvill, who also works as an energy consultant in Northville. With shifts taking place in types of work — less manufacturing jobs that were more prevalent in previous decades and more service-oriented jobs — what have traditionally been seen as jobs to support families has begun to evolved.

Harvill cited the efforts being done by Amazon, which recently brought a center to nearby Toledo and advertised needing hundreds of workers. Those positions have typically begun at $15/hour. Seeing those wages increase for those types of jobs, Harvill said, will have to be the case if they continue in their trajectory of being dominant in number across the workforce.

"People have looked at these jobs for these opportunities," he said. "If that's going to be the case, then wages need to go up to support that."

Struggles for companies big and small

The hiring issues haven't just affected small shops. Christian Camp, vice president of awesome people at Livonia-based Team Schostak Family Restaurants employs about 5,000 people across five restaurant brands: Del Taco, Wendy's, Olga's Kitchen, MOD Pizza and Applebee's.

They've seen the same struggles others have. While the first indoor dining shutdown took the entire industry by surprise, he said Team Schostak did everything they could to transition. It was the second shutdown that began last fall that kept dining rooms closed from mid-November to February that resulted in a mass exodus of workers.

"Then as the second lockdown happened, I think that's what really created a significant impact to all businesses," he said. "We saw a lot of people migrate away from the restaurant industry."

That reality is in line with information from the Michigan Restaurant & Lodging Association. A recent survey by the organization showed 88% of hospitality industry respondents are operating with not enough staffing to meet demand.

It lines up with what Justin Winslow, the president of the organization, told a small group at Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi earlier this year: that the loss is going to sting for some time.

"The level of shuttered industry has been our reality for a long time and its impacts are felt acutely right now, and I think they're going to be something that we're going to feel as an industry as we're adapting to for a long time to come," he said in April.

Team Schostak always offered an incentive program for referrals, though those figures have increased significantly. They've even offered signing bonuses to employees who join the team, a common tool being used at businesses across the region.

He said they want to bring in the best people for the job, but it can prove to be difficult in places such as Novi. A city full of customer service businesses such as restaurants, Camp said Novi has been a difficult spot to hire.

"There's a lot of restaurants over there. Everyone is trying to be competitive with pay," he said. "That's been really one of the toughest spots."

Is it just extra unemployment?

A common factor mentioned by business owners impacting the worker shortage is the additional $300/week offered in unemployment on top of what the state offers, an incentive that began as more jobs saw furloughs and layoffs especially at the beginning of the pandomic

It's one of the big reasons Camp cited for his company's worker shortage.

"Things have been very extraordinary with unemployment benefits," Camp said. "That's been very very challenging for us in light of that."

That unemployment benefit expires

Spencer said he originally believed the additional money being paid in unemployment was the sole cause. After talking around the community, he came to the realization that the economy was just changing: many people, especially younger people, were making just as good money working for themselves in various areas.

Dubbed the "gig economy," many people began doing things like delivering for services like DoorDash and making money through non-traditional means. Given the control such jobs have, he realized more people were attracted to that line of work, making it tougher for employers like himself.

"The idea of being tied down to a job is not as appealing as it was before," he

Unlike the online chatter shared that blame the labor issue solely on the unemployment benefits or the wages currently being offered by employers, the answer to the problem lies somewhere in the middle, Harvill said. The market is in a unique place, with much more cash flowing in the forms of unemployment payments, PPP dollars and more that aren't typically there.

"There's a lot of money being injected into the economy right now," he said.

Can't grow fast enough

For some businesses, the hiring process is a necessity for survival, especially restaurants. Several eateries across the region have closed their doors in recent months, citing a lack of workers as the reason. Those include Milford House

Bar & Grill, Hector & Jimmy's in Milford and Detroit Eatz in Farmington.

But it can stunt growth as well. Similar to Spencer and Louisiana Creole Gumbo, Hunter House Hamburgers in Birmingham is looking for employees. But the iconic hamburger stand isn't in danger of shutting down due to a lack of workers, it just wants to continue its organic growth its seen over the years. To do that, it need workers, so much so that the restaurant is advertising eye-popping pay of $20-$35/hour for those who work there.

Those figures factor in tips, something customers have been generous with during the pandemic.

"It's partially driven by the need to hire people," said Kelly Cobb, owner of Hunter House. "It's also just sort of the nature of what's happening now with people tipping."

The restaurant at 35075 Woodward recently expanded, opening a second location at United Shore Mortgage in Pontiac. Operating in a replica of the white hamburger hut, it's open solely for employees of the company, but it's brought in enough business to justify the increased wages for new hires.

Even with the increased wages, Cobb said it's still difficult to find the right help to find the close-knit environment. With not having all the employees needed, it's limited restaurant hours: it still hasn't reopened for breakfast in the mornings.

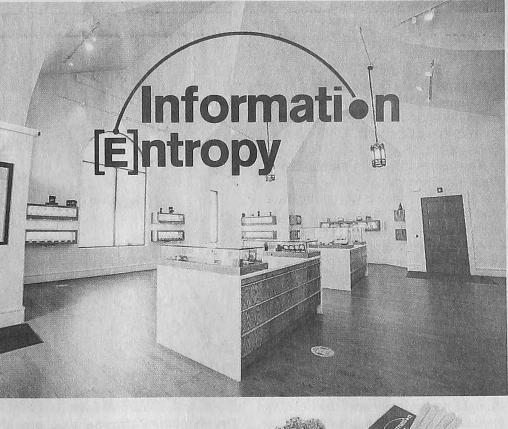

Cobb said while he wishes the circumstances were different at his shop, he'll take the problem he faces rather than having to lose employees.

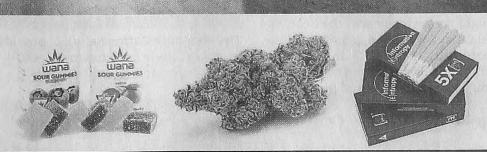

"I think more people are out into the workforce again. I'm hoping that restaurants can reopen their hours," he said. "I'm just so thankful we've never had that problem."

Despite not having enough employees, Spencer said he expects Louisiana Creole Gumbo to open in Farmington Hills the week of Labor Day. While he had nearly 50 before the pandemic, he's down to less than half that between the three restaurants. Those looking to apply can do so at detroitgumbo.com.

"We are trying to get people in. We've got opportunities at all three of our stores," he said. "We're working the hell out of our people."

Sheriff, MSP report more road rage, aggressive driving

Susan Vela Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK – MICHIGAN

Rage, anxiety, frustration and other pandemic-inspired emotions are weighing on drivers, leading to a noticeable spike in road-rage incidents.

Two of the state's biggest law enforcement agencies don't have up-todate numbers, partly because road rage doesn't fall into a single crime category.

But Oakland County Sheriff Mike Bouchard confirmed that deputies are noticing more aggressive behavior in many different settings.

Driving in his unmarked county vehicle, the sheriff has witnessed drivers running red lights and trying to cut off other drivers. One even waved an obscene gesture in his direction.

"I've stopped a number of cars personally in the last few weeks for just outrageous driving behavior," Bouchard said. "For me to stop you, you have to do something pretty, pretty serious or pretty, pretty stupid. I've seen both.

"I had a woman fly by me and then cut me off and so I kind of moved over and came up to the next lane to look at her. Before I even got to the window, she was giving me the bird."

Michigan State Police reported another road rage incident in Livonia the night of Aug. 27. A driver reported another driver shot at him once a roadrage incident began near Interstate 96 and Telegraph Road. The suspect gave a different location of eastbound Interstate 96 and Newburgh Road in Livonia.

"They stated that they and the driver of a red car were road raging when the driver of the red car pointed a shotgun at them and fired," troopers said in their report. "Two shots were allegedly fired as reported by the suspect with one believed to have struck the victim's tire. The first caller has confirmed that his tire was struck by gunfire causing a flat tire."

Lt. Mike Shaw said incidents like this are most definitely higher than last year.

He said his agency is dealing with a handful of calls each day regarding road rage incidents. Common confrontations involve slamming on brakes, swerving toward other drivers and throwing objects out windows.

He's concerned that anti-police sentiments have drivers wrongly concluding they should take road matters into their own hands.

He advises anyone dealing with a road rager to call 911 immediately so that law enforcers get a chance to stop the aggressive driver's behavior.

"Inst because somebody out you off

"Just because somebody cut you off or didn't use their turn signal, that's not a reason to resort to violence," Shaw said.

Hometown Life has reported on a handful road-rage incidents in recent months. In Livonia, a driver pointed a gun at a car with eight children inside. Also, in Livonia, a 47-year-old man was arrested for trying to drag another driver out of his vehicle, yanking off one of his shoes and throwing it across Plymouth Road.

There also were a few Plymouth Township M-14 incidents involving guns, albeit one was a BB gun.

Livonia Police Lt. Charles Lister and Plymouth Township Police Chief Thomas Tiderington still consider road rage confrontations rarities for their patrol regions.

The Farmington Hills Police Department is participating in Operation Brison, launched by the Detroit Police Department. The effort is named after a 2-year-old fatally shot on Interstate 75. The hope is to increase freeway patrols to prevent road rage incidents.

While increased patrols are always an option, both Shaw and Bouchard reiterated that de-escalation is key.

"Don't sweat the little things," Bouchard said. "So many of these things don't matter. Take a breath and just move on. That would be my advice."

He shared that he ended up talking to the woman who flashed him a middle finger.

She told him she was just so upset because she was concerned about being late for an appointment. He was able to calm her down by sharing some advice, for example, about stress, her family and her health. She eventually apologized and agreed that his advice was spot on. He didn't write a ticket.

"She took that breath," Bouchard said. "Understand that so many people – again, not just on the road, but in all settings – have a whole bunch of stressors in their life."

The slate of entertainment scheduled for the three-day festival includes a Plymouth Optimist pet show, performances by the three Plymouth-Canton Educational Park pompon squads, the Plymouth Fife & Drum Corp and Polish National Alliance Centennial Dancers.

A car show hosted by VFW Post 6695 will held Sept. 11-12 with awards presented both days. Entrants must pre-register to participate.

The annual Kiwanis Pancake Breakfast returns to The Gathering next to the Penn Theater 7 a.m. to noon Sept. 11, while the Rotary Club's Chicken BBQ Dinner is set for 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 12, or until it is sold out.

The Rotary Club of Plymouth's spaghetti dinner has been canceled for the 2021 festival.

Carnival rides and games will be available beginning 3 p.m. Sept. 10 and 11 a.m. both Sept. 11 and 12.

September promises to be a newsworthy month in downtown Plymouth. In addition to the return of the Fall Festival, a new fountain in Kellogg Park is expected to be completed following a six-month construction project.

The first permanent piece of artwork in downtown Plymouth is also expected to be unveiled sometime in September near the Wilcox House.

Coffee

choice and how loud it was overall were among the criteria determining how much I liked a place.

One more thing: I only went to businesses with fewer than three locations. There's no Starbucks, Sweetwaters or Biggby on this list.

Here are, in no particular order, my favorites in the area:

Plymouth Coffee Bean Company

It would be really difficult to overstate how cool this place is. Right next to Westborn Market on Penniman Avenue, the Plymouth Coffee Bean is actually the longest-operating indie coffeehouse in the state.

The espresso is from Coffee Express Roasting Company, which is also based in Plymouth. My latte was on the pricier side at $6.54, but it was great and the barista who took my order was friendly. The Bean also sells a variety of teas, pastries and sandwiches.

The thing I loved most about the Bean was the establishment itself. It's in a converted house, so it feels especially homey. There's a ton of seating inside and outdoors, and everyone else there was either working or catching up with a friend — a tell-tale sign of a great place.

Though it's not part my criteria, I thought it was really cool the Bean had local artists' work hanging everywhere. According to its website, the shop also hosts open mic nights and concerts featuring local musicians and poets.

Mugs Coffee & Grub in Farmington

Mugs — which, by the way, is a fantastic name — opened in early 2020 and I'm glad to see they managed to stick out the pandemic year. It's located on Orchard Lake Road near the intersection with Grand River Avenue.

Mugs' indoor seating is pretty limited, but it's really friendly to stay for a while. There are plenty of outlets to plug in a device, and it's quiet. Mugs had the best playlist out of the places I visited, too.

The shop gets its beans from Grounds for Change, based in Washington, and Coffee Express Roasting. My drink cost $5.75 and was great. Mugs also sells tea, breakfast items, desserts, sandwiches and soup.

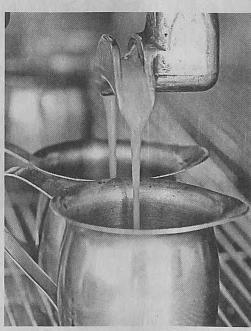

The gal who made my latte also gave pretty in-depth coffee advice regarding pour overs vs. French presses to the patron who came in after me, so they know what they're doing over there.

Coffee + Cream in Livonia

I spend a lot of time in Livonia and have heard nothing but good things about this place. Turns out my sources were right: Coffee + Cream is everything a good coffeehouse should be.

The Plymouth Coffee Bean Co. provides customers with a couple rooms in their shop to spread out and enjoy their drinks. PHOTOS BY JOHN HEIDER/HOMETOWNLIFE.COM

Some liquid espresso is prepped for an iced coffee at Farmhouse Coffee shop in Farmington Hills.

This place is on the corner of Hix and Joy roads near Livonia's border with Westland. My latte cost $4.64 and had a nutty taste, more than I can usually expect from almond milk, which I really liked. The shop also sells tea, pastries, smoothies and ice cream.

Coffee + Cream has a bunch of indoor seating along with a large outdoor patio.

Though it was busy when I stopped by, I had no problem finding somewhere to sit. This place happens to have a lot of windows, and I really enjoyed all the natural light spilling in.

My favorite thing about this place, however, was the staff knew so many customers by their orders and names. It seems since opening in 2018, Coffee + Cream has acquired a contingent of loyal regulars.

Farmhouse Coffee & Ice Cream in Farmington Hills

Alright, look: All the places on this list make a great latte.

That said, Farmhouse Coffee's latte was my favorite. It was sweet without tasting like dessert and only put me back $4.77. Not only was it great, it's one of the cheaper options on this list.

Farmhouse is on 12 Mile Road near the intersection with Orchard Lake. It's right across the street from The Hawk, formerly Harrison High School. Aside from coffee, Farmhouse also sells tea, ice cream, pastries and sandwiches.

ice cream, pastries and sandwiches.

Everyone else who stopped in while I was there was either studying or working, and I agree this is a good spot to do that. The music was quiet and the walls are yellow, which makes the place really bright.

Like Coffee + Cream, Farmhouse's staff knew a number of customers by their names and/or orders — always a good sign.

Tapped Coffee and Craft Beverages in Canton

Tapped opened about a year ago at 39481 Joy Road near Canton's border with Westland.

Tapped's schtick is that all its drinks come from taps and made with nitrogen infusion, which makes for smoother coffee. They also make their own soda and baked doughnuts, which is super cool

This was the most affordable latte at $4.62 and was, you guessed it, great. Tapped also sells tea, sandwiches, French bread pizza and a variety of side items like potato wedges and vegan chili

The seating in here is pretty limited, but is perfect for working or studying. Tapped's bar-style seating faces its front window and there are outlets near each seat. If your laptop is like mine and can barely hold a two-hour charge, you don't need to worry at Tapped.

How are Plymouth-Canton building projects going as school year nears?

Ed Wright Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK - MICHIGAN

The sparkling new ninja obstacle course installed on the Hulsing Elementary School playground in Canton is challenging, but nothing compared to the hurdles the school district's team of construction and design firms have been forced to clear this summer.

Since 2020 bond-funded major renovation work began in mid-April on four Plymouth-Canton Community Schools elementary schools, a quartet of challenges — the COVID-19 pandemic, labor and material shortages, and horrendous weather patterns — have forced construction and design teams to be nimble and flexible.

Promising news is emerging as the first day of the 2021-22 school year (Sept. 7) draws rapidly closer.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Director of Operations Tim Gruszcynski said construction projects — many related to districtwide equity and safety — on Hulsing, Field, Eriksson and Dodson elementary schools are on schedule and under budget.

"It's been a collaborative effort between the district, McCarthy & Smith (the firm overseeing the construction projects) and the contractors to get the work done in the most safe and efficient manner possible," Gruszcynski said.

"With the labor and materials shortages, COVID and the weather, there have been day-to-day challenges, but we've been able to battle through it all," McCarthy & Smith Project Manager Brian Gesaman said. "It's a different world now getting people to come to work compared to a couple years ago. We appreciate our contractors' commitment.

"We don't just want anybody doing this work; we want good people. Every day we're making phone calls to make sure we have the necessary staff to do the joh."

Gruszcynski assured Plymouth-Canton families that students will not face any major inconveniences related to the construction.

Paving work on parking lot and student drop-off areas in front of Eriksson Elementary School is expected to be completed before the first day of school Sept. 7. ED WRIGHT/HOMETOWNLIFE.COM

"I will say, though, that due to supply-chain issues, new furniture for each of the schools will probably not be delivered until October," he added. "The existing furniture will be used until the new furniture arrives."

Repaying the drop-off loops and parking lots at Field, Hulsing and Eriksson were nearing completion Aug. 26 and — barring an extended series of rainstorms — would be ready for Sept. 7, Gruszcynski said. Dodson's repaying project was completed earlier this summer.

Student drop-off loops at Field and Eriksson were extended by 150 feet to help alleviate a problem that has been brewing for the past several years.

"Years ago, most elementary students would either walk to school or ride a bus," Gruszcynski said. "Now, a larger percentage of kids are being dropped off by their parents. This became problematic at Field and Eriksson because the line of cars at drop-off and pick-up times would back up onto Haggerty Road.

"As part of the parking redesign, we extended the loop so we can get more cars off Haggerty and create a safer situation. Parents will follow the same path they did the last day of school in June, it will just be a longer loop."

A major component of the summer construction projects was the addition of separate gymnasiums at Field, Hulsing and Eriksson, which have utilized one room for both a gymnasium and cafeteria since they were built in the mid-1970s.

Construction on the new gyms will not be completed until January 2022, which is the timeline mapped out in the original plans.

The main office in each of the triplet schools has been relocated from the center of the building to the front for security reasons, Gruszcynski said.

"With the old design, people would walk to the main office unaccompanied," Gruszcynski said. "Moving the main office to the front of the school will be a definite security upgrade."

The schools' playground equipment has been upgraded with an emphasis on accessibility for all students.

The most significant project at Dodson is the addition of four new classrooms to meet the growing student population in southwest Canton, Gruszcynski noted. Originally scheduled to be finished by Thanksgiving, the classroom additions should be ready for instruction sometime in October or early November, the construction managers said.

The school district sought input from as many stakeholders as possible when it came to prioritizing which projects would see work first, Gruszcynski said.

"We've received input from parents, teachers, students, principals — the people who are going to be using the facilities on a daily basis," he said. "In normal times, we would have been able to meet in-person, but we had to shift to Zoom because of COVID. We still had up to 20 people in our meetings early on."

Gruszcynski revealed that the next phase of bond projects will include the construction of a natatorium at Plymouth High School — the only one of the three Plymouth-Canton Educational Park high schools without its own swimming pool — and a major upgrading of Salem High School's performing arts theater.

The natatorium is expected to be completed in late 2023 or early 2024, Gesaman said.

Detailed bond project updates can be found on the district's website.

Northville begins KLAA slate

Eyes already set on Battle Creek

Colin Gay

Hometownlife.com USA TODAY NETWORK - MICHIGAN

Juliana Imbuzerio's cheering section was a bit louder than usual.

As the Northville senior setter prepared for the Aug. 31 KLAA opener, a sign passed from the parents to the small student section in the middle of the wooden bleachers at Livonia Churchill High School with the words, "Happy Birthday Ju!" written on white poster board. At the Mustangs' first set break, that section led the crowd in the "Happy Birthday" song, something Imbuzerio responded to with a bow.

But on this birthday, Imbuzerio got something that she's extremely excited about: a reason to hope.

"This is our first game — and I know we have so much room for improvement - but we are so strong already," Imbuzerio said, helping Northville to a three-set sweep of Livonia Churchill on the road, 25-12, 25-8 and 25-7.

This excitement was what brought Sarah Lindstrom to Northville in the first place.

The first-year head coach knew some of the Mustang volleyball players from the club circuit, also knowing the expectation of the sport at Northville, having graduated from Novi.

It was the depth of talent and the depth of potential that made Lindstrom sign on to lead the Mustangs in May, replacing Rick VanDerVeer after his two seasons in the post.

"They have definitely bought into the type of coaching that we coach, which sometimes can be hard as a coach even though some of them knew me before," Lindstrom said. "But I see this team having the highest ceiling of any team we have seen this year. We're very Dave Gerlach had to hear about Isabell Kulick from Salem cross country's captains.

The Rocks head coach leaves many of the summer runs to his team leaders, laying everything out for them in advance. About a week or two into training ahead of the 2019 season, Gerlach heard about this freshman finding her way into the top pack.

Kulick didn't know what to expect.

With so few freshmen on the team when body that young would all of a sudden she joined, she convinced herself to keep up with those third- and fourthyear returners, something that became easier as the summer went on, which shocked Gerlach continually. "(I was) a bit surprised that some-

Catholic Central soccer looks to follow up 2020 state title with another

Colin Gay

Hometownlife.com USA TODAY NETWORK - MICHIGAN

Detroit Catholic Central head soccer coach Gene Pulice has always been focused on his team's culture.

To him, it's never been stagnant. It's always grown, evolving since he took the position 10 seasons ago. And it's not even about soccer. Pulice feels it's about the belief that players can grow together into one strong unit.

The Shamrocks are one unit that's been to the mountaintop.

"We have a bit of swag to us. And it's OK," Pulice said, leading a team that's coming off an undefeated 2020 season and the program's second Division 1 state title in four years.

"You have to be confident in who you are and know who you are."

But while CC soccer remains at that peak heading into the 2021 season, Pulice knows that makes his team easier to spot.

Each game won, he said, leads to a bigger target, a bigger bullseye. It's something Salem and Canton have already taken advantage of in 2021, beating the Shamrocks in the final two games of the season-opening Balconi Tournament: CC's first losses since the 2019 regional final. And even with the goal of back-toback state championships in mind, it's not something that has happened often. No team in the division has repeated as state champions since East Kentwood in 2007 and 2008, with seven different teams taking the last 12 championships, including Catholic Central in 2017 and 2020.

To Simon Sawyer, it's almost easier to block out what happened a season ago. But his sophomore season is already completely different than his first with the Shamrocks.

Sawyer is the first sophomore captain in program history, learning from Catholic Central's eight seniors who graduated after the 2020 season, including captains Jack Leuker and Chad Ewing.

The sophomore defender was a sponge a season ago, learning to play varsity soccer in high-leverage situations. Now he's experienced. He knows what it takes to get to that state title.

"We just make sure that they are always game ready and always in the right state of mind," Sawyer said. "When we are warming up, all we are talking about is game tactics and who's going to play where and what we are going to do differently. There's no fooling around and they all have really adapted to that and are understanding that very well."

Sawyer is one of four captains on Pulice's roster, joining senior Vincent Stockton, junior midfielder Drew Pierson - brother Ryan was a captain on the Shamrocks' first state title-winning team — and junior Henry Grybas.

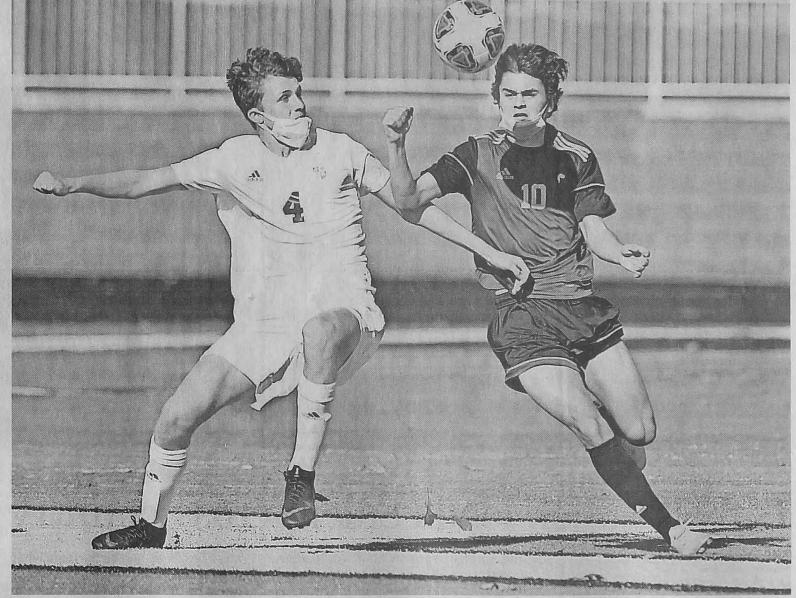

Their job is simple: to be that tangible example for Pulice of the culture he hopes to instill with the players that have only previously seen it from afar.

"They are really, really good people, first and foremost," Pulice said. "They are compassionate, they lead by example not by rule. They believe in the guys and the guys believe in them. They are my go-between."

In time, that culture will grow and engulf those first-year varsity players who are experiencing true CC soccer for the first time, just by following in the footsteps of their leaders who are following the footsteps of the leaders before them.

Pulice knows nothing is given. He remembers 2018, losing in the regional final to Grand Blanc in a quest to repeat. While it's the same atmosphere surrounding the 2021 squad, it's a different team, one that needs to focus on the day-to-day, to get to that overarching goal: that 2021 Division 1 state title.

"You never take any game for grant-deep."

Depth was something that defined the Mustangs' play on the road against the Chargers, using 15 of 18 available players — including four sophomores and two freshmen — in some capacity while also not breaking its offensive momentum: recording four runs of fivestraight points or more against the Chargers, including a 12-point swing in the third set.

It's an atmosphere, Lindstrom said, that her players have bought into, pointing to Imbuzerio, the Mustangs' primary setter, as one who holds the team accountable, something the head coach said she relies on.

However, the coaching change has led to a change for Abby Reck. The junior was an middle hitter for the Mustangs a year ago, earning All-American honors in the position at the club level. But Lindstrom needed Reck outside, something she said the junior's responded to well.

"A lot of people think that if you're a hitter, you can just hit in all positions, but it's so not true," Lindstrom said.

It's somewhere Northville felt it should have been last season, losing to rival Novi in the first round of district play in five sets. It's somewhere Lindstrom has been before, admitting that once you go once, all you want to do is go back.

The Division 1 state semifinals and finals are not something Northville is sweeping under the rug. Instead of a jinx, it's a rallying cry, getting the Mustangs through exhaustion and keeping them from cutting corners.

"We talk about Battle Creek every single day so that when push comes to shove and we are in playoffs, it's not a 'Oh my God, what if?" Lindstrom said.

Even though it's a long way away, Battle Creek is something Lindstrom, Imbuzerio and the rest of the Northville team speak into existence.

After a dominant road win against Churchill on her birthday, all Imbuzerio could think about is what comes next.

"We are just super strong and excited to improve more because we know we can," Imbuzerio said.

About 48 hours after winning the Little League World Series, the boys from the Taylor North Little League stood on the field at Comerica Park on Tuesday afternoon, watching the Detroit Tigers take batting practice up close and per-

Miguel Cabrera walked over. "What's up guys!" the newest member of the 500 Home Run Club said. "What's up?"

Cabrera worked down the line of players, giving each a fist bump.

"Good job!" Cabrera said, breaking into a giant smile.

The boys were allowed to step onto the Comerica Park grass, typically forbidden for anyone other than players and staff, and they gathered around Cabrera for a photo.

The Tigers treated Taylor North like royalty, which was certainly deserved. It's been a long time since we have had anything to celebrate around here.

The Taylor North players spent about an hour on the field before the game, getting autographs, team pictures and selfies with several players.

Jeimer Candelario even gave a player

Because he asked.

"It was like a dream come true," Kale Harris said. "A lot of us have been watching the World Series since we were 6, 7 years old. And we never thought we'd be able to come here and let alone win it. But dreams do come

As Eric Haase took batting practice, Harris stood in awe, watching a ball soar through the air.

"Oh, wow!" Harris said. "Oh my gosh."

A group of about 150 parents, players and coaches went to the Brush Fire Grill for a special dinner.

They ate Little Caesars Pizza, of Tigers great Willie Horton.

"He just told us to listen to our coaches and coaches are like schoolteachers and kind of just listen to them," said Gavin Ulin, a second baseman and pitcher who closed out the championship. "And teams are like a family and you guys got to stick together."

The hardest championship to win

If you followed this team on TV — and it seemed as if the entire state was cheering them on — what you saw was only part of the Little League story, especially during a pandemic.

It took a village to get this team to the championship. Even for the coaches to take off so much from work.

Taylor North manager Rick Thorning is a corrections officer for the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department.

Taylor North players and coaches listen to Tigers great Willie Horton at Comerica Park in Detroit. The team won the Little League World Series championship.

"I've been off for, I want to say, close to 30 days," Thorning said.

He didn't have enough vacation time saved up, so other members of the department worked for him, taking his Isn't that the spirit of this championship? An entire community coming together?

"I really have to thank them," he said. "I'll pay them back this coming up month, for people working for me.' The other big issue was COVID-19.

The players went through testing every two days and each team was kept in

If one member of the team tested positive, the entire team would have been sent home.

But on Saturday night, the testing was done and the boys were allowed to take off their masks and be kids again. They ended up playing Wiffle ball with teams from Hawaii, Ohio and South Da-

"That was awesome because it was up to Coach Rick and I to keep them busy," Coach Guido Ulin said. "There's only so much to do. We had pillow fights, tag in the dark in the dorm, we just tried everything and anything."

One of the secrets of this team's success was playing travel ball.

While many Little Leagues have lost players to travel ball, this organization found a way to embrace it and allowed its players to play both. They played 49 travel ball games this year, in addition to a full Little League schedule.

And that's a testament to how this entire organization came together.

"It was amazing," said Rachel Footlander, a member of the Taylor North board of directors. "Just the love that these kids have for one another. They all yell — one, two, three — family! We're just one big happy family. We really are. Everybody loves everybody. Everybody looks out for everybody. It was amaz-

'They earned every bit of our love'

Tigers general manager Al Avila talked to the team during the dinner.

"Congratulations on behalf of the Detroit Tigers and the Ilitch family," Avila said. "We're all very proud of you. We've been following your games on TV. (Manager) AJ Hinch and I are already scouting a little bit."

He laughed.

"Breaking out the contracts," he said,

The team stood in front of a banner. There were balloons and posters with each player's name.

"The state of Michigan is proud of you of you and we've been following you guys," Avila said. "You are literally champions of the Little League World Series, which is what we're trying to do - be world champions of the Big League World Series. So we're gonna take a cue from you guys and, hopefully, follow you down that path."

Then the boys posed in front the 1984 World Series trophy.

All the attention, as Hinch said, was

"We talked about earning things around here and they earned every bit of our love and appreciation," Hinch said. "We were following them. The games were on in our clubhouse and people were talking about it. When a team from Michigan beats a team from Ohio, it matters around here so just a really, really cool opportunity for us to give back to a group of kids that love the game and brought a lot of special memories."

But there was a surprise at the end.

Before the game Tuesday night, a video tribute played on the giant Comerica Park scoreboard, as the Little Leaguers stood in front of the dugout,.

And the crowd broke into a giant

Each player was introduced and jogged onto the field.

As the team stood on the field, it got even better.

Eleven members of the Tigers came out and gave them jerseys.

And they posed for more pictures. Big leaguers standing with the Little Leaguers. The Chevrolet Fountain went off.

And Queen's famous anthem blared over the loudspeakers: "No time for losers. Because we are the champions of the world."

How freakin' cool.

The Tigers — heck, the entire state of Michigan - couldn't be more proud of the boys from Taylor North.

cent in middle school, but she just came around that corner and was like 'I'm going to be good and I'm going to train my butt off and will myself to stay with these top kids."

Now heading into her junior season, Kulick is Salem's top kid, setting the tone for what she could do in 2021 at the Lamplighter Invite, placing first with a time of 19:19.8 - a 6:13 mile pace.

"I keep reminding myself it's the beginning of the year, so it was pretty exciting for me because I know that I can just keep improving, hopefully," Kulick

When she first joined Salem, Kulick really didn't know where she would fit in, initially setting her goal to break 20 minutes at some point during her freshman season.

She broke that goal in her first race, later breaking 19 minutes and later setting a personal record of 18:31.8, securing herself as one of Salem's top four

In 2021, after COVID-19 and other health issues held Kulick back in 2020. the junior's goal is to return to that same trajectory, see that same level of progress she made as a freshman.

To Gerlach, that starts with a mindset encouraging her to see herself as the top runner on the track, running as a leader and without fear.

"I think that's one thing we worked on a lot last year was confidence and knowing she belongs there. I think she now kind of realizes it, especially after how well she ran last Friday," Gerlach said. "I've been preaching to her all summer: 'Here's what I'm looking for, here's what I need you to do, here's what we want, here's our goals, and I know you

"She has this little twinkle in her eye right now where she's started to believe that and know it at the same time." Kulick also applied lessons she's learned from older runners Olivia Millen and Reagan Justice, Salem's top two runners from 2020, who went on to graduate and run at Michigan State and Wayne State, respectively. The junior learned hard work and dedication from those two, but also that it's OK to slow down when necessary. "It's important, if you are having a bad day, encourage someone else and make it so someone else is having a good day; to not get down on yourself because everyone has bad workouts and bad races," Kulick said. "The main thing I learned was to not let that affect you. Work as hard as you can, and the next day, they would just move on and do better that day."

Kulick admits she's not as outgoing as Justice and Millen, but is encouraged to use her ability as a tool to bring other runners in the pack along in the same way those two did for her.

Now in her third year with the Salem program, she's hoping to help the team make its 10th-straight state meet, while also qualifying herself, aiming for an overall personal best under 18:30.

Gerlach said his expectations for Kulick have risen since Lamplighter, but it's something he's not going to put on her. She just needs to remain aggressive and build on what she started under the lights.

"Her job, I guess, is to key on other people's number one's and see if she can beat them," Gerlach said.

Athlete of the Week results

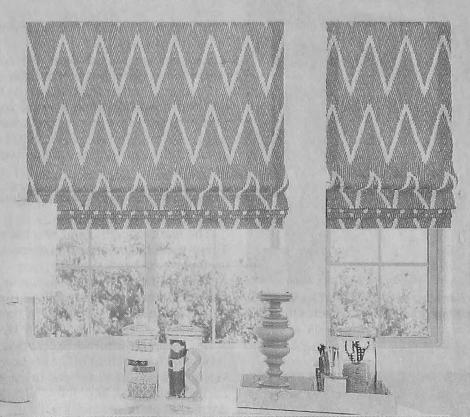

Kulick won Hometown Life's Athlete of the Week poll the week of Aug. 23, earning 2,246 of the 2,650 votes cast -84.75%.

The Salem junior finished ahead of South Lyon golfer Gabriella Tapp, Northville golfer Samantha Coleman and South Lyon East soccer player Manaki Watanabe.

How the ZipRecruiter Tech Team Overcomes the Challenges of Working Remotely

By ZipRecruiter.com

When the pandemic hit, most of us became remote workers, whether we liked it or not. There are some great things about working remotely. One example is flexibility. For example, I'm currently writing this article on a train speeding down the coast of Spain. Another obvious benefit: more time with our dogs.

Challenge 1: Relationships

One of the most difficult parts of working remotely is maintaining the feeling of connection to our coworkers. We have found that teams with trusted relationships are more productive, and these relationships of trust can be a bit more difficult to build when we're not located near one another.

"I've felt disconnected from my own team and other teams, as we are no longer able to meet others in passing," Senior Project Manager Victoria notes about her struggle since working from home due to the pandemic, "I've found that things which used to help us connect do not translate well to the virtual world, such as happy hour, team lunches, couch work sessions, etc. Many people get 'zoom fatigue,' which makes doing these things virtually even more tiring, and can even make these things feel like work."

Fortunately, there are lots of different ways to maintain relationships when working separately from our coworkers.

Larger social meetings are also an excellent way to maintain relationships.

Angus. JAMES, SENIOR ENGINEER/ANGUS'

At ZipRecruiter, we sometimes call these meetings "watercoolers." While it is true that we should be cautious about too many meetings, having a timeslot that's set aside to meet with coworkers and talk about anything but work has been a fantastic way to build and maintain relationships when spending time in person is not an option.

Jeremy, a Senior Engineer, solves this by putting extra emphasis on chat use, "I spend a fair amount of time in Slack, mostly work-related but also some nonwork discussions about hobbies, entertainment, and current events." One of my favorite ZipRecruiter chat rooms, or "channels," is #petpix, where we share pictures of our pets. Another favorite is #fridaysongs, where we have a weekly contest in which employees submit and vote on songs based on a new weekly theme.

Challenge 2: Communication

Communication can also be very difficult when no one is together in an office. A huge percentage of communication for remote workers happens over text chatting, and we lose a lot in our communication when we don't have body language or eye contact.

Worse yet, it can be very difficult to figure out who to talk to, or even if the person we need to speak with is available. "I can't just walk down the hallway, tap somebody on the shoulder, and ask a question - I have to know who to reach out to," says Peter, a Senior Engineer. "Plus, I can't tell if they're busy or not, so I have to send a message and wait. In person, it's easier to see if somebody is heads down or in a meeting."

Be it Slack or email, unless a lot of time and care is taken to craft the message, text communication is very lossy. Something I like to keep in mind is the Robustness Principle (RFC 1122), which says, "Be liberal in what you accept, and conservative in what you send." While this was written to apply to computer behavior, I think it is also an excellent way for humans to communicate over text, when we can't effectively convey emotion or intention.

When listening to others, make no assumption about the intention. When talking to others, make no assumptions about how the receiver will interpret what is said.

Challenge 3: Productivity

Finally, it can be difficult to remain productive as a remote employee. While it is true that some folks find it easier, employees who are used to working from an office may find it challenging. Having a flexible schedule is nice, but sometimes getting the laundry done or doing dishes can be a distraction.

Being alone makes it easy for me to flip browser tabs over to the news, social media, or something else non-work related, especially when I'm working on a task that is not particularly enjoyable.

Victoria, our Senior Project Manager, has found some useful ways to manage this challenge, "I create a to-do list each evening to put into place the following day, organized by priority. Priorities are typically based on business value and unblocking others, but may also be based on what I can achieve that day given my meetings schedule. I set time on my calendar to tackle each thing. even if it is a task for myself."

Life After Covid

We all hope that soon the pandemic will be a thing of the past. With more people getting vaccinated and increased ability to care for the sick, it looks like our normal way of life will be back eventually, including at least a partial return to in-office work. That said, work as we know it has changed forever and, whether it is us or our coworkers, working from a distance will become much more commonplace.

No matter how we feel about remote work, one thing is absolutely true: Our dogs are much happier.

yr old purebred black/tan German Shepherd, from the humane society in Ann Arbor at the end of December 2020:

I would like to offer you $12.000,00 for returning Tasha to us. I will also cover her umbilical hernia repair if you had the surgery performed. I was planning when Tasha was i 1/2 yrs. to have her spayed as well as her hernia repair and gastropexy (breed prone to bloat). Also to follow up on her spleen and blood work. Her two aunts had splenomegaly (had the spleen removed with treatment.

I was misdiagnosed for asthma leaving another condition untreated. (I have since recovered). This led me to believe along with the doctor I had allersies to Tasha and Eve. The Allergist/Immunologist who also misdiagnosed me said the dogs were making my 'asthma' worse. This is why I brought Tasha and Eve to the Humane Society. So excruciating painful! I later tested negative for asthma and properly treated. No words to describe how I feel giving up Tasha & Eve was preventable if I was diagnosed properly. Each provider followed the original doctors misdiagnosis. (Medical records available). The family who adopted Eve returned her to us and she offered for you to call her. I will give you her number. We love Tasha and Maize (We kept the name the family gave). We would also love to have them reunited and playing together again. My health is back nor ask for Tasha. I never would have given Tasha and Maize up if I had providers who diagnosed me correctly.

Maize had her gastropexy, blood work and spleen exam on 89/2021. We have always taken excellent care of our animals and with yet care.

I hope you will consider my offer for Tasha's return. We love Tasha and are heartbroken. Thank you! Please Respond to: findshepherd.com

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
