Werewolf was right—full moon affects us all

By DARLENE STINSON

Next time you feel extra cranky or prone to unusual acts, take a gander out your window.

There could be a full moon.

Residents of the Plymouth-Canton area do strange and weird things when the moon is at its fullest, according to local fire and police officers surveyed by the Observer.

They're apt to prowl around backyards and peek in strangers' windows, and they're more inclined to fits of temper and outbursts of violence.

CANTON FIREFIGHTER Don Adams recalls all kinds of weird occurences when the moon is at its fullest—like the time an 18-year-old Canton resident began chewing tires of the fire department's rescue vehicle under the light of a full moon.

The teenager had taken a drug overdose, Adams recalled, and regained consciousness en route to the hospital. The teen had somehow escaped from the ambulance when the tire-chewing urge overcame him.

Under the light of last week's full moon, the wife of another Canton resident called the fire department for help, when her husband crammed his arm between the battery and front end of his car, Adams said. The man's arm was stuck for nearly an hour, before his wife placed the call for help.

Sgt. Harry Mapes of the Michigan State Police's Northville post says the number of prowler reports increase during times of a full moon. People often wander into the state police post, demanding answers to such questions as "Where in the world is President Ford?"

"People don't believe this stuff about the full moon, but it's true," he said. "The full moon brings out the nuts, and the local flakes start calling up."

One member of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department who patrolled Edward Hines Park for years, firmly believes that lunar phases affect human behavior. But the detective wanted his belief kept secret.

"If you get any police officer to admit it publicly, he'd be ridiculed by everyone and his brother," he said. "But there's no doubt in my mind. I'm definitely more cautious when there's a full moon. I've seen too many people do strange things, and there's always more violence."

DR. MARCELLO TRUZZI, chairman of the sociology department at Eastern Michigan University, says there's a definite correlation between human behavior and phases of the moon. But the question, he says, is why.

The sociologist offered one possible explanation.

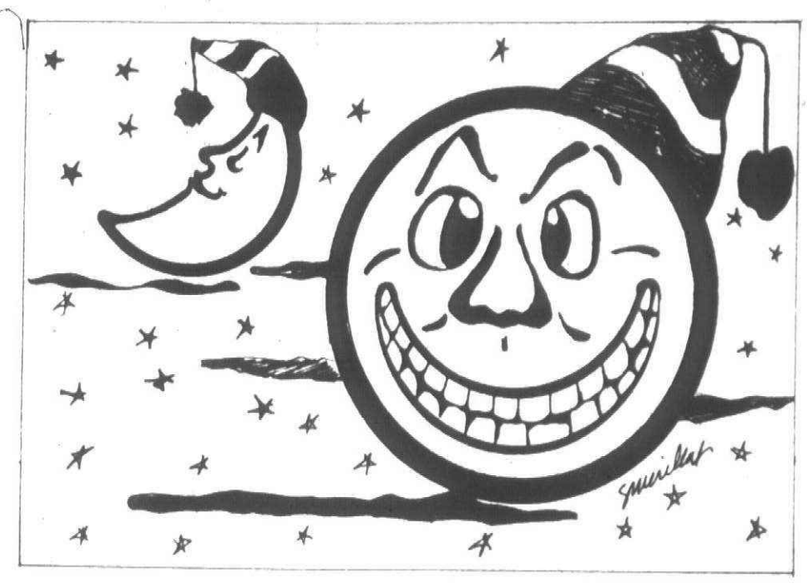

"Before the advent of light and electricity, people had only the moon and stars at night. It was only natural that people would become dependent on them, and they could start affecting human behavior."

Skeptical law enforcement officers are inclined to agree.

"You have a little more light with a full moon, so you could possibly have more B and Es," said one member of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

But recent scientific research offers another explanation.

Board taps Thompson as cop director

A new "top" man is heading the Canton Police Department for the third time in two months.

Amid cries of protest from some Canton residents, the township board Tuesday voted 4-3 to relieve interim police chief Carl Silvers of his duties as the police department's "number one" man and named township building inspector Charlie Thompson temporary "director of police."

Thompson will hold top command duties in the department, until the township's police study committee submits a recommendation on the best type of police protection for Canton.

According to Supervisor Harold Stein, Thompson will temporarily serve as a liaison between the police department, which works the evening shift and the township's administration, which works days. In addition, Thompson will continue his building inspector duties and receive an annual pay hike of almost $2,000 in exchange for the additional work load.

Silvers, who was appointed interim police chief when the board relieved former Supervisor Robert Greenstein of his police chief duties, is now the department's "command officer"—a position he held before receiving the police chief appointment.

The police department's chain of command now falls from the supervisor, who is chief law enforcement executive under the township's charter, to director Thompson, to command officer Silvers.

STEIN SAID the change in command was necessary to improve the day-to-day operation of the police department. Silvers, who holds a job outside the police department, begins his police work at 6 p.m. after other township officials have gone home. Because of timing problems, Stein said Silvers is unable to communicate the needs and problems of the department to the township administration.

"This in no way is disbanding any police protection we have now," Stein said of the change in command. "This is a way to improve it. We desperately need day-to-day communication."

Thompson, who served as a police officer in the City of Plymouth from 1945 to 1950, will be directly responsible to the township board in his new role as police director.

He will assume the responsibility of ordering equipment and supplies and determine police officers' schedules. As police director, Thompson will meet with Silvers on a regular basis and communicate the needs of the department to the township's administration and board.

As command officer, Silvers will supervise the department's police officers on a day-to-day basis. Silvers has agreed to the change in command.

"I think I could get together with Carl (Silvers) and the officers and see what their needs are," Thompson explained. "This is strictly an interim thing. I wouldn't want the job on a permanent basis."

STEIN STRESSED the temporary nature of the police director job. Another chain of command would be arranged, he said, after the township's police study committee submits its recommendation for police protection in the township.

But Trustees Myers and Goldsmith objected to implementing a change in command before the study group submits its recommendation.

"By removing Silvers and appointing Thompson, this board would be slapping the police study group in the face," Myers objected. "We'd be saying, 'We're not waiting for your recommendation.' I think this board would be premature in taking this action."

Numerous residents at Tuesday's meeting objected to Stein's recommendation of removing Silvers from the number one position in the police department.

"It seems funny to me that the same time you're creating Thompson's coordinator position, you're removing Silvers," said resident Peter Bundarin. "You're relieving Silvers of his police chief duties and putting another position between him and the supervisor."

"You took Greenstein out of the police chief job, because you said he was political," Bundarin continued. "The manner in which this is being done is probably causing more problems than simply putting in a coordinator. I feel the action of the board is suspect in the minds of the people. They're satisfied with Silvers."

Despite Stein's insistence that Silvers would not be ousted from his command position in the police department and the change in command would only be temporary, Mrs. Goldsmith moved to table the matter.

"I think this recommendation is premature," she said. "We've established a police study committee. I think we should wait and see what that committee is going to do."

I-275 open tomorrow from Novi to Newport

Dedication ceremonies for the final link in the I-275 freeway—the first bypass around Detroit—are set for 11 a.m. Friday at the I-94 interchange in Romulus.

The new freeway is 38 miles long, extending from the I-96—I-696 interchange in Novi all the way to I-75 at Newport in Monroe County.

The work cost a total of $145 million (exclusive of engineering fees and right of way purchases), or about $3.8 million a mile.

Main speaker at the dedication will be Weston E. Vivian, of Ann Arbor, a member of the State Highway Commission. Many other federal, state and local officials will also attend.

A WHOLE NEW era of commercial and industrial development is anticipated by officials from Farmington Hills, Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Westland, Van Buren, Romulus and Huron Township.

So far, all freeway development in the metropolitan area has led into the center of Detroit. Traffic from north to south has had to use either the Lodge to Detroit and south on I-75, or fight the lights and stop-start driving of Telegraph Road (US-24).

The link to be opened Friday runs from Ford Road (M-53) to Telegraph.

The segment from I-96 to Ford was opened last Nov. 10. Also already opened is the segment from Telegraph to I-75.

Michigan's freeway network is now 1,665 miles long. The state is within seven per cent of completing its 1,181-mile portion of the national Interstate freeway system.

"IT'S ONE OF the safest ever built in Michigan," said Peter B. Fletcher, chairman of the State Highway Commission, of the new I-275.

It was designed with wide medians, split-level roadways to avoid headlight glare, concrete bridge barriers, flat roadside slopes and obstacle-free roadsides.

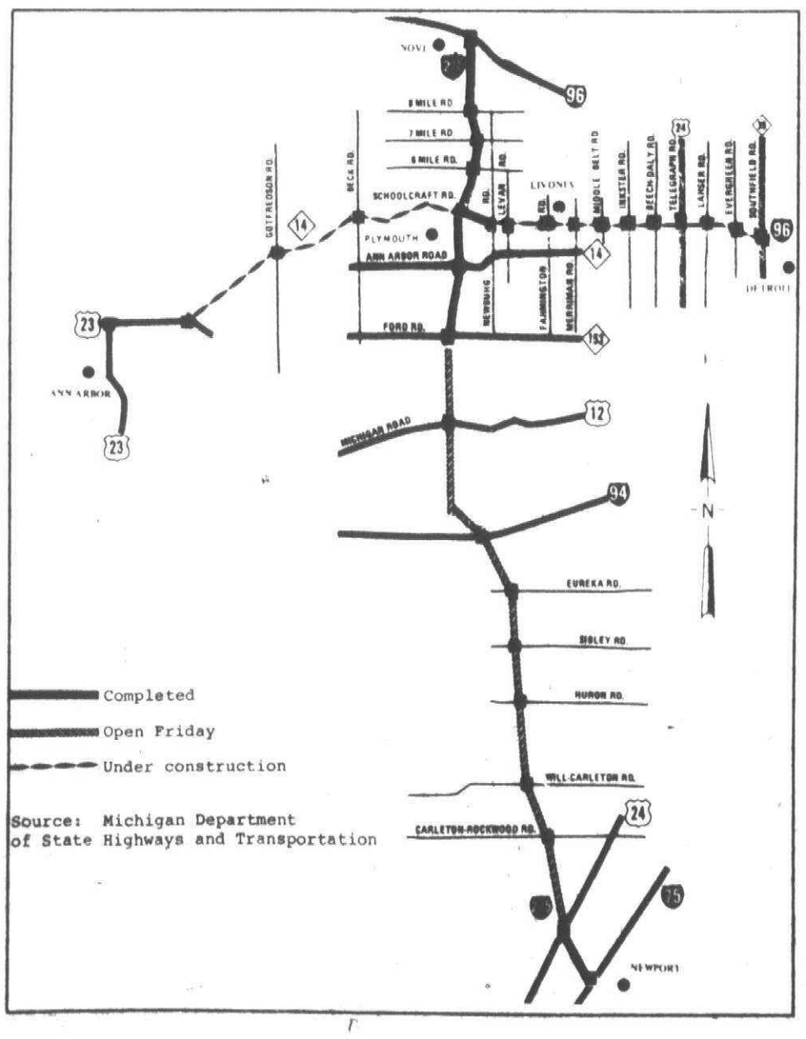

Bridges over the freeway have long spans with one central pier to reduce roadside accidents.

All signs are on wooden supports that will break when struck by a vehicle. Roadside trees and wooded areas were preserved where they didn't conflict with safety standards.

An extra feature is an eight-foot-wide paved path for bicycles and pedestrians at the outer edge of the right of way. The bike path will be dedicated in summer.

The northern segment, from I-96 to Schoolcraft Road, is eight lanes wide. It is also designated I-96.

The segment south of Schoolcraft is six lanes wide

Schools again consider including Canton in name

The Plymouth Board of Education is making another attempt to decide whether the school district should be renamed to the Plymouth-Canton Community School District.

Monday night the board approved a motion providing for the first reading of a bylaw change to rename the district. A final vote will be delayed until a point when the board feels it has sufficient input from the public to decide on the name change.

The school board earlier had voted against the name change. At that time, two trustees didn't vote in favor of the change because they felt public input was inadequate and insufficient to justify a change.

TRUSTEE TOM YACK, supported by Flossie Tonda, made the motion to rename the school district to include the name of Canton. Both trustees are Canton residents.

"We've been through this," noted Trustee E.J. McClendon, "and almost all who spoke on the issue were against the change. And we got a petition against changing the school district name.

"I have no objection to the change or no strong impulse to change. But when citizens ask the board not to change we should heed those wishes. There has been no strong citizen's group come forward since asking for the name change."

Yack answered by referring to a memo on community opinion indicating 80 per cent of school communicators providing input were either neutral or in favor of the name change. Yack added that the 40 residents opposed were from a single petition.

McClendon responded that he didn't understand how the conclusions were reached in the school communicators memo and so he rejected it "out of hand."

MRS. TONDA added that the Canton Board of Trustees has passed a resolution unanimously in favor of the name change, and the Canton chamber is considering taking similar action.

"This is just the first posting," commented Joe Gray, board president. "Hopefully in the near future we'll get more input from the community. I know the Canton officials are interested."

Trustee Marcia Borowski asked if school newsletters couldn't contain reports that the school board is considering a name change so parents will have an opportunity for input. I still need more input than what I had received before," she said.

Yack said when the Wayne Schools decided to rename to Wayne-Westland School District the basis was that the name should reflect the community "as much as possible." He added: "This suggests that Canton should be included in the school district's name at this time."

Mrs. Tonda added: "More money comes from Canton to support the school district and the greatest number of students come from Canton. So why not include Canton's name?"

The motion to approve first reading of the bylaw change to rename the district was approved 6-1 with McClendon voting no. After the vote, Trustee George Lawton asked if special efforts couldn't be made to seek opinions from Canton Township Board of Trustees, Canton Chamber of Commerce, and individuals before the board had to vote on final passage.

"There will be nothing I can do but abstain again when this comes up for a final vote if I don't have more information then," added Ms. Borowski.

Fire destroys a mobile home

A 60-foot house trailer at Sherwood Mobile Home Park on 41275 Old Michigan Ave. was destroyed by fire Monday afternoon.

The loss was estimated at $12,000 by the Canton Fire Department—$8,000 for the trailer and $4,000 for the family's belongings.

When Canton firefighters arrived at Lot 518, they found the home of William Sanford engulfed in fire and smoke. A neighbor told the firefighters that the Sanford's 14-year-old daughter was in the trailer. Four men equipped with Scott Air-Packs went inside, finding no one.

Later they learned the girl had left about two hours earlier with her father who went to pick up his wife.

Although the firefighter's investigation isn't complete, Canton Fire Chief Mel Paulun said the department found two blown circuits in the trailer which could indicate the fire was caused by an electrial short.

Sanford, owner of the trailer, reported that he has insurance protection.

"This particular mobile home was made in the past few years so it had plasterboard dry wall in it," explained Chief Paulun. "They don't go up quite as quick as when they just had to have little pieces of paneling."

Canton firefighters said there was no damage or danger posed to neighboring trailers. The department sent the pumper out on the run along with the tanker and the rescue squad.

McDonald eyes Pursell's seat

Redford Township Supervisor Patrick McDonald officially tossed his hat into the political ring this week, announcing his candiacy for the state senate post vacated by Carl Pursell;s election to Congress.
23eso3423i "The suburbs need a new voice in the senate," McDonald asserted, as he entered the race in the district that includes Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, and Redford Township, and a small portion of Westland.

McDonald, 29, a practicing attorney until elected to his present position in 1974, is a relative newcomer to politics. Oldest of seven children, McDonald was raised on a farm near Bad Axe where he was educated in a "one-room schoolhouse" as he explained proudly.

PATRICK McDONALD

He graduated from the University of Detroit School of Law, served in the U.S. Army, and is a member of the State Bar and American Bar Associations. He began law practice in Redford Township in 1972.

In 1974 he challenged the incumbent supervisor and won a surprise victory. His first job was tackling a substantial township deficit.

"I balanced the budget and enlisted the cooperation of department heads to cut costs in all areas. At the same time I maintained services and added new programs," McDonald stated.

THERE ARE ONLY 12 more regular employees in Redford today than there were in 1970," he added.

Taking advantage of federal grants to find money for improvements, Dial-A-Ride, street and sidewalk construction, the Horace Mann Community Center and a senior citizens' nutrition program, were added during McDonald's years in office.

During the last six months, Redford has received almost $2 million in federal funds, including a $1.4 million grant to build a new court facility and renovate township hall, he added.

A member of the Out County Supervisors Association, McDonald represented the group on the executive board of SEMCOG.

"I have enjoyed the challenge of serving Redford Township, but because of my experience in suburban affairs, I believe I can be of greater service in the State Senate," McDonald explained.

"There's still some things I'd like to do, and you wonder if the things you've pressed for will keep going," he added, "but I also would look forward to working for the suburbs in the senate."

He lists efficiency and economy in Michigan government as his top priorities if elected. He's especially proud of his budget record in Redford and contrasted it with the burgeoning state payroll.

Hunsinger to seek 14th District job

Josephine Hunsinger, a vetern of the Michigan House for 22 years, has announced her candidacy for the state senate in the 14th District which includes Livonia, Plymouth, Redford and Plymouth townships, and part of Westland.

Ms. Hunsinger, first elected to the state house in 1954, recently moved to Starkweather in the City of Plymouth after house-hunting for awhile in Redford.

One of her campaign staff members, Jerry Harris, comments: "While in the legislature, she had done a lot of work for the suburbs and reportedly that's why she was defeated in the last election for the 16th District (northwest Detroit), because she was doing too much for the suburbs.

"So she wanted to move out to one of the western Wayne County suburbs and return to public life. After looking around Redford for while, she settled on Plymouth for a place of residence."

In response to a suggestion she might be a carpetbagger (someone who moves into a district for sole purpose of gaining election to public office), Harris answered: "That really shouldn't be a problem. If it is, then it's true of 60 per cent of the legislators now in Lansing."

MRS. HUNSINGER, while serving in the house, became the first woman to be elected majority whip for the Democrats.

She also was the first woman chairman of the state affairs committee, and was the first woman elected by the Wayne County delegation (state representatives) as its chairman. She was a member of the Legislative Council for the house and senate in 1975-76.

Awards she has received include: the Walter F. Palenge Medal of Public Service from Michigan State University; an award from the Michigan Department of AMVETS for service to veterans; Good Government award from the Michigan Society of Professional Engineers; and Statesmanship Award from the Michigan Hospital Association.

She is a member of the National Order of Women Legislators, Detroit Press Club, League of Women Voters, and is listed in Who's Who of American Women, and the National Social Directory.

Drifting snow closes Plymouth-Canton...

By GLENN BUNTING and PAT TOUHEY

Winter's first heavy snowstorm hampered the mobility of area residents on Monday, closing schools and businesses, snarling traffic and stranding a number of helpless motorists.

Nearly seven inches of the white stuff forced snow plows and salt trucks on the roads early Monday morning for the start of a 36-hour ordeal. High winds gusting to 40 miles an hour produced knee-high snow drifts and pushed the wind chill factor to 30 degrees below zero.

Plymouth Community Schools maintenance crews worked from 11 p.m. Sunday to noon Monday clearing driveways and parking lots. After six hours of sleep, the workers were called back Monday evening to continue snow removal at school sites.

Bob Houghton, director of transportation, made a trial run early Monday morning to inspect the conditions of bus routes. With Houghton's report, Supt. John M. Hoben decided to close schools for Monday. All were reopened on Tuesday.

As a result of the school closings, all athletic events scheduled for Monday were canceled. WSDP radio station at Salem High stayed off the air and was unable to broadcast the school board meeting on Monday night as originally scheduled.

KEN VOGRAS, Plymouth's Department of Public Works (DPW) director, said his troops were well prepared for the snowstorm. All of the city's streets, including residential, were cleared and salted by 6 p.m. Monday.

"We took care of 36 miles of city roads and made four passes on each street," Vogras said. "We started salting late Sunday night but after a couple hours it was useless—there was too much snow.

"So we had two foremen attach the plows and four trucks were utilized all day Monday. We used 60 tons of salt, but some of it didn't have any effect with more than an inch of snow already on the roads."

Vogras said six men will spend the rest of the week clearing lots, touching up streets and plowing areas where cars were previously parked.

The snow didn't cause any problems for Plymouth Township since the Wayne County Road Commission is responsible for plowing and salting all major thoroughways. Director Wes Kincade said the township hall and fire station No. 2 parking lots are the DPW's only worries.

PLYMOUTH POSTMASTER Art Mulligan reported a surprisingly successful day of deliveries on Monday. Only two mailmen didn't show up for work; 90 per cent of the day's mail was delivered and none of the vehicles stalled.

"We had some routes that were able to make every one of their deliveries," Mulligan said. "Curbside mailboxes always pose the biggest problems when road plows bury them with snow. There's just nothing we can do.

"What surprises me most though, is that out of 42 trucks, none had any problems. I'd have to credit that to a light, dry snow. Otherwise, our small trucks would have experienced some difficulty. They're all supplied with radials, but without any weight, a wet snow would have caused some tie-ups."

There were heavy calls for both accidents and road service, according to Dick Roberts, manager of the Auto Club office on Sheldon Road. There were 32 accidents reported Monday, up 40 per cent from a week ago.

"Bear in mind, too," said Roberts, "that many people stayed home Monday. So there were less cars on the road for a normal work day, but accidents were way up."

THE PLYMOUTH POLICE department, however, reported only one accident all day. And according to the dispatch desk, it was just a fender-bender.

Sgt. Harry Mapes, of the Michigan State Police had a similar report of Monday's accidents. "We had very few accidents," he said. "Mostly, we received calls from motorists who were stuck.

"But Tuesday was a different story. We had consistent accident calls since early in the morning. In fact, that's what everyone's working on—car accidents."

Wayne County Sheriff's officers were kept busy both days. Sgt. William Mongrain said there were 33 accidents reported on Monday, 14 of them in the Plymouth-Canton area.

"I guess you could say accidents ran a little high," Mongrain said. "We were 23 over a normal Monday and Tuesday was bad too. We had 17 accident calls by 1 p.m."

CANTON FIRE CHIEF Mel Paulun said his department was not called on snow-related accidents. "We had a normal, routine day," Raulun said. "Nothing happened that we can blame the snow for. I guess we must be living right out here."

Local hotels weren't as lucky as Canton firefighters, though. Ethel Eurns, catering manager of the Mayflower, said a garden club luncheon was canceled, as was the Plymouth Jaycees evening meeting.

Ed Matson, sales manager of the Plymouth Hilton Hotel, was equally put out by the storm. "No doubt about it," he said, "the snow slowed things down here.

"We had a large number of room cancelations, and our restaurant and lounge business took a dive. But I'm sure it'll pick up by the end of the week."

With schools and offices closed, a number of persons decided to use the free day for some extra recreation or to catch up on their reading.

KATHY SVOSTEK, a volunteer employee at the Youth Center, said people were lining up outside before the doors opened. "We open at 2:30 p.m. and the kids were waiting outside long before." She added that while everyone was playing pool or ping-pong, conversation was strictly concerned with the weather.

"Most everyone was talking about how glad they were that the snowstorm hit," Svostek said. "They were hoping we'd get another 10 tons so there wouldn't be any more school for awhile."

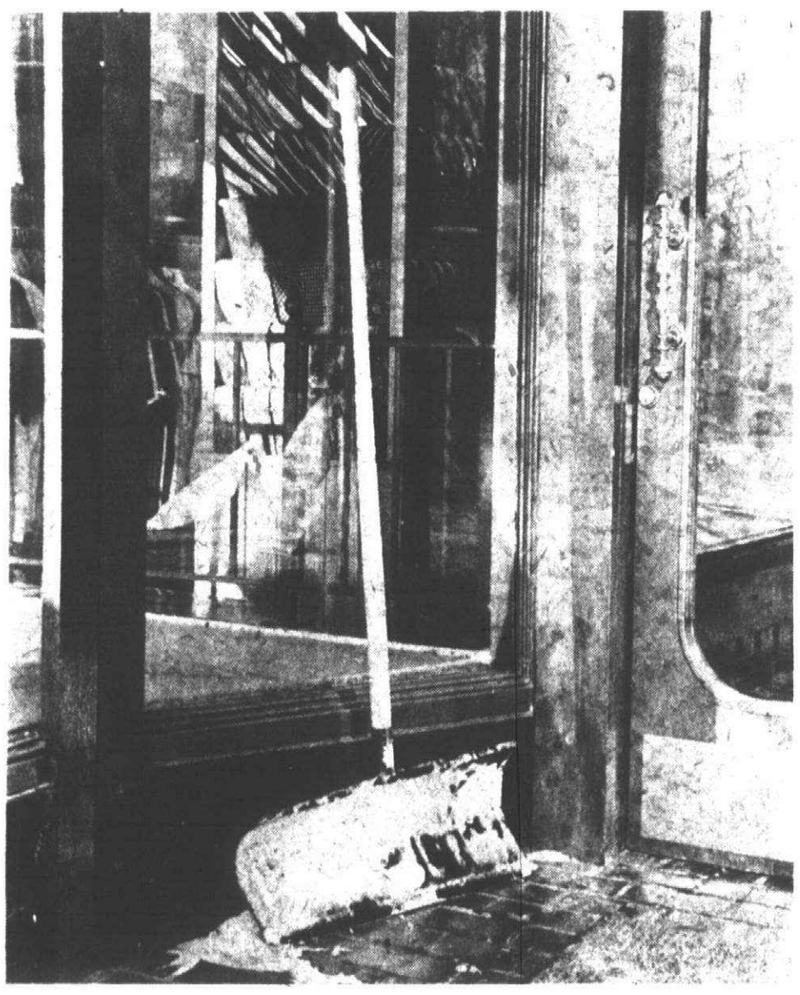

Although the blizzard didn't turn a vast amount of the population into bookworms, Beth Simescu, Dunning-Hough's head librarian, said the library was fairly busy from the time it opened to closing.

"I wouldn't want to say we had more readers than usual," she said, "but we certainly had a lot of people considering the weather conditions."

Two recreation classes were canceled during the day but none at night, according to Chuck Skein, director at the Cultural Center. "We weren't overly-crowded in the day," Skein said, "but a whole lot of people came down at night."

Faculty members at the University of Miami's (Florida) School of Medicine found most murders committed over a 15-year period in Dade County, Florida and Cuyahoga County, Ohio, occured when the moon was full.

Arnold L. Lieber, M.D., theorizes that the moon has a gravitational effect on animal's bodily fluids, similar to ocean tides.

These "biological tides," Dr. Lieber suggests, might affect people's moods, energies and judgments. The "tides" could trigger irrational or violent behavior in emotionally unstable persons.

Man has long associated the moon with irrational behavior. Luna, the Roman goddess of the moon, is the root of the word "lunacy."

A FULL, ROUND "Luna" shines on Plymouth and Canton every 28 days.

"We may not have more runs during times of a full moon," Adams said of the Canton Fire Department. "But it's a guarantee that one of the runs has got to be strange."

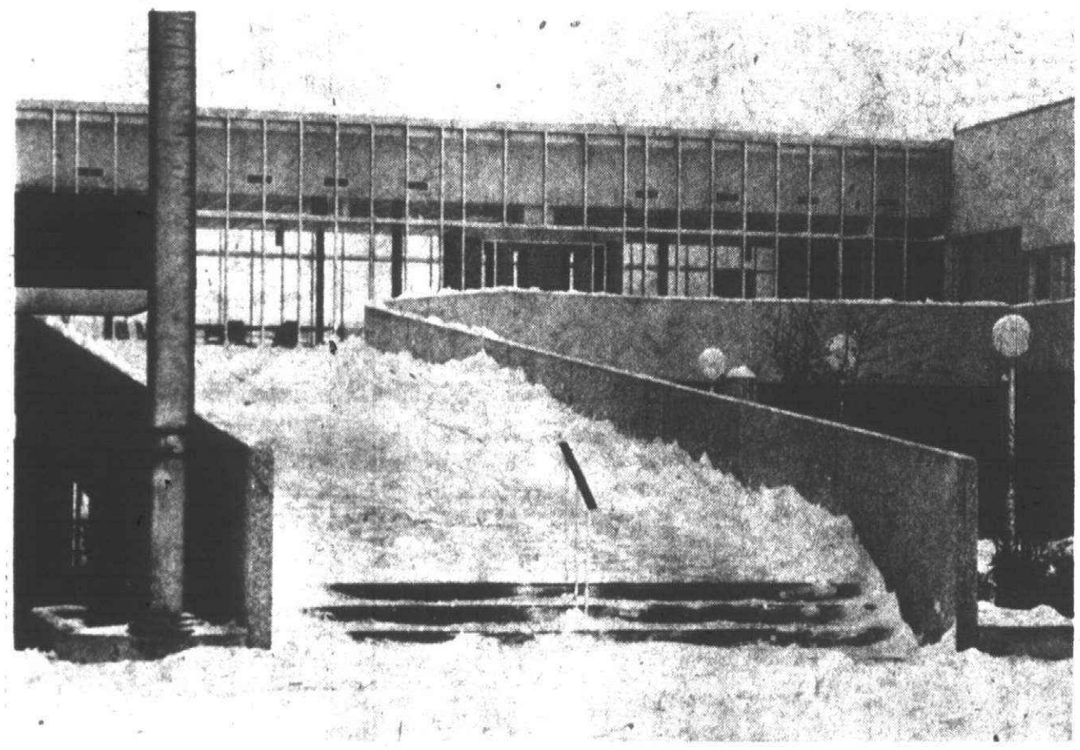

In agreement was a member of the Plymouth Township Fire Department and Mike Allie, Wayne County deputy sheriff in charge of records and property. Although the sheriff's department does not keep separate records for times of full moons, Allie says there always seems to be more reports.

"My partner and I used to keep an unofficial tab of what was going on in relation to the phases of the moon," said Sgt. Ron Brown of the sheriff's department. "It seemed in times of a full moon, there was something out of the ordinary or more intense. We used to chuckle about it."

Although Plymouth Police Chief Tim Ford says he has not noticed a correlation between crime in his city and phases of the moon, Ford said he did notice effects of the moon on human behavior when he worked for the Dearborn Police Department.

"Once in a while, we'd have the occasion to visit Eloise (a county mental facility)," Ford said. "At the time of a full moon, the residents would literally climb the walls. They'd stop when the moon was no longer full."

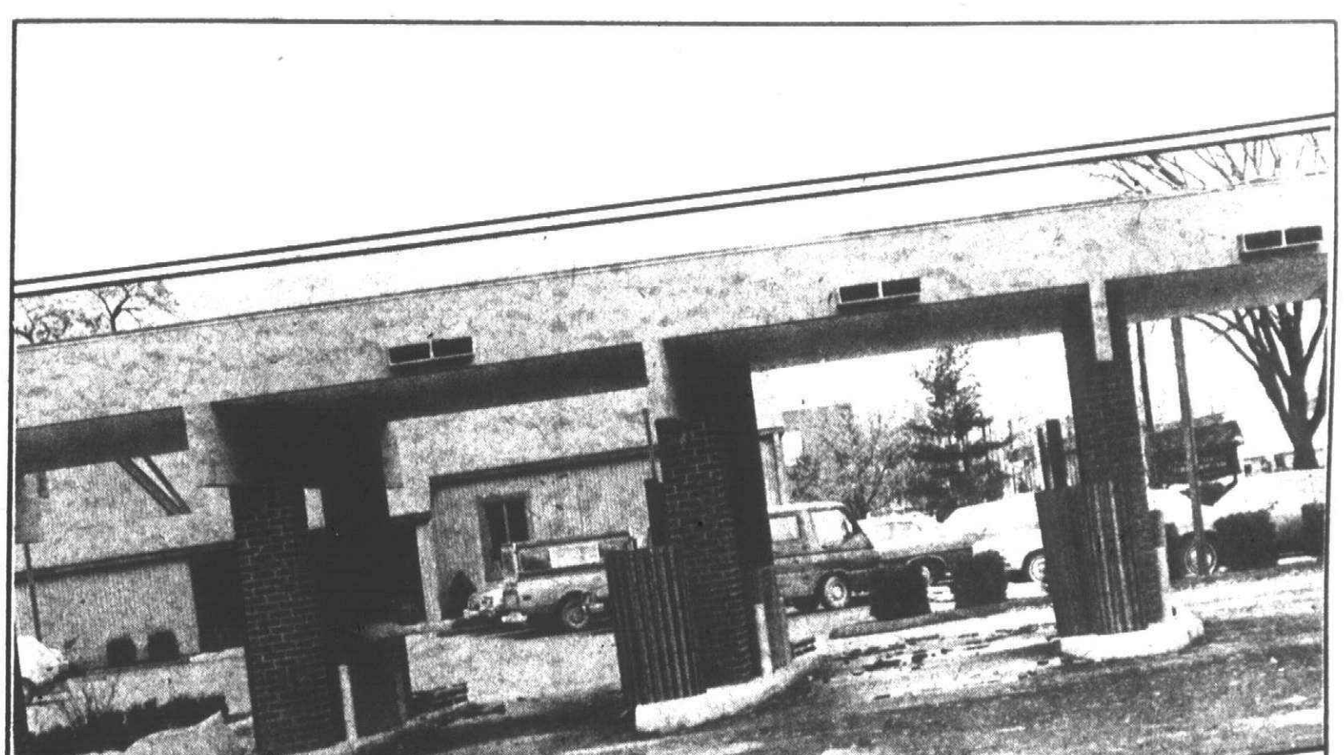

Added Adams, "Weird things happen when there's a full moon. They can happen anytime. But, generally, they seem to wait for a full moon."

Canton grows and so do woes

Editor:

Citizens of Canton: Can you afford to survive at our present rate of growth?

The Plymouth school board is presently studying a plan for a $30 million bond issue to build seven new schools in Canton. This plan is to build the new schools and repair the old ones and does not cover operation expenses. Do we have any idea how far our present rate of growth will go or when it will stop? Can we afford to start closing schools in 10 or 15 years due to decreasing enrollment, as our children mature, like Livonia and Dearborn are doing?

Wouldn't it be easier to plan and control our growth—both in population and new school sites—while we can still afford to do it. We still have time to control our destiny and plan our growth.

I have mentioned schools. This is only one service that uncontrolled growth will affect. What about police, fire, recreation, transportation and medical requirements our area will need?

I urge you to let your feelings be known both to your elected township officials and school board members. I don't believe any of us can afford to throw our tax dollars away without studying all possibilities.

Fate of ZBA officials in flux

The make-up of Canton's Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) is still an uncertainty, despite an agreement of township board members to introduce and publish a new zoning ordinance.

Board members are expected to approve the new ordinance at their next meeting on Jan. 25. Township officials Monday unanimously agreed to introduce and publish the ordinance as a prerequisite to approval.

Board members failed to discuss the make-up of the five-person ZBA, despite an opinion of township attorney William Sempliner that said board members could nullify the Sept. 28 appointments of five ZBA members.

Appointed at the recommendation of former Supervisor Robert Greenstein were Robert Miller, John Burdziak, Tom Quinn, James Donahue and Robert Greenstein.

Township Clerk John Flodin said Canton officials may "possibly" replace ZBA members appointed last fall with other township residents. Township officials, he added, have not discussed the matter.

According to Sempliner's opinion, township officials must amend Canton's present zoning ordinance—which calls for a three-person ZBA—to comply with a new state act, requiring townships with more than 5,000 residents to establish five-member ZBAs.

The former township board had appointed five persons to the ZBA last fall in an effort to comply with the new state act. Greenstein maintains passage of a new ordinance is unnecessary as long as five persons were appointed to the board. The state act, he says, supersedes the township's zoning ordinance.

Sempliner said in his opinion, "The new (ZBA) will supersede the old, and the five-member board need not necessarily include any of the members of the former."

According to Flodin, the ZBA will not hold a meeting until the new zoning ordinance is approved.

School board picks April 23 for millage renewal, bond vote

The Plymouth Board of Education voted 6-1 Monday night to hold a special election Saturday, April 23, for renewal of five mills for operation and to seek voter approval of a bond issue for new construction and repair of existing buildings.

The exact amount of the bond issue will be determined within the next few weeks, but it is expected to be between $25 to $30 million. The board within the next few weeks also will make a decision on what year the five mill renewal, if approved, will expire.

The only dissenting vote to setting the election date came from Richard Arlen who had concerns about the date conflicting with an election planned by Schoolcraft Community College for millage.

The school board met last Tuesday in a special study session to hold extensive discussions on options which might be viable to avoid some new construction, thereby reducing the amount of the bond issue which now is proposed for almost $30 million.

SUPERINTENDENT John M. Hoben told the board Monday night that it has two to three weeks to draft a bond proposal to be added to the ballot.

Trustees Tom Yacvk raised the question about what year should be picked for the five mill renewal to expire. Yack is looking towards 1980 and 1981 when other millage levies are due to expire and is raising the question of whether the renewal should expire in 1981, making a total of 16 mills up for renewal in that year. Another option would be to have the five mill renewal on April's ballot expire in 1980 so the millage voted on in that year would be about eight mills.

Ray Hoedel, assistant superintendent for business, explained that the resolution setting the April 23 election date didn't contain any specific language as to when the five mill renewal would expire.

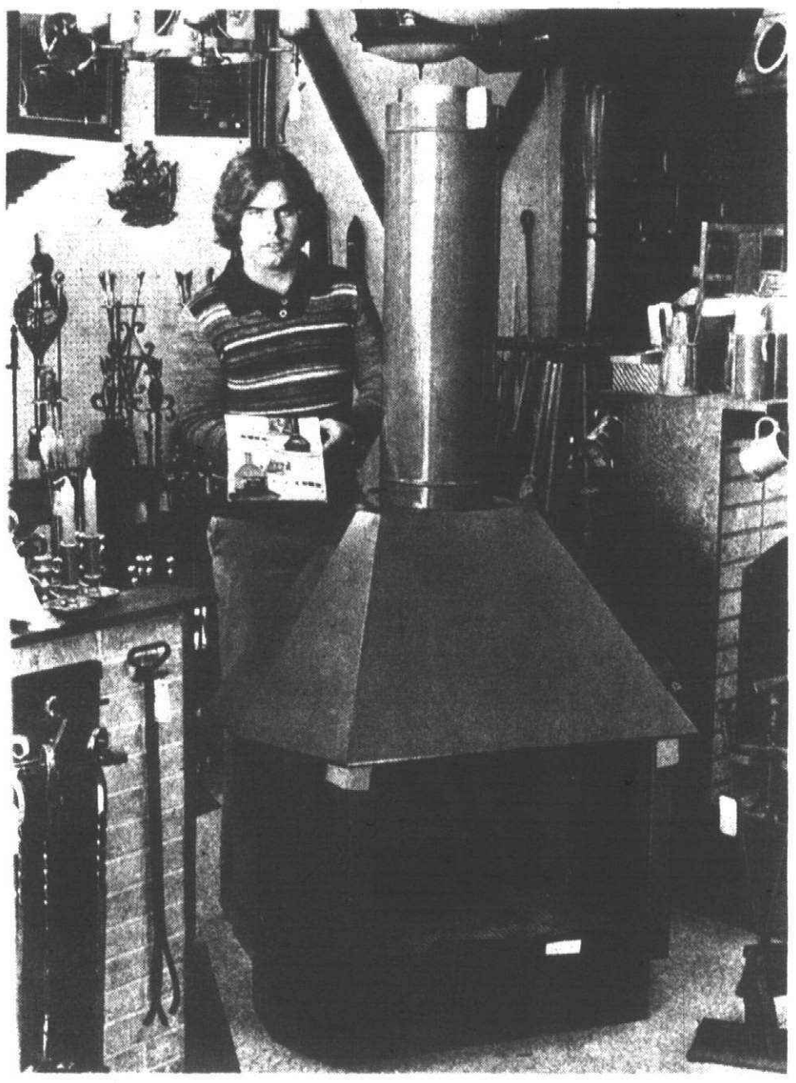

Hoben added the board has until March 21 to adopt a resolution with the exact ballot wording for the millage renewal and bond issue.

Yack suggested the school board might want to consider placing an advisory question on the April 23 ballot dealing with the impact growth has on the school district and how residents feel about it. "That might be useful data to some municipalities."

THE PROPOSED bond issue of $30 million includes almost $6 million for repair and renovation of existing buildings, primarily roof repairs and boiler replacements.

About $24 million is proposed for construction of five new elementary schools, two middle schools, and extensive renovation of Central Middle for possible use as a high school annex.

The bond issue is being drafted to make sure that classroom space is available to accomodate growth expected within the next 1½ to two years in Canton and Plymouth townships, explained Hoben. Within the next two years some 2,800 new homes are expected to be built and occupied in Canton and Plymouth townships.

Fire chief warns of stove hazards

The friendly warmth and possible energy savings of the Franklin Stove, pot-bellied, box or barrel stove is becoming more popular as fuel costs rise but they may present a fire safety hazard to life and property, cautions Plymouth Township Fire Chief James Gignac.

A stove shouldn't be permitted to overheat, Gignac adds. "Radiant heat can ignite combustible materials. Enough radiant heat can penetrate drywall to ignite wood studs.

"Furniture, carpet, drapes and curtains have been ignited time and again by the radiant heat which was generated by improperly designed and installed solid fuel space heaters," the chief said.

PERSONS INTENDING to acquire such a stove should keep these important points in mind:

- Make sure the manufacturer has had the particular stove design tested by a nationally recognized, independent testing laboratory such as Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. (UL), Building Officials and Code Administrators International (BOAC), or Southern Building Code Congress International, Inc.

The label should state the distances the stove should be separated from combustible walls and floors. The chimney size and type also should be indicated. Follow the manufacturers installation directions.

- If the stove purchased isn't labeled, make sure there is at least a six-inch air space beneath and 36 or more inches of air space to a wall.
- Get some advice from a licensed heating contractor as to the proper stack, chimney and location for your stove.
- Make sure you local building code will bermit installation of a solid fuel space heater.
- Tend the stove properly. Never let it overheat; never leave the stove unattended and over-fueled.

THE INSTALLATION of additional insulation will save on fuel costs, Gignac notes, but caution should be used to prevent fire hazards.

If you are installing insulation consider these recommendations:

- Be sure the type of insulation complies with the appropriate building codes.
- Don't cover up vents and other openings which may be part of the building design.
- Don't cover up recessed light fixture or heater housings which may protrude into a concealed space. These units are usually designed to vent or dissipate excess heat and must not be covered.

"The safest approach is to contact your local fire or building official if you have any questions relating to the installation of stoves or insulation," Gignac concludes.

Pursell aide to headquarter in district

Citing his campaign theme of local representation, Congressman-elect Carl Pursell announced this week that his top Congressional staff aide, Robert Webber, would be stationed in the 2nd District rather than Washington.

Pursell selected Webber as his administative assistant last week. Webber is currently administrative assistant in Pursell's state senate office and previously was staff director and top aide to former Michigan House Speaker Robert Waldron.

Webber, 48, twice served as director or organization for the Michigan Republican Party folowing ten years of experience in audio-visual productions.

Congressman-elect Pursell said Webber would work out of all three of his district offices (Ann Arbor, Livonia and Monroe) and be headquartered in the centrally-located Ann Arbor office. He will direct overall operations of the Washington-based staff as well.

Pursell said he is still considering other staff arrangements. He indicated he will seek to retain some of the staff of outgoing Congressman Marvin Esch, as well as to bring in new people who have worked with him in the past. He said he will attempt to make all three district offices full-time operations. In the past the Ann Arbor office has been full-time, while the Monroe and Livonia offices have been staffed part-time.

Library earns grant to expand services

The Dunning-Hough Public Library of Plymouth has earned a $1,000 grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek to participate in development of a statewide computer informational library network.

Librarian Elizabeth Simescu says the Plymouth library is one of 56 member libraries of the Wayne-Oakland Federated Library System (WOFLS) to receive a grant for the two-year program.

Grants to the system's libraries totaled $167,800, ranging from $700 for small libraries to 8,000 for libraries serving more than 50,000 residents, and are part of a $1.5 million statewide grant to 450 public and academic libraries by the Kellogg Foundation.

THE MAJOR PLAN of the WOFLS calls for 17 larger member libraries to pool $7,000 of their $8,000 grants in a special fund to develop a statewide computer information retrieval program to speed up public access to some three million books now housed in WOFLS member libraries.

Major emphasis of the plan, linked to existing WOFLS computer operations, will key on the production of a systemwide catalog on microform, listing books owned by member libraries.

The microform lists, together with microform readers, will be placed in all member libraries. As a result, Ms. Simescue explains, librarians will be able to search, locate and secure materials faster.

If a local library doesn't have the book a patron wants, a quick check by the librarian using the microform lists will confirm whether it's available in another WOFLS library. The lists will be updated as new books are added to the collections.

BESIDES MICROFORM lists, the WOFLS plan will target on future linkups with other library systems in the state by exchanging microform lists and working out book loan arrangements with them.

Future goals beyond microform lists include possible direct access from libraries to the computer. Such access isn't possible now, but in light of this, some of the pooled funds will be used to research new computer techniques and test equipment.

Besides benefiting from the system program, the Dunning-Hough Library will use the grant for mail, phone and photocopying services and conferences and workshops relating to library networking.

DR. RUSSELL G. MALBY, Kellogg Foundation President, said: "The grants are part of 450 similar awards made to public and academic—college, university, and community college—libraries throughout Michigan to link Michigan's libraries to the state's regional library system centers, state library services in Lansing and to national cataloging data bases.

"The Kellogg Foundation is confident that when the network system is in place, first class service will be available to every citizen utilizing library resources."

Leo T. Dinnan, director of WOFLS, stated: "Michigan's libraries are fortunate to be beneficiaries of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation's concern with the flow of information among libraries.

"The timing of the Kellogg program is fortunate, too. Interest in library networking supported by computer and micrographic technology has never been greater than it is now."

Libraries serving more than 50,000 residents receiving $8,000 grants include: Dearborn, Dearborn Heights, Livonia, Redford Township, Taylor, Lincoln Park, Wayne-Westland, Grosse Pointe, Wayne County, and the Wayne Oakland System.

Man seeks car but is arrested

Plymouth Police ran a routine check on a man who came to the station to "visit" his impounded car and discovered there was a warrant out for his arrest in New York State.

According to Police Chief Timothy Ford, a car owned by Jeffrey S. Pecor, 19, of 886 N. Mill, was impounded because police received a complaint that it had stolen plates on it.

While the car was in police custody, Ford said Pecor came to city hall to find out when visiting hours for impounded cars were held.

"We didn't do anything right then," Ford said. "I just told him there weren't any visiting hours for cars." Later, however, when a computer check was run on the Pecor's driver license and car registration, officers found he was wanted for burglary in White Plains, N.Y.

"As it turned out," said Ford, "he had just borrowed a friend's plates, so there are no charges. But we have talked to police in White Plains, and they want to extradite on the burglary warrant."

Pecor was arrested on Saturday and is currently in the city jail awaiting extradition.

Guenther hands control of firm over to his sons

By W W EDGAR

It isn't often in this day and age when you find young people dedicating their lives to the welfare of the elderly and the handicapped. And when you find four brothers uniting their efforts toward the unfortunates, it is even rarer.

Yet, that's what is happening to one of the older firms in Plymouth where Harold Guenther's four sons are taking over the business he has headed for the past decade.

The firm, originally known as the C.D. Sparling Co., deals with the manufacturing of safety devices that enables the handicapped and the elderly to take care of themselves.

Among the items are safety guards for bath tubs, safety bars to aid the handicapped to feel safe when in a stall shower, wheel chairs built so the side arm is adjustable so that the person can slide off the seat in to the bath tub or move from the chair to a toilet seat without help from others.

In recent months the elder Guenther who is a former mayor and city commissioner, has been looking forward to the day when he can retire and as he says, "go fishing". Recognized as one of the busiest men in the city, he made an unusual decision.

Calling the boys— Michael, Corbett, Peter and Kimberly together—he made them a proposition to take over the business so that he could start to take things a bit easier.

They agreed. Under the new set-up Michael will serve as the general manager, Corbett will be the designer, Kimberly will have charge of the welding and Peter will handle many of the duties in the office.

The business, which was initiated by C.D. Sparling several decades ago, changed hands many times before Guenther got control.

"More and more" he said, "healthy folks are realizing that the elderly and the handicapped need help. As a result the need for the safety guards is increasing. And, strangely, much of the increase is for the installation of equipment in the home.

The firm will specialize in equipment to suit the individual needs—whether it be a bar in the bath tub, a pole suspended from the ceiling or special seats the wheel chairs that slide over to the toilet bowl.

Under the barrier-free design act passed recently, all buildings now being constructed must be equipped to employ the handicapped. This has opened up another new avenue.

He also confided that several years ago he was approached by the hospital authorities in Ann Arbor to design special equipment.

"It was pointed out that the two of the most important things to the handicapped are cleanliness and the toilet," Guenther recalled. "They wanted a bench of some sort that would enable the handicapped to slide from a wheel chair to the tub or the toilet bowl and thus become able to take care of themselves. This brought about the special wheel chair and the slide.

"There was a time, not too long ago that a handicapped person was a burden in a home. The healthy feared leaving them alone in the house. Oftimes vacations were cancelled because of the care required by the unfortunate.

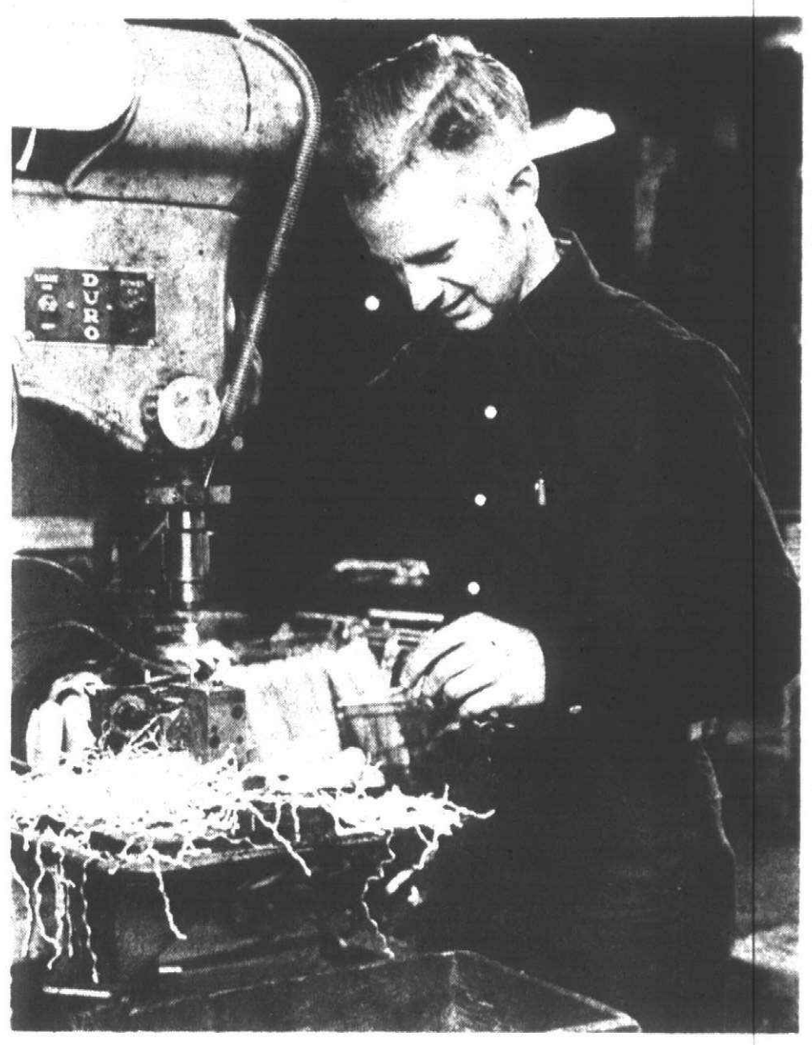

"These days are ending now, thanks to the new equipment and the special designs that can be made to handle each case.

"That's what the boys are going to do—they are dedicating their lives to the care of the elderly and the handicapped to make their lives much happier in the thought that they can be independent, desite the handicap."

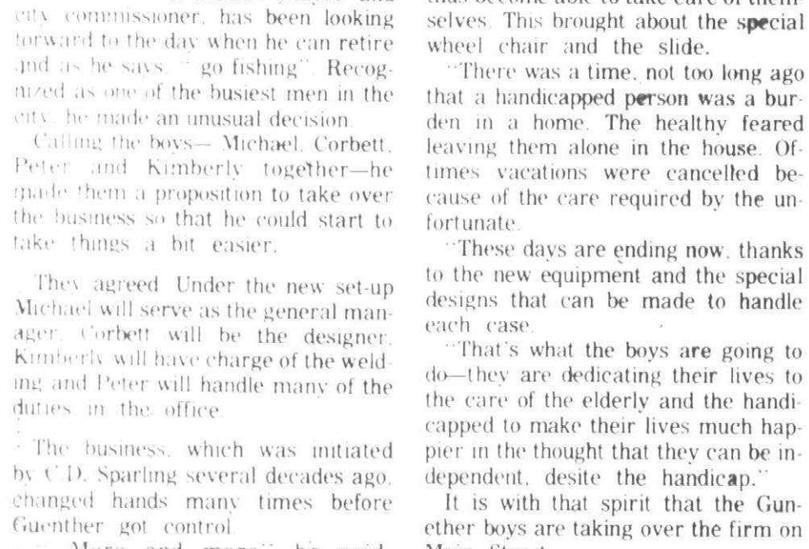

It is with that spirit that the Guenther boys are taking over the firm on Main Street.

Merchants,city fail at parking consensus attempt

By PATRICK TOUHEY

Plymouth city commissioners and downtown merchants Monday were unable to to reach a consensus on how to finance a 91-space deck addition to the Wiedman parking lot.

Although both sides agreed more parking was needed, neither group indicated a willingness to absorb the total cost of construction and maintenance.

The merchants and property owners told commissioners they were willing to pay for a portion of the lot—but charged that if the city refused to pick up part of the tab it would be abandoning a position of leadership and responsibility.

The commissioners listened to all comments, but at the end of the meeting there was no indication that they had been persuaded to take money from the city's general fund to pay for the deck's construction.

COMMISSIONER TOM, chairman of the parking committee, asked the assembled businessmen how the commission could rationalize using general fund money to pay for the Wiedman lot and not do the same for other lots.

Harold Guenther answered Turner's question by arguing that the city had to believe money invested in parking was well spent.

"You have to believe the money will come back," said Guenther, "and believe the money is well invested."

Jim McKeon bolstered Guenther's argument by pointing out that according to his calculations, the Wiedman lot was worth about $250,000. "When this is paid off," he said, "the city will own a very valuable piece of land."

Turner answered by stating that the city was not interested in the land for its value but only in the services it could provide.

Ralph Lorenz, owner of the Mayflower Hotel, told the commissioners they were not taking a progressive attitude by placing the burden of cost on the businessmen. He suggested the merchants pay one-third of the cost; the city pay one-third; with meters providing the remaining third.

'You've got to be progressive. Paving one-third is not going to hurt this city. We're betting this city is going to grow, and you have to bet with us."

TURNER SAID that aside from the question of taking money from the general fund, the problem with Lorenz's suggestion was that the meters would not generate enough money.

In the report on the Wiedman lot submitted by Turner's committee, it was noted that the lot was only used to 30 per cent of capacity between the hours of 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. But one survey indicated that after 6 p.m., use of the lot was between 70 and 90 per cent of capacity. However the meters are not in operation after 6 p.m.

"To get enough money from the meters," Turner said, "we would have to extend the hours of operation, and I don't think perople would like that."

Lorenz also said that employees cause a great deal of the parking problem in the downtown area, and told the commissioners every business with employees should be assessed for parking spaces.

"Every morning 800 people come into town to work," he said. "And where do they park? In the free lots. I am in no way going to pay for parking for everybody. Assess all businesses with employees."

Turner answered that new merchants could be required to pay while older ones could avoid payment under the grandfather clause. "If we were starting with a clean sheet," he said, "there are a lot of things we could do. But it would be very difficult to unravel contributions and assess everybody equally."

A NUMBER OF MERCHANTS told commissioners that lack of parking space was going to hurt the city. They said if some coherent plan was not developed the city would lose its business tax base.

"Lots of areas are subsidized by the city," said Jim Jabara. "Take the money out of the general fund. If you don't, businesses will go out of town. You've got to bend your rules."

Turner answered that the businesses would still pay through taxes if the money was taken out of the general fund. "There's no free money," he said.

Lorenz countered that tax money was being used to provide parking at the high schools, Schoolcraft College, and the cultural center.

"Why can't you do the same thing for the city?" he asked. "It's just like welfare. Everybody is taken care of except the guy who pays the bills.

"I'm paying for 200 spaces," he continued. "And there are merchants who have no parking spaces. The same people have been paying for parking for years."

Dealers praise certification of mechanics

Usually when a new law is passed there is considerable grumbling among the taxpayers and consumers. But that is not the case with the auto repair law which took effect late last year.

In a survey of some auto agencies in the Plymouth Community the new law which requires a repair mechanic to be registered and that the consumer is provided with an estimated cost before work is begun has met with approval all along the line.

"It is one way to get rid of what I call alley mechanics," Leo Calhoun, the Plymouth Road Ford dealer explained. "I am all for the law and I think it is one of the best things that has happened in the auto industry in quite a while."

Another who thinks the law will be helpful to both the dealer and the auto owner is Jack Selle, the Buick Dealer on Ann Arbor Road.

"These so-called alley mechanics," he said, "don't have the equipment to deal with the latest model cars. These are complicated machines and a fellow has to know what he is doing to work on them."

Selle pointed out that, while the new law hasn't increased the repair business yet, the time is not far away when it will.

Both dealers pointed out the havoc caused when a customer of a mechanic who isn't certified fails to give a cost estimate on a repair job and then hits the customer "between the eyes" with a bill much larger than anticipated.

The new law will do away with all of that, according to the dealers, and bring credability back into the auto repair business.

ANOTHER WHO joined in praise of the bill is Lou La Riche, the Chevrolet dealer on Plymouth Road.

"I think it is an excellent law," La Riche said, "and it is just unfortunate that it was held up so long. It is good for the customer, good for the dealer and it puts the business on a firm foundation."

The lone exception LaRiche found was a hypothetical case where the customer wanted work done on the engine and, once the job was begun, other trouble was discovered.

"These cases don't happen very often but engine repair in these new models could be intricate and oftimes don't show at first glance.

Opposition organizing on nearby proposed jail

Northwestern Wayne County cities and townships are being asked to join Northville Township's fight against establishment of a minimum security state prison facility at Five Mile and Sheldon roads.

In question is the former Wayne County Child Development Center, a campus-like setting closed down by the county two years ago. It was to have been rented, cheaply, to an alcoholism treatment group, but the Sacred Heart Rehabilitation Center was unable to get state funding.

Resolutions opposing state use of the site as a corrections facility are

He said development of a prison would have a serious adverse effect on residential development in Northville and neighboring communities.

The Northville City Council has unanimously adopted a resolution opposing the prison idea.

Similar resolutions are being sought from the city and township of Plymouth, the City of Livonia, the City of Novi and Salem Township. These resolutions would be presented, in a single package, to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

THE BUILDINGS ARE located on the east side of Sheldon, opposite a county-owned site being considered as the possible location for a federal solar energy research center. The county owns some 250 acres on the east side of Sheldon and more than 300 acres on the west side.

Grier and Geake are also preparing a model resolution asking the county to sell at least a portion of the child development center property for private development.

"Our No. 1 recommendation is that the property be sold and returned to the tax roll," said Grier. "By selling it, the county can get rid of the financial liability around its neck and, at the same time, spur the economy through private development by giving the township some badly-needed tax base.

"Right now, about one-third of all of Northville Township property is owned by tax-free governmental agencies.

"It's costing the county, and us as taxpayers, about $300,000 annually to maintain this unused property. And the longer these buildings go unused, the more it's going to cost the county to maintain them."

Northville Township itself leases one of the buildings for its township hall.

A SECOND CHOICE, if the county remains unwilling to sell the property for private development, would be to lease it to Schoolcraft College and Wayne State University for extension of their educational programs.

A so-called "consortium" plan by Schoolcraft and WSU was dropped last year when neither could get financing to rehabilitate and remodel the buildings.

One problem will be to adapt the buildings to meet the state's new barrier-free law for handicapped persons.

Mrs. Dumas said county officials are considering several alternatives—including one by the Northville Board of Education to use it for special education for institutionalized, mentally-handicapped children.

Northville School District operates the largest such program in Michigan and one of the largest in the nation. It serves 800 mentally retarded children from the Plymouth Center for Human Development and the Northville Residential Training Center. Both are state institutions located in Northville Township.

AFTER CONFERRING with state corrections officials and legislative leaders last week, Geake said he's confident the prison idea will not become a reality until after a great deal more investigation.

Geake said that if the plan ever takes formal shape, it will be studied extensively by a joint committee of the Michigan House and Senate, which will also confer with local officials to determine the impact on the local communities.

Similarly, Mrs. Dumas said the public works committee of the county board would give the matter plenty of public airing before it got to the point of making a recommendation for final disposition.

Meanwhile, a citizens organization in the Northville community has formed to provide additional clout. Co-chairmen are Ross Northrop and William Miron.

Daniels Den

By EMORY DANIELS

Although a bit late, the annual calendar review is off the press and ready for your waiting eyes. The calendar review is an annual public service of the Den to offer important, and sometimes useful, information about what the new calendars have in store for us—in this case, the 1977 calendar.

There are some things you may not think about, unless they're brought to your attention, which is exactly what the annual review does.

FOR INSTANCE, important happenings in all our lives are months which contain an extra payday.

So here's some valuable information in planning your annual family or individual budget(s). For those who get paid on Friday, you will receive a fifth paycheck in April, July, September and December. Those who get paid on Thursdays will receive a fifth paycheck in March, June, September and December.

For those of our readers who eargerly await news reports from the city commission, township or school boards, or who actually might attend in person, there are no Monday or Tuesday meetings on the fifth weeks this month and in May, August and and October.

FOR THOSE INTERESTED in holidays and days off, this summary will be useful:

Valentine's Day is or a Monday, July 4 on a Monday, Labor Day on a Monday, Halloween on a Monday, Veterans' Day on a Friday (traditional), Christmas and New Year's day on a Sundays.

The deadline to file federal income taxes falls on a Friday this year, one week following Good Friday, which always falls on a Friday. This year, dog licenses expire on a Tuesday, and the end of the fiscal year (July to June) falls on a Thursday.

Good financial months for our local churches will be this month, July and October. Each of these months have a fifth Sunday which allows for an extra collection. July especially should be a good month for those parishes which have a majority of members who receive paychecks on Friday.

It is even possible to do some advance leisure time planning if you enjoy bowling. Leagues dominate the lanes on Saturday nights, but you might have a better chance at finding open lanes during those months with a fifth Saturday—especially in alleys which accommodate leagues which bowl every other Saturday. The bowling bonus months are this month, April, July, September, October and December. These are good possibilities except for December when the fifth Saturday also happens to be New Year's Eve.

In 1977 Easter will fall on April 10, Mother's Day on May 8, and Father's Day on June 19. Important election dates are June 13 for the schools, Aug. 2 for the municipal primary elections, and Nov. 1 for the general election. This year your county and school taxes are due on a Thursday, Dec. 1, and city taxes on a Friday, July 1.

If anything in this review is upsetting to you, please don't call the Den. The Den takes no responsibility for when and how the dates fall.

Join GRA-Y after school

A variety of informal activities are available for boys and girls after school through the GRA-Y program of the Plymouth, Canton, Northville YMCA.

The program involves active play, arts and crafts, stories and beginning track. Emphasis will be placed on the enjoyment of belonging to a group and caring about one another.

The GRA-Y program is 1½ hours per week for eight weeks beginning Jan. 24. The fee is $4.

The program will be offered from 3:30-5 Tuesdays at Allen Elementary, 4-5:30 Tuesdays at Bird, 4-5:30 Thursdays at Eriksson, 3:30-5 Tuesdays at Fiegel, 3:30-5 Thursdays at Field, 3:30-5 Mondays at Hulsing, 3:30-5 Thursdays at Miller, 4:30-6 Mondays at Smith, and 3:30-5 p.m. Mondays at Starkweather Elementary.

Job assistance is available for persons with handicaps

For many people, finding or holding a job can be a traumatic experience, but for the handicapped, it may be close to impossible.

Finding and keeping a suitable job for the mentally, emotionally and physically handicapped is the Vocational Rehabilitation Service's purpose.

Located at 27437 W. Six Mile, the Livonia branch of the vocational Rehabilitation Service serves Livonia, Garden City, Westland, Plymouth, Canton and Plymouth Townships, Redford, Northville and Wayne.

Counselors are provided according to the different geographic areas. While there are no firm age limits, those seeking vocational rehabilitation services should be of employable age.

Frank Jablonsky, Ass't District Supervisor of the Livonia office, explained that the state-operated program provides a variety of rehabilitation services to those who have a handicap which prevents them from being employed. K"To be eligible, a person must have been referred by general and psychiatric hospitals, rehabilitation centers, mental health clinics, schools, the Michigan Employment Commission, department of social services or other correctional institutions," he said.

Those with cardiac problems, orthopedic impairment, hearing loss, epilepsy, psychiatric disabilities, mental retardation and physical handicaps are eligible for the service. Only the blind do not qualify, Jablonsky said.

After eligibility, a vocational objective must be defined by both the counselor and the handicapped person. Once an objective is reached, the counselor's job is to see that the person is offered all services available to attain that goal.

"Another eligibility requirement is that there is reasonable expectation that services provided will result in a gainful occupation," said Jablonsky.

Vocational rehabilitation services available include:

•Medical and psychological evaluation. This is to determine the extent of the disability, whether it can be reduced by treatment, indicates the person's work capacity and assesses the extent of vocational aptitude.

• Vocational counseling and guidance. This is to select job objectives, adjust to or overcome limitations of the disability, and demands of work environments.

•Physical restoration and corrective surgery. These services may be provided when necessary to remove or reduce the vocational handicap.

•Artificial limbs, hearing aids, braces and other appliances. These may be provided in order to reduce the vocational handicap.

•Training for a job. Vocational training in trade or technical schools, on-the-job training, tutorial, correspondence, or college training may be provided.

•Maintenance and transportation. During diagnosis, training or treatment as necessary to prepare the client for employment is provided.

•Tools, equipment, licenses, initial stock or supplies. These are offered when necessary to give handicapped persons a fair start in employment.

•Job placement and follow-up. The service assists clients in securing a suitable job and to insure successful on-the-job performance.

Employers of the handicappped receive such services as Affirmative Action Assistance, Worker Compensation, Second Injury Certification and Troubled Employee Assistance.

"According to a Civil Rights Act, employers who have federal contracts must file an affirmitive action statement indicating their intentions to hire handicapped persons who qualify for a particular job," said Jablonsky.

Under Public Act 183, the law stipulates that persons with cardiac, chiropratic or epiliptic problems must not be discriminated against in job employment, added Jablonsky.

Serving more than 1300 persons at a time, the Livonia Vocational Rehabilitation Service has experienced 50 per cent success in finding suitable jobs for handicapped persons.

There is no cost to clients who meet the requirements. Services are provided for as long as necessary.

"Disabled persons have trouble keeping or finding a job because of the pressure encountered in former jobs," said Jablonsky. "They come to us for assistance, and we do what we can until the person and the employer is satisfied."

Consumer relations offered in Canton

The Canton Chamber of Commerce has a consumer relations bureau which will help Canton citizens solve problems they may have with a Canton merchant of businessman.

The service is provided free of charge by the Chamber of Commerce. The chamber has developed a working relationship with neighboring chambers so that it can take complaints and channel them to the proper agency.

The Canton Chamber of Commerce is located at 5834 N. Sheldon at Ford Road in the Harvard Square Shopping Center. New Canton residents are encouraged to take advantage of this program.

How to buy new battery

When considering a battery, how do you choose from the many available models if you plan to sell the car shortly thereafter. Even if planning to use the new battery as a selling point, you cannot guarantee the life of your battery to a new owner.

"Lifetime" batteries generally last four to five years. The warranty is not transferrable because the manufacturer only promises a new battery free of charge to the original owner.

The lifetime battery is more expensive than other batteries, but it may require less maintenance—for example, usually no water. It may be worth considering if you plan to drive your car for 100,000 miles or more.

The adage of getting what you're paying for is true for batteries.

All about invisible ink

Dear Gundella: Do you know how to make invisible ink? How do you read what is written with invisible ink?

Keith W., Westland

Dear Keith:

There are many different formulas for invisible ink. Here are two very simple ones:

1. Mix one ounce of aqua fortis (nitric acid) with three ounces of water. Use this to write on strong, stiff, paper. When it dries, it is completely invisible.

To read it, you need only to wet the paper. When it dries, the ink will be invisible again.

2. Write your messages with lemon juice. When it dries, it is invisible. You can make the writing show up brown by placing the paper in an oven on very low (250 degrees) heat for a few minutes, or by running a hot iron back and forth over the paper.

However, once you bring out the writing, it remains brown and visible. You cannot make it invisible again.

Dear Gundella:

I know that the 25th wedding anniversary is the silver one, and the 50th is the golden one, but can you tell me what gifts should be given on the others?

Mrs. Larry B., Farmington

Dear Mrs. B.:

Everyone does not agree on all of these. It seems that different parts of the country have different traditions. However, here in the Midwest, you can be fairly safe in following the list below:

First - paper
Second - cotton
Third - leather
Fourth - books
Fifth - wooden
Sixth - iron, sugar, or candy
Seventh - copper, or wood
Eighth - bronze, or rubber
Ninth - willow, or pottery
10th - tin or aluminum
11th - steel
12th - silk or linen
13th - lace
14th - ivory
15th - crystal
20th - china
25th - silver
30th - pearl
35th - coral
40th - ruby
45th - sapphire
50th - golden
55th - emerald
75th - diamond

Dear Gundella:

Recently I bought a book called "Napoleon's Oraculum." It answers your questions by a formula using a number of dots. How accurate is this method for foretelling the future?

Beverly M., Southfield

Dear Beverly:

Judging by what happened to Napoleon, I wouldn't rely too heavily on it.

Note: Gundella will be conducting a weekend workshop on reincarnation at the end of this month. For more information, call 427-1072.

County asks state to release money

The Wayne County Board of Commissioners has called for the immediate release of up to $9 million in mental health funds for Wayne County Psychiatric Hospital which are currently being held up at the state level.

A resolution introduced by Commissioner Royce E. Smith (D-Belleville) stated that Wayne County would be forced to "shut down the county psychiatric hospital" located in Westland unless the state released the hospital's share of the 1976-77 mental health funds.

Smith's resolution was introduced at the first full board meeting of the new year, held January 6. The proposal received emergency consideration and was unanimously supported by the 27-member legislative body.

"The state legislature has appropriated statewide funding for mental health services, but the Milliken administration is sitting on the distribution while hospitals strain to provide the public with this essential care," Smith said.

Smith's resolution calls for intervention on the part of Gov. William Milliken and state legislators to gain release of the funds "without further stalling that could create a potentially dangerous mental health crisis."

Under Public Act 258, the state provides up to 90 per cent funding of mental health services, with the county contributing 10 per cent.

The Wayne County Board of Commissioners had approved a $10.5 million budget for the psychiatric hospital for the 1976-77 fiscal year.

However, the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board, which is the agency responsible for seeking and distributing state funds in the county, has asked state officials for a $9 million maximum funding of the psychiatric hospital, Smith reported.

"It's my understanding that the Mental Health Board felt that Lansing might not want to approve as much as $9 million and that the board also has plans of its own to institute new programs that would require seed money," Smith said.

"I don't feel we should begin funding new programs before we adequately fund the existing ones—and I am quite sure that the public would be outraged if the hospital had to close.

"It's the only psychiatric hospital that proides 24-hour, seven-day week emergency and inpatient service for psychiatric patients living in Western Wayne County and parts of Detroit," he added.

"Right now, there's a patient waiting list to get in," Smith emphasized. "There's always a waiting list and the hospital operates its 124-bed capacity at a 100 per cent occupancy level. They even fill beds on weekends when other patients are on home visits."

Smith said he wants the hospital expanded to 150 beds, and even that "won't be sufficient to handle the needs of the community."

Smith said that the Mental Health Board should be barred from distributing any monies for other programs uintil the hospital is adequately funded.

"I am also concerned about the strain the state is placing on county tax dollars," he said. "Even without the '77 funding, the state owes the county of Wayne $5 million for the operation of the psychiatric hospital from July 1, 1975 to Sept. 30, 1976.

"This is an illegal burden for county taxpayers to be forced to carry," he said.

Regional Roundup

GOT HIS GOAT

A Plymouth Township resident has asked the township to reimburse him $35 for the death of a goat killed recently by a stray dog. The township trustees, unsure of their liability, declined the request and suggested if the man was unhappy with that decision he ought to begin litigation to recover damages.

MILLAGE VOTE

Clarenceville School District voters in Livonia, Farmington Hills, and Redford Township will go to the polls next Monday in a special election to vote on a tax renewal and increase. If the increase is approved, it would be the first since 1969. Light voter turnout is expected.

CITY UNION STRIKES

A union representing nearly half of the city of Livonia's 540 employees went on strike Wednesday morning but the city administration said there would be no interruption of city services. Supervisory personnel are manning telephone switchboards and ice rink machines during the strike. Strikers are asking for a pay raise, unlimited cost-of-living adjustments and better contract language on promotions and transfers. The mayor has termed the strike illegal and sent telegrams to workers' homes urging them to return to their jobs.

RU braves snow

Redford Union schools were open Monday, despite snow emergencies posted in Redford Township. Parents, teachers and even some students appeared at Monday night's board meeting to protest the decision to keep schools open when surrounding districts were closed.

GC SCHOOLS CLOSE

Nearly 1,000 students face transfers to other buildings next year because of the Garden City school board's decision to close Burger Junior High and Marquette Elementary schools. Faced with declining enrollments, trustees voted unanimously recently to close in 1977-78 the buildings, two of the district's oldest. Other closings are anticipated over the next two years. The distrct already has closed two other schools.

FAUST COMMENTS

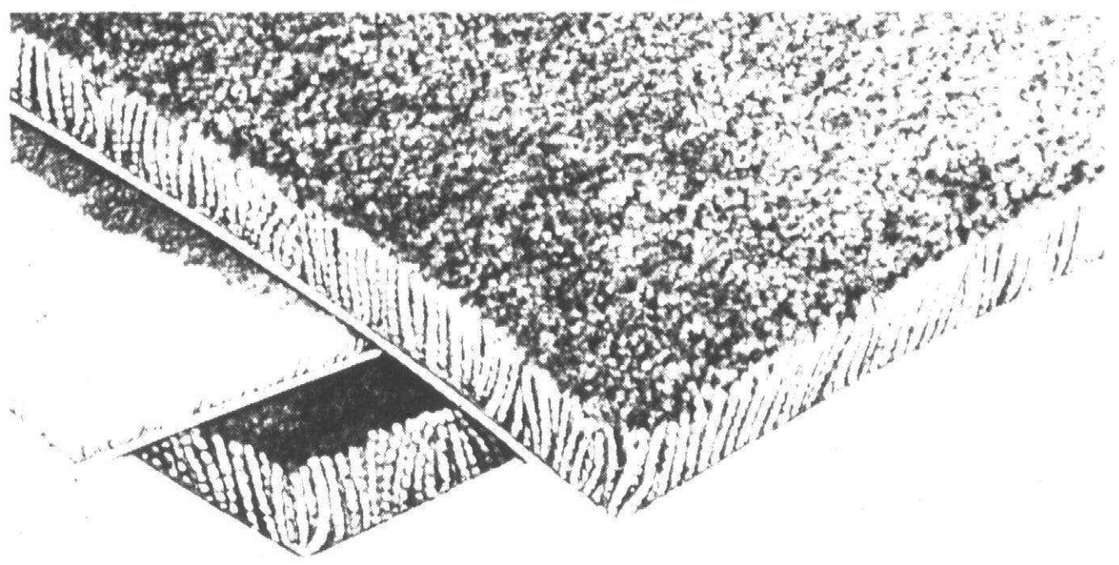

State Sen. William Faust (D-Westland), whose district includes Westland, Garden City and Canton Township, has said the Democratic caucus will consider revision of workmen's compensation and crime legislation as priority items. Faust recently was elected as chairman of the State Senate Democratic Caucus.

"GRAND OPENING NOW GOING ON"

editorial opinion

Our unchecked growth could clean out wallets

In earlier editorials the Observer has suggested Canton should take a careful look at controlling its residential growth because of the harmful effect an uncurbed boom can have on the Plymouth Community School District.

We have argued that there is a price to pay for growth—a price in higher school taxes for Canton and Plymouth residents. While growth is healthy, any population boom which is spiraling without careful plannning can have disastrous results.

And now, as 1977 begins, we have an indication of what that price and predicament might be for the next five years.

BECAUSE OF THE current profileration of residential units in Canton, the school district this fall must find room for an additional 1,200 students—from Canton alone. The next year Canton will produce an additional 1,200 students and another 1,000 more for school year 1979-80.

Residential growth in the recent past has resulted in the opening of three elementary buildings this school year inCanton, and these schools already are at or very near to capacity. Obviously, more classroom space must be found.

Although decisions haven't been made yet—and won't for at least another month—the school board is looking at the rather frightening prospect of having to float a $30 million bond issue if voter approval can be gained in April. If done, it would be the largest school bond issue ever sold in the history of the state.

By choosing some alternatives to new construction—such as portable buildings, greater use of the year-round school schedule—the board might be able to come up with a bond issue request less than $30 million. But the price to pay for unchecked growth will still be high.

THE PROSPECTIVE needs for the next five years to accommodate growth in Canton, and some in Plymouth Township, is the construction of seven school buildings—five elementaries and two middle schools.

Unless viable alternatives can be found soon, the school district will have to build three elementary schools to be opened in 1979, including one 900-student capacity building which could be converted later to a middle school if necessary. Two more new elementaries would be opened in 1980 and two new middle schools in 1981.

Present thinking is to spend money to renovate Central Middle School—the core of the building which is 57 years old—and use it as a high school annex to accomodate secondary student growth. The renovation cost of this project alone would be about $1 million.

IF THE $30 MILLION bond issue must be issued, the dollar cost to Canton and Plymouth residents could be an additional $35 per year in school taxes to pay off the new construction debt.

And an added cost entirely unknown at this point, but one which must be thought of, is how much additional operating millage will be needed to staff, equip and maintain seven new school buildings.

These might seem like the days of wine and roses for Canton as it continues to enjoy some benefits of its residential boom. But the day of reckoning is drawing near. There is a price to pay for growth and when the piper beckons,the cash register will ring loudly.

I-275 bypass boon to suburbs, no threat to city

History, of a sort, is being made this week with the opening of the I-275 freeway all the way from I-96 in Novi to I-75 in Monroe County.

It used to be that all roads led to Detroit. The 38-mile I-275, however, is the first freeway bypass around the central city.

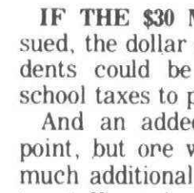

Politically, it isn't always popular to bypass Detroit. The Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority is putting 92 per cent of its eggs into Detroit, and Gov. William G. Milliken has announced he will again push his unpopular property tax base-sharing plan to help older cities.

But the growth of suburbia is so immense that some kind of bypass has been needed. The segment of I-275 from Ford Road to the Monroe County border, added to the completed northern segment between Livonia and Plymouth, gives us that bypass.

Consider how easy it will be to get from the suburbs to Metropolitan Airport—no more limping along on Middle Belt or Merriman roads. Consider how easy it will be to shoot out to the lakes area on the weekends and holidays. Consider how easy it will be to reach Schoolcraft College.

I-275 was needed, and Detroiters and friends of Detroit ought not to feel that the central city is threatened by such a bypass.

The big, deep snow: A view from the party

Tim Richard

The big snowfall of the year has its advantages.

In our suburban neighborhood, it's a superb time to have an impromptu party—the kind you enjoy immensely and say you ought to do more often, but never get around to it.

Things have been slow socially in the ol' neighborhood since the subdivision association slipped into the doldrums. The reason the subdivision association slipped into the doldrums is that so many wives have gone to work to 1) pay the soaring school taxes and 2) build up a bankroll for the kids to attend college.

But along comes the annual big snow, as it did last Monday, and someone's sure to get a party going. The men need the nourishment after digging through the snow, and the women deserve it, too, for putting up with the men.

TWO NEIGHBORHOOD weisenheimers pooled their funds—business apparently improved in '76—and got a snowblower.

"Cost us $259 plus the three-year service contract," one said as I sweated with my snow shovel. "But didya see the paper yesterday? They're on sale for $219."

I allowed as to how he should look on the bright side and consider he had a status symbol that others of us didn't have. I regret I cannot report his response in a family newspaper.

WONDER WHAT happened to those kids who, prior to Christmas, were cadging quarters by singing "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer" from door-to-door. They kinda evaporated when the big snow hit.

FROM THE NEWSROOM'S point of view, the weather has been improved the last two years.

It used to be that the worst snow of the season hit the night of the departmental holiday party. But we've had two straight seasons of decent party night weather, and the worst snows have been hitting Sunday night-Monday morning.

I think God is being good to the editorial staff because of the nice column Mr. Power wrote recently about the Madonna College fund-raising program.

HOW DO YOU tell if it's a heavy snow year, especially when the accumulation melts at least a couple of times every winter?

In metropolitan Detroit, the average snowfall is 31.7 inches a year. Our light years were 1948, when we got 11.3 inches, and 1968, when there were 17.1 inches.

The heaviest ones in recent history were 1964, with 59.1 inches, and 1966, with 50.6 inches.

The '66 snow was a particularly bad one, you'll recall, because the first stuff to fall melted and turned to ice, and then a foot and a half of snow landed on top of the slick ice.

MICHIGAN HAS a relatively uniform rate of precipitation—an average of 32 to 36 inches a year.

But precipitation means both rain and snow, and the rate of snowfall varies enormously. In metropolitan Detroit, we have only a fraction of the snowfall of Grand Rapids, 80.1 inches; Houghton, in the middle of the upper peninsula, 89.1 inches; and Marquette, with a little less shelter on Lake Superior, 105.2 inches.

Some spots in the wilderness of the western upper peninsula get as much as 170 inches a year. My environmentalist friends say it's Mother Nature's punishment to those people for electing Joe Mack to the State Senate.

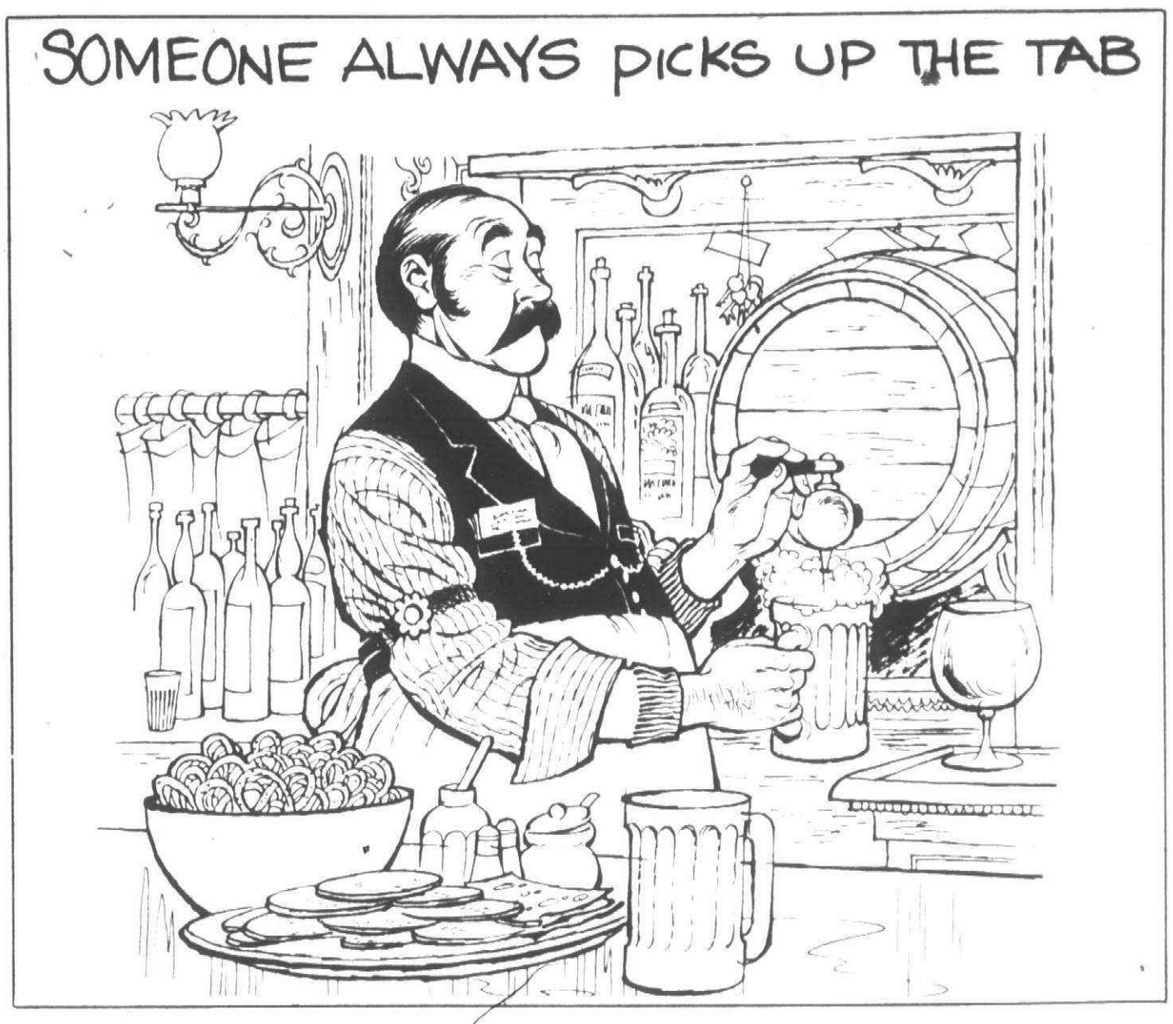

IN ANOTHER WAY, our precipitation is worse. What commonly happens in southern Michigan is that the ground freezes before the big snows hit.

When the snows melt in early March, the water can't percolate into the soil, and the result is flood and mud.

And here we had been blaming the county road commissions for everything!

We're all saloon keepers when it's 'free lunch' time

Eccentricities

by HENRY M. HOGAN, JR.

There is no such thing as a free lunch.

Long ago, saloon keepers used to lay out spreads of meats and pickles, breads and cheeses to entice customers in off the streets. The sign there by the mustard proclaimed "Free Lunch." But that lunch wasn't really free; somebody had to pay for it. Either the saloon keeper paid for it out of his own profits or the customer paid for it with higher drink prices.

Lunch, anytime, anywhere, anyway you slice it, is not free.

You can argue that there is such a thing as a free lunch. There are fish you can spear, apples you can pick, rabbits you can snare, berries you can gather.

While these things don't cost money, they are not free. They are not free because you have to work to get them.

And work is the basis of any economy. The starting place for any and everything we have. Somebody had to work to invent it, work to gather the raw materials, work to pay for it, work to put it together.

It is such a basic law, and the principle seems so obvious when you think about it, why then don't more of us accept it? Why do we keep forgetting? How come more schools don't teach it? Why do so many have to learn it the hard way? And some never at all?

For one thing, we were taught just the opposite when we were little. Just about the biggest things in our lives were Santa Claus, the tooth fairy and the Easter rabbit. The idea that there could be something for nothing was drummed into our wee heads. Our earliest books were full of it, promising us pots of gold at the end of rainbows and golden eggs from magic geese.

The world really would be a nicer place, wouldn't it, if there were golden eggs and magic geese, if every once in a while you picked up something for nothing—a little free lunch.

But you can't, and most people are awfully slow to realize that.

Despite all the evidence to the contrary, there are those who believe that the government can provide free lunches if it really has to and that this trusty old economic law doesn't apply quite as vigorously in Washington, Lansing, or down at the city hall.

There was a recent story about a welfare recipient who had "borrowed" a country ham from a neighboring farmer's smokehouse. He sold it to a grocer for $27 and used $20 of that to buy $80 worth of food stamps; he then bought $51 worth of groceries and used the other $29 worth of stamps to buy back the ham which he then sneaked back into place without anyone noticing.

The writer concluded that the grocer made a profit, the welfare recipient wound up with $7 in cash and $51 worth of groceries and nobody was the loser.

Nobody was the loser? What about the people who paid for the stamps? Your money and mine bought them and that man was taking advantage of our labor. He cost us at least $80 worth.

I have often wondered if all of us might not pay more attention to our government if our taxes were not withheld from our paychecks and we had to pay our taxes directly. Then when federal spending was announced, we would know more clearly where the money was coming from.

As we enter into a new era in federal government this month, we must remind our congressmen that there is no such thing as a free lunch when they are looking into new programs or new legislation that affects business.

When the government spreads a free lunch, remember the taxpayers are the saloon keeper who has to pay for it.

Ford's gift

True to himself, true to the public

Observation Point

by PHILIP H. POWER

Next week, Gerald R. Ford will leave the White House, the only man from Michigan ever to hold the presidency and only the second man in modern times to have lost it in an election while an incumbent.

Conventional wisdom is that he will go down in history as merely a mediocre figure, beset by three main problems.

One was of his own making. Shortly after assuming office, Ford pardoned Richard M. Nixon. This single act, motivated according to Ford by a wish to get Watergate and Nixon out of the way to allow attention to be directed toward more important things, kicked away all the political and emotional capital the new president had available for the remainder of his term.

FORD WAS a minority president, facing an overwhelmingly Democratic Congress, without a mandate of his own, facing very difficult decisions. Unable to accommodate his program to the Congress and unwilling to act by executive dictatorship a la Nixon, Ford was forced into vetoes and holding actions.

Further, Jerry Ford's very naturalness in office made him an easy target of opportunity for a snobbish press which always has been unable to distinguish style from substance. He fell down on the ski slopes; he ate catsup on his french fries.

I think conventional wisdom will turn out to be wrong in Jerry Ford's case

FORD DID not seek the office of president. He succeeded an egomanicial neurotic who left the institution of the presidency in tatters.

Ford occupied the position with candor, with openness, without guile, and with a plain and successful intent to rehabilitate the institution of the presidency to a position of moral respect so his successors could use it to govern. An index of how he succeeded is that the office which Jimmy Carter will assume next week is a far cry from that which Jerry Ford entered three years ago.

HOW DID he do it? Mostly by remaining true to himself and to the nature of the office.

The office of the president requires a presumption by the public that the occupant is acting solely in the national interest and not for narrow or parochial purposes. This presumption is the lynch-pin of any president's authority; any man who violates this rule will have a hard time governing as Nixon did. Ford followed the rule.

He was able to do so because he remained calm and consistent within himself while in his exalted role. Gone were the puffed up White House guards with their fancy uniforms; gone were the faceless and sinister aides hissing words of advice from dark corners. Instead, Ford's tenure was characterized by simplicity, humanity and a willingness to show human emotions while trying to do a decent job.

An example of this attitude occurred just a few weeks ago, when Mrs. Ford received an honorary degree from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. My wife was placed next to the president on the platform. After she had read the citation for Mrs. Ford's degree and sat down, the president turned to her.

"You have no idea how much this means to Betty and to our entire family," he said, and a single big tear rolled out of his right eye and down his cheek.

A man who loves his wife and can happily devote a full day to her honor, even while being president, and who can show his emotional reaction to her success in a natural way is a good man.

Jerry Ford is a good man, who by this humane quality helped restore the institution of the presidency to its proper role. What greater gift could a single man bestow on the American people?

The Stroller

Unsung hero— snowblower inventor

By W.W. EDGAR

When the names of the unsung heroes are listed, a special place should be reserved for the fellow who conceived the idea of the snowblower.

This person has done more for the cause of humanity than many of the heroes we have worshipped for making life easier through the years.

This thought came to mind during the recent snow storm which buried driveways and roads under close to a foot of snow. And, if it hadn't been for the snowblower, which has put fun into snow removal, many of us would have been "prisoners" in our own homes for hours, if not the entire day.

WELL, THE STROLLER remembers a storm about a decade ago when the curbed driveway through the trees kept he and his neighbors busy for the better part of five hours to open the way for him.

The snow was a foot or more high in the drifts, and each shovel of the white stuff got heavier and heavier. It was only a miracle that spared several of us from suffering heart attacks.

"There must be an easier way to do things than this for a living," The Stroller commented to the neighbors who were huffing and puffing with each additional shovelful of snow, until finally the way was open.

Well, there was an easier way—but it was a bit late in coming. It was the coming of the snowblower and, strangely, the name of the inventor has been kept a secret. But the whirling blades, which now look so simple in operation, are doing the trick.

The chap who invented it would have had a great time laughing during the recent storm, for The Stroller, and his little helper, not only have the long, curving driveway cleared but those of the neighbors along the street in the heavily wooded area. And it as all done in two hours—without a huff or a puff.

Those whirling blades had done a job so neat and clean that the driveways and the street looked like a marble carving when the job was done.

All the while, the neighbors smiled as the heavy snowfall no longer was a burden and there were no warnings to be careful and not suffer a heart attack. These were the same neighbors who gambled several years ago with their own health to get The Stroller on his way to work.

As the blower threw the snow in a plume for about 15 feet, The Stroller kept wondering who the chap was who took the burden out of snow removal.

HE COULDN'T HELP thinking that Charles F. (Boss) Kettering, the famed General Motors engineer, gained worldwide fame when he came out with the self-starter for the automobile.

Until this contraption was discovered, motorists suffered many a broken arm while trying to crank the motors of the autos when they started taking over the roads.

Cranking a car was a real job, and, in many cases, it took the joy out of riding. But "Boss" Kettering brought joy to the hearts of the motorists when he made possible the starting of the motor by a simple push of a button.

So, why don't we hear about the snowblower inventor.

IT WAS THE SAME with the electric light and electricity.

Every school child had been taught the origin of electricity and how Benjamin Franklin discovered it while out flying a kite.

And we all have learned how Thomas Alva Edison invented the electric light—a product that lead to the many electrical devices we have today. And who doesn't know that it was Alexander Graham Bell who gave us the telephone.

You can imagine what life would be like without electricity, the the electric lights and the other electrical appliances to say nothing of the old phonograph that paved the way for radio and, later, such things as television and taling pictures in full color.

But nary a word do we hear about the chap who came up with the idea of the snow blower and its cousin, the leaf blower.

Local dentist was very compassionate

Editor:

Many thanks to a dentist in the Plymouth vicinity who took time in the busy holiday season to make a house call to Mrs. Alex Lyke of Northville.

Mrs. Lyke, a victim of multiple sclerosis, started having trouble at 4 a.m. The dentist was not called until 2 p.m. Ordinally dentists don't make house calls but he was there within an hour and found Mrs. Lyke had an ulcerated tooth. He prescribed medication.

About ten days later on a Monday afternoon he took Mrs. Lyke to his office in a van, graciously donated by a local gentleman who is also a multiple sclerosis victim.

After ten days no statement had been received. We called the office and the reply was "no charge." Again thanks to a very kind a compassionate doctor.

Thanks for support

Editor:

As the school year has reached the halfway point, I, on behalf of the staff of George A. Smith Elementary School, would like to thank you and your staff for your continued support.

Our events from the Halloween parade through our book fair and Christmas sing were all a smashing success. Your publicity workshop last September has proved invaluable and working with Elinor Graham and Gary Caskey has been a pleasure. They are both a wealth of information and are always imaginative, prompt and efficient. Thank you for making the job of publicity chairman an interesting and pleasant experience.

Pact needed for teachers

Editor:

I am writing this letter as a concerned parent and volunteer worker at Starkweather Elementary School.

We've lived here almost two years. Our son, who is in the third grade, has learned more from these two years, not only in class but on field trips, than any other school he has attended.

The teachers at Starkweather are the greatest. Never have I seen so much didication and involvement from teachers. Why should they have to work without a contract? If ever a parent could give an award for "Teachers of the Year" I would love to give each one of our teachers one. All I can say is thank you very much.

So, any of you parents and board members who might say, "Well all teachers are dedicated." I say, "Hogwash, no way!"

So board members and teacher negotiating teams please get together and give those contracts to these teachers and all the other teachers in our school area and help restore the rapidly deteriorating good feelings between parents, teachers, and administrators.

Girl Scouts appreciative

Editor:

Girl Scout Troop 637 would like to publicly thank the House of Glamour. At our meeting last month, the House of Glamour took three of our Girl Scouts and cut, styled and blow-dried their hair.

The rest of the girls got attention too. They were told what hair styles they would look best in, colors of clothes they should wear, and were given a bar of soap and a pen. A big thanks to the House of Glamour.

Damman in charge

Task force preparing to suggest SBT reforms

By TIM RICHARD

As of right now, Lt. Gov. James J. Damman will give out only one solid clue how the new and controversial single business tax (SBT) will be revised.

"The No. 1 priority is relief for a person taking out of his business an ordinary income—the kind of income he'd make working for someone else," said the politician-businessman who heads the Governor's Advisory Task Force on the Single Business Tax.

The 37-member task force Damman heads this week wound up a series of nine hearings, including two last week in Pontiac and Detroit.

Damman attends most himself, usually spending six hours taking the heat from often angry businessmen who use the hearings to vent their frustration at government in general as much as to detail what's wrong with the 2.35 per cent value-added tax which this year replaced seven other business taxes on the Michigan lawbooks.

A NUMBER OF the business persons, however, are later complimentary to Damman. They tell the former hardware merchant they think he's really listening to their problems. "I'm glad to see you don't have horns," quipped one.

Damman appreciated that because it came at a time when The Detroit Free Press was running a political column saying that Gov. William G. Milliken was soon to tell Damman he would be dumped as No. 2 man on the 1978 Republican ticket.

Damman is considered a political liability because of the ethical questions raised by his land dealings while he was a Troy city official.

Meanwhile, Damman continues to work on SBT. He told people at the hearing, "This panel's job is to structure a state tax system. This task force is the first one in my memory composed of business people."

Six legislators and some university economists are part of the panel, but the bulk are people from all kinds of business. Attending the Pontiac hearing with Damman were, for example, John Rodge of Chrysler Corp.; William C. Roney Jr., who heads the stock brokerage firm with his name; Ralph Staley, chairman of Acme Building Maintenance; Donald Brown of Michigan Bell; Henry A. Montague, of the Michigan Restaurant Association, headquartered in Southfield; Paul E. Weiss II, chairman of Mt. Clemens Rose Gardens; and Robert E. Smith of the Michigan Farm Bureau.

DAMMAN IS FIRM on one point: "A system like SBT is with us to stay. We should think in terms of how to improve equity."

That's a clear, sharp answer to the many speakers who urge flat-out repeal of a tax that brings in a quarter of the state's income.

The hardest-hit appear to be very small business operators who make a salary-sized living as dry cleaning operators, professionals and manufacturers' representatives, for example.

"Beyond that, we want to look at some of the dislocations—in construction and insurance," DAmman said. Some of the strongest testimony came from independent insurance agents, whose rates are set by the insurers and the state and who can't pass on the SBT to buyers, and from all phases of the construction industry.

"LOTS OF THEIR problems are external to SBT," Damman said of the business persons.

Soaring malpractice insurance costs are hurting the healing professionals; property insurance is a drain for firms in high-crime areas; unemployment compensation and workers compensation costs are enormous problems, especially to companies which must compete with firms from other states.

Yet Damman's task force has defined some of SBT's problems and outlined some alternative solutions. Ironically, mending one section of the act may make other parts more onerous.

IN A NUTSHELL, SBT is a value-added tax: It is levied on a firm's payroll, fringe benefits, profits, interest paid, and some depreciation.

A task force interim report noted many small and new firms have big debts and high interest costs because of their low equity. So removing interest paid as one item in the tax base would seem to be of some help.

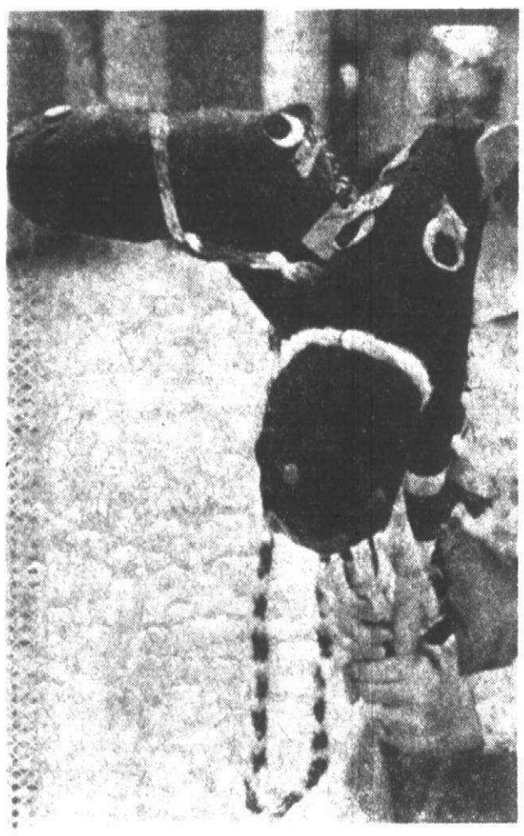

But others complain that taxing the payroll discourages hiring. Thus, if interest if eliminated from the tax base, the SBT would fall all the more heavily on the payroll portion.

Another possibility is to eliminate a percentage of labor costs from the tax base. In the aggregate, labor represents 77 per cent of the SBT tax base, but the Michigan law already has a 65 per cent deduction—that is, labor costs which exceed 65 per cent of a firm's base are deducted. So, most firms are alreadfy geting a break.

Still another possibility is to allow a one-time deduction of the total annual compensation paid new employees who are an addition to a firm's total employment. The problem is the monstrous difficulty of determining which positions are really new in a dynamic economy where the job mix is constantly shifting and workers get new titles.

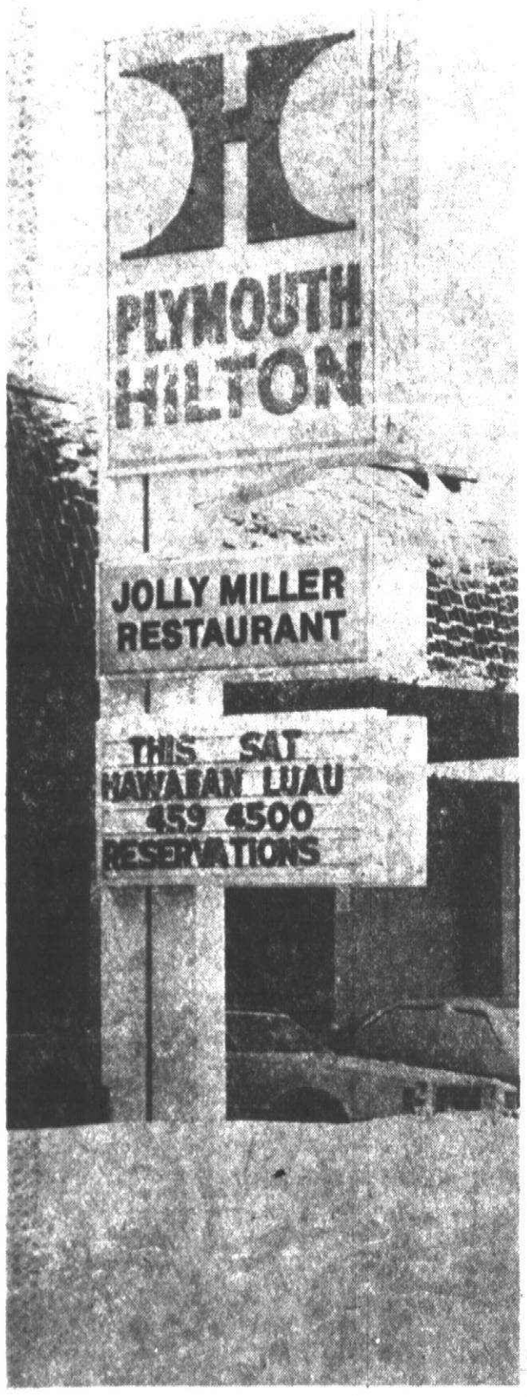

Sentiment among businessmen at the hearings was strong for restoring profit as the tax base. But state officials in general and school leaders in particular are adamant about wanting to eliminate the roller coaster effect on tax returns that a roller coaster item like profit causes in Michigan's highly cyclical economy.

There will be modifications, but Damman made it clear that SBT or something like it is here to stay.

Talent search begins for cast of 'Jest Foolin''

During the next two months, the Plymouth-Canton community will witness one of the greatest talent hunts in history as the Plymouth Community Arts Council assembles a cast for the April 1 and 2 performances of "Jest Foolin'."

The PCAC Follies will be produced and directed by professionals. But, the singers, dancers, musicians, comedians and actors—the stars of the show—will be local people.

The Jerome H. Cardgill Producing Organization, Inc. of New York also will supply costumes, scenery and music. The Cardgill company has had country-wide experience in helping plan and present similiar programs. In Michigan, Birmingham and Grand Rapids have had successful follies produced by the company.

Joanne Hulce who is chairing the project says, "Hopefully, we will have our cast by March 17."

THOSE WHO WISH to dust off their dancing shoes or their vocal chords are asked to call PCAC president Dorothy Magee who is co-chairing the venture. Or they can call the PCAC office, 455-5260, any morning Monday through Thursday.

Dee Schulte presented a mockup of the follies program at a Tuesday morning meeting of planning committee chairpersons. Motif for the early April production is a court jester. Jo Hulce expressed the group's reaction to Mrs. Schulte's art work when she said, "The program sets the tone for the whole thing."

As the planners tossed around ideas, suggestions that they wear ruffled jester collars or bells on their ankles were met with a good deal of laughter and some enthusiasm. It was evident the whole community would be aware of "Jest Foolin'" long before April Fools' Day.

Chairing the follies planning committees are Pat Rhinehart and Phyllis Kordick, program; Dee Schulte, design artist; Nan Cooper and Marj Fisher, tickets; Dorothy Magee and Barbara Bridenthal, talent; Esther Hulsing and Nancy Sharp, patrons; Gae McCord and Donna Miceli, public relations.

Other committee chairmen are: Elaine Kirchgatter and Mary Uhl, extra revenue; Marilyn Connally and Nancy Hayes, costume; Sharon Flower and Carol Stirton, make-up; Clara and Gil Camp, ushers; Wilma Newton, finance; and Mary Weed and Mary Smith, cast party.

Profits from the follies will be used for continuation and expansion of PCAC school programs—the picture ladies, sculpture centers and middle school galleries.

The council is a non-profit organization dedicated to fostering interest in and knowledge of the visual and performing arts within the community.

Dee Schulte revealed her drawings of the jester which will be the trademark of the arts council's April 1 and 2 performances of "Jest Foolin'," a follies with professional direction and local talent. (Staff photo)

Julie's Sideways has contemporary look

By ELINOR GRAHAM

Sideways, Julie Thoman's new shop on Forest Street, opened for business Monday in the midst of the winter's worst snow storm.

Area schools and many businesses in downtown Plymouth were closed because of the weather. But Sideways, with its summery wicker and rattan furniture, kites, wind chimes and baskets, gave a breath of summer sunshine to the day.

Sideways is a companion shop to Julie's Wayside shop in the mini-mall on the corner of Main and Ann Arbor Trail. It has been in the planning for almost four years.

"We began to think it never would be," said Mrs. Thoman. "We found spots that weren't available; then spots that weren't right for it. We thought it would go in the Forest Place Mall, then there wasn't room for it."

She said she and her husband, Tex, had reached the point where they thought it wasn't meant to materialize.

THEN THE OLD Plymouth Hardware was available.

To Julie, the most positive sign was their new telephone number. She requested a number as close as possible to the old one.

"Eight years ago we were given 453-8310. Our new one is 453-8312, just two digits off."

Merchandise still is being unpacked in the shop that features imports from all over the world.

"The wicker is from all over," said Julie. "Some is from Spain and some from Taiwan."

The dinnerware is from Finland. The lamps are American. The tinware is from Taiwan and the glassware is from France.

Some of the baskets were made in the Republic of China others are from the Philippines. There are trays and dishes from Japan.

Sleek modern bathroom fixtures are made of plastic. Others are made of wood and woven slats. Shower curtains and mats match either style.

The kites are colorful oriental butterflies and birds with special tails and spools for the kite string. Wind chimes hang from the beams, shells from the southern seas or stained glass tinkling in harmony.

GRASS BASKETS, slab baskets, match stick and bamboo blinds, denim and canvas bags, woodenware and bright plastics are an interesting mixture of textures and materials.

Many are displayed on the corrugated shipping containers in which they arrived. The paper bag brown of the cartons adds another texture to the natural and synthetic merchandise.

The Green Thumb Shop is at the back of Sideways.

Nancy Petrocelli moved her houseplants, and hanging pots and baskets from their former quarters above the Forest Place Mall.

Two new windows were installed on the Main Street end of the building. Nancy's plants have plenty of natural light from the eastern exposure.

Sideways, Wayside—the two shops complement each other. The older shop caters to traditional tastes while the new shop's stock is as contemporary as its name.

Federal agents get the bird; antique dealers claim frame

By GLENN BUNTING

Mounted rose-breasted grosbeaks are hard to come by. They're also hard to sell, but a lot easier to take.

Dee Morgan and Arlyn Reilly are still wondering how they managed to let the little stuffed critter get away and would kind of like to have him back. Unfortunately, it looks like they never will.

The odd story all began when the two ladies purchased a framed plaque with a stuffed grosbeak perched on a twig two years ago for $20. After cleaning the piece, they put it up for sale at Dee Morgan's Antique Shop at 149 W. Liberty in Plymouth's Old Village.

The bird never sold, so the plaque was reduced to the original price. Still no luck, until Jan. 2. That's when a pair of special law enforcement agents from the Department of Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service confiscated the grosbeak.

"They came into the store, looked around and bought an $8.50 painting of hanging game birds," Arlyn said. "Then they showed their identification and said it was illegal to sell the grosbeak. I didn't ask any questions and just did as they asked."

THE AGENTS left the antique store with the bird in the bag. Store owner Dee Morgan hasn't heard from them since and is a bit curious.

"I asked them if someone reported the bird and they said "no." Since it didn't sell, we placed it way in the rear of the shop. Someone would have to do some pretty hard looking to pick the bird out of the place it was located," Dee said.

John Keeler, an agent for the Fish and Wildlife Service's regional office in Chicago, said one of the confiscating agents, Rick D. Leach, is a collector of antiques and "was probably shopping on the weekend and ran across the bird."

Putting a rose-breasted grosbeak up for sale violates the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, signed on July 3, 1918, according to Keeler. He said the grosbeak is a nongame bird protected under the treaty, which forbids the selling or owning of any part of an egg, shell, nest or the anatomy of birds listed under the act.

The rose-breasted grosbeak is a song bird, all of which are protected by the 1918 treaty. They're common in northern deciduous woods, suburbs and old orchards. The female resembles a purple finch, but is much larger.

Grosbeaks make long, continuous robin-like whistle sounds and are about 7½ inches in length.

DEE MORGAN estimates the confiscated grosbeak is 80-100 years by the framework of the plaque. That would date the bird prior to the treaty, which would make it legal to own, but not to sell.

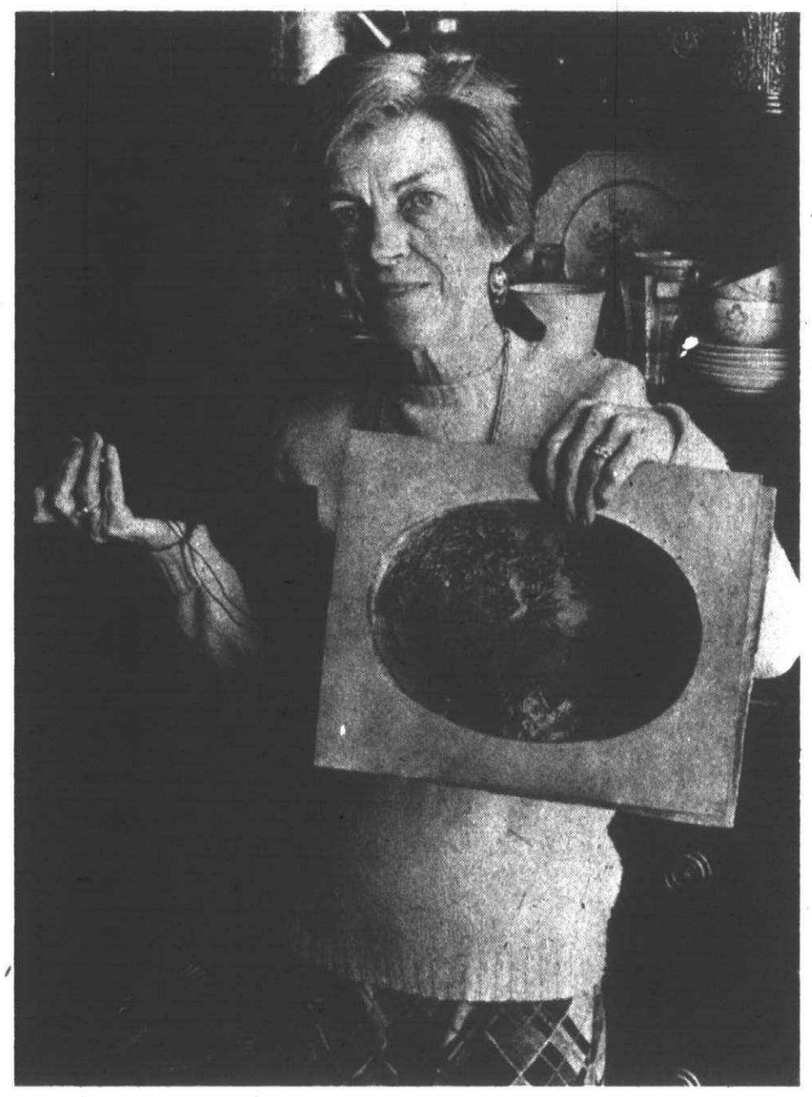

Ms. Reilly said both men were very polite and didn't cause a disturbance in the crowded store.

"They upset me on the way out, when they stopped and asked my birth date," sha said. I asked why they had to know and they mumbled something about information so I made up a date."

Any songbird that is confiscated is held by the Fish and Wildlife Service until the case is closed. Then the agents will see if any beneficial use can be made of the bird. Colleges and small museums often find a place for the service's finds.

If no beneficiary can be found, then the bird is destroyed, something the antique shop owner would not like to see done. Ms. Morgan said she'll look on the plaque as one of her worst $20 investments.

"Well, maybe I can get two dollars for the frame," she joked.

Cooper to open Madonna series

Ambassador John Sherman Cooper will talk about American values at Madonna College of Livonia at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 26 in the first of a series of lectures funded by the S & H Foundation.

The college received a $2,600 grant from the foundation for the series entitled "Has Justice Prevailed?—The American Criminal Justice System, 1776-1976."

Ambassador Cooper's topic is "American Values—Myth or Reality? Common Heritage or Bone of Contention?" The speaker has served in public life since election to the Kentucky legislature in 1928. He later served as a judge and was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1946, serving in that body more than 20 years.

He was a member of the presidential commission to investigate the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and has been a U.S. delegate to the United Nations and ambassador to India, Nepal, and East Germany.

Madonna College was one of five institutions to receive major bicentennial grants from the foundation, which is sponsored by the Sperry and Hutchinson Co., while 27 colleges and universities received smaller grants in the lectureship series.

Other lectures will be delivered by Dr. George L. Kirkham, professor in the School of Criminology, Florida State University, on Feb. 16; Chief Justice Thomas Giles Kavanaugh of the Michigan Supreme Court, on March 16; and Judge Geraldine Bledsoe Ford of Detroit Recorder's Court, on April 16.

The lectureship series was planned jointly by the Madonna history and sociology departments, with Dr. Randal Hoyer and Edward Zoski acting as co-chairmen. They explained that the lectues will focus on persistent problems which have confronted persons and organizations responsible for the maintenance of justice and order in our democratic society.

Each lecture will be held in the Science Lecture Hall. The public is invited free of charge.

'Dolls House' will lead off SC film series

"A Doll's House," featuring Jane Fonda, will be shown at 8 p.m. tonight (Thursday) in room B200 at Schoolcraft College to begin a series of exerpts from films of particular interest to women.

The Schoolcraft Women's Resource Center is sponsoring the programs, which will continue for four Thursdays. All films will be shown in the same location, and all are free.

The feature Jan. 20 is "I Love You, Goodbye," with Hope Lange. It tells the story of a wife who seeks greater growth and considers how this search affects her marriage and family life.

The question of whether to have children will be explored in "A Brand New Life," scheduled Jan. 27. Cloris Leachman plays a 40-year-old career woman who confronts the dilemma.

The film planned for Feb. 3 is "Tell Me Where It Hurts," in which Maureen Stapleton will dramatize the effects of new values and changing lifestyles on middle-aged women and their families.

REV. KENNETH UNTENER

New rector is named for St. John Seminary

The Rev. Kenneth Untener will become the first alumnus of St. John Provincial Seminary to serve as rector of the institution when he takes over from the Rev. Robert Rose on June 15.

The designated rector, now 39, also is the youngest man to be named to head the Plymouth seminary that began its training of candidates for the priesthood in 1949.

His appointment was announced by the bishops of the Catholic Province of Michigan.

The sixth rector to serve the seminary for the seven dioceses of Michigan, he takes his place in a select company that includes the Rev. Lyman Fenn, the Rev. Edward Hogan, the Rev. Eugene Van Antwerp, the Rev. Addison Wright and Father Rose.

Father Untener currently services as assistant to the delegate for the clergy in the Archdiocese of Detroit. In this capacity, of Catholic bishops' committee on priestly lifestyle and ministry, and is a member of the archdiocese theological commission.

"Having worked with priests for years, I look forward to drawing on that experience to assist in the important work of formation of men into priesthood," he said of his new appointment.

"St. John is such a beautiful facility and there is so much talent there in terms of faculty that I would like to see as many people as possible draw from that combination: the ordained, the about-to-be-ordained, the non-ordained, those involved in continuing education—really, anyone who wishes to learn."

THE NEW RECTOR said he planned to pay close attention during the coming months to what people in the Catholic community have to say about the seminary.

"What I intend to do is listen," he said. "I will find out what people expect of their priests. I intend to keep in contact with the bishops of the province and hear what they have to say about St. John and their expectations."

In his new capacity, he added, he expects to draw on "a certain missionary quality to the priesthood in which we all share."

"I feel it is wise to move on and it is good to meet a whole new set of challenges," the priest said. "Every new community into which we move as priests provides us with opportunities to draw strengths from others.

"Every move, every change of leadership, brings a certain freshness in which we all share. There are gains and losses, and it's up to us to reduce the losses and built on the gains."

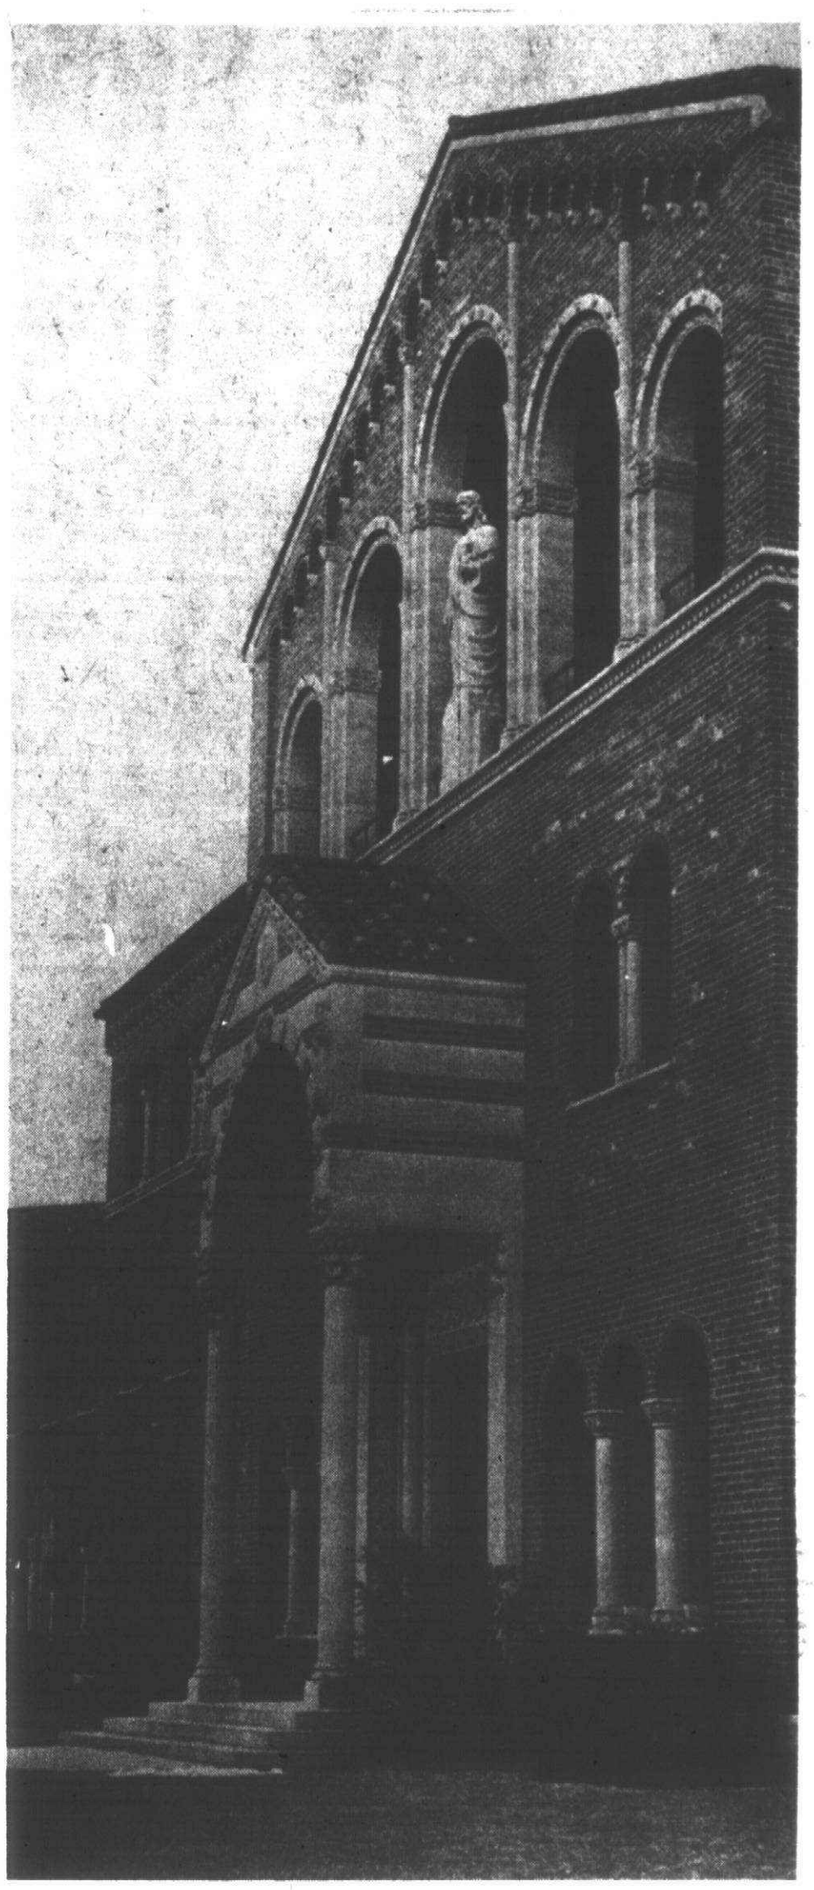

FATHER UNTENER is a native of Detroit and attended St. Charles grade school and high school.

From 1955 to 1959 he attended Sacred Heart Seminary, and his years of studying theology at St. John were 1959 to 1963.

He had high praise for his predecessors at the seminary helm, especially Father Rose.

"Father Rose took over at a difficult time of transition," he pointed out, "a time when the seminary moved from the Sulpician community to diocesan leadership.

"Every period of change is difficult, and his even more so. He did a remarkable job. I appreciate the opportunity of following him and continuing the work of priestly formation."

This impressive entrance greets candidates for the priesthood at St. John Provincial Seminary on Five Mile Road in Plymouth Township

Try a HOPEful vacation

Project HOPE has found a way by which doners to its world-wide medical programs can have a good time while benefiting the organization.

A winter benefit cruise offers patrons the chance to have a winter vacation in the Caribbean while contributing money for medical teaching and training programs in 10 countries on four continents.

Fourteen days in southern waters on the ship Daphne of the Carras Line is the feature of the excursion, but short trips are being planned which will include sightseeing, golf, tennis, scuba diving and water skiing.

Project HOPE notes that rates for an outside cabin at $1,820 per person are reasonsable inasmuch as a 30 per cent take deduction is allowed. This means the actual cost is $1,274.

The ship will sail Jan. 29 from New Orleans and return to that city Feb. 12.

Its first stop will be Santo Tomas, Guatemala, where it will be possible to tour Mayan ruins. Then on to the island of San Andres, which is steeped in pirate lore and features clear waters and a chain of reefs and keys. A beach barbecue is planned at one of the beaches.

Cartegena in the South American country of Colombia is the third stop. This historic walled city, built on a sandy peninsula, is the site of one of Project HOPE's major programs in the Caribbean and guests are invited to visit the site.

Other attractions of the city are 16th century beaches and fortifications, beaches and seafood restaurants.

A quaint Dutch settlement of pastel-colored houses and gabled roofs is the next stop on the cruise. Willemstad, on the island of Curacao, has many duty-free shops offering imported china, perfume, and fabrics.

International cuisine and gambling are offered in the island's major hotels.

Turning north, the ship will put in at Port Antonio, located on the northeastern coast of Jamaica. Raft trips down the Rio Grande River can be arranged on a special tour basis.

Nearly $9 million is needed annually to sustain the operation of Project HOPE's ongoing programs, in the U.S. and abroad, which have benefited more than three million people since the organization was founded in 1960.

Since that year more than 2,500 North American medical personnel have served with the project, which has trained more than 8,500 physicians, dentists, nurses and allied health personnel.

HOPE has also helped establish new schools of nursing, dentistry and physical therapy; assisted in the development of existing teaching institutions, worked in hospitals to teach and implement improved methods of patient care, and helped expand public health efforts.

Workshops are on aging

Brother Francis J. Colgan will direct two workshops at Madonna College, Livonia, designed to acquaint various professionals with concepts on aging.

Brother Colgan earned a Ph.D. in education at the University of Michigan in 1976 upon completion of his dissertation "An Empirical Study on the Effectiveness of a Course in Gerontology as a Means of Causing a Shift in Attitudes toward the Older Adult."

The tuition-free workshops are funded by Title VI-A, Administration on Aging, Division of Manpower Resources, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The workshop scheduled for the weekend of Feb. 18-20 is intended for teachers, to help them develop positive attitudes in elementary and secondary school students. The workshop scheduled for March 18-20 will develop understanding and awareness of problems of the elderly in other professionals.

Brother Colgan, a member of the De La Salle Christian Brothers, earned three bachelor's degrees and two master's degrees before pursuing work in gerontology at Michigan. He has taught in or supervised schools in Canada as well as in the West Indies and Nigeria. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Canadian Institute of Religion and Gerontology.

Registration for either workshop may be conducted at Madonna College from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, Fridays until 5 p.m.

Self-help aids millions

"Somebody has been through what I'm going through, and they survived."

It's a comforting thought, whether you're about to undergo surgery, permanently quit drinking or file for divorce.

And it's the thought that has drawn millions of Americans into what University of Michigan social work Prof. Thomas J. Powell calls the "self-help movement," a vast, voluntary network of information sharing and mutual aid.

While no one has taken an official inventory, Powell estimated there are hundreds of self-help groups with national affiliation, and perhaps thousands which are oriented to the local scene.

"The grandparent of them all is Alcoholics Anonymous, founded in 1935, with a membership of over 1.1 million. Synanon and Narcotics Anonymous were originally offshoots of AA, aimed at persons coping with drug addiction," he said.

"Recovery, Inc., includes both discharged mental patients as well as any persons who believe they are suffering from emotional problems.

"IN THE HEALTH area there are hundreds of organizations, ranging from the broadly inclusive Make Today Count for cancer victims to the more specialized groups, such as Lost Cord Clubs for people who have lost their voice boxes through surgery, and Reach to Recovery, for pre- and post-operative patients with breast cancer.

"Parents Without Partners and the Gay Liberation Front represent still another category: mutual suport, education and advocacy, rather than actual 'help.'

"The enormous increase in self-help groups during the past two decades reveals some important things about the character of the American people," Powell believes. "We want more services, but we are willing to assume some responsibility for seeing that they are available. We do not want to rely entirely upon professional help."

As a "professional helper" himself, the U-M social worker is interested by this last point. "The self-help movement is having a significant impact on the fields related to counseling and mental health," he noted.

"Initially the professions were skeptical and even critical of the self-help groups. There were anecdotes about the 'psychological harm' caused by the untrained membership.

"Now, however, I am concerned that some professionals may have swung too far in the other direction. Instead of feeling threated by the groups, they may tend to idealize them, and overlook their limitations. Furthermore, some professionals may use them to excuse their obligation to provide services."

ACTUALLY, the self-help movement offers abundant opportunities for collaboration between the practitioners and the public, the U-M professor finds. The professionals often have access to current research data and other useful resources, while the group members offer first hand experience with many of the problems the professionals are called on to deal with.

Powell has been a sponsor and consultant with Parents Anonymous, a relatively new and rapidly growing network of adults who have been guilty of child abuse. "One of the things that impressed me about PA is that no one sits around and complains about unmanageable children," he said. "The focus of attention is the parent."

Some groups, like Reach to Recovery or Parents Without Partners, are intended for short-term membership; others, like Alcoholics Anonymous, can be life-long commitments.

A person's role in these latter groups changes as he gains control of his problems. This personal struggle and triumph places him in the best possible position to help others like himself. "One of the appeals of the self-help groups is that they offer the 'graduates' a way to repay the support they have received," Powell added.

He pointed out that most of the groups can accommodate people with a wide range of problems. For exam ple, the Society of Compassionate Friends, an organization of parents who have lost a child through the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, welcomes all bereaved individuals.

NEWSPAPERS, ministers, physicians, social work agencies and community mental health centers are all good sources for finding out which groups may exist in the community and how to get in touch with them.

"The self-help movement is one of the many positive outcomes of the consumer movement," Powell concludes. "It is people saying: 'Other people have shared my misfortune'; 'If they could pull through, I can pull through'; 'I can take responsibility for my life'; 'I can help someone else with theirs.'"

Canton chatter

By SHARON STARON 455-8822

Community service is the name of the game for our Canton Jaycettes. Sue Roth, president of the group, considers the Jaycettes an auxiliary to the Jaycees.

"We enjoy doing things with our husbands and we always help them in their activities," says Sue. Membership is open to all women between the ages of 18 and 35. They welcome anyone who would like to help do things for community enjoyment.

The new Canton charter was obtained in 1974 making this group a very young organization. In the last three years the Jaycettes have had a lot of fun and given much time and energy to our township.

The Jaycees biggest annual project is the fair held each August. The Jaycettes give their all to make the fair a success each year and they also have their own separate projects within the fair.

Last year they ran a baby's life booth to benefit the March of Dimes. There was a contest where prizes of free diaper service, vitamins and some stuffed dolls were given away. They passed out pamphlets to give the public information on how to insure healthy babies. They also sold pop and balloons where the profits went for Thanksgiving baskets.

All the funds that the Jaycees raise always are put back into the community one way or another.

One thing that all members were really excited about last year at the fair was the day when they gave a whole afternoon, five hours, of free rides and entertainment to 350 children from the Plymouth Center for Human Development. This was the first time these children had been invited to attend any function that also was opened to the general public. They were helped off and on rides and had to be chased down all afternoon, but everyone had a ball.

After the fair the children were treated by McDonald's to dinner with free pop from the Egg Castle.

The Jaycettes have a small membership right now but are hoping to attract new women into the group soon. Nancy Rentz, Diane Neal and Carol Mehaffie are a few of the gals who were involved in the haunted house project which is always a huge success. Kathy Schelling, whose husband is the president of the Jaycees, Bev Mallonee and Chris Kresta, recording secretary of the group, are a few more.

Right now the Jaycettes are collecting Gerber baby food labels. When enough labels are collected the Gerber company will donate an echo-cardiograph machine to Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Irene Golec, treasurer, and Barbara Markland would like to ask everyone to save those labels. They hope to soon get some drop off centers set up at the grade and nursery schools.

Sue Dickie, vice-president, says, "One of the greatest things about our group is that it's like an extended family. There's always someone there to help out. You get to do things in your community that you couldn't do as an individual." Sue's favorite project is the help they give to our two senior citizens groups. Each month a $5 gift is donated to each group. The Holiday Park group has made from $20 to $30 on this event.

The Jaycettes bake birthday cakes each month for the Northville State Hospital. Any patient with a birthday this month will celebrate on the 14th when the gals take the cakes to them.

"Someone to count on when you need it" is Lynn Otts feeling about the friendships she has gained through the Jaycettes.

"It's a nice feeling to have," she continues. "Our group is very family orientated, we involve the children as much as possible. Our kids are learning there's plenty of work that goes into any project. They get to be on the other side of going to the haunted house or to see Santa. They also have made many new friends."

"I think," says Lynn, "we're trying to give our community something it didn't have before, an identity of its own."

In the spring they are planning an art auction. They will take the profits from the auction for their Easter project.

Three years ago they held an Easter egg hunt. The next year they had the Easter bunny receive visitors. Last year they gave out 700 bags of candy to the children living in Canton Commons. This was a great success so they probably will probably be doing it again this year.

The Jaycettes of Canton are not as social as some of the other groups but they do have a lot of fun.

Sue Roth says, "There's so many things we'd like to do but we need more members. We need new members with new ideas and fresh enthusiasm. We certainly would welcome the support of any new members."

If you like making new friends and serving your community this is the place to be. As Lynn Ott said, "It's a good feeling to know we've helped someone."

A PROMOTION for Ray Baldwin was an exciting event for his family. We are happy for him and his new position but are saddened since it has caused the Baldwins to leave our community and take up residence in Vermont.

Patricia Baldwin was a very special first grade teacher at Gallimore Elementary. She was in the middle of her fourth year when the move took place. Anyone fortunate enough to have their children taught by Pat knows the Plymouth Community School system has lost a fantastic lady.

She is a warm, gentle, enthusiastic teacher and gave her all to her students. She always did extra things for her kids. But one thing that stood out among all others was the fact that she enjoyed her job and she truly loved her first graders.

Her son Jeff was a student at Pioneer Middle School and daughter Lynn was a student at Allen Elementary. The Baldwins lived in Plymouth.

The Gallimore PTO held a farewell tea for Pat before the holiday break and presented her with a plaque. The social committee gave her a serving plate.

Oakway stages 4th concert spectacular

In a setting that looks like a grand ballroom, the Oakway Symphony Orchestra will present "Viennese Spectacular," its fourth concert od the season.

Concert time is 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 22. Setting is Madonna College's Activities Building at the corner of Schoolcraft and Levan, Livonia.

Joining Conductor Francesco DiBlasi and the orchestra will be The Opera Organization (TOO), directed by Richard Conrad. In the second half of the program, TOO will be heard in a program of songs either associated with Vienna or by Austrian composers.

OAKWAY RECEIVED a major boost when the Michigan Council for the Arts made a yearly sustaining grant of $2,300.

The Rev. Bert Anderson, board chairman of the Oakway Symphony Society, said, "This is the first year the council for the arts has given us a yearly allotment other than for a specific program." State funds had gone in the past to the Detroit Symphony with no strings attached, and this year the state has begun extending the practice to major regional orchestras.

"Oakway is particularly deserving of this kind of recognition from the Michigan Council for the Arts because our drawing area covers a wide area in Oakland and Wayne Cuunties," Anderson said.

MOST SEATING will be concert hall style, but a few tables for eight can be reserved by calling Nelda DiBlasi at 425-8618. Some tables are being reserved for city council, school board and chamber of commerce officials.

General admission tickets are $4, senior citizens $2. Tickets are available at Hudson's (Northland, Westland and Oaland malls), Madonna College and Hammell Music, both in Livonia, and Royal Music in Royal Oak.

The first half of the program will be devoted to Tchaikovsky's most popular symphony, No. 5 in E Minor. "That's the one where people get so excited they want to clap halfway through the fourth movement," said DiBlasi.

"It's one of the big works in orchestral literature, and it has a hair-raising French horn solo. The Tchaikovsky will give a coloration difference compared to the Viennese music."

OAKWAY'S STRINGS will be shown off in the Viennese portion of the program. The strings have won plaudits in earlier concerts this season.

Just Jazz celebrates

Just Jazz will celebrate its first anniversary Friday at 9 p.m. with a return performance by Tribe, a local group of seven veteran Detroit musicians. The University of Michigan-Dearborn will host the concert in its Recreation Organization Center.

Tickets are $2.50 in advance in ROC 216 or at the door.

Tribe has performed on TV and in numerous local concerts, including an opening performance for Donald Byrd at Ford Auditorium. It has released two albums, "An Evening With the Devil" and "vibes from the tribe."

"Downbeat magazine"has recognized Tribe as "a local group of rare quality and musicianship."

Michigan has selected Tribe to be its representative in the World Music Festival in Lagos, Nigeria.

For more information about the concert or Just Jazz, call 271-2300, ext. 586.

Freud and Holmes meet

"The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (PG) is an elegant movie scripted from Nicholas Meyer's novel about the confrontation of Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud. The result is not as mind-boggling as anticipated, but it is stylish.

The attention to detail in settings, costumes and locations makes this an impeccable production. Even the title art has been thoughtfully chosen, consisting of original drawings from Strand Magazine in which the Holmes stories appeared.

Purists, however, might be dismayed to see Holmes (Nicol Williamson) portrayed as edgy and distraught, not the usual suave, keen detective that Basil Rathbone made familiar to movie audiences.

The characterization of Dr. Watson (Robert Duvall) is also unique. He is not the nervous, bumbling fellow associated with Nigel Bruce. Duvall's Dr. Watson is very strong and persuasive.

THE NOVELTY of these interpretations is partly choice and partly the demands of the script. Holmes, as every Baker Street buff knows, has two weakneses: Cocaine and violin playing. While the latter sorely afflicts the listener, the former sorely afflicts Holmes.

In the opening scenes, Holmes is shown mentally and physically ravaged by his addiction. He has become paranoid. He hounds Professor Moriarity (an unpleasant, humble-pie pedagogue admirably acted by Laurence Olivier) because he believes him to be his arch enemy, a master criminal directing nefarious activities all over the world.

Fortunately, the lapse in Holmes' mental faculties is only temporary, thanks to the efforts of his good friend, Dr. Watson. Watson contrives to get Holmes to Vienna for treatment by Dr. Sigmund Freud, the only man capable of curing him.

These two giant intellects of fiction and fact immediately impress each other. Holmes, with one perceptive look around the room, quickly deduces the circumstances of Freud's life and practice. Freud (Alan Arkin), for his part, deals forthrightly with Holmes, confronting him with the facts of his addiction which he has been unwilling to admit.

ARKIN'S INTERPRETATION of Freud is much too restrained, and the episodes depicting Holmes' withdrawal symptoms (visions of snakes and monsters) are much too heavy handed. But balance and a classy tone are restored in colorful vignettes of life in 19th century Vienna.

Beach Boys return

The Beach Boys will return to Detroit's Olympia at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

The year 1976 marked the 15th anniversary of perhaps as long-lived a band that exists in rock and roll.

Almost everybody knows what the band sounds like: that high, tight wall of harmony, counterpoint and background, with rich vocals and orchestration leaning in and out of rising balanced music. Their sound came out of the beach-and-sunshine culture of southern California in the 1950s and '60s.

Tickets for the concert are available at Olympia, Olympia Travel in Birmingham, or by mail order. For further information, telephone 895-7000.

Kiss adds 3d show

Because of an overwhelming demand for tickets, the rock group Kiss will do a third performance in Detroit's Cobo Hall at 8 p.m. Jan. 29.

The previously announced shows are scheduled for Jan. 27 and 28. Appearing with Kiss will be Uriah Heep.

Tickets are available at Cobo Hall, Hudson's and Montgomery Ward's and are priced at $7.50 and $6.50.

Mail orders, which must include a stamped self-addressed envelope and certified check or money order, can be sent to KISS CONCERT, 301, W. Jefferson, Detroit 48226.

Ellinghausen nets 23

Salem stops pesky Belleville, 73-65

By FRED DeLANO

Plymouth Salem got 42-point production from its starting forwards, Tom Ellinghausen and Chris DeBear, Tuesday night and used this as the springboard to a hard-fought 73-65 Suburban Eight basketball victory over Belleville.

The home court win kept the undefeated Rocks, who are 9-0 for the season, one length out in front of Livonia Bentley in the scramble for the league championship which Salem itself has won three years in a row.

Salem is 5-0 in league action and Bentley 4-1, with Dearborn, Trenton, Edsel Ford, Belleville, Redford Union and Allen Park strung out behind. Friday night Edsel Ford will visit Plymouth with the Rocks attempting to run their remarkable home record to 34 wins in the last 35 outings.

AS USUAL it was hard-nosed basketball from start to finish as the Rocks took on coach Tom Niemi's Belleville club. An early 13-4 Plymouth lead soon vanished as the Tigers grabbed control behind the fine play of Cornell Grantham and Kelvin Patterson.

It was Belleville which had the distinction of being the last team to beat Salem on its own court, and as coach Fred Thomann sighed afterward, "Tom sure had his kids ready to play again."

Seven points from Ellinghausen and six by DeBear allowed Salem to nurse a 15-14 lead after the first period, but Patterson keyed a second quarter Tiger attack which put the teams into a 31-31 tie at intermission.

Two minutes into the third period Belleville found itself on top, 35-34, after buckets by Roy Rutherford and Patterson offset three points from Ellinghausen. For the doggedly determined Tigers that proved to be the end of the line.

Bruce Gerish fed Rich Hewlett on a drive for the basket that put Salem ahead to stay, 36-35, and inch by inch the Rocks kept adding to their margin. The greatest the lead ever became was 10 points, and to settle for eight on the final count was as much as anyone could ask.

HELPING CONTAIN Belleville's fast break in the second half was Thomann's decision to switch defensive tactics from man-to-man to a zone. The penetration which the Tigers had capitalized upon in the first two quarters was pretty well stifled.

Had it not been for eight solo buckets by Grantham in the second half the Tigers might not have made as close a run for it as they did.

Meanwhile, with Mike Christie coming off the bench to play an instrumental role for Plymouth, and with Gerish scoring all of his eight points after intermission, the big gunners—DeBear and Ellinghausen—saw the pressure eased.

A 19-16 edge in the third period saw Salem go into the final stanza with a 50-47 margin and in the run for the wire over those final eight minutes it was Plymouth all the way, 23-18. That last period alone saw DeBear score nine, Ellinghausen eight, Gerish four, and Christie two.

ALTHOUGH GRANTHAM was high for the game with 28 points, Ellinghausen led Plymouth with 23, DeBear had 19 and Christie added 11 for excellent balance. For Ellinghausen it was a fine follow-up in coming off a 29-point performance against Bentley just last Friday.

"It was DeBear's best game of the year. He was just super on the boards," commented Thomann in noting that Plymouth led in rebounds, 31-28. "Ellinghausen and Gerish, who led in rebounds, got what help they needed.

"Although we didn't score in a bunch this time, we just slowly but surely spread it out. All we can do is take 'em one at a time."

As a warmup for the varsity victory that was to follow, the Salem Jayvees ran their record to 7-2 with a 42-28 victory.

4th quarter rally falls short

Canton bows to Riverside

By DENNIS O'CONNOR
Sports Editor

The short two-game winning streak of the Plymouth-Canton basketball team came to an abrupt end Tuesday night. The Chiefs, in a valiant comback effort, fell short 65-62 to Dearborn Heights Riverside.

The defeat dropped Canton's overall record to 3-6 for the year and makes Friday night's road game against Waterford Mott even more important if the Chiefs intend to finish with a better than .500 record this season.

The Chiefs started the game on fire, burning out to an 11-1 advantage after the first four minutes of play.

But for some unknown reason, Canton simply stopped playing basketball. There was no movement on offense or defense. It was like watching five guys play alley ball in the a neighbor's driveway.

RIVERSIDE OVERCAME the early Chiefs' margin midway in the second quarter and didn't stop pouring it on. The Rebels outcored Canton 20-10 in that second period and took a 32-25 advantage into the locker room at halftime.

It was more of the same lackluster Canton play in the third period as most of the action was at the Riverside's end of the court. The Rebels scored 14 points to the Chiefs six and took what seemed to be a comfortable 46-31 lead into the final period of play.

The puzzling Chiefs continued to amaze everyone with their play in the fourth quarter. But this time, Canton's last quarter performance was the exact opposite of the previous three periods.

Canton began to catch fire with six minutes remaining in the game. The Chiefs began to play inspired ball. They were moving on offense, fast breaking at every opportunity, and playing team defense that caused numerous Rebel turnovers.

The result was a 31-point quarter that matched the total production for the first three combined. The only problem was the Chiefs could not make up that massive margin of 15 points and Riverside hung on for the narrow three-point victory.

Sophomore Butch King led the final quarter surge with an amazing 18 points in the eight-minute span. King hit almost everything from the outside and was the recepient of many fast break layups that closed the Riverside margin.

"It took us too long to get going," Canton coach Casey Cavell said. "It took until the fourth quarter to gain control of the game and by then we had to catch up a lot."

Were the Chiefs overlooking this game and thinking too much about the battle against Mott on Friday?

"I think we were a little over confident going into this one but we weren't looking ahead to Mott," Cavell said. "And that quick 11-1 lead did a lot to pad our confindence.

"But Riverside has lost only two games. True, they don't play in the toughest league but they hustled and played a good offensive game.

"We talked things over (at halftime) but we didn't respond in the third quarter to the things we had to do.

"We had no movement on offense. We weren't helping each other out."

CANTON SCORED more field goals than Riverside, 28-25, but the Chiefs sloppy defense resulted in the Rebels scoring 15 of 29 from the foul line. Canton recorded only six of nine foul shots.

Matmen meet on Saturday for Plymouth Invitational

The second-annual Plymouth Invitational wrestling tournament takes place at the Centennial Educational Park this Saturday as 12-teams from around the area come to the Plymouth Salem gym for competition.

Rock coach Ron Krueger and Plymouth Canton coach Dan Chrenko serve as the co-hosts of this grappling event that should be one of the finest around the state.

Heading the field is awesome Westland John Glenn which has to be considered the overwhelming favorite in this competition.

The Rockets won the Plymouth event last season, placing eight of their wrestlers in the championship round. Glenn comes off another invitational victory, the prestigious Schoolcraft Invitational, which it won last Saturday. Glenn defeated 32 other teams in this tourney.

The closest challenger for the Rockets will be Farmington High School, which finished third at Schoolcraft. The Falcons were fourth place finishers at Plymouth last season.

Another contender will be Dearborn Heights Annapolis, which placed second behind Glenn in Plymouth's competition last year. Annapolis passed up the Schoolcraft tourney but hasn't lost a dual meet so far this year.

THURSTON, NORTH FARMINGTON, Allen Park, Novi and the hosts Salem and Canton make up the big battle for the fourth through ninth spots. These six teams are the most balanced which should prove for interesting competition.

The bottom three squads include Livonia Stevenson, Livonia Franklin and Southfield. These crews are all new to this tourney.

THE SEEDING MEETING with the 12 coaches takes place Saturday morning and preliminary competition is scheduled for 11:30 a.m.

After a break for dinner, the night session will begin at 7 p.m. with the consolations for third, fourth, fifth and sixth places. The championship matches follow immediately after.

Rock wrestlers rout Bentley

The Plymouth Salem wrestling team breezed to an easy 55-10 Suburban Eight League victory last Thursday night over the Livonia Bentley Bulldogs.

The Rocks victory was their third in conference play against one defeat while the Bulldogs remained winless in loop competition.

Salem won 11 of the 13 matches for the lobsided victory. The Rocks' Randy Vipperman, Jim Ross, Carl McNulty, Jeff Fidge, Matt Wilkens and Dave Champion each recorded pins against Bulldog opponents. Salem also managed five decision victories.

Leading the Bulldogs was Scott McKay who easily defeated freshman Mark Ross in the 107-weight class. McKay is Bentley's senior captain who won the 33-team Schoolcraft Invitational last Saturday and placed sixth in the state last season.

RESULTS:

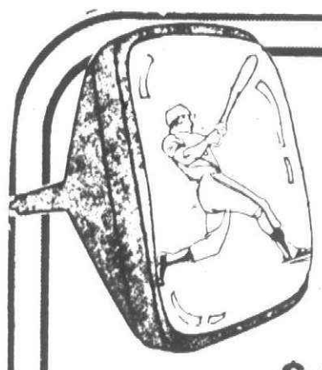

100-pounds: Vipperman (S) pinned Felic (B), 1:54.

Glenn grabs Schoolcraft

By DOUG FUNKE

Westland John Glenn added another feather to its wrestling cap last weekend by out-grappling a 32-team field at the seventh annual Schoolcraft College Wrestling Invitational.

The Rockets, which have been an area powerhouse during the past several seasons under coach Bob Lusk, claimed three firsts, two seconds and a third in the championship matches to compile 182½ points, 5½ more than runner-up Wayne.

Farmington placed third with 126 points. Clarenceville, a Class B school, finished a strong fourth with 123½. Farmington Harrison earned sixth place with 102 and Birmingham Groves wrestled to seventh place with 97 to round out Observer & Eccentric teams which finished in the top 10.

Glenn's victory, however, was not without controversy. Bill Meyer, a sophomore who wrestled at 134 pounds for the Rockets, was slammed to the mat during his championship match with Wayne's Tim Clark.

Meyer was groggy after the maneuver and since no doctor was available to examine him, he did not continue. Under prep wrestling rules, Meyer was awarded a victory on a disqualification.

That decision made a difference in the final outcome. "It was one of those things that occurred," Lusk said. "Everyone was upset."

The Glenn coach said he was reluctant to permit Meyer to continue after the slam. A doctor who subsequently looked over the dazed wrestler said he probably would have recommended Meyer not resume.

Even without Meyer's win by disqualification, the Rockets still recorded the most first- and second-place finishes of all competing squads.

Nick Paciocco edged Doug Fierberg, from Birmingham Groves, 4-2, for the 128-pound title and Jim Meyer, Bill's brother, carved out a 13-3 decision over Farmington Harrison's Fred Blackmer for the 180-pound championship.

Jerry Cook earned the Rockets other second-place finish in the 157-pound division and Jeff Doyle placed third in the 167-pound class.

"This was the first Schoolcraft tourney we won so we feel real good about it," Lusk said. "I can't single anyone out (for special recognition). We just wrestled pretty steady. Just about everyone we took, scored. We're real pleased with them.

"Jerry Cook was super," Lusk continued. "Nick Paciocco did a great job—he beat the defending champion—and both Meyers were good."

Scott McKay, a Livonia Bentley senior and a state finalist last season, won the 107-pound championship by decisioning Buddy Ault from Redford Thurston, 6-0.

Other Observer & Eccentric grapplers who placed second were Dave Reed, 121 pounds, from Birmingham Groves, Mark Desjarlais, 140 pounds, from Clarenceville, and Dave Champion, 193 pounds, from Plymouth Salem.

Other area runner-ups were Jim Simmons, 147 pounds, from Farmington, Dean Schultz, 167 pounds, Farmington, and Mark Dewitt, heavyweight, Livonia Churchill.

Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton wrestling teams finished in the middle of the pack Saturday afternoon in competition at the seventh annual Schoolcraft Invitational.

The Rocks finished 17th in the 33-team tourney, compiling 60½ points. The Chiefs followed in 18th place with 54 points.

The top Plymouth performer was Salem's Dave Champion who advanced to the championship round before losing to Ypsilanti's Steve Holman. The second place finish for the Salem senior saw him win four matches before falling to Holman. This marked only the second time that the 193-pounder has lost this year.

"Holman placed third in the state last year as a sophomore and I don't see anyone beating him this year," said Salem coach Ron Krueger.

The other Rock wrestler who placed high in the competition was 147-pound Jeff Fidge. The Salem senior placed sixth with a 4-3 record for the event.

The Rocks were hurt by the absence of Bob Dasher and captain Bob Zalameni, who have been sidelined with injuries.

Both Dasher (heavyweight) and Zalameni (134 pound) would have been factors in his weight class.

CANTON'S TOP PERFORMER on the day was 114-pound Craig Lee, who placed fifth with a 5-2 record. Lee was seeded eighth before action began.

The Chiefs' senior captain Bill Heedum was a sixth-place finisher at 107-pounds. Heedum compiled a 4-3 record.

Surprising Dave March also placed sixth for Canton in the 134-pound competition. March was unseeded going into the invitational.

THERE WERE TWO Salem-Canton matches in the meet with both schools getting one victory.

Salem's Fidge defeated Canton's Scott Collins 4-3 at 147. The Chiefs' Lee ousted the Rocks' Rene Leist 4-2 at 114.

Pucksters exchange gifts

Plymouth and Swedish hockey players exchanged gifts during pre-game ceremonies Friday night at the Plymouth Cultural Center. The Swedish players spent the holidays at homes in the Plymouth-Canton area and marked the end of their trip with hockey games against Plymouth bantam and midget teams. Sweden won both games, 7-1 and 4-3. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Doc's Corner:

Canton cagers lack team play

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Please explain to me how a basketball team can play terribly for three quarters and muster only 31 points and all of a sudden wake up and score an identical 31 points in the final period?

Strange but true. This is exactly what happened to the Plymouth Canton basketball team Tuesday night in its 65-62 loss to Dearborn Heights Riverside.

The Chiefs started out strong by outscoring the opponent 11-1 in the first four minutes and then things fall apart. They stand around on the court and watch Riverside catch them ... finally go ahead 46-31 after three quarters.

The Chiefs finally realize that they might lose this game to a Class B school. They start playing basketball in the final eight minutes but that 15-point margin is a little too much to overcome. The result is another close loss.

This was the sixth loss in nine tries for Canton. Not one of the losses have been by more than a four-point margin.

I WAS PREPARED to write a column on how important Friday's Waterford Mott game was for the Chiefs because it might have evened their record. If Canton had won this game against Riverside, it would have been the third victory in a row. It would have put them in position for a 5-5 overall mark and 2-2 in Western Six League play.

Things seemed to be looking on the bright side for Canton basketball. After a miserable start in losing five of its first six games, Canton opened the new year by demolishing Franklin and then beating Northville on the Mustangs' court.

They were playing like a true team for the first time all season. They were gaining important confidence that makes a team a winner.

Then all of a sudden, for no reason whatsoever, they go back to playing like individuals and the result is another erratic performance against a team that should have been beaten.

THE CHIEFS HAVE got to stop playing like individuals if they expect to be a winner. And it must have support from its bench players. Not one substitute scored for the Chiefs in the Riverside game and yet, these second line players are always complaining because they don't play.

The starters have got to work together and stop thinking of only themselves on the court. Basketball is a team game and the Canton players (all of them) can win at this game if they decide to play like a team.

Swedish visit was a success

The visit of the Bantam and Midget hockey teams from Vasterhamige, Sweden ended Friday night at the Plymouth Cultural Center with a banquet honoring the European visitors.

This banquet followed two hockey games against Plymouth teams which the Swedes won 7-1 over the Bantams and 4-3 over the Midgets.

The Swedes visited Plymouth as part of a return trip that was made last holiday season by the local pucksters.

During the Swedes' stay, some 30 players and 20 adults visited many sights around the area and played hockey games against Livonia, Trenton, Ann Arbor and Bowling Green, Ohio as well as Plymouth.

All the Europeans stayed in the homes of Plymouth-Canton residents or at the Mayflower Hotel.

"The trip was a huge success," said Mike Michalek who was one of many people in charge of planning the Swedes' activities.

"I'd like to give a big thanks to everyone who helped make the trip a success and a special thanks to all the parents who volunteered their homes for the Swedish players.

"We're planning on doing the same thing next year."

The contests against the Swedes drew almost 1,000 people into the Cultural Center. This total figure was especially surprising considering that a Salem—Bentley basketball game, a University of Michigan hockey contest, and the Russian—American hockey game at Olympia were all going on at the same time.

The money received from the admission of all the Sweden hockey games will go toward the expenses of the trip. Michalek said he figures to break even which is what was intended.

The Swedish Bantam team finished the tour with a 4-0-1 record while the Midgets were 1-3-1. Both Plymouth and Swedish squads exchanged gifts before their respective games.

Chief JV rallies to victory

It was a different story in the preliminary game at Dearborn Heights Riverside Tuesday night. The Plymouth Canton junior varsity basketball team came from behind for a 66-60 victory over the Rebels.

Riverside led most of the way until the final quarter of play when Canton's JV pulled ahead.

If you are looking for the unusual these days, one of the best places to look is in any of the area's bowling establishments. It has almost gotten to the point where the unusual is the usual.

For instance, none of the 80 bowlers in the Westland Senior House league was able to reach double century figures. To make things even more unusual, none of them went over 580 as the tops for the night was 580.

Then there was the case of Don Wright at Country Lanes. Bowling in the Greenfield Mixed League, he started with eight strikes and seemed well on his way toward a perfect game. Then, what do you think happened? He missed the rest of the way and had to settle for a 252 game and a 561 series. You won't find anything more unusual than that, but Don was satisfied with the 252 for he is a 161-average bowler.

THE YOUNGER bowlers still are causing their elders to sit up and take notice at Farmington Lanes.

In the Teen Classic this week, Jim Hamlin came through with a 248 in a 668 and Lynn Corbacs had a 200 in 559.

In the junior house league, George Jacoboni fashioned a a 234 in 678 while Tom Hay had a 246 in 652 and Jerry Grimes used a 253 game to help him to a 549 series.

In the women's classic, Jan Vanderwill returned to the winners' circle with a 259 in a 650 series. In the mixed classic, Les Hardin paced the men with a 223 in 621 and Myrna Dunn was high for the women with a 234 in 585.

PAT COOMBES used a 581 series to walk off with top honors in the Livonia Ladies Classic. With her handicap of 90 pins, she won the series with a 671. In actual count she had games of 210, 193 and 178.

Her series victory included winning the third game with 193-30—233. In the other games, Betty Moeller won the opener with 212-39—251 and Dorothy Goryca took the second with 204-26—230.

MIKE SCHWIEZER was top man in the Evans League at Plymouth Bowl with a 583 gained on games of 176, 205 and 202. In the Holy Cross mixed league Rich Pearson was high with games of 154, 205 and 202 for 567.

The juniors had quite a time of it in their holiday tournament at Westland Bowl. Al Bednarski, Mark Herron and Bill Williams posted a 3,012 to win the team event. Kevin Miller had a high single of 235 and Dennis Jacobs had high series with 554.

In the bantam division Mark Huber, Dale Becht, Don Wolfe and Jeannie and Joannie Stemple teamed for 3,054 to win. Don Wolfe paced the boys with a 201 in 522 and Tammy Wrobbet had a 155 in 396.

MARY MOHACSI, the Livonia school teacher, had a great week. She paced the ladies classic at Garden Lanes with 610 and learned that she is the lone Detrtoit-area bowler on the WIBC list of 10-year averages with a mark of 192. That tied her for ninth place.

In the Garden Classic, Brad Lackey showed the way with a 619 that gave him a three-pin edge on Jerry Fisher. A 610 series was good enough to give Bill Montgomery the pace-making role in the Moose circuit.

With a 551 series that included a 202 game, John Brewster went 93 pins over his average in the Livonia Lanes senior citizens loop. Others who shared the spotlight were Julius Balogh with a 243 game and Al Laramee with a 234.

Here's one option you can't get from a car dealer.

Real rustproofing. A dealer can't order it from the factory. Because it has to be done after the car is completely assembled.

Some car dealers will do a so-called "rustproofing" job, but that's about all. They might even say it's the "same as Ziebart." That's not true. Because they don't have the training, equipment or know-how to give you complete rustproofing.

At Ziebart Rustproofing we've got the tools, the sealant and the technicians to do it right.

If you're buying a new car, you should check us out. Why not give us a call?

Forecast: expensive weather.

So far, this winter has been colder than last winter – much colder. And there's no avoiding what it's doing to your energy bill: When the mercury drops, your use of energy goes up – as a result – your bill goes up too.

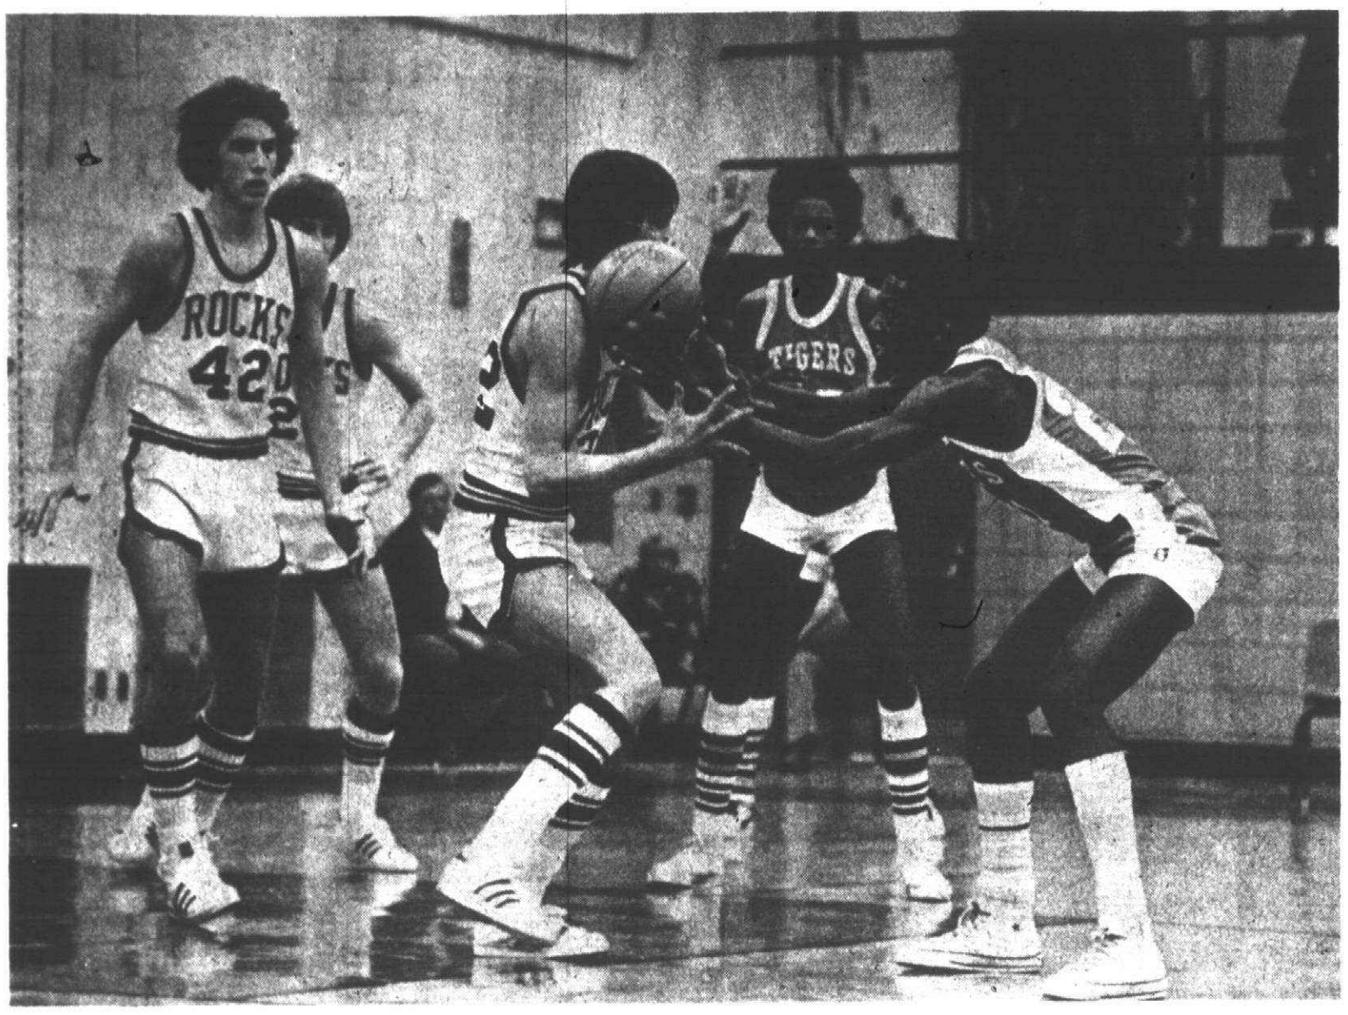

Extremely low temperatures combined with an increase in the cost of natural gas from our suppliers are making this winter unusually expensive. So now, more than ever, you need to use energy wisely. Dial down. Turning your thermostat back from 72° to 68° will help you save. Dialing down further can save you even more. And so can insulation.

Expensive weather ahead, and there's no way around it. So let's get through it – together. Our responsibility will be the energy you need. Your responsibility will be the energy you use.

RU rips AP

Breaking things wide open in the third quarter of Tuesday night's basketball game, Redford Union, led by Mike Petsch, knocked off Allen Park, 82-60.

The game opened up in the first quarter as a shooting match-up all the way. Both teams found the range and kicked in bucket after bucket. But with RU's size advantage, Allen Park had to struggle early on.

In the second quarter the action changed very little as both teams still tried to control and dominate the game. At the intermission RU held the lead, 42-32.

The game really was closer then the score indicated as Allen Park hit as well as RU from the floor.

In the third quarter the RU offense broke the Allen Park defense when Petsch came out hot and scored 16 points and the whole RU offense came out blazing. In the end, it was all RU.

Stevenson ready for IL showdown

The stage is now set.

Livonia Stevenson warmed up for its Inter-Lakes basketball showdown with Pontiac Northern by downing Livonia Franklin Tuesday night, 71-42. Both Northern and Stevenson have 3-0 league records. The contest will take place Friday night at approximately 8 p.m. at Northern.

Off quickly Tuesday night, the Spartans jumped on the Patriots in the first quarter by using a sure-footed offense and strong defense. Franklin tried to stop the sudden opening attack with a full-court press, but the conditioned Spartan offense stayed calm and swept ahead, 16-9.

By the end of the half it looked like Stevenson would walk away from the hard pressed Patriots. The score was 34-21, Stevenson.

In the second half Franklin came out hard and tried to press the Spartan defense, but the game even at this early stage was all Stevenson. It was so much the Spartans' game that Stevenson unloaded its bench.

In the second half Stevenson held tight onto its lead with a strong, if not outstanding, zone defense. The Patriots never were able to move well against the zone. In the end the Spartans looked smooth as silk.

Bentley cagers beat Edsel Ford

In what Livonia Bentley basketball coach Larry Jackson termed a game without a tempo for three-quarters of the way, the Bulldogs Tuesday evening downed Dearborn Edsel Ford in a Suburban Eight League tussle, 75-68.

"The kids were not up for Edsel like they were for Salem," Jackson said, suggesting that his charges were a bit flat.

Bentley, which led almost all the way, changed from a man-to-man to a 1-3-1 zone defense at the start of the fourth quarter, secured a five-point lead and held on for its fourth league win in five outings.

"Both teams scored decently," Jackson said, "but there was no tempo until the fourth quarter, when we saw the light at the end of the tunnel.

"Overall, we had better talent," the Bentley coach continued. "I think they (Edsel Ford) played their game pretty much."

The Bulldogs shot at a 51 per cent clip from the field. The front line—forwards Flo Homm and Craig Fuelling and center Ed Snow—collected 22, 20 and 10 points, respectively.

Jackson, in addition to singling out the play of his scorers, praised the work of Scott Dinsmore, who came up with two big steals in the fourth quarter, and Rick Ehrstin, who connected on five of six foul shots.

The Bentley JV stung Edsel Ford, 81-43, to remain unbeaten.

And it's still running?

You paid a lot of money for your car, and when it doesn't run right, you're apt to throw a fit. But put yourself in the car's place.

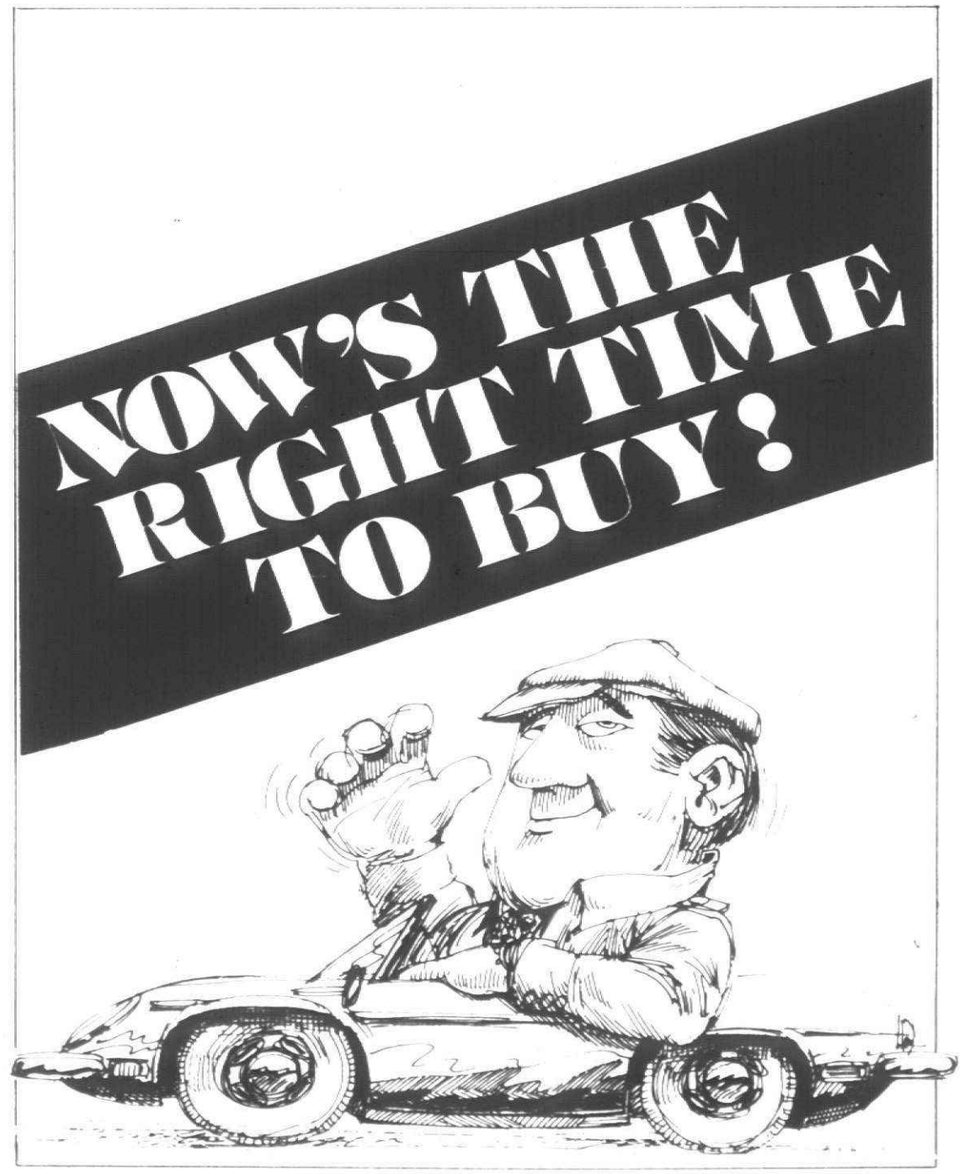

The average age of cars in use in America is six years. Each has more than 15,000 parts welded and bolted together. If you drive a typical eight-cylinder model, here's what it went through.

Each spark plug fired 15 milion times, the points opened and closed 120 million times, the coil delivered 120 million jolts, the carburetor mixed 3.1 billion cubic feet of air with 763 gallons of gas, the fuel pump pulsed 15 million times, each valve opened and closed 15 million times and the speedometer cable rotated 10 million times.

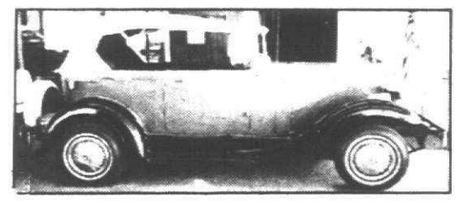

Each piston in the engine traveled more than 3,000 miles up and down inside the cylinder. Add to this the time the engine was idling (not recorded on the odometer) and yuou have the equivalent of another 2,000 miles of driving time.

Designers take center stage at 1977 Auto Show

It may be that the engineers of the nation's automobile corporations and not the well-coiffed models will steal the limelight at the 1977 Auto Show Jan. 15-23 at Cobo Hall.

With a theme of "Design and the Future," the Detroit Auto Dealers Association have turned the spotlight at the often overlooked designers who are responsible for the look as well as the performance of the cars we drive.

Auto Show Committee Chairman Roland Rinke contends that the theme expresses what the automotive industry is today.

"The manufacturers are constantly improving, through design, the vehicles of today and planning for the future, which sets the trend not only here in Detroit but around the world.

"The industry today is alive with new ideas . . . looking into the future not just in years, but in decades," Rinke said.

The theme will be focused in the Design Center, which will offer a behind-the-scenes look at the role of the designer who conceives enginering changes and tranforms ideas from blueprints to clay models to sheet metal.

Actual renderings and clay models will be desplayed. Exterior, interior and engineering design features will be highlighted.

Detroiters who work for auto companies and related industries are familiar with many of the production line aspects of the industry. But Rinke believes that the story of the designer has yet to be told in such a manner.

Chrysler, Ford, American Motors and General Motors will participate in the display.

In addition to the Design Center, the Auto Show will feature a media center, new car auctions, a special lottery game and a Michigan lottery drawing.

And of course, cars, cars and more cars. The 61st Auto Show will feature 250 domestic and foreign autos.

A the media center, visitors will have a chance to meet local radio and TV newspaper personalities. Times of personal appearances will be posted daily.

The new car auction will have the auctioneer saying, "Going once, twice, sold" five times for cars provided by the Detroit Automobile Dealers Association.

"The Automobile State," a special Michigan Lottery game will have been kicked off two weeks prior to the opening of the Auto Show and will continue through the show.

A $10,000 grand prize will be awarded along with other prizes. The automobile lottery is an instant winner, four-dot $1 game.

First tickets will have been sold exclusively at participating new car dealerships in the tri-county area. Although it is an instant lottery game, losing tickets will qualify for the grand prize drawing, which will be on Sunday, Jan. 23, the last day of the show.

Close to $2 million in prizes will be offered in the Michigan Lottery drawing Monday, Jan. 17 at the show. The 10 finalists will compete for $1,893,742, the largest prize ever given for any lottery in the country.

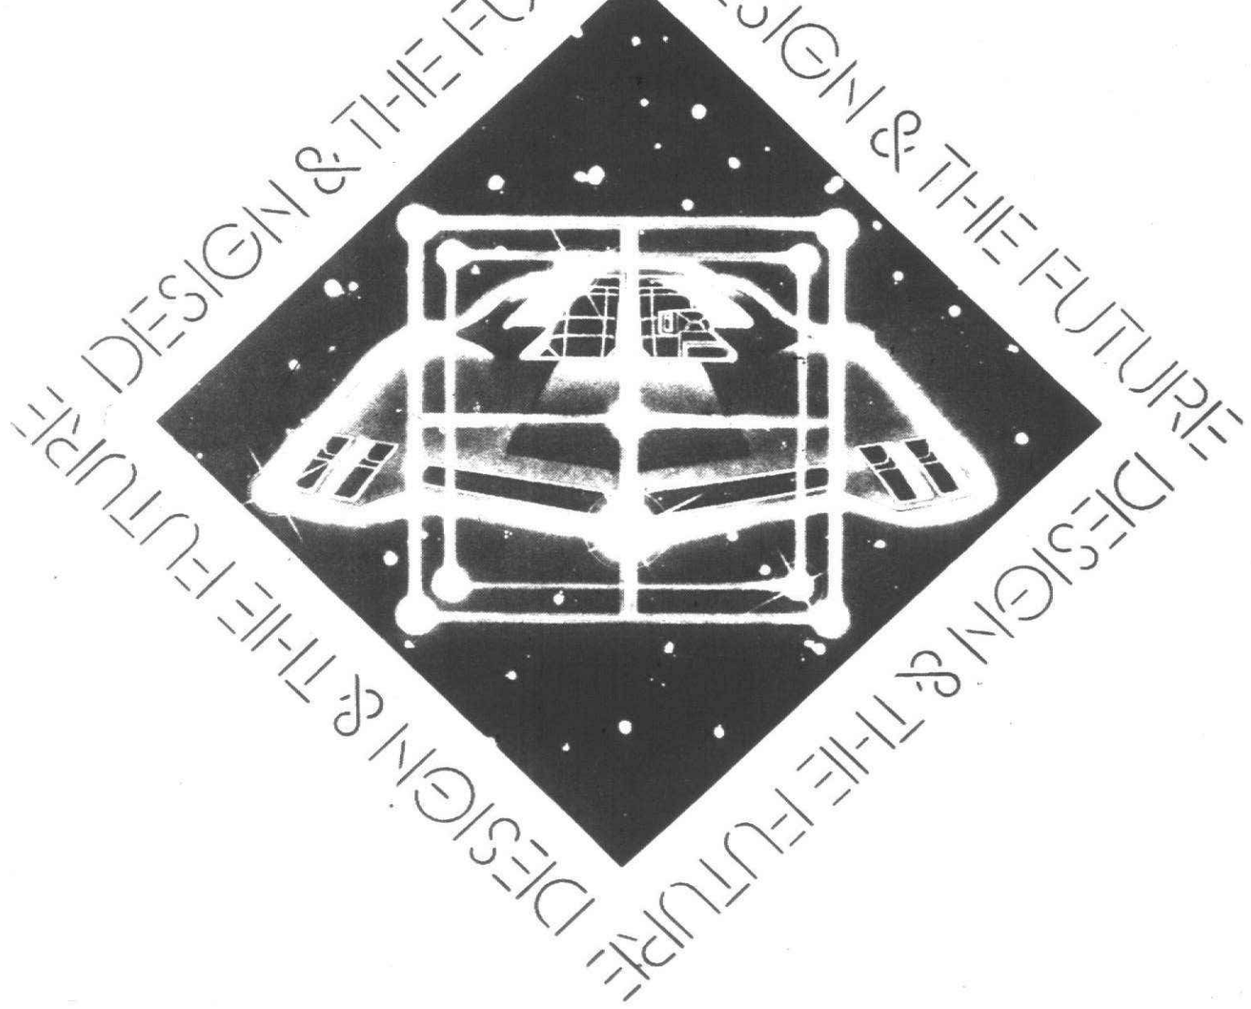

The traditional kick off of the Detroit Auto Show is the charity preview night, Friday, Jan. 14. Proceeds of the $25-per-couple black tie event are earmarked for the Boy's Clubs of Metropolitan Detroit, Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb Counties and the Northeast Guidance Center for Emotionally Disturbed Children.

Close to 400,000 persons are expected to visit the Auto Show this year. Rinke points to an upturn in the economy.

"We have turned the corner from a sluggish economy and consumer skepticism," he said, "and are now embarking upon a most exciting period in automobile history."

Auto companies experiment with lighter, stronger steels

Detroit designers are increasingly interested in a new kind of steel for possible use in door panels, front suspension cross-members and other key automobile parts. The advantage is that it can lower the weight of the finished car, without adding greatly to the cost of making it.

Getting vehicle weight down is a prime interest today among automakers, because lighter cars go further on a gallon of ever-more-expensive gasoline. But aluminum and plastics, the first substitutes tested for standard automotive steel, add to the cost while reducing the weight, especially since they can seldom be fitted into existing assembly line methods of producing vehicles.

Extra-strong steels appeal to Detroit metallurgists, because far thinner parts than are common on today's cars can have equal or greater strength. But the strongest of these special steels, ultra-high-strength steels that can be produced to give yeild strengths as high as 200,000 pounds per square inch, cost from $7.50 to $8.50 more per hundred pounds, according to American Metal Market, the industry newspaper.

That is why the spotlight is currently on "nitrogenized steel," a product with unusually high nitrogen content that gets extra strength from straining during the forming of the parts and then aging during the time a car's paint is being baked. These steels cost only a fraction of a cent a pound more than conventional steel, but still boast a yield strength of about 50,000 pounds per square inch.

Designers hope that this means they will be able to produce parts about 20 per cent thinner than those now in use by switching to nitrogenized metal. With such differences, they say, the arithmetic works out to opt for the new material.

The AMC Gremlin has received a facelift for 1977. New rear-end design includes larger lift window for more convenient loading. Front-end changes include redesigned hood, fenders, grille and bumper.

Weight biggest mileage factor

Many factors enter into the miles per gallon record of any automobile. Not everyone drives in the same manner.

The American Automobile Association, coming up with some cost figures on how much it takes to run your car, says weight is the most important factor in how many miles a car gets per gallon of fuel. For every 100 pounds of weight that is added to your car there is a fuel penalty of one to two per cent, according to AAA. So, it figures that a 2,500-pound car (mini-size) would consume 50 per cent less fuel than a 5,000-pound station wagon.

Auto companies zero in on federal fuel standards

Auto manufacturers may be able to exceed the required 27.5 miles-per-gallon federal fuel economy standard in the latter part of the 1980s, a federal task force reports.

The introduction of light weight, more fuel-efficient automobiles by the automakers also could reduce fuel consumption by up to 1.3 million barrels of oil a day by the 1990s compared to 1975, says the task force, even though auto use is projected to increase by nearly 50 per cent in the time period.

The conclusions are contained in a draft report prepared by the Interagency Task Force on Motor Vehicle Goals Beyond 1980 for the President's Energy Resources Council. The task force was set up in March 1975 to study motor vehicle fuel economy goals after 1980, keeping in mind the need for compatibility with environmental, safety and economic objectives.

Automobiles are the largest single consumer of petroleum, using about 41 per cent of the total U.S. supply—about 5 million barrels a day. The task force consisted of representatives from the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Energy Research and Development Administration, the Federal Energy administration and the National Science Foundation. The task force manager is Hamilton Herman, Assistant Secretary of Transportation for Systems Development and Technology.

Fuel savings cannot be accomplished without the auto industry making substantial investments and taking large market risks, the report says.

It adds that reaching the fuel economy goals may result in lower levels of occupant protection and higher levles of exhaust emission than wanted, as well as reduced automobile carrying capacity, acceleration and trailer-pulling capability than is possessed by today's typical full-size automobile.

The report concludes the problem facing the federal government and the auto industry is how to convince the American public of the need for a change-over to more fuel-efficient motor vehicles and to encourage them to purchase cars which will achieve better fuel economy. "Without public acceptance and purchases , the most fuel-efficient design is useless," the task force said. "The mandated 27.5 miles-per-gallon (mpg) fleet fuel consumption standard in 1985, for example, appears to be technologically feasible, but can only be realized with public cooperation and full understanding of the purpose."

The Energy Policy and Conservation act of 1975 sets a minimum average fuel economy standard an auto manufacturer must reach for his entire passenger car production in a model year. The regulation requires 18.0 mpg for 1978 models and increases to 27.5 mpg for 1985 models.

Among the steps the report said manufacturers would be required to take to reach the 1985 standard is a reduction in automobile acceleration below the current average of zero to 60 miles per hour in 15 seconds. It is possible, the report added, that the consumer will not accept the less powerful cars.

Other required steps outlined by the task force include incentives which would lead to smaller cars taking a larger share of the market than the present 25 per cent, faster development and introduction of upgraded transmissions, and introduction of innovative auto body structures in the early 1980s.

However, manufacturers who build only small cars probably would not have to take any of these steps, the report noted. As a result, the full-time manufacturers, including General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, may be placed at a competitive disadvantage.

The larger auto companies would have to make their smaller cars lighter in weight or, more likely, lower in performance, to raise the mpg level above the 27.5 mpg standard.

Get in tune with your car

When does a car need a tune-up? What's the difference between a minor and a major tune-up? Is it worth the cost?

Few motorists know the answers to these questions, and yet a tune-up is one of the most important preventive maintenance services for your car.

Government and industry studies indicate that more than half of the more than 110 million vehicles on the road need tune-ups. A tuned engine, compared to one that is not, will improve gasoline mileage up to 10 per cent, improve acceleration up to 10 per cent and emit about half as much carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons.

How often should you tune your car?

Most auto makers recommend a tune-up every 12 months or 12,000 miles, at least. The lack of a periodic tune-up can result in fuel waste, excessive exhaust smoke, hard starts, stalling, rough engine performance and eventual repairs that could have been avoided.

If your car needs tune-up service, knowing what to ask for can keep it running smoothly and reduce your maintenance expenses in the long run. Although many reputable garages advertise tune-up specials, it pays to get the answers to a few questions before accepting any offer. For example: ● What specifically is included in the advertised price? If you're getting less than a needed, full tune-up it may not be a bargian after all.

● Does the advertised price apply to your car? A tune-up for a four-or six-cylinder engine will cost less than one for an eight-cylinder engine.

● Is the garage using quality parts? Inferior replacement parts lower the overall repair cost, but you may need your next tune-up sooner than expected.

● Is the garage equipped to do the job? To perform a thorough tune-up, minor or major, a technician requires modern diagnostic equipment. If a garage hasn't invested in the right tools, you may pay less, but you also may have to get the job done a second time.

What does a tune-up involve?

A minor, 12,000-mile tune-up usually includes replacement of the air filter, fuel filter, PCV (Positive Crankcase Ventilation) valve, spark plugs, distributor points and condenser. Spark plug wires, ignition coil and distributor cap and rotor should be inspected and replaced if necessary. Also, expect to pay a labor charge for adjustments to the carburetor, choke and ignition timing if the job is done properly.

Unless your car has a specific engine problem or has passed the 50,000-mile mark, it probably doesn't reuqire major tune-up service. A major tune-up starts with parts and adjustments covered by a minor tune-up In addition, it involves a series of diagnostic checks to test the car's engine compression, battery, alternator, voltage regulator, vacuum system and other ignition components to determine if any additional repairs are needed. The technician will also clean the carburetor and road-teast the vehicle.

Tune-ups are no longer the relatively simple chores they one were. Do-it-yourself mechanics can still replace air cleaners, points and plugs, but because of emisston control devices on late model cars, precision engine adjustments should be made by a trained service technician using proper equipment.

Suddenly it's going to dawn on you.

The Full-sized American Cars of the Future.

Buick's 1977 Riviera, Electra, and LeSabre are fundamenta ly different from the full-sized Buicks of the past. They exhibi a new trimness of line. An efficient use of space, inside and out.

They are more maneuverable in city traffic. And, as you will note in the following discussion, they offer better EPA gas mileage ratings than last year's counterparts.

The neat thing about all this agility and efficiency is that you don't have to give up comfort to get it. In fact, in many meaningful areas, the interiors are roomier.

'77 Buick Riviera.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
5.7 litre (350 CID) V-8 4-bbl. Automatic Transmission. Standard 2.41 Axle Ratio.	22	15

Riviera has always been designed to live in two different worlds.

As a road car, Riviera provides a smooth, quiet ride that's coupled with an ability to be tough in the corners. The standard suspension includes front and rear stabilizer bars. And special shock absorbers.

And as a luxury car, Riviera offers new 50/50 front seating with twin armrests. Rich velour fabrics. New custom wire wheel covers. Power front disc brakes. Power steering. And much more. All standard.

1977 Riviera. A rather special personal luxury car.

'77 Buick Electra.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
5.7 litre (350 CID) V-8 4-bbl. Automatic Transmission. Standard 2.41 Axle Ratio.	22	15

The ultimate Buick. A luxurious automobile with road manners you must experience to appreciate.

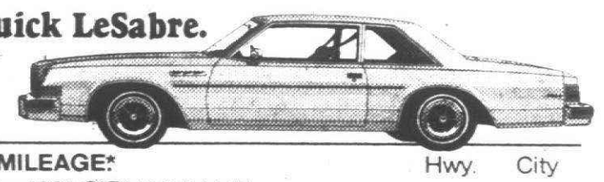

Electra offers you such standard niceties as power windows, a quartz-crystal clock, power front disc brakes, power steering, and automatic transmission.

But this year, there's a slightly different emphasis. A regard for function. A desire to make Electra efficient, as well as fun to drive and elegant.

The result is a car that's surprisingly agile. The standard engine, a 5.7 litre V-8, has 105 fewer cubic inches to feed that last year. And even the styling is trimmer of line.

The 1977 Electra. Luxurious. And more fun than ever.

'77 Buick LeSabre.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
3.8 litre (231 CID) V-6 2-bbl. Automatic Transmission. Standard 2.73 Axle Ratio.	25	18

This is a family car. With more front-seat headroom, more rear legroom, and a bigger trunk than it had last year.

LeSabre in motion is maneuverable, solid, and responsive.

And because it's a Buick, it's well-equipped to indulge you. With plush seating. An intelligently laid out, handsome-looking instrument panel. Power front disc brakes, power steering, and automatic transmission. All standard.

LeSabre. The full-sized family car that's fun to drive.

'77 Buick Century and Regal.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
3.8 litre (231 CID) V-6 2-bbl. Available Automatic Transmission. Standard 2.73 Axle Ratio.	25	18

Century and Regal are mid-sized Buicks. That means that they are more than simply maneuverable and practical.

These mid-sized cars are smooth. And quiet. With standard niceties like front disc brakes. Power steering. Full-Flo ventilation. And a newly modified version of Buick's V-6 engine

The standard equipment gets even more impressive when you get to Regal, the most luxurious mid-sized Buick. It has elegant notchback seating, with a fold-down armrest. A deluxe steering wheel. And lots of insulation to make Regal as quiet as a car this luxurious should be.

1977 Century and Regal. Mid-sized cars, yes. Fun to drive, yes. Efficient, yes. But they are also Buicks. And that makes them special.

'77 Buick Skylark.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
3.8 litre (231 CID) V-6 2-bbl. Available Automatic Transmission. Available Air Conditioning Standard 2.56 Axle Ratio.	27	17

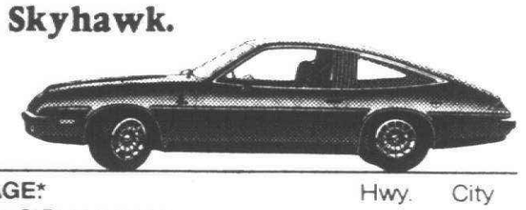

There is a lot more to recommend Skylark than a set of compact dimensions.

On our way to making Skylark manageable and moderately priced, we built in many of the qualities inherent in our larger Buicks. Style. Comfort. Quietness.

In addition to such things as a Buick V-6 and a High-Energy Ignition system, we made sure Skylark had big, cushiony seats. Armrests. Cut-pile carpeting. A deluxe steering wheel. And generous insulation for sound deadening.

The new Skylark. It's going to change a few of your ideas about smaller cars.

'77 Buick Skyhawk.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
3.8 litre (231 CID) V-6 2-bbl. Available 5-speed Manual Transmission. Standard 2.56 Axle Ratio.	34	19

This little Buick is fairly oozing with Free Spirit.

It's remarkably agile, thanks to its nimble wheelbase. Its front and rear stabilizer bars. Its four-wheel coil-spring suspension.

And it's equipped for comfort, with high-backed bucket seats. And for convenience, with a standard hatchback. And for performance, with Buick's newly modified V-6.

But for all its fun and sportiness, Skyhawk remains an eminently practical mode of transportation... as you can see from its EPA mileage figures.

'76 Buick Opel.

EPA MILEAGE*	Hwy.	City
1.8 litre (111 CID) 4-cylinder 2-bbl. 4-speed Manual Transmission. Standard 3.54 Axle Ratio.	36	23

Buick Opel comes equipped with a sophisticated, 4-cylinder overhead-cam hemi-engine. And a floor-mounted, short-throw, 4-speed manual transmission.

Other standard features include all-around tinted glass. Inside hood-lock release. Four-wheel coil-spring suspension. And power front disc brakes.

Yep, this is a well-equipped, gutsy performer. Which becomes all the more interesting when you realize how frugal this car is with a gallon of gas.

BUICK Dedicated to the Free Spirit in just about everyone.

*These figures are estimates. Your mileage may vary according to your driving habits, the condition of your car, and its equipment.
Not available on LeSabre Sport Coupe, Regal Sedan, or Century Custom Wagon.

Is there an electric car in your future?

Will auto shows of the future be displaying cars powered by the conventional, gasoline-burning engines?

It appears that for now, anyway, other sources of energy have not been harnessed sufficiently to allow auto companies to manufacture a viable alternative.

While companies are experimenting with electric cars, they are facing some difficulties not even considered as problems for engineer's designing today's cars.

Tomorrow's driver of an electric vehicle may have to pay greater attention to weather and give up some luxuries such as air conditioning.

But engineers have not given up on the problem and are considering limited use for electric cars.

A small urban electric car would provide viable personal transportation as a second family vehicle, if no substantial oil reserves are discovered and if low-cost synthetic fuels cannot be produced abundantly. That's the contention of Dr. Ming-Chih Yew and Dean E. McCulloch of General Motors' engineering staff, whose report was based on experience with an updated, electrically powered, subcompact two-seater with the same body shell as an experimental electric GM engineering staff vehicle developed in 1968. The earlier electric was one of three subcompacts known as the 512 series which comparatively featured electric, hybrid gasoline-electric and gasoline power systems.

In their modernizing project Yew and McCulloch improved the car's motor and controller efficiency and replaced conventional lead-acid batteries with zinc-nickel oxide units. The battery pack, beneath the car's seat, possessed an energy density two or three times greater than lead-acid units.

The GM engineers admitted that the current price of zinc-nickel oxide power was an estimated 40 times higher than that of lead-acid units, and it had a comparatively short lifetime. But they noted that the suppliers of the zinc-nickel oxide batteries are confident that future technology will lower cost and extend longevity.

They explained that electric vehicle range "depends on the battery energy density, total battery mass, the motor and controller efficiency, ambient temperature, driving cycle and the vehicle road load. For most existing electric vehicles, 20 to 30 percent of gross vehicle mass is allocated to batteries. This seems to be a reasonable ratio when packaging and mass constraints are involved."

A new two-passenger vehicle design was also investigated. For this vehicle, they chose front-wheel drive to allow more room for batteries between the vehicle's rear wheels and to centralize electrical components in the accessible underhood area. "Motor, controller and battery cooling is also facilitated by this arrangemsent," they added. "The rejected heat can be used to warm the passenger compartment. In moderate climates this would be all that is required."

Accessory loading—lights, horn, controller logic power and heater blower (used also to cool the motor and controller)—was designed to be powered separately by a 12-volt battery and a DC-to-AC converter from the main battery pack. Air conditioning was eliminated because it would have increased battery mass by 30 to 35 per cent.

Even with the zinc-nickel oxide power system, Yew and McCulloch concluded, performance and range of electric vehicles "will stil be rather modest in comparison with current internal combustion engine vehicles."

With petroleum as an energy source, used either to provide gasoline for spark ignition engines or to generate electricity for battery charging, a small two-passenger lead-acid battery-powered electric vehicle would consume more energy than a comparable gasoline-engine-powered vehicle.

Exhaust system means more than mufflers

Automobile mechanics are learning to put high priority on checking out the condition of a car's exhaust system in their search for the cause of a variety of mechanical functions.

The U.S. Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) says it has received a number of owner reports which cite defective exhaust systems as the cause of seemingly unrelated mechanical problems.

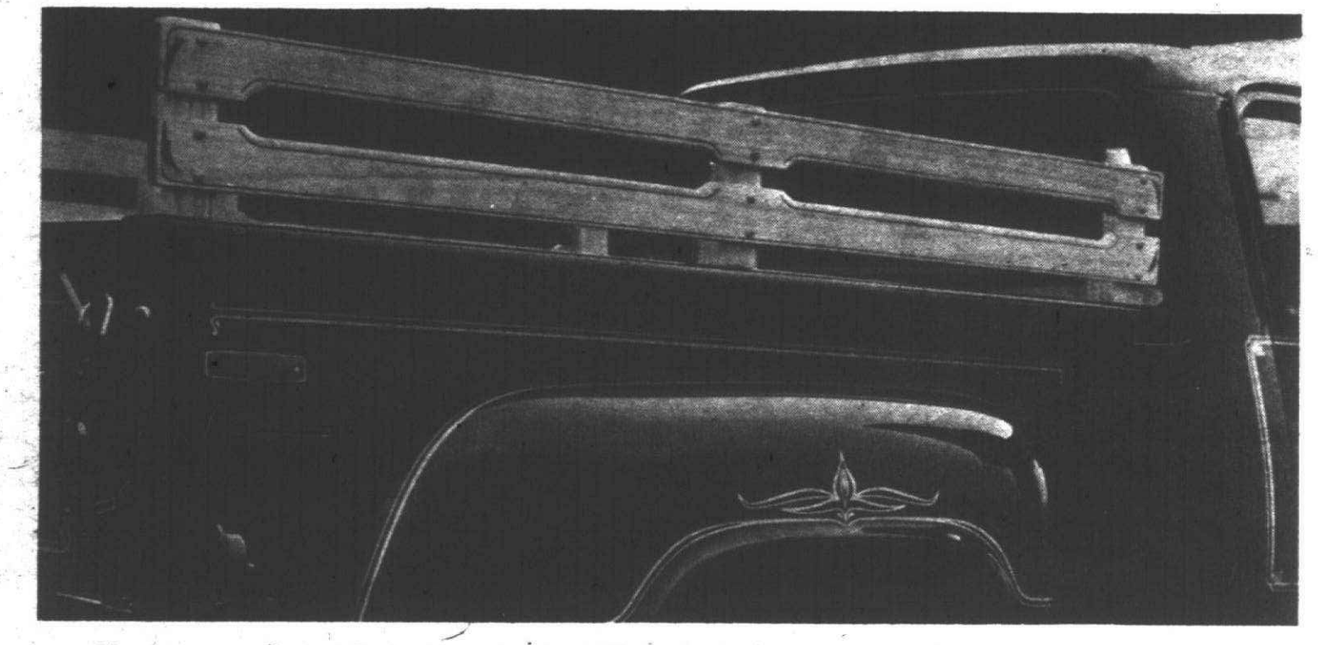

NHTSA cited the case of an owner who suffered repeated failues of his taillight equipment, each time experiencing electrical system failures or dangerous night-driving blackouts.

After costly repairs and several dangerous incidents on the highway, it was discovered that a defective tailpipe allowed hot exhaust gases to melt away electrical insulation and plastic portions of the taillight assembly.

In another case, NHTSA reports that an owner became alarmed at the strong odor of gasoline given off during an extended trip. The motorist discovered a stream of pressurized gasoline being vented from his fuel tank and, when the filler cap was removed, a large amount of fuel was blown out of the filler neck.

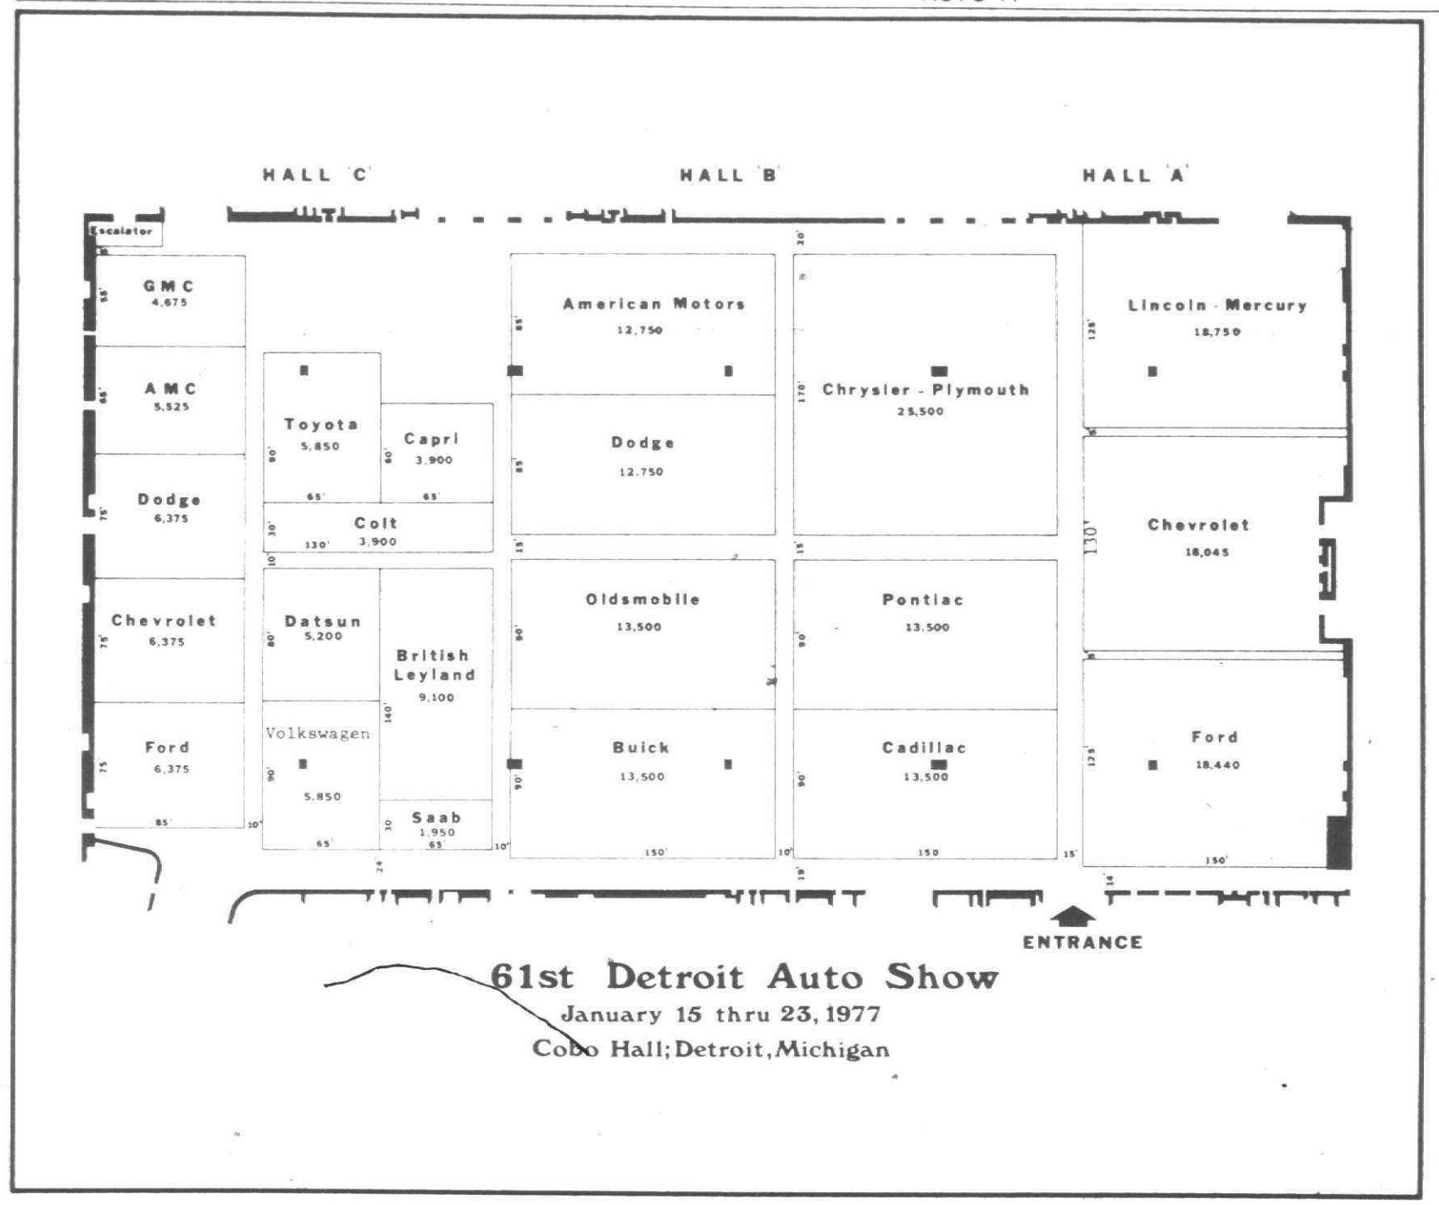

At fault was a broken tailpipe section which allowed hot gases to heat the fuel tank. The expansion which resulted caused a continual leakage of fuel, forced from the tank under pressure.

NHTSA warns that any opening in the vehicle underbody, firewall or body seals, together with any exhaust system fault allowing fumes to accumulate under the vehicle, may be a lethal combination.

It's not a woodie but Dodge's customized Warlock pickup truck does feature real oak sideboards. The oak gets a finish of clear urethane lacquer for protection while still letting the natural beauty of the wood show. Oak buttons cover screw heads to give the sideboards an all-oak exterior.

Big cars to make big news in 1977?

The popularity of small models of automobiles will continue to wane over the next year, an advertising agency executive recently told a New York City marketing conference.

"Consumers forgetful of the oil crunch are opting for larger cars, and are less concerned with gas consumption, which has major implications," Philip Levine told the three-day meeting of the Conference Board. Levine is senior vice president and top research man at Ogilvy and Mather.

Levine's predictions were based on his agency's poll of shoppers' habits, called the Listening Post, which conducts telephone interviews around the country every three weeks. The researchers report that, in general, consumers are more optimistic than they were six months ago, but that they still are interested in do-it-yourself items which can save money over having repairmen do the work.

1977's a year of change for U.S. auto companies

Visitors to the 1977 Detroit Auto show may find changes from past years more the result of government influence than consumer preference.

Part of the reason can be attributed to federal regulations calling for cars to average 20 miles per gallon in 1980 and 27.5 mpg in 1985.

But visitors will also find the auto industry in various stages of transition which may provide the clearest choice of products in 50 years, according to one auto executive.

The fuel economy standards are forcing manufacturers to overhaul many of their model lines, according to Motor News, the official publication of the Automobile Club of Michigan. Manufacturers must achieve the same government-imposed objectives, but they are taking different routes to get there.

Even before the Arab oil embargo, General Motors anticipated a steady increase in gasoline scarcity and price. Because lead time for planning new models is still long in the auto industry, GM committed enormous resources in 1973 to make 1977 the year of its greatest single model change ever—shrinking cars to the size they were 15 years ago.

The process became public in 1975 when GM brought out its luxury compact Cadillac Seville and announced plans to downsize its other models through 1980, spending $15 billion to do it.

Ford and Chrysler could not raise the cash to follow, had they wanted to, according to Motor News.

"Our resources are not unlimited, and we cannot compete in every market," Henry Ford II was quoted as saying.

Ford, GM's chief competitor, believes that there is still a big market for the standard-sized LTD, Mercury Marquis and Lincoln and Continental models.

"We believe big car buyers want a long wheelbase, good ride, comfortable interior and won't be disturbed by a mile or two less per gallon to get it," Ford President Lee Iacocca said.

However, to test the downsize market, Ford introduced the compact-sized Granada and Monarch models in 1975 and will downsize other models though 1980, at a cost of $10 billion.

For 1977, Ford dropped its 460-cubic inch V-8. All Fords for the new model year share two engineering advances: a secondgeneration electronic ignition system which provides higher spark plug voltage during starting and running cycles and larger and more efficient catalytic converters.

Body size on Chrysler and American Motors cars remains mostly the same, but engine size has been cut, according to Motor News. Chrysler is touting a new "lean burn" engine offering improved mileage.

GM has captured most of the headlines this year, thanks to the downscaling of its models. It has cut up to a foot in length, up to 900 pounds in weight and some width while boosting fuel economy to as much as 25 mpg for some full-size Buicks.

GM cars which have gotten the Vic Tanny treatment are Buick Electra and Le Sabre, Cadillac DeVille and Fleetwood, Chevrolet Impala and Caprice, Oldsmobile 88 and 98 and Pontiac Bonneville and Catalina.

Ford, while not undertaking nearly as massive redesiging as General Motors has some new sizes to offer its customers.

Ford spent $125 million on the new Continental Mark V. Thunderbird and Mercury Cougar were redesigned for a 114-

WHY PEOPLE WHO OWN A BMW ENJOY DRIVING MORE THAN YOU DO.

If there is one thing all BMW owners have in common, it is the unabashed enthusiasm each has for his car. An enthusiasm that, contrary to expectations, does not diminish as the years and miles roll by.

What causes this rare relationship between man and machine is the caliber of the machine. Rather than a mere collection of gears, axles and random parts, a BMW is a finely tuned, evolutionary car. One so singularly enjoyable to drive that, in Germany, a land of legendary driving machines, BMW sells more high-performance cars than any other manufacturer.

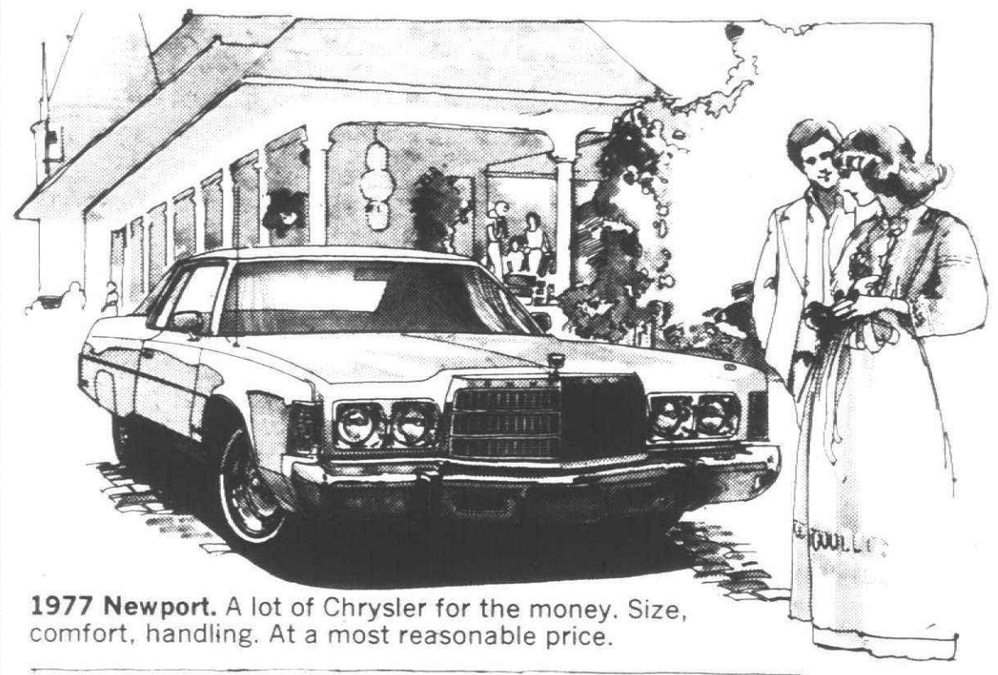

A surprising fact? Only to those who have never driven a BMW.

If you are tired of owning conventional, boring transportation, call us and we'll arrange a thorough test drive of a BMW.

Pontiac's 1977 Bonnevilles and Catalinas provide more than an extra cubic foot of luggage capacity than the comparable 1976 models. Even though these family-size cars weigh less than 700 pounds and are a foot shorter than their 1976 counterparts, most of the important interior dimensions, like head room and leg room, are slightly increased.

Oldies but goodies?

Just how good were those good old days of motor travel?

The recollections of many old timers on how many miles to the gallon the Chalmers or the Chandler or the Jordan delivered are a lot rosier than the reality of those yesteryears.

Leslie R. Henry, curator of the transportation collection at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village has driven several of those finely-tuned museum pieces and the facts just don't support those early claims.

His report: A 1911 Chalmers, 1920 Pierce-Arrow and 1922 Lincoln V-8 each registered 10 miles to the gallon. The 1916 Packard Twin Six scored only eight mpg and the high-powered Stutz Bearcat ran 13 miles.

Most of those cars were heavy and powerful," Henry said, "but there are heavier and more-powerful cars today that do a lot better on fuel economy and certainly provide far more performance."

Henry, who is just old enough to remember when some of those cars were around, says vehicles took on weight in the early '20s and probably forced mileage down to an average of about 10 mpg.

"With the introduction of tetraethyl lead around 1925, mileage took a decided turn for the better," Henry reports. "The chemical made it possible to raise compression ratios and that meant more efficient engines."

With the advent of automatic transmissions after World War II on nearly all U.S.-built cars, fuel economy declined. The rise of the so-called muscle cars of the '60s also pushed the average down. Finally, emission controls to meet clean air requirements took their fuel toll.

Gasoline mileage in cars of the near future will be better than today, partly because they will give up some weight. Henry points out: "You can get almost anything you want if you are willing to make sacrifices— like driving smaller cars or giving up extra equipment."

While Chrysler has not decreased any of its model sizes appreciably, the company offers a number of changes under the hood.

The third-place auto firm has added its electronic spark advance system to the 360 and 440-inch V-8's and inproved the performance of its 225-inch in-line six with a two-barrel carburetor.

Chrysler has also installed its lean burn engine system on four V-8 engine families for 1977. It is available on 11 models, and promises better fuel economy, acceleration and response. Plymouth Volare has a "super six" engine which is claimed to be 20 per cent more efficient that its 381 cubic inch V-8 offered in '76.

The new look for AMC is its Pacer station wagon, which is four inches longer than the sedan and is 75 pounds heavier and holds twice as much cargo.

Aside from the Pacer wagon, AMC's biggest news is in its warranty. Buyer Protection Plan No. 2 extends the warranty coverage on the engine and drive train to two years or 24,000 miles. It also offers free or replacement repair of any defective part except tires for 12 months or 14,000 miles.

AMC will also provide free loaner cars if guaranteed repairs cannot be completed the same day.

In additon to the foreign cars on display, the 1977 Auto show will probably offer the most varied selection of any show in recent years.

Is it time to buy?

You've owned your car almost three years and it's practically paid for. Now you are debating whether to trade it in for a new one or hold on to it for a while longer.

If you have been maintaining your car regularly, chances are there is still lots of life left in it. However, if your maintenance has been hit or miss, then you should give your vehicle a bumper-to-bumper and roof-to-tire-tread physical at your favorite service outlet.

Use the following checklist to determine the condition of your car. If you decide to hang on to it, make certain these items are in good condition to assure yourself of continued worry-free, safe performance.

Check:

- Battery and cable.
- Condition of tires, both tread and sidewalls.
- Transmission linkage.
- Condition of brakes.
- Condition of shock absorbers.
- Exhaust system.
- Cooling system, including radiator hoses, cap and thermostat.
- Belts.
- Wiper arms and blades.

In addition, make sure these routine maintenance services have been performed recently:

Also, if there are nicks and bumps in the car, have them repaired.

It takes a thief

The vehicle identification number, now discreetly tucked away on the inside of a car's front door post or on the dashboard, may in a few years be moved to the outside in a prominent location.

So says Richard L. Thornberg, the assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division at the U.S. Dept. of Justice and co-chairman of a government-wide task force trying to cut down on automobile theft. His group is studying the outside number idea.

Moulding the number into the actual body of a car would make it a lot harder to alter or obliterate, advocates of the change believe, and so would discourage the fences who now encourage close to one-third of all car stealing.

"Also, we undertand that it is feasible to develop and deploy high speed computer scanners on public highways," Thornberg says. "These scanners could be so positioned as to record the VIN's of passing vehicles and query such VIN's in the stolen vehicle computerized files of law enforcement agencies."

GREAT PERFORMERS.

Save the Dodge Exhibit for last at the Auto Show. And save plenty of time to see it. Because the '77 Dodge show is a collection of the greatest showstoppers we've ever come up with. Cars that can sit next to anything on the market and still look terrific. Trucks that are great-looking and great to drive. So maybe you'd better see the rest of the Auto Show before you see us. These beautiful Dodge cars and trucks are a mighty tough act to follow.

Costlier, but better bumpers to debut in 1977

Under prodding from Washington, bumpers on all cars sold in the U.S. have done an increasingly better job of protecting the vehicles to which they are attached. Now, the federal bureaucrats are demanding that the bumpers themselves come out of low-speed collisions in better shape.

After September 1979, the introduction time for the 1980 models, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says that bumper face bars may not suffer dents of more than three-eights of an inch when run into a barrier at five miles an hour, or into a corner at three miles an hour. The same rule says the bumper face bar may not be flattened by more than three-quarters of an inch.

The current trend toward more protective bumpers began with 1966 Congressional action, telling NHTSA to set standards (now covering all cars sold in the country) for bumpers to protect safety equipment during low-speed accidents.

The next big step will come with the introduction of the 1979 cars, when the bumpers will have to protect the entire car from damage during five mph bangs. Actually, many cars now on the road already meet that standard, and officials expect more to get a jump on the deadline, since that is the only way for carmakers to qualify bumper systems made of soft materials.

Opponents of the tougher standards say that they end up costing drivers money, because they lead to heavier bumpers, which in turn reduce fuel economy. But advocates argue that bumper replacement costs now are often in the $300 to 500 range, and that the federal requirement that bumpers be strong enough to pick up only minor nicks in minor accidents will many times make such replacements unnecessary.
