Board 'thumbs down' on interim zoning proposal

An interim zoning ordinance heralded by proponents as a way to save the intent of the master land use plan was killed by a 4-3 vote of the Canton Township board Tuesday night.

Concern over the complexity of the 240-page document and fear that its passage would deny taxpayers the right to due process were apparent factors in the law's defeat.

Supervisor Noel Culbert, Clerk John Flodin, Trustee Robert Larson and Trustee Eugene Daley voted against the temporary ordinance that could have remained in effect legally for a maximum three years.

Following the vote, the board directed the planning commission to submit a permanent zoning ordinance and revised master land use plan by Nov. 1.

The first public hearing on the permanent zoning ordinance is scheduled for Aug. 15.

TRUSTEE BODENMILLER and Planning Commissioner Dan Richardson pushed passage of the interim zoning law as a way to preserve the intent of the master plan for Ford Road development.

The master plan — which outlines a broad planning concept - has been in effect since 1976. But a zoning ordinance which implements the plan by designating specific zoning districts has never been adopted.

Numerous changes have been made in the master plan since 1976.

Proponents of the interim law fear developers will destroy the master plan's intent for Ford Road before a more permanent zoning ordinance can be adopted. They point to two submitted site plans for proposed developments on Ford Road that are contrary to the revised master plan.

But board trustees who voted against the law's passage had other concerns.

Besides land use requirements, the interim zoning law includes sign and landscape regulations, a ban on recreational vehicle storage in driveways for more than 48 hours and numerous other matters.

Although board trustees have allowed the public to speak on the proposed law, the public hearings that are required on most zoning matters are not legal prerequisites to passage of interim zoning ordinances.

"THIS WILL affect every street and every resident in this township," Larson said of the interim law. "Usually, it's the right of every taxpayer to be heard by this board. The interim ordinance allows the board to circumvent that right."

Larson, who was appointed to the board last month to fill the seat vacated by former Trustee Lynne Goldsmith, said he received a copy of the interim zoning law just last week.

He said he was concerned over the number of issues addressed by the 240page document and expressed fear that many residents were unaware of the ordinance's comprehensive nature.

Culbert, who has been undecided about his feelings toward the proposed interim law, provided the swing vote that led to the ordinance's defeat.

He objected to proponents' stand that "Ford Road will fall completely commercial" without passage of the interim law and maintained that the 1976 master plan originally earmarked most of Ford for commercial development.

"I feel going this way is improper," Culbert said of the interim law. "I just don't think that the end justifies the Three men were arrested and charged with breaking and entering Parkwood Landscaping, 39474 Cherry Hill, early Monday.

Twin brothers, Kurt and Kevin Parmenter, 20, of Romulus, and their nephew Herman Parmenter Jr., 19, of Westland, pled innocent to the charge at an arraignment before 35th District Court Judge James Garber.

They are being held in the Wayne County Jail in lieu of $2,500 bond. An examination date has been set for July Canton Police Chief Jerry Cox said the breaking and entering was in progress when Canton police officers arrived. Police said they found an estimated $700 worth of tools and other items from the landscape firm in the possession of the men.

Canton Police Chief Jerry Cox said township police officers were sent to Parkwood Landscaping near the Canton-Westland border about 3:15 a.m. Monday after the Westland police reported spotting a suspicious vehicle in the vicinity.

The felony charge carries a maximum 15-year jail sentence.

Schools hire bond-issue consultants

Plymouth-Canton school officials will seek some expert help in an attempt to make their upcoming bond proposal campaign a success.

A construction management firm and architect were hired as consultants for the proposed bond issue by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

The school board voted unanimously Monday night to hire Barton-Malow as construction management firm and TMP Associates as architects.

Both firms will help the administration and school board develop a bond proposal to put before voters, and Barton-Malow will continue as construction management advisors for the building projects if the bond issue is approved.

For the pre-election phase, Barton-Malow will be paid a flat $2,200 for its services and TMP Associates will be paid $2,500.

If the bond issue is approved, Barton-Malow will be paid a fee of 2.8 percent of construction costs of the bond issue projects. TMP Associates has done a number of architectural projects for the school district, including the design of the three newest elementary schools -

Barton-Malow is a well-known general contractor in the state which has handled such projects as the Silverdome and the Joe Louis Sports Arena.

The firm also will help the board make decisions on those areas of the bond issue recommendations in which there is not full agreement.

Ray Hoedel, assistant superintendent for business, explains that the construction management method is a procedure by which the school board contracts for a professional construction manager's service to provide technical consultation during the design stage of a project. The firm also will organize and direct construction activities during the construction phase, if the bond issue is approved by voters. Tom Yack, board president, said the firm will act much like a general contractor and will do things such as supervising the bidding process, watching the work progress to make sure specifications are followed, and working closely with the architect - especially

The Citizens Bond Advisory Committee had recommended a bond issue of $10 million while the central administration earlier had advised a bond issue of $23 million.

The citizens committee envisioned a combined elementary-middle school at $3.6 million and an elementary school at $400,000 using a core building concept, and an addition to the high school with a projected cost of $1 million. The expansion at the elementary and high school levels would be accommodated by portable classrooms.

Some $5 million of the citizens committee proposal was designated for repairs and renovations.

Areas of disagreement among the board, administration and citizens committee include the core building concept, relocation of the bus yard, reduction in glass area, barrier-free design improvements, storage building design, extent of asphalt projects, and flood control at the high schools' site.

Under the core concept, the new school building would contain a permanent structure which would include only such things as a gymnasium, library, cafeteria and administrative noting that one graduate went straight jured in the incident. offices, with all classrooms as port- from high school to work as an engiables arranged as wings off the core.

CEP radio to get watt hike

A bid of $10,005 for the purchase of electronic equipment to broaden high school radio station WSDP's range has been approved by the Plymouth-Canton School Board.

The equipment will be provided to the student-run operation at Plymouth Salem High School by the Electronics Industries company.

The new transmitter, amplifier and tone gererator will allow the station to increase from 10 watts to 20 watts. The increased wattage, approved by the Federal Communications Commission last year, will change the station's status from Class D Secondary to Class A

The change in status, Cardinal said, would protect the station from interference by other class A stations.

"This funding would allow the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to contract with the appropriate experts to update the Snell Report which was conducted in 1974 at the request of Congressman Carl Pursell."

Law added that he has been working with Pursell, R-Plymouth, to obtain funding for the completion of this study and for the initial stages of a grant application.

The grant application to the federal government will request funds for the cleanup of pollution in Newburgh Lake and to improve recreational services and other needed items in the western Wayne County area, Law added.

"This is an extremely essential bill and preservation item which must be dealt with immediately. The important thing brought out during debate was that a major part of the program would be the upgrading of recreational services for the residents of the area."

Law also pointed out that with the problems in Hines Park, improved recreational services will attract families and community groups which also would be of great benefit in solving that problem.

"I am pleased that these funds finally will be released so the research and grant application can continue. I am hopeful that the feasibility study and grant application can be completed before the end of the summer."

Livonia candidate stages pornography protest

By MIKE SCANLON

A small group of self-styled "patriotic socialists" staged a brief picket line last Thursday protesting the adult book section at The Book Nook, 29470 Ford

At 3:50 p.m., the Muzak machine in The Book Nook was spewing a tuneful version of Bobby Goldsboro's "Watching Scotty Grow." One of two customers flipped through a stack of $2.50 posters of innocents like Cheryl Ladd, the Bee Gees and Suzanne Sommers.

Outside, six stockily-built young men toting protest signs and an American flag, and led by a Livonia city council candidate and former Neo-Nazi, marched in circles under a hot July sun. The man with the flag waved it vigorously in response to a motorist who sounded his horn, which blew the first six notes of "Theme from The Godfather '

THE PROTEST came because a shuttered section devoted to "adult books" shares space with more traditional reading matter at the Ford and Middlebelt store.

"We don't think it's appropriate to have porno in the suburbs. If a man really wants porno, he can go down in garbage city - Detroit," said Rocky Suhayda, the 27-year-old chairman of a 12-member group that inexplicably calls itself The National Front, even though all of the members are residents of local suburbs.

Meanwhile, the closed-off adult section was deserted while the protesters marched. A 75 cent entry fee is required to get behind the green door shielding that section from the rest of the store. To customers outside that door, only some lewdly shaped rubber devices are visible.

Since the store has no entrance onto Ford Road, neither clerk Robert Stewart nor the customers knew the protesters were marching outside.

"I wish they would come around where I can see them," said Stewart. "It's kind of dull today."

SUHAYDA appeared in similar, 1976 protests before his resignation from The National White People's Party. He was dressed in jackboots and a Nazistyle uniform during those protests.

The politics of his present group, The National Front, are difficult to determine. Suhayda said the group is anticommunist and "we consider ourselves patriotic socialists." He said no wellknown politician now espouses beliefs similar to the group's.

The Thursday protest came after the group was unsuccessful in an attempt to convince Garden City to take action against the store, said Suhayda, who said the attempt consisted of calling city hall and reading a statement. A stockroom employee at Garden City Osteopathic Hospital, Suhayda said he spoke to the city clerk.

City Clerk-Treasurer Ronald Showalter denied ever having spoken with him. So did the city hall telephone operator, a couple of secretaries, and City Manager Dana Miller. Miller said he has sought legal advice on taking action against the store, "but there's nothing we can do, legally."

ASKED WHAT action he thought the city should take, Suhayda said, "I don't know. I'm not a legal expert. All I can say is there's people out here who are upset about this and if the city can't shut it down, they'll find a way.' Suhayda was asked what methods might be used.

the founding fathers felt back in '76." Suhayda said attempts to interest members of other groups in joining the protest were unsuccessful.

"We've tried contacting some of the civic groups, and they're not interested and we find that strange. We've tried calling some of the churches in the area, but they seem like they've got something else on their minds, social injustice in the inner city or something, when they've got this festering sore right here in their community," said Suhayda.

Commuter rail studied

By TOM LONERGAN

The possibility of commuter rail service between Detroit and Plymouth will be included in a feasibility study of a new rail passenger route to Lansing.

The $350,000 study, to be conducted by the Michigan Department of Transportation, may begin within a few months, said Scott Hercik, acting manager of inter-city passenger services for the state.

"This is a hot issue," Hercik said. "It's not something we'll sit on."

He said the state is planning "both a short and long-term look" at passenger trains between Detroit and Lansing, including the "potential for high speed service."

THE SHORT LOOK includes using existing equipment to begin a commuter operation between Plymouth and Detroit, along the Cheaspeake and Ohio (C&O) Railroad right-of-way, much like the rail service now offered by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) along the Grand Trunk Western rails between Pontiac and

Part of the state's study "will be directed towards implementing at least some service quickly,"Hercik said.

Passenger rail to Lansing depends on federal funding of Amtrak, Hercik said, which has been threatened with massive cutbacks this fall even though ridership is up due to the gasoline shortage. The last passenger train between Lansing and Detroit was discontinued in 1971.

The gas pinch has fueled a "much greater degree of concern now for this than a year ago," Hercik

COMMUTER RAIL service to western Wayne County is in SEMTA's long-range plans, but along the Conrail (the federally subsidized freight operation) Detroit-Dearborn-Ann Arbor line, not the C&O line to Plymouth, said Julien Wolfe, SEMTA's director of commuter rail operations.

SEMTA plans to expand bus service along the Jeffries Freeway corridor.

Asked if the state study could change SEMTA's plans, Wolfe said, "there's always that potential. "If we spend enough money, we can run them (commuter rail) anywhere." A 1977 SEMTA study of potential commuter rail along the various corridors to downtown Detroit viewed the C&O line as too congested with freight traffic, Wolfe said. The railroad serves many industries along the Plymouth-Schoolcraft corridor.

"Considerable expenditures" would be needed to improve the right-of-way for passenger service, Wolfe said. "We never really sat down with the railroad to work out feasibility.'

THE STATE has a "gentlemen's agreement" with C&O officials to develop plans on how the rails between here and Lansing can be used, said Paul Renico, state coordinator of commuter rail ser-

"It's really sketchy right now," Renico said. "We have a lot of questions that have to be answered. It'll be a year before we really know anything.

Usually you would have to tie up your savings for years to get a dividend that begins to compete with inflation. And it seems it would take years to save the amount needed for one of those fancy $10,000 Money Market certificates. Until now you've had to content yourself with choosing between long-term savings accounts or low dividends. But if you consider yourself a serious saver, you'll welcome this news from your credit union:

NOW YOU CAN EARN THE SAME DIVIDEND RATE IN 3 YEARS AT YOUR CREDIT UNION THAT BANKS AND S & Ls PAY IN 4.

Look at the charts above and compare: with a Community Federal 3-Year Certificate you can earn the same or HIGHER DIVIDEND for LESS TIME. Now you have greater flexibility to plan your savings and to save for the things you want to buy. And before you know it, you've saved the amount needed for a 'fancy' money market certificate.

The maximum rate on Certificates is determined monthly by the U.S. Department of the Treasury. The rate you are quoted the month you purchase is paid for the term of your 3-Year Certificate. Dividends are compounded quarterly and the term and minimum balance, like most credit union savings certificates, are designed for the serious saver who isn't rich.

So if you've got money that's "just sitting" in a bank or savings and loan, bring it to your credit union. Our 3-Year Certificate is just one of many savings programs that can help you beat inflation.

Legislature OKs court funding bill

An appropriation to ease the burden of cities and townships that provide a local court system has been approved by the Michigan Legislature.

State Rep. Robert Law (R-Livonia) said the bill contained substantial state funding for providing the judicial services required for cities and townships.

The bill also will increase the amount of state funding for the local portion of judges' salaries, thereby easing the burden on local taxpayers and local units of government, Law said.

Law is a member of the House Appropriations Committee and a member of its subcommittee on general govern-covers Plymouth, Canton and Northville, the state will provide new funds in the amount of $16,700 towards the costs of judges' salaries.

"The state presently pays a substantial portion of the cost of the judicial system at the local level," said Law. "and the increased funding of $16,700 per two-judge court is again another step to help local units of government ease the burden of funding programs."

The state also will pick up an additional share of the pension cost involved in running the district court as well as improving the overall state base funding for judges at the local level throughout the state.

"It has long been considered good policy for the State of Michigan to assume the costs of financing local courts and we are finally moving in that direction," Law said.

"While the state this year is not able to totally assume the costs of local district courts, it still is a major step in the direction of state assumption and will alleviate many of the problems local governmental units face."

Law added that the discrepancies in judicial salaries throughout the state and shortages of money at the local level have prompted him to work towards providing this service to local units of government.

"The $8,350 increase in funding by the state for local units of government for each judge represents about 40 percent of the amount that local units of government are allowed to pay.

"I am hopeful that the state soon will be able to assume the entire cost for district judges and remove the burden from the local unit of government."

The legislation provides district judges with a raise of 7.8 percent. The bill provides the state will pay $29,950 for a district judge's salary with local governments being allowed to pay an additional $20,870 for a total of $50,820 possible annual salary.

The legislation also provided for similar pay increases for state appellate and county circuit judges.

she wants another

Dear Gundella: Some time ago, you sent me a love spell. I tried it and it worked very well. But now I'm dating someone else, and I don't want to use the same spell on him. Have you got any different love spells that work just as well?

Brenda C., Livonia

Dear Brenda: Here are a few spells and philtres for you to choose from. But remember, there is no power in any of the spells themselves; the power comes from within you.

The emotion, imagination and faith you have when working a spell determine the success of that spell.

To insure faithfulness and devotion, steal a lock of your loved one's hair, and sprinkle on it the ashes from an article of his clothing. Then rub the hair and ash with honey taken from a wasp's nest.

This spell may be repeated as often as necessary, whenever you feel your loved one straying.

TAKE A PINCH of ambergris, half a pinch of musk, and 12 apple seeds. Grind these ingredients together in a mortar and add to seven ounces of red wine

Next boil this mixture down until it is three-quarters evaporated. Strain it and pour the results into a stoppered bottle. Use this potion sparingly in such foods as sweet drinks, juices or

MAKE A MIXTURE of one-half ounce lemon oil and one-half ounce patchouli. Add to this mixture three ounces of alcohol and three leaves of rue. Let this sit in a covered jar for 36 hours, shaking it occasionally. Strain and bottle it.

Just before your next date, take a nice hot bath so you're all warm and steamy. Then rub this perfume on at least seven pulse spots. These are the parts of your body such as wrists, temples, ankles, etc., where you can feel your pulse.

Your date will find you intriguing and lovable.

Love spell worked;

One of the oldest homes in Plymouth is about to get a new lease on life.

By W.W. EDGAR

One of the jewels on Main Street when it was built by Henry Baker in 1875, the "pink house" next to the library has been purchased by the young law firm of David Frost and Jack Marsh who plan to restore it to the dignity it knew in the "Gay Nineties."

Admitting that he has been a lover of antiques and old homes since childhood, Frost is supervising the refurbishing with the hope that, when finished next spring, it will be eligible for a state historical marker.

THE STATELY OLD home already has been cited. Several years ago, it was adorned with a plaque by the Heritage Group during the Michigan Week

The building originally was built by Henry Baker, who was an uncle to Mrs. Norma Cassady, and later came into the possession of Claude Buzzard who served as an attorney for the railroad and as part-time city attorney.

When he died, Mrs. Lucille Buzzard lived in the mansion until she finally sold it to Rockwell Smith and later to the Thomas Lees.

Until a year ago, it was used as a beauty salon. But when that plan slumped, the home was left empty until Frost spotted it and decided it was just what he wanted.

It was more or less by accident that Frost found the house and he chuckles now that he has the chance to restore

A graduate of the Michigan Law School in 1975, Frost opened an office in an old farm house in Farmington. He liked it, but he explains that he wanted something of his own.

Then, one day, he had occasion to come to Plymouth on business. While here, he spotted the home from the Victorian era and fell in love with it.

When he heard that it was up for sale, he and his partner lost no time in acquiring it.

Law firm moves into 'pink house'

"I am doubly pleased," he explains while working hard in preparing the interior for the decorators. "This gives me the type of office I wanted, and it also enables me to continue with my hobby - both as a collector of antiques and the restoring of them." WHEN HE LOOKS at the old-time winding staircase, he smiles and confides that it will be restored in all of its beauty that was manifest before the turn of the century.

"It is going to be a lot of fun by the time we have it finished in the spring," he tells you, "and nothing will be left undone to make it a jewel along the main street."

Under present plans the pink will be sandblasted from the exterior. Then, depending on the condition of the bricks, it may be painted. But the pink will be gone forever. Another change will come with the removal of the old back porch and the garage in the rear. In their places a two-story unit is planned and it will become a real office building in an outstanding Victorian setting.

Frost and his partner will take over the first floor for their offices and they, too, will date back to the early days. On the second floor a commitment has been obtained from the Kelly Girls organization which will move in when the building is completely refurbished.

"With all the changes that have been made with the old homes on Main Street," Frost said, "we hope to make i this one that will become a real restoration of an historical sight.

"As we look at it, Plymouth is on its way to becoming another Birmingham. It is just small enough to be ideal while places like Birmingham are spreading. out, and this, to me, spoils some of the charms of the place.

"But in Plymouth, it is different and we hope to become a real part of the community, in what we hope will be a jewel on the main street."

The Bottom Line

Fire protection

By DANIEL HERRIMAN

The author, Daniel Herriman of Plymouth, is a partner in a local business consulting firm servicing small businesses.)

IN the event of fire or civil disorder resulting in other damage, the smallbusiness owner who is prepared for such emergencies will find that he is protected against excessive loss.

Small business owners, particularly retail shop proprietors, should have a complete set of photographs of the place of business, kept off the premises along with duplicate business records. In case of disaster, the insurance ad-juster can make a reasonable comparison with the prior condition of the establishment. As soon as it is safe to re-enter the premises, additional photographs should be taken before any clean-up starts. Any easily accessible, still saleable or usable merchandise must be removed from exposed areas.

The business owner is not expected to risk life or limb, but you must demonstrate reasonable concern for the safety of your inventory.

The next step is to make a detailed inventory of all merchandise in enough detail to identify each specific item and its cost. Segregate and identify all merchandise which is damaged, broken, or otherwise diminished in value.

Naturally the insurance agent must be immediately notified about the type and extent of the damage, and the premises must be boarded up or otherwise made inaccessible to looters and vandals.

THERE ARE VARIOUS types of insurance coverage which you should consider. One is a relatively inexpensive extended coverage feature, which pays for damage caused by civil disorders and other non-fire disasters.

Another desirable feature is business interruption insurance. Most of these policies are written to cover 50 percent of gross profit based on the preceding

Because many commercial leases provide that either party may terminate a lease if a business is closed for more than 30 days because of disaster, special lease protection insurance is also worthwhile.

Also useful is "extra expense" coverage, to pay the costs of moving, temporary quarters, storage, etc.

Extended coverage, business interruption insurance, special insurance for lease protection, and extra expense coverage are all relatively inexpensive protection that can be added to regular! fire and public liability policies. Sometimes an all-inclusive package policy can be written.

If you're carrying less insurance than your business warrants, you may find that you have to bear some of the loss yourself in the event of fire or

Tipping the Scales

Columnist was a pudgy child

"I read your column every week," said the lady on the other end of the telephone line. "But, I hate all you skinny people."

'Are you the lady who writes the diet column in the paper every week?" asked the curious lady in the department store. After my affirmative reply, she said, "I thought I recognized you from your picture. I always read what you say. And I know what you say is true, but somehow I just can't do what you say we should."

Finally, there was the lady at the beach. I know her slightly.

"Have you ever been heavy?" she

I thought to myself, "Can't she see me on full display here in my bathing suit? I always feel that I'm heavy."

The lady continued, "I know what you say in your column is so true, but I just can't get going on my diet. Sometimes I'd tape your column to the wall and throw darts at you because I have such a hard time doing what's right and staying with it." She added a laugh, presumably for my benefit.

THE COMMENTS I receive on this column are always facinating at the least. But one question continually surfaces - "Have I ever been heavy?" I'm usually a little startled when someone asks me that. I feel that just to look at me the answer is obvious. Or that just reading weekly between the lines has revealed my various weight problems.

But when I was asked again last week, "Were you every heavy?" by someone who is a faithful weekly reader, I decided that I should write about my weight problems more candidly.

YES. I have always had a weight problem since I was a child. I can't recall a time when I have ever been considered slim - although people tell me at various times that I am.

Childhood photos and snapshots show me as pudgy, and later on in the upper grades of elementary school, I was a sensitive, chubby kid who was teased to death by classmates (mostly boys) about being fat.

There is an exception to the evidence of chubbiness in one photo. I'll never forget when my mother pulled this snapshot out of the family treasures. I was actually shocked to see I wasn't heavy at the age of 4.

Anyway I can remember my mother taking me from doctor to doctor wondering if anything could be done. Metabolism tests always revealed a normal thyroid. "She's just eating too much," the doctor would always tell

In all honesty I do not recall eating more than I should. But I suppose I did. Mother, however, was always careful to see that the family meals always were nutritiously balanced and that I didn't overdo.

I don't recall seeing stockpiles of candy in the house, nor were mounds of potatoes with gravy piled high on dinner plates. And when I tried as quietly as I could to steal a cookie from the jar, Mother had sonic hearing and I got caught every time.

I THINK being overweight as a child was the most difficult part of the problem emotionally. I truly sympathize with kids today who are over weight.

I was teased so much. And I can remember word-for-word a song the boys used to tease me with on the playground about being heavy. I still mentally withdraw just recalling the incident as it happened repeatedly.

I managed to outgrow some of the fat during my growth spurt in my teen years, and for the most part kept the overeating problem under control. But I was still self-conscious during those teen years. I longed to look like the long, lean teens with flat tummies, and slender thighs. I knew I would never look like that.

Multiple pregnancies after marriage did me in. With each succeeding pregnancy, I gained more than I lost. Seven years ago I weighed more than I ever had in my lifetime, after my last child was born. I was 25 pounds overweight, weighing 147, and feeling like I weighed 247.

THIS IS usually where I get a little defensive.

I know some of you are saying — "25 pounds? Is that all? How can she know how I feel? I have to lose 150 pounds and she never did.'

I have experienced all of the emotions any overweight person feels. I have huffed and puffed up the stairs. I've had trouble tying shoe laces. I've felt depressed following clothes shopping sprees. I have never felt thin. I have disliked myself to the point where I was difficult to live with, miserable around my family, and uneasy around my friends.

I am, however, so thankful that when I reached out for help someone was there to listen; that when I struggled through my failures and achievements in dieting, there always was someone to hold my hand or cheer me on. And then when I reached my goal six years ago, there were wonderful people to help me celebrate.

Is the struggle over for me? I doubt if it ever will be. I have accepted the problem as being with me for a lifetime. And it is in that framework that I continually strive to maintain control over an impulsive and compulsive, and sometimes still-depressing, weight problem.

One lady, (the one who wants to wants to throw darts at me), said she never thinks of herself as heavy and is surprised to look in the mirror to find she is no longer thin.

My problem is the opposite. No matter how much weight I have ever lost, or how thin I think I should be, I look in the mirror and always see someone heavy — I'll never be thin in my mind's Law said that when the transportation package was approved last year, the legislature wrote into law that the house and senate would have to pass a concurrent resolution in order to appropriate funds for the subway.

HOWEVER, THE legislative prerogative to vote on the subway issue was called into question when the house began debate on the transportation package in May.

"There was a real question that if we approved the transportation program, which included subway funds, we might be agreeing to build a subway in Detroit without ever debating the issue."

Snack time: It's a big and growing business

By SUSAN TAUBER

For some workers in an office or factory, a tray filled to the brim with snacks represents the devil in disguise. For others, it's a blessing at coffeebreak time.

For the companies that supply them, however, the boxes mean big business.

Supplying corrugated cardboard boxes filled with tempting candy bars, potato chips, chocolate mints, gum, raisins, nuts cookies, and cheese and crackers is a trend that has changed the food supply business in a few short

Prior to the introduction of the boxes, workers often relied on vending machines to get snacks

The boxes provide nibbles all the

Before the trend began, Robsco, Inc. of Troy, a company that's more than 10 years old, supplied coffee to businesses. It began supplying snacks when coffee prices began rising a few years ago.

'Snacks were fust something extra to offer the customer then," said manager Mike Blank. "Now it's a moneymaking project for us."

In the last three years, about 25 companies attempted to make it in the snack-box business, he said. There aren't many left.

Two of the survivors are Box-O-Snax in Wayne and Starvin' Marvin Coffee and Snacks in Detroit. Both, as well as Robsco, supply customers in Oakland BOX-O-SNAX began offering snack boxes three years ago. The firm also sells coffee now. Starvin' Marvin, also three years old, began with both coffee and snack boxes.

"Since getting into snacks, we've gone national," he said . "Our 22 new businesses started out supplying snack boxes instead of coffee.'

Robsco, whose name will soon change to Nationwide Gourmets, has businesses in states from Colorado to Florida to New York.

Twenty-five cents is the standard price for each snack item. People pay according to the honor system, dropping money into the box each time they take something.

There are problems with people not paying for their snacks.

Some companies handle this by placing a sign on a box, stating if the cash is short the following week the box will be removed.

Others have their drivers talk to people in the building, trying to politely encourage them to pay what they owe.

"If the staff people aren't honest enough to pay 25 cents for what they take out of the box, that's something an employer may want to know. It may indicate something," said Blank.

"WE'RE GEARED for a 20 percent shortage on the average, depending on how much money the tray itself brought in. But when I was a driver for awhile, I was surprised at how conscientious most people were," he added.

Freshness is an important factor to the success of the snack box. Drivers change boxes on a rotation basis, from once a week to every 10 days, depending on the supplier.

Plymouth — Past & Present

A part of Plymouth's past

By Sam Hudson

Two historic buildings that once stood in Plymouth are among the early American structures Henry Ford decided to preserve when he started Greenfield Village 50 years ago.

The Plymouth House and The Plymouth Carding Mill, as they are called at the village, are located near The Edison Illuminating Co.

They vie for tourist attention with the homes of such American celebrities as Noah Webster, the Wright brothers, Luther Burbank, William Holmes McGuffey, Robert Frost, Stephen Foster and Henry Ford himself.

IN 1929, when collecting examples of Americana for inclusion in his "museum village," Ford bought the local buildings on the recommendation of E.J. Cutler, his architect for historical Cutler, who later was to become a resident of Plymouth, was impressed with the Plymouth House as an example of the Greek revival period of architecture that flourished in the United States in the mid-19th century. Ford liked it because it was a typical farm home of the period. Ford needed no prodding to buy the Plymouth Carding Mill. As a boy he had visited it with his father who brought cartloads of wool to the mill to be processed.

The photos shown here were taken at the original sites before Ed Cutler and his crew dismantled the structures. The parts, numbered piece by piece, were shipped to Greenfield Village where they were meticulously restored.

THE PLYMOUTH HOUSE, built in 1845, stood at 519 North Mill Street at the corner of Farmer. The lot is now part of the samll city park that runs along Farmer.

The house was built by Peter Trinkhaus for his brother-in-law, Christina Fisher. Trinkhaus, born in Prussia in 1814, came to Plymouth in 1832 - seven years after the community began. He may have been a member of the 20 German families Henry Holbrook encouraged to settle here, as reported in an 1890 account by Fred Carlisle.

Christian Fisher made shoes which he sold from the house. Eventually the home became the property of Louis Kensler, also a shoemaker. Kensler used a room in the house for his shop until 1869 when he converted it into a saloon which existed until 1871.

Trinkhaus modified the house slightly in 1855. A stairway was rebuilt after damage by fire. When Ford bought the building it was owned by a man named

After the house was restored at Greenfield Village, Ed-Cutler used it as his office. He said it had the best heating system in the village. In 1959, he told an interviewer that the house, built 114 years before, "stacked up against new homes in workmanship quality."

AS ÇAN BE seen in the photo of the Plymouth Carding Mill, it was in far worse shape than the Plymouth House when Cutler had the picture taken. The chief attraction of the building was its interesting roof line.

Known in Plymouth as Gunsolly's Mill, it was built in the 1850s by John Gunsolly. The mill was located near the Middle Rouge River off what is now Hines Drive, north of the Plymouth Road overpass.

Cutler said Ford bought the old mill building from Gunsolly's son, Ike, who lived near the corner of Joy and Newburgh Roads.

At the height of its existence, Gunsolly's Mill drew wool growers from a large part of southeastern Michigan. William J. Burrows, who came to Plymouth from Canada in 1859, recalled that when he arrived "Plymouth was a great wool market." When it stood in Plymouth the mill was used exclusively for carding wool (although more operations are performed today in the restored building at Greenfield Village). Carding, the first operation prior to making yarn, is the process of combing or straighten the washed wool after it is sheared from the sheep.

Farmers who brought their wool to the mill exchanged it for a proportionate amount of rovings, the strands of fibers used in spinning. Spinning was one of the many jobs of the wives and daughters of the farmers who raised

Because they had to wait their turn at the mill, farmers often boarded at a hotel in Plymouth. An information sheet prepared by the guide department at Greenfield Village notes that the hotel charged $3 a week for a room, including meals. Good whiskey was to be had at 25 cents a gallon.

The hotel is not named. Among the possibilities is J.W. Root's Hotel, which was part of the Phoenix block on Main Street, facing Kellogg Park. It was destroyed in 1856 by the fire which demolished the entire block.

Another possibility is the Adams House which Thomas Whipple established in the same block when it was rebuilt in 1857. A third is the Bode House, opened as a hotel in 1868 by a German family of that name. The twostoried brick building which housed that hotel still stands next to the C&O railroad tracks on Main Street. It is now the home of Bode's Restaurant.

The Plymouth Carding Mill at Greenfield Village is open year-round as part of the village crafts program. In addition to carding, visitors also can see spinning and loom operations.

The Stroller

Grouch is back

- By W. W. EDGAR

There was no mistaking his identity. Anyone who ever had met or chatted with the Old Grouch easily could identify him — even in a crowd — because of his shuffling walk, bent shoulders and the old

The Stroller hadn't seen him for several years, and over that stretch often had wished for another of the visits that ranged almost from laughs to tears. No one ever could find more fault with the world — especially in Plymouth — than the Old Grouch, whose baptismal name never was known.

Now he was back and calmly admitted that he had been away to the coast with members of his family for a change and finally yielded to the urge to come back and see his old-time friends.

'Things haven't changed much, " he said by way of greeting. "They are still fussing around with the parking problem that should have been solved years ago. At least they had the chance when the Wiedman building behind the hotel was razed.

"It was a natural for a double decker. All they had to do was clear the debris, build a wall up on the edge of the sidewalk and then cover the area. But it wasn't done.

"Dick Blodgett, the city manager at the time, smiled when the idea was offered and said Plymouth didn't need it. That's why the problem is still

WHEN THE Old Grouch goes on the rampage, it is almost useless to try to stop him, so all The Stroller could do was listen.

"And I see they haven't done a thing about the railroad crossing delays. Other towns and cities have a way of solving their problems, but here in Plymouth, there doesn't seem to be any answers.

"Other places seem to get money to help on such things, but not here. I guess the people don't want to pay anything toward the solution."

As we walked along, the Old Grouch spotted the Mayflower Motel behind the Meeting House, and he just stood and stared.

"There's a monument to the kind of thinking we have had around here. For years they have talked about establishing a loop road. It would have wound around, and Deer Street would have been a major part of it.

"When I left here a few years ago, it seems the loop road was all set. I guess that's why the motel rooms were built that way - to face the loop road.

"But something must have happened. We never got the loop road, and the motel rooms don't get the benefit of traffic.

Walking along and noticing all the changes in appearance of the buildings along Main Street, the Old Grouch smiled again, just a bit then added, "They may change the face of the place, but the same old problems are here."

THE STROLLER always has enjoyed his visits with the Old Grouch, for you meet few fellows like him along the road.

He was the fellow who complained about the high school kids shoving him off the street at lunch time when Plymouth High was on Main Street.

"Something should be done about," he insisted. Then when the school was shifted to Centennial Educational Park on Joy Road, he complained that there was nothing but pigeons on the main thoroughfare. And he hollered loud and long when the word Salem was added to the school name. He still thinks it should be just plain Plymouth High.

And he thinks the name Plymouth should be taken from the Plymouth Center for Human Development on Sheldon Road because the buildings are not in Plymouth.

Sometimes the Old Grouch is right.

County's air is better

How's the air in western Wavne County?

"Generally . . . pretty good," says Howard Murray, of the Wayne County Air Pollution Control Division. "You're in a better, much better condition of air quality than the downriver area, obviously."

The air in the western suburbs is "meeting all of the federal air quality standards," said Murray, the pollution control division's public information officer.

Pollution control, part of the county health department, measures air quality daily through 14 automatic monitoring stations, Murray explained. There are also 22 county air pollution inspectors.

THERE'S A station near Schoolcraft and Levan in Livonia and one along Cherry Hill Road in Westland. Seven of the stations are in Detroit.

Pollution control's downtown office gets readings from the various unmanned stations "every 15 minutes," Murray said. The monitoring network is tested twice every day at 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The stations keep track of "suspended particles" (dust and dirt), carbon monoxide, sulfur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide and ozone. Murray said. Their origins are automobile emissions, industrial and utility power plants.

The best example Murray could give of the western suburbs' good air quality was consistently low readings of dust and dirt. The federal quality standard for dust and dirt particles is 75 micrograms per cubic meter of air. Murray said readings for the out-county suburbs are "at or below 60 micrograms."

AIR POLLUTION is related to the concentration of people, vehicles and industry. "The denser these concentrations become, the greater the problem," Murray said.

Thus, western Wayne, with a mix of auto plants, lighter industry and scores of subdivisions, fares better than the industry glutted downriver area and downtown Detroit.

Murray said he didn't think the 11/2-year-old Jeffries freeway through the western suburbs has adversely affected the air.

editorial opinion

Thermostat mandate adds degree of comfort

In the good old days, summer was hot and winter

Then, along came efficient furnaces and air conditioning and people developed a whole new way of thinking.

It became a welcome relief from a blazing summer day to walk into a shopping mall and be confronted by the icy breath of an air conditioner.

And winter's chill faded quickly when one ducked into a toasty, warm restaurant.

Somewhere along the line, a cold building that would have become unacceptable in the winter seemed refreshing in the summer.

And overheated buildings which would be called sweltering in the summer are cozy in the winter.

Now the federal government has spojled all that by requiring that all public buildings set thermostats at no less than 78 degrees in the summer and no more than 65 in the winter.

Once again summer is hot and winter is cold. This is a natural state, at least in this meridian.

Nevertheless, people are complaining that they can't work in such heat or that they can't bend their fingers around a pencil in 65 degree termperatures.

We have never understood the parodox of having to take a sweater along when the temperature is 90 degrees in order to combat the overzealous air conditioner; or why a warm building in winter is more comfortable than a warm building in summer.

Possibly the population at large has become conditioned to radical temperature changes whenever they enter a building.

Frankly, we have grown tired of shivering in restaurants and government buildings; of having to shed bulky winter coats while shopping; and of alternately freezing and sweating when traveling from one environment to another.

We welcome a return to normalcy. Contrary to popular belief, you won't be able to fry an egg on your desk if the office is kept at 78 degrees. You may not be able to wear as many layers of clothings to work as you used to, which should be duly noted by the powers who institute dress codes.

Now we can save the jackets and sweaters for the winter, where such garments rightly belong.

Should these words serve as no comfort for those who liked things the way they were before, we offer this suggestion. Tape pictures of winter scenes over the windows this summer and everyone will welcome the building's warmth.

You can change the pictures to beach scenes in the winter, at which point everyone will comment on how refreshing it is to have air conditioning.

Detroit rowdy sports town

In all the hullabaloo that was raised about the uprising of the spectators at the recent baseball game between the Detroit Tigers and the White Sox in Chicago, one question keeps gnawing at The Stroller's mind.

What if the "riot" had happened at the close of a scheduled single game instead of between games of a scheduled doubleheader?

Chances are it would have been considered a bit of fun instead of pandemonium by the men in the press box and the broadcasters booth. They would have gone on with their work instead of telling the folks that they were too depressed to discuss what was happening on the field.

It is a strange thing but spectators at sports events sometimes have funny ways of showing their emotions. They'll swarm all over the playing fields and tear down goal posts at football games. On many occasions, these displays are not confined to students, but the old grads get the feeling of their youthful college days and join in what they call

WHILE THE STROLLER was watching the Chicago incident on TV, he couldn't help recall that night in 1968 when the Tigers won the pennant.

No sooner was the last out made than they started to swarm all over the premises, climbing the rails in the box seats and racing up and down the playing field. Enroute many of them ripped up the turf, seized the base bags and the home plate.

Even down in the Tigers' dressing room, the "rioting" went on as champagne was spilled over the invaders and players alike. No one was injured and it was all considered just a bit of fun.

These displays of emotion are not confined to the ballparks. Many times in recent years the Red Wings were forced to stop play at Olympia while the cleanup crews removed such things like old boots, dead fish and, at times, even turtles from the ice. And on one occasion they picked up a set of false teeth.

IT IS STRANGE, but this is the way the sports fans are showing their emotions, whether it be pleasure or dissatisfaction.

And how often have you seen the goal posts being uprooted at the end of football games? It used to be that the football followers tore them down, then broke them into bits so they could have a souvenir. Then came the steel posts that were thought to be strong enough to withstand these attacks. But they, too, have been bent toward the ground and virtually ruined. And it is taken as part of the fun of celebrating a victory.

THE STROLLER well recalls the year Michigan State dropped a football rival from its schedule because the curbstone alumni spent the night before a game painting all the traffic lights green and caused some of the worst traffic tangles ever in Lansing. Fortunately, no one was injured.

And don't forget, it was in Detroit that Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, then the baseball commissioner, ordered Ducky Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals out of the final game of the 1934 World Series to save him from possible injury as Tiger fans peppered him with baskets of fruit.

So, when you bad mouth Chicago and its followers for what happened the other night, it is well to remember the adage:

"People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

A jungle parable Donkey's pals do him in

Once upon a time in the deep, dark jungle, there was a donkey named Jimmy.

The jungle had gone through some tumultuous times with an unpopular war and scandal in the highest places in the jungle administration, and the jungle animals were looking for a leader to bring some sunlight into the gloom of the forest. Jimmy had been ruler of a small principality in the jungle and had established a reputation for honesty and integrity, so the animals elected him king of the whole jungle because he didn't seem like the political animals hanging around the main watering

UPON TAKING the new position, Jimmy surrounded himself with advisors he had used when he was running the principality. Few of them had any experience running something as big as the whole

For that job, the king had to rely on the jungle parliament to pass laws to get his programs under way. But during the royal campaign, Jimmy had criticized many of the members of the jungle parliament for not doing a very good job, and it didn't make him too popular with the leaders of that body.

It so happened that there were more donkeys in the parliament than any other animals, so Jimmy should have had clear sailing with his programs. His predecessor had been an elephant and had hope a lot of trouble with the other animals in the parliament.

AT FIRST, Jimmy's administration was like a breath of fresh air.

Unfortunately, Jimmy's style was to try to run the whole show by himself, with a small cluster of advisors. Since he was inexperienced in running a jungle so big, as were his advisors, he made many, many mistakes.

After a while, the price of coconuts and bananas went up, the economy went down, and the camels in the desert kept raising the price of olive oil.

Looking for someone to blame, the animals in the jungle blamed Jimmy. A poll was taken, and he got the lowest rating of all the kings who had ever ruled the jungle.

IN ORDER TO get back their confidence, Jimmy decided he had to show leadership. He asked for the resignations of all his advisors.

He then accepted the resignations of some but promoted others. Unfortunately, he fired the ones who were perceived by the other animals as being competent and promoted some who were perceived to be less than competent.

He kept as advisors his old crowd from the little principality - and dismissed the outsiders who had experience in ruling. The result was that he allowed other donkeys and some elephants eventually to usurp his power because he lost the following of the animals in the MORAL: Many times it is your friends and not your enemies who do you in.

Tim Richard

McQuesten has a new vocation

I once said Schoolcraft College trustee Mark McQuesten would have been more at home in a medieval, church-related academy than in a vocational-technical community college.

Those who think medieval means the Dark Ages took it as the ultimate put-down of McQuesten. Not so. Medieval universities were first-class centers of learning — better, even, than some modern schools because the student body was international and spoke a common language, Latin.

We recalled that column over a beer recently after Mark informed me he plans to enroll in Sacred Heart Seminary Aug. 24 hope to study for the priesthood of the Catholic Church. I drink to his success and pray he makes it through the seven-McQuesten will be able to finish the two years remaining in his six-year term. He hasn't ruled out running again because he doesn't know whether he will go all the way through the program - two years to a bachelor's degree in history at Sacred Heart, four years of theology at St. John Seminary and a year as a deacon in a parish.

THE PRIESTHOOD has always been on his mind. He spent a semester at Sacred Heart in 1968 and found it "academically incredibly hard — far beyond my public school bringing up." All 13 men with public school backgrounds flunked out the first

He was advised to enter Schoolcraft College to beef up academically. "It was a good suggestion," McQuesten spent 31/2 years at Schoolcraft and enjoys good-natured jokes about being a "professional student." He covered Schoolcraft board meetings for the Campus Globe and wrote a column called "Cornerstone" on ethical problems, moral questions, war, abortion.

After two unsuccessful runs for office, he was elected to the Schoolcraft board in 1975. On the board, he has been an academics hard-liner, and, most of the time, he has been on the short end of 7-1 and 6-2 votes.

BUT NOT ALL the time. McQuesten sought a system for student evaluation of the faculty. In contract negotiations, the Faculty Forum agreed to make evaluation forms available to students, but the instructor has the option of reading their answers and of making them available to the department head.

At medieval universities, the ultimate authority was not the voters or taxpayers (there was no tax support of education) or even the administration or alumni. A rector was elected every two years at a mass meeting of the students, who held the reins of power.

Medieval faculty members were fined for falling behind class schedules, for starting lectures late or talking too long. They were also fined if attendance fell too low.

In the 1960s, persons who advocated a student role in governance of a college were considered wild-eyed radicals. Actually, they had solid historical precedent.

AT SACRED HEART, McQuesten will find himself among a "new wave" of men studying for the priesthood.

"The average age will be about 40," said McQuesten, who is a graying 30. "Many are leaving business and corporate life," he said, citing one who is giving up a personnel director title and another a $70,000 annual salary. McQuesten has been in the insurance business.

That's good for the church. Pope John Paul II had been around a bit before he entered the seminary at 26. The late James Francis Cardinal McIntyre, archbishop of Los Angeles, had a successful Wall Street career before entering the seminary at 29. Those early, wordly years made them better priests and better church administrators.

And so Mark McQuesten moves from the student activist to the silver-haired seminarian. And if his theological studies go well and his pastoral calling is fruitful — as I'm willing to wager they will be then Schoolcraft, "the college designed with the community in mind," can boast of launching one more successful career.

You see, the seminary is accepting all his Schoolcraft academic credits

From all outward appearances, Brian Cunningham is your average 23-year-old.

A resident of Jackson, he works two jobs. Brian's all-around health is excellent.

He attended Jackson Community College one year and ended up with a 3.4 average on a 4.0 scale. He decided not to go back for further classes. Brian had developed a great interest in amateur radio and took a job with a communications company. That was almost four years ago. Now he's the firm's service manager.

He also has been working for his dad, a small home repair contractor.

SO WHAT'S UNUSUAL ABOUT Brian Cunningham?

Well, Brian happens to be a sort of medical mira-

While 18, he survived a near-drowning, being revived with no brain damage after spending 38 minutes under icy water.

Brian's experience ended up as part of a threeyear study done by Dr. Martin J. Nemiroff, a University of Michigan lung disease and diving medicine specialist

In the federally-funded project, Dr. Nemiroff investigated 50 near-drownings in Michigan waters. He participated in or consulted on many of the resuscitation efforts.

Of the 50, he selected 13 cases which he called "cold water drownings." Nine of these victims were successfully resuscitated without ill effects, including no brain damange. Two died from lung infections contracted in the water and two suffered brain damage.

BRIAN CUNNINGHAM turns out to be the study's classic.

Let's quickly look at what happened to him.

Brian and a friend were driving along two-lane Moscow Road, which is south and west of Jackson, on March 29, 1975.

Riordan

Executive Editor

Brian lost control of the car and it sailed off the road, through ice which covered a six-feet-deep pond. The car sank completely under water. Two persons attempted to get the youths out. They were driven back by the icy waters.

Two Jackson County sheriff's deputies arrived on the scene and launched a small boat. One dived beneath the water's surface. He tried to open a door, but couldn't. A wrecker pulled up. The deputy attached the truck's towing cable to the car and it was pulled out.

Total time elapsed: 38 minutes.

BRIAN AND HIS FRIEND were quickly removed from the car. Their coloring was blue, no pulse, no signs of life. They were declared dead and loaded into an ambulance.

Suddenly, Brian coughed. Emergency crewmen immediately began resuscitation effort. They continued as Brian was rushed to University Hospital, Ann Arbor. In 15 hours he regained consciousness. Within two weeks he was back in school completely normal. His friend did not survive. On Tuesday evening, Brian and I chatted on the telephone.

He told me, "I have no physical disability. I'm in A-1 health.

It's funny, Brian said, that in recent months he has been getting calls from news people. Four years ago there were all kinds, including Barbara Walters who wanted Brian to appear on the Today Show. (He declined.) But then, nothing. Now the tempo has started again.

COULD IT BE THAT more people, including doctors, police agencies and paramedics are taking a long look at the science of helping the neardrowning victim?

I know I am.

There was an incident last week in West Bloomfield's Orchard Lake. A 28-year-old man drowned while swimming.

Moments after the drama began to unfold, fate had me driving along Old Indian Trail next to the lake. I parked my car and spent the next 90 minutes observing. It was a sickening experience. Efforts to find the body seemed hung up on a technicality was it a rescue or a recovery operation, based on the time the victim had been under water?

Born out of that tragedy comes this question: Can a person survive after being submerged for more than the tradionally-accepted four to 10 minutes?

In a word, yes - if conditions are right. That means the water must be cold and clean, according to Dr. Nemiroff.

WHICH BRINGS US to the "mammalian diving reflex.'

Have you ever heard of it? I hadn't.

This reflex was first discovered in the 1930s. Seagoing mammals — whales, seals and porpoises were found to be able to exist under water without breathing for up to 30 minutes in emergency situa-

The automatic mammalian diving reflex makes this possible. It reduces the supply of blood to skin, muscle and gut, tissues all resistant to oxygen-loss

Blood oxygen is then reserved for the brain, heart and lungs.

But this happens only in cold water. In Brian Cunningham's case, since there was no air bubble in the car, the mammalian reflex is what put his system on "hold" for 38 minutes, continuing oxygen to his brain.

WHAT ABOUT TEMPERATURES this time of year in lakes like Orchard?

Dr. Nemiroff has said that in Michigan and other states near large bodies of water, the year-round temperatures, especially in deeper areas, are well below 70 degrees.

Thus, it's always possible a near-drowning victim's system might automatically have been shifted by the mammalian reflex. That means a chance for recovery — up to and including a 100 percent return to normalcy, like Brian Cunning-

What does that all mean?

Dr. Nemiroff offers this advice, directly to rescue workers and doctors:

"First, don't give up. Even if the victim looks dead. He may be cold, blue, not breathing, with no detectable pulse or heartbeat, with fixed and dilated pupils.

"Start resuscitation immediately, external heart massage and ventilation with as near 100 per cent oxygen as you have available Warm the body gradually from the inside by raising the temperature of the oxygen to 110 degrees Fahrenheit with a nebu-

"Maintain cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, at least until the body temperature reaches normal. Defibrillation - shocking the heart into action may not be successful until normal body temperature is reached.

"Be absolutely certain the patient is dead before you give up," the doctor concluded.

Is the neighborhood dentist overcharging?

Dear Dr. DeFrancesco: Since moving to this area, we tried to find a family dentist. We went to the closest one to our house.

My husband, age 49, had a space in his upper teeth on the side of his mouth, where a tooth was extracted a year ago. The dentist said he should have a false one put in or his bottom tooth would start growing up because it has nothing to hit on and then could become loose.

We didn't know until he started the work that he would drill the two good teeth on both sides of the vacant space to make caps to hold the false tooth in. The price came to $600.

Since then, I've read an article I'm sending you which says a complete upper or lower could cost $200 to $400. My two questions are:

1. If a complete upper would be in that price range, wouldn't two caps with a false tooth in the middle be high at $600?

2. Was it wise to drill away two good teeth and cap them instead of just leaving the vacant space? I want to make a dental appointment on a regular basis, but I have to know if this is the right one. I need answers to help me make my decision.

I advise you to return to the dentist who suggested to drill the teeth and construct a fixed porcelain bridge. He is right when he says the lower tooth will grow into the upper space.

If the upper space will close due to the adjacent teeth drifting, then you will acquire malocclusion. The upper and lower teeth would not be articulat-

The variance in fee is the type of dentistry involved - type of materials (gold, porcelain, etc.), more skills required. In other words, you are receiving the "Cadillac" of dentistry. Good luck.

Dear Dr. DeFrancesco: My dentist drilled deep into my tooth to try to fill the cavity but claims he cannot drill deeper and suggests pulling the tooth because of deep decay.

I need my tooth badly, already lost two, have no toothache so far, would like to hang on as long as possible. Now it has a temporary filling.

If the roots are healthy and the supporting tissues are strong (bone and gums), I suggest your dentist perform a pulp canal treatment, and then fill the cavity with a permanent filling.

Dear Dr. DeFrancesco: Are six-year-old molars important in a youngster's mouth?

L.B. Yes. The six-year molars, which are usually the first permanent teeth to come in, seem to be the most decay-prone teeth in a youngster's mouth.

If one of these molars is lost, other permanent teeth may become impacted or come in at the wrong angle or in the wrong place.

Consequently, as a safety measure, the dentist may put in a shallow filling to protect a particular molar if he thinks it is likely to become diseased. The filling will prevent food from getting into it and keep the tooth sound.

Off the Walls

The 4-letter word

By NANCY WALLS SMITH

Someday, when I have absolutely nothing else in the world to do, I may read it. It's a subject that's been on my mind lately. What I find intriguing is the fact that this "game" begins at such an early age. The words may get slightly more sophisticated as one gets older, but when I hear my 4-year-old say "Poop" and giggle hysterically for 15 minutes, I figure it's the same princi-

I suspect this quaint little phrase must have been the very first swear word stumbled upon by cavemen. Or at least the cave children must have kicked it around a lot.

When a child discovers the delightful response he can arouse in his fellow preschoolers with this simple statement, there's just no stopping him. He begins spicing up his every other sentence with it, and somehow it always gets a laugh.

Repetition never seems to dull a joke with the younger set. Their familiarity with the material seems only to enhance their response.

And how does mother react to all of this? There are several schools of thought on this one - and I've tried them all! According to those who should know, this annoying little habit can best be cured simply by ignoring it

I tried that. I ignored my son when he said "poop" more than 117 times during lunch alone, much to the delight of his brother. But you know, I've discovered that any word repeated more than 117 times followed by squeals of delight by a 3-year-old can have a jarring effect on the nervous system.

It wasn't the word that was making me twitchy. It was the frequency with which he managed to work it into the conversation.

I lasted for a couple of weeks with the ignoring technique. He wasn't losing interest in the word. If anything, I seemed to be hearing it more often.

So I started screaming. "I don't want to hear you say that anymore! It may be funny to kids, but it is not funny to grown-ups! Never again! Do you hear I must have repeated this series of sentences 20-30 times a day. Other than a rise in my blood pressure, I could discern not a difference.

One afternoon, a new friend was over for tea and talk. When she heard me lash forth with my tirade of "I don't want to hear that anymore. . . . etc.,

The finals are slated for Sunday afternoon at Massey.

"We don't depend on one or two guys. No one really stands out. Nobody on our team gets down." Mickey's has a second place finish in the South Haven tournament to its credit and has beaten Rusty Nail twice this season.

Villa allowed four runs in gaining the victory. "Sam got a little tired in the last few innings because of the heat," said Canton coach Gerald Ebmeyer. "He really pitched a strong game."

"I'm really proud of the kids," he said. "They've come back all year long. They're real fighters." Eight teams were battling for five playoff spots.

A trip to the National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF) World Series is at stake this weekend at Canton's baseball field.

Five Detroit area teams out of the Mickey Mantle Baseball League (15-16 years) will compete in a double elimination tourney hosted by the Canton Elks, coached by Dave Racer.

Caesars loses ground in tight Mack race

By SCOTT ADLER

The Canton Little Caesars split another doubleheader Saturday against Southfield, losing the opener 6-5 while winning the nightcap in extra innings, 8-5.

It was the second straight doubleheader split by the Little Caesars which have now lost three of the last seven games. Their record dropped to 14-6-1 as they remain atop the Connie Mack League but still trail the Plymouth Elks in the loss column with two games to play. Plymouth has six to play.

"Our schedule is now against us because we can't control our own destiny," said Canton Coach John Gravlin. "Our recent downfall (losses to Plymouth and Southfield) has really hurt us. We didn't come ready to play."

Canton jumped out to a four-run lead in game one Saturday but gave up two runs to Southfield in the seventh inning and lost 6-5.

Dave Weise continued his hot hitting as he went three-for-four in the opener and had two hits in the second game, upping his average to an astounding .475 with five homeruns and 24 RBI's in 21 games.

In game two, Little Caesars scored four times in the first inning and failed to score after loading the bases for the second time in the opening inning.

Rusty Mandle accounted for the first four Canton runs with a grand slam in the first inning.

Canton scored again in the third after loading the bases with two out but Don Dreher walked home when Steve Gray was issued a walk, the third of the inning.

Little Caesars led 5-3 heading into the final inning but gave up two runs in the seventh and failed to score in their half.

Weise wasted no time in the eighth inning, slamming a lead-off homerun. Scott Dawson and Mandle followed with walks and came home on singles by Pat McNamara and Dave Meador.

Dawson won his second game for Canton in as many decisions in relief of Al Lipinski.

Brighton ended Plymouth Salem Crestwood Dodge's hopes of gaining a Sandy Koufax AABC baseball playoff lead, 5-4. spot with a 5-3 victory Tuesday night.

The loss dropped Salem to 12-9 overall. Eight teams were battling for five spots in this week's AABC district tournaments scheduled for Northville and Sterling Heights.

Fairlane tallied two runs in the top of the seventh inning to take a one-run

No particular mention was made of it when the high scores of the past season were released by the Women's International Bowling Congress, but the team that showed the way in the nation was Penny Behn's Express team. And it was unusual because Penny and her mates rolled the 3258 while bowling in the Men's Classic at Orchard Lanes.

For years the male bowlers argued that women had no place in men's leagues, but the showing of the Express team is proof that the old argument doesn't hold water any more.

The Express team not only topped the nation in the series count but rolled an 1135 to place fifth in the single game category. The showing now helps to prove that bowling against men helps the women to keener competition and higher scores. Perhaps now there will be more of them invading the top clas-

The Elks took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Paul Woodard doubled and came home on Jim Anderson's single.

In the fourth inning, Plymouth went ahead 3-0 as Anderson led off with a triple and pitcher Matt Etienne came through with an RBI single. He then scored on Mike Woodard's single.

At the Livonia Y (Grand Slam Tennis Club), we generally start childern in group lessons around the age of 7 if they have the strength to hold the racquet firmly and the interest to learn the game.

Classes for youngsters are kept at a suitable teaching level with no great emphasis placed on competition or winning. It's very important to give children a positive introduction to the game so as not to destroy their interest. Once that happens, it could be years before they show interest again, if

A few years ago, we taught a program developed for children called "Tennis for Tots." It was geared for the 5 and 6-year-olds, where skills were taught no further from the net than 18 feet compared to the standard 39 feet.

We also used racquetball racquets or cut-off tennis racquets. The program was fun for the childern and, I might add, quite an experience for the pros.

Here are my recommendations to parents with childern who might have an interest in learning to play tennis: · Ask the child if he wants to take lessons. Don't insist that he does. · Begin with group lessons, not private lessons. Groups help to relax a. junior during the introduction phase. · If a regular racquet is too heavy, buy a shorter, modified junior racquet at a local pro shop. A child can lose confidence if he doesn't have the strength to swing the racquet.

· Take the time to toss balls each week so the child can practice. Often times, our students don't practice because there is no one to practice with. As a parent, this is your responsibility if you want the child to learn the game. Make these practice sessions frequent but short. One-half hour every two or three days is good.

Go where quality lessons are taught. Your child could be taught all the wrong things by a poor instructor. Quality instruction from a professional may cost more, but the results are proven. Doesn't your child deserve the

THE CITY OF PLYMOUTH ORDAINS:

Section 1. Section 5.195, Off-Street Parking Requirement, of Article XV, Title V of Chapter 52, Zoning, of the Plymouth City Code, is hereby amended by adding new Sub-section (9) Parking Credits, and re-numbering (9) to (10) and (10) to (11), as SCOTT WOOLWEAVER, a student at the University of Michigan, was one of four winners in the university division of the concerto competition at Interlochen.

Marcie Woolweaver shared the news of her grandson's win in a letter to Jean Braun, who was Scott's viola teacher during his high school years. Jean is principal violist with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. Marcie is a cellist and was a longtime member of the orchestra before she and her husband Herb, moved to northern Michigan after he retired from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. They spend the winters in Florida and the summers near Interlochen.

Scott played the Bartok Concerto for Viola in the competition. Other winners were two pianists and a cellist. All four will perform in a special concert at Interlochen Aug. 18.

His parents are Gary and Gretchen Woolweaver of Garden City. Scott played with the Plymouth Symphony and concert-goers will remember the family concert in which Scott and Chuck Roth were featured performers.

DAISY BARNES, Marybeth Derderian and Jean Braun were in Provo, Utah recently for the annual viola congress.

The congress alternates between North America and Europe. This year, Brigham Young University hosted the meeting. Two years from now it will be in Toronto, Canada, and the trio is planning to attend that one.

The three violists enjoyed their roles as members of the audience - listening to the performances of some of the greatest violists and their students.

The dance will be from 7:30 p.m. to midnight Friday, Aug. 3, in Divine Savior Church Hall, 39375 Joy Road, between Hix Road and I-275.

There will be dancing to the music of the Hargrove Band, a light lunch, setups and beer. Admission will be the death of one of his sons. The Plymouth and Canton communities have rallied to the support of the family. The garage sale last weekend raised more than $1,000. Millie Conway and Carole Strid, whose garages were the collecting points for the sale, were pleased with "Some people came and stayed to work. Some came to buy then went home and brought back items for the sale," said Millie. BELATED happy birthday to Nancy Petrucelli of the Green Thumb. Although all the surprises planned by her friends did not materialize, the party on Sunday and the new gas barbecue grill were a lovely surprise.

LISTENING TO a talk show on the car radio Friday night, it was good to hear our local community college receive some good publicity.

The executive chef of the London Chop House was being interviewed and was answering questions called in by the listeners.

When asked which school had the best food service program, he replied, "I'd say Schoolcraft College. I've been most impressed with the people we have from there."

NICK PALISE, 10, of Canton Township qualified for the National Derby Rally next month in Chatanooga, Tenn.

Nick's qualifying run was made last weekend in Flint when his "soapbox" derby car came in sixth in a field of 48 entries.

The championships in Chatanooga are a week-long event beginning Aug. 13. Before the finals on Aug. 18 there will be a full-fledged parade with bands sponsored by the Chatanooga Chamber of Commerce.

Nick will be racing in the junior division. His parents, Nick and Sharon and the whole family are planning to be there for the week. Sharon says there are events planned for families throughout the week as the city caters to one of its major tourist o attractions.

Vacation Bible schools planned

Summer time is Bible school time for many youngsters — an enjoyable part of vacation.

For the People's Church in Canton Township, children of all religious denominations were welcomed to the backyard sessions at the home of Marty Sprecher, a member of the church. The congregation (Dutch Reformed Church) has been worshipping in Plymouth-Canton High School since Easter of 1978. Their new church will be built on Ford Road west of Canton Center.

The Rev. Harvey Heneveld is pastor of the church. This summer the youth program has been assisted by Bill Harris, a student at Western Theological Seminary in Holland, Mich.

With the help of six mothers, he coordinated the Bible School which attracted about 40 youngsters, children of members of People's Church and neighbors.

FAITH COMMUNITY Church will have its Vacation Bible School at Allen Elementary School on Haggerty Road.

Sessions will be from 9:30-11:30 a.m. Aug. 13-17. The program is planned for 4-year-olds through students completing the sixth grade. There will be crafts, Bible stories, songs and refreshments.

There will be no registration fee for the school, although a free will offering will be received each day.

To register, parents can call either of the Bible school's directors, Barb Crum, 453-0178, or Jackie Bell, 459-2199.

Faith Community Church holds its Sunday worship services in Pioneer Middle School at 10:30 a.m.

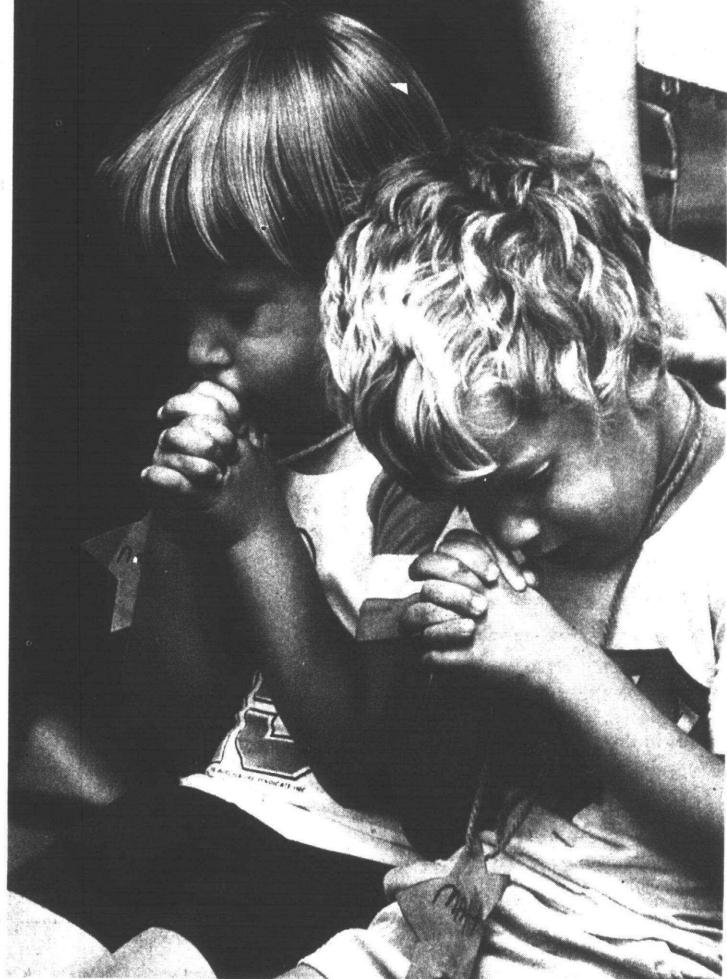

It is making plans to construct a building on Warren Road near Canton Center in Canton Township. The Rev. Darryl Bell is pastor of the young congregation.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN Church of Plymouth has scheduled its Vacation Church School for Aug. 13-19. Sessions will be from 9:30 a.m. to noon in the church at 701 Church Street, Plymouth.

Children 4 years of age through fourth grade will be accepted. There will be a donation of $2.50 for each family. Parents can call the church, 453-646, to register.

Theme for the week will be "Sharing God's Gifts." There will be daily crafts and activities. Each student will receive a record of songs and an iron-on patch for a shirt. At noon on Friday, there will be a sharing picnic. Dorothy Wright and Joyce Holmes are co-directors of the church

Canton Newcomers tee off at golf outing

Rolling Meadows Country Club on Sutton Road in Whitmore Lake was the setting for the July 7 Canton Newcomer's golf outing.

Mary Moore organized the first golf outing last summer, and the format was been so enjoyable, the group decided to use it again. It was a best ball scramble. Teams of two men and two women were chosen by the luck of the draw making the outing an excellent mixer.

Mary explained that in these scrambles, each player on each team hits every ball from the tee shot untill the ball is putted into the hole. The foursome decides which shot of the four is the best each time, and the next stroke is from that spot.

The game moves along quickly, and one doesn't have to be an Arnold Palmer or Judy Rankin to contribute to the team effort.

Claudette Gonsiorowski was nicknamed "designated putter" for her team. She couldn't hit the long ball as well as teammates Mary Moore, Mike Wesner and Ralph Luddecke, but was able to help the team with her putting TEN COUPLES participated, and after nine holes, the team of Shirley Lichty, Penny Luddecke, Charlie Freece and Sherm Moore was victorious. For their efforts, they received a cash prize, which also was not in the same league as those received by Arnold Palmer or Judy Rankin. For those who would like to shoot par, teamwork seems to be the answer, as the first place team score was an even par.

One stroke over par was good enough for second place. This score was carded by the team of Linda and Mike Becker and Ginny and Mike Koon. They also received a cash award.

The team was soon cheered by prizes of a bottle of wine for each of the women and a nicely illustrated book of basic golf for each man. After diligent study, John and Ted should soon be expert

Prizes also were awarded for the longest drive and closest to the pin for both men and women on designated holes. Mike Koon took the men's closest to the pin and received a wall plaque about golf. Six wine glasses were Mary Moore's prize for being closest to the pin for the women.

Shirley Lichty and Charlie Freece recorded the longest drives, and each received six golf balls.

As a matter of fact, Charlie Freece had an excellent day of golf. He won the putting contest cash prize in addition to being on the first-place team and having the longest drive.

What he doesn't know until reading this column is that he is the "designated planner" of the next golf outing. Congratulations, Charlie!

ROLLING Meadows has been most pleasant and hospitable to the Newcomer's. After golf, the group en455-5322 joyed a barbecue picnic in the picnic area. Each couple brought a dish to pass, and hot dogs and hamburgers were purchased from the entrance fee. Other prizes were awarded at the picnic. Ralph Luddecke won four golf balls, and gift certificates for a Maria's pizza went to Penny Luddecke, Charlie Freece, Shirley Lichty, Mike Wesner and Mike Koon.

The team of Kathy Freece, Marge Mogelnicki, Harry Lichty, and Rex Nichols also enjoyed the outing.

MOST OF US are superstitious about something. Right? We don't walk under a ladder, or let a lack cat cross our path. Or we carry a rabbit's foot for luck, which I could never understand. After all, it certainly didn't do the poor rabbit any good!

The inevitable Friday the 13th rolls around every now and again, and try as we will, it's difficult to avoid.

So, five couples decided to pack supplies, campers, tents, 12 children and one dog, and forget about Friday the 13th by camping in the great outdoors. Members of the expedition included Nancy and Gary Burns, Cathy and Chico Rodriguez, Pat and Mike Doller. Vladie and Jim Montgomery, and Diane and Larry Ellison.

They journeyed to Crazy Horse Camp Grounds in Port Huron where they set up three campers and pitched

Although some diamonds are still lodged in their place of formation, most are found buried in river beds and along river banks. Diamonds were first found in Brazil in the 18th century. The supply at that time was substantial, but today South America supplies little more than 1% of the world's production. The first diamond in South Africa was stumbled upon in 1866. Since that time the African continent has developed into the world's major diamond-producing nation. A more recent diamond-producing country is Russia. It is estimated that Russia produces 20% of the diamonds currently coming onto the market. A brand new source of diamonds is Australia; however, the mpact on the market is not yet known. Diamonds are not a renewable source. When your diamond was mined, it left a gap in the earth's make-up that will never be filled. Yours is a truly unique stone. ERA boosts home and family

By MARGARET MILLER

The Equal Rights Amendment will unify rather than split families and solidify the role of the homemaker rather than downgrade it.

That's the message of Anne Follis, national president of Homemakers for ERA Association, visiting in this area to push the amendment on television and begin the organization of a Michigan chapter of her group.

"I know of women who have been devastated because laws do not protect them equally," said Mrs. Follis, resident of Urbana, Ill. "We want to achieve legal status for the homemaker because that strengthens the family." Articulate and decisive, this minister's wife and mother of three said she's convinced that women who stay home and nurture their families need the Equal Rights Amendment more than those who go into business or professions as earners of paychecks.

It's an old English common law, underlying principle of governments in most states including Michigan, that makes ERA so important to homemakers, she said in an interview in the home of Livonian Laura Callow, cochairwoman of Michigan ERAmerica.

That 200-year-old law, she said, "holds that when a man and woman get married they become one, and that one is the husband - the wife ceases to exist as a separate legal being."

"Some laws do treat women fairly," Mrs. Follis agreed, "but that underlying principle is still there waiting to rear its ugly head."

SHE THEN LISTED some of the ways in which this principle affects men. lives of women in this country.

The Supreme Court of Oklahoma ruled in 1915 that a husband and wife cannot be adversaries in court because the wife does not exist in the eyes of the law, she said.

In South Dakota and Georgia, she added, a husband can disinherit his

And from the legal annals of Wisconsin she related the story of a homemaker named Margaret Rasmussen whom she called "betrayed" by her country's system of law.

'She was married in the '40s and had two sons," said Mrs. Follis. "She and her husband, Harold, lived in Margaret's mother's home, and she was thrifty and ran her home well.

"And she had a great belief in higher education, so she managed to save $5,000 in two bank accounts so her sons could go to college."

Mrs. Rasmussen died in 1963, and after her death her husband remarried and went to court to reclaim in money in those accounts

"I had just quit working to have a baby and someone suggested I go to a legislative brunch. It sounded like fun and I took my baby and went, but I was inclined to think ERA was for women who worked outside the home and that it did not have much to say to me as a housewife." b

As the only representative from her district, she found herself involved in setting up a local group to push ERA ratification.

"So I started studying the amendment," she said, "and the more I read the more I realized how many rights women lose when they get married. I realized we need ERA more than anyone else does."

THE RIGHT TO SUPPORT is a much misunderstood facet of discussion over ERA, Mrs. Follis said, "and this is a biggie for opponents of the amendment.

"They talk a lot about how ratification would change laws requiring husbands to support their wives," she said, "and I find that rather demeaning to "The implication is that those wonderful husbands are going to stop supporting their wives once they do not have to. I like to think my husband supports me because he loves me." But aside from that point, she said,

MRS. FOLLIS believes "the momentum is moving for ERA now" but she sees the battle as a long one with ratification coming "hopefully while I live."

"Opponents said a year ago, after the deadline was extended, that there would be 20 states rescinding ratification. There has been not one new res-

"However you count it, there are more states supporting than opposing by a long shot."

She also is sure the vocal opposition to ERA from within the conservative church does not fairly represent church people of this country.

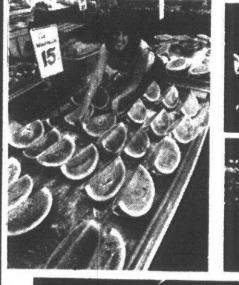

"I spoke last month at the American Baptist convention in Illinois," she related. "Believe me, there were 4,000 cheering Baptists there. No opposition, all kinds of enthusiasm and everywhere I looked there were buttons that said 'People of Faith for ERA." Residents of Michigan, she feels, are fortunate to have strong ERA supports in the persons of Gov. William Milliken and his wife.

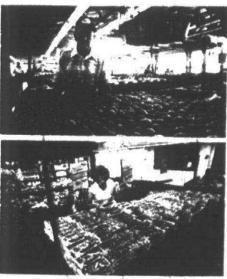

"But that does not mean women in Michigan should relax their efforts," Mrs. Follis said. "We do still live in an unratified country.

"And we all need to look at it in a getting any more short of going to different way. What if ERA is defeated? That will mean this country is saying 'Equality of rights under the law "So these so-called wonderful rights SHALL be denied or abridged . . . on account of sex.

"What a terrible blow to womanhood and motherhood!'

The Plymouth Community Band attracts thousands of people of all ages to its concerts in the park.

Community Band has milestone

For six Thursday evenings each summer, it is band concert night in Kellogg Park in downtown Plymouth. The Plymouth Community Band has been providing these concerts in the park for the past 14 years.

Some of the elders in the audience can remember band concerts 60 or more years ago when the musicians played in a white gazebo-like band stand. The youngsters in the audience don't realize they are being exposed to a little bit of small-town Americana.

The Plymouth Community Band as it is today is an outgrowth of a small group formed 20 years ago. And because this is an anniversary year, Carolyn Weage, a piano teacher who plays trumpet in the band, updated the history of the organization:

InN JANUARY 1961, a small item appeared in the Plymouth Mail. There was to be a Plymouth City band if enough musicians and ex-musicians would turn out once a week for rehearsals.

Twenty persons showed up with their instruments for the first rehearsal that month. Among them was Lou Tandy of New Hudson who listed his age as 70plus and who played an old wooden flute made in Czechoslovakia before World War I.

Most of the people had not played for break out their instruments and give their talent another try.

One man admitted he hadn't played

The nucleus of today's community band was a small group of seven men who got out their instruments and dressed as a German band. They rode in a 1925 Buick convertible in the 1959 Fourth of July parade.

They were: William Edgar, an engineer (now retired); Keith Burton, a former band director at Northville High School (now computer instructor at Schoolcraft College); Stanley Roose, a former band director at Dearborn Township No. 4; James Garber, attorney (now judge); William Upton, project engineer at Ford; Sy Cooper, insurance man; and Gene Burkhardt, an industrial relations director and parttime jet pilot.

LOOKING FOR direction, they called on James Griffith, band director at the high school since 1957, who agreed to help them.

The Plymouth Community Band, as we know it now, met for the first time in January 1961 in the band room of Central School (which was then a high school).

The new musical organization included Jim O'Day, Conrad Krankel and Orlean Baker on clarinet; Sharon Sprague and Lou Tandy on flute; Jim Garber and Chuck Childs, trombone; Jack Wells, alto sax; Stanley Roose, drums; Keith Burton, tuba; and Bill Upton and Carolyn Weage in the trumpet

The first public concert was in May 1961 when Plymouth merchants staged a Midnight Madness Sale. On Friday, June 23, 1961, the band started its concerts in the park, an eight-week concert series.

By that time, high school and college students home on vacation had been added and the band had grown to include 32 musicians. It was during this period that Vic Ferrari, equipment manager, and Doug McLeod, band librarian, joined the group. Other performances that year were at the Wayne County 4-H Fair in Belleville, Independence Day parade, and the Rotary Club Fall Festival.

THAT FIRST YEAR in the park, the musicians set up their chairs and music stands on the grass. The sound was lost among the trees.

The second year, Michigan Bell furnished the manpower to erect a canvas canopy to help the acoustics. Wives of the band members sold ice cream and cake to help meet expenses for the sea-

In 1963, a $9,000 portable band stand was purchaesd by the city to be used by the band as well as other civic groups. To help pay their share of the cost, the band added a refreshment stand and sold soft drinks.

By this time, the band was becoming known as the first community band in the area and it was playing annual concerts at St. Francis Home for Boys, Plymouth State Home, spring and winter formal concerts in the Plymouth High School auditorium, as well as marching in the Memoral Day and July 4th parades.

The Plymouth Community Credit Union became sponsor of the band in 1963 by donating $1,500 to underwrite the cost of presenting the summer series in the park.

CLAYTON LEROUE had joined the band in 1962, undecided if he should play drums or trumpet. He was elected president in 1965 along with treasurer, Jack Wells, and publicity chairman, Keith Burton.

The Plymouth Credit Union also 10 years or more but were yearning to sponsored the first annual banquet which was in the Mayflower Meeting House in November 1965.

That year a scholarship program was started. Stipends of $50 were given to students who had participated during the school year. Final judgment was made on the basis of both a prepared solo, played in competition with other students, and a good attendance record.

The last concert each summer was known as "scholarship night" when contributions were made by the audience via the pass the hat method.

In 1970, $400 was collected, permitting eight $50 scholarships to be granted. Three more were contributed by the Vivians, the women's auxiliary of the Elks Lodge.

The scholarship program was phased out in 1973 after awarding 64 scholar-

Guest conductors included George Cavender and H. Robert Burr joined the band as a tubist when he was in seventh grade. After graduation from the U-M, he became assistant director and took over all the winter obligations. In 1977, he became director, relieving James Griffith of his duties. Griffith passed along the band adage, "It never rains on Thursdays."

What happened to Phil Dingleday? He was our supervisor before Robert Greenstein but he didn't run for reelection. I heard Dingleday was harassed by Greenstein so badly that it discouraged him.

Robert Greenstein was elected from 1974 to 1976. He created two years of outright turmoil trying to make zone changes; commercial to residential, he was hard on local businesses, signs, had poor bookkeeping on weed cutting expenses. Greenstein was accused of using township materials and equipment for his own personal use, misspending of Federal Funds, remodeling the recreation hall for $25,000 (approximately) without bids with Greenstein's long time friend getting the contract.

PASTOR HARRY WINGAR

By MARGARET MILLER

For it shall be as when a man going on a journey called his servants and entrusted to them his property; to one he gave five talents, to another two, to another one, to each according to his ability.

Then he went away. He who had received the five talents went at once and traded with them and he made five talents more. So too, he who had the two talents made two talents more.

But he who had received the one talent went and dug in the ground and hid his master's money.

The Bible story, quoted here from the Revised Standard Version, is a familiar one. It is one of the parables told by Jesus as he tried to describe the kingdom of heaven, and almost any kid who has attended Sunday School or vacation Bible school can tell how it comes out.

But probably no one in these parts knows it better than the members of Good Shepherd Reformed Church of Westland. They are living the story of the talents this summer, and by Sept. 9 they will be able to tell how their version comes out.

IN THE BIBLICAL story, the master distributed to his servants coins called for fund-raising projects. talents (believed to have been worth about $1,000.) Five went to one servant considered quite able, two went to another and one to a third.

The first two invested; the third dug a hole in the ground, fearing he might otherwise lose the money.

The master returned and had high praise for the two who had doubled his funds. For the hapless hole-digger there was the scornful description of "wicked and slothful servent," and the talent was taken from him and given to the one who by this time had ten.

The story has been told from countless pulpits and in unnumbered church school classrooms to illustrate how people should use their talents, the word now being given its modern day usage of abilities, rather than let them lie fallow.

BUT AT GOOD SHEPHERD the word is back to its original meaning -

: The congregation, led by the Rev. Kelvin Kronemeyer, is taking money from the church coffers and using talents (now meaning abilities) to increase it.

Late in June there was an announcement from the pulpit at Good Shepherd that checks for $10 would be distributed to all who would accept them.

They were to be used as seed money

Holy Spirit breaks ground

Construction of a new home for the Episcopal Church of the Holy Spirit is underway following ground-breaking at a site on Newburgh Road opposite Churchill High School.

The congregation has been meeting since 1971 in a building on Cowan Road owned by Merriman Road Baptist Church. The decision to build came after the Baptist church decided to sell the property. A new site was provided by the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan.

The new church, with 3,000 square feet of space, was described by senior warden Ben Pumo as the culmination of a dream and by the Rev. Emery F. Gravelle, vicar, as "a modest structure designed simply to give us a base for our community outreach operations."

Puma said the congregation, which has grown to 55 families since it was launched as a mission by St. Andrew Episcopal of Livonia, had been working five years toward the church home.

As the summer has progressed a congregation (now talented by more than one meaning of the word) has been working to multiply the church money, about $1,300, that was distributed.

At a recent ice cream social many reported progress in a concrete way. Irene Pfeiffer displayed the crocheting she has been making to sell, and Irene Shaffer showed the pictures she's paint-

Jack Paulson had a rack of pendants he makes from teaspoons. Margaret Ohneck was selling fudge and Scottish

There was talk of the white elephant sales some families were planning and of the boat trip at Kensington Park being sponsored by the Kronemeyers and Mr. and Mrs. Bud Goslin. Some were not telling what they planned to

"We'll see how we come out." Goslin said. "but I can tell you one thing. A lot of people are going to multiply their $10 by more than 10."

"I want to make it to $500," put in Mrs. Ohneck. "I used the first money to buy ingredients for the first batches of fudge and shortbread, and then out of the profits I buy more ingredients."

PASTOR KRONEMEYER said the project idea came from reading some clippings distributed by his denomina-

"I was excited about the idea," he said, "first, because it is a very practical way to teach people the parable that Jesus told. Second, it seemed a good means of fundraising because it could involve a lot of people who feel they don't have much to contribute but actually are very gifted."

The decision of church leaders was to specify that funds raised would buy some folding partitions for Good Shepherd's new building, an item cut from the project to reduce costs but definitely needed in its current program.

"But we did not want to use all the money raised just for ourselves," the minister added. "So it was decided that 10 percent of what the program brought in would go to help a sister church, People's Church, just getting organized in Canton."

An interesting facet of the program is that people have started developing new interests and renewing old ones, Pastor Kronemeyer said.

AND HOW ABOUT the funds to be raised.

"Well," he stated, "if 100 of the people who took the checks for $10 can increase the money tenfold, we will have ample money to purchase what we need and share too.

"We'll know Sept. 9." One thing is certain. Nobody is digging holes in the ground to hide the money entrusted.

Vincent Price would have loved it

By SALLY GERAK

It's doubtful if any Miller, jolly or otherwise, ever dined with the elan that marked the July Vincent Price celebrity dinner at The Jolly Miller restaurant in Plymouth. The restaurant's restful, rustic decor, which is highlighted by a magnificent grindstone fireplace (idle in the summer, of course) and a view of the lushly-terraced Rouge River ravine (resplendent in the summer, of course), was quite a contrast to the private room setting of the gourmet dinner.

Guests were greeted by a sophisticated azure ice sculpture, which had begun its necessarily brief existence as a 400-pound block of ice. After an earlier 31/2 hour chiseling session by executive chef Timothy Cleary and night sous chef Mark Scoffield, the pedestrian substance was transformed into a fanciful pair of kissing love birds atop an enormous heart.

Celebrities invited by the Vincent Price Gourmet Dining Association to share the evening's elaborate offerings included P.M. Magazine producer Bill Pace who escorted Chris Holdreith; fashion, food and society editor Sybil Little: WWJ news department cheif Don Patrick; Jewish News entertainment writer Dan Raskin; Plymouth/ Canton Observer Suburban Life editor Ellie Graham; unpredictable Detroit News columnist Charlie Manos; and wine purveyors Joseph Luzynski and Paul Becker.

PRE-DINNER socializing accompanied the sampling of a sparkling Champagne Brut from the small, familyowned California winery Villa Armando. The Armando family has recently increased its wine-making capacity, enabling its moderately-priced wines to be available in this area.(The dinner's five wines all were products of Villa Armando, courtesy of Leone Imports of Livonia.) The dry festive wine was a delightful prelude to the eightcourse repast that awaited the guests.

Chef Cleary, who credits his Irishborn father and Italian-born mother with his early love of good food, learned his art in Ireland and has been the head chef in The Jolly Miller kitchens for two years. His presentations throughout the evening were met with unabashed enthusiasm, and his descriptions of the preparations inspired respect from all who had considered themselves somewhat accomplished in their own kitchens.

Cleary's first offering was a galantine of duck - a rich concoction of boned-out Long Island duckling and force meat of white meat of chicken and veal. These were combined with cream and egg yolks and studded with the happy addition of pistachio nuts. This delicate roll was then poached to firmness and coated with an aspic made from the poaching liquid and port wine. Served chilled, the galantine of duck elicited raves from the gathered celebrities.

THE HOT consomme au profiterolles which followed was a perfect complement to the appetizer. Little pate chous floating in the broth were filled with duck liver pate, a savory and resourceful touch that would surely have pleased the wife of any jolly Miller in times past.

Souffle of golden trout admiral was the next treat, a demonstration of Chef Cleary's very delicate hand. Salmon and shrimp were combined with Idaho trout and covered with a very light Newburg sauce laced with cognac. Served with Chenin Blanc, this fish course was a definite palate pleaser.

To cleanse that palate, a champagne sherbet was served next. And what a charming picture that made - the lemon, wine and meringue confection was served in a real lemon shell nestled on a bed of crushed ice. The frosty fare epitomized refreshment and renewed the palate for the piece de resistance.

AS AT ALL Vincent Price celebrity dinners, the entree was selected from Vincent Price's "A Treasury of Great Recipes." The Steak Chevillot, as prepared at Hotel De La Poste in Beaume, France, was a stellar selection. Two slices of filet mignon, served with a distinguished shallot, essence of stock and clarified butter sauce, were topped with coins of rich, poached hone

Enjoyment of this course was further enhanced by Villa Armando Barberone Burgundy and by Chef Cleary's addition of beautiful vegetables - broccoli and cauliflowerettes in lemon butter, a petite bunch of pole beans encircled by a wedding ring of summer squash, a sculptured mushroom, watercress and a tomato stuffed with wild rice and toasted almonds.

Spontaneous applause accompanied this course - truly an exquisitely appointed and festive entree.

CLEARY always buys "...whatever is best" on his daily trips to Eastern Market, so the vegetables are strictly du jour. And the crisp Boston bib lettuce that shared the taragon-citrus juice vinaigrette dressing with the hearts of palm in the light salad course which followed the entree was an excellent choice.

The young staff which had meticulously served each course and replaced silver throughout the dinner, now poured a Villa Armando Cabernet Sauvignon, a congenial companion to the ripe and runny French brie and aromatic Danish port salut of the fromage course. The two cheeses had to share acclaim, however, with a graceful, feathered swan, sculptured with great delicacy from a red apple. The pippin had been dipped in lemon water to prevent it from turning brown and was almost too perfect to devour.

The final wine selection, Malvasia Bianco, was presented with the dessert coup d'etat - a stemmed crystal vessel filled with the freshest black raspberries. They had been lightly laced with Grande Reserve framboise brandy. Such a finale, so light, so right.

A FEW OF the guests chose to end this memorable meal with a nibble of Riki Shaffer's chocolate confections from Chocolatissimo in Somerset Mall, but most tucked away the precious little gold box for later self indulgence. All the guests, however, agreed with vivacious Sybil Little's exclamation, "This is fabulous!"

John Marrotta, director of food and beverage, and Mike Mooney, restaurant manager, had been introduced to the dinner guests earlier in the evening and they can be justly proud of their staff's culinary efforts. One of the prerequisites for Vincent Price Gourmet Dining Association member restaurants is a pledge to serve only freshly prepared food, prepackaged and prefrozen items being viewed by Mr. Price as a threat to fine dining. "This requirement spells the difference between a $30,000 chef and a $15,000 chef," declared Marrotta.

It was apparent to everyone at the July celebrity dinner that Timothy Cleary, who is a proud member of the Michigan chefs de Cuisine Association, takes his professional calling seriously.

"THE MESSAGE CLINGS!"

Lace is a bargain, but treat it well

By MARY KAY DAVIS

Handmade laces were once a desirable luxury item, but they seem to have gone out of fashion as the polyester generation has emerged.

Lovely bits of lace can be picked up for almost nothing at rummage sales, resale shops and garage sales. Here's a golden opportunity to start a collection for almost nothing. A good book to tell you what you've found is "Lace and Lace Making" by Marian Powys, Boston: Charles T. Branford Co.

A delightful way to display lace is to set it against a colored velvet background in an interesting frame. A cluster of these laces arranged on your wall could be sensational and great fun for very little time and money.

But first you may have to clean your treasure. Here's how to do it quickly and safely:

FIRST, CHOOSE a clear, sunny day. Soak the lace in softened water for 20 minutes and drain. Repeat until the soak water is, as the English Royal School of Needlework says, "clear

While the lace is soaking, get ready a piece of hard plastic which is larger than your lace (I used the top of a plastic shoe box), a large sponge, and liquid Woolite. Make a lukewarm solution of one-half teaspoon Woolite in two quarts of water. Unfold the lace on the plastic, which will support it throughout the washing, and submerge in the soapy

Place the sponge over the lace and gently, very gently, force water in and out of the fibers by squeezing and releasing the sponge. Always keep the lace resting flat upon the plastic. Drain and repeat until the lace is clean.

Rinse with softened water, sponging the lace as directed above, until the rinse water shows no soap bubbles.

TAKE THE LACE, which is still resting on its plastic, out doors and place it on grass or a flat hedge for bleaching. The bleaching effect comes from ozone, which is given off by green plants during photosynthesis. So don't put the lace on your garden table, it's the green that does it.

spray bottle of water. Chlorine bleach and lemon juice may be too strong for old, fragile threads and should not be used without the supervision of a textile expert. Ozone is slower and more gentle, so give it enough time to do its

When the lace is bleached and still damp, bring it indoors to dry. You'll need a piece of wood, padded and covered with plastic. I used a chopping Bleaching takes place while fibers board wrapped in a piece of old bed are wet, so keep the lace damp with a pad and covered with a double layer of saran wrap.

> PLACE THE DAMP lace on the plastic-covered pad. Gently move it into shape with your fingers, starting from the selvedge and work inward toward the center. When the lace is in shape, pin the edges to the pad with brass pins which won't rust. This keeps the lace from shrinking while it dries.

Keep the board horizontal and let the lace air dry inside the house.

Summer festival wrapping up

A campus turns to music

They've been tuning up each morning for a couple weeks now and they're almost through.

Music School at Schoolcraft College the campus lately. A trio of flutists practice outdoors on the grass. A pianist gets a lesson in Schubert while down the hall a group of violinists discuss the problems of chin rests ("Anybody with a long neck is going to need more padding," says the instructor.").

Elsewhere, some budding clarinetists get a brief lecture against the evils of overspecialization. "You get twice as much money as the next guy if you can play all these instuments,' they're told.

Down a pathway in another building, " jazz students are working on their improvisation. An instructor yells "D7, G minor," and nods to the beat.

Later in the day, the student symphony repeats sections of a piece to be performed. The conductor waves his baton to cut, explains a problem, and then they try it again for a few bars.

THE MUSIC SCHOOL ends this week with free concerts by the summer students. The concert tonight includes the jazz students in small groups and as a big band. On Friday night, the symphony orchestra, wind ensemble and string orchestra will perform, and student violinist Jeff Stockman will perform the first movement of Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 5.

Both concerts are free to the public and start at 8 p.m. in the Waterman Center on the Schoolcraft campus; which is tucked away in the northwest corner of Livonia on Haggerty Road between Six and Seven Mile roads.

The students in the program, now in its 13th season, include junior high schoolers through graduate students, though most are at the younger end of the scale.

The summer school has traditionally been for classical music training, but jazz studies were added this year and will be back next year as well, according to Dick Saunders, assistant dean for arts and sciences at Schoolcraft.

"Any creative process is hard to teach," says Steinberg. "But I can think of worse ways to spend an afternoon."

Give your second hands a new life

In a previous column, we were concerned with the adventures of second-hand furniture shopping. I suggested some of the possibilities available to you at garage sales, second-hand stores, the corner of someone's attic, auctions and ads in the newspaper.

If you followed these steps and have come up with a treasure - a piece of furniture that can be made over and used again for many years - you may need to know how to bring it back to life.

If it's of good design, good wood, and sound construction, it's worth refinishing. Many a prized antique has been rescued afer being hidden for years under layers of paint.

TO SUCCESSFULLY bring old furniture back to life doesn't require any special talent. What it does take is a desire, a great deal of patience, a little hard work and some quality materials to work with. The satisfaction will be worth the effort.

The success of any wood finishing project depends on a clean surface that is free of dirt, dust, wax, oil, stains, smudges and grease. It should be smooth, free of dents, gouges, and scratches.

When a previous clear finish is dull or worn but not cracked or peeling to bare wood, simply wash the surface with a solvent to remove accumulated wax, dirt and grease. Rinse thoroughly and wipe dry with clean clothes while the surface is still wet. Sand lightly with fine paper until smooth and remove all dust with a tack rag or a vacuum.

If the previous finish is badly deteriorated, chipped, or peeling, remove the old finish entirely with a paint and varnish remover. Don't be fooled into buying inexpensive, poor quality remover. Several coats may be required, so pour out the liquid generously and allow it to set for a reasonable length of time. When the finish can be easily lifted. remove with steel wool, rags, or putty knife.

Always work with the grain to avoid scratching. Allow to dry and remove all dust and loose matter by brushing or wiping with a lint-free cloth. If the wood is smooth after the use of remover, no sanding is needed.

FOR WOOD SURFACES not previously finished, use fine sandpaper to remove minor smudges and soil marks. Some unfinished woods require filling before finishing. The basic purpose of a paste filler is to fill the open grain of course-textured woods, such as oak, mahogany or walnut so that the final finish will be level and smooth. The paste filler should precede staining.

Apply the stain by rag, sponge, roller or brush. Work a small area at a time. Wipe off excess while still wet using a damp cloth. The longer a stain is allowed to stand before being wiped, the deeper the color. A helper speeds the job, one person staining and other person wiping.

Each wood takes stain differently. Softwoods such as pine and other conifers are more absorbent. Test a small section before you begin. A sealer may be necessary to assure uniformity.

Painting is the quickest and least expensive way of bringing new life to worn surfaces. The right paint will work real magic, whether it be a nondescript door, un ugly fireplace, or a battered piece of furniture.

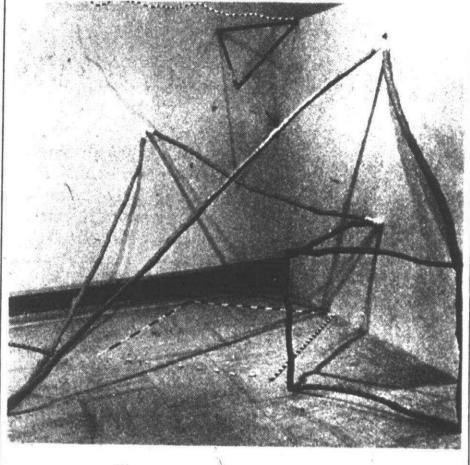

Colors should be chosen with great care, for color has power. Today's paints are easy to apply. They dry with incredible speed and they hold up under hard wear. There are tools to speed up the painting process and produce a smooth, professional sur-

Some new paints on the market today have remarkable properties. They can cover any surface, hold up under the most trying use and produce beautiful surfaces.

LINSEED-OIL PAINTS still account for 40 percent of the paints sold today. Plastics have invaded the paint can. Plastic resins stirred into newer solutions are the base for a range of paints which produce extremely durable surfaces. They are oderless, quick-drying, washable and easily applied.

Latex paints are water-mix paints so that the clean up job is easy. Latex is quick-drying and its odor fades quickly.

Detroit Focus

Need for space creates gallery

Detroit Institute of Arts Curator Jay Belloli has traveled the United States and selected the work of six sculptors to illustrate what he believes is a new direction in contemporary art.

These younger artists, a generation removed from Abstract Expressionists and Minimalists, reveal a new concern for recognizable image, Belloli has found. In a variety of materials and forms, including tape and video, they explore fresh approaches to imagery and real objects.

The artists are Terry Allen of California, Michael Luchs and Michele Oka Doner of Michigan, Scott Burton and Dennis Oppenehim of New York, and Jim Roache of Florida.

EXHIBITION OF THEIR WORK. "Image and Object in Contemporary Sculpture," will open at the Detroit Institute of Arts Tuesday, July 24, and continue through Wednesday, Sept. 12. Organized by Belloli, the display includes works especially commissioned for Detroit showing. The artists will be in Detroit for the opening. The pieces, 29 in all, range from single, small objects to large environments, some embracing video, sound, narration, painted surfaces and sculptural forms. Installation will be throughout two floors of the museum's Ford (south) wing.

The show will be seen in Detroit only, and is expected to have national import. Its catalog contains a detailed essay by Belloli and museum director

Frederic Cummings. Belloli, in his first year at the art institute, is former director of the Fort Worth Art Museum. Previous service includes the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, the La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art in California, and the Contemporary Arts Museum in Hous-

"An interest in recognizable images or objects as a source for art," Belloli wrote in the catalog, "seems to have recurred cyclically at several points during the century — each time following a period of formal 'purification' during which, in one way or another, art was emptied of images. Specific references to recognizable objects became secondary."

Belloli noted: "For the first time a great variety of styles and artistic attitudes have co-existed throughout the (current) decade without any one of them appearing to have predominant avant garde status."

DSO last week

Dvorak's emotion presents problems

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of conductor Kazuhiro Koizumi, last week presented a rather unusual program - two selections by one composer in one concert.

One of these, a Dvorak concerto for cello and orchestra, featured an impressive performance by guest soloist Lynn Harrell, whose brilliant stage presence, combined with conductor Koizumi's enthusiasm, produced a wonderful evening of music at Meadow

Dvorak's powerful Carnival Overture opened the concert. Written with the intense emotional quality found in all Dvorak pieces, the overture's opening section produced one strong melody after another - many of these originating in the wind section. The huge round woodwind sound produced was masterfully subdued by conductor Koizumi to reveal the rich wind tones of the more peaceful development sec-

This beautiful part of the piece was finally overcome by a bold, dance-like melody that returned the overture to its original intensity. A strong, driving sound was produced by the orchestra in the coda, and, with the continued presence of strong brass and percussion parts, the overture came to a furious conclusion. While Dvorak's overture brought out a strong sound from the orchestra, the power of the piece was a cause for some trouble during the next selection, the Concerto in B for Cello, also by

SOLOIST HARRELL WAS BRIL-LIANT in his performance of the three movement concerto, but even the fiercest passages couldn't capture the same strength of the brass-heavy overture just performed by the orchestra.

This questionable presentation of a delicate cello selection after such a noble concerto must have affected the orchestra. Many of the quick solo passages in the allegro were lost amid the upper woodwind accompaniment.

In addition to this difficulty, the nature of the movement itself apparently hindered the performance. A lengthy orchestral introduction and some confusing development passages tended to pit the orchestra against the soloist at times, until a glissando from the soloist brought the movement back to a more coordinated recapitulation section. The depth of the orchestra began to be revealed here, as the soloist continued to play in a passionately rich manner, and the triumphant march motive of the piece was recalled by a still strong brass section.

With the adagio ma non troppo movement, the memory of the strong opening overture finally faded from the minds of the orchestra and the audience. After that, with orchestra and soloist working together, an enjoyable accompaniment was set against a quiet cello line. Soloist Harrell demonstrated great sensitivity in the most abrupt of the movement's passages. A touching combination of solo cello and and rose before a strong coda, which flute lines was created toward the end featured many of the symphony's freof the movement, as the interaction bequent themes.

tween soloist and orchestra was finally

The finale-allegro moderato was the showpiece of the concerto. With the bowing and articulation of the accompanimental strings at its best, the subtleties of the composition were fully realized with a powerful duet between the soloist and the first violinist.

This inspired playing continued through a fully voiced motive to return the piece to a long, lovely, quiet section that once again featured tender violin and flute solos.

An antiphonal coda brought the piece to a close, and solist Harrell took three curtain calls from an audience who, for the most part, had been brought to their feet by the soloist's emotional performance.

FRANCK'S SYMPHONY IN D concluded the evening. Like Dvorak, Franck's use of the orchestral winds and brass was extensive, as the dark clarinet and bassoon parts of the opening showed. Beginning with a mysterious melody, the movement began to build and continued to grow, slowing only briefly to add to the mystery. Once the allegro tempo had been achieved, the darkness of the movement's introduction was maintained by an ominous brass sound. The piece achieved a forceful conclusion, after a brief tender phrase returned the melody to the strings and woodwinds.

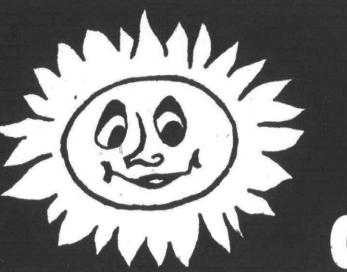

A calmer tone was established with an effortless English horn melody in the allegretto. This tranquil effect was limited, however, by an eighth note counter melody in the violin section, which led to a gentle climax.

Conductor Koizumi and the orchestra were united throughout this composition. His gentle coaxing of the orchestral winds complemented the piece greatly, as the English horn line returned to conclude the movement. The eighth note melody of the allegretto continued in the symphony's concluding allegro non troppo. Used again as a counter melody, the eighth note phrase was passed freely through the winds, brass and strings, against a punctual melody. This duet-like style took on a new dimension as the piece adapted a less playful attitude. A beautiful woodwind part mixed with a rich string sound lead the piece to a brief

THE PRINCIPAL MOTIVE OF THE MOVEMENT was then established in a hushed section and this took on a powerful sound, as a heavy brass accompaniment countered a flowing string melody. From this bold, waltztime phrase, the melody returned to a common time section, where fine clarinet work was displayed, along with a wonderful string and harp melody. The piece reached beautiful melodic and counter-melodic climaxes that fell

ATTENTION "TOGETHER PERSONS" (And anyone who's falling apart)

Have you ever noticed how times flies when you're having fun? Or how it drags when you're dragging?

Sometimes there aren't enough hours in the day to accomplish all that you may set out to do. Like placing an Observer & Eccentric Classified Ad.

By the time the busy, sunny, summer days are at a close and you realize that, "Oh my gosh, I was supposed to advertise the stuff in the garage...or the hockey equipment....or the stereo gear...or whatever," we're closed. And you're fuming.

Well fume no more. Beginning Thursday, July 5, you will be able to place an Observer & Eccentric Want Ad until 7:30 p.m. every Monday and Thursday evening.

This means that when you settle down on the patio after dinner with a long, tall glass of something very cold and open your hometown newspaper and arrive at the classified section and that little bell goes off in your head about the ad you were supposed to place — you can still place it - even if it's 7:00 or 7:15 or even 7:25.

Of course, if you're thinking, "This doesn't mean me — I'm always on top of everything. My socks are always sorted, I take my car in for a check-up right on time. Same with my teeth. I'm really a very together person."

Well, we have news for all of our together persons: You can place your Observer & Eccentric Classified ad ANY-TIME you want to. MONDAY through FRIDAY.

We're here five days a week (and beginning July 5 a couple of nights). Just give us a call and we'll get your ad placed for the very next edition of your hometown newspaper.
