45-15?

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education is to decide Monday on a year-round schedule for the coming school year. But it won't be the 45-15 type schedule used the past two years at Miller Elementary in Canton. The options have now grown from two to four, with agreement with the union still needed. Story on Page 3A.

Clobbered & chewed

The Chiefs chewed Romulus, 8-5, while the Rocks clobbered the Panthers, 19-3. A good week for prep baseball which is reported in detail on Page 1C.

Heritage

The Plymouth branch of the American Association of University presented landmark bronze plaques to owners of historic homes in the Plymouth community.

Recipients this year were the Miller Cassady and JoAnne Hulce homes. The presentations are made annually on Heritage Day to help observe Michigan Week. See coverage on Page 1B.

21 farm animals killed by pack of vicious dogs

By CRAIG PIECHURA

The brutal slaughter of 21 animals at a children's petting farm in Canton was originally feared to be the work of at least one deranged human being.

But upon examining two of the animal corpses, Ray Sowder, manager of the Westland branch of the Michigan Humane Society, has identified it as the work of a pack of dogs.

James Fraser, owner of the Real Life Camp and Farm, 48700 Geddes, said that while he's now convinced that animals did the killing, he still believes "a human element" was involved in at least some of the strange occurrences happening at his farm in a year's time.

Within the past eight months, Fraser says, his farm has been victimized four times.

About two weeks ago, Fraser says, a 350 lb. pig disappeared from the farm and close to 20 birds—including peacocks, gold pheasants and rare ducks—were killed. In February, Fraser's son Don says all the animals staying in the barn over the winter died, with the exception of a llama.

Last October a 16-foot wide oak gate at the farm was unhinged and stolen.

But nothing prepared the Fraser family for the carnage witnessed when they drove to the farm Tuesday morning from their Dearborn Heights home.

"I couldn't believe it could be so hideous," said Don Fraser, 21, the second person on the scene. A caretaker, Larry King, made the discovery about 10 a.m. Tuesday.

"THE SLASHES on the animals looked like somebody had used a double-edged knife," said Don Fraser. "It didn't look like bite marks. It looked like somebody had taken an axe to split the animals open; that's how bad the gashes were."

Found dead were four three-month-old weaning piglets; one baby lamb; two geese; five Muscovy ducks; one giant white turkey; five rabbits and three kittnes. One black rabbit apparently escaped the terror by hiding. Two ducks were unharmed because their pen remained intact.

Two goat kids avoided the slaughter because they were taken to Fraser's Dearborn Heights home Monday night to be weaned.

Wayne County Sheriff officers responding to the call summoned the crime lab, the helicopter crew and Michigan Humane Society officers. Preliminary investigation by both agencies links animals, not humans, directly to the killings.

James Fraser said he saw a pack of dogs attack animals on his farm recently.

"About two weeks ago we saw a dog pack kill some chickens right in front of our eyes. None of us had a gun at the time, so there wasn't much we could do. They looked like mostly

Rotary begins with a flourish

Don't tell anybody, but the new Canton Rotary didn't actually receive its charter from the Rotary International Monday night.

Sure, Monday night was charter night for the chapter and its founding 23 members. Everything went beautifully except there was no official charter on hand.

Rotary Gov. Roy Lancaster of Windsor, Ont. was at the podium, ready to formally present the charter to Canton Rotary President John Schwartz, when people whispered to him that the charter plaque wasn't there.

But the minor embarrassment didn't dampen the festivities one bit. International Rotary Club spokesmen assured Canton that they were officially instituted May 4 and that the plaque is on its way in the mail.

AFTER MORE THAN two years of planning, plus support and sponsorship from the Plymouth Rotary chapter, Schwartz said, Canton now has its own club for business and professional men who seek fellowship and community service.

"As a new and diverse community, Canton needs a lot of community spirit," Schwartz said. "We'd like to let people know they live and work in Canton—period."

The Rotary Club selects what it considers to be "important" people with "good business or professional reputation" to join the service club. Normally only one person in a specific job classification is permitted to join the local Rotary chapter. However, there is no limit to the number of ministers or journalists eligible.

"To use an example, we have admitted Mike Bowler of Meijer's Thrifty Acres—he represents the department store manager classification," explained Schwartz. "That classifi cation is now filled.

"We have Roy Schultz, who is a farmer; classified specifically as a truck farmer. Another farmer, Russ Palmer, represents the sweet corn business here. And we could add a dairy farmer to our membership because that's still another classification.

"We could take more than one attorney in if one specializes as a tax attorney and another is a trial attorney."

Members do not ask the Rotary if they can join; the club's recommendation committee surveys open classifications and searches for able businessmen to fill those openings.

Bill Teser of Wayne Bank explained his reason for joining the Canton Rotary:

"The exchange of information and ideas is invaluable. After the hour-and-a-half weekly meeting you put everyone's experience to use in your own life."

Bill Brown, who owns an automobile repair shop, said the Canton Rotary has already helped a person in the township who has a crippling back injury. More humanitarian services are planned, Brown said.

The Canton Rotary meets every Monday from noon to 1:30 p.m. at the Roman Forum restaurant.

Charter members of the club are Gerald Betz, plastic vacuforming; George Merchant, general machining; William Tesen, banking; John Schwartz, flower distribution; Bill Brown, automobile repair service; Mike Bowler, department store; Gordon Wrenbeck, bicycle retailing; Richard Potter, general insurance; James Guiles, fireplace supplies; Ralph Brenecke, Jr., savings and loan; Ronald Sanderson, pet store; James Najarian, telephone company; and Henry Salla, general accounting service.

BART BERG holds the classification "senior active member"; Roger Haslick, attorney; Al Daly, plastic injection molding; Norman Frick, real estate agency; Edward Good, landscaping service; Roland Leist, screw machine precision; Russ Palmer, sweet corn; George Khashin, jewelry retailing; Rickey Nadeau, TV repair; and Roy Schultz, truck farm.

Student censorship lifted

By GLENN BUNTING

The same person who censored an anti-pornography student editorial at Plymouth Canton High two months ago, was instrumental in getting that decision overturned by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education on Monday night.

Kent Buikema, principal at Canton High who issued the restraint order because of the editorial's sexually explicit language, supplied board members with the advice they earlier had requested in order to make a decision.

The board then agreed to reverse Buikema's decision in a 4-2 straw vote. Voting in favor of publishing the article were E.J. McClendon, Marcia Borowski, George Lawton and Thomas Yack. Those against were Joseph Gray and Flossie Tonda.

Treasurer Richard Arlen was absent from the board workshop, but told Buikema earlier in the day that he supported the decision to censor.

The board appeared confused over how to treat the censorship issue. Gray said no official action could be taken during a workshop and that a decision would have to wait until the next board meeting.

SUPT. JOHN M. HOBEN said, however, that the matter could be interpreted as an administrative decision. Thus, if the board was willing, it could make an informal decision in workshop and Hoben would act accordingly.

But Yack raised some legal questions which he felt remained unanswered and asked the board to gather legal advice and return with a decision in one week.

Buikema then stepped in and informed the board that, legally, the students stood on firm ground, and his decision was made on a moral judgement, not a legal one. "On a strict legal opinion, the board has no choice but to let the students print the article," the principal said.

Based on Buikema's statement, the board reached its consensus and Hoben announced that the students would be permitted to publish the editorial. New Media editor Chris Morin said the article will appear in the school's final edition next month.

For the students, the board's decision marked the successful end of a two-month struggle to reverse the prior restraint order. Morin said his staff was concerned with the implications a decision to uphold the censorship would have had on future student reporters. Buikema objected to printing the word "masturbation" in a paper read by ninth through 12 th graders.

"Avoiding a precedent of prior restraint is as important to us as getting the article printed," the editor said prior to Monday night's meeting.

Poole continuing election recount fight

By DARLENE STINSON

Former Township Trustee Jim Poole has not given up hopes for a recount of last November's election ballots.

The incumbent Republican, who lost his seat to Eugene Daley by only 11 votes, says his attorney is still working on an appeal of a circuit court ruling that denied his request for a recount of the absentee ballot precinct.

Although the appeal was filed months ago in Michigan Appellate Court, Poole says his attorney needs transcripts from the January trial in Wayne Circuit Judge Joseph B. Sullivan's courtroom to file his brief arguing for the appeal.

Sullivan denied Poole's recount bid at that time, saying that election worker error made a retabulation of the vote impossible.

Peter Bundarin, unsuccessul Republican candidate for the supervisor's seat, is representing Poole in the case. According to Poole, Bundarin requested the transcripts months ago but still has not received them.

UNLESS THE TRANSCRIPTS are received soon, Poole says Bundarin will file his brief without them.

"They could keep those transcripts from us for the next four years," the former trustee said.

Poole could take over the remainder of Dailey's four-year term in office, if Sullivan's decision is overturned and Poole picks up 12 more votes in a recount of the absentee ballots.

But Poole says he is seking an appeal of Sullivan's decision only "as a matter of principle."

"I'm not doing this to win the election," he said. "I don't care to beat Gene Daley. I'm doing this strictly because I think it's immoral and wrong not to recount the absentee precinct. It's depriving everyone who voted in that precinct the right of knowing whether their votes were counted correctly or incorrectly."

Sullivan upheld a decision of the Wayne County Board of Canvassers against recounting the absentee ballot precinct last January, because the number of voters on the poll book was 15 more than the number of absentee ballots.

The numbers did not match, Bundarin argued at the time, because 15 absentee precinct pollworkers voted their personal choices on the same machines used to tally absentee ballots. The pollworkers did not fill out paper ballots before recording their own votes on the machine.

Members of the Wayne County Board of Canvassers explained that only paper ballots are counted in a recount of an absentee ballot precinct.

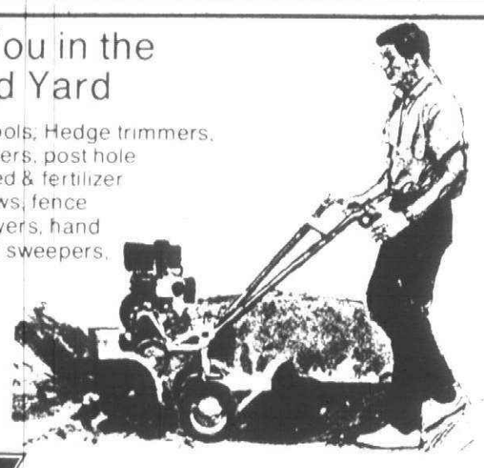

Bundarin suggested ways of recounting the precinct—which included asking pollworkers to re-vote—but was turned down by Sullivan.

POOLE DIDN'T pick up any votes in the recount of machine ballots in unaffected precincts 1-9. But the de-

Middle school sports debated

The decision on whether the schools will maintain or pass on its seventh grade basketball and football programs to the Plymouth-Canton Junior Athletic Association (PCJAA) will be made at this Monday's regular school board meeting.

A workshop to discus this issue was held last Monday evening after the public hearing on the 45-15 calender.

West Middle School principal Bob Smith told the school board that the middle school athletic programs were "an integral part" of learning at that age level.

"Our program gives our coaches new-found relationships with boys and girls," Smith said. "It allows for a different kind of relationship with teachers outside of academics.

"Our program has some meaning to us. It's not just a place to win or lose."

Smith represented the Middle School Liason Committee who unanimously decided to keep its seventh grade activities after listening to the junior athletic proposal.

PCJAA president Jim Sinclair offered to take over the seventh grade activities because of greater player and parent participation and a dollar savings on the athletic budget.

Junior football representative Mason Ludlow believed there has been a taxpayer overlap with the two programs continuing at the same time. Ludlow, along with other PCJAA members, felt this duplication of programs wasted money in the athletic budget that could be reallocated elsewhere.

Athletic Director John Sandmann stated that about $8,500-$9,000 would be saved if these middle school programs were discontinued.

"I think the duplication of programs is good," said board member Tom Yack. "It gives kids the option where they want to go."

Yack questioned why both programs couldn't exist since each serviced different kids.

Board President Joe Gray said the PCJAA wasn't trying to steal anything from the schools.

"There is no big battle here," Gray said. "The intent of both parties is for the good of the kids.

"There is no harm on anyone. We want to give more participation and activity to the kids—and to save some money."

Prof. says public must forget idea that land is commodity

Canton's land use and growth management study committees received indirect praise from a planning expert at a national land use symposium at the University of Michigan this week.

Lynton K. Caldwell, professor of public and environmental affairs and professor of political science at the University of Indiana, said using citizen groups is the only way to formulate a good comprehensive land use plan.

Caldwell, who has written six books on land use and holds graduate degrees from Harvard University, said the public must overcome the traditional view that land is a mere commodity that offers economic profit.

CALDWELL'S COMMENTS on the need for citizen participation in the planning process was only a small part of the two-day symposium at U-M sponsored by the Citizens Council for Land Use Research and Education.

Canton Trustee Lynne Goldsmith represented the township at the national conference.

Like other speakers at the symposium, Caldwell believes "bad" planning inevitably creates environmental problems for a community.

Buildings placed in the wrong location or too close together degrade the quality of land, air and water. Piecemeal planning often disregards the social need of community residents and create subsequent social problems.

Caldwell believes planners should consider social needs as well as the long-term environmental impact of a land use plan.

But to do that, planners must first educate the public on the needs for a comprehensive land use plan and involve citizens in the planning process. They must overcome what Caldwell calls the "intense emotional hostility to almost any land use control measure."

Caldwell explained that the American view of "property rights" and the age-old Western belief that political power, social status and ecomomic rights stem from land ownership.

Most bad planning, he maintains, stems from the economic interests of individual landowners and speculators who disregard the long-term impact of a specific plan.

"Management of land in our society is vested in large numbers of proprietors whose preferred uses may be inconsistent with the preservation of the land or the welfare of society," he said.

"It should not be surprising, therefore, that broadly-based land use policies that are not consistent with mutually advantageous relationships among landlords are likely to encounter resistance."

ACCORDING TO CALDWELL, planners must prevent land abuse by placing some restraints upon landowners.

To accomplish that, citizens must become involved in the planning process and realize the need for comprehensive planning.

Caldwell's comments came one week after Canton's land use and growth management study committees submitted recommendations on the feasiblity of retaining farmland and the need to curb the township's mushrooming growth.

The land use seminar was attended by Canton Trustee Lynne Goldsmith (center) and Plymouth Township Trustee Lee Fidge (right). Both officials have expressed a desire to curb rapid development in their respective communities. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Parents, teachers protest proposed 45-15 schedule

After several months of committee work and meetings, the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education still has a long way to go before it arrives at a satisfactory extended-school-year (ESY) calendar.

Although at least four attendance schedules have been proposed, none of them meet all the needs of everyone involved.

At a public hearing Monday, board members took flack from teachers and parents. One angry Miller School mother proclaimed that the hearing was a farce and that the board would do as it wanted, no matter what anyone said.

In response to the criticisms, school board president Joe Gray said, "We have to have a calendar by a certain date, or we can't get started for this year."

He also pointed out that calendar is a negotiable item and the board cannot choose one unilaterally. The Plymouth Education Association (PEA) has to agree to the final choice.

And while PEA members have indicated their preference in calendar schedule, no formal negotiations have taken place.

THE BOARD, HOWEVER, is under a very limited time constraint. It has until May 23 to furnish Ecotran, a private commuter firm, with definite information. The company will then computerize the data to work out bus routes and track sizes for the buildings which will adopt the new schedule.

By opening the issue to public debate, though, the trustees apparently increased the obstacles to meeting the deadline.

the board scheduled Monday's public hearing to get citizen comments on two calendar proposals which were recommended by the district-wide calendar committee.

When the hearing opened, however, there were three calendars presented for consideration, and public outcry forced the administration to add a fourth.

During the last week, the "B" calendar, which had been recommended by the calendar committee, had been "unofficially" rejected by the PEA.

When the audience learned of the rejection, one parent wanted to know how the public could give input if the calendar wasn't there.

"That's very difficult to answer," responded Trustee Marcia Borowski. "I'm not sure. I'm just here to listen to comments."

Candi Reece, PEA president, took the floor and said that the union had asked its members what they most wanted to see in any proposal and the "B" schedule was the least satisfactory.

One teacher, however, immediately took issue with Reece's explanation. "Seventeen teachers at Isbister preferres 'B.' We were in no way consulted." She added that with the proposals before it, the board was no longer talking about 45-15 but some other ratio.

Under the pilot year-round program currently in use at Miller Elementary, students in four different tracks attend class for 45 days and then have a 15-day break.

School Supt. John Hoben has long maintained the Miller calendar would not work when the other buildings adopted an ESY program.

Of the four calendars under consideration, two are year-round schedules, and two are ESY schedules, beginning in August and ending in June.

Negotiators for both the board and PEA are slated to meet this week to chose one, which will be submitted to the board for ratification May 23.

Recall committee needs 31 additional signatures

The committee formed to recall Canton Supervisor Harold Stein needs only 31 more signatures on petitions to force a recall election in Canton Township.

Cindy Monks and Peter Gabbert, leaders of the recall movement, said that additional petitions will probably be turned in to Canton Clerk John Flodin on Friday. The group, which is seeking to recall Stein on grounds that he is "unresponsive" to the problems of rapid suburban growth, believes that it will reach its goal by the end of the week.

Three separate batches of petitions have been submitted to the clerk, who checked the signatures against the local voter roll to verify validity.

A total of 1,251 signatures of registered Canton voters are necessary to force a recall election of any Canton official. Clerk Flodin's staff has determined that 1,220 signatures on the 95 petitions already submitted are valid.

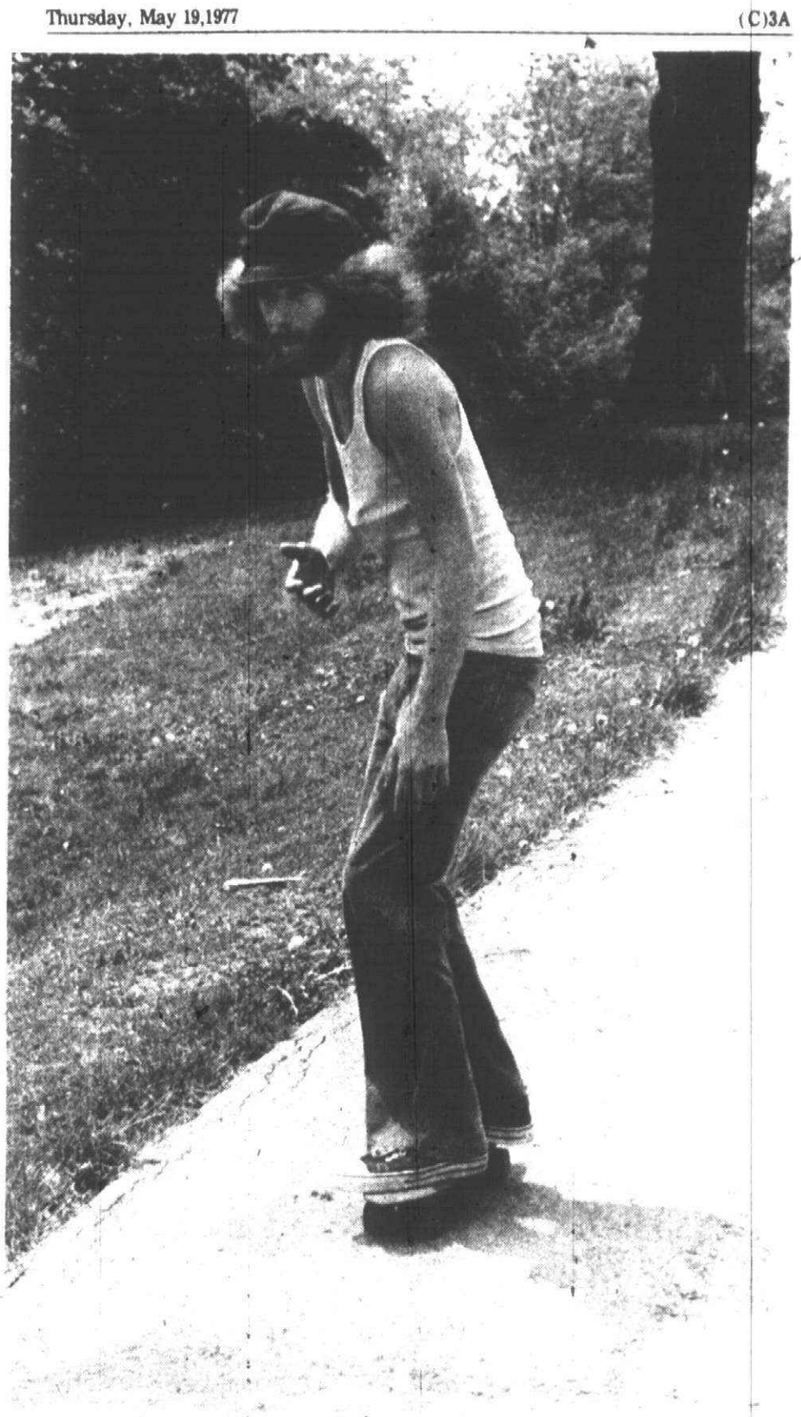

In a related recal incident, Mrs. Monks, co-chairwoman of the recall drive, signed an assault and battery complaint against Leonard Wasczenski, claiming that he knocked her to the ground outside the Rusty Nail bar after ripping some of the recall petitions.

Williams to speak

Michigan Supreme Court Justice G. Mennen Williams will be in town tomorrow (Friday) to speak to students of the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park.

The former governor, now state justice, accepted an invitation to lecture on the executive process to senior government students of Audrey Etienne, government teacher at Plymouth Canton High.

After the acceptance, Ms. Etienne decided to open up the class to all students at the CEP. Williams will speak to the students from 10:20 to 11:20 a.m. in the cafetorium of Plymouth Canton High.

Ralls speaks to the POAM

William P. Ralls, member of the Michigan Public Service Commission, is guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Police Officers Association of Michigan (POAM) May 19 at the Raleigh House in Southfield.

Ralls, serving his sixth year on the commission, has announced his intention to seek the Democratic nomination for governor. Ralls says he will resign from the commission at the end of June.

The POAM announced at the beginning of this year that it was expanding from a fraternal police organization to a "full-service union." The association presently represents 22 law enforcement units in Michigan and has petitioned the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) for union representation elections in five more departments.

Julie Thoman laughs as she shows the safe thieves broke into. It has been used for a dozen years, she notes, and only contains some old blueprints. (Staff photo)

Thieves strike at Wayside shop

Thieves smashed through a wall of the Wayside shop Tuesday, but they only got $22 in rolled coins for their trouble.

"We never keep any large amounts of money around the place overnight," said owner Julie Thoman, "just the leftover change."

The burglars gained entrance to the mall on the corner of Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail from the rooftop, police said. They broke through the Wayside's west wall, making a jagged opening about 10 feet above floor level.

Once inside, Mrs. Thoman said, the intruders ripped through the file cabinet in her office and took $22 in quarters, dimes, and nickels from the store cash register.

"Whoever it was also broke into our old safe down in the basement," she laughed. "And that's hillarious because we haven't used the thing for 12 years.

"The only thing in it was the blueprint for this building, and they left it behind."

BY 10 A.M. the police had been notified of the theft, and the broken pieces of the wall had been cleaned up. Even though the burglars had to jump down past several shelves of delicate crystal and glassware, nothing was broken.

In fact, Mrs. Thoman said, aside from having the papers in her filing cabinet strewn ankle-deep on the floor, nothing else in the store was out of place.

"At least they were neat about it," she remarked. "I think it was done by kids. All they wanted was ready cash."

Plymouth Police Det. Robert Commire, who is investigating the robbery, agreed with Mrs. Thoman on the age of the theives. "It wasn't that professional a job. I am assuming it was done by young kids."

He said there are no suspects in the case.

After investigators were convinced that the farm animals were killed by dogs, not people, Don Fraser and family began the unpleasant task of burying the dead.(Staff photo by Bob Woodring)

Animals attacked

German shepherds.

"Maybe they've got the taste of blood," said James Fraser. "Tonight I've got my son, Don, out there with a gun. We'll get 'er licked."

In addition to the petting farm, Fraser also operates the Real Life Nursery, Kindergarten and Day Camp in Dearborn Heights. The petting farm services children from cities in metropolitan Detroit, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor.

"I'VE DROPPED a lot of money into building up the stock on that farm," Fraser said. "Everybody that comes to visit says it's the nicest children's farm around.

"The exhibit will be a little thin for the next few days but I'll replace the animals. I just went out to Hillsdale last week to pick up the little lamb that was killed. I just bought the baby pigs at Howell. I guess I'll have to head back to replace these animals."

The farm provides youngsters with an educational experience, said Fraser, and some fun. "When the farm tour ends we give the kis a real horseback ride and a hay ride," he said.

An estimate of close to $1,000 is the figure given out by Fraser as the total lost in animals and farm equipment. He and his sons, James Jr. and Don, will work to secure the barn area better.

Sheriff investigators reasoned that pigs broke out of their fenced-in pen in the turmoil. Stronger pens will be built, said Fraser, and a small hole in the side of the barn will be sealed.

Students will publish editorial

The printing of the editorial in Thursday's Observer took pressure off the board to support Buikema's decision, one source said.

Because the editorial was already presented to the community, it was considerably easier for the board to allow the students to print it.

DURING THE BOARD discussion, Ms. Borowski contested whether the issue at stake was the content of the editorial.

"We state clearly in the handbook that student editors have the final say on these matters. We may think this is wrong and can look at changing the rule, but to me, it's not kosher to change the rules in the middle of the game."

Said Lawton: "I find nothing particularly improper in the article. I don't see it as neither sensational nor something young people would carry around to show other young people."

Mrs. Tonda was the editorial's most severe critic. "The community reaction I received was very much in agreement with the administration. Parents have to pay high taxes and, therefore, they should have the right to decide what their students read in school papers."

The board was in unanimous agreement that policy reform is needed.

Poole fights for recount of the absentee ballots

the defeated candidate suspects a large margin of error in Precinct 10 absentee ballot votes because more than 1,300 paper ballots were submitted for certified and write-in candidates in the local election.

Poole calls the decision not to recount the absentee ballot precinct "morally wrong."

"Someone's got to say to the state legislature, 'Hey, let's clean up our recount statute'," Poole said. "If this isn't cleared up now, it's going to happen next year in Canton or Van Buren or anywhere else in the state.

"The purpose of recount law should be to encourage recounts, not prevent them."

Lucky Pacer winner

They'll be driving 'em wild this week in Plymouth Township week, as a radio station CKLW disc jockey might say. At least Linda Rama will in her new Pacer. Linda, of 44924 Partridge St., won the car by guessing its mileage. CKLW disk jockey Tom Shannon has been giving the cars away as a promotional gimmick. "I've never won anything before, except a set of encyclopedias, and my kids were too small to read so I gave them away." Linda said she was a little worried, though, because her husband works for Ford. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Slate hearings on prison

Plymouth-Canton residents will have two opportunites this month to let county officials know how they feel about the minimum security prison proposed for the Child Development Center property on the corner of Sheldon Road and Five Mile.

The Wayne County Public Works Committee will hold the first hearing at 7:30 p.m. May 23 in the Northville High School gymnasium. The second will be on at 2 p.m. May 25 in the City County Building in Detroit.

Governor Milliken has given his approval to the prison and has asked the state legislature to appropriate the necessary funds to purchase the 700-acres of property.

The County Bureau of Taxation has placed a value of about $14 million on the parcels of land east and west of Sheldon. The state, however, is only offering $9 m illion for the total acreage.

county Commissioner Royce Smith (D-Belleville), who has opposed the prison, said he intends to invite Milliken to the hearings. "I don't know if he'll come. But if he does, I'd like to hear what he thinks about the prison after listening to what the people in this neck of the woods think."

Carlin earns grant

Wayne M. Carlin of Plymouth has been named a recipient of a $1,000 National Merit scholarship, sponsored by the United Airlines Foundation.

Carlin, a senior at Plymouth Canton High School, plans to study history in college. He was a winner of the "Remember the Ladies" essay contest and "Voice of Democracy" essay competition.

At Canton High, Carlin participated in the Model Congress program, is vice-president of the National Honor Society, member of the debate club, and a volunteer for the Pilgrim Society.

The National Merit Corporation offers scholarships sponsored by colleges and by corporations.

Shades beat summer heat

More than 25 per cent of the heat gain in most American homes is estimated to come through windows exposed to sunlight.

Experts suggest that a good way to save energy and money is to shade your house to keep it cool. Stopping the sun on the outside before it gets through the windows is seven times more effective at cooling than blinds and curtains on the inside.

Bida switches careers

Plymouth Mayor Joe Bida has set up his own company and gone into business as a manufacturer's representative.

He has called his company J&B Industrial Sales, Inc., with "J&B" standing for his initials. Presently he is operating out of his home at 585 Hamilton, Plymouth, but is looking for an office building.

Bida made the change after spending the past few years selling cars for Leo Calhoun Ford. "Right now the future for a car salesman doesn't look too bright with the energy shortgage and national programs being called for. It may turn out all right, but I decided now was the time to go into business for myself which I've been thinking about for some time anyhow."

THE MAJOR WORK Bida will do will be for Ecolotec Inc., which sells street pollution controls.

The major product Ecolotec sells is a Vacu-Sweep, which is a street sweeper, leaf loader, and catch basin cleaner. "There's a growing nationwide concern regarding street pollution," explains Bida, "both from storm water run-off into streams and from minute particles that are stirred into the air as dust.

"The equipment is good from an ecology standpoint because it sweeps streets with vacuum power, not with brushes. Higher capacity water pump and spray jets keep dust at a minimum, moistening fine particulates, and other street debris as they are vacuumed from the road surface."

BIDA'S EXPERIENCE in municipal work will complement his sales work for Ecolotec.

Bida has served as DPW superintendent in Garden City, the City of Plymouth, and Plymouth Township. It was after leaving public administration and entering the car business that Bida turned to politics and was elected to the Plymouth City Commission.

"Most of my calls have been in the downriver communities and the municipalities are receptive because there is a lot of concern about dust pollution."

Because a salesman doesn't sell a street sweeper every week, though, Bida also has taken on a couple of other firms to service as a manufacturer's representative—Plymouth Rubber and Transmission, and B&F Auto Supply of Plymouth.

"I don't know how things will work out," Bida concludes. "Going into business always is a risk, but I'm confident and optimistic. Anyway, it's a good feeling being my own man and setting my own hours."

Teachers participate in Canton graduation

More than 50 teachers from Plymouth Canton High School will participate in the school's graduation ceremonies next month.

Principal Kent Buikema said these faculty members would be dressed in complete cap and gown.

"We had some teachers participate last year in normal attire but many of them wanted to dress in the cap and gown this year," said Buikema. "We have about 60 per cent of our faculty members active in the ceremonies and I think it's fanastic."

Buikema added that the senior class will help with about one-half the cost of the faculty's gowns.

Canton's commencement will be Friday, June 10, at the Centennial Educational Park athletic field.

The Stroller

On Michigan Week

By W. W. EDGAR

It often has been said that we folks in America enjoy making heroes and setting up high honors for citizens just for the pleasure of proving that they have feet of clay or forgetting them entirely after a few brief moments upon the stage.

This comes to mind this week because it is Michigan Week. It came about because one man had an idea some years ago that a week should be set aside each year when the residents of the Wolverine state could shout the praises of the peninsula which has more shore line than the entire Atlantic Coast.

Who was the fellow who conceived the idea?

He was a little short, blonde named Don Weeks who was employed in the Michigan Tourist Bureau. But in all the publicity that was released and printed during the past month his name never was mentioned.

It was Don who conceived the idea that the people should be given a chance to shout the praises of their state. He had two goals in mind. First, by setting aside a week the people would learn more about their state. Secondly, if they shouted loud enough and long enough their voices might be heard in other states.

This, in turn would attract more tourists and more money in to the coffers of business. It was a great idea, but he wondered if it would work.

To get some sort of reaction, Don called on the friends he knew on the Detroit dailies and his steps took him to The Stroller's office in the sports department of the Free Press.

With all the enthusiasm of a youngster Don told of his idea and how the state could benefit if it ever took hold. Assured that it would be a great thing to have the week set side with a different program each day, Don left inspired and it wasn't long until Michigan Week was officially launched.

Don's dream came true during the first few years of the celebration. The churches were filled with worshipers. The mayors made a big thing of their exchange visits and Heritage Day became important in that the school children had the opportunity to learn their background and that of the country.

Meanwhile the praises of Michigan were shouted loud and long— all the way from Paradise to Hell.

Then, at the height of the celebration years, Don was called to his reward. The father of the idea passed on and great changes have taken place.

The enthusiasm that once marked the week now has turned to apathy in many quarters. No more do we see the banners fly. No longer do we hear the shouts, "Michigan, My Michigan"

The concentrated clebration had gone. True, here and there all of of Don's Michigan Week's ideas are being carried out. But such things as the Mayor's Exchange Day have lost their lustre.

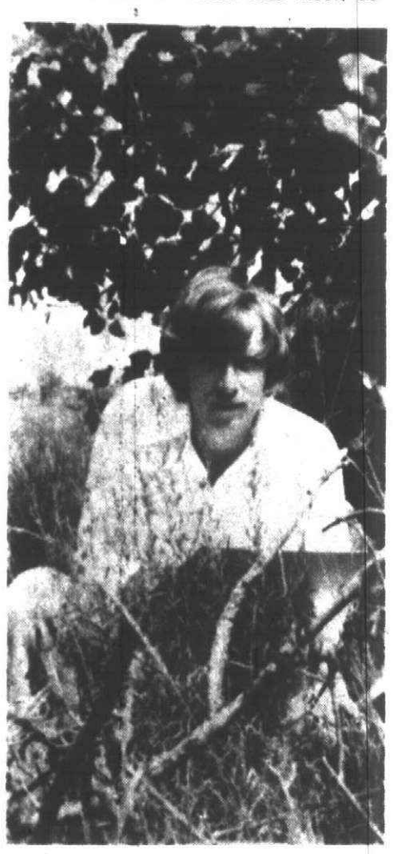

The mayors complained, in many instances, that they could not be away from their desks—and that in many cases they learned very little on the day in another mayor's chair.

Some of the cities took the money that would have been used for Mayor Exchange Day and sponsored a banquet to honor the citizens who made contributions to the welfare of the community.

And Heritage Day is confined mostly to the schools. One by one the special days are being lost in the mist of time.

Yet, there is need for the plan Don Weeks suggested. With economic conditions at present, there is need to give the state a boost at every turn.

How about following Don's advice and shout the praises again. Let's shout about the beauty, the many lakes, the coho salmon, the lessons to be learned in a trip to the copper country—and many others. Let's rekindle the spirit and the legacy that Don Weeks left us.

One-man show

Artist Rick Burger will be at the Art Gallery Inc. Sunday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. for the opening of his one-man show which will run until May 22 in the shop at 459 S. Main Street, Plymouth. Burger has been exhibiting his work since 1969. More than 1,000 of his paintings and limited edition prints are hanging in private and public places around the country.

He lives in Troy and is employed full-time at the GM Tech Center where he is a member of the design staff.

Christian Academy to present musical

Elementary students at the Plymouth Christian Academy will be presenting the musical "The Story Tellin' Man" on Sunday evening, June 5.

The musical will begin at 6 p.m. in Calvary Baptist Church, 43065 Joy, Canton. The public is welcome to the presentation by the academy, which is in its first year of operation for students kindergarten through sixth grades.

The musical by Ken Medema is about the parables Jesus told while on earth some 2,000 years ago. A number of the parables are happy, while some are pensive and others are sad. All are full of adventure, some are quiet and thought provoking, while others make obvious points which otherwise would be difficult to understand.

Besides the 70-voice choir, there will be several soloists and a trio. There will be a number of costumes worn depicting the different characters portrayed in the musical.

To complement the production, there will be an orchestration throughout the musical.

Men that can have communion in nothing else, can sympathetically eat together, can still rise into some glow of brotherhood over food and wine.

Concrete is picked for paving streets

The The City of Plymouth will use concrete, instead asphalt, for its 1977 local street paving program.

The city had planned using asphalt which has been significantly less expensive during the past few years. But when the bids were received, the price for a concrete surface was low enough for the administration to recommend it to the city commission.

Actually, all of the bids came in higher than the estimated cost of the local paving program this year, reported City Manager Fred Yockey. The asphalt low bid was $10,000 more than had been estimated while the second low bid—for concrete—was $12,000 above estimates.

"Based on our information, the life of a concrete street is 20 years compared to 15 years for asphalt. Because of the longer life, we recommend concrete as most economical because of the cost only being $2,000 higher than asphalt."

Yockey added that the paving project was budgeted with a 20 per cent, or $28,000, for contingency and engineering. City Engineer Alan Gove is confident the $12,000 added cost can be absorbed, and that the remaining $16,000 will be sufficient for contingency and engineering costs.

Mayor Joe Bida commented that when asphalt began to be used for streets the city didn't foresee the rise in petroleum costs. "Asphalt now is going up in price because of the oil involved. So I think it's a good recommendation to go with concrete because of the longer life."

Yockey noted that the city has taken alternate bids—asking quotations on both asphalt and concrete—for the past three to four years and this is the first time that concrete bids have come close enough to asphalt to be considered.

Streets to be paved this year include: Hardenburg, from York to N. Holbrook; W. Spring from Starkweather to Amelia; York from E. Liberty to Hardenburg; Irvin from Junction to the C&O tracks; and, E. Pearl from York to N. Mill.

New standards set for mail

Present regulations on minimum sizes of mail will be expanded to all classes of mail and types of service effective April 15, 1978, says the U.S. Postal Service.

Regulations will be amended to prohibit: all items which are less than .007 inches thick; and all items, other than keys and identification devices, which are .25 inches thick or less and are not rectangular, or are less than 3.5 inches in height or less than five inches in length.

M-14 from Ann Arbor is under construction in the upper left (west). I-275, opened late in 1976, crosses the picture from upper right (north) to lower left. A short span of the I-96 Jeffries freeway, west of Newburgh, is open at the lower right.

I-96 due in late '77; bus lane considered

By SHIRLEE IDEN

Construction of freeways in the metropolitan area is "moving right along," according to Michigan Department of Transportation officials who also said they "are not tied down concerning the Jeffries."

"It should be opened late this year," said Paul Riley, district traffic engineer for the metropolitan area.

The Jeffries Freeway (I-96) opened up from downtown Detroit to Southfield Road (M-39) in late 1976 and will be open to I-275 late this year if Riley's estimate is correct.

Currently, some $243 million in work is underway on I-96, including a four-level interchange with M-39 in western Detroit.

Questioned about a proposed dedicated lane for busses on the Jeffries, officials responded that it is "under consideration."

"We realize that SEMCOG (Southeast Michigan Council of Governments) has recommended an exclusive bus lane on the Jeffries and the department is looking into it," an official stated.

"We're talking about from possibly Telegraph Road to downtown. This is preliminary thinking, but there could also be such a bus line from Northland to downtown. We're working with SEMTA (Southeast Michigan Transportation Authority) and the City of Detroit on this."

Also under study is the possibility of a bus preference lane on Eight Mile Road.

THIS WOULD involve boxes on the busses which could send a signal to boxes on street corners which would hold a traffic light at green until the bus made it through an intersection.

Riley pointed out that bus preference lanes involve the same privileges for car pools.

"Any car with three or more people riding in it could use those lanes," he explained.

Final decisions on special bus lanes will be made by SEMTA and the Michigan Transporation Department's management.

Michigan's newest freeway, I-275 carries traffic north and south between I-96 near Novi and I-75 north of Monroe, providing a western by-pass of Detroit.

The first section of the 38-mile freeway was opened in November of 1976 and the final section in January of 1977. An extra feature of the freeway is an eight foot wide paved path at the outer edge of the right-of-way to serve both bicyclists and pedestrians. The path is expected to be opened by late fall.

Highway department reports call I-275 "one of the safest freeways ever constructed." It was designed with wide medians, split-level raodways to avoid headlight glare, concrete bridge barriers, flat roadside slopes and obstacle-free roadsides.

It is an eight-lane divided roadway between Novi and the interchange in Livonia where it joins I-96, now under construction. The eight-lane section of I-275 also forms a section of I-96 between Detroit and Muskegon.

COST OF I-275, exclusive of engineering and right-of-way was $145 million.

Another important link in the state freeway system is the M-14 freeway, which extends 23 miles between Ann Arbor and the I-96—I275 interchange in Livonia, and which will eventually provide a second direct freeway link between Ann Arbor and downtown Detroit.

The freeway traverses a fast-growing area of southeastern Michigan, joining I-94 near Ann Arbor with US-23, I-275 and the section of Interstate 96 presently under construction in Livonia. Generally, it parallels state highway M-14, known as Ann Arbor Road.

Construction between US-23 and Livonia began in 1975 and contracts totaling $37.9 million are in progress.

Briefings on the freeway construction were offered by the department as part of its observance of National Transportation Week.

State plans public session on freeways

People with gripes about freeways and resulting problems will have a chance to tell their state legislators at a public hearing scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday, June 6, in the Liberal Arts Building at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

The hearing is being held by the House Roads and Bridges Committee, of which State Rep. John Bennett (D-Redford) is chairman and Rep. Robert Law (R-Livonia) is a member.

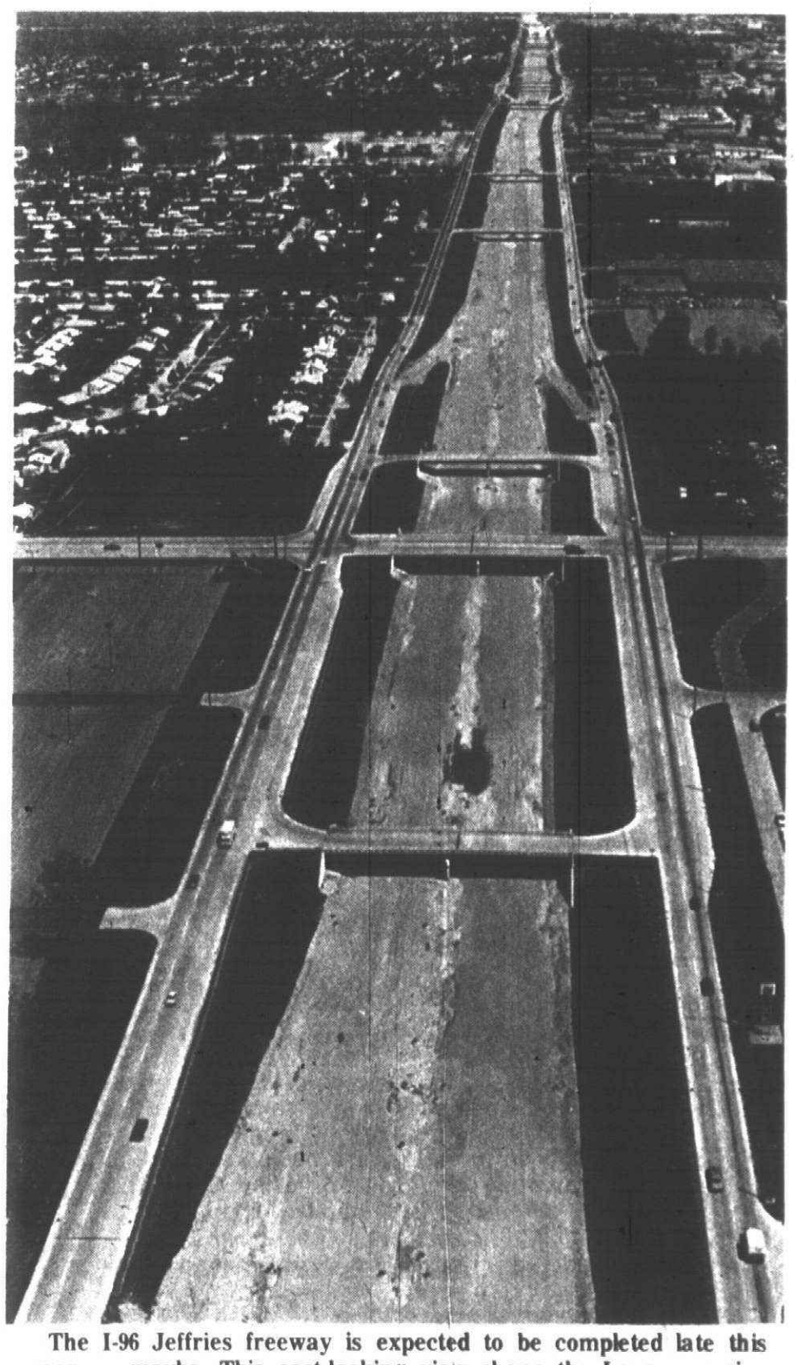

Law said that residents will be given a chance to discuss the noise pollution problems incurred since last winter's opening of the I-275 freeway through western Wayne County.

He said the Livonia City Council has formally expressed its concern about the noise problem being experienced by residents who live in subdivisions adjacent to the freeway.

Another problem to be discussed will be lack of construction progress along the Jeffries Freeway (I-96) which goes through Redford and Livonia.

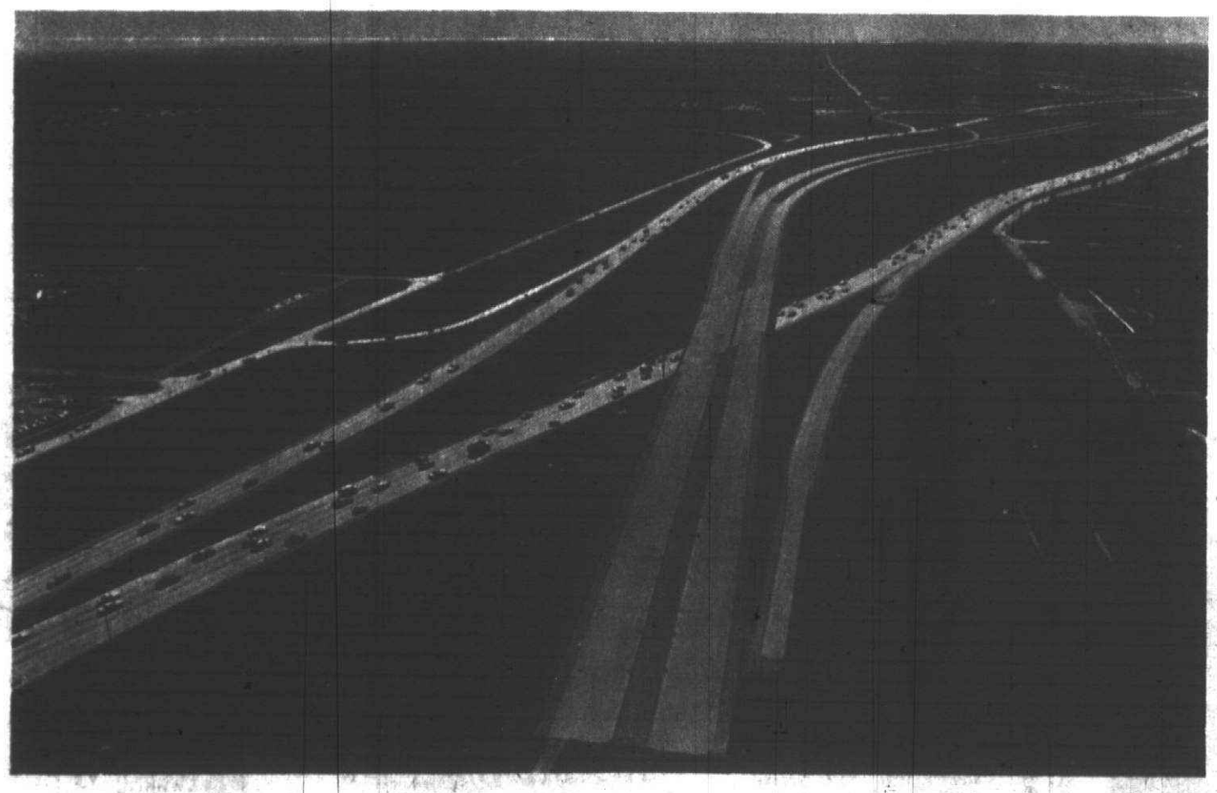

Law said the I-96 along Schoolcraft has been in the construction stage for eight years and "I feel it is about time we got some answers from the (Michigan) department of highways and transportation as to when they plan to complete this project."

Law said he hopes for a large turnout at the June 6 hearing.

The I-96 Jeffries freeway is expected to be completed late this year. . . maybe. This east-looking view shows the Levan crossing with the Madonna College parking lot in the lower left and the Observer & Eccentric lot diagonally across. Photographer Friedman advises using the fastest possible shutter speed, preferably one-1,000th of a second, even though the helicopter is moving slowly.

Staff photos by Gary Friedman

I-696, which one of these decades will cross Oakland County from east to west, comes to a halt in Southfield. In this wester-looking view, the Lodge freeway crosses the picture. Friedman's photographic advice: "Make sure the camera is parallel to the horizon. An unparallel horizon can be very disturbing to the viewer."

Four layers deep! That's the dimension of the mighty interchange of the M-39 Southfield freeway (lower right to upper left) and the incomplete I-96 Jeffries freeway in northwest Detroit. This view is toward the southwest. Friedman had a clear day for his shooting but advises using a polarizing filter on a hazy day.

As a city manager

Yockey recalls odd experiences

By W.W. EDGAR

If you ever went to call on the city manager chances are tht you never would look for him at the wheel of an asphalt truck or guiding a snow plow through the streets in mid-winter.

But if he ever is called upon to do it Fred Yockey, city manager of Plymouth,would be no neophyte. He has had experience in both jobs while holding the city manager's title.

Sitting behind his desk the other afternoon during a bit of a lull in the day's occupation, Yockey, who never is at a loss for a laugh, got to reminiscing about some of the odd things that have happened to him on his way to the Plymouth position.

"In this job you never know what demands will be made of you, and often they are requests that cannot be fulfilled."

For instance?

"Well, how about this one," he ventured. "I am the city manager in Midland. I am sitting at my desk one afternoon when a woman walks in with a demand for action.

"Asked if I could help her, she came back with one of the oddest requests I have ever encountered."

"There's an airplane flying around out here," she said, "and I want you to stop it."

"At first," Yockey went on, "I wondered if the noise bothered her. But it wasn't noise at all.

"She claimed the people in the plane were spying on her and she wanted it stopped."

Yockey chuckled, and said, "You know how much chance I had of trying to stop the plane. It was one of the impossible requests."

YOCKEY HAD another odd experience while on the job in Midland.

"We had had one of those heavy snows that are common in Michigan. The streets were drifted and people were having a terrible time. And as luck would have it, we were short a driver for the tractor and the snow plow.

"Well, it was a case where I would have had to answer all sorts of complaints if the streets weren't opened. So, there was nothing to do but get behind the wheel myself."

Here Yockey smiled one of his broadest smiles as he said, "You will never guess what happened.

"I was driving along, watching the snow flying in big curves toward the sidewalks. I was having great fun and at the same time feeling that I was staving off complaints.

"Then it happened.

"I never noticed a fellow standing at the intersection on his sidewalk. I just kept the plow going for all it was worth.

"I paid no attention to the man on the sidewalk. In fact I didn't see him. But one of the big waves knocked him down.

"I learned later who he was," Yockey smiled, "and would you believe it, he was one of the first men into the office to wish me well when I was leaving Midland for the new job in Plymouth.

"When he offered his hand he didn't realize that he was shaking hands with a fellow who knocked him down with the snow drift in the middle of winter.

"When I told him that I was the fellow who did it, he just smiled, and wished me goodbye."

THERE WAS another occassion during his early years of his city manager career that he never will forget because he had to pay an odd penalty for his ambitious performance.

He was the city manager in Huntington Woods and was irked because of the slow progress being made by the department of public works.

"I made a bet with them that I could pour 2,500 yards of asphalt in a week—and I meant it.

The DPW crew just smiled and almost dared me to try it.

"Well, you know me. I wouldn't take a dare and I decided to do it.

"I made good. I poured the 2,500 yards and did it in a week. But I paid a heavy price for it."

What kind of a price would he be called on to pay?

Smiling his broadest smile again, Yockey asked:

"Who do you think was the first person to drive over the new asphalt?

"It was my wife. She got our car covered with the sticky stuff and demanded that, inasmuch as I had poured it, I should take it off the car. It took me almost as long to get the car cleaned as it did to pour the asphalt on the streets."

So, you see, there is a lot more to a city manager's job, sometimes, than just sitting behind a desk.

Industrial site sold by city

The City of Plymouth has sold an industrial plot it owns and hopes to see a small factory in operation there within a year.

The one-acre plot on General Drive in the industrial park is being sold for $27,051 to Victor Vojcek of Plymouth Township, owner of Loc Performance Products in Taylor.

Vojcek plans to build a 4,000 square-foot tool shop which will employ about 14 persons. Vojcek, a longtime Plymouth resident who graduated from high school here, had moved to Westland in 1965 and just recently moved back to Plymouth.

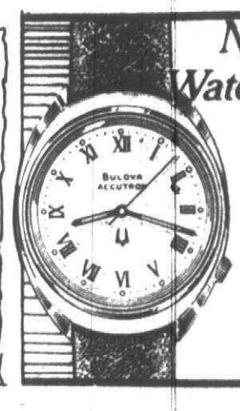

Vojcek says the firm in Plymouth will be called Loc Performance and added he expects to begin construction in about 30 days.

The city had sold the same parcel about four years ago. However, the sale was contingent on construction within a year of the sale and when that wasn't done the land reverted back to the city.

"We've been trying to sell the parcel for about three years now and finally found a buyer," says City Manager Fred Yockey. "Vojcek came to us a few weeks ago and expressed an interest. And so we published our intent to sell and asked for bids. His was the only bid received."

Men that can have communion in nothing else, can sympathetically eat together, can still rise into some glow of brotherhood over food and wine.

Hawkers, excitement, fun, relaxation

Janet Hendrick of Plymouth takes her son David, 2, to his first circus.

The bleachers were nearly filled for the Sunday afternoon performance of the third annual Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce Circus in the Cultural Center.

Staff photos by Gary Caskey

Jerry Loisell relaxes on the bleachers with his wife to enjoy the performance. Loisell was circus project chairman for the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce.

Angela Curlee, 9 months, plays with the balloon given by her mom, Janet Curlee, executive secretary of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce.

Raymond Krall made money for the Kiwanis Club and kept the kids (and Jimmy Carter) happy by selling peanuts.

Sheri Herndon of Canton sells balloons for the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps.

Prior to the beginning of the circus, spectators gather outside the cultural center to watch the elephants being fed and scrubbed down.

Aginian will head newspaper group

Richard D. Aginian, formerly treasurer of Suburban Communications Corp., has been promoted to executive vice-president and chief executive officer, while Henry M. Hogan Jr. has been appointed publisher of SCC in addition to his previous role as president of the company. Announcement of the moves was made today by Philip H. Power, chairman of the board of SCC.

RICHARD D. AGINIAN
Executive vice-president

IN RELATED actions, Power also announced that:

C.S. Wood has been appointed vice-president for manufacturing of SCC. Wood joined SCC in 1975 as president of the now-discontinued Averill Press division. In his new role he will provide manufacturing staff support and planning for all SCC divisions. He lives in Troy with his wife Polly and three children.

Charles A. Paukstis will continue to occupy the office of vice-president for finance. Paukstis joined SCC as treasurer in 1974 and was promoted to his present position in 1976. He lives in Birmingham with his wife Glenna and one child.

Margaret Halava has been made vice-president for personnel of SCC. Mrs. Halava, of Farmington, has been a member of the board of the Farmington Chamber of Commerce sine 1972. She served on the staffs of Michigan governors G. Mennen Williams and John B. Swainson before joining the former Observer Newspapers in 1967. She has been SCC personnel director since 1974.

SUBURBAN Communications Corp. is the parent company for Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, serving 12 communities in suburban Detroit; Sliger Home Newspapers, headquartered in Northville; Towne Courier Newspapers of East Lansing; and Queen City Suburban Press of Cincinnati.

As executive vice-president, Aginian will be responsible for directing and coordinating all divisions of SCC, for coordinating the efforts of corporate staff, and for making policy recommendations to the board of directors. Heads of each of SCC's subsidiaries will report to Aginian.

"Our corporation is one of the leaders in its field in the entire country," Aginian said, "because we are dedicated to putting out newspapers of uncompromising quality whose purpose is to serve their communities. We shall continue to meet these goals."

Said Power: "I am confident that Dick Aginian's excellent business skills, training and experience will provide the best possible leadership for our entire organization, particularly as we enter a period of great growth and expanded opportunities."

HOGAN'S NEW role as publisher of SCC puts his wide newspaper experience at the service of all divisions of the company without tying him down to one geographic location, and he will continue his extensive activities in the Birmingham area.

"There could not be a better man for this job," Power said, "because Hank Hogan is one of the most knowledgeable and experienced suburban newspapermen in this country."

Aginian joined SCC in 1976 as treasurer. Previously he had been assistant to the president at Falvey Motors of Troy, and a manager at the Detroit office of Arthur Anderson & Co., an international accounting firm.

Aginian lives in Birmingham with his wife Diana and two children. He graduated from Rutgers University in 1964, receiving a master's degree in business.

He received a bachelor of philosophy degree from Wayne State University in 1963. He is active in the Birmingham Hockey Association and Birmingham Newcomers Club, and is a member of St. John Armenian Church in Southfield.

Hogan graduated from Holy Cross College in 1954 with a political science degree. He received a law degree from the University of Michigan in 1957.

A state representative from Oakland County from 1960-64, Hogan became publisher of the Birmingham Eccentric in 1961. He joined with Power in 1974 to form SCC and create Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

Hogan lives with his wife Barbara and their three children in Bloomfield Hills. He is a governor of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, a member of the board of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority, chairman of the Oakland County Tourist and Convention Bureau, past chairman of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Community House annual fund drive and a past president of the Michigan Press Association.

Registration dates have been set for the Religious Education program of Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Parish of Plymouth.

The program provides learning activities for nearly 1,000 Catholic families in the Plymouth-Canton area. A curriculum has been set up for preschool through the 12th grade.

Registration will be from 7-9 p.m. today (Monday) and 7-9 p.m. May 23 for Blessed John Neumann at Miller School, 43721 Hanford, Canton. Persons can sign up at the parish center, 43722 Hanford, from 1-3 p.m. May 17-20.

Registration in the gym of Our Lady of Good Counsel, 1151 William, Plymouth, will be from 7-9 p.m. May 18, 19, 21, 23 and 24.

Eugene Kijek is director of religious education.

Lions select projects

The Lions Club of Plymouth recently selected three major club projects as avenues of community service.

The Plymouth Lions Club will buy a 12-passenger van for $5,500 and donate it to the Plymouth, Canton, Northville YMCA for its use.

The club will build two bridges ($850 plus labor) for donation to the Plymouth Township Park.

The club also will donate $200-$300 to provide a storage area for equipment to be used in the Safety Town project at Central Middle School to teach children the safety of crossing streets.

Veterans' kin may be eligible for mental care

Veterans Administration mental health services can be extended to family members of veterans, but only under circumstances which are carefully spelled out in the Veterans Omnibus Health Care Act of 1976.

The law, enacted last October, authorizes mental health services, consultation, professional counseling and training for family members of a veteran receiving medical care for a service-connected disability, but only if the care is considered essential to the rehabilitation of the veteran.

Similar health services may be authorized in some instances for family members of veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities, a VA spokesman said. Family care will be provided on an outpatient basis in those cases where it is deemed essential in affecting release of a veteran from a hospital.

Legal guardians, or an individual, in whose household the veteran certifies an intention to live, also may qualify for VA mental health services, the spokesman added. Services will be limited to those which are essential to support rehabilitation of the veteran.

Complete information of health care services available to veterans and their dependents may be obtained at any VA office or from service officers of the major veterans organizations.

Heal at home on VA's tab

If you were in a Veterans Administration hospital but VA thought a small improvement in your home would make it possible to care for you there instead, the agency might be able to pick up the tab for the improvements.

The Veterans Omnibus Health Care Act of 1976, enacted last October permits necessary home improvements "to assure continuation of medical treatment or to provide access to the residence or to essential lavatory and sanitary facilities," a VA spokesman explained.

Reimbursement up to $2,500 is authorized for improvements and structural alterations made in connection with medical treatment of veterans with service-connected disabilites. Veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities may be reimbursed for home improvements up to $600, provided VA agrees to and approves the alterations in advance.

The VA provides medical care for veterans released from military service under conditions other than dishonorable at 171 hospitals and 217 outpatient clinics.

Priority is given to veterans requiring treatment for injuries or disease incurred or aggravated by their military service.

Complete information on VA medical services can be obtained at any VA office or from service officers of the major veterans organizations.

editorial opinion

Chamber should steer clear of sticky politics

In the interest of good sportsmanship and fair play, it should be noted that the Canton Chamber of Commerce did not sell any of the fund-raising tickets offered at the chamber office to benefit the United Democratic Club (UDC) and affiliated members of Supervisor Harold Stein's political slate.

The tickets were there for people to buy, but nobody who walked into the office bought one.

Individual members of the chamber were present at the Stein dinner-dance, and some of them "individually" sold tickets. But none of the 300 to 400 people at the May 7 fundraiser got a ticket at the chamber office, according to chamber officials.

The Canton Observer reported last week that the chamber's executive board made a precedent-setting decision to "make the tickets available," as opposed to that distasteful term "selling tickets." Chamber officers explained that they were doing this as a community involvment service, not as a political endorsement.

TREASURER ANNE BRADLEY, a member of the Stein slate, a member of the chamber, and wife of George Bradley, president of the United Democratic Club—said the total raised from the ticket sales has not yet been tabulated.

She said the money raised will go to fight the recall of Stein if that becomes necessary. Otherwise, it will go into the campaigning kitty of the UDC and the Stein slate.

Chamber officials still insist that their executive decision to help the UDC and the Stein slate raise funds, by making tickets "available" at the chamber office does not constitute political endorsement. Even when the funds being raised are for a political purpose.

If the Canton Chamber intends to take a strong political position, that is a decison that should be made by a vote of all its membership. Right now, the chamber charter says the chamber "shall not take part in or lend its support to the election or appointment of any candidate."

As a member of the Canton Chamber, the Observer believes it would be a sad day for this community if we ran into a situation where politicians are bought and bossed by the business community or any other special interest group. Overreacting? Maybe. But it could happen here.

There are many instances in which Canton Township officials are forced to make decisions and ordinances which affect business.

Ideally, business will work with the Canton board to formulate a solution which benefits both the business community and the general public.

USING the City of Dearborn as an example, when business becomes too cozy with the town council, it is hard to keep all intentions honorable.

The Canton Township board should cooperate with the Canton Chamber to encourage business to settle in the township and support reputable businesses already here.

But selective chamber assistance to help raise money for any one political slate is a small step toward a dangerous gorge.

The chamber said it was not selective in making Stein slate tickets available because no other political faction asked them.

Would the chamber executive board have agreed to make tickets available for last October's spaghetti dinner benefitting the "Write-in-the-Greenstein-Team"? It's very doubtful, knowing the friction between the former supervisor and former chamber president Bart Berg.

It's also quite possible that no other political slate asked the chamber to offer fundraising tickets for sale because it believed the chamber was non-political. It's going to be hard to convince anyone of that now.

CRAIG PIECHURA

Schoolcraft offers good deal

There's an interesting thing about middle class voters in times of inflation, high taxes and economic pressures. They get picky about what kinds of tax proposals they will support.

They rarely lash out blindly against all government. They pick and choose the things they will buy. When they really see the need for something, they'll back it—even if it costs money.

That was the case last year when there was overwhelming support for a modest property tax hike for a new Wayne County jail.

It should be the case again June 13 when Schoolcraft College seeks approval for a 0.8 mill property tax increase. Schoolcraft is one institution of government that has delivered the goods. One doesn't mind coughing up money when one gets something in return.

In programmatic terms, here's what Schoolcraft is offering for the money:

- A chance to hold down tuition. District residents pay $13 a credit hour—not as little as in the old days but a competitive rate nonetheless.
- Maintenance of the present investment. In the recent inflationary period when state aid had to be cut at the most bruising possible time, there was a painful squeeze on the maintenance budget. That bears correcting.
- Enough funds to operate the new investment. Expansion of the voc-tech programs, expansion of the popular culinary arts program, an addition to the campus center, a fine arts auditorium and teaching facility, a new learning resources center, renovation of the old library—prudent investments all, but there's no point building what Schoolcraft needs unless there's operating money.

If you're not certain Schoolcraft College has been a good investment, check it out during the open house from 7-8 p.m. next Tuesday. It's nice to know you're getting something for your tax money.

Crime links city, suburbs

Observation Point

by PHILIP H. POWER

The news that a Detroit Recorder's Court jury acquitted a suspect in the murder of Farmington Hills businessman Dave Jones has hit the suburbs like a ton of bricks.

The murder itself, which involved the killing of a suburbanite who had gone into Detroit for an evening's entertainment at Olympia and who had $4 in his wallet at the time of his death, seemed almost perfectly designed to arouse suburban fears.

The news stories about the indictment and trial indicated the prosecution had a strong case, complete with a witness.

The jury's failure to convict has come as a shock here, particularly when the news of the last couple of weeks has been dominated by jury acquittals in several other sensational cases, including the rapes of two Livonia women last summer at Cobo Hall.

The obvious suburban fear is that juries in Detroit will not convict defendants for offenses committed in Detroit, regardless of the strength of the prosecution's case.

A GOOD DEAL of effort has gone into examining this fear in the past several weeks.

The Detroit Board of Police Commissioners, headed by the thoughtful and intelligent Avern Cohn, looked in considerable detail into the cases. Wayne County Prosecutor William Cahalan has commented. And showing initiative, Detroit newspapers have interviewed some members of the juries involved.

The general impression coming out of all this activity is that juries—whether in Detroit or elsewhere—still will convict when the evidence is there to prove guilt beyond reasonable doubt.

But juries will not convict if they believe the case has holes (one juror was quoted saying that he felt the prosecution simply hadn't addressed a number of obvious problems with the case) or where the motives of witnesses are open to question (the witness in the Jones case received immunity on another charge in exchange for his testimony).

This may all be so. But here in the suburbs, it's going to be hard to convince people. The fear is too great, the suspicion too high.

The only real evidence that will help is a couple of convictions, which means the police and prosecutors are simply going to have to present better cases.

THE POINT IS that the one great binding link—perhaps the only strong one as of now—between the inner city and the suburbs is fear of crime.

It transcends race. Black people in the inner city dislike being ripped off and raped just as much as do white people in the suburbs.

It transcends geography. Eight Mile Road is no barrier to burglars, as many suburban homeowners know too well, just as Dave Jones was murdered near downtown Detroit.

The simple fact is that there is no chance whatsoever of reducing suburban fear and suspicion of Detroit until the crime problem is resolved, just as there is no chance whatsoever of revitalizing the inner city until crime rates there have been slashed.

This is not to say the only place inhabited by criminals is Detroit. There are plenty of folks in the suburbs—including a certain as yet uncaught nut who abducts and kills children—who are a menace to society.

What I am saying, however, is that the single most important item on the agenda for both the suburbs and the inner city is the substantial reduction of crime. Until that happens, we are condemned to live in a society soaked in fear and divided by hostilities.

History repeats: SEMTA revives the interurban

Tim Richard

Progress is not always the law of history. Things can go backward. There were "good old days."

After the dissolution of the Roman Empire, Spanish peasants failed to understand the great aqueducts and believed these magnificent works of civil engineering the work of Satan.

And so if I were to describe an impressive system of pollution-free and cheap transportation between Michigan cities, you should be ready to believe it's no futuristic pipedream. We had one once.

INTERURBAN RAILWAYS they were called. They consisted of one to three cars powered by electricity.

Operating singly in a city, the trolley carried local passenger traffic, but there were also lines running between towns, and they carried some freight, too.

The first interurban line in Michigan was the Ypsi-Ann of 1890. It was popular with men students from the University of Michigan as they traveled to woo female students at the Normal School for future teachers as Eastern Michigan University was called in those days.

In the era of 1900-20 the interurbans reached their peak of development. Detroit was the hub. Lines ran to Port Huron and Mt. Clemens; to Royal Oak, branching out there to reach Pontiac and Flint, Saginaw and Bay City; to Flat Rock and Toledo; and to Kalamazoo via Battle Creek, Jackson and Ann Arbor.

Sam Hudson's history of Plymouth tells of a community picnic where folks traveled by rail to Island Lake State Park.

Farmington was at the end of an interurban line and so has been part of the metropolitan area for several generations.

THE LATE WILLIS F. Dunbar, known for his landmark work "Michigan: A History of the Wolverine State," also wrote a delightful personal history of his native Hartford. In those days, Van Buren County was dry, and so those of sophisticated tastes were able to board the interurban for a nickel and journey across the county line to Watervliet, there to assuage their thirsts. The schedule was such that one had sufficient time for healthy conviviality and to get home at a reasonable hour, but not enough time to get plastered.

Thriving Livonia, now about the fifth largest city in the state, was in those days a suburb of Plymouth and Farmington, but it still had fine public transportation because there was a stop at Newburgh Station.

One of the last examples of an interurban is a line that runs from South Bend through Michigan City and Gary to Chicago. The cars are dingy, but it's a fast, cheap way to get into the Loop, and you beat the parking fees.

WHAT BRINGS this to mind was the decision May 10 of the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority to use "light rail" as the hardware for a metropolitan public transit system.

That decision was the most important single choice a public transportation agency made in the last 50 years, and it set the direction for the next 50 years.

It was an excellent choice, and like many excellent choices it was a political compromise. The board vote was 9-4, and two of the dissenters will swing around and support the decision.

(I also note with distaste that Gov. William Milliken failed to make one of his SEMTA board appointments in time for the biggest single public transit decision in a century, even though the governor has known for nine months that he had an appointment to make.)

What the SEMTA board has opted for is a 21st century version of the early 20th century interurban, an excellent institution.

And what could be more pleasantly ironic than the fact that the first two lines—in the Woodward and Gratiot corridors—follow old Indian trails!

An economic tale of 2 cities

Eccentricities

by HENRY M. HOGAN, JR.

Over the last decade, we have seen the great northern migration.

Family after family announced that they were through with the rat race and were leaving the big city for the beautiful experience of living up north full-time.

They thought of "up north" in terms of where they spend quiet, peaceful vacations among lakes and stands of tall pine trees.

The explosion up north with all these city folk arriving made the natives a little restless. As the "up north" cities got bigger, they began losing the flavor that attracted the city folk in the first place.

Condominiums replaced quaint marinas. Schools became overcrowded and in town parking became a problem.

Once up north, the newcomer started looking for the amenities of living to which he had become accustomed in the big city and started wanting to change things, so his new home would resemble the place he had just left.

The newcomers encouraged business expansion so there were more jobs available.

The residents of the northern cities started to rebel and change their zoning so that change would be more difficult. They tried to keep their small-town flavor.

The newcomers found that up north full-time wasn't that exciting because it lacked the cultural and economic advantages of the big city, whether they be opera, good restaurants or a wide variety of stores.

MANY OF the northern pilgrims have started a reverse journey back home, south to the hustle and bustle of exciting big-city life.

In the meantime, the big city has been changing. Industry there has been a welcome partner because it brings jobs.

Some of these industries haven't been very good neighbors and have had smoke stacks that spewed the air with ugly smoke, have created traffic jams at opening and closing times, and have polluted rivers with their wastes.

The city folk were used to this because it meant economic progress. It meant jobs.

Then the environmentalists came along and said this is bad for the country. They felt that in the long run if this continued, we would kill off mankind with polluted air and water.

They convinced government of their point of view and laws were passed, commissions created and steps taken.

Money spent by industry for pollution controls doesn't help production or efficiency. If they were not spending this money to abate pollution, industries most likely would be spending it on new plants and equipment creating more jobs.

The result of this trend is to reduce the amount of heavy industry in heavily industrial cities and obviously reduce the number of jobs available.

THE LACK OF JOBS in the big city has encouraged some people to go out of the city and up north to look for work.

While years ago, northern Michigan communities encouraged things like cement plants to provide jobs, now they are rebelling against growth and pulling in their horns.

Somewhere on those great expressways, there are many disillusioned people, some going, some coming, looking for jobs, the good life, clean air, escape from the rat race, and social, cultural and economic amenities.

Moral: Planning in a vacuum doesn't solve the needs of all people. Compromise, not militancy, must be the plan of the future.

High key pitch planned for tax

Edward J. Milligan is getting ready for a "high key" campaign as Schoolcraft College seeks voter approval June 13 of a 0.8 mill property tax increase.

Milligan, a former Livonia city councilman and longtime friend of Schoolcraft, will head the campaign committee as the community college goes to the voters for the second time in two years.

"Some people in education feel a high key campaign brings out a large negative vote," Milligan told a committee session last week.

"But we may not have this choice. We have candidates for the board of trustees who are going to set the tempo."

SCHOOLCRAFT'S 1976 effort was a low-key effort as far as news media and advertising were concerned. College supporters used personal contacts, pamphlets and the telephone to get out a yes vote.

The proposal lost. The Clarenceville and Northville K-12 districts, which had no other money questions on the ballot, favored the Schoolcraft request, but Livonia, Garden City and Plymouth-Canton all had their own money proposals, and voters rejected Schoolcraft's.

Last year there was no election of trustees. This year, nine candidates are seeking three seats. All are expected to favor the millage.

MILLIGAN plans a decentralized campaign effort, one that will tailor its message to suit each community.

A speakers bureau will be set up to address any community group that will listen.

Schoolcraft has 1.77 voted all-purpose mills now. The increase, if approved, would increase the authorization to 2.57 mills. In addition, the board has authority to levy enough to pay off bonds. In five years, the board figures that with the new millage it will be levying 3.13 mills.

"We're in adolescence," said President C. Nelson Grote. "We need to mature."

Pointing to the $10 million bond issue the board is in the process of selling, Grote said it will pay for "highly sophisticated, collegiate-type buildings" rather than standard classrooms.

Milligan said he would appoint a steering committee to coordinate the campaign and take care of required financial reports.

A residential builder, Milligan was part of the effort to found Schoolcraft College in the early 1960s. He was later rewarded with an honorary degree.

New majority

Editor:

After reading J.D. Donahue's letter in the Canton Observer about the balance of power belonging to the new majority, I was incensed.

After a bit more thought I realized I was, in fact, wrong. After all, the majority is right most of the time. If I may cite a couple of examples of this: Russia in 1917 and Germany in the '30s, they were right . . . weren't they?

The VIEW from 461 SOUTH MAIN

FOR 30 YEARS, the Plymouth Business and Professional Women's Club has presented the Plymouth Political Service Award at the club's state conventions.

This year, for the first time, the ladies honored one of their own.

Helen Richardson, Plymouth Township clerk, was the surprised recipient of the award last week at the annual meeting at Boyne Highlands.

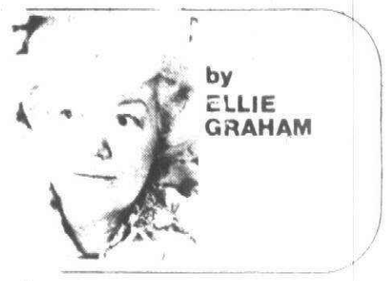

"The winner must be appointed or elected to public office," said Janet Richwine, retiring Plymouth BPW president.

Once the judges had reached their decision, another problem arose—Mrs. Richardson had decided she would not attend the convention.

It took considerable persuasion by Elizabeth Holmes before Helen agreed to go up to the convention for just one day—with Elizabeth.

Because Mrs. Richardson collects plates, a pewter plate was engraved for the occasion and 14 members of the Plymouth club were there to witness the presentation.

More than 900 BPW members from the state attended the convention.

SCOTT LORENZ, a 20-year-old hotel administration major, is the new student body president of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lorenz won the campus election by defeating his only opponent, Jeff Walker, by a vote of 497-306.

As president, Lorenz will oversee all business of the Consolidated Students of the University (CSUN). He sucdeeds a 25-year-old accounting student from Las Vegas.

Lorenz served for the past year as chairman of the CSUN activities board, the arm of student government responsible for bringing concerts, lectures and special events to the campus.

During his campaign, he pledged to establish a new committee to select the editor of the school newspaper, the Yell. He also said he would work to implement a university-operated radio station and seek more and better seats for UNLV students at athletic events.

He is a 1973 graduate of Plymouth High School. During his high school years and summer vacations he worked for his father at the Mayflower Hotel. As president of the student body he will receive full tuition as well as a monetary stipend.

Two old farmhouses received landmark plaques from the Plymouth AAUW on Heritage Day of Michigan Week. At right, Norma Cassady accepts a bronze plaque from Dee Winter, who chaired the committee. Landmark farmhouses cited by AAUW

Two old farmhouses built more than 100 years ago were awarded heritage plaques by the Plymouth branch American Association of University Women.

The presenation was part of the AAUW's annual observance on Heritage Day of Michigan Week.

Norma Cassady received a bronze plaque for her New England-style farmhouse on North Territorial built in 1875 by Marcus Miller.

Miller had inherited the 85-acre farm on the corner of Sutton and Moreland roads, now known as North Territorial and Sheldon roads.

The farm had several owners between the Millers and the Cassadys who purchased it in 1945. At one time it was known as Maple Lawn Dairy Farm.

When the Cassadys bought the property, there were a cluster of buildings as well as the house: a large red horsebarn with several box stalls and a big hayloft, a cowbarn with space for farm equipment, a red glazed tile silo and one made of wood, a stone smokehouse, a pighouse and pen, and a chicken house with a fenced in yard.

The old cowbarn still stands behind the house. It has a new roof and green paint. But the original lightning rods were left on the rooftop.

BECAUSE THE HOUSE had no piped-in water except for a small rainwater pump in the kitchen sink, probably the most important building in the backyard was the "necessary house" built to accommodate three persons and complete with a Sears Roebuck cataloque.

Most of the outbuildings were in such dilapidated condition in 1945 that they had to be torn down.

"The red silo seemed sturdy enough," said Mrs. Cassady, "but the village fathers thought it should go too. So, Louis Norman and his crew razed it with great difficulty. We have a picture of it falling."

The low, one-story wing at the back of the house was in such poor condition that the Cassadys restored it, replacing all the windows, window frames and inside doors throughout the house. They had the new walls and old walls on the front wing insulated for warmth, and attached a garage to the back wing.

The house is T-shaped with a narrow front porch with iron grillwork on the posts. The heavy doors, ornate with molding, are the main entrance to the house.

Next to the front doors, on the end wall of the porch, is a large five-pointed star.

"Marcus Miller was a member of the Masonic order and his wife a member of the Eastern Star," explained Mrs. Cassady.

AMONG THE MANY old trees in the yard are five walnut trees. The 15-step staircase inside the front doors has a curved bannister, newel post and 51 spindles of hand-carved walnut.

The farmhouse now sits on three acres of the original Miller farm.

Thirty acres of railroad frontage were sold by the Cassadys to Western Electric in 1955. The remainder of the acreage is now New England subdivision.

Records show that one of the four log schoolhouses at which Plymouth Township children were educated through eighth grade stood on the Miller farm 100 years ago.

An "Illustrated Historical Atlas of Wayne County" published in 1876 describes Plymouth Township: "She is favored with a network of excellent roads, unsurpassed railroad communication, good bridges, very superior schools and, in fact, all the advantages that would naturally accrue to a population industrious, intelligent and straightforward. The township has now upward of 4,000 inhabitants, about a third of whom are congregated in the two thriving business centers, Northville and Plymouth."

At that time, Plymouth Township included what are now the cities of Northville and Plymouth and the two townships.

THE HULCE HOME at 9275 McClumpha Road was about six years old when the atlas was published.

The sprawling farmhouse which received the heritage plaque started out as a four-room home about 1870.

The original owner of the property in 1825 was the Taft family. It changed hands twice before 1903, first to the Harlows and then the McClumphas.

In 1896 it became the 16-acre parcel that remains today.

From 1905 to 1932 it was owned by Fred and Josephine Ballen who added rooms, plumbing and heating. At that time it was a truck farm.

Dallie Roach bought the property in 1932 and added more rooms.

Arthur and Luella Needham were the next owners. From 1937 to 1945 it was a truck farm again. They had vegetable gardens, poultry and fruit orchards.

Robert and Violet Roberts bought the property in 1945 and sold it to Ray and Joanne Hulce in 1953.

The bronze plaques were donated by local business people—Julie Thoman of Wayside gifts, and Kirk Lorenz of the Mayflower Hotel.

Dee Winter, who chaired the AAUW's heritage committee, made the presentations.

Jane Watts is Northville's woman of year

(The following is a lead story from Jean Day's "Our Town" section of the Northville Record. For those local people who have worked with Jane Watts and come to consider her one of Plymouth's own, she actually lives in Northville Township. The Watts have a Plymouth mailing address and their children attend the Plymouth schools.)

Northville Township resident Jane Watts has just finished proofreading a new, expanded version of the League of Women Voters' handbook. "They Represent You," a listing of officials who represent Northville, Plymouth, Canton and Novi residents at local, county, state and national levels.

As applied to Mrs. Watts, a past president of the league, the title might be paraphrased to "She Represents You," for last week a panel of judges named her Northville's Woman of the Year for the high quality of her community volunteering.

The Northvillee Jaycee Auxiliary, sponsor of the annual award, honored Mrs. Watts and nine other nominees at a tea May 11.

For the past year, Jane Watts has served as voter service chairman of the league. Her term extends to 1978, and her duties include making available voter guides for elections, and organizing and presenting candidates' nights.

SHE WAS NOMINATED for the Woman of the Year award by Annalee Mathes, president of the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Watts is a charter member of the league, joining in 1969 and serving as human resources chairman from 1970-73. In this capacity she headed a committee which presented an informative program on the controversial topic of busing which was presented to various groups in the community and was well received.

But Jane Watts' involvements also include the United Foundation Torch Drive for which she has volunteered since 1966, beginning as door-to-door collector and subsequently as neighborhood leader, area chairman and, presently, as division leader for the Northville area since 1975.

As the mother of Sarah, 11, Jonathan, 9, and David, 7, who are in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, Mrs. Watts became newsletter chairman for the Tanger Elementary PTO. Her effort at improving communication between school officials and parents has been to initiate a newsletter that she edits and publishes.

This volunteer effort alone, Mrs. Mathes pointed out, entails many hours of writing articles, typing and distributing.

"There are moments when it gets hectic," admits the honoree, "but basically my husband and children support me, and I feel they are very pleased.

"I feel strongly about volunteering. When we are so comfortable, I believe we should be giving something back to the community in which we live."

THE WATTS FAMILY lives at 15450 Lakeside Drive off Bradner Road in the township. Mrs. Watts points out that she has lived in the neighborhood since 1966 but that "things didn't occur at once. When they do, though, each is the most important to me at the time I'm working on it."

As the league stated in nominating Jane Watts, she has done her volunteer work with graciousness and sincerity.

"Perhaps her most outstanding qualities," the nomination read, "are enthusiasm for and belief in what she is doing. Her energy and spirit affect everyone working with her, and her life reflects in every way her sincerity."

Mrs. Watts has been an American Association of University board member for several years, is founder of the Plymouth Ski Club, a Plymouth Symphony League worker, on the Northville Township Board of Canvassers since 1972, and a Northville Township deputy registrar since 1975.

This past year, Jane Watts also took on a special family responsibility. To help in an emergency situation, she had the total care of two nieces, age seven months and 19 months, for four months.

"Even with this responsibility," wrote Mrs. Mathes in her nomination, "she was able to carry on with each of her outside activities with thoroughness and care."

Theater guild picks a winner

By PATRICK TUOHEY

The Plymouth Theatre Guild picked a beauty this time. Its production of "A Gentleman and a Scoundrel" is bright, witty, 1970's-hip—and very, very funny.

The action of the play asks the time-honored question, "Can a dedicated career woman find love and happiness with the man who works for her?"

Fred Dickson is a "mild-mannered products analyst" for AEIOU Corp. Jenny Corell is his boss. And that's Jenny with a Ms.

Good-hearted Fred is in love with Ms. Jenny, but it's a one-way street. She likes him well enough, but that is as far as it goes.

After one of his many pleas, Jenny shoots him down by saying, "I can't understand this constant harping of yours on love and romance."

"Call me a weirdo," Fred replies.

As the play opens, Fred is in his apartment trying on some "products" which include a wig, snappy sports jacket, and elevator-lift cowboy boots. Enter the unknowing Ms. Jenny.

Fred has been so transformed by his costume that his boss fails to recognize him. And, in fact, is instantly smitten by the tall, dark visitor.

Not at a loss for improvisation, Fred goes along with the mistaken identity and gives his name as Rick Laredo, Fred's old Army buddy.

The charade goes along smoothly. Too smoothly. Jenny offers "Rick" a job as Fred's assistant.

Thinking of the benefits of a double paycheck Fred-Rick accepts. What the heck, he muses, "the company isn't paying me what I'm worth anyway."

DO YOU SEE the possibilities? The next time we see Fred, things have changed. His apartment has been completely redecorated, and he is wearing an ascot and a silk smoking jacket.

When Jenny questions his ability to pay for the new lifestyle, Fred explains that he does it all on credit.

"It's amazing what you can get for $1 down and $1 a month," he quips.

The real purpose of Jenny's visit, however, is to find out why Fred's "friend" Rick has been avoiding her. He just disappears into thin air, she tells Fred, and she can't understand why he won't ask her out.

Fred is evasive but sympathetic. He will have to talk to "old Rick" about that.

In the narrow escapes that are part-and-parcel of a dual identity, there are some predictable cliches in both plot and dialogue. But the talent of the cast provides some freshness and surprises.

Tom Hinks gives the best performance in the tricky roles of Fred and Rick. He has a natural flair for the comic character.

Carole McNulty, as Jenny, mixes just the right blend of liberated woman and would-be love object. Mike Nelson in his first role with the guild, plays a corporation investigator who can't understand how Fred is living so well on what the company pays him.

In addition to the fine acting, part of the play's success is due to the imaginative set design of Don Watkins. His construction techniques almost make you forget you're in the Central Middle School auditorium.

If you missed the opening weekend performances, don't kick yourself yet. The play will be presented again on May 20 and 21 at 8:30 p.m. Do yourself a favor. See it.

Smith-Theobald

Mr. and Mrs. Francis X. Smith of Harvey Street, Plymouth, announce the engagement of their daughter, Catherine A., to Richard P. Theobald, son of Mrs. Marie Theobald of Newport Street, Plymouth.

The bride-elect attended the University of Michigan and works at General Bearing Corp. in Farmington Hills, and Our Lady Of Good Counsel Rectory in Plymouth. Her fiance attends Lawrence Institute of Technology and works at Symons in Plymouth.

They plan an August wedding in Our Lady of Good Counsel Church.

Canton chatter

By SHARON STARON 455-5322

Every club, organization, school, church or sports team has at least one fundraiser during the year. This is a way for these groups to supplement their treasuries and do the things they set out to accomplish.

During the course of just one year, I have been known to purchase from these small door-to-door salespersons numerous non-winning tickets, Christmas cards I never send, an assortment of candles, tulip bulbs, vegetable seeds, booster stickers, popcorn, light bulbs, plants and too many boxes of candy to count.

Many groups lately have a sure-fire way to raise funds. It is the all-American newspaper drive. It's terrific for everyone involved.

The donor doesn't have to look for her purse, and the collector doesn't have to split the profits with a manufacturer.

Most schools and churches in Canton have two or three paper drives during the year. Miller School cub scouts had a very successful drive in March. Gallimore scouts had their second newspaper drive last Saturday.

Every time a newspaper is recycled, you are saving a tree. It's a great feeling to know you're being ecology-minded while helping some small citizens at the same time.

Hulsing Elementary will hold its second newspaper drive soon. Other drives in our area usually are posted in this newspaper.

Our young salespeople are turning into collectors of paper. Maybe you can turn into a saver of papers.

Remember, what you're reading today can be recycled tomorrow.

BLESSED JOHN Neumann Parish had its first celebration of second graders first communion May 7 and 14.

The Rev. Edward Baldwin offered the mass. All the children took an active part in their special day.

Congratulations are extended to the children and their families.

FOURTH GRADERS in Barbara Murphy's and Eleanor Jones' classes in Hulsing Elementary School took a trip to Fort Malden in Amherstburg, Ontario.

The fort is on the Detroit River and is one of the forts used by the British in the War of 1812—14. The boys were shown how the old printing press worked and also made bullets for the old-fashioned muskets.

The girls made tea cakes over an open fire and learned how to churn butter.

It was a historical experience for everyone. Weary from the bus ride home, both parents and children agreed it had been a fun day at school.

Plymouth artist has one-man show

Plymouth artist Grant Fischer's one-man show, "Color Counterpoint," opens Saturday in the Birmingham Gallery, 1025 Haynes, Birmingham.

The showing of 34 watercolors will begin with a 6-9 p.m. reception May 21. It will run until June 18.

After studying many art forms and media—drawing, graphics, jewelry making, ceramics, scupture, weaving and stitchery—Fischer says, "I'm basically a painter.

"I'm intrigued by watercolors. You never quite master it. It is exasperating. I guess that's what keeps me excited."

Grant graduated from Plymouth High School in 1965 and earned his bachelor of fine arts degree at Eastern Michigan University in 1970. He is working toward his MFA and teaches art in Howell High School.

His paintings were selected for showing at the Scarab Club in 1971, and his works have been purchaseu for private collections throughout the United States.

The young artist's paintings were on the Michigan Artrain. He has had shows in Mount Clemens, Cheboygan, Birmingham and the Old Village Gallery in Plymouth.

He taught painting in the adult education program at Clarenceville and Novi high schools.

Grant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fischer of Plymouth Township. He and his wife Bonnie live on Risman Drive.

JACK ANDERSON

BETTY JO HAWKENS

BILL SCHUSTIK

Town Hall speakers announced

Reporter Jack Anderson will open Northville Town Hall's 17th season next fall with monologist Betty Jo Hawkens and balladeer Blll Schustik following. The series will conclude with Olivia de Havilland, Oscar-winning actress.

Announcement of next season's program is made by Mrs. Richard Booms, who takes over charimanship of the Town Hall, sponsored by Our Lady League of Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church.

The lectures and luncheons will be held at 11 a.m. at the Plymouth Hilton Inn. As in past years, the first lecture will be on a Wednesday with the following three on Thursdays.

The lecture ticket will be $15 and may be ordered now by sending a check to Northville Town Hall, Box 93. The price, the committee says, had to be raised from the $12 of recent years in order to continue first-rate programming.

ANDERSON, WHO will appear Oct. 12, took over the "Washington Merry-Go-Round" when Drew Pearson died in 1969. He ahd joined Pearson's staff in 1947. He also is Washington editor of Parade magazine and does a syndicated TV news commentary.

Relentless digging has made him one of America's top investigative reporters, but he is nothing like the Hollywood version of the hard-drinking, hard-swearing news hound.

A practiciting Mormon, he still teaches Sunday School and delivers an occasional sermon. He does not drink, swear or smoke.

He avoids cocktail parties and is more likely to be found romping with his nine children.

He has been at the bottom of some of the biggest exposes to come out of Washington. His evidence helped to convict three congressman of taking kickbacks. Years ago his legwork was instrumental in persuading the senate to authorize the late Sen. Estes Kefauver's investigation of the underworld.

He started out to help the late Sen. Joe McCarthy, but become concerned over his methods and summed up his findings in his first book.

Anderson, now in his early 40s, frankly describes himself as a muckraker, but insists his object is to reform.

"WHEN BETTY JO Hawkens performs, th audience not only watches, it participates with tears, gentle smiles and loud guffaws. It's an experiences—and wonderful." That's how one critic wrote about the gifted monologist who will appear Nov. 10.

Miss Hawkens has a background in theatre, television and radio. After attending college in Texas at Rice and Midwestern, she graduated from the Pasadena Playmhouse.

She palyed the comedy lead of Ado Annie in the London production of "Oklahoma" at historic Drury Lane Theatre for 18 months.

Her credits include leading roles in "Happy Birthday," The Glass Menagerie," "Streetcar Named Desire," Blithe Spirit," "Night Must Fall" and "Showboat."

BILL SCHUSTIK, who will appear in March rapidly is gaining fame as the top performer in his field of historical balladeer. He sang sea chanties at the White House reception of Indira Ghandi, has performed at Lincoln Center and was featured performer in the Canadian revue, "Love and Maple Syrup," at the National Art Center in Ottowa.

He is official "sea chantier" aboard the square-rigger, Shanandoah, which has plied the waters of New England each summer.

As a history major a t Boston University, Schustik did a great deal of research in nautical and American folklore, a pursuit he carries on now as both a vocation and avocation. A traditionalist, he renders the most authentic versions he can find.

"Folk stories and folk songs, whether relating the sweat and strain involved in driving a cippership around the Horn, the blood and confusion of Shilo and Gettysburg, or the more personal whims of tragedy and comedy form a vital part of our heritage," he explains.

OLIVIA de HAVILLAND, one of the world's best loved and most respected actresses will share higlights of her career with her Northville Town Hall audience April 6, 1978.

Miss deHavilland, who has won plaudits for brilliant portrayals in every type of role from beautiful heroine to comedienne to victim of horror or tragedy will be speaking on "From the City of Stars to the city of Lights."

During her 30 years between her artless Hermia in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in 1935 and her subtle predator in "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte" in 1964, she has created some 40 characters on the screen.

Among her most memorable are roles in "Gone with the Wind," "To Each His Own," "Captain Blood" and "Private Lives of Elisabeth and Essex."

In addition to two Academy Awards, Miss de Havilland received Oscar nomnations for three other films. In 1967, she became first woman president of th Cannes Film Festival.

Dalgleish-Nastoff

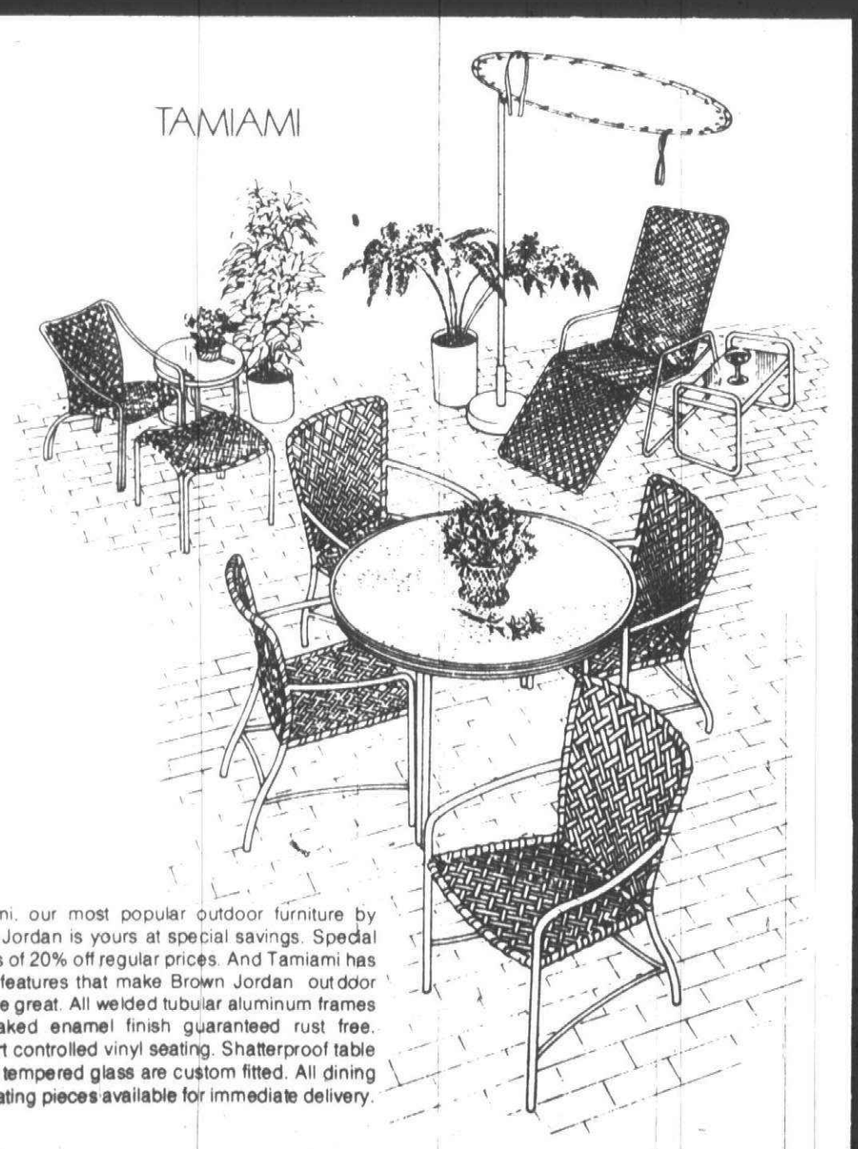

Janet Marie Nastoff and Murray Edward Dalgleish were married April 11 in Coeur d' Alene, Idaho. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nastoff of Lexington Drive, Plymouth. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Joan Dalgleish of La Habra, Calif. and the late Gordon E. Dalgleish.

The bride's parents hosted a Plymouth reception for the couple who will live in McCall, Idaho, where the bridegroom is employed by the U.S. Forest Service. He graduated from the University of California, Santa Rosa in 1976 with a degree inlaw and society. He graduated from Lowell High School in Whittier, Calif. in 1970 and plans to attend law school in the fall of 1978.

The bride is a 1973 graduate of Plymouth High School. She attended the University of Michigan and University of California, Santa Barbara. She is employed by the Mill restaurant in McCall.

THE SEED-SOWER: PART II

The kingdom of God comes in the Word of the king who is like a sower sowing seed. Therefore, there will certainly be a believing response to the gospel .... some seed will fall on good soil. This is the way that the king of the universe sovereignly accomplishes his saving purposes.

The parable of the sower suggests to us some invaluable lessons. First, gospel preaching is kingdom proclamation. To preach Jesus is to announce the coming of the kingdom (cf. Lk. 16:16; Acts 28:23,31). It is dangerous distortion to put the kingdom off exclusively to the future. This cuts "lordship" out of the gospel and tends to produce a premature harvest. Such a harvest is no harvest at all for its yield is false security. The sower teaches us that only those who keep (obey) the Word (commandments included) of the king have promise of everlasting life (Lk. 8:15; 1 Jn. 2:4,5). When these themes are misconstrued, kinghsip is replaced by the whim of man and confessed lordship becomes a mockery. Second, we loose the definition of the gospel that Jesus has given us (cf. Isa. 40:9; 41:27). Third, since this is the way of everlasting life, it is imperative that you heed the Word of the king.

Has God prepared the soil of your heart? The kingdom is yours if you entrust yourself to the king as his servant and thus place yourself under the yoke of his commandments. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you shall be saved.

What's better than a summer vacation?

you ought to know a DETROIT BANK-er better

A summer vacation plus the help of a Detroit Bank·er.

Short of rubbing suntan lotion on your back, there is a lot your DETROIT BANK-er can do to make your summer vacation a much more pleasant time.

To begin with, you can get your whole trip financed with a Detroit Bank & Trust vacation loan, or you can charge whatever portions of it you wish—hotels, restaurants, gifts—on your Master Charge. (Apply for your card at any office.) Of course, you don't want to take too much cash along, so you can purchase Travelers Checks in the amount you need at any office.

While you're away, you'll want things to run smoothly at home. So for safekeeping, put valuables from your home into a safe deposit box at Detroit Bank & Trust. And while you're gone there are several automatic services you can arrange with your DETROIT BANK-er like direct deposit of your Social Security check, automatic transfer of funds from checking to savings and much more.

These are only some of the things Detroit Bank & Trust can do to help you have a better vacation this year. Your DETROIT BANK-er can probably suggest a few more. So be sure to talk with your DETROIT BANK-er before you leave town. He can take your mind off money so you can relax and enjoy your vacation.

Grand Valley State College Singers (upper left) provided show tunes and dance routines from an earlier college era. . . The audience singalong was led by Dunlap with a healthy assist from GVSC singers Penny Jones and Steve Barnum (below). (Staff photos)

Pops is perfect

...except for one tiny detail

By TIM RICHARD

Only one little detail was missing when the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra capped the season by celebrating "College Night at the Pops."

It wasn't people, because the audience in Pioneer Middle School Saturday night was at capacity, warm and orally vocal for the singalong.

It wasn't collegians who were missing. Some 18 of the full complement of 28 of Grand Valley State Colleges Singers oad a tremendous amount of fun singing and dancing to show tunes, with Penny Jones and Steve Barnum providing the love interest in the "Oklahoma!" segment.

IT WASN'T tradition that was missing, for the orchestra closed on Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" with Cleon Chapen and Irwin Nichols providing the piccolo highlight, as well as the flute duet in "Penny Whistle Song."

It wasn't a shortage of impressive soloists. Soprano Giselle Montanez, winner of the midwest competition of the National Association of Teachers of Music, was appropriately breathtaking in the laughing song from Strauss' "Die Fledermaus."

Nor were male performers overlooked. Paul Huybrecht, one of the GVSC Singers, warmed everyone with the verses from "Those Were the Days."

Decorations? They were abundant—pennants, table flowers and the rest.

THE TINY detail was missing in the costumes.

Conductor Wayne Dunlap took care of the Roaring Twenties with a raccoon coat.

Violist Jean Braun was a standout with a freshman beanie. Other performers were garbed in outfits of their favorite eras—letterman sweaters, Schoolcraft College T-shirts, the frumpish dress of the late Hippie period, cutoff jeans, even some standard straight clothes.

Only one little detail was missing. Remember suntans? Those were the neat looking but comfortable trousers popular on campuses in the golden Eisenhower years of the '50s. They were adapted from summer military uniforms.

No one I could see wore suntans. You just can't find 'em any more.

Otherwise, everything was there. The women of the Plymouth Symphony League, sponsors, always do everything right.

Emergency room chaplaincy boosted for clergy in area

By MARGARET MILLER

Getting more of this area's clergymen involved in an emergency room chaplaincy at St. Mary Hospital of Livonia is the aim of a new push by the Livonia Ministerial Association.

The ministry has been going on for about a year on a catch-as-catch-can basis, said the Rev. William Hass of Livonia Christian Church, president of the association.

But, he added, even on a limited basis it has had such positive results and such good hospital staff cooperation that the association is about to send letters to all clergymen in Livonia and the surrounding communities of Redford Township, Garden City, Westland and Farmington to put the program on a more solid basis.

Ministers and priests who have participated so far make themselves available in the hospital's emergency waiting room during the hours when it is busiest, offering comfort to the patients, counsel to their families or just a listening ear to anyone who needs it.

The involvement on the part of clergymen was requested by Dr. Sidney Smock of the St. Mary staff, who explained that the presence of someone who understands hospital procedures and can give moral support to those who need it.

"WE STARTED OUT with several of our members quite enthusiastic about the program," the Rev. Hass said.

"But the times we especially try to cover are Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings because these are the times of the most accidents and need for emergency treatment.

"And weekend times are the ones when it's hard for all of us to make commitments."

The Rev. Hass said he hoped to get more people involved and then set up the emergency room ministry somewhat on the basis of a regular Protestant ministry at St. Mary.

"In that one," the association president said, "ministers from all over the area volunteer one afternoon a month for making calls on patients who request the services of a Protestant minister.

"The sisters know about the program and take the requests to the floor supervisor."

That program is coordinated by the Rev. Ronald Johnson of Augsburg Lutheran Church of Redford Township and has been working smoothly for some time.

The emergency room project, he feels, could do as well with a large component of regular workers. "Especially in the churches that have more than one clergyman on the staff," the Rev. Hass said, "we hope it will be possible to get more participation."

THIS MINISTER has found his occasional post in the emergency room "a very creative ministry."

"In some ways, it's more challenging even than the visits in the regular program," he said, "but we are in hopes of supporting both because both are needed.

"We have received support from the emergency room staff in an excellent way. We are not assigned to do anything, so we're free to talk, meet the patients and their families and help them in any way we can."

On several occasions, he said, he has felt he was performing a needed service.

One women he remembered had taken an overdose of sleeping pills because of depression.

"She was at the end of her endurance trying to care for her aged parents, who lived in another house in this area," her recalled. "So far, no social agencies had been able to help, and she was wearing herself out trying to get their meals and doing her own work, too.

"I made a few calls and found out meals could be delivered through the senior citizens hot lunch program at McNamara Towers.

Honorary degree

The Rev. G. Douglas Routledge (left), pastor of Calvary Baptist Church of Plymouth, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Religious Education from Trinity Baptist Seminary of Atlanta, Ga., in a recent extrordinary service at the church. Making the presentation was Dr. William G. Studer, president of the seminary. The school's board of trustees voted unanimously to bestow the honor on Mr. Routledge in recognition of his outstanding contribution to Christian education.

Settler battler

The Michigan town of Tecumseh was named for a Shawnee chief who led a fight against the American settlers. His forces were defeated at the Battle of Tippecanoe in 1811. He was killed during the War of 1812.

St. Andrew marking 25th anniversary

May is anniversary celebration month for St Andrew Episcopal Church of Livonia.

The church, now located at 16360 Hubbard, is marking its 25th birthday with several events, including a dinner dance that launched festivities, special worship and a golf outing scheduled June 12 at Idyl Wyld.

St Andrew was organized in May, 1952, as a parochial mission of Christ Episcopal Church of Dearborn.

Members met at first at Bentley High School. In the anniversary month the church's leaders expressed to the Livonia school district a vote of thanks for providing the facilities for worship and study.

The young congregation grew rapidly and shortly after the organization the need for a church building became evident.

The 10-acre site on Hubbard between Five and Six Mile roads was purchased by the Diocese of Michigan, and the first construction there, a building that now serves as St. Andrew's parish hall, was put into use on Passion Sunday in 1955.

The Rev. Jay P. Coulton, who had served as vicar of the mission, was called as the first rector. The new parish was admitted by the convention in 1956.

Increasing membership next led to the building of a sanctuary, using funds from a special campaign, and that gave the parish the means to seat 400 at Sunday services.

The last unit to be constructed was an education addition, with classrooms and meeting spaces.

Rev. Coulton resigned in 1965 to accept another call, and the Rev. James McLaren came from St. John Episcopal Church of Holly, serving from March, 1966 to Aug. 1969.

He was succeeded by the Rev. Kenneth G. Davis, who previously had served Christ Church of Dearborn and remains in the post as the 25th anniversary is marked.

2 Livonians heading ADF

The Rev. Thomas Cain and Enzo Paparelli, both of St. Maurice parish in Livonia, are coordinating the 1977 Archdiocesan Development Fund Appeal (ADF) for the Northwest Wayne Vicariate of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Detroit.

"Doing God's Work Together" is the theme of the annual appeal which is now underway in each of the parishes and missions of the Archdiocese. It provides the funds for ongoing Archdiocesan-wide programs of religion education and charity in Wayne, Oakland, Maomb, Monroe, Lapeer and St. Clair counties.

Cardinal John Dearden, Arhbishop of Detroit, has announced a minimum goal of $1,950,000 for the 1977 ADF. This represents an increase of approximately eight per cent over last year's total in pledges and cash.

Parishes in the Northwest Wayne Vicariate contributed $119,265.79 to the 1976 appeal. The vicariate is made up of the following parishes: Our Lady of Good Counsel, St. Kenneth, Plymouth; Our Lady of Loretto, St. Agatha, St. John Bosco, St. Robert Bellarmine, St. Valentine, Redford; Our Lady of Victory, Northville; St. Aidan, St. Colette, ST Edith, St. Genevieve, ST Maurice, St. Michael and St. Priscilla, Livonia; and Blessed John Neumann, Canton.

Signs show where the buffalo roamed

Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota share a heritage of the buffalo, a once near-extinct animal that freely roamed millions of acres in this area. Today a buffalo-head sign points the way for travelers seeking adventure in these states, known collectively as the Old West Trail.

The Old West Trail, organized in 1966 to promote tourism in these beginning-of-the-West states, is actually an automotive tour along interstate highways and major state roads in this region.

The buffalo head symbol was chosen to mark the Old West Trail because the buffalo was lord of this western country before the coming of the white man. After almost complete extermination, the buffalo has outlived its adversaries, and again roams these four states—on private ranches, in national and state parks and on bison ranges and game refuges.

The buffalo head signs lead travelers to approved attractions, mark City and Area Circle Tours and keep the visitor headed toward prime vacation fun wherever he roams on the trail. The symbol is a dependable guide to quality attractions and facilities throughout the four-state area.

THE OLD WEST Trail is a trail for modern travelers, although it parallels the pioneer trails of yesterday: The Oregon Trail, Bozeman, Overland, and Lewis and Clark Trails. Today's travelers drive and ride in automobiles or recreation vehicles, while the people who trekked these routes in the 18th and 19th centuries walked or rode in covered wagons.

Pathfinders Lewis and Clark were among the first to traverse these states on the Old West Trail. Following them were mountain men, prospectors, cattlemen, sodbusters, tracklayers and city builders. Today the pioneering traveler will find himself following in the path of Lewis and Clark, as well as traveling segments of these other famous trails.

In the traveler's search for vacation adventure on the Old West Trail, the buffalo head symbol leads him to historic sites, museums, cemeteries and saloons. State and national parks, monuments, national memorials and natural attractions are marked, too.

A City Circle Tour in North Platte, Neb., for example, will take the visitor to Fort Cody Trading Post, Buffalo Bill's Ranch and State Historical Park, a steam locomotive, a museum and Buffalo Bill's Wild West Arena. Each site is designated by the buffalo sign and the self-guided tour follows a complete circle, bringing the vacationer back to his original starting point.

In Montana, the Lewis and Clark Expedition traveled through the Great Falls area during the summer of 1805. The city of Great Falls, named by Lewis and Clark for the large falls of the Missouri River located nearby, offers a seven-stop City Circle Tour.

For more information on City and Area Circle Tours of the Old West Trail, contact the Old West Trail Foundation, P. O. Box 2554, Rapid City, S. D. 57709.

Full accommodations await travelers to land of perpetual sunshine

Every week throughout the year, an Air France jet lands at Raizet Airport, Pointe-a-Pitre, carrying vactioners in search of perpetual sunshine, sports, entertainment, relaxation and informality to one of Club Mediterranee's two vacation villages on the French island of Guadeloupe.

With a choice of two vacation styles, the Paris-based organization offers its members the chic, sophisticated Caravelle Hotel, or the more intimate and family-oriented Fort Royal.

Just two years ago, Club Mediterranee reopened the luxury Caravelle Hotel at Sainte Anne, subsequently adding a wing of comfortable, modern hotel rooms, all with air conditioning and private bath. Overlooking a huge, white sand beach, the elegant hotel welcomes an international cross-section of members seeking an invigorating but relaxing vacation.

By day and night, tennis and water polo are particularly popular activities at the Caravelle. A large, open-air bar-lounge-theater area provides an excellent center for cosmopolitans from North America and abroad to congregate each evening. While at the intimate Pig and Whistle Pub, midnight concerts by professional jazz musicians will top off the evening this winter.

WITH PLENTY OF SPACE to wander, bathe, or just enjoy conversation with a new-found friend or two, the Caravelle offers a pleasant blend of privacy and the club's traditional congeniality, combined with a wide choice of sports and evening activities. It's up to you to choose your own pace.

On Basse Terre, at the opposite wing of the Butterfly Island (as Guadeloupe is called), lies Fort Royal, Club Mediterranee's first Caribbean village. Fort Royal provides accommodations in large hotel rooms overlooking the sea, as well as in simple, conical cottages laced round the swimming pool.

This village also has the distinction of being the only club in the Western Hemisphere to contain a mini-club, with special facilities for children from 4 to 12 years.

At Fort Royal there's plenty to do for adults, too—a sparkling, new arts and crafts workshop with instruction, tennis courts, swimming in the sea or the pool, sailing, water-skiing, volleyball, and even basketball.

A new joint recreation center for both clubs is located at Pigeon Bay, midway between the Caravelle and Fort Royal. Named for the nearby offshore island (around which some of the finest diving in the Caribbean is found) the Pigeon Island complex contains complete facilities for scuba diving and snorkeling. There's also an outdoor restaurant where members can rest and enjoy a relaxing lunch between activities. Regular shuttle service is provided from both villages to the new center.

Whichever club style appeals to your taste, the formula remains the same: Full accommodations, three daily French and Creole meals with unlimited wine at lunch and dinner, use of all sports and recreation facilities with group instruction (slight extra charge for raw materials at arts and crafts workshop), and evening entertainment.

Transfers are provided in conjunction with the regular scheduled club group departures. The prepaid no-tipping-allowed vacation package leaves you free to enjoy your holiday to the fullest, whether you choose the sophistication of the Caravelle, or the intimacy and simplicity of Fort Royal.

Easter Seal honors area restaurant

Shakespeare's Inn, Redford Township, has a trophy for its work in the recent Coffee Day competition among restaurants to raise funds for the Wayne County Easter Seal Society.

The eatery was runner-up in the amount of money collected in the promotion.

Also participating in the event were Lerights's, Denny's, Rooster's Crow, Mr Steak of Westland, Merriman Drive In, Garden City and Daly Drive-In, Livonia.

What's fair when tipping?

By PETER GERAN

Tipping is not one of the major problems the traveler faces, but it is annoying. Nobody wants to be a sucker and overtip. On the other hand, you want to give the people what they are entitled to. But indeed, what do you owe the people who wait on you?

This is a fundamental question. Waiters, chambermaids, barbers and porters expect to be rewarded—"tipped." However, it is considered demeaning to drop some coins to a professional such as a skilled barber or waiter.

I remember well when in my homeland, after the socialist regime took over, signs appeared in hotels, restaurants and barbershops, "We are proud Socialist workers. We don't accept tips." Soon the signs were hidden and then disappeared.

The recent hotel workers strike in Florida centered mostly around the problem of tipping. The workers wanted a "compulsory" amount of tipping (though gratuities are essentially voluntary). They did not agree to the hotels' adding gratuities or service charges to the bill because they feared (probably rightfully) this would just drive the hotel cost up, make Florida non-competitive and they still might not get their fair shake.

THE FACT IS in Europe for many years it has become a custom to add a certain percentage to the hotel or restaurant bill: 15 per cent in France, 12½ per cent in Britain, 10 per cent in most other countries.

Advice: Take a look at your bill when you settle it and if a service charge has been added just leave some small change for the busboy.

In Europe it is customary to leave a couple of dollars for the front-desk people when you settle your bill. Just leave it with the cashier.

Whenever you are on a Modified American Plan (or Demi-Pension as it is called in Europe), which means that breakfast and dinner (or lunch in Europe) is included in your rate, just sign your meal-check to your room and the gratuities will be automatically charged to your account. I have seen waiters in certain countries demanding their tip, which is obviously not condoned by the management but they tried nevertheless.

IN THE United States gratuities are not charged to your bill (except at resort hotels), and in this case you tip 10 per cent at the restaurant or bar, or 15 per cent if the bill is small, and 50 cents a night for the chambermaid.

Mind you: Taxi drivers expect to be tipped 10-15 per cent of the fare. Skycaps, bellmen: 25 cents per bag. Longshoremen are theoretically paid by the steamship lines, but the savy traveler will give them a good tip (up to $1 a bag).

This brings us to cruise-tipping which is one of the most puzzling affairs in this contest. Lately steamship lines advise passengers to put about $5 a day into a common kitty and this will take care of all the tipping. This has two disadvantages. First of all, the crew is very unhappy because they fear that the key used to divide the loot is unfair to them and secondly because the social director holds the briefing about tipping toward the end of the cruise. In the meantime you might have already tipped the bartenders and deck stewards.

My advice (but don't tell anyone from the cruise line) is: Put into the kitty about 80 per cent of what they suggest—and they also emphasize that this is voluntary) and divide the rest between the cabin stewards and the dining-room stewards.

Just give it in secret to one of them in each team and you will see their faces light up.

I SUGGEST the following key if there is no stated tipping policy on the part of the cruise line. Figure $3-5 per day per person, a little less than double for couples and divide the total amount as follows: 40 per cent to the cabin stewards, 40 per cent to the dining-room stewards. Put it in an envelope the before-last day of a short cruise and midway through a long cruise and again at the end. Hand it to one of them; they work as teams.

Deck stewards should be tipped $2-$3 when they assign you your deckchair and again at the end of the cruise. About $10 for the maitre d'hotel (chief dining-room steward).

Never tip the purser. He is an executive. Bartenders, 10-15 per cent, according to the amount of the bill, each time in cash, or sign it specifically to the bill if you charge it to your cabin. Obviously special services and efforts should be rewarded accordingly, and all figures above apply to at least satisfactory service.

One more piece of advice: Even though it might be more difficult for you, it is always advisable to tip in local currency (and it is a must in socialist countries).

Sunday pops season opens with DSO at Meadow Brook

Meadow Brook's Sunday pops season opens June 26 with the Detroit Symphony orchestra providing a musical backdrop for composer Peter Schickele, whose fictitious "P. D. Q. Bach" will gently spoof classical symphonic music with such whimsies as Concerto for Piano versus Orchestra and—of all unlikely things—a Beethoven "Sports Cast."

THE DETROIT Symphony orchestra will also perform in four additional programs of the 10-week Sunday series. Its concert July 10, with Morton Gould conducting, will feature Miryo Park, 18-year-old pianist, winner of the 1976 Meadow Brook Young Artists' competition.

She began her piano studies at age four in her native Seoul, South Korea. Three years later, she played Hayden's Concerto in D Major with the Seoul Philharmonic Orchestra. Since moving to New York, she has continued her piano studies at Julliard School.

Jane Powell, Hollywood and Broadway star, appears with the Detroit Symphony orchestra July 24 in a program of Broadway hits.

Family pops will be the orchestra's focus July 31, with Karl Haas, classical music commentator, conducting.

The symphony orchestra's final 1977 festival apperance will feature soprano Roberta Peters in an evening of Viennese favorites Aug. 14.

INTERSPERSED among the symphony performances in the Sunday pops series will be a variety of attractions, including Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians (July 17), baritone Earl Wrightson and soprano Lois Hunt with the Detroit Concert Band, directed by Leonard B. Smith (Aug. 7), the country-westrn concert by Conway Twitty and Crystal Gayle (Aug. 21) and pianist-singer Bobby Short in a return appearance with musical reminiscences of songs by Cole Porter, George Gershwin, Noel Coward and "the rest of the gang" Aug. 28—finale of the 1977 Meadow Brook Festival season.

A reprise of last summer's bicentennial Fourth of July concert will be the 100-member cast of "Up with People" to usher in the Fourth with a concert July 3. A fireworks display will follow the performance of these enthusiastic young singrs and dancers.

All Meadow Brook Sunday pops conerts start at 7:30 p.m. Ticket and program information is available through a call th the festival office at (313) 377-3318.

Agatha's 'Mousetrap' continues to thrill 'em

By ANN SHAW
Special writer

Build a better mousetrap and the world will beat a path to your door. Agatha Christie's "Mousetrap" has kept them standing in line longer than any play in the history of modern London theater, and they're standing in line now, during Ron Deihl's current production at Botsford Inn in Farmington Hills.

Opening night of May 12 of the double-billed dinner and theater wasn't just sold out. It was oversold.

Opening night wasn't without some first night problems, not only for the semi-professional players but for the buffet, coffee and tea crew as well. Without doubt, the logistics of feeding nearly 200 persons in a dining room-turned-theater will have to be worked out—particularly the problems of acoustics and sight lines.

FOR A DINNER theater, a mystery is a good choice. There are few mechanical encumbrances and no need for an elaborate set. As in all mysteries, the stage isn't as important as the viewer's imagination to conjure up the scene of the murder, how fast the snowstorm is covering the tracks or just where the phone wires were cut.

"The Mousetrap"is filled with the usual suspense of a first rate Agatha Christie thriller. With a kid glove touch, she hands you a problem and points the finger at everyone. Finding out "who done it" keeps you on the edge of your seat. However, until Botsford changes the seating arrangement, so does the person's head in front of you.

The characters gather in Monkswell Manor Guest House in England, each looking for or running from something different in life. Most are irritated with each other. When the radio reports a strangling in London and the likelihood the suspect is headed their way, the motley crew is confronted with a situation of necessary dependence on, and yet inevitable suspicion of, each other.

Throughout, one hears or is reminded of the folk tune "Three Blind Mice." It's the twist of a mystery to turn songs learned as a child into clues of horror.

PRODUCER RON Deihl steals the showing with a winsome portrayal of the poor, lost, self-named Christopher Wren, whom you know could never be the killer.

Wren is the light-touch comic in the mystery whose "singularly neurotic, ill-mannered ways" are a constant irritation to the steely, former magistrate, Mrs. Boyle, a typically English brass-class dame. Judy Provasky, a Troy arts teacher, plays Mrs. Boyle with the strength needed to meet and balance Deihl's stage presence.

The intrigue at the stuffy English boarding house is enhanced by a romantic, mustachioed Italian who wholesales Swiss watches. You think he's harmless, but that accent seems suspicious. The swashbuckling Mrs. Paravincini is played skillfully by Ron Otulakowski, who last year directed and played in "1776" for the Livonia Arts Commission.

Other roles were played by Daniel J. Fish, John D. Elliott, Janen Brooks, Suzanne Fish and Joseph F. Lempicki.

"THE MOUSETRAP" is a well-written mystery and well-chosen for dinner theater. It's a good play. The food is. . . good. It's entertainment worth participating in, and by this time the first night problems are probably worked out.

The refurbished barn at the Botsford is a lovely place to spend an evening. The courtyards leading up to it are gracious and set the the mood for casual formality. It's a fun place to figure out where they all were the night of the murder.

Performances are Thursday and Sundays only. Thrusday's buffet begins at 7 p.m. with the performance at 8:30; Sunday buffet begins at 6 p.m. with a 7:30 curtain.

Tickets for buffet and play are $13.50; for the show alone, $7. Reservations must be made one week in advance.

HFCC Players stage 'Night Must Fall' soon

The Henry Ford Community College Players will present "Night Must Fall," written by Emlyn Williams.

The play will be staged May 20, 21 and 22 in Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford Playhouse, 15138 Beech Daly.

Performances times are 8:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and 7:30 p.m. on Sunday.

"Night Must Fall" is a thriller that takes place in England during the 1930s. It's the story of a bellboy, played by Kirk Nash of Redford, who takes it into his head to seduce a maid. The bellboy is then summoned to the Bramson cottage.

The plot thickens as murder enters the picture and Inspector Belsize is called in to solve the whodunnit mystery.

General admission to the production is $2 and tickets are available in the Henry Ford Student Center and at the door.

But where's the ranking?

Chiefs chew Romulus, 8-5

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

The first step in the long road to a state championship was completed by Plymouth Canton's baseball team Tuesday afternoon when the Chiefs won a qualifying game, 8-5, over Romulus.

The Chiefs now advance to pre-district action against Belleville in 10 days.

Canton also won a Western Six League battle against Northville on Monday, 9-4, to raise its conference record to 5-1 (not including Wednesday's battle against Churchill).

The Chiefs held a very impressive 17-2 overall record after the Romulus victory. That mark is the best any Canton baseball squad has compiled in the school's history.

But despite all the successes Canton has enjoyed this season, the Chiefs were surprisingly shut out of the first state rankings which were released Tuesday morning.

Canton's record is better than its 1975 squad, which was rated first in the state for the entire second half of the season.

Coach Fred Crissey was puzzled after finding out that his squad, the top team in Observerland, was left out of the rankings.

He said the reason was due to "an absence of communication" with the people who compile the ratings.

DESPITE THIS unfortunate happening, the Chiefs continue to win. Against Romulus, Craig Lee's bases loaded triple in the sixth inning broke open a tight game, giving Canton a comfortable 8-2 lead.

Starting pitcher Mark Perkins had trouble closing out Romulus in the final inning. But after three runs crossed the plate, he threw the final out to record his sixth victory against no defeats.

Canton opened a 2-0 lead in the second inning when John Young and Rob Mandle put together back-to-back doubles after Kevin Randazzo was issued a base-on-balls.

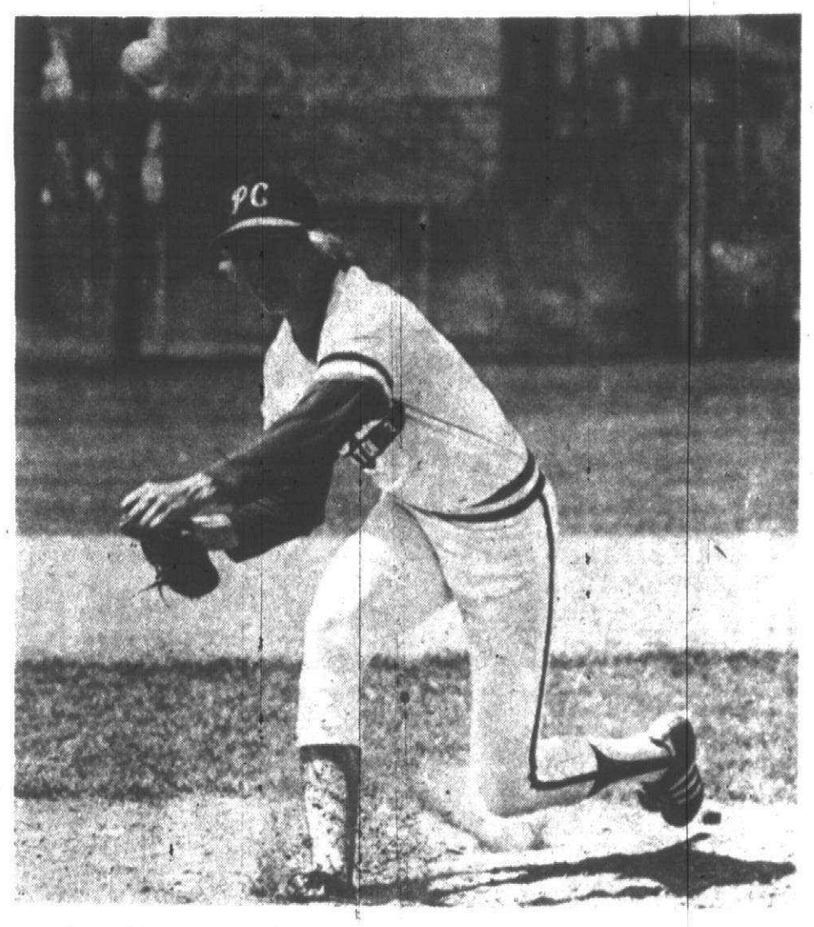

Romulus tied the score at 2-2 in the fourth, but the Chiefs scored two in the fifth and four more in the sixth to put the game away. Mandle led the nine-hit attack with two safeties.

Against Northville, the Chiefs opened up a 9-1 lead for hurler Doug Smith before Northville closed the gap with three meaningless runs in the final stanza.

Smith allowed only five hits in picking up his fourth victory. Canton led all the way after grabbing a quick 4-0 advantage in the first inning.

Steve Morman headed a 12-hit attack with two hits and three runs batted in. Morman hit a tremendous three-run homer that hit the rightfield fence at Central on one bounce, some 415 feet away.

Scott Collins, Randazzo, Mandle and Smith added two hits each.

Rocks clobber Panthers, 19-3

Plymouth Salem baseball coach Brian Gilles changed his line-up and the results were fantastic as the Rocks ended a four-game losing streak with a 19-3 demolishing of Redford Union Tuesday afternoon.

With the Rocks clearly out of Suburban Eight League contention, after two conference loses last week, Gilles chose to go with more juniors in his line up. The results included a 16-hit attack which gave junior Bruce Piper his first mound victory in his first varsity start of the season.

"The kids just hit the crap out of the ball," Gilles said in commenting about his squad's eighth victory against 11 defeats.

"We just couldn't make an out. We ripped the cover off the ball. It shows what a little hustle and enthusiasm can to for a club."

Salem wasn't as enthusiastic against Wayne Memorial Saturday afternoon as the Rocks dropped both ends of a non-league doubleheader, 3-2 and 3-1. Strong pitching performance by Bruce Gerish and Tom Chiatalis went down the drain as inconsistent hitting and sloppy mental errors cost the Rocks two ballgames.

But the Rocks had no problems against Redford Union as they raised their league record to 6-4. Piper went all the way on the mound, scattering 10 hits and striking out five. He allowed two runs in the second inning and one final tally in the seventh.

Salem scored six runs in each of the second, fourth and sixth innings plus a 19th run in the seventh.

Piper led the offensive charges with three hits. Joe Goodsir, Bob Waite, and Doug Rowe each added two safeties.

Tom Chiatalis roped a two-run homer in the second inning to start the onslaught. His shot went some 365 feet in the air down the leftfield line.

Rowe also belted a solo home run, and Dick Bradburn added a two-run triple. Billy Kral, John Marshal and Mike Stevens all chipped in with two-run singles.

Grabs Windsor trophy

Canton batters breeze in tourney

It was only supposed to be a fun event—where the Plymouth Canton baseball players could take a trip to Windsor and play a couple of ball games.

That's was the original intent of coach Fred Crissey when his team was invited to the Winsdor Assumption tournament last weekend.

Well, the Chiefs enjoyed themselves to the fullest—winning the four-team tourney and picking up a trophy for their efforts.

Canton beat an excellent Catholic Central team, 7-2, in the opening round and came back to shutout the host team from Assumption, 2-0, to win the event. Assumption had beaten University of Detroit High School in the first round to advance to the finals.

The sweep of these games raised Canton's overall record to 15-2 for the season.

"We had a super team effort on Saturday," said Canton coach Fred Crissey. "We were rockin' and stompin'."

Crissey explained that his squad hasn't played a bad game defensively since it lost to Waterford Mott one week ago. He said this was a definite key to winning the tourney.

"Every kid played again," Crissey said. "We've never gone with less than all our kids in a doubleheader.

"We had a good time in Windsor—that's what winning is all about."

IN THE TITLE game, a two-run single by Doug Smith in the fourth inning was all the scoring the Chiefs needed. Smith led Canton's five-hit attack with two safeties.

Rob Mandle started the rally with a walk. He moved to second on a single by Jeff Campbell. Both runners advanced one base on a passed ball before Smith knocked them home.

Sophomore Brian James hurled a strong game, going all the way for his third varsity victory of the year. He allowed nine hits, struck out four and walked one.

In the first contest, Steve Morman picked up his third victory of the year with a seven hitter against a 14-2 Catholic Central squad. Morman allowed single runs in the second and sixth innings. He struck out eight and didn't walk a batter.

The Chiefs jumped on Central in the opening inning for three runs. Canton added two more in the second stanza and two final tallies in the sixth to ice the game away.

Kevin Randazzo led the Chiefs' offensive attack with two hits and two runs batted in.

Salem girl thinclads lose to Redford Union

By MICHAEL BLEDSOE

Plymouth Salem's girls' track team lost to a strong Redford Union team 98½-37½ last Tuesday.

"Redford Union won because they came prepared for the meet and we were not prepared," said Salem coach Scott Kurtz.

Jennifer Devenney placed fourth in the two mile with a 15:32 time. Kathy Zielke finished second in the 880 with a 2:32.5 clocking and Kathy Sample finished a disappointing fourth hitting the line at 2:37.5. Sarah Marks took a fourth in the mile with a 6:25.

"Kathy Zielke ran a terrific race in the 880," said Kurtz. "She missed first by only half a second."

Polly Richards placed third in the 100-yard dash with the time of :12.4. Anne Meixner followed in fourth. JoAnn Langkabel ran :16.3 for a first in the hurdles, followed by Erin Lucas who came in first.

"JoAnn really ran well today," said Kurtz. "She didn't let the heat bother her and she really came through."

Sue Jenkins placed second in the 440-yard dash running :64.3. Cindi Leveille followed in third with the same time. Langkabel placed first in the 220-yard dash with a :27.5. In th long jump, Lisa Morris placed seco nd with a 15.8¼ leap. Langkabel followed in third.

"Polly Richards also ran an excellent race," said Kurtz. "She's really begun to come along."

Erin Lucas jumped to a third in the high jump, leaping four feet six inches. Julie Prchlik scored a third in the shotput with a heave of 29.6½. Julie Prchlik also scored a second in the discus, throwing it 82 feet 7¾ inches. Sharon Radionoff followed Prchlik finishing fourth with a 80 feet 8¼ inch throw.

"One of the purposes of todays meet was to get our times down before the regionals," said Kurtz "But I hope this is not a reflection of the regionals, because everyone just pooped out."

Chiefs stomp Northville, 13-6

Plymouth Canton's softball team got back to its winning ways Monday afternoon with a convincing 13-6 victory over Northville. This Western Six League win ended the Chiefs two-game skid.

Canton's overall record is 3-4 for the season. The Chiefs currently hold onto third place in the conference standings with a 3-3 record. Waterford Mott holds the top stop in the Western-6 with a perfect 6-0 mark (not including yesterday's games).

Canton got off to a slow start, allowing four Northville runs in the bottom of the first inning. But the Chiefs bounced back with six runs in the second stanza to grab the lead for good.

Kathy Sochacki started the rally with a base-on-balls. Evie Pasek followed with a single and Lucy Howe walked to load the bases.

Canton's first run scored when Kathie Peck was safe on an error. Laura Butler quickly tied the score when her double cleared the bases, sending home three runs.

Pam Schpani and Kim Zoladz drew base-on-balls later in the inning and both scored on wild pitches to put the Chiefs ahead 6-4.

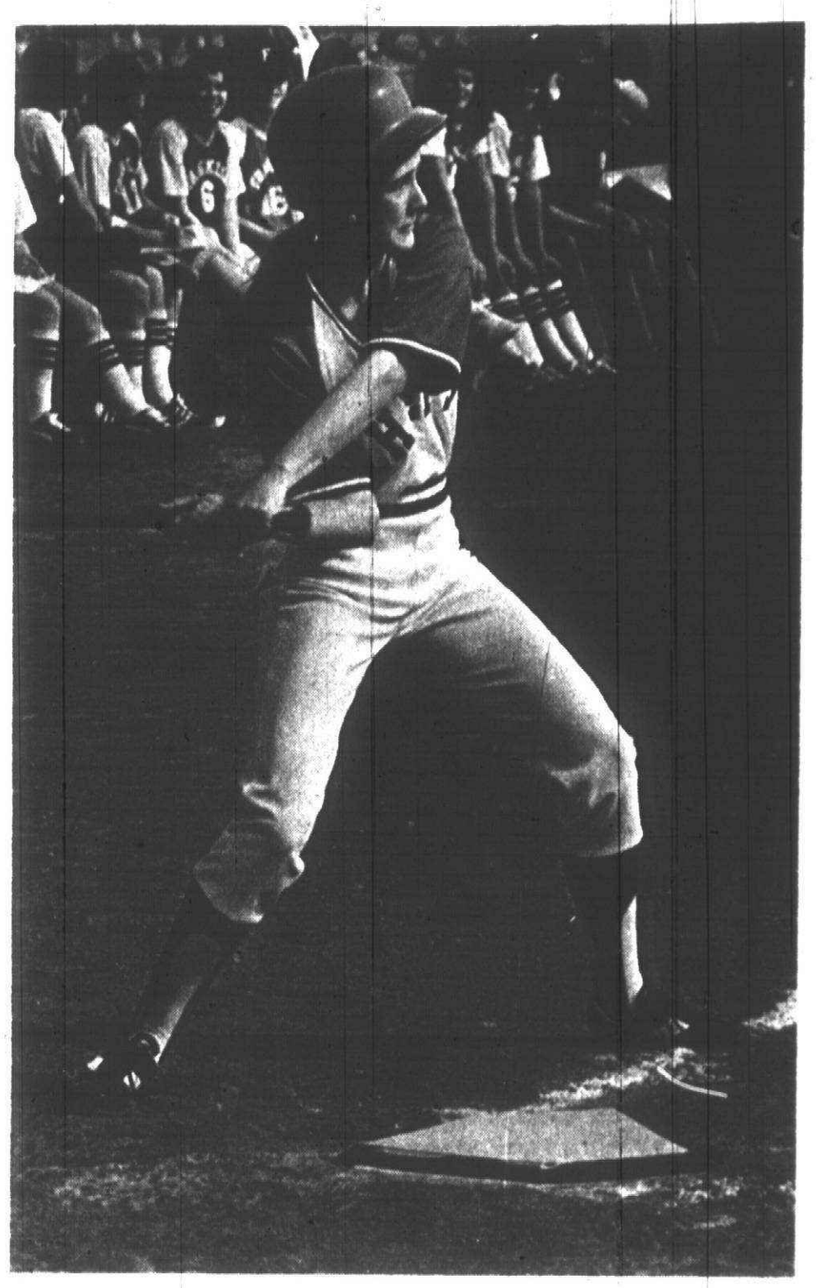

Northville scored single runs in the third and fourth innings, but the Chiefs put the game away with four runs in the third stanza and three more tallies in the sixth.

"We played well after the first inning," said Canton coach Joan Ryan. "We settled down and hit the ball well in this game."

The Chiefs finished the game with 15 hits, three coming off Butler's bat. Schipani, Pasek and Howe each added two safeties.

Howe was the winning pitcher, hurling all seven innings for the victory. She was helped by two great defensive plays which resulted in double plays.

Shortstop Kathie Peck caught identical line drives in two different innings and forced runners out on second and third base to end potential Northville rallys.

Golfers set for regionals

Plymouth's two high school girls' golf teams will play Friday in the regional elimination round of the state tournament, both being assigned to the 20-team field that will play 18 holes over the par-73 layout of the Romeo Golf and Country Club in Macomb County.

Neither Salem's Rocks nor Canton's Chiefs ever have played a match over the 6,323-yard Romeo course which has a par of 37 for the front nine and 36 on the back. The course features a trio of holes measuring upwards of 500 yards.

This is one of seven girls' golf regionals being held across Michigan this weekend and only the top three teams in each will advance to the state championship finals Saturday, June 4 at East Lansing. Each school is limited to four contestants, whose combined 18-hole scores count as the team total to determine the final standings.

The only exception is that the regional medalist, if not a member of one of the three teams qualifying for East Lansing, also gets to go to the state finals to bid for the individual championship.

THE 18 RIVALS against whom the Plymouth teams will be playing at Romeo include these schools:

Birmingham Seaholm, Birmingham Groves, Birmingham Marian, Bloomfield Hills Andover, Armada, Clarkston, Clawson, Davidson, Detroit St. Benedictine, Garden City East, Grand Blanc, Lake Orion, New Baltimore-Anchor Bay, Novi, Oxford, Pontiac Central, Rochester Adams and Royal Oak Dondero.

At the present time, 120 Michigan high schools have girls' golf programs.

WATERS, WHO IS a member of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's golf committee, said this week that at a recent meeting in Lansing the committee voted to permit girls' teams to enter five contestants in regional and state tournaments, starting next season. The four best scores will be counted.

"Girls' golf is growing so rapidly among Michigan schools that we are trying to find added ways to get more people involved in playing in major tournaments," said Waters. "This will help and so will the fact that next year we undoubtedly will have to add more regional sites."

Waters, whose Salem boys' team won the state championship three years ago, said another important committee decision was to permit handicapped golfers to play on high school teams with the use of electric carts.

Still under consideration is a proposal to stabilize the site of the boys' championship tournament, perhaps alternating annually between the University of Michigan and Michigan State courses.

Boys' golf is conducted in the fall, with the girls playing their schedules in the spring.

Volleyball camp, headed by Tom Teeters, is available to beginning boys and girls from June 20-23 and for advanced players June 27-30. Participants will meet from 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tuition is $20.

The swimming camp, under instructor Keith Wright, is open to swimmers with previous competitive swimming experience. Swimmers have their choice of a June 20-July 1 camp or a July 11-22 camp.

Persons age 13 and up swim from 7:30-10 a.m. Age 12 and younger meet at 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Lessons require a $40 fee for the first session and $35 for each additional session.

More information on any of the sport camps may be obtained by contacting Dr. Marvin Gans, Schoolcraft athletic director, at 591-6400, ext. 403.

Rock runners improve

The Plymouth Salem boys track team gave one of its best performances of the season last week in its 95-62 Suburban Eight League loss to Allen Park.

The Rocks, coached by Gary Balconi, did another great job in the field events but lost the meet in the running races. Salem was ahead 38-16 when the field events were finished.

Bob Dasher broke his own school record in the discus throw with a 150 feet two-inch toss. Jerry Ottenhoff placed third at 118-2. Dasher also won the shot put event with a 48-2½-foot throw. Sophomore Rich Hewlett continued to improve with a fourth-place toss of 39-7 feet.

The Rocks swept three places in the long jump as Rich Hanchu, Curt Lewis and Mike Skone placed first, second and fourth respectively. Hanchu's leap was over 20 feet. Skone and Hanchu also placed first and second in the high jump. Skone won the event with a six-foot leap.

Salem swept the top three places in the pole vault. Mark Koma vaulted 13 feet. Dennis Ogden placed second with a 12-5 leap, and Scott Kappler was third at 12 feet.

Salem's Walt White continued to sparkle in both the one-mile and two-mile races with first place finishes in both events.

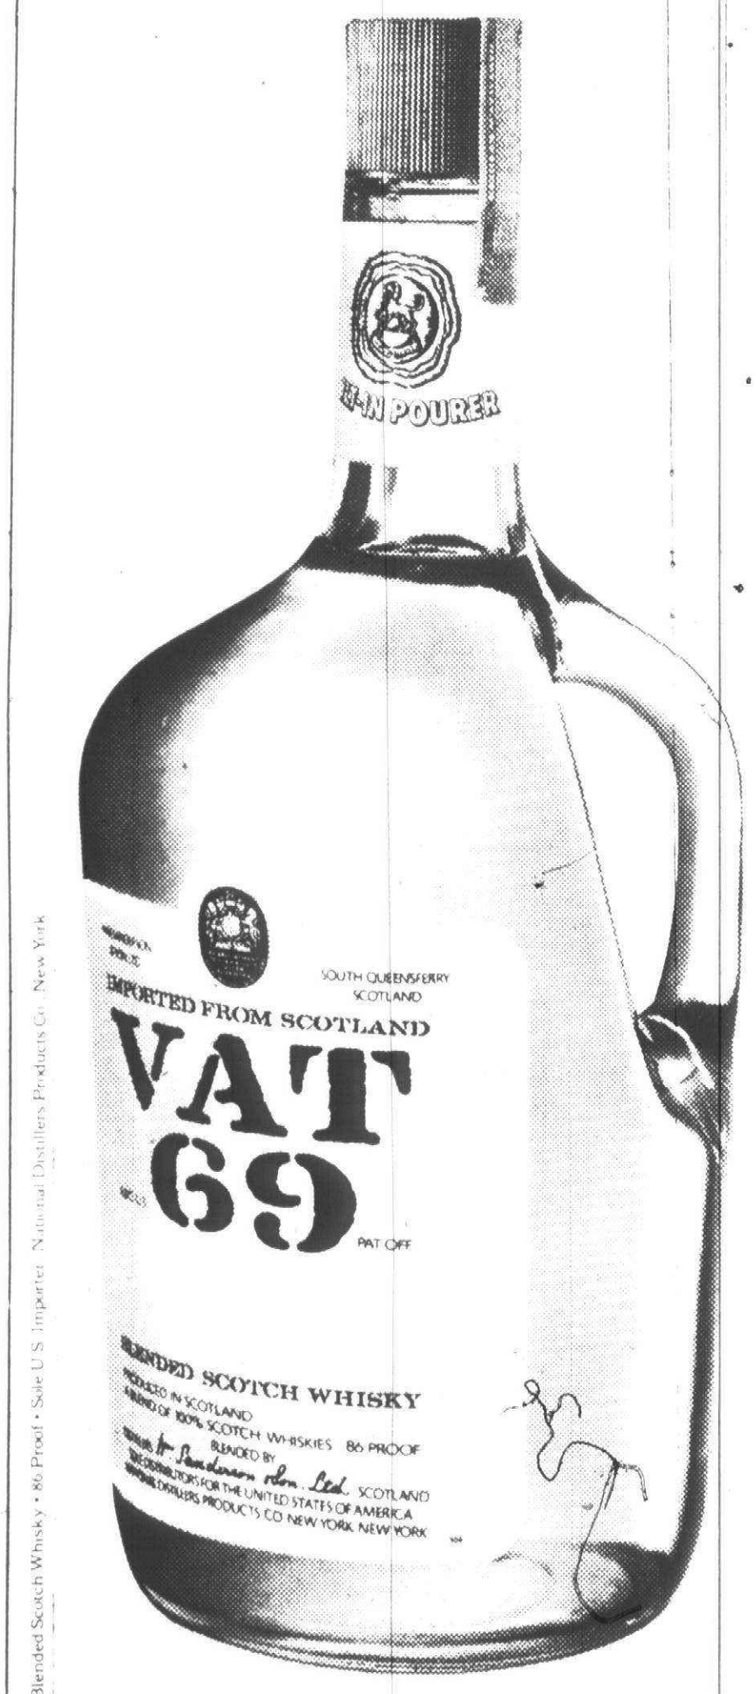

Salem also won two of the three relays. The 440-yard relay combination of Jerry Kachenko, Gregg Davis, Lewis and Jerry Basierbe won the event with a :46.6 clocking. Two other Salem relay combinations also beat Allen Park's top foursome. Salem's second and third combinations repesented all freshmen and sophomore thinclads.

Tom Kindree, Davis, Lewis and Basierbe clocked 1:35.1 in the 880-yard relay to win that event.

Kachenko, a senior, won the 100-yard sprint in :10.6. Mike Christie and Doug Agnew placed first and second respectively in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Jerry Basierbe was the other Salem first-place winner in the 220-yard sprint with a :23.7 timing.

Leadership tells the story

The results of this past weekend's baseball action truely tells the story of how both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem boys squads have performed this season.

The Chiefs continued to win at an amazing clip, sweeping two more games in non-league tournament action in Windsor, Ontario.

Canton's double victory won for the Chiefs a tourney trophy and raised their overall mark to 15-2.

Salem, after losing two important second-round Suburban Eight League games during the week, proceded to drop a non-league doubleheader to Wayne Memorial, 3-2 and 3-1.

The Rocks own a 7-11 record going into Tuesday's action and are clearly out of Sub-8 title contention.

WHY IS THERE such a difference in two ball clubs which seemed fairly even at the beginning of the season?

If one looks for physical reasons why Canton has been so much more successful than Salem, I guess it's easy to point to consistency.

The Chiefs have had strong pitching performances all year. Even when Canton's offense was lacking a little at the plate, this club somehow has come up with a key hit in a clutch situation to win ballgames.

The Rocks have had a terrible time with getting any consistency from their pitching staff. But when the pitchers have turned in good performances, against Wayne for example, then that key base hit would be missing or a stupid error in base running or fielding would waste the good mound work.

LOOKING AT BOTH teams from an mental or attitudinal standpoint, it's easy to see why Canton is a winner and Salem is not.

No one on the Rocks' squad has proven to be a good leader. Because of this, that important element of pride is missing.

But looking at the Chiefs, it's evident that every ball player wants to do his best to become a winner.

Everybody on Canton's team has been a leader in his own way.

At the beginning of the season, it was the potent hitting of the first five batters in the line-up.

Toward mid-season, the latter part of that line up picked up the offensive slack when the top hitters started to cool off.

When the offensive attack wasn't there at all, one of the pitchers would come through with a great performance.

Everyone on Canton's team has done his part this season to make the squad a winner. Because of their leadership, it's easy to see the winning pride present on this club.

When a fan goes to watch a Canton game, one can just sense that the winning edge is on the Chiefs side from the beginning. The confidence is there, the pride is there, and the results are almost always in Canton's favor.

Massey takes 2d in tourney

Massey Cadillac, Plymouth's defending champion in the men's slow-pitch softball league, got off to another roaring start this season with a second-place finish in the Thompson Tournament held last weekend in Northville.

Massey forced the tournament champions, Heart Precision, to the final game of the double elimination event before bowing out.

Massey won its first two games on Friday and Saturday to advance as one of the top three teams in the winner's bracket for Sunday's action. But the Plymouth squad lost its first game to the eventual champions, 12-7, Sunday morning.

Massey then had to fight its way through the loser's bracket of the 12-team tourney—winning four more games that same day before falling in the finals.

Massey, coached by Jim Gignac, showed the most power of all the teams at the tournament as the Plymouth squad pumped out 30 home runs in its eight games.

Massey clouted eight homers each in two of its contest, and finished the tourney with a team batting average of .502.

Leading that home run barrage was Dave Braud with eight. Cal Glomski and Tim Abramski each poked out five homers, Lou Bryant added four, and Ron Griffin, A.J. Vaughn and Pete Woodard chipped in with two each.

Mainsville gains 1st letter

Plymouth's Bill Mainsville recently was awarded his first varsity letter in gymnastics competition for Central Michigan University.

Mainsville, a 1974 graduate of Plymouth High, is a junior at Central.

Both net squads dumped in league

Both Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton tennis teams found the going rugged Monday afternoon as each net squad lost respective league matches.

The Rocks lost 5-2 to Allen Park, but showed improvement in their play. The last time these two squads met, Allen Park whitewashed Salem 7-0.

The Chiefs lost to potential Western Six League champions from Northville, 7-0, ending a three-game win streak.

Second doubles Craig Stevens and Ed Thomas continued their fine play for Salem, winning one of the Allen Park matches, 6-3, 6-4.

Third doubles Jeff Theodore and Matt Schroeder also won by the same score.

Canton coach Jim Hayes was pleased with his squads' performance against powerful Northville. Three of the sets played went to the tie breaker with Northville winning each decision.

The double combinations of Tim Wise and Don Perchard, along with Paul Ardanowski and Doug Hetu, each lost their matches by the identical scores of 2-6, 6-7. Third doubles Gregg Stratton and Len Weber also performed well, falling 5-7, 4-6.

Fourth singles Chris Davio also lost a close match, 6-7, 3-6.

Regionals everywhere

It's regional time for all tennis players, golfers and thinclads this weekend as Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem High School teams compete with hopes for making it to the state finals.

Tennis is the big sport in the Plymouth-Canton community this Friday and Saturday as the Rock and Chief netters co-host the annual regional tourney at the Centennial Park courts on Canton Center Road, south of Joy Road.

This competition begins at 9 a.m. Friday and continues Saturday as some of the best high school tennis comes to the area.

Both boys and girls track teams see regionla action on Saturday.

Canton's Veronica Gray heads the list of Plymouth-Canton area state tournament hopefuls. Gray was the lone runner to qualify for state action last season.

Both girls golf teams travel to Romeo for competition on Saturday. Salem has a potential foursome to qualify for the state finals.

Even though the regular bowling season has closed, many of the area pin spillers are making their presence felt in the many tournaments now under way throughout the midwest.

In the most prestigious of all, Jeri Ritter, captain of the Bonanza team in the ladies all-star leagues, finished third in the Queens' Classic at Milwaukee.

This is the biggest event of the year in the Women's International Bowling Congress and Dana Stewart, of California, took the title home with her.

But Ritter was not without honor. To gain her third place, she upset two of the top entries—Betty Morris, a former bowler of the year, and Jane Rutherford.

Mary Mohacsi also gained a bit of glory, too. She knocked out Judy Soutar, one of the favorites.

All told, the Detroit area had nine bowlers who reached the final round.

TOM McKAY, secretary of the Greater Detroit Bowling Association, has joined the list of champions. Teaming with Leo Scantamburlo, the combination won both the actual and handicap doubles in the men's state tournament that closed last Sunday at Muskegon.

HOW WOULD YOU like the experience of bowling a match with Earl Anthony, the all-time money winner on the professional tour?

You can have the chance this month when the Pacific coast sharpshooter returns to Thunderbowl in Allen Park to meet the winner of the eliminations now being conducted for the league bowlers throughout the area.

ONE OF THE RICHEST rizes of the season in bowling could be headed toward Michigan.

Gary Mitchell, a 27-year-old man from Marine City is leading the Peterson Classic in Chicago with an eight-game count of 1704.

If he goes all the way through June and survives the playoffs at the finish, he stands to come home with $43,000.

THE ALL-STAR mixed league that proved so popular last summer will open its second season at Taylor Lanes May 25 with a line-up that is considered to be much stronger than last summer.

The league will bowl every Wednesday night at 8 p.m. and in a different establishment each week.

IF PRESENT PLANS materialize, western Wayne County will have two strong classics next season.

Monte Oncza, a keen enthusiast of the game is making headway with his plans for a 20-team league at Westland Bowl. This league will mix both men's and women's teams.

The management at Super Bowl in Canton Township also is planning a mixed league—but at a lower average level. According to the format, the league will have a maximum handicap of 850. This puts it just below the all-star rating.

DRC schedules Michigan Mile

Even though harness racing currently holds center stage at the Detroit Race Course, the schedule for major thoroughbred stakes later this summer and fall has been released.

The $100,000 added Michigan Mile has been slated for Sept. 3 and heads a track stakes program offering more than $700,000 in purse monies.

Opening a 119-day thoroughbred race meeting July 19, the DRC will inaugurate its stake lineup that very afternoon with the $15,000 Curtains Up Stake, announced Tom Dorsey, director of racing.

The opener will be for three year olds over a six-furlong distance.

The 29th running of the Michigan Mile will lead off a rich Labor Day weekend at DRC. The $50,000 Frontier Handicap for Michigan-breds will follow Sept. 5, said Dorsey.

The prestigious 'Mile' is at a mile and one eighth, while the Frontier is over a distance of a mile and a sixteenth.

The series of Detroit Distance Series events, another annual fixture, will culminate with a $20,000 championship clash on DRC's closing date, Dec. 3, at a marathon distance of two miles.

Chiefs mercy Willow Run

The fourth victory in seven games went to coach Cathy Himes' first-year Plymouth Canton junior varsity softball team when the Chiefs beat Willow Run Monday on a mercy ruling, 16-1.

The mercy rule states that if a team is ahead by 10 runs or more after five innings, the game is called.

The Chiefs took advantage of the slow pitches coming their way from Willow Run and took an 11-0 lead going into the second inning.

Center fielder Maureen Morahan and first baseman Cincy Stevens contributed home runs to the Chief victory, while Canton pitcher Robin Radoye threw six strikeouts in the five innings of play.

Willow Run was able to score on the Chiefs' only error for the day when the ball was overthrown to second.

"Our hits were extremely hard compared to Willow Run's and got past their infield for a lot of bases," said Himes.

"I'm very pleased with the entire team's performance and with the pitching of Radoye. We're starting to play like a team and it's showing in the long run."

Mott creams Chiefs, 32-21

A 3-3 season record now belongs to the Plymouth Canton junior varsity softball team after losing to Waterford Mott last Wednesday, 32-21.

Chief coach Cathy Himes said Robin Radole did a good job on the pitcher's mound, but that Mott's good hits came at just the right time in the game.

During the first inning, Canton came up with six runs to Mott's seven. In the bottom of the second, the Waterford girls added 10 more runs and Canton only two, the Chiefs never getting back into contention.

"Waterford's team was older and more experienced and they were able to hit into our weak spots," said Himes.

Canton goes up against Willow Run this afternoon (Monday) at home starting at 4 p.m. and will be on the road Tuesday for a 4 p.m game at Redford Union.

DETOUR: BLOCK PARTY IN PROGRESS

There was a time a family reunion meant a large group of neighbors getting together for a celebration. Not so anymore, when families rarely live in the same town, let alone in the same block. Maybe this is why so many neighborhoods across the country are turning themselves into a sort of community family complete with an annual bash that brings everyone together for one big outdoor party.

Whether they're called block parties, development get-togethers, road association picnics, neighborhood fairs or building cookouts, this event helps to bridge the gap. Strangers often become friends and any warm day is turned into a special day to talk about all year—until it's time to plan the next party.

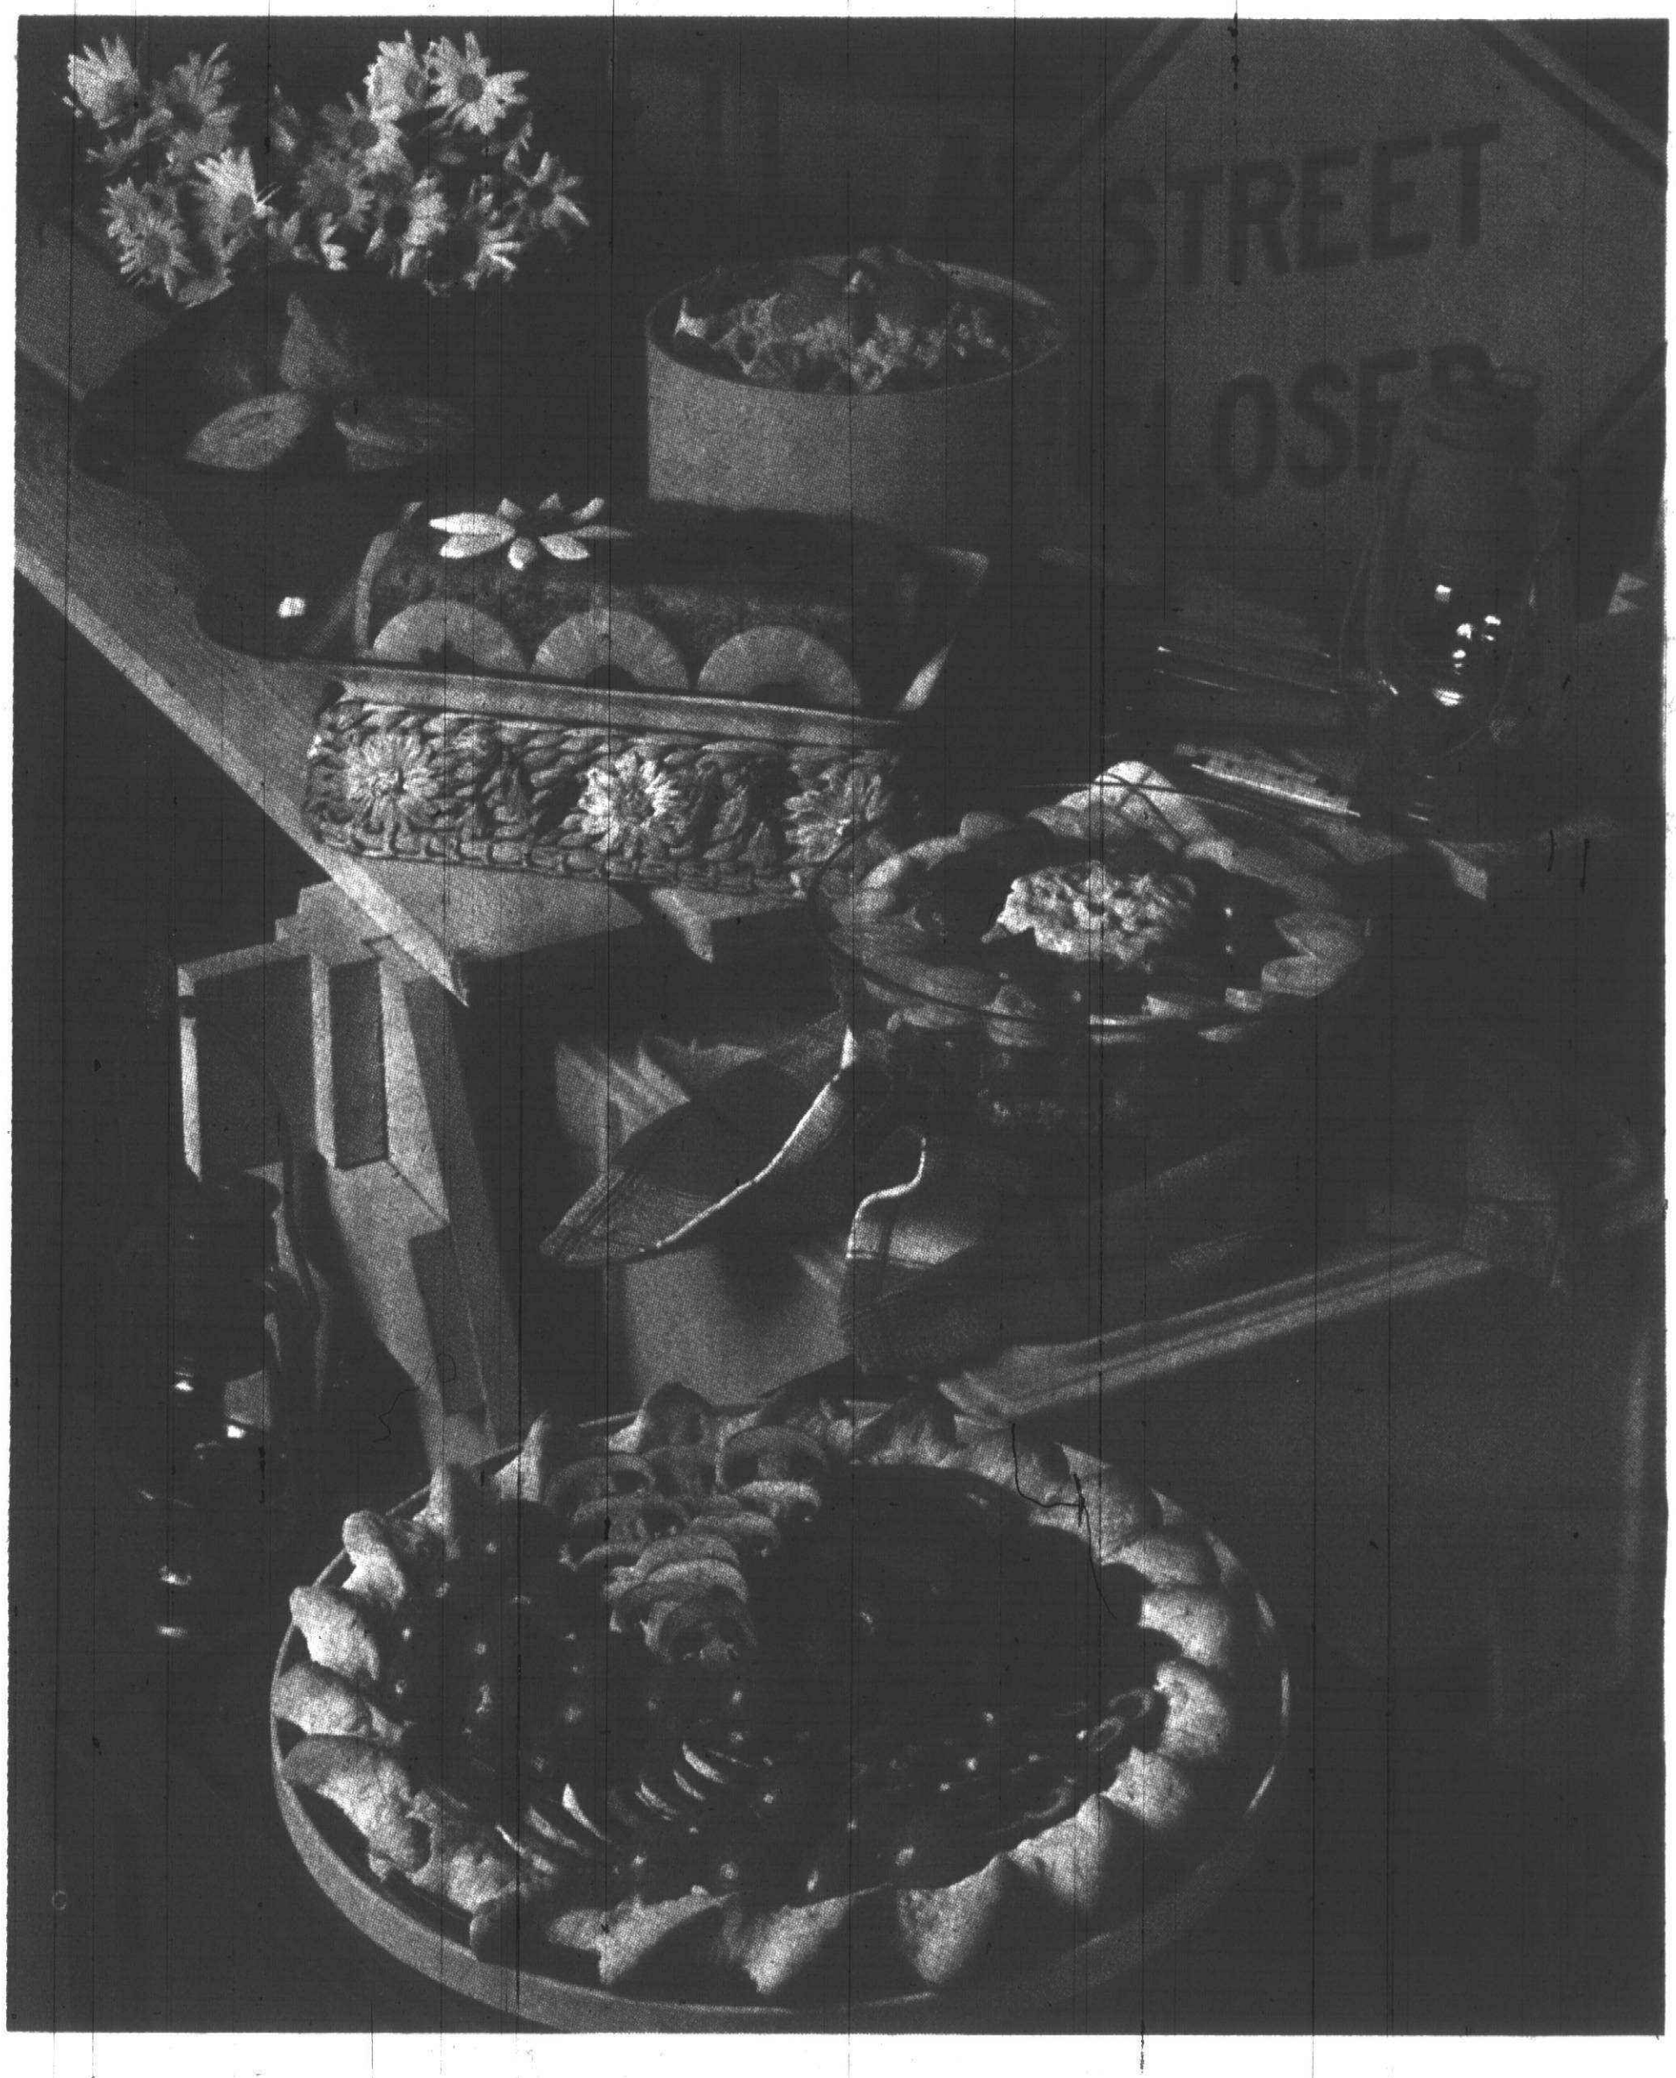

Organizing a neighborhood party can be as simple as making a few phone calls to assign responsibility for the salads, main course and dessert. Some groups, however, organize months in advance and begin with a meeting to determine where the party should be held, how to finance the venture and who should take charge of food, games and decorations.

If plans call for a large meeting, contact the local fire or police department and check on regulations that cover closing a street to traffic.

When every detail is finally checked off the list, be sure that food, one of the most important ingredients for any party's success, is not forgotten. If outdoor grills are available, roast or boil corn and let everyone bring barbecue fare.

Plan a few surprises like vegetable platter pie, a new twist on the Italian favorite featuring vegetables and pepperoni on top of an unusual cheese layer.

If your group enjoys sharing recipes, a pot luck buffet might be the answer for the big day. Have everyone bring a main course, salad or vegetable dish. Include some new recipes like layered summer salad, chicken rice salad, Mexican muffins and pineapple ham loaf. Then collect all of the recipes several weeks before the big event and put together a block party cookbook and hand out copies at the picnic.

LAYERED SUMMER SALAD

4 cups torn lettuce
1 medium red onion, sliced
2 cups sliced green pepper
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 pint cherry tomatoes, halved
4 cups sliced summer squash
3/4 cup real mayonnaise
3 tablespoons horseradish
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1/16 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt

In a large, deep bowl, layer lettuce, onion, green pepper and cheese. Add a ring of tomatoes; top with a ring of squash. In medium bowl, stir together mayonnaise, horseradish, lemon juice, Worcestershire, hot pepper sauce and garlic salt until smooth. Spoon dressing into center; surround with remaining tomatoes. Cover and refrigerate four to six hours or overnight. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

CHICKEN RICE SALAD

1/3 cup thawed orange juice concentrate
2 tablespoons sugar
1/3 cup corn oil
2 tablespoons white vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 cups cooked, diced chicken
4 cups cooked rice
1 can (13 oz.) mandarin orange sections, drained

In large bowl, stir together orange juice concentrate, sugar, corn oil, vinegar, salt and mustard until blended. Stir in mayonnaise until smooth. Add chicken, rice and oranges; toss until well mixed. Cover and chill. Makes six to eight servings.

MEXICAN MUFFINS

1/2 cup finely shredded Cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped canned green chilies
1 package (12 oz.) corn muffin mix
1/3 cup real mayonnaise
1 egg
1/3 cup milk

Grease nine (2½ by 1¾ inch) muffin cups. Gently toss together cheese, onion and chilies. In medium bowl, stir together muffin mix, mayonnaise, egg and milk until just moistened. Put one heaping tablespoon batter into the bottom of each muffin cup. Sprinkle each with one tablespoon cheese mixture; top each with two tablespoons remaining muffin mixture. Bake in 350 degree oven 15 to 17 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool 10 minutes before removing from pans. Makes nine muffins.

VEGETABLE PLATTER PIE

2 cups buttermilk baking mix
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon corn oil
1 1/2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
1/2 cup real mayonnaise
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1 1/2 teaspoons dried basil leaves
1/2 pint cherry tomatoes, halved
1/4 pound sliced pepperoni
1 medium green pepper, sliced, blanched
1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
1/2 cup stuffed green olives, sliced

In medium bowl, stir together baking mix, water and corn oil until just moistened. Roll out and fit in 12-inch pizza pan, with one-half inch overhang. Flute edge. Bake in 450 dgree oven 10 minutes, or until lightly browned. Stir together mozzarella, mayonnaise, Parmesan, garlic powder and basil. Spread on baked crust. Arrange tomatoes, pepperoni, green pepper, mushrooms and olives alternately on top of cheese. Bake in 350 degree oven 20 minutes or until cheese is melted. If necessary cover edges of crust with aluminium foil to prevent browning. Makes six servings.

PINEAPPLE HAM LOAF

3 3/4 cups cooked ground ham (about 1 lb.)
1/3 cup minced onion
1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1 cup real mayonnaise
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 teaspoons dry mustard
1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple, drained
2 tablespoons light brown sugar

In large bowl, stir together ham, onion, celery mayonnaise, bread crumbs, parsley, egg and mustard until well mixed. In nine-by-five-by-three inch loaf pan, stir together pineapple and brown sugar. Pat gently to cover bottom. Turn in ham mixture. Spread to level top. Bake in 350 degree oven one hour or until firm. Cool 15 minutes before removing from pan. If desired, garnish with halved pineapple slices. Serve warm or cold. Makes six servings.

Frozen vegies are cheaper

Although some people think that frozen vegetables are more expensive than fresh vegetables, the truth is that at least seven of the most popular vegetables are cheaper frozen than fresh. In spite of the price misconceptions about foods, a survey of more than 100 grocery industry leaders that frozen food would jump to eight per cent of grocery store sales by the year 2000, compared with five per cent today.

And at the same time canned goods are expected to drop one per cent and meat three per cent, with fresh produce staying the same.

The president of a major national food processor says the frozen food industry made a major mistake in the past by hiding the dollars-and-cents benefits of its products while highlighting the speed and ease of preparation.

He doubts that the supermarket shopper is looking for highly exoctic or high value added food. On the other hand, he predicts continued growth for new nationality foods and formulated products, provided they are of good quality and meet a need, and for low calorie and nutritionally balanced foods.

That's because homemakers today don't want foods that exist for novelty alone, but prefer easy-to-prepare dishes that are nutritionally sound and economically priced.

Chinese invented it

Ice cream's a treat

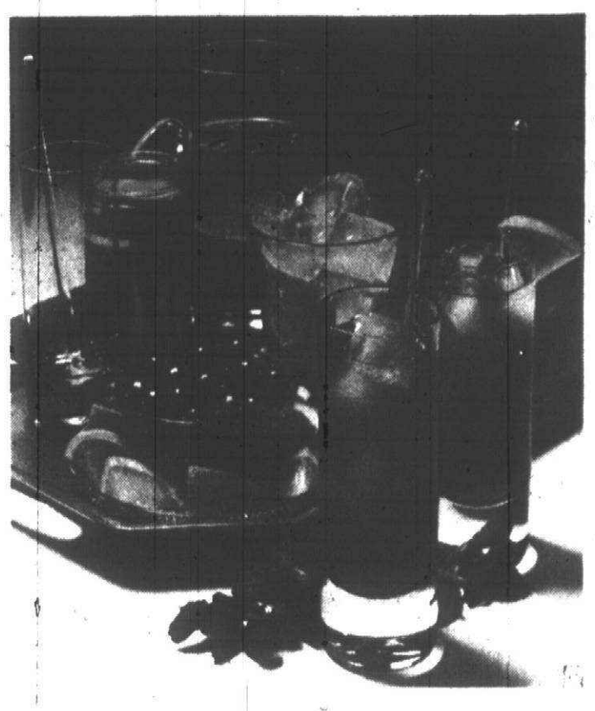

Once upon a time water ices were a delicacy reserved only for emperors. In the first century A. D., the Roman emperor Nero would send sprinters to fetch snow from nearby mountains. To the snow were added fruit juices and flavorings. Result: A frozen ice much as we have today.

With the fall of Rome, the secret of making this confection was lost. But in the 13th century, Marco Polo brought back a recipe from China, with milk substituted for snow. From then on, ice cream enjoyed a vast popularity. It was brought to the American colonies in the 17th century; George Washington had two ice cream freezers installed at his home in Mt. Vernon.

The Italians enjoy delicious water ices—the Italian ices we eat here in America—called granita. And the Bavarians love their combinations of egg whites and custard—another kind of local iced dessert.

Of course, ice cream is still American's favorite iced dessert—we now eat more than 750 million gallons of it every year.

Summer is ice tea season

Think of the moment of any life-style changing discovery. The Earl of Sandwhich's first two-slice creation . . . Alexander Graham Bell's opening words . . . or the very first tumbler of iced tea. The last event happened on record-breaking hot day in 1904 at the World's Fair in St. Louis.

An enterprising young tea vendor took his strong, steaming brew, added a few chunks of ice and a great big pinch of American ingenuity to create this country's favorite cooler.

Progress marches on. Today, thirst-quenching iced tea is second nature to us all, come sumertime or anytime. And now instead of just ordinary tea, there are the specially flavored ice tea instants and mixes.

This sun-season, why not gather the clan for a "keep-your-cool" party? Set out a trayful of glasses, jars of flavored tea, water and ice for a serve-yourself gathering.

Since one of the joys of this tea is that it's virtually calorie-free, let family members and guests alike have the choice of adding what they want: sugar, honey or sweetner.

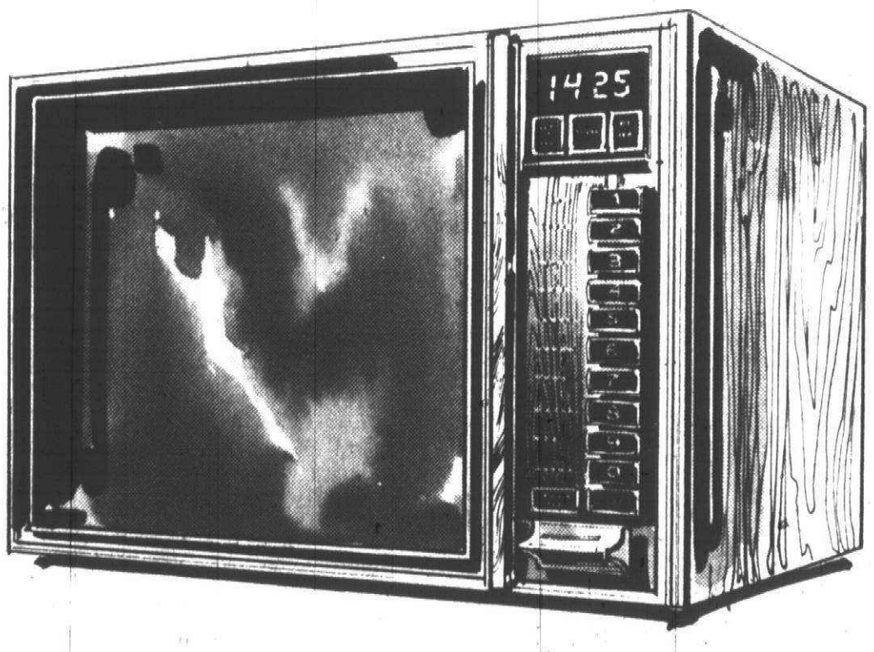

Grownups might try a sprig of fresh mint or a wedge of lemon for a garnish—while youngsters can have the fun of dropping a bright red cherry.

And for the growing number of campers, boaters and backpackers of this land, there's unsweetened iced tea mix.

Zucchini adds zest to pasta

Italians like the vegetable and pasta combinations, and so do we. We've developed an entire main course by filling vegetables with canned pastas. Zucchini are tasty, stuffed with special new canned macaroni product which has its own meatballs.

Onions are cooked with spaghetti and meatballs in them. For the salad, scoop out tomatoes and fill with crisp cabbage and carrot cole slaw.

SPAGHETTI AND MEATBALLS AND STUFFED ONIONS

4 medium onions

one-foruth cup chopped zucchini

2 tbsp. chopped green pepper

1 tbsp. butter or margarine

1 15 oz. can spaghetti and meatballs

Gulp! We dare you to try Indian's chili

It's chili, fair and warmer for newly-crowned world champion chili cook Rufus Valdez, a Ute Indian. He was victorious in the 10th annual world championship chili cookoff at Rosamond, Calif.

Valdez, from Gallup, N.M., represented the Indian Nations in defeating chili champs from 33 states and other nations.

Here is his recipe:

4 pounds of flank beef

2 pounds of center-cut pork chops

1 tsp. of cumin

1 tsp. of fresh chopped oregano

2 pieces of garlic sections

3 fresh white onions chopped

4 medium size tomatoes chopped

½ cup chopped celery

4 cans of 7 oz. chili salsa

4 roasted green chilis (Anaheim variety)

1 tbsp. of mild, New Mexico ground chili powder

1 tbsp. of medium, New Mexico ground chili powder

1 tbsp. of hot, New Mexico ground chili powder

One half of flank stead is coarse ground. One half of flank steak is chopped into three-eighths inch pieces, all pork is chopped one-fourth inch. Cook steak and pork separately for 45 minutes each after braising. Then mix meat together, add cumin, cook together for one-half hour. Take two quart sauce pan and saute onions and celery together for 20 minutes.

Add tomatoes and salasa to the onions and celery and cook for one-half hour. Add chili powder, roasted chilis and garlic and cook for 30 minutes.

Take all those ingredients and stir into meat, stirring slowly. Cook all together for one to 1½ hours. Length of time depends on consistency so meat doesn't break down. The last half hour should be just under a simmer. Lot should be stirred every 10 minutes. Makes 1½ gallons.

New tostada is neither fish nor fowl

For new flavor dimension to the usual meat and cheese Mexican tostada, try this version featuring sardines.

Besides offering something tasty, the sardine tostada provides lots of nutrition. One three-ounce serving of sardines contributes 40 per cent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance to protein.

That same serving also provides almost one-third of the recommended amount of calcium, phosphorus and niacin.

Sardine tostada is easy on the meal planner as well as the budget maker, because low-cost sardines wait on the kitchen shelf.

Taste buds, other senses make us drool

Did you know you can taste substance you haven't eaten, or that seeing a color affects your sense of taste?

Your taste buds are so alert to bitterness you can actually "taste" a bitter antibiotic injection in your arm.

The coloring in your food also affects your subjective taste sensation. Test subjects who were served purple potatoes in the dark had no objection until the lights went on.

People served purple potatoes in the dark had no objections until the lights went on.

The variety and spice in your eating and drinking depend on 9,000 tiny cones on your tongue. On each of these cones are up to 245 taste buds. On each bud is a tiny cell which can send electrical impulses to your brain when a substance touches your tongue.

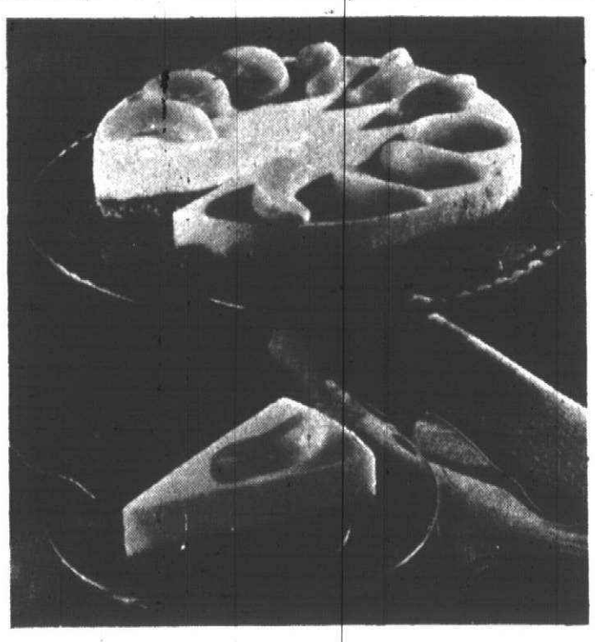

Your age affects your tastemanship. As you grow older, the number of buds decrease. Taste buds are at their peak efficiency for people in their 20s.

Countries, too, it appears, can change tastes over time. In the United States, for instance, before prohibition, Americans drank more Irish whiskey than any other type, and there were more than 400 labels on the market.

After repeal, however, Americans found that Irish whiskey was just too strong and heady, and the Irish distiller too headstrong himself to change his product to cater to American tastes.

There are four different types of taste buds: the sweet-sensing buds are front and center on your tongue, sour ones run along the sides in front, the salty buds over the sides in back and the bitter-tasters are found back and center.

It all seems to be very tastefully arranged.

Say cheese! Here's a fast cheesecake

For the cook who's intimidated by tedious cooking chores on a summer's day this cheesecake recipe eliminates the most time consuming preparation tasks.

The basic ingredients come in a package that contains an envelope of graham cracker crumbs and another envelope of ingredients. A package of peach flavored gelatin is added to the cheese filling to achieve a lighter texture. Freshly ground cinnamon added to the crumb crust is a welcome exotic touch.

The recipe fits an eight-inch spring form pan (that's a pan with the clasp on the side that releases sides from bottom), but an eight-inch layer cake pan can also be used, if the spring form is not available.

This is a smooth, light textured cheesecake which is refrigerated instead of baked. It tastes shyly of peaches with a lovely accent of cinnamon and will serve eight to 10 persons.

PEACH CHEESE CAKE

1 package (3 oz.) of peach gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 package (11 oz.) cheese cake mix
3 tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
one-third cup melted margarine
1 can (8¾ oz.) peach slices
Cold milk

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Set aside to cool.

Combine graham cracker crumbs, sugar, cinnamon and melted margarine. Press mixture firmly against bottom of an eight-inch spring form pan. Refrigerate 15 minutes.

Drain peach slices, reserving syrup. Add enough cold milk to syrup to make 1½ cups liquid. Pour liquid into small deep mixing bowl. Add cheese cake filling and beat at low speed with electric mixer or rotary beater until blended.

Beat at medium speed three minutes longer. Immediately add cooled gelatin, beating to blend well. Pour into prepared pan. Chill until firm.

Garnish top of cake with peach slices. Run a spatula around edge of cake before removing from pan. Makes one eight-inch cake.

Mothers' milk helps breast cancer study

While Irene Hebert of Mt. Clemens, is weaning her eight-month old daughter, Maya, she's also helping cancer researchers explore the reasons why some women develop breast cancer and others do not.

How? Mrs. Hebert visits the Michigan Cancer Foundation (MCF) once every other week to donate a sample of her milk to the MCF's "Weaning Mothers Program." Certain cells from her milk are grown in a culture medium and used by MCF scientists in several breast cancer research studies.

Because she is weaning, Mrs. Hebert's milk is rich in normal, mammary, epithelial cells, and that is why it's so valuable to researchers seeking more mothers like her.

BY STUDYING the difference between normal epithelial cells and breast cancer cells, scientists are able to study the mechanisms by which normal cells change to breast cancer cells.

When a woman is weaning, her milk becomes rich in mammary epithelial cells and the quality of the cells is ideal for laboratory use.

"The kind of woman we are interested in is a woman who has been giving her baby solids for about three months, a woman who is down to two breast feedings a day, or one who has just stopped nursing," said Ruth Rich, coordinator of the MCF's "Weaning Mothers Program."

Ms. Rich explained that the collection procedure uses an electric breast pump that gently collects the milk into a bottle.

"The procedure is completely painless," she added, "and all the mother feels is the normal amount of sucking associated with nursing."

A woman can donate just once or as often as she wishes, and the MCF will provide transportation to its headquarters located in the Meyer L. Prentis Cancer Center, 110 E. Warren (corner John R), Detroit, for those women who want it.

The entire procedure takes about two hours from the time a woman is picked up until she is returned to her home.

SUPPLIES OF WEANING mothers' milk, which are vital to the MCF's continued research, are alarmingly low. In order to continue the research, new supplies of weaning fluid are needed on a continuing basis, and donors are being sought.

"Our studies address themselves to the causes, treatment and eventually the prevention of breast cancer," said Dr. Philip Furmanski, chief of the MCF's cell biology laboratory.
