Bradley hunts down ambulance run debts

Canton's treasury has been fattened by about $3,000 since last April, when Treasurer Anne Bradley first set out to recoup overdue rescue run bills.

The delinquent payments stem from as far back as 1971 when the fire department transported traffic accident and drug overdose victims to emergency rooms in area hospitals

Although Mrs. Bradley and Constable Irene Murphy have collected about $3,000 from more than 100 persons so far, Mrs. Bradley says the township will probably never receive another $3,000 in delinquent rescue run payments.

CANTON residents receive the ambulance service for free; non-residents are billed $35 for the service. Before 1975, when the rates were changed, non-residents were charged only $25 for an ambulance run.

According to Mrs. Bradley, the township tried once before to collect the delinquent payments, but only a small percentage was collected.

"I just thought I'd try once again," she said.
After receiving approval from Supervisor Harold Stein and Clerk John Flodin, Mrs. Bradley hired Mrs. Murphy for the collection job. The constable receives $7.50 for each delinquent payment she collects.

Almost all of the persons owing money have been contacted, but only about half have paid up.

"Some of the people have been really snotty," Mrs. Murphy said, "but most of them say they forgot and they're sorry. A lot of the people thought their insurance covered the ambulance service.

Mrs. Bradley says the township is not trying to collect delinquent payments from the three or four families who lost relatives in accidents that occured in Canton over the last few

"I don't think the heartbreak you might be giving someone would be worth it-especially after a year or two have elapsed," she said.

From now on, township officials will bill non-residents for ambulance runs shortly after the service was performed, she said. A second billing statement will be mailed two weeks after the first, if the first bill isn't

The treasurer called the drive to recoup some of the delinquent rescue run payments a success.

"That's $3,000 the township wouldn't have if we hadn't tried to collect

State act isn't saving farmland

Space Preservation Act was originally designed to preserve farmland and to take the pressure off farmers to sell their land to developers and speculators by providing them with a number of tax advantages.

But three years after the act was signed into law, it's not working, according to Robert Ward, Eastern Michigan University geographer and advocate of land use planning.

"Farmers are not flocking to the program in droves," said Ward. "Only one and one-half to two per cent of the state's 80,000 farmers are participating in the program, with only one and one-half to two percent program.

According to a recent study by Ward entitled "Farmland Preservation Through Tax Benefits: the Michigan Experience", following World War II Michigan had 190,000 farms that comprised 18,400,000 acres, or about half of all the land in the state.

Thirty-one years later, statistics indicate that Michigan now has 69,000 farms with a total of 11,900,000 acres.

The reasons for the drastic decline in agricultural land are numerous according to Ward.

"THE MAIN REASON for the decline in agriculture is the increased taxes drive most of the guys out of the market. Special assessment taxes levied for sewer lines, water, roads and education-coupled with the inflationary costs of fertilizer and equipment-put a lot of farmers out of busi-

Ward is particularly disappointed in Public Act 116—designed to preserve farmlands and open spaces.

But Brown's bill hasn't been passed yet and Ward explained what he felt is wrong with the existing Act 116.

Under the act, Michigan farmers transfer development rights to their land to the state for a minimum of 10

Farmers would be less inclined to sell to developers and speculators who offer high sums based on the potential value of the land.

The most frequent complaint by farmers," said Ward, "is the lengthliness of the agreement they have to sign with the state.

'The fact that farmers are encouraged to commit their land to 10 years of agricultural use by the state is often viewed in an economic context. They are businessmen who realize the history of land values in their immediate vicinity and frequently express uncertainty about the future feasibility of their farm operation.

According to Ward, the major enticements of Public Act 116 are two-

"First, farmers are not vulnerable to special assessments for such urban amenities as sewer and water mains on land covered by the development rights agreement.

'The second tax advantage focuses credit against farmer's state income taxes. This credit is for the amount of property taxes on the land and structures used in the farming operation. including the homestead, that exceeds seven per cent of the household income from all sources. If this is greater than the state income tax, the difference is refunded to them without in-

The future for the preservation of farmlands and open spaces in Michigan isn't bright. Ward said.

"Realistic projections show staggering statistics. If the trend of land use pertaining to Michigan farms is projected in straight line fashion, only 2,000,000 acres of crop land would remain by the year 2000.

Computers creep into township hall Computer printouts of water bills, taxes and monthly budget reports may soon be ready at the flick of a switch at Canton Township Hall. Canton board members Tuesday endorsed what one accountant called a "creeping commitment to computers" when they agreed to lease computer terminals for township hall by a 5-2 vote. Trustees Robert Myers and Mrian Schwall voted no.

Under the $750-a-month lease agreement with the accounting firm of Seidman & Seidman, the terminals will hook up to the company's main computer system in Rochester. After six months or a year, township officials may decide to buy their own terminals for an estimated $41,000.

CURRENTLY, township officials contract various firms to calculate water bills, tax assessments and payroll on computers. Total cost of the contracts is $1,000 a month, according to Robert Wiar of Seidman & Seidman who recently completed a study of township office procedures

Under the new computer system, the bills and assessments will be calculated at township hall. Month-bymonth breakdowns of the township budget or itemized expenses could be presented to township board members

> "At that time it had sound but no picture. I figured if I couldn't get it to work, I wasn't out of that much

The dog warden promptly took the set to Rick's TV on Ford Road and asked if it could be repaired.

"I told Rick to take his time with the repair," Swalley said. "He did all the research in getting the parts and returned the set to me last week in working order.

"The bill was only $71."

RICK MADEAU, a Plymouth resident who owns the TV shop, said it took six months to find the right parts. He found most of them from a dealer in Detroit.

"We had to replace four old deflecting capacitors and some worn-out bearings," the repairman said.

"As far as the TV is concerned, it should work for a long time. The picture tube is in good shape. "It's a remarkable TV

Madeau explained that the Firestone was one of the first "Electrostatic Deflection TVs" ever made The first TV was made in 1946.

"The TV was probably worth around $185 when first bought." Madeau said it was hard to estimate what the Firestone was worth today to an antique collector—but he

"Hey, if something had been stolen, no one would have even known what it was," she said. "You keep buying new equipment. How do you even know what's covered by insurance without an inventory list?"

Canton resident Shirley Hamilton was hired about a month ago to conduct the inventory. Mrs. Hamilton, whe performed inventory work for Holiday Inn, has been recording serial numbers of typewriters, desks and handcuffs ever since.

According to Mrs. Hamilton, all township equipment, except supplies for the DPW and the new fire station, has already been recorded.

"This is something that's never been done before," said Mrs. Bradley. "So it's quite a job."

Kids like horses—
farm's
ok

Go out Ford Road far enough and the cornfields start outnumbering the new subdivisions. A mile or so more and there's only the corn, with farmers on tractors in the fields baling hay under a July sun and high-rising smoky dust left by cars down dirt

Right about there you'll find the Children's Farm and Riding School. It's a strange farm. They don't grow anything, so there's pasture surrounded by the corn other farmers planted. But every summer morning at 8:30 children from five to 16 go there to learn about a world that won't be around much longer.

The subdivisions get closer every year, but the kids-from places like Garden City, Westland, Livonia, Canton Township, Redford Township and Plymouth—just have a good time and don't seem to notice it.

Most of them particularly like to ride horses-and most of them never have before-but Jessica Handley, 8, of Garden City, has a different kind of favorite thing.

Minuay, July 10, 1311

"I like cleaning out the pigs," she said on a recent afternoon, her T-shirt stained an odd color. "I like getting dirty. Oh, well. Anyway, most of the other kids like riding horses.

Jennifer Easton, 5, and her brother Marc, 8, both do. Marc talked excitedly about riding-especially about riding bareback with another kid on the same horse.

His sister interrupted: "I got to stand up on Mr. Marts' shoulders.'

"What a luck out," Marc replied. Jack Marts and a staff of one instructor for every 10 pupils run the farm. They keep jackasses and chickens and calves, as well as the horses and pigs. There's 41 acres on the farm, and in all that space what they attempt to achieve, Marts says, is "perfection."

'We demand perfection. We demand imagination and initiative. It's are," he said.

not like the schools. Every kid can hold the horse's reins right, and we demand that they do.

Marts, who was once fired by the Plymouth school system-he says a court has recently found in his favor and ordered the system to pay six years back salary to him-has some unusual ideas about education.

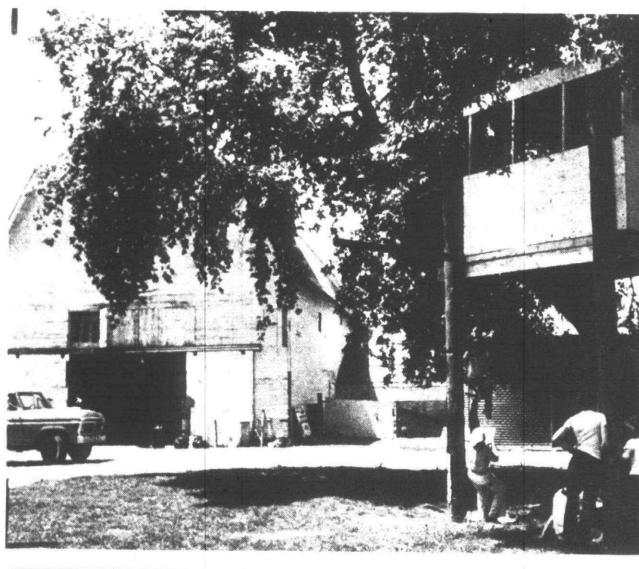

"Teachers," he says, "are dumb as hell." And "not every kid needs to learn to read or write, not today with television and college graduates who can't find work."

His farm seems like a nice place.

Michelle Lamarato, 11, of Canton Township, seems to think so. She used her "birthday money" to pay the $55 weekly tuition.

And at the farm, about 40 minutes from downtown Detroit, David Hustud, 8, of Westland, has a good time

"I like how soft the horses' noses

The Children's Farm and Riding School in Canton Township draws children aged 5 to 16 from all around western Wayne County it its week-long program of riding lessons and-for the younger kids-just getting to know the animals. Above, a group comes back from the corral, and, at lower left, a participant in the weekly horse show gives a demonstration while others wait their turn.

The only opposition is big business, which, according to Ms. O'Reilly, wants to protect its dominant relationship with federal regulatory agencies. And Ms. O'Reilly says business opponents are pulling out every stop; spending record amounts of time and money to kill the consumer agency its opposition, the CFA has started a "nickel campaign," reflecting the annual cost per citizen for the operation of a consumer champion in Washing-

The nickel campaign published a target list last week of the names of 78 congressmen who have not publicly supported the consumer bill. The CFA is asking consumers to send a nickel to their Congressmen as a symbolic vote in favor of the bill.

The campaign has already in-TO COUNTER the expenditures of fluenced a pair of representatives from Tennessee and Florida, who both declared their support of the measure after their offices were barraged with nickels.

Included on the target list is U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), who. Ms. O'Reilly said, should receive more than 500 nickels this week. She is working with local volunteers through Saturday in front of Plymouth shopping centers urging persons to write Pursell.

Phase two of the nickel campaign will begin next week and focus on a different set of representatives, including William Broomfield (R-West Bloomfield).

THE REASON WHY representatives are not supporting the consumer bill is because they are responding to the needs of major campaign contributors, not constituents, according to Ms. O'Reilly. The problem is particularly severe with freshmen and sophomore congressmen, like Pursell, who have never dealt with an issue before involving such pressure from big busiPursell could not be reached for

Ms. O'Reilly says she expects the bill to win handily in the senate. She says U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle (D-Mich.) supports the measure, while U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin (R-Mich.) "is hopeless."

Other supporters of the consumer agency are Ralph Nader, Common Cause, the United Auto Workers and the National Council of Senior Citizens. Opponents include Exxon, General Motors, Proctor & Gamble, Gulf Oil and the U.S. Chamber of Com-

The purpose of the proposed consumer legislation is to present a consumer viewpoint in crucial cases coming before federal regulatory agencies such as the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Because the cost of representing one party at a typcial FDA hearing runs around $40,000. Ms. O'Reilly says such consumer representation has so far been unaffordable.

The consumer agency will not be vested with the power to ban any products, but only to be a legal advocate for the consumer interest. Ms. O'Reilly said. It also would represent consumer concerns about high prices, harmful products and dishonest business practices.

There appears to be widespread public support for this legislation. A recent Louis Harris poll revealed an overwhelming 63 per cent majority in favor of the bill. Ms. O'Reilly says she expects the bill to reach the house floor before the August recess.

Unions hope to rise up in the South

By STEVE BARNABY

The Michigan employment picture could improve if a bill in Congress and supported by labor unions is passed, according to Farmington Hills resident Aldo Vagnozzi, editor of the Michigan AFL-CIO News.

Vagnozzi made his statement after it was announced that President Jimmy Carter and organized labor unions have agreed on a labor law reform package designed to strengthen union organizing efforts.

While designed primarily to boost union organization efforts in the south, the legislation would aid Michigan workers in the long run because businesses would be less compelled to migrate south in search of non-union workers, according to Vagnozzi.

He estimates thousands of Michigan workers have lost jobs in recent years because of businesses fleeing to the south in search of less expensive labor

But it will be a tough getting the bill through Congress, because business groups are planning to fight the legislation

"Even in Michigan, employers hang tough," says Vagnozzi. "In the building trades, firms are brought in from the south to do jobs."

THE LEGISLATION, to be introduced by Sen. Harrison Williams D-N.J.) and U.S. Rep. Frank Thompson(D-N.J.) would speed up the process that allows unions to represent workers. Presently, union representation is gained by signing on 30-50 per cent of the workers (depending on the trade) and then petitioning the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) to conduct a secret bailot.

The problem, as it now exists, says Vagnozzi, is that businesses presently can drag out the process in court. The delays can last for years.

"In some cases the process has been delayed for so long that many of the original employees have left the company or have been fired for union activity," he says.

"It's our feeling that the intent of the Wagner Act, which gives workers a right to chose a union, has been

The Wagner Act was instituted to give workers the right to join a union. Under the reform plan, the NLRB would be forced to decide whether a union has qualified for an election within a given time. If the organization is uncontested it would be within 15 days and 75 days if the organizing effort was disputed. One of the provisions in the reform act would increase the size of the NLRB from five to seven members and allow two members to hear a case and make a recommendation to the entire board.

"As it is now, all five members must hear a case and if one or two mmbers are missing, the process is slowed down," said Vagnozzi.

Other stipulations in the package would grant back pay of an employe who has been fired illegally for engaging in union activities and would deny federal contracts to businesses which obstruct valid union organization at-

A prime example of how an employer abuses labor organization attempts is the J.P. Stevens textile factory located in the south.

"Once a union has won an election, there is no compulsion for the company to bargain. At the J.P. Stevens Company an election was won more than a year ago. But all Stevens has to do is go through the facade of bargaining," says Vagnozzi.

A company has a right to appeal each issue in a contract, he said. Although pleased that the coaltion between the President and unions has been worked out, the labor organizations didn't get everything they wanted from Carter. He refused to support union wishes to repeal state right-towork laws which allow states to ban union shops (shops where all the employes must be union workers). The unions also abandoned a proposal which would have permitted unions to be certified as bargaining agents without an election if a majority of workers involved signed representation cards.

Although defeated on these two points the AFL-CIO has raised $800,000 in extra union assessments to form a task force to lobby in Washing-

Supporters hope for passage in 1978.

Plymouthites more content than Cantonites

By PATRICK TOUHEY

People in the Plymouth-Canton community are fairly satisfied with where they live, but in most cases have a few things they'd like to see changed tone the quality of life better.

In a random sample of residents of all three municipalities, the Observer found out that residents of Plymouth and Plymouth Township were generally more positive about their communities than Canton people. Those who lived in Canton liked it, but had more things that irked them.

In Plymouth, people were especially pleased by the smallness and old-fashioned nature of the city. People in that the political

First day of school ruins her vacation

Editor

This letter is directed to the Plymouth School Board. I would like to send my best wishes to the school board member whose beautiful idea it was to start children on the traditional schedule back to school three days before the Labor Day weekend.

DIAN HARRISON

Congratulations. You have successfully succeeded in messing up the only two weeks vacation my family gets. I would imagine you have managed to mess up hundreds of other families in the same way

It is very apparent that no one in the school board or anyone in their families suffers with hay fever allergies. If they did they would realize that thousands of Michigan families specifically plan their vacations for as late in August as possible to go north in order to avoid the miserable discomforts of hay fever. I am sure there must be other people in this community who just happen to enjoy taking their vacation, or even just a long weekend, over the Labor Day hol-

The concern of the school board for the students is highly commendable. Giving the students an extra four-day weekend in October, and another in mid-February, so they can spend an extra 16 hours a weekend watching the boob-tube is not (commendable). I have spoken with a number of people and have yet to meet one parent who is happy about the early starting time of school.

I am disappointed in our school board for two reasons. First, I feel the school board has an obligation to be concerned with the problems of the parents. These same parents pay the taxes which support the whole system and deserve some consideration. It is this obligation the board seems to choose to ignore.

Secondly, I am disappointed with the way in which the school board handled the announcement of the early starting time. In May, when the newspapers announced the calendar for the vear-round schools, the school board allowed the newspapers to print the calendar for the traditional (schedule) school as starting September 7.

I can't help but feel that the school board purposely postponed announcing the early starting date of the tradiwere closed for the summer. I believe they felt this would help avoid a confrontation with parents. I sincerely hope I am wrong about that

The Stroller

What's this? Sleeping on job?

By W. W. EDGAR

In a recent edition of the daily sheet Dr. Frederick J. Evans, a learned psychologist from the University of Pennsylvania, offered the opinion that napping on the job could be beneficial to both employe and employer. Eventually, according to the doctor, napping breaks would take their place alongside the ever-popular coffee breaks.

Well it may be break for a fellow

Well, it may be brash for a fellow who never finished his first year in high school to take umbrage with the learned scholar from his home state, but if Dr. Evans had ever worked in any industrial shops, he would have found that napping on the job can be dangerous and costly.

As a matter of fact, a fellow employee catching 40 winks on the job caused The Stroller to change the course of his entire career and turned him against a trade for which he had served a long, hard apprenticeship.

It happened in the wee hours of the morning in a dimly lit shop on the banks of the Lehigh River where The Stroller was serving as night foreman.

When he reported for work on this particular day, The Stroller was told that there was a big job to be done and it had to be finished by daylight because a freight car was waiting to take it to its destination.

This particular job was a 24-foot piece of nickel steel and was about eight inches in diameter and worth a goodly sum.

The cutting and polishing was all that was left and it seemed like a simple task when he turned it over to one of the top lathe hands on the night shift.

THINGS SEEMED to be going well as the night droned along and everything seemed well with the world when The Stroller finished a tour of the shop and sat down at his shabby looking desk in a corner of the shop.

Until one has worked the night shift in one of these shops, he has no idea of the feeling one gets as daybreak approaches and the night's toil is finished. It is an eerie feeling and the droning of the machines and motors makes one feel almost depressed waiting for the shift to end.

It was during one of these periods when The Stroller's career took a

It was about 4 a.m. when his top machine hand walked into the little cubby hole office and, with chin down to his chest, remarked, "I just spoiled that job".

"You just what?" The Stroller asked as though he had been hearing things.

"I just spoiled that job," the top machine hand repeated.

"What happened?" The Stroller asked.

"I dozed off a bit." came the answer, "and didn't notice that the cutting tool became loose and dug into the metal fairly deep."

Sure enough. On inspection the cutting tool had dug a long spiral into the costly metal.

A hurried survey of the sight, another look at the blue prints, and measuring the depth of the spiral was con-spoiled. It certainly wouldn't be shipped that morning as planned.

Having often dozed off himself when he was operating machines, The Stroller could not find fault with his top machine hand. He gave him another job to do.

But on the way back to his little office, there in the corner of the shop, The Stroller got to thinking. Regardless of the fact that he had nothing to do with the spoiling of the job, as the foreman on duty, he would have to take the blame from the forces higher

THEN CAME the great decision. The Stroller very calmly gathered up his tools and placed them neatly in his well-worn tool box. Once they were all in place, he lifted the window facing the river and tossed the tool box into the stream with a splash. At it hit the water The Stroller vowed that never again, so long as he lived, would he ever place a foot inside of a machine shop.

And he hasn't.
But the incident of long ago is sufficient evidence that napping on the job can be dangerous—and costly. Can you imagine what would happen if the pilot of the plane in which you were riding across the ocean took 40 winks and missed approaching dan-

No, Dr. Evans, it is doubtful that napping on the job ever will become part of the work day—or night.

Schools spend $ 'reluctantly'

Spending $118,000 to store equipment at the Centennial Educational Park and an additional $50,000 for metered lights on the CEP's tennis courts is not the wish of the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education. Board members learned Monday night, however, they have no choice in deciding whether to spend the funds.

Both expenditures, plus dozens of others which are yet unspent, are a part of the voter-approved 1974 bond issue. All must be completed if the board would like to spend any surpluses earned from interest rates, according to school legal consultants.

Although the present board feels some of the expenditures earmarked in the bond issue are unnecessary and unimportant, it cannot funnel the monies into other "more worthy" projects, the school attorney said.

The school board, however, can drain the remaining funds of the '74 bond issue on items such as roof repair, which were approved without specific dollar amounts, according to Supt. John M. Hoben. By spending the remaining dollars of the bond issue on such items, there would be none left for tennis court lights and other less

Once the monies allocated in the bond issue are spent, the board will be free to spend the surplus wherever

Paniels Pen So Our neglected children-Part II

One of our hangups in discussing national day care programs is the American myth that only mothers can provide for their children. (Some of the more liberal among us hasten to add that fathers, also, can care for chil-

While parents are important in child-raising, they don't have an exclusive warranty for success. One point which Une Bronfenbrenner stresses is that there is no appreciable difference between day care and home care provided two conditions are met: First, day care must be quality care and, therefore, much be financed at a higher level than at present; and, second, the persons involved in day care must have a personal dedication to Whether parent or not, Bronfenbrenner stresses, every child needs to spend "a substantial amount of time with somebody who's crazy about

"I mean there has to be at least one person who has an irrational involvement with that child, someone who thinks that kid is more important than other people's kids, someone who's in love with him and whom he loves in return. You can't pay for an irrational commitment. And yet a child needs that. He needs somebody who will not just be there certain hours and then say "I'm off now, I work nine to five.

A child needs other experiences as well as "irrational" love. Each child needs some mothering, some fathering, some day care, some coolness. But instead of providing the mixed experience children need, far too often the environment is very limited. Bronfenbrenner isn't too suprising when he argues fathers are just as adept at child-rearing as mothers, but adds a twist when he states: "It's the children you know, who teach us how to care for them."

It was Brofenbrenner's tour of Russia which turned him on to the importance of day care and mixed experiences for children, especially the potential of models, peers and groups in affecting the behavior and growth of

WHILE SUGGESTING that children lack an "irrational" love, he doesn't point fingers at parents

There are grounds for believing that parents today, far from not caring about their children, are more worried about them than they have ever been in the course of recent history. The crux of the problem is that many parents become powerless as forces in the lives of their children.

"In today's world, parents find themselves at the mercy of a society which imposes pressures and priorities that allows them neither time nor place for meaningful activities and relations between children and ... producing "a situation in which a child often spends more time with a passive babysitter than with a participating parent."

In making that observation, Bronfenbrenner insists that any successful day care program must involve parents and other adults in planning and daily activities. This is especially true because of a pattern he describes as age segregation.

"Children are deprived not only of parents but of people in general. A host of factors conspire to isolate children from the rest of the family. The fragmentation of the extended family, separation of residential and business areas, disappearance of neighborhoods, zoning ordinances, occupational mobility, child labor laws, abolishment of the apprentice system, consolidated schools, television, separate patterns of social life for different age groups, the working mother, the delegation of child care to specialists.

'Children need people in order to become human. The isolation of children from adults simultaneously threatens the growth of the individual and the survival of society. To relegate children to a world of their own is to deprive them of their humanity, and ourselves as well.'

A peculiar problem of age segregation is our insistance that children play with youngsters their own age, so that older children often don't know how to handle younger kids, and vice versa. "You can live through the first 16 or 17 years and rarely know another human being of an age different from your own. You won't know many older people either.

"Again, we have moved away from certain traditional family structures without instituting new ways of doing all the things families used to do."

THE DAY CARE programs of today often are effective, Bronfenbrenner says, because they do involve parents and other non-professionalssomething which other agencies, including schools, need to consider.

"Like Project Head Start, day care progarms can have no lasting constructive impact on the development of the child unless they affect not only the child himself but the people who constitute his enduring day-to-day environment in the family, neighborhood, and community.

Unfortunately, one of the major differences between day care programs and kindergarten is that parents are seldom encouraged to become involved in the public school day in the same manner as at cooperative nursery schools.

Parents should be recruited to help out at school, to show up for a day, or just for a visit of an hour or two. And not for the benefit of that parent's child, but for the positive advantages of laving adults intermix in a classfroom setting with other adults.

My valughter's teacher happened to be one who encouraged visits from parents, on any day, at any time. The school also was very receptive. The time I spent there was mostly with other youngsters, not my daughter. who were pleased to see an adult male visitor who wasn't the principal. assistant principal, gym teacher, or anyone else connected with the world of education.

I left convinced that dads ought to spend more time in the classroom. Far too often we view parental involvement in the school as having mothers stop in to help pour Kool-aid ≠at Christmas parties. But it's important for adults just to be present, to demo.' trate in the smallest ways that they are interested in what other childien are doing

Children receive rewards from parents at home often enough that it may not mean as much as mom and dad might think it does. But it means something to a young kid to have another adult walk into class, even & complete stranger, and nod approvingly at the day's project.

Positive reinforcement from a parent is very beneficial to a child, but it's just as important-if not more so-for a child to receive a word of enfrom an adult who isn't a parent or

I'm convinced as much as Bronfenbrenner that adults should become involved in the lives of other children And all we need to let them know is that we care. That's not asking much Anyone can care.

"Hale Telescope" to penetrate far

The colossal "Giant of Palomar" was the result of many long years of research, of careful planning and toilsome labor on the part of a great many people. Its creation involved a host of problems and tasks of enormous dimension. But the greatest of all was the remarkable feat of engineering which produced the giant reflecting mirror. It had to be crystal clear and free of any distortion soxit would reflect an accurate picture of the countless stars and planets out in the boundless expanse of space. THE MIRROR WAS CAST at the Corning Glassworks in New York. It was 200 inches in diameter, nearly 17 feet, and it weighed 20 tons.

When the molten mass was poured from the ladles it was so hot that it had to be left in the mold to cool for a whole year before it could be removed without danger of serious damage. When the huge casting of glass was lifted from its mold it was carefully packed and loaded into a special railroad car for shipment to Pasedena. Calif. The car was so large that the train had to take a round-about route in order to avoid low bridges and tun-

The finishing crew consisted of 21 men who were dressed in spotless white uniforms, similar to those worn by interns in a large hospital. Extreme cleanliness was imperative lest a tiny particle of sand or grit be allowed to ruin the delicate finish.

When all was made ready the technician threw the switch to set the grinding and polishing machinery into motion. The precision stones and motors began to whir and the stupendous task was underway. Eleven years passed before the polishing was completed and during that time they ground and polished away more than five tons of powered glass, about two and one-half times the weight of an average sized automobile. At last the great mirror was perfect and the dreams of the powerful telescope had become reality.

Plymouth Chamber

By JANET CURLEE Executive Secretary Plymouth Chamber

The beginnings of the Chamber of Commerce movement are traced back almost 6,000 years to the city of Mari in Mesopotamia.

The evolution of the modern Chamber began in 1599 when merchants in Marseilles, France, formed an independent voluntary organization to represent commercial interests of the port. During the 18th century Chambers were established in other French cities and in England and Ireland.

The first American Chamber was the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York (essentially an organization representing the businessmen of New York City) which was organized in 1768. Five years later, the Charleston, S.C., Chamber was

By 1801, Chambers had been organized in New Haven, Conn., and Philadelphia; and, by 1870, there were Chambers in 40 major American

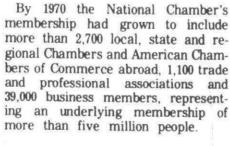

A group of Ohio businessmen organized the first state Chamber in 1893. Today there are 40 state and regional SGT. STRIPES...FOREVER

Chambers in the U.S.

As a result of a suggestion by President William Howard Taft that some system of national cooperation between business and government be established, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was created on April 22, 1912.

It was a new step in commercial organization-a representative federation with autonomous Chambers and trade associations from every part of the country and from every type of industry as its controlling and directing

TOT LOT

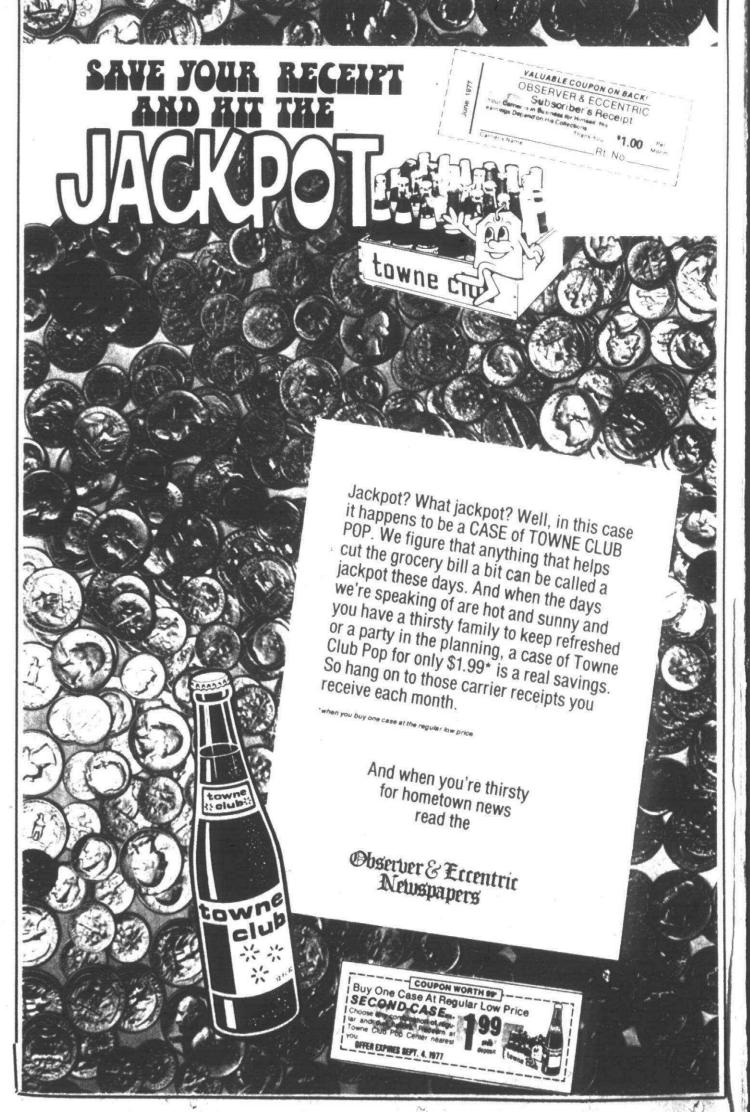

The Plymouth Retailers would like to remind shoppers of a service available in the downtown business district.

The Tot Lot is a handy facility equipped with safe play equipment and staffed daily by the Department of Parks and Recreation of the City of Plymouth. It has been designed so shobpers who may not want to take their children shopping won't incur the additional sitter charge which may be a deterrent.

The Tot Lot, which is known as Vest Pocket Park, is located at Harvey and Ann Arbor Trail. The lot operates from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Children between the ages of 3-8 are welcome to play while mom shops.

If present plans materialize, metropolitan Detroit will be the scene of two rich bowling tournaments next season and it is likely that the pros may also add the area to their record breaking tour

For some months, George Prybyla, general manager of Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park, has been dickering with the AMF officials to repeat the successful Grand Prix held a year ago. Thus far, no decision has been reached, but George is confident the event will be run again.

Meanwhile, Brill Srock, a former all-star bowler who now runs Northfield Lanes in Rochester, has signed a contract with the Ladies Professional Association for one of its tournaments during the coming season.

Whether it will be held in January or May depends on the TV networks. But, at any rate, the top women bowlers in the land will be here.

Along with these two events, the pros also are certain to return to Hartfield Lanes in Berkley where they have held forth for several years.

All of this action means that the Detroit area, long known as the Bowling Capital of the World, is being finally recognized by the professionals

A STUBBORN No. 7 pin that wobbled but wouldn't fall cost Dick Beattie $500 last Wednesday at North Hill lanes.

The Detroit all-star was leading by 40 pins going into the final game of the Stroh-Bonanza roll-offs and seemingly was headed for victory. He had won his first eight games with an average of 244.

Then, his opponent, Lee Beebe, of Maumee, Ohio, put on a rally with a string of nine strikes after a washout in the first frame. From then on the match was a tossup and finally Lady Luck frowned on Beattie when the No. 7 pin wouldn't fall and he lost

At that he picked up $750—not bad for a few days work. WOULDN'T think that the captain of a team that finished 16th in a tournament would be proud as a peacock over the showing of her team. But then you encountered haven't Midge Poshka, one of the day managers at Westland Bowl

"Don't forget," said very proudly, "it was the women's national tournament. Just remember-16th in the nation-that 's really something to be proud of when you consider our team was composed of the girls from just around here.

Iraq objects displayed

Ancient gold jewelry carved stucco figurines. bronze tweezers, silver coins, and cosmetic pots are among 180 objects on display through Sept. 15 in the University of Michigan Kelsey Museum of Ancient and Mediaeval Archaeology

The exhibition entitled 'Seleucia on the Tigris' includes objects which date from 319 BC to 215 AD and were uncovered during U-M excavations in Iraq during 1927-32 and 1936-37. Most of the items are being exhibited for the first time.

Conceived and organized by U-M graduate student Elizabeth Savage. the exhibit is in memory of U-M classical art and archaeology Prof. Clark Hopkins, who directed the university's final season of excavations at Seleucia in 1936-37. Hopkins died in 1976.

A former Rhodes scholar and alumnus of Yale and Oxford universities. Hopkins helped initiate the Great Books Program at the U-M, served as host for three series of U-M television programs, and was a member of the President's Commission on Aging. In 1973, the Kelsey Mupublished book, "The Architecture and Topography of Secleucia on the Tigris."

"And even though it was in Division 1 of the tournament in Milwaukee, we're proud as punch. Aside from Poshka, who turned in a 530, the other members of the team and their scores were: Jane Martin, 595; Judy Whalen, 515; Jean Essa, 505; and Jan Himmelstock, 453.

THE DEMAND for all-star women's teams is now greater than ever and most of them are wanted in leagues that bowl in prime time.

Monty Oncza, organizer of the Little Caesar League at Westland Bowl, is eager to sign up more combinations to bring the women's portion of the league up to 14 teams to equal the number of men.

If he can't get seven more women's teams, he'll settle for three more and keep the league to 24 total teams that will bowl on Friday nights in the prime time

FOR RUDY PIT-TAWAY and his son, Bob, who live in Canton, this has been a memorable bowling season.

The father, age 40, and his son, 13, rolled a 1271 in the YBA tournament at Cherry Hill Lanes to qualify for the national championships

Now your monthly payment can be lower, even if the cost of your new car is higher.

Most new cars cost more this year than last year.

Then how can your monthly payments on your auto loan be less than they used to be?

Because, now you can take advantage of an extended time period to repay your auto loan at Detroit Bank & Trust.

Your DETROIT BANK-er will be glad to finance your new car for a longer period of time than previously offered. And the longer you take to repay it, the lower your monthly payments become.

We want your auto loan payments to fit into your monthly budget. The total loan will cost you slightly more, but you should find it easier to handle the payments.

When it comes time for your next auto loan, talk to any DETROIT BANK-er about our lower auto loan payments. Take a little longer to repay your auto loan and make it a little easier on your budget.

'The Spy Who Loved Me'

More kiss kiss, bang, bang action

"The Spy Who Loved Me" (PG), the latest film caper of Agent 007, James Bond, opens with some spectacular acrobatics on skis. Running true to form, this action opening is followed by the flashy, innovative main titles accompanied by sultry-voiced Carly Simon singing the title song.

Thus assured of the producer's and director's committment to observe the established style for Bond movies, viewers can settle down to munch popcorn and watch the kiss kiss bang bang action. Only the title of Ian Fleming's book was used for this movie. The screenplay is an original script; it's neither better nor worse than the novel, just different.

cooperation is prompted by the evil hijinks of Karl Stromberg (Curt Jurgens). Stromberg, a kinky Nordic millionaire, has obtained a microfilm copy of a submarine tracking system which he has used to locate and capture a Soviet and a U.S.

Bond and Major Amasova are, so to speak, hot on the trail of the tracking system and the missing subs. They head for Stromberg's lair, Atlantis, a gigantic marine laboratory and manor off the coast of Sardinia. Stromberg's a Captain Nemo type with a lust to kill. His webbed fingers may have something to do with his preference for an aquatic environ-

The characters are the usual one-dimensional variety; even so, Jurgens is disappointing as the villain. If there is any movie in which an actor can give free rein to every means of developing a villainous character, it's a James Bond movie. Jurgens ignores this opportunity and plays Stromberg straight and undistinguished.

The movie does have more than its share of picturesque locations, both on land and underwater. Some early sequences in Egypt showing the great pyramids at Gizeh and the ancient temples at Thebes provide a handsome mini-travelogue. However, Bond movies aren't known for their educational content, but for their sexy women, fast action and mechanical marvels.

"The Spy Who Loved Me" abounds with all these components and boasts a new and novel array of weapons and gadgetry. The most notable piece of equipment is a sleek sports car. A customized Lotus "Esprit" was modified to navigate under water as well as on land.

THE REAL SCENE stealer, though, a character we're likely to see again since he was still swimming at the movie's end, is a man-giant called "Jaws." Played by 7-foot 2-inch, 315-pound Richard Kiel, Jaws is so-called because he has a mouthful of steel teeth. They look like they came from an auto collision shop-the kind that doesn't stay in business

Viewing the remains of one devastating encounter with Jaws, Major Amasova asks Bond, "What happened?" "Oh," replies the facile Bond, "he just dropped in for a bite."

The movie is brisk escapist-adventure with plenty of double entendres thrown in for laughs. Now if they could just find a James Bond who doesn't smirk all the time

Egloff gets a shot at the pros

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

The chance to accomplish a lifelong dream has been given to former Plymouth High School football star Ron Egloff.

After completing his college career at the University of Wisconsin this past spring. Egloff's high hopes of being drafted by a professional football team never became a reality.

But recently, the 1973 Plymouth graduate was given new inspiration when he was signed as a free agent with the Denver Broncos of the National Football League

EGLOFF WAS headed for success after a most productive high school junior year as offensive end and linebacker for the Plymouth Rocks.

In his senior season at Plymouth, Egloff was overshadowed by the new wishbone rushing offense which head coach Tom Moshimer incorporated that year

> After landing a scholarship at Wisconsin, Egloff became the Badgers' regular tight end in his junior season when he started all but two games. He caught eight passes for 78 yards in that season.

Egloff started every game his senior season and caught 20 passes to gain 308 yards and four touchdowns. That season gave Egloff a spot in the annual Blue-Gray all-star game.

Ron Bills registered a three-for-four night to pace the attack. Wayne and Dale Butzin each banged out home runs to aid the winners.

The Sword was led by Pasquale Ferretti who smacked three hits.

In other "B" Division action, Latin Quarter Catering up ended Chapman Brothers Realty, 14-10. Latin erupted for seven runs on nine hits in the final inning to close out the win.

Latin featured a balanced attack led by Neil Carnes with two home runs. Joe Bonnett, Nick Trapponi, Ron Lukasik, and Paul Zackarias all chipped in with two hits each.

Recent all-star selection, Ken Winkler, proved to be the thorn in the against Ovidon. Winkler slammed a homer and added a single and two base-on-balls.

The Canton Police scored five runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings to hand Ovidon its second loss of the season. Robin Cripe also had two hits for the winners.

Ovidon's attack resulted in a mere six hits off winning pitcher Jim Hanna after the fourth inning.

Two all-star selections for Ovidon managed to supply the power for its team. Joe Daratony slapped a home run and a single while Chad McDonald collected three hits.

Skateboarding: a growing sport

By SUE LAABS

Kick-turn, wrap around and 3-60 may seem like strange terms to the average person, but to a skateboard enthusiast they are a way of life.

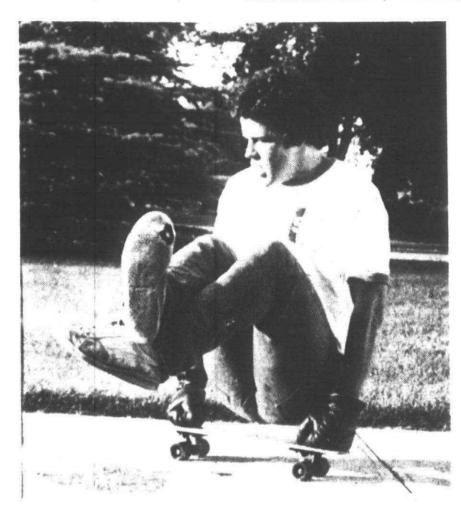

"Skateboarding has become very popular and widely accepted throughtout the United States in the last few years," commented Bryan Beardsley, who has accomplished national fame for his performances on the skateboard.

Beardsley, 19, recently made an appearance at the Livonia Mall to help promote skateboarding and show area residents just how safe it can be.

Born in Akron, Ohio, Beardsley moved when he was seven to California and credits the change of scene for his sucess.

Beardsley won fame in 1975 when he won the National Skateboarding-High Jump championship with a world record jump of 42 feet. He was unable to attend last year due to knee

The popularity of skateboarding has boomed in the last few years, and Beardsley contended one of the major factors has been the safety associated with the sport. "I always tell the kids to be sure to wear knee pads, elbow pads, a helmet and gloves," he said. Another factor may be the dramatic changes in the skateboard. The wheels are now made of hard rubber and can turn with easier mobility. The sides of the board are turned up at an angle, making it easier to do

Skateboarding has become so sophisticated that a state legislator in California indicated he will introduce a bill which would ban motorized skateboards in the state.

Area stores report a tremendous sales increase this year on skateboards. "We could have sold a 1.000 skateboards but we didn't get our shipment in," said a representiive of Griswold's of Wonderland.

Locally there is a skateboard park at Beech Daly between Six and Seven Mile. Areas are set aside for boarders to compete in various areas such as freestyle, speed racing or slalom.

Opportunity has knocked at Beardsley's door thanks to his boarding accomplishments. He landed a part in the movie "High School" in which he plays a heavy who causes trouble with his skateboard. The movie is being released this month by Universal Pictures.

MEMBERS OF First Baptist Church greeted their new assistant minister and his family with a good old-fashioned pounding.

The pounding was planned by the Women's Missionary Fellowship as a surprise at the church picnic July 10.

The Rev. John Elliott and his wife, Karen, were welcomed with a pound of this and a pound of that-sugar, flour, shortening, baking needs, beverages, desserts, canned goods, paper products, etc.

'There was quite a mound of goods," said the Rev. William Stahl, senior pastor at the church on North Territorial. "There was even a hammer, someone's addition to the pounding party.'

Romayne Stahl, president of the Women's Missionary Fellowship, suggested the pounding. She and her husband had received a similar shower of gifts at one of their parishes.

The Elliotts have two children, David, 7, and Kimberly, 5. They came to Plymouth from Minneapolis where John Elliott was a student at Bethel

The picnic was on the grounds at the the rear of the church.It was followed by an outdoor worship service under the trees with a reed organ providing the music.

"It was so well-received," said Rev. Stahl, "we're planning another picnic and outdoor service for August.

The Elliott's pantry is now wellstocked, so there won't be another pounding.

Jim is traveling with a group of students and professors from Michigan State University. The seven-week tour of England and the continent will include art seminars and will be worth six credits toward Jim's master of fine arts degree when he returns to grad schoolin the fall.

A 1971 graduate of Plymouth High School, Ochman received his MSA from MSU in 1975. He was an art instructor in the West Bloomfield schools last year.

Last April he had a one-man show of his paintings and drawings in the BP Gallery, Williamston. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Ochman of Foy Road in Plymouth Township.

FREE PASSES which will admit all Plymouth-Canton school district residents age 62 and over to school events now are available at the school administration offices, 454 S. Harvey Street, Plymouth.

The board of education established the senior citizens passes policy at its Jan. 10 meeting. They are lifetime passes and are non-transferable.

The pass admits the recipient to all school dramatic and mus al programs which are not specifically designated as fund-raisingevents. It also admits seniors to regular season at home athletic events.

The application form simply asks for name, address, telephone number and date of birth. Proof of age and residency may be requested. Anyone wishing more information should call the school board's office of community relations, 453-0200, extension 418. THE SINGLES (25 and up) Club of Ann Arbor is planning a dance from 9 p.m. to midnight July 19 at the American Legion Hall in Ann Arbor.

Frank Venice will supply the music and refreshments will be served. For more information, call Betty Jo-

Playgrounds to do' blues

The summer vacation plaint, "What can I do? There's nothing to do around here," becomes a thing of the past once Plymouth youngsters investigate the activities at summer playgrounds sponsored by the city's parks and recreation department.

Each summer the city-owned parks are activated. From 10 a.m. until 3:30 p.m., five days a week, neighborhood children gather at the playgrounds for games and crafts supervised by trained per-

There are baseball games, checkers and croquet tournaments, swimming, handicrafts, and side trips. Last Friday a busload visited the Detroit Zoo. Along with permission slips, the children handed in $1.50 which was the total cost of transportation and admission. Most took sack lunches and a little spending money for refreshments at the zoo.

Some trips are just a walk uptown for icecream, but the youngsters and their leaders respond with enthusiasm.

"We're going to see Mark the Bird," announced one small girl at Hamilton Park

Geneva Gypsys camp out

The Gypsys, a camping group from Geneva United Presbyterian Church in Canton Township, had their monthy campout at Haas Lake near New Hudson July 8-10. It was a fun weekend for the 13 families who attended.

Canton residents Alan and Judy Prince along with their children arrived a day early, planning to spend the following week under the sun. On Friday afternoon, they were joined by Al and Dian Smith and their three daughters.

Frank, Maureen and Frankie Bianchi, part of the wagonmaster team for the weekend, pulled into the circle just before their co-workers Jud, Anne, Chris and Michelle Spencer. The Bob Kemnitz family and the Frank Conway family were next in line to catch a spot by the lake.

Homer and Virginia Benoit, Jerry, Elise, Perry, Lisa and Lousise Miller were able to set up camp before the rains came. So did Al, Harriet, Al Jr., Karl and Louise Wehrheim, and Jim Jason and Julia Wahl UNFORTUNATELY, Gordon and Wilma Banks weren't as lucky. The Friday night storm had begun when they entered the campground. They quickly parked their trailer and joined the group around the sputtering fire.

Prepared for the storm, but not dismayed by it, the optimistic crew returned to their campers in hopes of a brighter dawn.

In the morning, the sun shone brightly against a blue sky.

While breakfast dishes were being cleared, Marty and Phyllis La .orte of S. Umberland Street drove into the circle, pitched their tent and told onlookers that Canton also had received its share of bad weather.

The rest of the day was spent swimming, conversing with friends and relaxing in lawn chairs. The wagonmasters found time to bake a 15pound ham under the glowing campfire coals in preparation for the evening meal

DINNER WAS an enthusiastically received gourmet delight. Campers contributed salads and desserts to the buffet which left everyone happily

Mileage magic rarely real

By PATRICK KELLY

Be wary. The big worry over energy and the drive to increase car gas mileage may spawn an assortment of "miracle" additives and gadgets. warns the Automotive Information Council.

Generally, these chemicals or devices may appear to have great potential in theory or in the printed word but somehow lose their magic when put to the test.

For example, acouple years ago, one manufacturer was forced to refund the purchase price to unhappy customers of its gadgets. The company had to stop selling the product. The product was an ignition coil with a fancy housing that did nothing for economy. It was sold as a replacement for the original equipment coil.

More than 40,000 had been bought over a threeyear period for $85 a set.

A CALIFORNIA firm extensively promoted a gadget with claims of 15-50 per cent improvement in gas mileage. A Sacramento newspaper asked university researchers to investigate. They found the unit had "only a minor impact on mileage, maybe none at all.

The manufacturer said the device worked by addidng vapor from a special fuel to the carburetor. It not only claimed better economy but smoother operation, reduced engine wear and reduction of hydrocarbon emissions.

Tests also were made by the Environmental Protection Agency with similarly poor results.

Another company offered a gadget that would help propel a car across six states on one tank of gas-the company was indicted on 85 counts of mail fraud by a federal grand jury. The ads claimed New York to Chicago could be driven on two or three fill-ups. Don't count on such dramatics. The quickest way to better economy is through weight reduction, and that is the biggest effort going on in the auto industry today.

Though we will be driving smaller and lighter cars, more V6 and four-cylinder engines than V8s and will probably settle for less variety of nameplates in the years ahead, the market for optional equipment will continue to be strong.

THE AUTOMOBILE can do a national transportation job without some of the extra-cost equipment, but people will continue to insist on creature comforts, according to industry forecasters.

Proof that comfort and convenience still sell is reflected in recently published figures on optional equipment sales. Three of every four cars sold in 1976 came with factory-installed air conditioning, and another 800000 air conditioning units were installed by owners after the cars were shippedto dealearships. No one can argue that air conditioning uses more fuel, but a cool, comfortable car also makes for a safer driver.

Radios, another option, are expected to continue their popularity. More than 82 per cent of the 1976 cars sold with radios, and 13 per cent of thecustomers chose stereo tape units

IN 1976, more than 92 per cent of the auto buyers went for automatic transmission. Another 70 per cent ordered a V8 engine.

The proportions on those units are expected to drop dramatically as more four- and six-cylinder power plants are introduced and manual transmission production is stepped up, all to reduce fuel consumption.

There are some things motorists just won't do without. They proved it in 1976 and undobutedly will again in 1977.
