Home at last: Soldier returns from Gulf duty

JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

Army reservist Jeffrey Sandy of Canton was greeted home Monday from the Persian Gulf by an entourage of family at Metropolitan Airport. He hugs his niece, Courtney, who he met for the first time. Sandy's father, Glenn Sandy, was among other relatives relieved to see him.

U.S. Army reservist and Canton resident Jeffrey Sandy, 25, came home from the Persian Gulf to family and friends at Metro Airport Monday night.

Sandy is a graduate of Westland John Glenn High School.

He was serving in Dhahran and arrived on a flight from Dallas wearing brown army fatigues.

Among those waiting for his return were parents Glenn and Pat Sandy.

It was the first time he saw his niece Courtney, born last July.

After Sandy made his way to the entourage he said thank you to everyone who helped get him through his ordeal.

"I appreciate all the help everybody's given me," he said.

He explained that he was in the first battery to fire a Patriot missile during wartime.

'I appreciate all the help everybody's given me.'

— Jeffrey Sandy

His father, Glenn Sandy, was happy to see his son, but sympathetic to U.S. families with relatives still stationed in the Persian Gulf.

"We're glad he's home. But we feel sorry for soldiers who didn't make it and we're sorry that some people can't be as happy as we are," he said.

Sandy arrived on the same flight that Southfield Air Force reservist Scott Bandy did.

They joked around on the plane.

"I went up to him and said: 'I pity you because your name is Sandy and (he was) in the sand,' " Bandy recalled.

What a relief

Mom happy to have her son home

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Barbara Murphy of Plymouth got the best possible news in recent weeks.

Her son, 29-year-old Paul Murphy, came back from the Persian Gulf. Murphy, a U.S. Marine Corps sergeant, spent seven months in Saudi Arabia and was involved in Operation Desert Storm combat.

"It was just the greatest sense of relief," said Barbara Murphy, a history teacher at Plymouth Salem High School in Canton. "For the first time, I felt happy."

She'd been worried about her son's safety since August, and was relieved to learn he was coming home.

Murphy, a 1979 Novi High School graduate, came back to the United States in mid-March, arriving at Camp Lejeune in North Carolina. The next day, he left for Minnesota to be reunited with his wife, Liz, and the couple's 2-year-old son, Joshua.

"It's good, just being with the family again," he said.

MURPHY SERVED with ANGLICO, the Air Naval Gunfire Liaison Company. He was involved in combat but suffered no injuries. He and other U.S. servicemen and women appreciated the support of people on the home front.

"We got a lot of mail, thousands of letters." When Murphy came home, he found that the people he met were grateful for what the troops had done.

Several people offered to buy Murphy a beer, including one Vietnam veteran. The homecoming Operation Desert Storm troops have received has been a friendly one, unlike that experienced by many Vietnam veterans.

"They've gone out of their way to make sure that didn't happen this time," he said.

Murphy plans to speak to his mom's class at Salem High School about his experiences in Operation Desert Storm. "I'll let them ask the questions."

He has one year left on his enlistment and will soon return to Camp Lejeune. Liz Murphy has been staying with her family in Minnesota while her husband was overseas. She's relieved that he's now home safe and sound.

"It's wonderful; it's great," Liz Murphy said. Her husband's absence has been difficult for the couple's son, although she's shown Joshua lots of photos of his dad.

She doesn't have to rely on photographs any more; Paul Murphy was able to get home the day before his son's second birthday.

"It was a wonderful birthday party," she said.

DNR orders soil, ground water test at Mettetal

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Mettetal Airport's owners must test soil and ground water at the airport and draw up a cleanup plan if needed, state officials say.

"There was a release of jet fuel from underground storage tanks that were removed," said Dow Parsons, DNR spokesman.

But Marty Burnstein, attorney for the airport owner Steve Klochko, stressed, "Don't assume that there's necessarily a cleanup required."

"They (DNR) asked for some additional information and we're providing that," he continued.

The earliest a work plan could be approved by the state Department of Natural Resources is three or four months, Parsons said.

And should testing show there is contamination on the site, a cleanup would take more time — depending on how extensive a cleanup is required. That could delay the sale of the airport to the joint operating board created by Plymouth and Plymouth Township.

He said that in a meeting last week with Klochko, his sons and their attorney, "We told them they needed to do a site investigation and a hydrological study."

Plymouth and Plymouth Township officials have said the airport must be free of contamination before they take ownership.

Parsons said that a "closure report" submitted by the airport owner after the removal of fuel tanks in December had conflicting information on contamination from the release of jet fuel.

"We want them to go back and do some work," Parsons said.

Parsons said the DNR did not know how much jet fuel had been released at the site, and declined to speculate on how long a cleanup would take.

Last year, pilots asked Canton officials to buy Mettetal Airport. But Canton trustees voted against the purchase, saying the land would make more money for the township if developed.

Shortly thereafter, Plymouth Township and Plymouth agreed to form a joint operating agreement to buy and run the airport, and signed that agreement in January.

While the federal government is expected to pay most of the cost, the state is handling the fund transfer. Federal and state agencies have set aside $6.4 million for Mettetal. The money will remain slotted for the airport purchase until Oct. 1, 1993, a state employee said.

Canton Supervisor Tom Yack has said relations between Canton and Plymouth Townships will suffer because of the Mettetal controversy.

Vets ask community for memorial design

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton's veteran's memorial is not just a monument from veterans to veterans.

And a design contest is an ideal way to involve everyone in the community, according to Tim LaGrow, of the Plymouth-Canton Vietnam Veterans.

"We don't want vets doing this for vets only," LaGrow said. "We want moms, dads, brothers and sisters getting involved."

THE TRIBUTE will be to the men and women who have served in all branches of the U.S. armed forces during all wars, as well as during peacetime.

It will be erected on the island between the township administration building and the Canton Library. The board of trustees approved the location at a meeting Tuesday night.

Timing between the Persian Gulf War and the campaign to erect a war memorial was coincidental, said John Spencer, Canton finance director. He is a Vietnam veteran who has worked on the memorial committee.

In fact, the first meeting to discuss the memorial, Spencer said, was the day the war started. Patriotism during the war is a good way to attract attention to the memorial effort, he said.

'We don't want vets doing this for vets only. We want moms, dads, brothers and sisters getting involved.'

— Tim LaGrow
Plymouth-Canton Vietnam Veterans

"Most communities have a Veteran's Memorial that serve as a remembrance of those who have fought for the freedom that we Americans still enjoy," he said. "We believe that Canton should also have a fitting Veterans Memorial."

The design should be approximately 60-feet in diameter and should include general landscaping. They should be submitted before July 4.

Drowning ruled in student's death

The Wayne County Medical Examiner's Office has completed a toxicology report and ruled that the cause of death of a 15-year-old Plymouth Salem High School student was drowning.

Paul Robert Back was swimming laps during class at Salem when he began experiencing difficulty breathing the morning of Jan. 28. Efforts to revive him by two physical education teachers and EMS workers were unsuccessful.

Back was swimming when his teacher, Chuck Olson, noticed he was having trouble.

Olson saw Back stop and make a face. Olson told Back to grab onto the lane marker. When Back slipped under water, Olson dove in and within seconds was giving the student CPR.

Teacher Fred Thomann administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

When Back didn't come to, 9-1-1 was called. Canton EMS took Back to Oakwood Canton Health Center, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Officials including Superintendent John Hoben had theorized that the cause of death was cardiac arrest, and not drowning.

Salem Principal Gerald Ostoin said Back, a freshman, knew how to swim and that the family has a backyard pool.

Back lived in Canton and was a defensive tackle on Salem's freshman football team.

He was a good student who was well-liked, Ostoin said.

He is survived by his parents, Robert and Jacqueline Back; sisters Jennifer and Melissa; brother Michael; grandmothers Dorothy Mohr and Marian Back; and great-grandmothers Alda Dowell and Bernie Olson.

Slim pickings for reconstruction jobs in the Gulf

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

So far, workers seeking reconstruction jobs in the Middle East are hearing nothing from employers.

The U.S. Department of Labor announced earlier this month that it was urging employers with eventual job openings in the Persian Gulf to list them with the local public employment service — in this state, the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

The labor department also set up a clearinghouse in Washington, D.C., to provide information for firms seeking contracts for reconstruction work.

Those seeking Persian Gulf jobs can still apply at the local MESC office.

SO FAR throughout the country, "there have been very few job orders placed through the public employment system," said Ann Costa, MESC spokeswoman in Detroit.

"The employers aren't listing their job orders with MESC or their counterparts," she said.

As of Tuesday, Costa said just four jobs were listed: helicopter pilot instructor, master mechanic, helicopter mechanic and diesel mechanic.

ON MARCH 11, MESC director F. Robert Edwards announced that workers interested in reconstruction jobs should register with their local MESC Job Service office "and indicate their availability for Persian Gulf work."

The announcement generated interest.

"When they say jobs, people want jobs — they apply," Costa said.

Those workers filled out the standard MESC application, marked "Persian Gulf," to designate they were interested in such employment. Costa has no figures on the number of applicants willing to work in the Middle East, she said.

OFFICIALS DON'T know if more Persian Gulf jobs will become available through the MESC, she said.

"We can't predict," Costa said. "(So far), no one's got any jobs in the Persian Gulf through us."

It's possible some employers are dealing directly with Middle Eastern governments and not through the U.S. government, she said.

Those seeking Persian Gulf jobs can still apply at the local MESC office, or contact the Kuwait Emergency and Reconstruction Program, 1510 H St. NW, Washington, D.C., 20005, Costa said.

She also urged workers to watch out for scams. They should check with the MESC to determine if advertised Persian Gulf jobs are for real, she said. Costa didn't know of reports of any such scams.

Saturn dealer makes 2nd pitch for rezoning

Turned down in a bid last May to locate a Saturn car dealership on residential property on Ann Arbor Road, auto dealer Don Massey is again seeking to have the land rezoned to allow commercial development.

The land, between Bill Knapp's restaurant and Southworth on the north side of Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth Township, is zoned to allow single-family detached houses.

The auto dealer has asked for a public hearing before the township planning commission on the proposed rezoning, scheduled May 15.

"We'd like to put a car dealership in there," said Warren Mussen, president of Massey Holding Co.

Mussen echoed Massey's contention last May that the land, occupied by rented houses, is more appropriately used for commercial development.

To have houses there "is just not reality today," Mussen said, along busy Ann Arbor Road.

He declined to detail the type of dealership being sought for the site.

Massey declined to challenge the township trustees vote in May against a rezoning in the area, and established a Saturn dealership near Massey's existing dealership near Ann Arbor Road and I-275.

Township Supervisor Maurice Breen said last year, "We turned down an application for rezoning because the township master (zoning) plan doesn't call for commercial development in that area."

Neighbors of the Ann Arbor Road property owned by Massey west of Bill Knapp's told township trustees last year that development would increase traffic, endanger their children, and encourage more commercial development near the site.

Four people reportedly entered a Veena's Card Shop on Ford Road Saturday and walked out with two figurines without paying.

They were valued together at almost $400.

Two of the would-be shoppers distracted the sales people while the other two took the figurines off their pedestals. All four rushed out of the building on Ford Road.

Eggs-traordinary fun

Hunt delights all ages

An Easter Egg Hunt closed the gap between the generations last weekend at Canton Place Senior Citizen High Rise.

It didn't matter how old you were. Everyone had a good time.

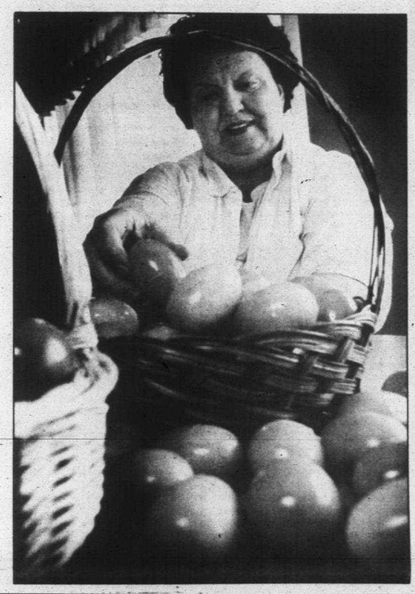
Residents at the Ford Road housing facility decorated hard boiled eggs and filled plastic eggs with prizes Friday in preparation for games Saturday.

The goodies were hidden for 45 youngsters ranging in age from infancy to 10 years old. All of the children were relatives of residents.

"The residents were tickled to death to see the little ones," said Ginnie Hauck, resident manager.

"This was our first annual Easter Egg Hunt," she said. "We're looking forward to next year."

Dona Kanaus displays the finished product.



Children will enjoy goodies hidden in plastic eggs filled by Irene Nickita.

Dorothy Salois balances the egg before she dips it in dye.

School counseling praised

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' new elementary counseling program is being judged a success, based on the 1,315 students who have taken advantage of the program so far.

Five elementary counselors, rotating among 12 schools, have serviced the district's 7,000 elementary students since September.

Individually, and in small groups, counselors have addressed subjects ranging from divorce to self-esteem and dealing with ramifications of the Persian Gulf War.

Jeff Fordell, who is coordinating the program for the district, told the school board Monday night that while the pilot has worked well, there's potential for improvement.

"The addition of one elementary counselor, raising the total to six, would ensure that all elementary buildings have equitable access to a half-time counselor.

"Currently," he said, "two counselors service three buildings each, resulting in scheduling difficulties and the reduction of the number of classroom visitations, support groups and individual classrooms otherwise possible in those buildings."

Counselors also need informational literature, videos and other resources to share with parents and students.

"Ultimately, counselors would like to have a budget so they could build up their own library," Fordell said. "We need to share the wealth; hopefully we can get a small budget. We are seeking other funding sources."

Financing for the counseling program comes from the district's community block grant fund.

Dick Egli, the district's community relations director, said elementary counseling "is not only important; it may be imperative.

"While elementary counseling would have been useful 20 years ago, the need now is greater than it was back then.

"What we've done is to put counselors at the high school and middle schools — and they're an important part of an elementary education, because they can do so much with young people in their formative years. It works well with the students who are at that level. We can gain a great deal from having elementary counselors."

Fordell said the major goal of the program is to prevent "risk behaviors through classroom lessons, small group discussions and individual counseling."

More than 275 children have joined counselors in support groups to discuss such things as divorce, self-esteem, cooperative skills and problem solving. An additional 1,038 youngsters have been referred for individual counseling.

School support urged from Pursell

Plymouth-Canton Schools Superintendent John Hoben planned to spend yesterday with U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, visiting the University of Michigan and getting a look at some of the educational technology in use there.

Pursell recently became the ranking minority member on the Labor, Health, Human Services, Education and Appropriations House subcommittee.

The subcommittee wields a $57 million budget. This marks the first time a Michigan member of Congress has held the post, and Plymouth-Canton school officials are hopeful some of the money will arrive in the district in the form of federal grants.

PURSELL MET earlier this month with William Heath, a Plymouth-Canton counselor and a representative of the National Education Association's Congressional Contact Team.

Heath asked Pursell to push for increased financial support for federal education initiatives and passage of key legislation affecting students and schools.

Heath is concerned about "artificial spending caps" and limitations created in last year's budget resolution.

Heath also asked for Pursell's support of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 and the Family and Medical Leave Act, both of which were vetoed by President George Bush after they were passed by Congress.

The Family and Medical Leave Act would protect teachers and other employees from being laid off during pregnancy leaves or periods of family crisis due to illness, Heath said.

Area district to borrow $2.5 million

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

The Wayne-Westland School Board will borrow $2.5 million because of a budget crunch it blames on state officials.

The move, approved Monday night, marks the first time in five years the district has had to borrow money to keep operating.

The district serves southeast Canton.

Elwood (Woody) London, the district's finance director, blamed the budget problems on a delay of $2.3 million that the state had been expected to turn over to the district by Aug. 1.

That payment has been delayed until Oct. 1 as state officials grapple with their own budget crunch, London said.

Board member Kathleen Chorbagian, addressing the audience during Monday's board meeting, said much of the district's financial woes can be attributed to the state.

"If you have, blame, some of it must fall on Lansing," she said.

Chorbagian voiced dismay that the district will be forced to pay interest on the loan that would not have been necessary had the state paid the $2.3 million to the district on time.

The last time the school board was forced to borrow money, it took out a $2 million loan. One year earlier, the board had borrowed $5 million.

IN OTHER financial matters Monday, the board approved a 3.5-percent wage increase this year for the 180 para-professionals employed by the district. The pay increase came after the district and the employees' union reached a negotiated settlement on a salary reopener that had been called for in the third year of a contract.

Cuts spur June tax vote demand

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Wayne-Westland students and parents angered by pending budget cuts demanded Monday night that the school board place another tax increase proposal on the June 10 ballot.

But board members appeared split on the issue Monday, just 12 days after voters narrowly defeated a tax increase in a fiery election that has fueled an increasingly bitter public debate.

The district serves southeast Canton.

The tax battle raged as 350 people stormed a board meeting Monday night at John Glenn High School's auditorium, where the first post-election session was held to accommodate the inflamed, standing-room-only crowd.

"WE NEED more money. We've got to put this back on the ballot, and we've got to try harder," said Robin Cowan, a Westland mother of three.

John Glenn students signed 900 petitions calling on the board to ask for a 7.75-mill tax increase at the June 10 election for three board members.

Voters upset with board members should try to oust them in June, but shouldn't let their anger defeat another request to raise property taxes, said Kevin Tomaszewski, a member of the John Glenn's Save Our Schools student committee. "This is your chance to punish the school board instead of the students."

Fred Hagelthorn, among 26 people to address the board, urged its members to unite behind another request to raise property taxes. He singled out board member Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek, who has suggested seeking a smaller tax increase.

HAGELTHORN ACCUSED Wiacek of siding with city officials because of her job as director of the city's senior resource department. Hagelthorn last week led a crowd of 100 people that swarmed a city council session to blast Mayor Robert Thomas for opposing the March 13 property-tax-increase proposal.

"Sylvia, your opposition to this last millage proposal was right in line with the city administration for which you work," Hagelthorn said. "We must remind you that as a member of this school board, your responsibility is to the children of this community and not to the city administration."

Wiacek later responded that she didn't oppose the 7.75-mill tax-increase request, though she conceded she believed voters would have favored a smaller increase.

"I always say a half a loaf of bread is better than none," she said.

Board members must regain public trust before expecting a large tax increase to pass, Wiacek said.

"We have to show credibility and accountability," she said.

Hagelthorn received a standing ovation from some audience members after he attacked the anti-tax-increase Wayne-Westland Citizens for Education Committee and advised its members, "It's time to put up or shut up."

MARTI MOLITOR, a Westland mother of six, asked board members to attack the budget crunch by renegotiating a contract with teachers and reducing the 11.9-percent pay increase they received over two years.

When her family has a tight budget, she said, "we don't continue to spend what we don't have."

Board President Mathew McCusker, responding later to Molitor, strongly indicated that no efforts will be made to renegotiate a teacher contract. "There's a stronger possibility of me walking on water," he said."

Molitor reminded board members that many district residents are laid off from their jobs. "There are people who will not eat if they pay $20 more a month (in taxes)."

Parent Denise Thomas was among several parents who voiced concerns that special education programs will suffer from budget cuts.

"DON'T SHORTCHANGE my child to guarantee that there will be benefits for teachers," she said.

Wayne resident Steve Lind attacked a memo that school Superintendent Dennis O'Neill sent to his staff, in part telling them defeat of the tax-increase stemmed from "a senseless war being waged against the kids by an uninformed few."

Lind stressed that nearly 15,000 people voted in the election, rejecting higher taxes 51.6 percent to 48.4 percent. School officials have said the failure to raise property taxes will force them to make massive budget cuts, such as eliminating busing, reducing the high school instructional day and cutting nearly 100 jobs.

THE VEHEMENT opposition to higher school taxes upset Cathy Keyes, a Save Our Schools committee member, who said Monday, "This makes me sick to be somebody from Westland."

Several students blamed voters for ignoring students' needs in refusing to raise property taxes.

"Tears come from my eyes when I hear how selfish this is," said Karen Deschaine, a John Glenn sophomore.

Eleventh-grader Alicia Embury agreed and said, "I want my education. I want to go to college. I want to go to (graduate) school."

Embury urged people who want taxes increased and their critics to bury their differences. "Be on your children's side," she said.

Board split over timing of election

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Wayne-Westland school board members, reeling from the March 13 millage defeat, appear deeply divided over whether to return to voters in June with another tax hike proposal.

Board president Mathew McCusker on Monday became the only board member to strongly support reviving a proposed 7.75-mill tax increase on June 10.

The district serves southeast Canton.

"This is one board member who says yes," McCusker said during a board meeting at which some millage supporters demanded the board renew its fight for a tax increase to avert severe program cuts.

"I'm willing to go back next week, the week after that, and the week after that until we pass it," he added.

Board member Leonard Posey, however, appeared doubtful that millage supporters could win the support of a majority of school district voters on June 10.

"I don't think we could do it," Posey said.

An informal poll by the Observer revealed that other board members, including Kathleen Chorbagian, Sharon Scott, Andrew Spisak, Michael Reddy and Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek, haven't decided whether they support another tax proposal so soon.

SOME HAD indicated earlier they would prefer to wait until the fall, after district voters feel the crunch of such budget cuts as eliminating busing, reducing the high school instructional day, slashing all sports programs and trimming the district's workforce by 100 employees.

"There's no doubt we need more money," Spisak said, though he remained undecided on a June proposal.

McCusker strongly favors renewing the millage proposal, despite the possible impact it could have on his re-election bid on June 10. Scott and Reddy also are up for re-election.

Project Graduation kids cut loose — within limits

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

It had all the makings of a celebration — a four-piece band pumped out rock music, while banner-waving youngsters sang, clapped and danced in the aisles.

The youngsters, participants in Project Graduation programs at area high schools, had something to celebrate, too.

Alcohol-related deaths are down among teenagers, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control, with drivers 15-17 posting the biggest decrease.

The new statistics weren't lost on any speakers or participants who kicked off 1991 Project Graduation activities Tuesday at Masonic Auditorium, Detroit.

Project Graduation aims to reduce drinking and drug use among area high school students. The 40 percent drop in teen drunk driving deaths from 1982-89 was seen as evidence the program, and others like it, are working.

"WE'RE GETTING the feeling we're making a difference," said Sandi Wolf, director of Wayne County Mothers Against Drunk Driving, a sponsor of Project Graduation activities.

Part pep rally, part heart-to-heart discussion, Tuesday's program aimed to pump up participants, getting them to spread the anti-drinking, anti-drug message among classmates.

The entertainment, including a high-stepping rap group, and several hyper disc jockeys, didn't obscure the message.

"It was fun," said Charles Smith Jr. of Southfield High. "But they got their message across."

Charity Claramunt said it was the message, not the entertainment, that she would remember most.

"They had an emergency room doctor who spoke about what she sees as a result of drugs and drunk driving and she was pretty effective," the Redford Union student said.

Other serious moments included a moment of silence for all youngsters killed through drug- or alcohol-related illness and injuries. Banners, specially prepared for the occasion by Redford Thurston students, bore the names of those who died.

But Tuesday's rally was mostly a high-energy affair. Audience members were encouraged to shout, stomp and generally cut loose and they responded — making an Arsenio Hall Show audience seem almost comatose in comparison.

More than 3,000 youngsters, from an estimated 60 area high schools, attended the event.

The sharing of youthful energy served a valuable purpose, organizers said.

"These are kids who sometimes may feel they're in

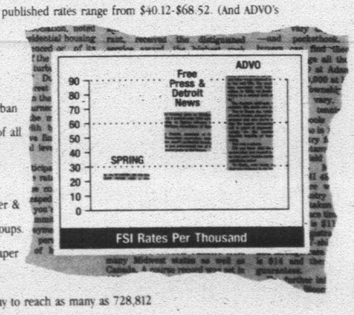
If the inserts in this newspaper had been distributed by the Free Press or News, they could have cost about twice as much.

This newspaper is a member of the SPRING suburban network. And advertisers in SPRING pay a flat rate of just $23 per thousand for Free-Standing Inserts (FSIs). By contrast, The Detroit News and Free Press' published rates range from $40.12-$68.52. (And ADVO's published rates range from $29.25-$92.50.)

So what is SPRING?

SPRING (The Suburban Press RING) is the network of all 50 suburban newspapers published by the Adams, Associated, Heritage, Observer & Eccentric, and Hometown groups.



The SPRING newspaper network delivers FSI users a single, extremely effective way to reach as many as 728,812 households in Detroit's affluent suburbs, approximately twice as many as you can reach in the daily Free Press, and more than twice the number you can reach in The News.

And you place just one order, deal with one rep, and get one invoice.

All of which is why more and more FSI users are using SPRING. How about you?

Gov: Tigers should stay in city

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Until now, Gov. John Engler has sided with economic developers. Last week the Republican conservative showed signs of concern about urban sprawl.

Engler told the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments he wants to preserve the old Tiger Stadium, promised to appoint a liaison to SEMCOG and indicated a concern about the cost of new development in open fields.

"I would prefer that the stadium stay in Detroit. I'd actually prefer that Tiger Stadium be fixed, if it can be," he replied to Detroit council member Maryann Mahaffey. The SEMCOG General Assembly greeted the remark with warm applause.

"If there's redevelopment or development of a new site, I don't think there'll be state money involved in that."

IN HIS 1990 campaign, candidate Engler said Michigan's problem is not controlling growth but obtaining it.

But in a speech to SEMCOG, a seven-county agency seeking to cool urban sprawl in a time of little population growth, Engler shifted his ground a little.

"I would like to see an expansion of the enterprise zone concept . . . to bring growth and investment back," he said.

In an enterprise zone, taxes on new investment are reduced to near zero to lure businesses into blighted areas. The idea is preached by Jack Kemp, secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Engler said an enterprise zone experiment in Benton Harbor had "mixed reviews."

"We don't have a growth problem in too many of our communities. You look at Michigan in the 1980s, and we gained only 33,000 people in the entire state."

TO SOUTHFIELD Mayor Don Fracassi's plea that he appoint a staff link to SEMCOG, Engler said he would.

"I don't have a name for you yet," Engler said, noting he has cut his staff 40 percent compared to former Gov. James Blanchard.

"I'd like to appoint myself. But we are looking at someone. We have to settle a couple of issues relative to our southeast Michigan office," said Engler, in office 11 weeks.

"We will have someone readily identifiable and, more importantly, more accessible for you to deal with," he told Fracassi.

'I would prefer that the stadium stay in Detroit. I'd actually prefer that Tiger Stadium be fixed, if it can be.'
— Gov. John Engler

ENGLER TOLD SEMCOG delegates — all either elected or top appointed officials in local government — he would welcome their ideas on growth policy.

"One of the things you've focussed on is the cost of delivery of services to undeveloped areas, particularly when the cost has been borne once, and there's an opportunity to re-utilize prior investment.

"Should we support the development of greenfields, or should that expense be borne not at all by state government or even local taxpayers?

"It frequently comes to a head when someone says, 'Fine — your choice is not whether I go here or there but whether I go to Michigan or not in Michigan.' That raises the stakes."

"I happen to be an advocate for an organization like this (SEMCOG). Someone said, 'Enough to pay for it?' Well, I'm not that much of an advocate," he said to loud laughter.

"We ought to set in place state policies that will reward the maximum cooperation (with local planners) and be less helpful to those brave souls that wish to go it alone."

Pointing to his own home area of Mount Pleasant, Engler deplored federal, state and local spending on two utility systems, "one encircling the other."

SEMCOG is half-way through a yearlong study of the impact of urban sprawl on governmental infrastructure and society. Delegates last week learned that the region's population has actually shrunk 90,000 in the last 10 years.

the minority in their schools," Wolf said. "Here, they can look around and see that there's thousands of other students who share their beliefs."

It also showed, as several speakers were quick to point out, that youngsters didn't need alcohol or drugs to have a good time.

Project Graduation, is a collaborative effort between WTVS-TV, Detroit and area 7-Eleven stores.

Project representatives are available to help students group organize and plan activities.

"We're there to help, but we really want the students to take leadership themselves," Wolf said.

7-Eleven is the program's major corporate sponsor. The long list of additional sponsors includes Birmingham-Bloomfield Families in Action, Wayne and Oakland county regional school agencies, the Oakland County health Department, Wayne County Prosecutor's Office and Obsever & Eccentric Newspapers, as well as other private and public agencies.

Additional information on Project Graduation is available by calling Agnes Scott, WTVS vice president for special services, 876-8379 or Sandi Wolf at Wayne County MADD, 422-6233.

ELSIE KEPPEN

Services for Mrs. Keppen, known to hundreds of Westland and Canton Township residents as "Mrs. Santa," were Wednesday at the Pawlus Funeral Home, Canton, with burial in Glen Eden Cemetery, Livonia.

Mrs. Keppen, 76, of Canton, died Monday in Garden City Osteopathic Hospital.

Gene Reaves of Westland, who has portrayed Santa for many years, said Mrs. Keppen was his "Mrs. Santa" for 10 years.

"She was the most lovable person you ever saw," Reaves said. "She handled children beautifully," referring to her frequent holiday visits to foster children and parents.

Mrs. Keppen is survived by a son, William, a Canton Township police officer; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Her husband, Alvin, died in 1978.

Senate bill would make assisted suicide a felony

By Tim Richard
staff writer

The state Senate moved toward making assisting a suicide a four-year felony amid warnings that the bill goes too far.

Senate Bill 42 was passed 26-8 last week but faces an uncertain future in the House.

"In enforcement, it's going to be obvious the only ones you can prosecute are doctors and hospitals," said Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, who voted no. "People every day are permitting their loved ones to just pass away."

THE BILL also was opposed by Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, who advocated a study commission to look at ethical, legal and scientific issues in helping a dying person end life.

"I got 16 votes to tie my study to this bill," Honigman said, indicating that support for the bill is softer than indicated by the vote.

All other area senators voted yes except Democrats William Faust of Westland and Jack Faxon of Farmington Hills, who had excused absences.

Sponsored by Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, Senate Bill 32 would make it a felony to encourage or help anyone to commit suicide. Penalties would be a $2,000 fine, four years in prison or both.

The target of the bill is Dr. Jack Kevorkian, a retired Royal Oak pathologist who used his "suicide machine" to help a fatally ill Oregon woman end her life in an Oakland County park.

A murder charge against Kevorkian was tossed out of one court, but a circuit judge has slapped an injunction on his further use of the heart-stopping machine.

SUPPORTER Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, warned that without a new law "we'll make a new industry in this state. We'll have a motto: 'Welcome to Michigan. We'll help kill you,'" Welborn said.

"Dr. Kevorkian is the lightning rod," said opponent Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing. "This bill says anybody who provides means or access — not just Kevorkian or doctors."

In the House, the bill will likely go to the Judiciary Committee, headed by Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor.

Bullard sneers openly at any bill supported by the "so-called Right to Life" organization.

One possible scenario: Bullard will seek action on his "living will" in exchange for support of Dillingham's assisted suicide bill. The living will allows a person to prescribe the limits of medical treatment should he or she become unable to make decisions.

'In enforcement, it's going to be obvious the only ones you can prosecute are doctors and hospitals.'
— Sen. George Z. Hart D-Dearborn

Tighter state licensing for proprietary schools

By Tim Richard
staff writer

In an era of deregulation, customers and businesses agree one area needs tighter state licensing — proprietary schools.

"In nine months, we were supposed to cover 15 areas of law," Terry Lemerand of Waterford Township told a state House committee last week. "We covered five areas."

The former Clarenceville resident told a series of horror stories about a now defunct school for paralegals in Pontiac:

- An entire course was started over after new students enrolled.
- Only three students in a large class ever were able to get jobs as paralegals, and there was virtually no counseling.
- Students were promised judges and lawyers as teachers, but only one person ever taught all the classes.
- The school turned out to be unaccredited by any accrediting agency.
- 40 percent of the material on a criminal law test was never taught in class.

LEMERAND said she's suing the proprietor for fraud, breach of contract and sexual harassment. She said he's countersuing her.

"I'm now going to Oakland Community College and planning to transfer to Madonna College (in Livonia)," said Lemerand.

She told the House Colleges and Universities Committee she paid $2,600 cash for the program and didn't get her money's worth.

Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, panel chair, said looking at proprietary schools would be the committee's chief task this session.

Michigan saw an explosive growth in proprietary schools, said the man charged with regulating them.

"The schools licensed by the department (of education) have increased from 160 with 23,000 students in the early 1970s to almost 300 enrolling perhaps 50,000 or more today," said Ronald L. Root.

"The licensure unit has consisted of one or two staff over these years who must regulate an educational system with three times the number of schools as our college and university system contains," said Root, director of higher education management services.

He called for higher inspection fees because state funding for his program was eliminated three years ago.

And he called current law "extremely weak" and lacking penalties for non-compliance.

Root said mushrooming federal aid in the early 1970s led to the growth of privately-operated schools teaching mainly vocational programs. "Many do an excellent job and provide quality educational services," he said.

But the bad apples have resulted in many students' defaulting on loans, forcing some schools to shut their doors and leaving paying students out in the cold.

ANDREW VIGNONE, of the Michigan Organization of Private Vocational Schools, said some schools have low standards.

Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, told of speaking to a business school graduating class where the highest paid person would be making only $17,000 a year and the average $12,000. But students had taken out "huge loans" to qualify for such low-paying jobs, she said.

"Congress has tiled student aid to loans," Vignone replied.

FRANK PAONE, former dean of the Detroit College of Business, said private schools began their own accrediting organization in 1957 because the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools would accredit only liberal arts and nonprofit schools.

Paone said the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools became an accrediting agency after receiving that power from the federal government. The schools themselves fund accrediting expenses.

Stadium unwelcome in western Wayne

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A suburban stadium for the Detroit Tigers would be about as welcome as crab grass, say community leaders in western Wayne and Oakland counties. While the professional baseball team hasn't yet announced a new stadium site, Plymouth, Canton and Northville townships have joined Novi in pulling up the welcome mat.

"They just don't want them," said Susan Heitnz, vice chairwoman of the Wayne County Commission and a former Northville Township supervisor.

"In a sense it's a growth issue, a development issue," Heintz said, with many community leaders fearful a suburban stadium will bring unwanted growth and traffic tie-ups.

"Our feeling is we already had a fairly large traffic generator with 12 Oaks Mall," Novi City Manager Edward Kriewall said. "We didn't want another."

Novi city officials made headlines in February when they unanimously passed a resolution urging the Tigers to look elsewhere.

That resolution was "a philosophical statement," Kriewall said. "The feeling was, we should take a stand on it as a regional issue."

Whatever its intent, other communities have followed suit.

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP passed a similar resolution Feb. 26. While is has no force of law, officials said they hoped the resolution would discourage the Tigers from picking a Plymouth Township site.

"We were getting calls from our residents on it, so we just wanted to put it to rest," Supervisor Maurice Breen said.

In Canton, officials believe no such resolution is needed.

"Our feeling is they could only locate in the Ford Road, I-275 area and with the wetlands and multiple property owners out there it would take them five years or more to even put anything together," Supervisor Thomas Yack said.

"Personally, I feel most stadiums belong in a central city setting," Yack added.

Though Canton is attempting to create a downtown of its own, Yack said a stadium clearly isn't part of that plan.

"We're talking about a 35-acre site, that's hardly enough," he said.

Though Northville Township is considering changes to its zoning ordinance, township Supervisor Georgina Goss said changes have nothing to do with the Tigers.

"We said all along that Tiger Stadium isn't coming to Northville Township," said Goss. "It would strain our tax base beyond belief to get something like that."

Her feeling is shared by other suburban leaders.

"The feeling is it's going to cost them so much, in terms of police and other amenities, that whatever tax revenue the stadium brings just isn't going to be worth it," Heintz said.

WHILE SUBURBAN leaders might not be entirely altruistic in wishing Detroit well in efforts to retain the ballclub, Yack's statement downtown stadiums is based on precedent.

Of the 26 major league baseball teams, all but three play in a stadium within the corporate limits of a major city. Of the three suburban stadiums, none would be comparable to any suburban site in metro Detroit.

Anaheim Stadium, in Orange County, Calif., is close to Disneyland. Arlington (Texas) Staidum is in the shadow of Six Flags Over Texas, another major amusement park. Shea Stadium, in Flushing, N.Y., is near LaGuardia Airport.

It's somewhat different for professional football. Of the 17 National Football League stadiums used for football only, seven are in suburban sites.

But it's one of those stadiums — the Pontiac Silverdome — that gives suburban leaders the most pause.

Built in the mid-1970s with the assumption it would bring business to its financially troubled host city, the Silverdome has instead proved to be a money loser.

Slightly more than a decade after its opening, Pontiac was kicking in more than $1 million a year to keep the Silverdome solvent. Nor did the stadium give any boost to Pontiac redevelopment.

Even though the Silverdome recently landed regional finals for the NCAA men's basketball tournament, city officials still complained that too many fans stayed, dined and shopped in other suburbs, ignoring Pontiac completely.

Perhaps with that in mind, suburban leaders hope that they're the ones who will be ignored when it comes time to pick a site new Tiger Staidum site.

EMU study

Canton wasted $25,000 on it

The study claims that Canton's greatest need is for public transportation. That's bunk. The study is a collection of 'save everybody' gibberish that, if followed, would do nothing but cost residents a ton of money for very little results.

CANTON TOWNSHIP should ask Eastern Michigan University to return the $25,000 it spent on a yearlong study of needs in the community.

It's useless.

The study claims that Canton's greatest need is for public transportation. That's bunk. The study is a collection of "save everybody" gibberish that, if followed, would do nothing but cost residents a ton of money for very little results.

The study claims public transportation is Canton's greatest need. It says that transportation is needed by senior citizens, residents of subsidized housing, mobile homes and those in the poorer sections of the community.

THE STUDY'S GOAL was to find out whether the federal grant money the township receives is being spent on problems Canton residents identify as critical. Canton receives about $300,000 each year in community block grants to assist low and moderate income residents.

The irony of the situation is that Canton does have transportation services. The Nankin Transit Authority provides door-to-door service for seniors and the handicapped as well as low-income residents.

But our scorn isn't for the poor. It's for the folks who do these useless studies and for the politicians who pay for them.

Rarely does a study recommend anything that would lead to less government spending. They usually recommend more government involvement, which means it's going to cost the taxpayers more money.

We're always suspicious of the people doing such studies. They often are the very same people who benefit financially when government grows.

AND THE CANTON study fits that suspicion. It was done by Eastern Michigan University's Institute for Community and Regional Development and headed by Raymond Rosenfeld, who served as the principal investigator.

Rosenfeld, by the way, also is the director of EMU's master's degree program in public administration. That's the school that turns out newly minted bureaucrats.

It's in Rosenfeld's financial interest to make government grow. It gives him and EMU a place to put their graduates.

According to news accounts, Rosenfeld praised Canton for doing the study.

And why shouldn't he? The money paid for the study probably accounted for a good part of his salary.

Canton taxpayers deserve their biggest bang for their buck. And in the case of the EMU study they didn't get it.

They deserve their money back.

Coping with war

Communities pulled together

The strong majority of Wayne and Oakland county residents should be commended for setting an example that largely resisted stereotyping and racial hatred, and instead found ways to widen communication and develop greater understanding during a highly emotional episode.

THE WORLD SHARPENED its focus on Southeast Michigan for the past seven months, starting last August, when Iraq invaded Kuwait. Everyone noticed, as though for the first time, that this part of the world includes the largest Arab population outside the Middle East.

The reaction to this geographic discovery was, initially, not much to be proud of. The Arab community that had existed in relative peace now was under renewed scrutiny, with the self-proclaimed wiser among us wondering, in fact, if they were going to be a problem during the Persian Gulf war. It was an embarrassing time for the rest of us.

Many residents said this smacked of something they'd already been through, and hoped never to go through again. They talked about Hitler. They talked about sequestering the Japanese during World War II. Some wondered aloud who had the authority to draw a line in the concrete and aim public suspicion at a large population that had done nothing wrong except exist.

FORTUNATELY THOUGH, THE correct line of thought seems to have prevailed this time. There were a few relatively minor problems during the past seven months. Some tried to tie bar those problems to the Persian Gulf war, but anyone who's lived in an urban area for a while knows that these problems occurred before, and unfortunately will occur after, this war is finally stamped, sealed, certified and over.

Those same people know that economic and social problems are a large contributor to civil unrest, and most of the time, when it gets right down to it, a small percentage of people fulfill their own ugly prophecies in these matters.

However, the strong majority of Wayne and Oakland county residents should be commended for setting an example that largely resisted stereotyping and racial hatred, and instead found ways to widen communication and develop greater understanding during a highly emotional episode.

Many of the narrow-minded, for example, expected our local Jewish populations in Southfield and West Bloomfield to ignite against perceived Arab threats in their own communities. Instead, although some Jewish institutions took security precautions, they also set an example by opening their doors and inviting Chaldeans and Iraqis to services and programs.

OTHERS ANTICIPATED WIDESPREAD escalation of tensions in area schools with diverse populations. Incredulously, there even was serious discussion in a few Oakland County schools of canceling athletic events, an act that would have made tangible the unfounded fears of students automatically brawling over racial lines if given the chance to congregate.

Our students proved to be wiser than that, a credit to them and their parents. International, national and local reporters came here looking for student-vs.-student stories, just like they make their annual Halloween pilgrimages to Detroit for Devil's Night fires.

They didn't come away with much. A few had the courage and integrity to report what they found — kids basically getting along with one another, not getting overly excited about an event transpiring 6,000 miles away. Most, though, ignored the news when they found it. No conflict, no story.

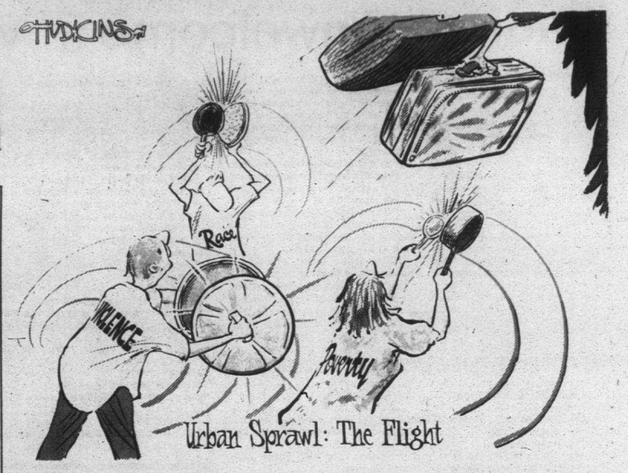
The conflict end was reported mightily. One weekend not too long ago, there was a bomb scare in front of a party store in Garden City. That was serious business, but an isolated incident nevertheless. It was reported, however, as though Hussein had planted it himself.

During a Martin Luther King Day ceremony at West Bloomfield High, a bomb threat was phoned in. The school was cleared while police searched the building and found nothing. The school celebration was held Jan. 15, the day the United Nations had set as a deadline for Iraq leaving Kuwait.

Some said the threat was due to the deadline. The better answer came from a local police sergeant, who reminded us that the school regularly gets threats, and he thought no more or less of this one due to the war.

Then there was Westland Mayor Robert Thomas, who penned a letter warning of "acts of terrorism and reverse terrorism" in the community, even though nothing yet had happened. Westland's Chamber of Commerce called the mayor's comments "insensitive" and responsible for "undue concern to the business community and the general public."

Those are the smaller incidents, though. The story was right in front of us, and that was that people behaved with good intentions during a bad time. It needs to be mentioned.



Censorship unacceptable in high school papers too

Steve Barnaby

If our children are going to learn how the press works in a free society they must be allowed to operate in a free environment, no matter how frightening it may be to some.

THE CONVERSATION is disturbingly repetitive:

"Could you come and talk with my high school newspaper staff. I'm a first year English teacher and I've been put in charge of the student publication. And I really don't know anything about newspapers."

Grinding my teeth, I take a deep breath, smile and eagerly volunteer to serve yet another hitch in a campaign which, to a less persistent soul, could very well appear futile.

But those of us who believe the Bill of Rights is more than just something to wave a flag at are a persistent bunch. We have to be because our numbers are dwindling.

Increasingly...our ... students ... are being misled. They are being taught that censorship is acceptable, even preferable. Weary educators, beaten down by a system which demands conformity, are declaring that a free press really isn't all that important or practical.

STUDENTS too often are learning that your right to know what the powerful of America are visiting upon the disenfranchised and poor is inappropriate.

And these same young minds are rapidly making their way into the newsrooms and classrooms of America where they are determining that it is better to go along in order to get along with the establishment. They have lost the distinction between editing and censorship.

It's a dangerous trend, one which, if continued, will surely erode our freedoms.

That's why it's essential that those who cherish a free press support a bill recently introduced in the state legislature by Rep. Lyn Jondahl, D-Okemos.

The bill is in response to a 1988 U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing school principals to censor student expression. With Jondahl's initiative, students would be provided with free expression rights when working on school publications or other events such as plays, bulletin board postings and petition distribution.

For many folks that's a scary thought.

If our children are going to learn how the press works in a free society they must be allowed to operate in a free environment, no matter how frightening it may be to some.

THE IDEA that our children are being taught press censorship as acceptable is ludicrous, irresponsible and very simply dangerous. A person learns by doing, not by doing the opposite.

The responsibility for turning around this situation rests in the hands of our educators, with support from school board trustees and parents.

Educators, in particular, must show the common sense and courage to develop journalism programs which are meaningful. They can begin by hiring experienced teachers who know the basic tenets of journalism, libel law ramifications and First Amendment rights.

At the present, journalism is held in such low regard at most high schools that typically some freshman teacher who very well may not even read newspapers is thrown into the task.

Support of the Jondahl bill would force fearful administrators to sit up and pay attention to our Bill of Rights, a sometimes forgotten part of American freedom.

MADD mothers thankful

To the editor:

On behalf of the Wayne County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, I would like to express our thanks for the generous donation of $1,115 to our chapter from the patrons of the Mayflower Hotel.

We are grateful for the willingness of Mr. Creon Smith from the Mayflower, to coordinate this "fun raiser" caricature event. We feel it was a good way to call attention to MADD's goals, while emphasizing the responsible serving policies of the Mayflower Hotel.

Community support such as this is important to help the efforts of MADD and helps us to remind people to drive sober.

Club didn't endorse Mettetal

To the editor:

Some recent comments in letters to the editor and from other sources appear to imply that the Plymouth Rotary Club has endorsed the proposal that Plymouth Township and the City of Plymouth acquire and operate Mettetal Airport. This is simply not true and I would like to try to correct that misperception.

In accordance with the Policy of Plymouth Rotary Club not to endorse political candidates or political issues, we have neither endorsed nor opposed the airport issue.

I would appreciate your assistance in communicating this fact to the citizens of the Plymouth community.

E. J. McClendon, president

Mettetal a question of rights

To the editor:

Evidently the Observer feels the discussion about Mettetal Airport should end with the editorial staff's last word.

We, The Plymouth Concerned Citizens, have been called rabble-rousers, nincompoops, storm troopers, ignorant and other derogatory names. "Fanatical" is just another stick or stone.

We, on the other hand, have made no personal attacks on any commissioner or resident (or newspaper publisher or editor). Our presentations to the city commission have been objective and polite.

Since Mayor Bila resigned, Plymouth taxpayers have had no reassurance from the city commission that the scheduled vote on the acquisition of an airport will be binding.

The issue is no longer whether the commission is convinced that Mettetal is the best thing for this community, it is a question of the rights of the people of Plymouth. Without an ironclad escape clause in the Joint Operating Agreement, purchase of the airport prior to a vote of citizens will deny permanently Plymouth taxpayers the right to have their vote implemented.

State priorities questioned

Judith Doner Berne

THE IRONY was all about us.

There, in the meeting hall of Christ Church Cranbrook, surrounded by the homes of the wealthy and prominent of Bloomfield Hills, the talk was of the homeless and helpless of Oakland County.

Local legislators or their representatives came to hear appeals and answer questions about how state budget reductions are hitting the state's wealthiest county.

They were greeted with facts and frustration — and the plea of many not to cut their property tax.

FACTS: ADC, General Assistance Grants and Emergency Needs Programs reduced by 17 percent.

Supplemental Security Income reduced 40 percent; Job Start reduced 14.2 percent; Medicaid payments to providers reduced by 18.4 percent.

GA medical assistance payments to providers reduced 10 percent; Foster care providers get 22 percent less; state reimbursement to Child Care Fund reduced 9.2 percent.

Rates to Day Care Services providers reduced 4 percent; Adult Home Help payments to providers reduced 12.6 percent.

FRUSTRATION: "I'm thoroughly discouraged," said Meg Mitzel of the Oakland Child Abuse and Neglect Council. "I think we have screwed up our priorities. This society can afford to make children and families a priority."

"We don't want the (property tax) cuts," said Barbara Rosalik, a Rochester teacher on the Social Action Committee of the Birmingham Unitarian Church. "I can't teach this child if he's hungry."

"You're dealing with an overstretched, overextended volunteer and professional population," warned Lillian Melville of the South Oakland Shelter in Royal Oak. "The numbers, the cuts are going to inundate us."

The Oakland County Housing and Real Estate Department is getting 70 calls more a week since the cuts were announced, reported Donna Patterson, a West Bloomfield resident. A major part of the problem - Oakland County rents exceed the statewide shelter allowance by $80 per month.

"People are selling their food stamps to pay rent," said Ellen Kennedy of the Community Food Depots. "People who are working are living in cars with their children," Patterson reported. "We have no resources left. I'm begging you. . ."

QUESTION: Do our elected state lawmakers have the dedication to step up to the real issues — the long-standing major policy questions behind the immediate chaos?

So far they're only pointing the finger. Republicans blame the Blanchard administration for overcommitting the state. Democrats attack the Reagan administration for cutting federal aid and forcing the state to pick up the slack.

SOLUTION: Norris Lee, a retired Burroughs Corp. executive from Birmingham, asked legislators to apply business principles to the issues.

If sales are to business what taxes are to the state government, in tough times you wouldn't advise a company to cut sales, he argued.

He urged them to cut non-essential instead of human spending especially pork barrel items. "If a person went up there with a non-partisan attitude they could do it.

"Lead us," he commanded.

Doc Doyle

Q: I read that the new Kentucky school reform bill is considering non-graded instruction through the third grade. What are the advantages of a non-graded system? Is is taking hold throughout the country? Is this just another fad?

A: The non-graded school does not use letter grades (A through E or excellent, average, needs improvement). It depends more on handwritten reports to parents, supposedly more frequent parent/teacher conferences as opposed to letter grades.

A non-graded school program could pull together first-, second- and third-grade students into one room. Grade level is not the only criteria used for placement in a classroom. Aptitude and ability play a major role.

TWO OR three teachers would work as a team with the mixture of students.

This isn't an innovation. The non-graded system go its start in the one-room, red brick school house at the turn of the century and periodically has come and gone since that time.

The non-graded concept has been talked about more than it has been implemented. One reason is that parents have been conditioned during their school years to receive a grade. Parents often have trouble trying to determine how their child is doing in school if they don't receive a letter grade.

In fact, there is no such thing as an ungraded or non-graded system. The numerous individual reports teachers write on every child in a non-graded system is a report card.

MELBOURNE HIGH School in Florida has not used grades for years. However, when its students fill out a college application, someone has to interpret the teachers' reports into grades.

Non-graded high school, such as Melbourne, force the college admission office to use the results of the ACT (American College Test) or SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) . . . these entrance examinations then become the report card.

Yes, Kentucky is pursuing a comprehensive package of reforms including the non-graded concept. But frankly, spending for public education in that and other southern states, less than $2,000 per child in some cases. Put in any program you want; without enough money, nothing changes.

BESIDES, THE key to quality education lies in highly trained and qualified teachers with sufficient supportive materials and equipment as opposed to theories that come and go.

Until this country makes education its number one priority and spend more money, we can have graded, ungraded, junior high or middle schools, long-range or strategic planning or management by objectives and nothing will change.

I am proud to be an American seeing how we stood up to the madman, Saddam Hussein.

Nevertheless, it will be a great day when education gets enough money and the Department of Defense has to hold a bake sale to build its tanks.

Lansing debates drug case trust

Tim Richard

WHOM DO you trust — the prosecutor who argues one side of the story or the judge who listens to both sides?

That's one core of the debate in Lansing. The question is whether to ease up the law giving drug couriers mandatory life sentences without hope of parole when they're convicted of dealing 650 grams or more of cocaine or heroin.

The judge has no discretion. Only the prosecutor has discretion — when he or she decides how to charge the arrested person.

The bill before the House Judiciary Committee would continue to provide for mandatory life but allow judges to mete out as few as five years for good reason.

NATURALLY, Oakland County prosecutor Dick Thompson and the hard liners were favoring the prosecutor. Thompson recalled how judges gave "revolving door" prisons sentences in the early 1970s.

Ingham Circuit Judge James R. Giddings put the other side well:

"The law transfers discretion from the courts to prosecutors. Court decisions are subject to public scrutiny and judicial review.

"Many (big drug dealers) are buying their way out (of life sentences) with forfeiture procedures (surrendering property in return for more lenient prosecution). These decisions are made behind (the prosecutor's) closed doors.

"Discretion in private is more subject to abuse. We should return these decisions to the public arena."

THAT REASONING is music to the ears of believers in open government.

The Open Meetings Act applies only to legislative bodies, not to administrators like the prosecutor or to judges. But you get Giddings' point: Judges operate in open courtrooms. Their decisions are almost automatically appealed to higher courts.

But prosecutors cut deals behind closed doors. Ergo, we should trust the judges more than those wheeling, dealing, secretive prosecutors, he says.

Well, maybe.

Yet we must remember with disgust how judges campaign for re-election. They never talk past cases. They have themselves photographed in robes, in front of a shelf of law books. In Oakland County, the circuit judges campaign as a fake "team" to freeze out potential competitors.

In short, if a judge were a bleeding heart or a hangman, you the voter would never know it.

SO WHOM should we trust?

Neither.

Instead, consider the law on its merits. It requires a lifetime in prison without hope of parole for anyone caught dealing, or even talking about dealing, 1.4 pounds of drugs.

Common sense says we should provide some "light at the end of the tunnel," some hope 10 or 20 years later for the convict who gets an education, gets clean of his own drug habit, matures and seems ready to go back into society.

U.S. District Judge Avern Cohn said elderly prisoners often are no longer a threat to society. It's a fairly good argument. At 40, a prisoner isn't the same person who was sentenced at 20. People change with age.

A DETROIT judge, Gershwin Drain, did the judiciary more harm than good with his testimony. Of the five drug couriers who have come before him, Drain said he would have liked to give a term of years to four.

That didn't set well with lawmakers. The bill would allow judicial discretion in a fairly tight set of circumstances, and here was a judge admitting he would use discretion 80 percent of the time.

Michigan's law, one of the most severe in the world, simply isn't helping us capture the drug "kingpins," whatever that means. We're coming down on a few "mules" like a ton of bricks. Myself, I would be inclined to make the minimum penalty 10 years rather than five years or mandatory life.

But not because I trust judges.

Fairy shrimp are found in ephemeral pools formed from snow melt waters in fields or in ponds that have recently thawed.

Fairy shrimp are probably the tiniest sign of spring

Timothy Nowicki

Harbingers of spring come in many forms and shapes. To some the first crocus to bloom is a sign of spring. Others look to the first robin or first red-winged blackbird. Whatever sign it is, when we see the first one of the year, there is a sense of security and stability — nature's infinite cycle has returned again and we look forward to a future we know from the past.

Most harbingers tend to be large and showy, but there is a less conspicuous reminder that can be found in small pools of water. Fairy shrimp are found in ephemeral pools formed from snow melt waters in fields, or in ponds that have recently thawed.

I remember walking through an old fallow field and looking into a pool that I was about to walk around, when I noticed that the water was moving. Despite the cold weather there were hundreds of delicate ¾ to one inch long fairy shrimp beating their legs furiously.

Upon closer examination I noticed that they were swimming on their backs, or sides, as it sometimes appeared. When their rapidly moving legs stopped, they began to float downward. Then all of a sudden they would start beating again. Their feathery legs have gills connected to them, which are used for respiration.

In back of the legs and gills was a narrow body section that one associates with a typical shrimp. A large black colored eye at the head end was very noticeable. If a few are collected and transferred to an aquarium, their beating heart and internal organs can be seen through their transparent body.

Small vernal ponds are the best place to find fairy shrimp because there are no large predators to feed on them. However, they may be seen in one pool and not in another just a few feet away. They may also be seen one year and not the next. This may be a result of young hatching from overwintering eggs too early in the season. Warm weather that may follow can kill the young nymphs.

Fairy shrimp seen during an early spring walk have been in a dormant stage for a long time and are actively courting and mating before their aquatic home dries up again. Once mating is completed, the adults fall to the bottom and die, while the eggs fall to the bottom and await the next cold wet season.

Easter Bunny hops into town

By Julie Brown
staff writer

THE EASTER Bunny's a busy fellow this time of year, but he still found the time to visit Plymouth on Friday, March 22.

The bunny was the guest of honor at an Easter party for the Plymouth Newcomers Moms and Tots group. His arrival was eagerly awaited by the youngsters.

"Oh sure, it's the real bunny," said Charlotte Barnett, president of the Plymouth Newcomers Club. "We're having an Easter egg hunt."

Club members were able to get their request in early enough so that the Easter Bunny was able to fit it into his hectic schedule.

Barnett and her husband have four children, including 4-year-old Spencer, who was at the party at St. John's Episcopal Church in Plymouth Township. Spencer and the other children ate lunch and enjoyed a crafts activity.

The Easter Bunny's arrival was the highlight of the day. Children took their baskets outside to search for goodies on the church lawn.

THE PARTY is one of a number of Moms and Tots activities throughout the year. The Canton Newcomers Club also has a Moms and Tots group.

"It just gives the moms a chance to be with the child," said Barnett, a Plymouth resident. "It makes the child feel special."

Moms and Tots members from Plymouth meet monthly to enjoy different activities and the pleasure of each other's company.

"It's fun, just having fun with your kids," said Nancy Lashlee-Darragh, Moms and Tots coordinator for the Plymouth Newcomers.

She and her husband have two sons, Adam, 5, and Ruthven, nearly 2. Both were at Friday's get-together.

"IT'S JUST a time for the moms to socialize," said Lashlee-Darragh, a Plymouth resident.

Children play together, learn new things and enjoy such activities as fire station visits and holiday parties.

"Mostly it's a good time for the moms to chat and run after the kids," she said with a smile.

ABOUT 70 people came to the spring party and Easter egg hunt at St. John's Episcopal Church. Most children arrived with their moms, although a few grandmothers came along for the fun.

The excitement level was high at the party, particularly when children knew the Easter Bunny's arrival was imminent. Noise levels rose accordingly, although most of the moms are accustomed to such sounds.

"It doesn't bother me," said Barnett, who used to teach first grade in Texas. "So I'm used to the noise."

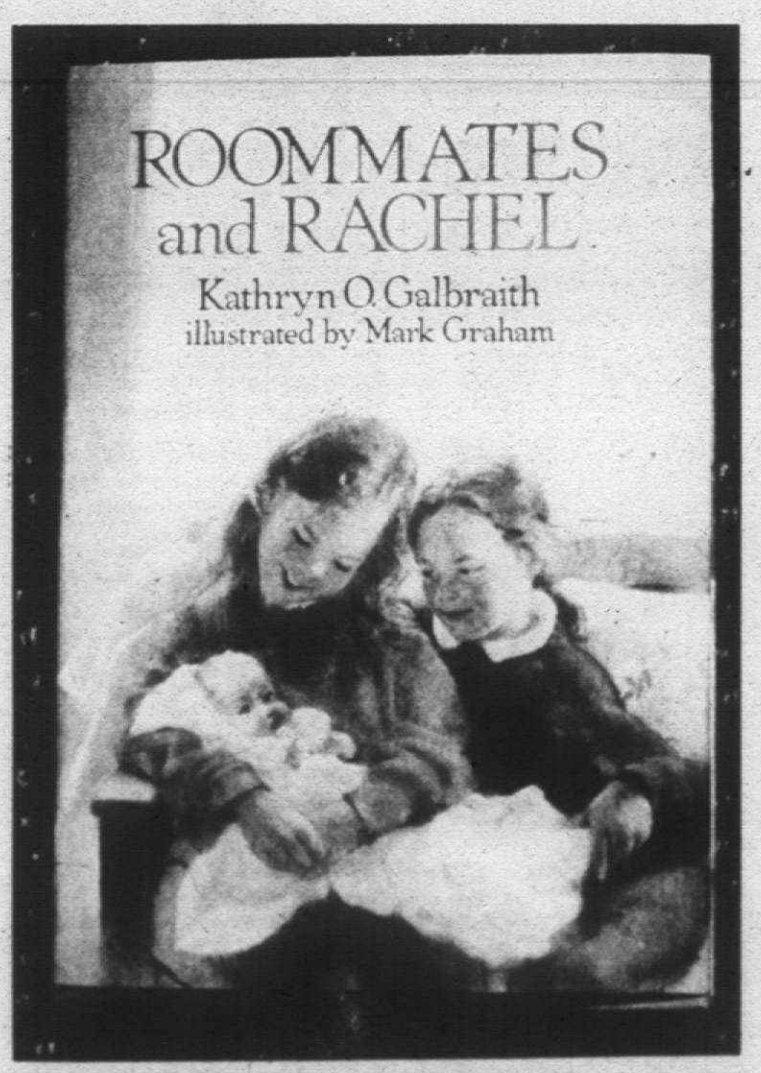
Sequel tells a heartwarming tale



"Roommates and Rachel" is author Kathryn Osebold Galbraith's newest book. Galbraith grew up in Plymouth and lives in Tacoma, Wash.

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Author Kathryn Osebold Galbraith has written eight books for children. Her latest, "Roommates and Rachel," is the first to qualify as a sequel.

Galbraith, who grew up in Plymouth and lives in Tacoma, Wash., published her first book for children in 1976. More recently, she wrote "Roommates" (Margaret K. McElderry Books/Macmillan).

For the first time, Galbraith felt as if she hadn't finished a story. "Roommates" tells of two sisters, Beth and Mimi, who are waiting for the arrival of their baby sister.

"I just felt like the story wasn't quite over yet. I really wanted to finish the story," she said in a recent telephone interview. "It just seemed like a very natural thing to do."

In the earlier book, Beth and Mimi weren't thrilled to learn they would have to share a room when their sister arrived. "Everybody's affected, right down to the dog," she said.

LEARNING TO live with a new baby is frustrating for the girls, but they find they love their little sister. "Roommates and Rachel" (Margaret K. McElderry Books/Macmillan) tells of the ways life changes after baby Rachel arrives.

The book's for children in first through third grades or thereabouts who can read on their own but need a little help from illustrations to follow the story.

Writing isn't a full-time pursuit for Galbraith, who also serves as executive director of the Tacoma Philharmonic. "It's a nice combination," she said.

She attended Our Lady of Good Counsel School in Plymouth and graduated from Plymouth High School. Galbraith, daughter of the late Charles and Gertrude Osebold, attended the University of Michigan, earning a bachelor's degree in English literature and a master's degree in library science in 1970.

Galbraith and her husband, Steve, live in Tacoma. She still has family ties to Michigan. Two brothers live in Plymouth and another lives in Livonia.

"I try to get back once a year," she said. "It's remained a beautiful little town. It's kept its small-town character with its park."

HER MOST recent book isn't set in Plymouth, although it could have been.

"Of course, those are my memories." She grew up as the only girl in a family with four brothers.

"Someday, I'm going to have to write about that." She remembers being able to walk to school and to other places in Plymouth.

"It was a very warm place, a safe place." She finds it easy now to think about such a place when writing.

Galbraith doesn't have children although she does have four nieces and a nephew. The youngsters have been known to take her books to school. One niece found it difficult to convince a somewhat skeptical teacher that her aunt had written a book.

"It's hard for people to believe that real people write real books," Galbraith said.

She frequently speaks at schools and gets some unusual questions. One boy asked if her hand didn't get tired from writing all those words; he thought she had to do all the printing for each copy of each book.

Her earlier book, "Roommates," did well and will be out in paperback this fall. She's pleased she was able to continue with the story of Beth and Mimi, and wants to write one more story about the family. That story will be set in the summertime.

"Roommates and Rachel" tells how the two girls adjust as they get used to having a baby sister. In one chapter, Beth, Mimi and their mom take the baby to school for a Christmas/Hanukkah party.

GALBRAITH DECIDED to include the Hanukkah celebration, "just as part of wanting to show what a rich culture we Americans have." She wanted to show the variety of ways in which people celebrate the holiday season.

'I really wanted to finish the story. It just seemed like a very natural thing to do.'
—Kathryn Osebold Galbraith children's author

Illustrator Mark Graham did the art work for both "Roommates" and "Roommates and Rachel." The drawings of Beth, Mimi and their mother are based on his neighbors. The dog in the book, Willie, is based on the dog of another friend of Graham's.

"I think he really did a lovely job with the book," Galbraith said of Graham's illustrations.

She hasn't considered writing a book for adults.

"There are still stories for kids that I'm eager to write. It certainly gives me a tremendous amount of pleasure."

She's found that there are many first-rate children's books available these days. The combination of a competitive marketplace and excellent illustrations means children's literature isn't the stepchild of the publishing world.

Artist-writer Gwen Frostic will visit Plymouth in April

Artist and writer Gwen Frostic plans to come to Plymouth to speak in April.
Frostic's specialty is block prints featuring the flora and fauna of northern Michigan. She will speak Friday, April 19, as part of the spring conference of the Michigan Chapter of the Catholic Library Association.
"We have I guess what you call the luck of the Irish," said Rosemarie Shilcusky, librarian at Our Lady of Good Counsel School in Plymouth and a member of the association. "She said she'd be glad to come to Plymouth on the 19th.
"We were ecstatic, we really were. She has been called a living Michigan treasure."
The luncheon will be 11:30 a.m. at The Plymouth Manor, 345 N. Main in Plymouth.

'She has been called a living Michigan treasure.'
—Rosemarie Shilcusky, Catholic Library Association

FROSTIC IS the founder of Presscraft Papers near Benzonia, which prints her stationery, cards and books of poetry. Tourists, conservationists, artists and others visit her studio on the Betsie River in Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula.
In previous years, Michigan Catholic Library Association members have had other notable speakers, including Neal Shine, Detroit Free Press publisher and columnist, and William Kienzle, a Detroit-area mystery writer and former priest.
Frostic will discuss creativity, and will bring some of her work to Plymouth, said Shilcusky, who will be installed as president of the chapter at the April conference.
Luncheon reservations are required, and can be made by contacting Sylvia Kumor, 6556 Hartwell, Dearborn 48126, or by calling (313) 584-1322 before 3 p.m. weekdays. Additional information is also available from Rosemarie Shilcusky at Our Lady of Good Counsel School, 453-3053, weekdays.
The statewide conference will include presentation of the chapter's St. Jerome Award to the Rev. Richard Twohig, principal of the University of Detroit Jesuit High School. The award is named for St. Jerome, patron of librarians.
Twohig has been supportive of efforts to expand and modernize the school library, said Shilcusky, a Plymouth resident.
"He has been the driving force behind all of this change."

Michigan artist Gwen Frostic is known for her block prints featuring the flora and fauna of the state's northern region.

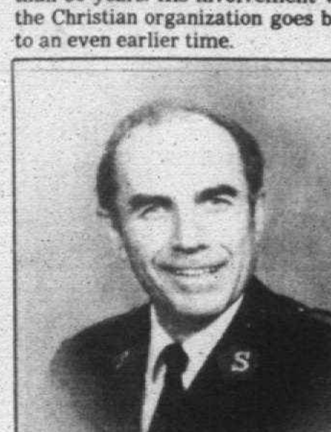
Salvation Army helps those in need

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Lt. Col. Clarence Harvey has been a Salvation Army officer for more than 30 years. His involvement with the Christian organization goes back to an even earlier time.



Clarence Harvey

"I received a Salvation Army basket as a kid," said Harvey, who now serves as commander of the Eastern Michigan Division. "I'm indebted to men and women who have recognized the importance of being tutors."

Harvey, 54, is a Detroit native. As a child, he went to a Detroit community center and got involved in Salvation Army programs designed to keep young people off the streets.

He spoke at the March 15 meeting of the Plymouth Rotary Club at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth. Harvey told club members and guests that many people have helped him through the years.

"I'm here today to share with you the interest I have in America."

Many pressing social problems exist.

"We are quick to place the blame on the educational system. We use that often as our scapegoat."

There's a need to improve the quality of education, but others too must do their part, he said.

HARVEY AND his wife, Lois, were assigned to Detroit to work on an inner city community program in the 1960s. Harvey was involved in the food and emergency services programs provided by the Salvation Army during the 1967 riots in Detroit.

Harvey worked with children and families during the 1960s in Detroit's Herman Gardens. He remembered that a local merchant offered to donate rolls of Life Savers candy to be distributed to children.

Harvey passed the treats out to youngsters and soon heard from one mother in the neighborhood, who asked if he had read the label. He thought she would be pleased with his efforts; Harvey was dismayed to learn that the so-called candy was actually a laxative rather than Life Savers.

"I wanted to say then 'It's my wife's idea.'"

Harvey, who graduated from The Salvation Army School for Officers' Training in Chicago in 1960, was later transferred from Detroit. He doesn't believe the laxative incident was a factor.

"They moved me for other reasons, I think," he said with a smile.

HE BECAME the divisional commander for eastern Michigan in January 1987. When he returned to Detroit, Harvey got a call from a man who had lived in Herman Gardens as a child.

That man remembered the help he received as a youngster from the Salvation Army, and had become a Presbyterian minister.

"I invested myself in the lives of people," Harvey said. "God used it for his good."

Harvey knows there is a place for the Salvation Army in more affluent communities.

"I THINK the greatest gift of the Salvation Army is being able to retain its low profile," he said in an interview after his Rotary Club speech.

The organization does serve people from well-to-do areas, he said, including some in drug rehabilitation programs. People are often grateful to receive treatment through the Salvation Army without neighbors and business associates being aware of the situation.

The Salvation Army, an international organization, operates some 1,200 centers in the United States in every type of community, he said.

Programs include counseling, recreational and youth activities, drug rehabilitation, emergency assistance and a missing persons program, in addition to a regular schedule of worship services.

The Salvation Army has been well-received and supported in the Plymouth-Canton community, he said. Many people, organizations and churches from throughout the suburbs support the Salvation Army.

EVEN SO, Harvey is concerned about the divisions between the city and its suburbs.

He has served in most areas of the United States, and has never seen more evidence of such a division than is found in Detroit.

"There is a wall bigger than Jericho."

Some suburban residents take pride in not having visited the city for many years.

'I invested myself in the lives of people. God used it for his good.'
—Lt. Col. Clarence Harvey

"There's got to be a common ground to survive. I believe that the problems are curable."

HE AND other Salvation Army leaders are worried about Michigan Gov. John Engler's budget cuts.

"We are deeply concerned as to the effects this will have."

Salvation Army officials anticipate a 40- to 60-percent increase in needs, which may require some cutbacks in programs.

Harvey understands the need for a balanced budget in Michigan, but also worries about the state's neediest people suffering.

"It's always the biggest price that is paid by the poor."

Furniture boss revels in charity promotions

DAVID STEIN

Bernie Moray has created a diferent kind of millionaires' club. Local charities have received more than $1 million through his fund-raising efforts.

By David F. Stein
special writer

The best at hawking insurance or real estate or cars often top $1 million in sales.

Franklin resident Bernie Moray, owner and president of Gorman's Furniture, has created a new club. Over the last decade, his "fun in the furniture store" promotions have raised more than $1 million for local charities.

The Moray formula: Mesh local celebrities and a worthwhile cause in a home furnishing store setting, then treat invited friends, staff and customers like family. Those helped rang from surgery patients at Children's Hospital of Michigan to children without toys at Christmas, from the homeless to victims of domestic violence.

"People have fun. It's as simple as that. Plus, the causes are good," Moray said. "My goal is to do a common good by reinvesting some time and effort back into the community."

Last month's benefit at Gorman's Grand Rapids store was typical. Guests lunched in specially designed rooms as local radio and television and personalities walked through, modeling new fashions. Gorman's staff provided the idea, the setting, the food, the promotional effort. A local shelter for the homeless sold the tickets and pocketed the cash.

"Where else would 150 women pay $50 for a box lunch?" Moray asked.

Since 1980, Gorman's has held more than 15 events, most on a larger scale. Each represents a donation of up to $40,000 on Moray's part.

The model for Gorman's promotions is the kind of events that Bloomingdale's in New York used to stage, Moray said. But the impulses are often personal.

MORAY'S FIRST charity promotion, in 1980 for the American Cancer Society, accompanied the opening of Gorman's Fairlane store in Dearborn.

"He had a friend who had cancer," said Moray's daughter, Susan Moray-Kerr. "He also had a sister who died of Lou Gehrig's disease and a niece who died from MS (multiple sclerosis)."

Moray-Kerr has woked on most of the promotions and met her husband at a subsequent American Cancer Society benefit. To her, the secret of her dad's success is simple.

"It's part of my father's whole philosophy, which he even practiced while raising his children, of always giving something back," Moray-Kerr said.

"He grew up poor and has worked from the time he was 11 years old; he's always worked long hours, but we always got his time, his beliefs. He was always there to listen to you. He's the same way with his employees."

Moray got his start with Robinson's Furniture in Detroit. He left after 18 years, buying Gorman's Furniture on Livernois in Detroit in 1965. The original Gorman's store was destroyed in the Detroit riot fires of 1967, but the Gorman's name lives on. Almost 200 employees, including 25 designers, work at retail furniture and business interiors stores in Southfield, Troy, Dearborn and Grand Rapids and business interiors stores in Southfield and Midland.

Last year, Moray celebrated the 50th anniversary of the Gorman's name in furniture retailing, a business that continually grows. Sales have increased from $8 million in 1983 to more than $20 million in 1989.

Moray's favorite charity is Children's Hospital of Michigan. Again, the connection is personal.

His granddaughter Lauren was born in 1979 with congenital toxoplasmosis, a protozoan disease acquired by her mother Susan on a family trip to Israel.

LAUREN WAS treated at Children's Hopsital, where she underwent successful surgery for hydrocephalus caused by the toxoplasmosis parasite. During Lauren's stay, Moray became friendly with the hospital's doctors and staff and became concerned about their needs, especially for specialized surgical equipment.

Special workers lauded

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Tom Turner, president of an auto supply company recently designated Contractor of the Year by the Association of Retarded Citizens of Oakland County, passes all the recognition and credit back to his employees.

"They really care about their work," Turner said from his office pointing to the shop. "As far as I'm concerned, there's no one out there who couldn't walk into any other business and do at least as good on that job as they do for me."

All 18 or so assemblers who put together side view mirrors for Autoport Corp. in Troy have some kind of emotional, physical or mental disability.

"It's a synergistic relationship," Turner said. "These people, according to New Horizons (a non-profit vocational rehabilitation agency), are very grateful to be out in the community in a full time job with value.

"I'm probably 10 times as grateful to have this workforce. They show up every day. They care about what they do. The job means something to them."

AUTOPORT EMPLOYEES work eight hours a day, 40 hours weekly putting together mirrors for the S10 Blazer in a 14-step assembly line process. They're paid what Turner described as a competitive wage.

"As time goes on, their pay scale will increase and benefits will increase," he said. "We're a young company."

Turner, who now reports annual gross sales of some $5 million, contracted with New Horizons for labor at its Pontiac sheltered workshop when starting production in 1988.

"They had the facility, they had people. We were a young company. It was an economic decision. As time went on, we felt it was better to do this in our own facility because we have better control over what's made," he said.

Turner and his partners leased a building in Troy earlier this year and hired people from the workshop to join them in a traditional employer-employee relationship.

THAT SUITED Linda Lifter, placement services manager for New Horizons, just fine.

"Our main goal is to help people with disabilities achieve independence with competitive employment in the community," she said. "I was very pleased he made a commitment to these people. He's provided support and encouragement."

The Association of Retared Citizens of Oakland County honored Autoport with a Contractor of the Year Award for involvement in work centers serving its clients.

But Turner doesn't view himself as any kind of hero. And he can't say enough about his workers.

"I'm not running a charity case. I'm not doing this to feel better. I'm not taking advantage of handicapped people. These are good workers, good people who value their jobs. They're a happy, cohesive group of people. This is the best group I've been associated with."

The Association of Retarded Citizens of Oakland County honored Tom Turner's Autoport with a Contractor of the Year Award for involvement in work centers serving its clients.

It's a new game for suppliers

By R.J. King
special writer

Nine years ago, when General Motors was reeling from foreign competition and a beleaguered economy, several major suppliers were called into the company's world headquarters and asked a question.

Would each supplier be willing to undergo an intense examination process to take part in what GM heralded as a revolution in the way cars would be conceived, designed, built and sold?

"In short, they asked if we would be prepared to supply parts for a car to be made in a new-style American factory," said Bob Albert, vice president of the automotive materials group for Dow Plastics in Southfield.

"Our common starting point would be a blank sheet of white paper." That "blank sheet of white paper" turned out to be Saturn, G.M.'s $3.5 billion experiment to build a nimble, compact car that could pass its established Japanese counterparts in the automotive fast lane.

The stakes were high. Since 1980, GM has lost a quarter of its market share despite massive restructuring. Much of the loss was in the company's small-car lines, where loyalties are first earned among young consumers. There were other problems. GM often operated in a climate in which it played suppliers against each other to exact the lowest bid. In some cases, this meant a single part was purchased from several suppliers, a system creating thousands of invoices with little room for quality control.

"In the old days we would have three suppliers, and we would say: 'OK, you have the lowest bid, you get the contract,' " said Marcella McCullough, supplier manager for the Saturn plant in Spring Hill, Tenn.

"Now we say to a supplier: 'OK, we're giving you the contract, what can you do with it?' "

A CENTRAL TENET of this new relationship between supplier and auto maker is that products must be designed together so they can be

Furniture store helps charities

This led to the first Dream Makers promotion at Gorman's Southfield store in 1986. Attendees included Shirley Eder, Bill Bonds and Aretha Franklin. Moray raised $60,000, which bought a Cavitron ultrasonic surgical aspirator, which speeds the removal of brain tumors with minimal damage to surrounding tissue.

"We are absolutely dependent on community support, so that we can continue to take care of all children for whatever reason," said Dr. Alexa Canady, Laura's doctor and head of neurosurgery at Children's. "The Bernie Morays of the world let us function."

Lauren, 11, is a sixth grader at West Hills Middle School in Bloomfield Hills. She continues as a patient of Dr. Canady and recently participated in the dedication of an ambulatory care wing at Children's. Moray is on the board of Sparkey Anderson's CATCH (Caring Athletes Team for Children's and Henry Ford Hospital).

The Moray generosity has spread to other businesses, which have donated free paper, free food and free music for recent Gorman efforts for Children's.

Moray will be 70 in August but has no plans to slow down. He still works long hours and travels extensively, searching for new home furnishing concepts. Moray is more likely than not to bear other Gorman's salespeople to customers entering the Southfield store.

Moray's unabashed zeal for the furniture business and giving something back to the community are likely to make him a $2 million man before long.

Saturn shakes up suppliers' lives

built and assembled with ease. Under the old system, auto engineers designed products and then told workers in the factory what to do.

Now the new product and the means to make it are established at the same time by designers, factory engineers, line employees, accountants, service people and suppliers. The group effort, McCullough said, ensures that everyone's concerns are met, that the car can be easily built when it reaches the factory floor, and that it can be sold at a profit.

By Albert's estimate, not since Henry Ford developed the mass-production assembly line in the early 1900s has the domestic auto industry set out to drastically change its production techniques.

"What GM was really talking about was building an entirely new car company from scratch under an entirely new philosophy," he said. "Everything we had done in the past had to be tossed aside. We had to change or risk being left back."

To that end, Dow Plastics, like many other suppliers, began to look at internal changes to help spur creativity, reduce mistakes and increase productivity. One result was bosses became consultants to teams of production workers who determine how best their job can be done.

> 'When you have more suppliers involved in the design process, there's this communication where you say: "This won't work, but how about if you do this?" What happens is you don't have to re-fix problems that should have been fixed in the first place.'
> — Bruce Sweet
> director of business and industrial services
> Schoolcraft College

"What's different now is that everyone is involved in designing the car, not just some guy in a room somewhere," he said. "It's not an adversarial bid process anymore, now it's a mutual path toward quality."

One of many successes of the new team spirit between supplier and auto maker was the development of thermoplastic body panels to be used on the exterior of Saturn vehicles. The first product of its kind, which Dow calls PULSE, the thermoplastic panels resist heat, impact and help reduce the expansion and contraction of door panels during extreme environmental changes.

THE BIGGEST breakthrough, though, is that PULSE panels do not rust. Another approach to manufacturing cars required that Saturn suppliers provide a team — as many skilled people as the program requires — on-site in both the company's technical facility in Troy and the plant in Spring Hill.

Bruce Sweet, director of business and industrial services at Schoolcraft College in Livonia, said such close relationships allow once-distant auto entities to combine their efforts and troubleshoot problems before they are encountered in production, or worse, on the road.

"When you have more suppliers involved in the design process, there's this communication where you say: 'This won't work, but how about if you do this?' " Sweet said. "What happens is you don't have to re-fix problems that should have been fixed in the first place."

In addition, Sweet said, Saturn has reduced its supplier base to 170, a move which puts more pressure on companies like Dow Plastics. A typical auto plant is serviced by 800 suppliers.

"If an auto maker isn't happy with your performance and turns to someone else, it's a lot harder to get back in. Thus a supplier must not only supply parts, but also look four to five years down the road and provide the next state-of-the- art technology. If they don't, they could lose a large slice of business."

Hunk of iron revives Mercedes' reputation

Dan McCosh

"What's plomb mean?" says my co-driver, just as I was about to squeeze the trigger on the nozzle in a self-serve gas station somewhere in southern France.

I say "somewhere" since the reason I was filling up the tank was because we had become slightly disoriented after four consecutive U-turns a few miles back and were running low. I had no clear idea of exactly where we were. "Yeak," he says. "We've got sans plomb and regular plomb here."

PLOMB. I'M thinking. Like in plomber . . . er . . . plumber. Lead. It means lead. Yikes! I cut off the leaded gas I'm about to put in the tank, which probably would have fouled the catalysis on the brand-new Mercedes 400 SE which had carried us this far.

Back in the states they keep you from doing this sort of thing by making it impossible to put the wrong pump nozzle in the tank. Here in southern France, wherever we were, filling the tank at a self-serve station was more of an existential experience, susceptible to both the skill of the user and the whim of fate.

AFTER MOVING to the proper pump, a quick squeeze started the numbers on the gas pump clocking the total to clicking so fast they disappeared in a blur. This bothered me for a minute, but I rationalized, figuring it was only French money, and I had received gobs of the stuff for just a few American bills at the hotel.

My co-driver, who is from New Jersey, sees the spinning dial and looks nervous. "Maybe they take a Mobil credit card," he says. "Non to worrie," I say, in my best French.

Two underdressed American auto writers nervously counting the change in our pockets as we filled up a $120,000 Mercedes with what turned out to be about $60 U.S. bucks worth of gas for a half a tank were attending the introduction of the new S-class Mercedes, the revised, upscale version of a car that for years has been the car of choice for most of the world's embassies, Hollywood producers, oil emirates and arms merchants.

THE NEW S-class weighs more than 5,000 pounds and has an optional V-12 engine that produces 400 horsepower and sucks gas at a rate of about 100 French francs an hour, roughly the same as a twin-engine Cessna. As the Rolex watch of automobile status symbols, the new 600 SEL is the heaviest, most powerful car in regular production and costs roughly the price of a four-bedroom house.

It's a remarkable piece of engineering, which should finally lay the old "carved from a block of steel" cliche to rest. It is a block of steel, with nothing much carved away.

NOBODY IS going to make a heavier, bigger, more expensive car for a long time, and that makes Mercedes feel a bit more secure than a few years ago — when BMW began making a more powerful engine, with 12 cylinders vs. Mercedes meager V-8; the Japanese were edging upwards in price and precision luxury; and U.S. manufacturers were making rapid gains in style, finesse and mechanical precision in the luxury car field where they already dominated in interior room and sales volume.

Mercedes answer is this incredible car, which rolls down the highway drawing mainly admiring glances. But once in a while you notice a stare of pure hatred — typically a younger French driver in a smallish French car, who grits his teeth, yells silently something absorbed by the sound-absorbing glass in the big Mercedes, and takes a death-defying chance to cut you off at the next curve.

Let them eat cake. I think to myself, as we get back on the road to Grenoble, relaxed in the knowledge that in fact they do take credit cards.

Todd Langen succeeds with 'Turtle' screenplays

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

Todd Langen screenwriter

IT'S BEEN quite a year for Todd Langen who, following his 1978 graduation from North Farmington High School, earned two degrees in aerospace engineering at the University of Michigan. And his success has nothing to do with rockets or space stations.

"Last year was phenomenal," Todd noted in a recent phone interview from his North Hollywood home.

He's currently at work on an original screenplay for a feature film, which he hopes will match the success of his first two produced works, scenarios for "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles I & II".

"Know what you want and be prepared to work for it, because it seldom happens by random chance or magic," is Todd's advice. That's exactly what he did, as recounted in these pages just under a year ago when "Teenage . . . Turtles I" was about to premiere.

"To get good at anything, you have to practice," as Todd tells it, and he wrote 20 or 30 scripts "on spec" — that's jargon for writing on the speculation that you may be able to interest a producer in purchasing your work. More often than not, only filedrawers are interested.

IN LANGEN'S case, however, working on spec led to sale of a script for television's "Wonder Years" and soon a position as staff writer for the series. The assignment to write the "Turtle . . . " scenario followed.

Just before "Turtles I" opened, he received an Emmy nomination for the "Wonder Years" episode, "Coda" — the story of Kevin taking a piano lesson. That program also received another nomination as "Best Script for a TV Comedy Episode" from the Writer's Guild — and it's especially sweet to be recognized by one's colleagues.

Last July, still another "Wonder Years" segment, "Square Dance," won a Humanitas Award for television writing, which "fosters understanding." In January of this year, "Turtles I" received the Movie Award as Best Children's and Family Film.".

But Todd hasn't been sitting back counting nominations and awards. Because advanced test screenings were overwhelmingly positive, the "Turtle" producers, Golden Harvest, started working on the sequel before "Turtles I" opened.

As Todd noted, "it was for the obvious reason, capitalize on the Turtles phenomenon. Early last May when the "Wonder Years" season ended, I started working on the script for "Turtles II".

"It usually takes a year to two, and it's very rare to get a sequel turned out in less than a year, but from conception to screen, "Turtles II" was less than 10 months," Todd noted.

"We (Todd and the creators of the Ninja Turtle characters, Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird) spent a week in Massachusetts talking about tone and what elements to include."

FROM THE very first meeting with the producers, they were extremely sensitive to criticism received on the first "Turtles".

"Even though it was cartoon violence," Langen noted, "there was an outpouring from parents and critics. I feel that kids can distinguish between cartoon and real violence. The upshot was that we decided to be more creative and clever."

As this reviewer attested Monday, "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: The Secret of the Ooze" has lots of action and very little violence, and is clever enough that it won't be a painful experience for parents. The movie premiered in Detroit last week at the Showcase Cinemas in Pontiac with a benefit which raised $2,000 for cystic fibrosis.

Todd spent last summer finishing the script for the film and then a spent a week on pre-production consultation on location in Wilmington, North Carolina. He was on call throughout the production and post-production periods.

"The success of the "Turtle" movie was wonderful," Todd said. "It's given me the luxury to work on an original screenplay. But the greatest fun was sitting and enjoying with the audience.

"Then, I'd hang around the exits listening to comments. The best moment came when I heard a mother say to a distraught 3- or 4-year-old, 'But honey, the movie has to end sometime, it can't go on forever.' "

Growing up

'Patent Leather Shoes' is great fun

Barbara Michals

The Village Players present "Do Black Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?" at the Birmingham Theatre. Remaining performances are at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, March 28, and Friday-Saturday, April 5-6. Tickets are $9, student tickets are $7. Reservations are recommended; call 644-2075.

Growing pains, the little triumphs and tragedies of childhood, are recalled with gentle good humor in "Do Black Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?"

The current production by the Birmingham Village Players features a wonderful cast in this engaging musical. The only flaw on opening night was painfully slow scene changes.

Although the play is set in Catholic grammar and high schools, the pangs of childhood are universally recognizable to "publics" as well as parochial school alumni. There are common fears of tough teachers, divine retribution for misbehavior, and ridicule by classmates if one is considered "different."

Act I follows eight boys and girls through grammar school and their worries about keeping the esteem of members of their own gender. Act II shifts to the teen years and the problems of adolescent sex.

SOME OF the naive notions of youth come from the nuns, such as the infamous warning that girls should not wear black patent shoes because they reflect up. Others come from older siblings, such as the amusing idea that a girl will do anything a boy asks if he massages her elbow. "Thank God, we'll never be that young again," cast members sing at the finale.

While the nuns and priests are gently satirized, the play makes it very clear that their warmth and understanding are always there when needed.

Tim Reinman as Eddie Ryan and Carollee Castle as Becky Bakowski get most of the good songs. Both have fine voices and winning personalities.

In grammar school, Eddie offers his friendship to unhappy, overweight Becky. In high school, friendship blossoms into romance until Becky decides to enter a convent and Eddie begins to question the tenets of his religion.

BETSY TODD is marvelous as Sister Lee, the tough old bird whose students estimate her age to be at least 1000. "God's no fool," quips one youth. "He doesn't want to meet Sister Lee either."

Despite her fierce demeanor, Sister Lee shows a soft side and even kicks up her heels in one lively number.

Stephen Tadevic is great as Father O'Reilly, sometimes needing the patience of a saint to deal with his young charges, sometimes trying to literally pound behavorial rules into their heads.

Bob Wilkinson is wonderful as Louie Schlang, the shy adolescent who fantasizes that he is a teen singing idol while he stammers out an invitation to dance at the freshman mixer.

Monica Perisi is well-cast as spirited, boy-crazy Virginia Lear. Kristine Murrell is amusing as angelic Mary Kenny, the perennial teacher's pet. Diana Marie Balsama is fine as pert Nancy Ralansky.

Jay Peterson is delightful as the over-sexed Felix Lindor, and Ken Ebaugh is very credible as Mike Depki, the resident skeptic.

Director Lindsay Balmer Hinz, assistant Cheri Pobst, musical director Joan Bowes, and choreographers Debi Jackson, Suzy Leonard and Hinz have all created a lively, highly entertaining production.

Barbara Michals teaches high school English in Southfield's A theater critic for the last 16 years, she is an inveterate play-goer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

Shirley MacLaine sparkles at Fox

Ethel Simmons

Shirley MacLaine dazzled Fox Theatre audiences with her song and dance show Thursday-Sunday. The multi-talented redhead performed as part of the AT&T Variety Series at the Fox, in Detroit.

MacLaine took many bows after the opening night performance Thursday. Although she admits each leg is "27½ years old," the star who first rose on Broadway in the Bob Fosse musical "Pajama Game" in 1954 still has the ability to strut her stuff with the best of them.

The performer with a pixie face adorned her shapely, long-legged body in basic black, plus spangles. She wore a deep-necked gown, whose long skirt was removed to reveal a short skirt for a song-and-dance number. Later, for serious dancing, that skirt came off and she was in a leotard.

Other routines changed the outfit with jackets and accessories to create many more fascinating costumes.

THE BROADWAY star and Academy-Award-winning actress treated the crowd to a "hooker-victim-doormat medley," after she explained that out of 39 movies she played a dozen or so hookers.

MacLaine has never played Mama Rose in "Gypsy," but she said it's the most complex and challenging female role in a musical. A range of emotions was revealed in the number where Rose declares its her turn, and MacLaine sang powerfully.

One of the segments in the lighthearted, fast-moving show featured MacLaine and two energetic male dancers, Blane Savage and Keith McDaniel, in a tribute to choreographers. They took off on Fosse's attention to detail, and Michael Kidd's athletic approach for "Can Can."

THE THREE dancers also spoofed the Michael and Janet Jackson style of dancing and dressing with "attitude," on MTV. MacLaine praised Alan Johnson, who choreographed her show, calling him America's best and most sophisticated choreographer. Johnson's specialty is changing time signatures, which MacLaine, Savage and McDaniel then artfully demonstrated.

MacLaine had fun with her own image and beliefs. "This is an incredible theater," she said of the lavish Fox. "Like one out of one of my old lives." Later in the show, she paused to talk about her experiences in Peru, where she received a personal mantra that led to — "Inka Dinka Do." "Gottcha!" she said, after completing the joke.

Other songs MacLaine sang, besides many of the hits from shows she has been associated with, included "I'aint Nobody's Business," with personalized lyrics. She closed with Stephen Sondheim's "I'm Still Here," which she said paralleled many aspects of her own life.

Women's films will be featured

"Films For Women About Women," Oakland University's 10th Annual Film Festival, will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 6, in room 156 of North Foundation Hall. Sponsored by the OU Women's Studies Program, the festival will feature three award-winning films by women along with discussions with two of the filmmakers themselves.

"Calling the Shots" will be shown in the morning and "Half the Kingdom" and "No Need to Repent" will be shown in the afternoon. The film showings will be interspersed with formal and informal discussions.

Films chosen for the festival have earned international honors, including the Candian version of an Emmy and an award at a French festival for films by women. "Calling the Shots" is an acclaimed documentary by Janis Cole and Holly Dale about women in the film industry. Clips from films, including "Desperately Seeking Susan," and "Dessert of the Heart," are mixed with interviews with women directors, producers, writers and actresses.

"HALF THE Kingdom" is a story about the quest of seven Jewish women who try to blend their 20th century lives within a traditional religion. Produced and directed by Francine Zuckerman, it has been called a "must see" film for its insights on the moden Jewish feminist experience.

"No Need to Repent," by Ann Alter, tells the real-life story of the Rev. Jan Griesinger, an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ. The work focuses on how Rev. Griesinger integrates her ministry, politics and personal life.

Admission is $12 for non-students, including lunch. Students with IDs will not be charged admission to the films; an optional lunch will be available to them for $7. The deadline for mail-in registrations has already passed. Registrations can be made at the door the day of the program, but luncheon cannot be guaranteed. For further information, call 370-3180.

Menzel film at DFT

The Detroit Film Theatre (DFT) of the Detroit Institute of Arts will present Czechoslovakian director Jiri Menzel's film, "Larks on a String," this coming weekend, from Friday through Sunday. Unseen anywhere for more than 21 years, this comedy/drama from the maker of "Closely Watched Trains" and "My Sweet Little Village" was made in 1968 and banned after Soviet tanks rumbled into Czechoslovakia.

Set in a city near Prague in the 1950s, it tells of the romance between a man and a women sent to "re-education prison" for their political misdeeds. Dave Kehr of the Chicago Tribune said "Larks" was "surprisingly lighthearted and funny." J. Hoberman of "Premiere" said of Menzel that "none of his other films exhibit so severe a disjunction between the sweetness of the story and the harshness of the circumstances."

"Larks" will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 7 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $5 general admission and $4 for students with full-time identification. They are available in advance at the DIA ticket office or at the door.

The DFT's Crystal Gallery Cafe is open one hour prior to each performance for light snacks and complete beverage and bar service. All proceeds from cafe items benefit DFT programming.

For further information on individual tickets or group rates, or to receive a complete schedule of films, phone 833-2323 from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Cliff-hanger

Canton goalie guides NMU to Final Four

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Now it begins. Or ends — perhaps too quickly.

Northern Michigan University's hockey team has reached a long-sought goal — the NCAA Final Four. The Wildcats battle the University of Maine at 3 p.m. today in one semifinal, with Boston University and Clarkson meeting in the second.

The winners play for the NCAA title at 8 p.m. Saturday; that game will be telecast by ESPN (the semifinals are on PASS). Minneapolis-St. Paul is the site for all three games.

For Bill Pye, NMU's standout goalie and a strong All-American candidate, this week's games will definitely be his last collegiately. The senior from Canton HS will be looking to the pros afterwards.

Mark Beaufait, a Livonia Stevenson graduate, has another year of college eligibility; he'll be back, but with five forwards, Pye and star defenseman Brad Werenka all graduating, it will be difficult for the Wildcats to reach this pinnacle again.

"That's why we want to win it this year," said Beaufait.

THE END of the season is not something Pye or Beaufait is dwelling upon. They have two common goals — extend the season as far as possible, and end it with a victory.

Problem is, there are three other teams with the same aim.

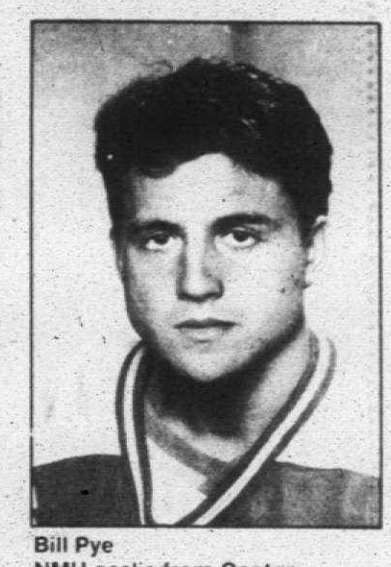
But with both University of Michigan and top-ranked Lake Superior State eliminated, NMU — which was rated second in the last NCAA poll — must be considered the favorite, even if the team's players don't agree.

"When it comes down to the Final Four, I don't think there is a favorite or underdog," insisted Pye. Beaufait echoed those thoughts: "All the teams are good. Anyone can win it."

Both players will have to produce for the Wildcats to succeed in capturing the school's first-ever NCAA title. Pye, in particular, will be in the hot seat; goalies always are.

"Goaltenders win championships," he said. And senior goalies are depended upon even more.

A SHARPER Pye will be necessary this weekend. In last weekend's sweep of Alaska-Anchorage, the offense was unstoppable, scoring 13 goals in the two games. But the defense surrendered five goals in the opener in what coach Rick Comley called his team's worst defensive effort of the season.



Bill Pye
NMU goalie from Canton

"The first night, I wasn't following the puck real well," said Pye. "But we got the win. I came back Saturday and took some shots (before the game), which I normally don't do — just trying to get my confidence up."

It worked. The Wildcats won 5-3, with Pye making 30 saves — 15 in the third period.

Throughout the season, he has been reliably outstanding. He has a 2.75 goals-against average with four shutouts; NMU has a 30-3-4 record with him in the net. For the season, the Wildcats are 35-5-4.

The question is, will Pye be the hot goalie? In a single-elimination tournament, the team with the seemingly unbeatable netminder usually prevails.

"IT IS tough," said Pye of the single-game elimination. "Anything can happen. That's why there's no underdog.

"It does put a lot of pressure on you, but I'd rather have it like that than playing a best-of-three against Maine."

Perhaps the memory of this season's earlier games with Maine have something to do with Pye's one-game preference. In November, NMU played twice at Maine and lost twice, 4-1 and 4-2. At least the losses makes it unlikely that the Wildcats

Head, Lady Vols expect success

Dena Head returns to Final Four

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Success is a relative concept. Winning more than losing is enough for some teams; for others, anything less than a national title isn't enough. This season's Nevada-Las Vegas' basketball team is a prime example.

So is Tennessee's. That's Tennessee's women's basketball team, which will be appearing in the NCAA Final Four for the fifth time in the last six years this weekend in New Orleans.

Included in that run are two NCAA championships. Dena Head, a junior from Canton (Salem HS), remembers the second one. Head started at point guard as a freshman when the Lady Volunteers beat Auburn for the title in 1989.

That tradition is what lured Peggy Evans, the 1989 Miss Basketball and a Detroit Country Day graduate, to Tennessee. Like Head (another former Miss Basketball), Evans has contributed greatly as a freshman. She is hoping her first year at Tennessee ends as successfully.

basketball

Certainly, Evans first year of college basketball was difficult to anticipate. "I probably played more defense the first day of practice here than I did in four years of high school," she said.

SHE ALSO learned very quickly that to play for coach Pat Summitt, she'd have to keep playing a lot of defense. "Our team really focuses on defense," said Evans. "The people who play the best defense will probably play the most."

It is a philosophy Evans endorses completely. "I just think Pat is one of the best coaches around. If you work hard and show her what you can do, she'll give you a chance. She's very fair."

Evans was convinced of that early. She got into Tennessee's season-opener against Stanford, the defending NCAA champion, and responded by scoring 20 points. For the year, Evans has averaged 8.5 points and 5.7 rebounds while playing 19.2 minutes a game. She has started nine times.

Of course, Evans would love to repeat that performance Saturday, when the Lady Vols meet Stanford again in the NCAA semifinals. It's the third time this season the two teams will clash; Tennessee won the

Wildcats go extra mile to win AAU state crown

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

The Western-Wayne Wildcats found out what it's like to really work overtime Sunday in the Under-16 girls basketball AAU state tournament.

After losing in overtime, 61-59, late Sunday morning to the Michigan Defenders, the Wildcats went on to win three more games within the next six hours and capture the state AAU championship at Plymouth Canton.

The title earned the Wildcats a berth in the national tournament, scheduled for June 28-July 6 in Johnson City, Tenn.

Coach Fred Thomann's team deserves the time off. The Wildcats were 7-1 throughout the three-day tournament.

"This team did not fold at all and was very resilient (after losing the first game Sunday in the double-elimination tournament)," Thomann said. "They did a great job putting that loss behind them and going on to the next game. At that point and time in the tournament it becomes a game of who's got the best conditioned players and the where-with-all to play in adverse conditions. Four games in eight hours is tough."

Livonia Franklin's star junior guard Dawn Warner and Flint Powers' center Lisa Negri sparked the Wildcats' Sunday rally. After losing the overtime game to the Michigan Defenders, the Wildcats ousted the defending-champion Brick-City Bombers, 64-53, to reach the final round against (none other than) the Michigan Defenders.

girls basketball

NEGRI SCORED 19 points and Warner 16 as the Wildcats handed the Defenders their first defeat, 55-45. In the tourney's final game, the Wildcats jumped out to a five-point halftime lead and behind Negri's 19 points, defeated the Defenders, 59-51.

Warner's most-impressive game might have come Saturday when she scored 21 in a 63-54 win over her former teammates, the Brick-City Bombers.

Other Observerland players who excelled for the Wildcats included Salem's Darcie Miller, Franklin's Patty Shea, Canton's Julie Nicastri and Farmington Hills Mercy's Mary Bieniewicz.

"(Warner and Negri) are awfully good, and the other thing is we had good balance from other people," Thomann said. "Nicastri didn't score a lot, but did a lot of other things nicely, like keeping the ball alive on the glass, playing defense. Miller made some big free throws and rebounded real well."

The weekend, which also included the 18-Under championships, drew about 800 to 1,000 fans for the weekend at the three sites (Salem, Plymouth Canton and Northville), Thomann said.

"I'm already looking forward to next week (April 5-7 when Salem, Canton, Northville and Mercy host the 13-Under, 12-Under and 11-Under championships)," Thomann said.

THE 18-UNDER championship was won by the Michigan Defenders, a team coached by West Bloomfield's Ronna Greenberg. The Defenders cruised through the tourney with no losses in six games.

After winning the opener Friday night over the Oakland County Lady Knights, 92-86, the Defenders won their next five games by an average of 21.6 points.

Six players averaged in double figures for the Defenders, including North Farmington guard Eve Claar, who scored at an 11.0 clip. Claar scored 19 in a 90-65 win Sunday over the Michigan Royals when the Defenders clinched the title.

The Defenders also are scheduled to play in the national tourney, June 28-July 6 at Johnson City, Tenn.

"Eve Claar had a very, very good weekend and was real consistent," Greenberg said.

Claar was the first guard off the bench, playing behind this year's Miss Basketball, Markita Aldridge (Detroit King), and next year's leading candidate for the award, Tannisha Stevens (Mount Clemens). West Bloomfield guard Amira Danforth, who missed her senior year with a severe knee injury, played four minutes over the weekend and is eligible to play in the national tournament.

Livonia Ladywood players Rebecca Willey and Leslie Catanarite also contributed.

Observerland stars pack powerful punch

LETHAL WEAPONS.

No, not Mel Gibson or Danny Glover, but the 1990-91 All-Observer hockey team.

This year's squad is pretty potent.

State-ranked Redford Catholic Central, a Class A regional finalist with a 15-7-1 overall record, leads the pack with three first-teamers and a pair of second-teamers.

Suburban High School Hockey League champion Livonia Churchill (17-4-1) and city rival Stevenson (11-11-2) each placed three players on the top two teams.

It was an off-year for Livonia Franklin (4-18-1), but the Patriots are also represented.

Churchill coach Rudy Varvari, now in his ninth season, was named Observerland Coach of the Year.

A Dearborn Fordson High graduate, Varvari was a scholarship player from 1977 through 1981 where he played goalie for the Michigan Wolverines.

VARVARI offered a little insight into the Chargers' success this season.

"They had a good attitude about the concept of being a team," he said. "They're just good people. In the 23 games we played, everybody contributed, and to me that was great.

"As you can tell it was a very pleasing year. Just a great bunch of kids."

There are two repeat selections and 10 newcomers on the 1990-91 squad.

Here is a rundown to the area's top players:

FIRST TEAM

Jesse Hubenschmidt, forward, Redford CC: The senior center made second-team All-Area last year (28 goals and 38 assists) and was one of the state's top point-producers this season with 25 goals and 41 assists.

He led the Michigan Metro High School Hockey League this year in scoring with 39 points en route to All-Metro and West Division MVP honors.

The first-team All-Stater had only 20 minutes in penalties and a plus-47 rating.

"Jesse is very competitive, he dislikes losing," CC coach Jack Gumbleton said. "He's a very tenacious player who never quits. He's also a team player as the 41 assists show."

Hubenschmidt is also on the Michigan All-Star Team.

Jamie Allen, forward, Churchill: The junior scored 20 goals and added 19 assists for 39 points.

He also excelled at winning face-offs.

Allen was second on the team in hits with only 14 penalty minutes. His final rating was a plus-39.

He also made All-League and honorable mention All-State.

"Jamie is an extremely hard worker and a team player, very unselfish," said the Churchill coach.

Chris Rennie, forward, Stevenson: The junior left winger-center finished with 41 points (13 goals and 28 assists).

One of the Spartans' tri-captains, Rennie was a good puck-handler and effective set-up man.

"Chris is a finesse player (eight penalty minutes) and a gentleman," Stevenson coach Paul Ferguson said. "He was one of our sparkplugs and one of our big players who led our power-play and penalty killing."

Colin Gallagher, defenseman, Churchill: A second-team pick last year, Gallagher was a three-year letterman for the league-leading Chargers.

The senior captain had a plus-51 rating and only 22 minutes in penalties.

"Just a great person, one of the best leaders I've ever had," Varvari said.

Gallagher scored 10 goals and added 23 assists for 33 points.

He is also an excellent student, carrying a 3.5 grade-point average.

The defenseman was also named to the All-League and All-State (Coaches Association) teams. He is also a member of the Michigan All-Star squad.

Matt Surowiec, defenseman, Redford CC: The senior was named best defenseman and first-team All-West Division in the Metro circuit.

He had two goals and 14 assists with a plus-24 rating. Surowiec had 28 minutes in penalties.

"Matt's all heart and never quits," Gumbleton said. "He gave everything he had. He worked as hard as he could and played beyond his skills. He was a real mainstay."

Surowiec was an honorable mention All-State pick and is a member of the Michigan All-Star squad.

Mike Brusseau, goalie, Redford CC: Only a freshman, Brusseau had an impressive goals-against average of 2.4 and a save percentage of 90.

The third team All-Metro pick played in all 23 CC games with three shutouts.

"Mike's got ice in his veins, he didn't play like a freshman," Gumbleton said. "He got a lot of plaudits wherever he went and he did everything we asked him to do. One of the hardest workers we had in practice."

SECOND TEAM

Scott Johnson, forward, Stevenson: Tallied 17 goals and added 20 assists for 37 points.

"He made it happen offensively and defensively," Ferguson said. "The thing that sticks out is his toughness. He went into the corners and wasn't afraid to mix it up."

Johnson, an All-Leaguer, had 50 minutes in penalties.

Paul Schloss, forward, Redford CC: The junior left winger started the season slowly, but became one of the area's top scorers with 17 goals and 22 assists for 39 points.

The honorable mention All-Metro pick had a plus-37 rating.

"He has a lot of skills and is just a great skater," Gumbleton said. "He had a good shot from the point on the power-play. It's so quiet you don't hear it. He's a strong, intelligent kid."

Bill Baaki, forward, Redford CC: Ranked only second to Hubenschmidt on the CC team in scoring with 23 goals and 24 assists for 47 points.

The second-team All-Metro pick registered a plus-38 rating with only six penalty minutes.

"He can put the puck in the net," said the CC coach. "He's not as strong as a lot of players, but he plays pretty well for a sophomore."

Tony Dyplowski, defenseman, Churchill: The senior All-Leaguer made the most of his only varsity season with 15 goals and 18 assists for 33 points.

"He played out of position," Varvari said. "He's basically a forward, but he had a very strong year. He was definitely a missing link in our season. It's too bad we only had him one season."

Nick Sata, defenseman, Stevenson: The Spartans' tri-captain scored 10 goals and added 15 assists for 25 points.

A third-year player came around as a senior.

"He was always in the right place at the right time," Ferguson said. "He scored some big goals. He's a hard-nosed, physical player."

The All-Leaguer accumulated 45 minutes in penalties.

Joe Huber, goalie, Franklin: The junior All-Leaguer and Patriot co-MVP stood his ground despite being under siege most of the season.

His goals-against average is only 4.25, but his save percentage was impressive (90.1).

"His (goals-against) stats are misleading because he was facing 50 to 60 shots in some games," Franklin coach Terry Jobbitt said. "He's a flopper, he likes to make the big play. I rate him right behind Danny Murray (former All-Area goaltender from Franklin)."

Sports firm connects athletes with schools

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Ohio-based College Prospects of America Inc. has arrived in Observerland.

Two area baseball coaches, Mike Keller and Rodger George, joined forces last December to connect high school student-athletes with college scholarships. Their franchise encompasses Wayne and Oakland counties.

Their job, as scouts, is to make sure the above-average athlete, or "shadow player," is not overlooked.

George, head coach at Wayne State, focuses on Oakland County, while Keller, the coach of the Walter's Appliance team in the Livonia Collegiate summer baseball league, covers Wayne County.

A perfect example of a recruiting nightmare is the story of quarterback Keith Myers, the all-time passing leader in Ohio high school football history. Coming from a small school, he received no college offers and only $500 in financial aid.

"The best time to get involved with us is your junior year," said Keller, an employee of the Livonia Public Schools. "Most schools have limited recruiting budgets, especially non-revenue sports. Except in football and basketball (revenue producing sports), many good athletes get overlooked. For example, there are all kinds of opportunities in girls tennis and cross country. A lot, too, in girls soccer . . . all sports. We can contact up to 150 schools for you."

ON COLLEGE PROSPECTS' latest news release, Dakota State needed a fullback. West Virginia Tech was looking for softball pitchers and infielders. Coastal Carolina had scholarship money for two women's tennis players. Texas-El Paso was in need of two 6-foot women post players. New Hampshire College desperately needed pitching help.

Based in Logan, Ohio, College Prospects has more than 300 scouts in 40 states who are reporting to about 1,500 colleges and universities monthly on outstanding local-area high school athletes.

"We go in the athlete's house and explain the recruiting process, then we contact coaches," Keller said.

"We make an appointment with the parent to explain the program. Being new in the area, some people are skeptical, but this is the first investment toward a kid's education. There is a fee (around $400) and I get a commission."

Keller compiles a profile for his clients and sends all athletic and academic information to College Prospects' computer bank in Logan. Mailings are then sent to prospective colleges.

KELLER ALSO presents a short videotape to parents and athletes explaining the program.

The film, narrated by former NFL player Preston Dennard, talks about Jerry Rice, the All-Pro receiver of the Super Bowl champion San Francisco '49ers, who was nearly lost in the recruiting process before he landed at a small division I school (Mississippi Valley).

"Most are overlooked and settling for less than what they deserve, so we try to leave no stone unturned," said College Prospects President Keith Fox in the video.

Fox adds that the first reason athletes get lost in the recruiting process is because some are simply not good enough to play at the college level. The other reason is that the right school has not heard about the player.

"Our job is to target the college level where the athlete can compete, search our data bank for every college in America in that category, and send a detailed report to each one, letting them know this student-athlete is available to play for a scholarship," Fox said. "The student-athlete makes the final choice."

Each prospective College Prospects client receives a packet, which includes a student guidebook, an academic guide (including NCAA and NAIA guidelines) and a log sheet for college contacts with the student-athletes.

KELLER SAID parents often don't understand when a son or daughter is neglected by recruiters.

The traditional avenue is to make somebody's top 100 blue chip list, have the family write letters to schools, let the high school coach contact colleges, or have recruiters find you.

By subscribing, College Prospects has an eight-point plan to channel athletes to the college of their choice: 1. Let colleges know about you; 2. Evaluate your ability level; 3. Find roster openings; 4. Return questionnaires; 5. Send out film; 6. Make calls; 7. Set up visits (either pay your own way or qualify for one of the NCAA alloted five paid visits); 8. Receive offer (sign letter of intent).

Keller added that clients can take part in a payment plan.

Rocks boast talent needed to contend

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Salem was third in the Western Lakes Activities Association last year, and early indications are the Rocks should be contenders again in boys track and field.

Salem returns enough quality athletes among its 77 team members that it can expect to challenge defending champ Westland John Glenn, runner-up Livonia Churchill and any other league power.

The Rocks have the reigning WLAA long jump champion in junior Leon Hister, who won with a distance of 21-8¼.

"He had a wonderful fall in football, and we certainly hope he does the same in track," Salem coach Gary Balconi said, adding Hister has a tremendous work ethic.

Senior Jim Ramsay is another outstanding athlete and one of four captains along with seniors Brian Schumacher, John Thomas and Matt Perron.

Ramsay excels in the hurdles and also competes in the high jump and long jump. He was ninth in the high hurdles at the recent indoor state championships and was third in the WLAA. His best time was 15.3.

RAMSAY (19-11) and sophomore Don Johnson (20-0) provide support for Hister in the long jump, and Ramsay is just one reason the high jump will be a solid event for the Rocks.

Salem returns seniors Cliff Lee and K.C. Kirkpatrick, both of whom have demonstrated their springs on the basketball court and jumped 6-1. Kirkpatrick also plays tennis and came out for track after that season ended last year, but Balconi is hoping he can divide time between the sports.

Ramsay jumped 5-10 and sophomore Todd Forbes 5-8. The Rocks also have senior Jake Baker, another basketball star who decided to give track a try before he graduates.

"That put a smile on my face, because he's such a good athlete," Balconi said. "He'll help us a little bit everywhere — hurdles, high jump and on the track."

The senior trio of Rob Casler, Schumacher and Steve Balog are the top throwers. Casler was sixth in the WLAA in both events. Juniors Dan Stephenson and Brian Glynn will help.

Salem will benefit from a strong cross country program. The Rocks won a regional championship last fall, and many of those runners will run distances in track.

"I TOLD THE kids, as far as I'm concerned, the distances will be the strength of the team based on the cross country success and the kids in the pack," Balconi said.

Seniors John Thomas, Mike Patterson and Andy Hellmers, juniors Steve Boudreau and Jason McDonald and sophomores Derek Cudini, Todd Bolton and Justin Richardson are the top middle and long distance runners. Thomas was fourth and Patterson fifth in the WLAA at 800 meters.

The Rocks graduated a lot of good sprinters, but Perron, a four-year trackman, returns to anchor the sprint relays and run the 100 dash.

Seniors Joe Pawluszka and Andy Rojeski are veteran sprinters, and senior Joe Nunez, a speedy forward on the soccer team, will run track, also. Juniors Mike Wiacek and John Truskowski, another soccer player, sophomore Mike Richards and Forbes provide depth in the sprints.

"I told Todd (Forbes) 'You're my junk man; you have to be able to run everything,'" Balconi said.

In addition to Ramsay, Johnson, sophomore letterman Jamie Miller and Baker will compete in the hurdles.

THE ROCKS were hurt most in the sprint relays by graduation, losing Pat Bowie, Scott Austin, Mike Cygan, Steve Burlison and Todd Cimo. Perron is the only one back with experience in the sprint relays.

Conversely, Salem should be strong in the 3,200 relay, and Balconi anticipates Cudini, Thomas and McDonald helping out in the 1,600.

Salem's goal, according to Balconi, is the same as always — to win the WLAA title.

"Come the end of May, we hope to be in the hunt," he said. "I feel confident we're going to be a good track team. I don't know how good. We're fortunate that we always have good athletes at Salem."

The Rocks also have good coaches, says Balconi, who praised the contribution of assistants Geoff Baker (distance runners), Jeff Armstrong (sprinters and hurdlers), Jay Blaylock (throwers) and Austin (freshmen and sprinters).

first two.

"I think it's an honor to go to the Final Four," she said. "Most freshman never get that chance. The experience will help me later on."

As for her previous success against Stanford, Evans said, "I got some confidence from it, proving to people what I could do. I'm not going to dwell on it, though. I want to concentrate on what we need to do to win this weekend."

MAYBE HEAD can answer that. She was part of Tennessee's "disappointing" 1989-90 season, the Lady Vols made it only to the NCAA regional finals.

"We started our preseason pretty much the day after last season ended," said Head. "And we worked hard all during the off-season.

"(The loss in the regionals) is always in the back of your mind. There is some motivation from it, but we didn't dwell on it."

What the Lady Vols did was reassemble an even more determined team. It showed Saturday in their 69-65 regional final victory over Auburn; Head hit the clinching two free throws and finished with nine points.

Now switching between point guard and off-guard, Head has stepped up her game again. She averaged 11.4 points as a sophomore, making 45 percent of her floor shots; this season, Head is averaging 12.6 points, 5.7 rebounds and a team-leading 3.7 assists. All except the assists are career bests.

But most impressive is her shooting. Head is making better than 50 percent of her floor shots. And from the perimeter, she has connected on a team-high 49 percent of her three-point attempts — 25-of-51. In her previous two seasons combined, Head had attempted just four three-pointers.

"THE THREE-POINT shot is definitely a key part of the college game," she said. "It's something you want to take advantage of. I've been given the green light to shoot it, and, given the opportunity, I'm going to take it. It's a great tool."

But it isn't improved shooting that Head thinks is her biggest contribution to this year's team. It's leadership. And it's something she wants to keep doing, particularly through the weekend.

college sports

Baseball season has begun — collegiately speaking. Indeed, some teams are quickly approaching the mid-point of their campaigns, having played more than 20 games already.

One player off to a fast start for University of Michigan's team is junior righthanded pitcher Todd Marion, from Plymouth Salem. In a 9-8 Wolverine win over South Alabama, Marion notched his fourth save in as many attempts, then added his first win of the year in U-M's 6-5 victory over Notre Dame.

Marion, who holds the school record for saves in a season, could not have a better record. He's pitched eight innings in six appearances, allowing six hits and a walk while striking out nine. He has yet to surrender a run. Through 11 games, U-M was 8-3.

SOME OTHER Observer products are enjoying quick starts. Included is Redford Thurston graduate Art George. Playing for the University of Evansville, George was batting .324 through 11 games, with four doubles, one home run, six runs batted in and six stolen bases in seven attempts. His batting average was second among regulars on the Aces, who were 7-3-1.

Tim Dowd's Central Michigan University team wasn't off to a great start, going 5-6. But Dowd, a senior from Plymouth (Salem), was doing his share. The outfielder had played eight games and was hitting .417. His 10 hits, two doubles and eight RBI were tied for second among the Chippewas.

SOFTBALL IS well underway, too. So is University of Detroit junior Denise Tackett, another Salem HS graduate. Tackett was third in batting in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference at .375, her 15 hits ranked second. She had six RBI for the Lady Titans, who were 8-7 overall.

NOW BASKETBALL. We'll start with academics. Jessica Handley, a senior at Saginaw Valley State from Salem HS, was named to the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference all-academic squad. Handley, who set a new school career record for assists, carries a 3.70 grade-point average, with a pre-law major.

Most schools hoop season has concluded, so here are some final stats on Observer players.

Katie McNulty, from Livonia Ladywood, averaged 6.5 points and 5.4 rebounds a game for Bowling Green State, which finished 14-15 overall (9-7 in the Mid-American Conference). She led the team in blocked shots with 30 and was second in rebounding, despite averaging just 17.7 minutes a game.

Sue Nissen, from Redford (Dearborn Divine Child), completed her collegiate basketball career the same way she played it throughout — in style. Nissen averaged 16.3 points, 7.1 rebounds and 3.2 assists, making 49.5 percent of her shots, while guiding the Lady Chippewas to a 21-8 record. She finished her career with 1,938 points — best in school history and third-highest in MAC history.

Jennifer Okon, from Westland (John Glenn), is also done with basketball. Okon's Northern Michigan team did not end its season without a fight, however, reaching the NCAA Division II regional finals before bowing out. Okon averaged 8.5 points and 5.2 rebounds as a starting forward, making 46 percent of her floor shots and 84 percent of her free throws. NMU finished 22-9.

Bill Vitti, a junior at Saginaw Valley State from Redford (Catholic Central), was the chairman of the boards in the GLIAC this season. Vitti led the conference in rebounding with a 9.7 average; the 6-foot-6 center also averaged 10.7 points while making 58.8 percent of his shots, third-best in the GLIAC, and had 50 blocked shots. Vitti was second-team all-GLIAC and was a member of the all-defensive team. The Cardinals finished 13-14 overall.

The fate of Parrish Hickman's Michigan State basketball team was widely witnessed. The Spartans bowed out in the second round of the NCAA tournament with a double-overtime loss to Utah. Hickman, a junior from Redford Bishop Borgess, filled his sixth-player role by averaging six points and 3.7 rebounds a game. His best games: 15 points in a win over Northwestern, 10 boards in a loss to Nebraska.

Jill Estey, a sophomore at the University of Illinois, saw her team struggle to a 9-19 record (6-12 in the Big Ten), but she had a solid season. Estey averaged just 3.7 points, but the point guard also dished out 5.5 assists and made two steals a game. Her best games: 14 points, seven assists and five rebounds in a win over Minnesota, and twice dishing out 11 assists in a game.

NMU in hockey semis

will be caught looking ahead to a possible berth in the NCAA final.

"Right now, we're focusing on our first game," assured Beaufait. "We know what we have to do. We've got to slow down their top lines, and we've got to hit them. They're a quick team, and they have a good transition game."

Beaufait, a member of NMU's fourth line, will look to continue doing just what he has been doing — provide both offense and defense. He has 18 goals and 29 assists this season for 47 points.

He'd like to add a few more goals to his total in the next two games, especially if they can be translated into a pair of wins.

Focus hasn't been a problem for NMU. "It's hard not to think about it," said Pye. Then he added: "It's all happening real quick. People I don't even know are coming up to me and saying good luck. It's really exciting."

Problem is, the excitement can come to an abrupt end.

SALEM YAFFAI, a senior on University of Michigan's wrestling team from Plymouth (Salem), won his first match at the NCAA Tournament before losing twice in the 118-pound division. His first loss came against eventual champ Chad Zaputil of Iowa.

Yaffai finished with a 17-7-2 overall record, 9-1-1 in the Big Ten. In the Big Ten meet, Yaffai lost to Zaputil in the championship match.

TWO KALAMAZOO COLLEGE swim team members selected to the all-Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association have Observerland backgrounds. Sophomore diver Jim Davis, from Canton (Wayne Memorial HS), and Claudy Grush, a sophomore from Farmington (Mercy HS), were each honored.

Grush placed third at the MIAA meet in both the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke and was fifth in the 500 freestyle. Kalamazoo College won the MIAA women's title and was second in the men's.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN'S hockey team will be playing for the NCAA championship this weekend in Minneapolis-St. Paul, thanks in part to the play of senior goalie Bill Pye and junior winger Mark Beaufait.

Pye, from Plymouth Canton HS, was an all-Western Collegiate Hockey Association selection and was named MVP of the WCHA playoffs for the second time in three years. He has a 2.68 goals-against average, with four shutouts. Beaufait, from Livonia, was named to the all-WCHA playoff team; he has 18 goals and 27 assists for the 36-5-4 Wildcats.

BRIAN MULCAHY completed his sophomore season as a member of the Kent State hockey team strongly. The Livonia native was third on the Golden Flashes in scoring with 14 goals and 14 assists (28 points). His best scoring effort came against Miami of Ohio, when he netted a hat trick. Kent State finished 10-22-3.

All-Area spikers bright

By Brad Emons
staff writer

COMBINING BRAINS and talent, state Class A champion Livonia Churchill leads another talented group of All-Observer volleyball players for 1991.

The Chargers, coached by Mike Hughes, placed three honor students, all the first team.

Hughes, who guided Churchill to a 47-1-1 record, was also selected Observerland Coach of the Year after leading his squad to three invitational titles, along with conference (Western Lakes) and division (Western), district, regional and state crowns.

The 14-year veteran coach has an overall record of 399-116-32.

Wayne Memorial, Class A quarterfinalists and Wolverine A League champions, also garnered three first-team berths along with Livonia Stevenson, the only team to beat Churchill this season.

Meanwhile, Catholic League A-B Division and district champion Farmington Hills Mercy landed two players on the first team.

Area coaches gathered recently to select the top players in the area. Here is a look at the first-team selections.

FIRST TEAM

Brandy Caincross, Wayne Memorial: Named to the Michigan High School Volleyball Coaches Association Dream Team, the 6-foot-1 Caincross was the area's most feared spiker.

The senior co-captain played in 69 games (missing 42 because of a thumb injury), but still managed to rack up impressive totals for kills (251), solo blocks (96) and ace serves (27).

She had a spiking percentage of .850 and a kill percentage of .345.

Caincross will attend Ferris State on a full-ride volleyball scholarship this fall after turning down an offer from South Carolina.

"Brandy was a dominating force in the front row," Wayne coach Ann Kolnitys said. "She was the most talked about high school player in the state. Brandy is a gifted young lady with more potential than any player I have ever coached."

Caincross ended her career with 20 kills in a state quarterfinal loss to 65-0 and top-ranked Holland West Ottawa. Wayne finished 41-6 overall.

Christina Garry, Liv. Churchill: The senior middle hitter made second-team Class A All-State and Academic All-State (4.29 grade-point average).

The 5-8 Garry, an All-Western Lakes pick, recorded 315 kills with a kill percentage of .352.

"Christina is an extremely competitive person and takes pleasure in both the defensive and offensive responsibilities of her position," Hughes said. "Through much effort, she became a fine passer and defensive player.

"There was never a time in either a practice or a contest when she does not give her very best. She has improved all aspects of her game is one of the outstanding players in the state.

"Her attitude toward the team epitomizes what Churchill volleyball is all about."

Alyssa Belaire, Liv. Churchill: An All-Western Lakes selection the past two years, Belaire was the Chargers' other senior middle hitter who excelled.

The 5-7 Belaire paced the team in service reception (94.1 percent) and blocking percentage (88.1). She was also second in digs (82.4 percent) and hitting (.279 with 255 kills), and third in serve percentage (94.2).

"Alyssa is arguably Churchill's finest all-around player," Hughes said. "She also has fine hands, and with her quick feet, could easily play at the outside hitting position or set at the college level."

Belaire, a second-team Class A All-Stater, is also an excellent student, carrying a 4.0 average in a rigorous academic program.

Amy Baron, Liv. Churchill: The 5-foot-4 senior was the "field general" of the state championship squad.

The first-team All-Western Lakes choice was the setter in Churchill's 5-1 offensive attack, responsible for handling the front and back rows.

And outstanding defensive player, Baron had a dig percentage of 84.2.

She also led the Chargers in serves (96.3 percent) and recorded 1,184 good set in 1,203 tries (98 percent).

Baron, the team MVP by a unanimous vote, is also a superb student, maintaining a 4.0 average.

"Amy is both creative and intelligent in apportioning the ball against different defenses and players," Hughes said. "Most of all, she is the quarterback and there is no question who is running the Chargers offense when she is on the floor. Her competitive attitude and control of the offense is what makes the Chargers tick."

Maureen Paulin, Farm. Hills Mercy: A three-year starter since her sophomore year, Paulin never missed a game, powering the Marlins to two Catholic league crowns, a pair of district championships and a berth in the 1990 final four. (Mercy was 130-21 during her stint.)

Paulin registered 352 kills in 909 attempts (.290 percent) along with 316 digs.

The 5-8 outside hitter was selected second-team All-State (Class A) and first-team All-Catholic. Paulin also carries a 3.2 GPA.

She was also MVP at the Livonia Stevenson and Madonna invitationals, along with team MVP.

"Maureen is simply one of the finest young ladies I've been fortunate to work with, and is arguably the best volleyball player Mercy has produced," Mercy coach Tim DeBeliso said. "Maureen emerged as our leader in both work and deed. Her commitment to her coach, team and school was extraordinary. Her competitive fire and relentless pursuit of excellence were without a doubt, the driving force behind our success."

Suzie Atchinson, Farm. Hills Mercy: The 5-7 senior setter was an honorable mention All-Stater and reaped first-team honors in the Catholic League and Region.

Atchinson was also named to the all-tournament teams at Madonna College and Stevenson.

She had 854 assists this season and 255 digs. Atchinson had only 18 service errors in 341 attempts and 23 reception errors in 355 attempts.

"As a first-year setter, Suzie quickly understood what was expected of her," DeBeliso said. "Regularly, she was the first to arrive and the last to leave practice. Her greatest attribute, though, is her mental toughness.

"Her dedication, discipline and refusal to accept nothing less than her best, catapulted Mercy to the second best record in the school's history (48-6-2)."

Atchinson is also an outstanding student, carrying a 3.974 GPA.

Keli Haeger, Liv. Ladywood: The 5-9 senior setter and middle blocker was an honorable mention All-Stater and All-Catholic League pick.

She led the Blazers to a final record of 43-11-3 en route to tournament victories at Delta, Dearborn Edsel Ford, Essexville-Garber.

With a jump-touch approach of 9 feet, 4½ inches, Haeger averaged five kills and 12 assists per game.

Haeger, a three-year starter, was a member of Ladywood' 1989 state Class A championship squad. As a junior, she helped the Blazers to a second place finish at state.

"The past year Keli has improved her arm swing enough to be one of the top spikers around," Ladywood coach Tom Teeters said. "But more importantly, her setting skills have improved. If Keli continues down this path she will be one of the better collegiate volleyball student-athletes . . . as a setter, spiker or a combination of both."

Sue Bell, Liv. Stevenson: The third-team Class A All-State pick led Stevenson to an unbeaten record in the Western Lakes Activities Association and a district crown.

Bell was also an All-Western Lakes selection.

The 5-7 senior outside hitter recorded 248 kills in 684 attempts (.268), 127 ace serves in 465 attempts, along with 326 total digs.

"Sue was a tremendous three-year player for us," Stevenson coach Lee Cagle said. "It will be a great void to fill, not only for her abilities, but also because she is a quality person. She was a good friend to her teammates and also a help to me. She has always given her best and her heart to volleyball."

Teresa Sarno, Liv. Stevenson: The 5-9 middle blocker with a 24-inch vertical jump made the All-Western Lakes and All-Region squads.

She also made the all-tournament teams at the Temperance-Bedford and Stevenson invitationals.

She recorded 137 kills in 351 attacks (.276), 70 ace serves in 388 attempts, 115 total solo blocks and 276 total digs.

"Teresa is a player finally coming into her own as a team leader," Cagle said. "Her volleyball skills have improved greatly. She has dominant defensive skills and will improve offensively. Teresa gives her all, every minute, in every practice and game."

Patty Diamond, Liv. Stevenson: The 5-10 sophomore setter recorded 664 assists in 2,306 attempts (.963 percent).

She also added 258 digs, 42 solo blocks and 47 ace serves for the Spartans.

Diamond was named to the All-Western Lakes team, as well as all-tourney at Stevenson and Bedford.

"The most enthusiastic, effervescent player we've had in years," Cagle said. "Patty has done a tremendous job as a first-year all-around setter.

"Potentially, she is one of the best setters in the state. She deserves a tremendous amount of credit for our success this year. A true team player."

Laura Fisher, Wayne Memorial: The 5-7 junior setter was the Zebras' co-captain and was voted Most Dedicated.

Fisher also made the All-Wolverine A League and All-Region teams.

In 111 games, Fisher recorded 54 ace serves, 73 kills (.284 percent), 197 digs, 100 kill-assists and was good on 2,726 out of 2,734 sets.

"Laura is the most dedicated player I have ever coached," Kolnitys said. "She has only one focus — the team. She goes to all limits for the sake of her teammates.

"She's an excellent 5-1 setter who has taken her team to the state (quarterfinals) the past two years.

"Laura was a young lady that listened to every work a coach had to say and continued to improve and mature with every match."

Gerri Ruffing, Wayne Memorial: The 5-10 outside hitter was voted Wayne's MVP and received honorable mention All-State accolades.

In 111 games, the All-Wolverine A League selection had 295 kills (.279 percentage), 117 ace serves, 417 digs and a 92 percent serve reception.

"Gerri is a young lady that has to work very hard to be good," Kolnitys said. "She developed into my best defensive player. She pulled my team together when we lost a key player early in the season.

"She is a great server (93 percent) who took pride in being the first server of the game. She gave the team a lift by starting many games with one or more ace serves."

Ruffing is also an excellent student, carrying a 3.5 GPA while planning to attend the University of Michigan.

'Tis the season to be cruising

If cruising is on your list of dream vacations, this may be your year. Winter is a high season for northerners who want to flee the snow and enjoy the sun, but summer is still peak travel season for Americans, especially families, and cruising is part of that.

Travel bookings for every destination have been soft because of Desert Storm, and soft bookings encourage discounts. Bookings are picking up, but cruise ships all over the world are still eager for passengers.

On top of that, cruise ships that normally sail the Mediterranean in summer have repositioned themselves to North America this year. You will find them in the Caribbean, on the Alaska runs and even in the new and growing New England market.

Cruise ships have always had discounts for people who book early, but they have extended their early-booking discounts this year. You might have to hurry, because many have extended only until April 1, but there are others that will be cutting cruise rates for a much longer time.

Where to go? Hawaii almost never offers cruise discounts. Alaska is a fairly expensive market, and the early-booking discount is only about 5 percent. But there is a new wrinkle in the Alaska market. Several of the European ships have repositioned some of their sailings to Alaska this year.

Paula Sucaet, cruise manager of Only By Sea Inc., in Birmingham, says Holland America is still offering $350 per couple off their sailings, book by April 1. Regency has extended its early-booking discounts to 90 days before sailing, which means you can book in May and sail in August.

"You can book an Alaskan cruise for as little as $1,700 per person, including airfare, but $2,000 and up is more realistic," Paula said. "Regency is a good example. It's a casual ship. At their early booking rate, you can sail for $1,300 plus $475 per person for airfare to Vancouver, British Columbia and home from Anchorage, Alaska."

Paula highly recommends cruises to Bermuda this year. You can sail for $1,100 out of New York. I sailed the Horizon to Bermuda last summer and highly recommend that itinerary too. Bermuda is very expensive, but one of these week-long cruises gives you a day and half of sailing time, coming and going, as well as four days in Bermuda with your ship as hotel.

The best deals are still in the Caribbean. The upscale Renaissance Cruise Lines has repositioned to the Caribbean this summer. Buy one passage and the second person in the cabin is free.

The midscale Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines offer 50 percent off an air-sea package for the second person. Buy your own air and the second person costs $199 for the cruise.

Budget-priced Regency Lines offers 50 percent off an air-sea package for the second person in the room. Buy your own air and the second person cruises free!

You won't find many bargains on New England cruises, which are mostly fall cruises. Paula says most people in Michigan are used to changing fall colors so they don't book fall color cruises as eagerly as southerners do.

What about the kids? Try a three- or four-day cruise on Premier, Carnival, Royal Caribbean, Norwegian Cruise Lines, etc. You can't beat Premiere, because of its ties with Walt Disney World. And Premiere has a single-parents plan applicable to some but not all cabin categories. Single parents can bring a child under age 17 for the much lower rate usually paid by the third and fourth persons in the room.

Remember: It doesn't cost you a penny to talk to a travel agent or to book through a travel agent. The travel industry pays their commission.

Taste the Old South in Mississippi mansions

By Phyllis Kreger Stillman
special writer

"Gone with the Wind" created beautiful and selective images of antebellum plantation life: An elegant home reflecting opulence and plenty. A lifestyle characterized by chivalry and the southern belle. Mint juleps on the veranda. As for the slavery that made it all possible, well, we'll think about that tomorrow.

A number of antebellum plantations along the Mississippi River between New Orleans and Baton Rouge have been restored as elegant bed and breakfasts where you can spend the night steeped in the history and reliving the romance. Guests are usually housed in outbuildings, but a few have rooms in the "big house."

Madewood

When I first arrived at Madewood, I thought I had made a mistake. There was no paved parking lot, no guide in antebellum dress, and the entry way looked, frankly, a little seedy. But Madewood turned out to be my favorite of all the plantations I visited. It feels like a home, not a hotel. It may be the closest we'll get to experiencing life on a 19th century plantation.

Overnight visitors to Madewood are treated like friends of the family, welcome to explore the home with its beautiful antiques and impressive art work, and actually use the rooms. Nothing is roped off.

Guests have the run of the grounds, including a quiet and peaceful family cemetery, shaded by a massive oak tree, with graves dating back to the 1820s.

An overnight stay begins in the library, with fruit, cheese, wine and conversation with other guests.

It's at dinner, served by candlelight in the main dining room, when the romance really begins. In the flickering candlelight, with one of the guests acting as the master of the house with a small bell to summon the staff, the years melt away and you become part of history.

The food is fabulous. Dinner is a home-cooked, four-course meal featuring regional specialties like gumbo, sweet potatoes, southern-style vegetables, seafood pie and bread pudding with whiskey sauce. After dinner, coffee and brandy are served in the parlor.

In the morning, guests are awakened with fresh coffee and juice in their rooms, followed by a continental breakfast (most often including homemade biscuits and jam).

The mansion is Greek revival style with six supporting columns in front and long porches on the second floor, front and back. It was designed by architect Henry Howard with 365 windows and doors, one for each day of the year. And it is beautiful, so beautiful that it was used in the TV movie "A Woman Called Moses."

There are four bedrooms and a suite available in the main mansion for overnight guests. Some bedrooms have bathrooms within, others have private baths down the hall. (None of the rooms have telephone or television, but TVs are available if you ask.)

Rooms in the main mansion are $159 per couple per night and include the aformentioned amenities, plus a guided tour of the mansion. Other accommodations are available

Virginia towns are wonderful places to leave hubbub behind

Editor's note: Betsy Taylor of Birmingham learned fishing from her father and antique collecting from her mother. She doesn't go fishing as often as she likes, but is very involved with antiques.

She is a member of the steering committee for the Birmingham Antiques Festival, which previews 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. Thursday April 11, and will be in operation 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday April 12 and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday April 13 at the Community House in Birmingham.

Her love of antiques also takes her traveling. She recently escorted a group of antique lovers to Leesburg, Va., and then on to the annual antiques forum in colonial Williamsburg. In this story she tells us about a weekend getaway in Leesburg.

reader's report

By Betsy Taylor
special writer

We approached historic Leesburg through a maze of fast-food chains, but disappointment disappeared when we viewed the heart of the town. Chartered in 1757, it still boasts some original buildings as well as old brick walks.

Leesburg has many good inns and bed-and-breakfasts, but I prefer to stay at The Norris House Inn. My prejudice may well stem from the fact that my daughter Libby is the innkeeper! But the inn is charming.

Built in 1806, it has been lovingly restored by owner Amy DeRemer to the 1850-80s style it had while occupied by the Norris brothers, famous Virginia builders and craftsmen. The restoration is most evident in the library where guests gather by the fire to read, sip tea, or talk. The bookcases, furniture, and pale yellow walls create a cozy setting. The bedrooms are well appointed, but guests should expect to share a bathroom. Three of the bedrooms have fireplaces, so I like to arrive Friday evening after dinner, unpack, and begin my relaxing weekend by curling up with a treasured book by the fire.

Guests are left pretty much to their own, but do gather for a hunt-style breakfast in the well-proportioned dining room. A typical breakfast includes fresh fruit, juices, homemade muffins, quiche, sausage, toast and endless pots of coffee laced with cinnamon. This ample breakfast is included in the $68 to $112 a night charge. The Norris House Inn is at 108 Loudon St. SW, Leesburg, VA 22075, (703) 777-1806.

A needlework sign at the inn reads "George Washington slept next door." The adjacent stone house is called Washington's Headquarters, because it is believed that Washington quartered here during the French and Indian War.

Saturday we explored Leesburg. The town has an understated look so sweaters, slacks and comfortable shoes are right for a country weekend. Shops are set in wonderful old brick or stone houses built in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

At the foot of the hill stands my favorite shop, The Guest Room, Ltd., owned and operated by Pat Ewalt, who left horse raising to open a shop full of old laces and quilts. It is Mecca to the horsey set who flood the town during hunting season.

The nearby town of Middleburg, a weekend retreat for government leaders, is smaller and has all the shops centered on one road.

Stop at the B and A Grocery for a chat with Mrs. Edwards who has been in business for 57 years. She says 800 people live in Middleburg plus "a lot of folks who walk around on the weekends." Buy her chutney, and damson jam, or order Birmingham resident Betsy Taylor (at left) stands with daughter Libby in front of The Norris House Inn in Leesburg, Va. Libby is the Norris innkeeper, but mom stays there because it's a wonderful place.

Reader has handy tips on Alaska and Florida

Editor's note: Reader Edna Alexander "was real intrigued" with the stories on Key West and Alaska that appeared on these pages March 7. She has traveled extensively in both places and would like to offer the following tips to other tourists.

By Edna Alexander

ALASKA

Very rarely in any travel plans do I see or hear the "Top of the World Highway" mentioned. It runs from Dawson in the Yukon to Tok, Alaska.

The high-country scenery is fantastic, but traversing it requires good driving and care. Dawson is special too, in that so much of the gold mine equipment remains where it was left when mining operations ceased.

In the Kenei in lower Alaska is the Russian River. In June, thousands of fishermen line the banks to catch high salmon. What a sight!

Alaska visitors don't have to ride expensive cruise ships to enjoy themselves. In June and July of 1988, six of us traveled just about every major road in Alaska in a new Ford van with pop-up camper.

We ate well, enjoyed a lot of salmon bakes, the University of Alaska and seeing glaciers by boat. Total cost per couple for 60 days was just under $3,000. We drove the entire Alaska highway on the way north, and returned by the state ferries from Haines, with stops of several days at Juneau and Ketchikan, coming ashore at Prince Rupert.

That was our third and best trip to Alaska. Most people just get to the "front door" of Alaska with the cruise ships. However, additional Canadian taxes have driven up the cost of time spent in that country.

in outbuildings for $90 per couple, which includes breakfast and a tour, but not dinner. Dinner may be reserved though at $27.50 per person.

Madewood is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. except Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day. Contact Madewood, Route 2, Box 478, Napoleonville, LA 70390, or call (504) 369-7151.

Nottoway

Nottoway is not as homey as Madewood. An overnight stay is more like staying in an elegant hotel. What I remember best is the scolding birds that woke me in the morning. Here, about 40 miles from New Orleans, I was truly in the country.

Another memorable part of my visit was the chance to explore the mansion on my own, after the guided tours were finished for the day. The lights were dimmed. There was no one to guide or hurry me along, and I was free to linger in what felt like a private museum.

Nottoway was built using the best wood available on a 7,000-acre sugar plantation. Completed in 1859 and designed by the Madewood architect, the mansion was built by the John Randolph family. It's the largest plantation in the area, with 64 rooms, 53,000 square feet of living space and, like Madewood, 365 openings. Italianate and Greek revival in style, the mansion has 22 supporting columns and two flanking staircases leading to the main entrance.

A beautifully restored home, the gentlemen's study features curtains that are replicates of those used by Scarlett O'Hara to make her dress in "Gone With the Wind."

There are 11 bedrooms and two suites available for overnight guests, including the master bedroom and a bridal suite with a Jacuzzi. Each has a private bath, and all are furnished with antiques and decorated with fresh flowers. There is also a pool for the use of overnight guests.

Rates range from $125 to $250 per couple, including wine and snacks upon arrival; a morning wake-up with coffee, juice and a wonderful sweet potato biscuit; a country breakfast on the ground floor of the mansion; and a guided tour.

Randolph Hall restaurant is open for lunch and dinner across the grounds from the main mansion. It's large and elegant, with impressive chandeliers and a grand piano in the main dining room. Service is attentive and the food is wonderful; small portions beautifully prepared and presented.

Visitors to Madewood are treated like friends of the family, welcome to explore the home with its beautiful antiques and impressive art work, and actually use the rooms.

Nottoway is open daily, except Christmas, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For information, write P.O. Box 160, White Castle, LA 70788, or call (504) 545-2730.

Other plantations with guest accommodations include Oak Alley (which is straight out of "Gone With the Wind"); Tezcuco, a small sugar plantation with simpler accommodations; and Ormond Plantation, which I haven't seen.

The 28 oak trees from which Oak Alley takes its name dominate the landscape and, in some ways, eclipse the mansion. Planted by a French settler in the early 1700s to form a path to the Mississippi River, the trees are now so big that limbs extend to the ground. The mansion, Greek revival with 28 columns duplicating the oaks along the drive, was used as the setting for the TV movie, "The Long Hot Summer."

The back yard features more large oaks along the pathway to the slave cabins, some of which have been made into cottages for overnight guests. (The cottages rent for $75 to $100 per night and include a continental breakfast.) For information, call (504) 265-2151, or write to Route 2 Box 10, Vacherie, LA 70090.

Tezcuco

Large oaks covered with moss also greet visitors to Tezcuco, built in Greek revival style in 1855 with a Creole influence. The mansion is furnished with antiques, some of which belonged to the original owners. Most overnight accommodations are restored and converted outbuildings and slave quarters, and include kitchens. Many also have fireplaces. The price range is $60 to $95 per night.

A suite with kitchen and two bedrooms is available in the main house for $185 per night. All rates include wine in your room upon arrival, a tour of the mansion and a Creole breakfast served in your room.

Tours are conducted daily by guides in antebellum costumes from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The grounds include a chapel, a carriage house and a children's play house. There's an antique and gift shop in the mansion basement. For information, call (504) 562-3929, or write Tezcuco Plantation, 3138 Hwy. 44, Darrow, LA 70725.

Houmas House

Named for the Houmas Indians who once owned the land, Houmas House was built in 1840. The original dwelling, a Spanish-style home built in the late 1700s, was preserved and later attached to the main house by a carriage way. The house is near Convent, La., (504) 473-7841.

San Francisco plantation

Built in 1860, San Francisco plantation is decorated with a nautical theme. The style of the home blends old Creole with Greek revival. Located on LA 44, south of Houmas House, (504) 535-2341.

Destrehan plantation

The oldest plantation in the area, with the central portion built in 1787, Destrehan was used during the Civil War as a training grounds for freed slaves. Located on LA 48, eight miles from New Orleans International Airport, (504) 764-9315

Ormond plantation

Styled after the sugar plantations of the West Indies, Ormond was built in 1789. Overnight accommodations are offered. Located on LA 48, near Destrehan.

Restaurants

The Cabin, at the corner of LA 44 and LA 22 just north of Houmas House, is housed in several restored slave cabins. Open 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday, 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, (504) 473-3007

Stand in front of Tirvelda Real Estate and read the house ads. All of them state "Price upon request," which translated means, "If you have to ask, you can't afford it." The town's laundromat includes a sign that reads, "Only use the green machines if you're washing horse blankets."

The Red Fox, a famous and historic inn, provides late lunch, tea, a beer, or early dinner. The low-beamed tavern room with open hearth, polished plank tables, copper pots, fresh flowers, white-washed walls and recessed windows create a perfect ambiance. The food is excellent and the overnight accommodations outstanding; well worth the focus of another weekend.

Another detour from Leesburg is to nearby Aldie, home of The Little River Inn and the charming owners, Tucker and Mary Ann Wither. The inn includes the main house with five bedrooms, living room, dining room and two small cottages as well as a no-frills inn called Woodburn.

With their own home, their antique shop, their involvement in the restoration of the old mill and son Calder's tomato stand, it's evident that the Withers own most of Aldie. A goat, several sheep and a donkey add to the ambiance of this small town. Rooms are $75 to $125 a night, breakfast included. For reservations call (703) 327-6742.

We returned to Leesburg for dinner at The Limelight, across the street from The Norris House Inn. Owned and operated by Christina and George Vetsch, it offers a delightful combination of gourmet meals and the simple pleasure of George's warm cheese bread. The service is excellent, the dining leisurely, and the surroundings pleasant.

Christina, a knockout brunette, greets the guests in a classy tux and spends time at each table, chatting with the patrons and carefully explaining the items on the menu. This is dining at it's best! Reservations are suggested: (703) 777-7492

I prefer to stay at The Norris House Inn. My prejudice may well stem from the fact that my daughter Libby is the innkeeper! But the inn is charming.

Sundays are leisurely in Leesburg. After breakfast there are many historic churches to attend, or a visit to the famous Oatlands Plantation might be in order. This is wine country and a vineyard visit is fun.

I like the new Tarara which produces a wonderful wine and is home to Margaret and Whitey Hubert. It's fun to sip wine, make a purchase, tour and enjoy the atmosphere. Tarara offers meeting facilities, picnic grounds, and group tours. For information call (703) 771-7100.

In each bedroom at The Norris House Inn is a guest book. The comments in the one in my bedroom, written by a recent guest, sum up my love for Leesburg. "The hospitality of The Norris House and the ambiance of the town brings me back in time when life was quieter, more regular and less hectic. We all need times like this to restore ourselves. Thank you for this wonderful weekend of recreation."

Quilt exhibit showcases a new art form

quilter profiled: 4E

Quilts, traditionally bedcover and once crude insulation for castle walls, have come a long way since the most basic ones were made to keep bodies warm.

"Quilts As A New Art Form," a Janis Wetsman 20th Century Decorative Arts exhibition devoted to the genre, will show how 21 quilt artists have combined form and function into pieces adorning walls in living rooms, corporate suites and public buildings.

Four of the artists, Ohioans Nancy Crow and Judi Warren and local residents Carole Harris and Karen Kratz-Miller, will explain their techniques and creative processes at the opening reception 5-8 p.m. Thursday, April 4.

The 30-piece exhibition will run through April 27 at Artpack Services, 31505 Grand River (at Orchard Lake Road), Door 10, in Farmington.

Wetsman said she will donate 10 percent of all proceeds to the Design Industries Foundation for AIDS.

QUILTS HAVE rapidly grown from folk art to individual pieces now considered works of art.

Although influenced by traditional methods of quiltmaking, many of the artists invited to show their work have formal art training.

They are a part of a movement that has witnessed sculptors, printmakers, potters and artists in other media embracing quilts as another path to explore.

The exhibition will provide a keen look at the quilt medium as an art form. Although textiles continue to be the predominant material, quilt artists have turned to the nontraditional. Crushed cola, cans, ceramic, plastic and metal have been used to create these special pieces.

Wetsman, who operates a Birmingham gallery, said the exhibited artists were selected because they would provide a profound look at what's being created today. Prices range from $2,000 to $15,000.

ONE OF the newest trends in art quilting, making them appear three-dimensional, will be presented in two quilts by Joyce Marquess Carey of Madison, Wisc.

"Stepping Down," a rectangular piece that measures 70 inches wide, shows four jacquard-woven pictures of former Chinese chairman Mao tse-Tung, using satin, velveteen and sequins. "Magic Carpets," each 50 by 29 inches, appear at first glance as celluloid strips, furled every which way.

The Kings spent three years tearing down and rebuilding their Tudor style house in Livonia's Coventry Gardens. The couple demolished the original building to its frame to rebuild this 2,400-square-foot, four-bedroom house.

The platform kitchen overlooking the great room is boldly decorated in black and white. The room features a black, satin finish, ceramic floor with a work island and the newest in appliances.

House with past secures a fresh and upbeat look

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

WHEN STEVE and Debbie King began the task of renovating and rebuilding an old, red brick house in Livonia's Coventry Gardens, they never dreamed the job would consume three years and involve the removal of each brick and every chunk of wet plaster.

The result, a 2,400-square-foot, Tudor-style house with vaulted ceilings, a spacious loft and modern appointments in each room, is an outstanding addition to a charming neighborhood where most homes date back to the 1920s.

"No one was convinced I could rebuild the house — not my mother, the suppliers or my wife," Steve said, flashing a smile at Debbie. "I think that was part of the motivation to go ahead with it."

Besides the challenge from family, sub-contractors and neighbors who, over the years, had complained about the lack of attention renters had paid to the house, the building had special meaning to Steve.

The sixth of 13 children, Steve grew up in the two-bedroom house on Edington. He bought it from his parents in 1981 and remembered when it once looked like a mansion on its well-groomed, double-sized, corner lot. He was convinced it could be stately again.

SINCE HE'D worked as a painter, mason and roofer throughout high school, Steve decided to sub-contract only plumbing, electrical work and some carpentry.

He worked with an architect just long enough to produce the blueprint required by the city in exchange for a building permit. Then, unable to find a general contractor willing to supervise the project, he took over the job himself.

He also was certain bids would have been astronomical, anyway, simply to cover unexpected problems that generally accompany the demolition of an aging house. Even city inspectors thought he had taken on too much.

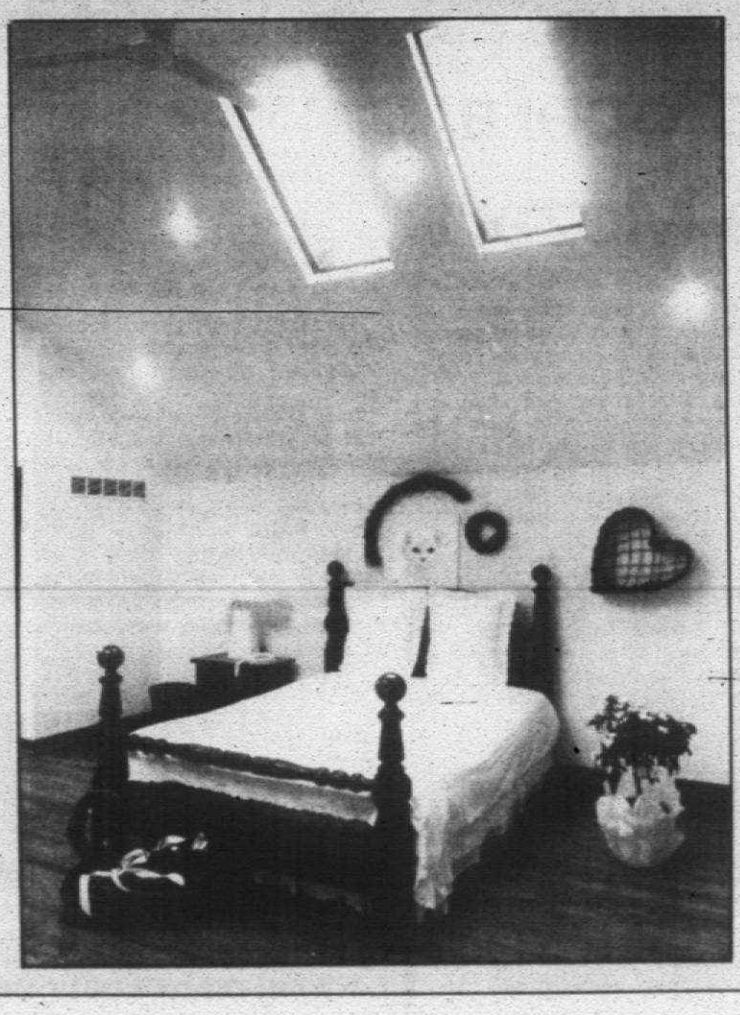
Right: Since the Kings liked the home's original bow-style window, they replaced it with a ismilar style by Anderson. The platfrom kitchen is boldly decorated in black and white.



Left: The Kings selected a traditional decor for the second-floor loft, which used to be the home's attic. The room, now the master suite, features a cathedral ceiling, four large skylights, an adjoining bath and a walk-in closet. The couple refinished the original red oak flooring.

Old Nankin Mills schoolhouse: It's rich in history

ITS NAMESAKE, the 135-year-old Perrinsville School at Warren and Merriman in Westland, the first brick schoolhouse in what then was Nankin Township, is better known.

But Nankin Mills/Perrinville School, built by Henry Ford I in 1937 at Ann Arbor Trail and Farmington Road for workers at his nearby village mill, is still a Westland landmark brimming with history.

The two-room schoolhouse, in the old town of Perrinsville, was expanded in the '50s. Livonia Public Schools acquired it in 1969 when the Nankin Mills School District dissolved. Livonia later converted it to a curriculum development center when elementary enrollment declined.

The school's name was changed from Nankin Mills to Perrinville (minus the "s") after a new Nankin Mills school opened nearby in 1957.

. . . I'm delighted to hear that the Westland Historical Commission is contemplating the Nankin Mills area as the first of many historic districts it hopes to establish during the '90s.

Within this backdrop, I'm delighted to hear that the Westland Historical Commission is contemplating the Nankin Mills area as the first of many historic districts it hopes to establish during the '90s.

Bob Sklar

TOM BROWN, who chairs the commission, says the area is one of the city's most historic. "Ann Arbor Trail was the high road so it could be traveled year-round by stagecoach between Detroit And Arbor."

If Livonia Public Schools ever decides to close the curriculum development center, I'd urge it to work out an agreement with Westland so the city could restore the old two-room schoolhouse and use it as a museum of artifacts from the village mill era and early 20th century classrooms.

The original part of the schoolhouse boasts a slate roof, a bell tower, hardwood floors and a coal room.

"The core of the building, it's in pretty good shape," says Sue Grigg, head custodian. "The school's not in bad shape inside. And outside, it's in great shape."

Henry Ford built the school for kids of workers across the road at Nankin Mills, now offices for the Wayne County parks system. Driven by water power from nearby Nankin Lake, the mill produced engravings, carburetor parts, rivets and bearings.

DURING THE '20s and '30s, Ford, ever the innovator, bought old grist mills as part of a grand plan to build village industries along the Rouge and other small rivers.

He believed farmers working in an atmosphere of cleanliness and tranquilty would restore a proper balance between the industrialized city and rural communities.

During the slack season, farmers "could work in the small plants in the farming communities, thus resulting in year-round work, providing the security of farm life with the increased income afforded by industry," Ford said.

Ford's experiment, which intrigued American and European planners, proved unprofitable. Nankin Mills closed after World II. It became a county nature center in 1956 but closed in 1980 when funding ran out.

IN ITS heyday about 1850, the town of Perrinsville flourished as a small commercial center at Ann Arbor Trail and Merriman Road.

It was a stagecoach stop between Detroit and Ann Arbor. The coming of the railroad farther south to Wayne spurred the town's decline in the late 19th century. The crossroads became part of the new city of Westland in 1966.

Last year, the city applied for a $50,000 state equity grant to help restore the original Perrinsville School at Warren and Merriman.

Plans call for Western Wayne County students to attend day-long classes in that school once it's restored. Harper Readers and reproductions of early textbooks would highlight the 1890s curriculum.

antique or junque

James G. McCollam

Q: Enclosed is a picture of a tea set that is marked with a maple leaf and "Nippon — Hand Painted." It is very delicate and translucent when held up to the light. Anything you can tell me would be appreciated.

A: Your 11-piece Japanese tea set was made in the early 1900s. ("Nippon" means "Japan.") It would probably sell for about $225-$235.

Q: The attached mark is on the bottom of my chocolate set, which consists of a pot with six cups and saucers. It is decorated with large pink roses on a brown and white background. Can you tell me who made this and how much it is worth?

A: This mark was used by the Carl Tielsch Co. in Altwasser, Germany, about 1900. Your 13-piece chocolate set would sell for about $325-$335.

Q: Someone told me that old plastic-case radios are valuable. I have an old Bendix radio in a black and green marbelized plastic case. The model number is 526MC. It still works, but the quality of the sound isn't very good. Does my radio have any value?

A: Small plastic-case radios of the 1930s have become extremely popular with collectors. "The Antique Trader Antiques and Collectibles Price Guide" lists your radio for $600-$800.

Q: I would appreciate any information you can provide about a ceramic figurine marked "WW-Made in Austria." It is a girl sitting on a rock with a drape around her hips and legs. The figure is 6½ inches tall.

This tea set, made in the early 1990s, is from Nippon, which means it was made in Japan.

Right: This mark was used by the Carl Tielsch Co. in Altwasser, Germany, about 1900.

A: "WW" stands for Wiener Werkstatte (Vienna Workshop), a studio in Vienna that produced all aspects of the fine arts during the early 20th century. Figures similar to yours have sold in the $800-$900 range.

Q: I have a Windsor chair that everyone thinks is more than 200 years old. It is a comb back with seven spindles and knurled arms. The seat is deeply shaped and is marked on the bottom "Wallace Nutting — 415." I would appreciate it very much is you could provide any information about this chair.

A: Wallace Nutting made reproduction furniture in Connecticut from 1917 to 1941. His work was so fine that it was often identified as authentic by experts. Chairs like yours have sold at auctions from $1,100-$1,700.

Skill raising

Catalogs, seminars, shows inspire gardener

By Marge Alpern
special writer

One-stop shopping garden centers were a national phenomena of the 80s, which continue into the '90s. They are a visible manifestation of the growing allure of home gardening.

We are fortunate to have many fine garden centers in our area with a wide selection of accessories and plant material. Many centers stock a good supply of well-grown, tried and true specimens and each year we are able to find more rare or new cultivars.

There are enormous advantages in shopping locally. You can see and select exactly what you want, avoid shipping costs and delay in planting due to shipping time. If the plant is unsatisfactory, generally you can return it within a reasonable time.

However, when winter settles in, the garden catalogs again delight and entice me. I love looking at the pictures and occasionally I succumb to temptation and order a few new varieties.

The material in many catalogs is well-written and offers practical horticultural help. I sometimes feel like a child with a comic book as I linger over them during the winter months.

THE GLOSSY publications from well-established national commercial distributors are, of course, the most enticing. However, bigger isn't always better and I have had disappointments from several of the leaders in the field.

This past winter, I wrote for catalogs from several small, nurseries that grow their own private stock and often offer rare and unusual varieties.

My experience has been that although the catalog may be just a simple typewritten sheet, the plants are just as likely to be in good condition, well-packaged and cheaper than those from larger concerns.

The service often is much better and the catalog and the people are usually friendly. Now that counts for something these days.

There are dozens of small companies; check the back of your garden magazines for names and addresses if you wish to give them a try.

Catalogs from these nurseries are among those recommended by Allen Lacy in his fine book, "The Garden in Autumn."

1. Canyon Creek Nursery ($2), 5327 Dry Creek Rd., Oraville, CA 95965.
2. Holbrook Farm & Nursery ($2), Rt. 2, Box 223, Fletcher, NC 28732.
3. Lamb's Nurseries (free), East 101 Sharp Ave., Spokane, WA 99202.

YOU OFTEN find garden accessories listed in some catalogs that are helpful and not easily found elsewhere.

Last summer, I ordered a Hanewacker Perennial Spade ($22 plus shipping, total cost $26.25) from The Gardener's Eye, P.O. Box 100963, Denver, Co. 80210. This company's slogan is "Healthy Habits Build Healthy Plants." The two-foot handle of this spade with the sharp "V" shaped cutting edge better than a trowel for digging wide, shallow holes. It's a convenient size for me.

Along with the flood of catalogs this year, there are several gardening events to heighten our anticipation of spring. They all promise to be worthwhile and fun.

The second Ann Arbor Flower Show at Yost Field House April 11-14 will again attract gardeners from all over the midwest. New ideas are being planned, and the show promises to once again be a huge success. Tickets will admit only for specified times for each day and are available at all Ticketmaster outlets and Hudson's stores.

A TRIP to London to see the Chelsea Flower Show is being offered by the Matthaei Botanical Gardens of the University of Michigan. There is ample time scheduled to visit the show.

The spectacular display of British horticulture undoubtedly makes it the premier show in the world. Arrangements have been made to see it during the Royal Horticultural Society Member's Preview.

There will be tours to many famous gardens, including Sissinghurst, Wisley, Kew and Hidcote Manor. To see these gardens at their springtime peak will be a real attraction for me.

The trip, May 19-26, is being planned by Huron Valley Travel Inc. of Ann Arbor. For information, call John Kosta (313) 761-1300.

Exhibit and opera help salute Mozart

An exhibition of 50 posters by contemporary British artist David Hockney are on display through May in the Detroit Main Library, 5201 Woodward.

The display is in the third-floor exhibit hall of the library, in the University Cultural Center.

The exhibit is a part of the "Mozart Magic in Motor City" promotion of a series of events celebrating the bicentennial of Mozart's death in 1791 and made possible by Ford Motor Co.

It directly relates to the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of Mozart's opera, "The Magic Flute," April 27 and May 1, 3 and 4 at Masonic Temple, Detroit.

The posters, loaned by collector Brian Baggott of London, England, represent more than 30 years of Hockney's artistic production. Baggott owns more that 150 posters, a collection that is unrivaled.

Hockney is regarded as one of the most successful artists of his generation. He was born in England in 1937 and now lives in Los Angeles.

His many changes of style and ventures into new fields have been chronicled extensively. He has done painting, photography, drawing, Polaroid-photo collages, laser printing and Xerox-machine composition.

He is noted for his stage set and costume designs for this production of "The Magic Flute."

Library hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, but not Wednesday, when the library is open 1-9 p.m. No admission charge.

Edith Kaufman, owner of the Poster Gallery, supervised the installation. For exhibition information, call the library community relations office, 833-4043 during business hours.

For ticket information on "The Magic Flute," call the MOT ticket office. 874-SING.

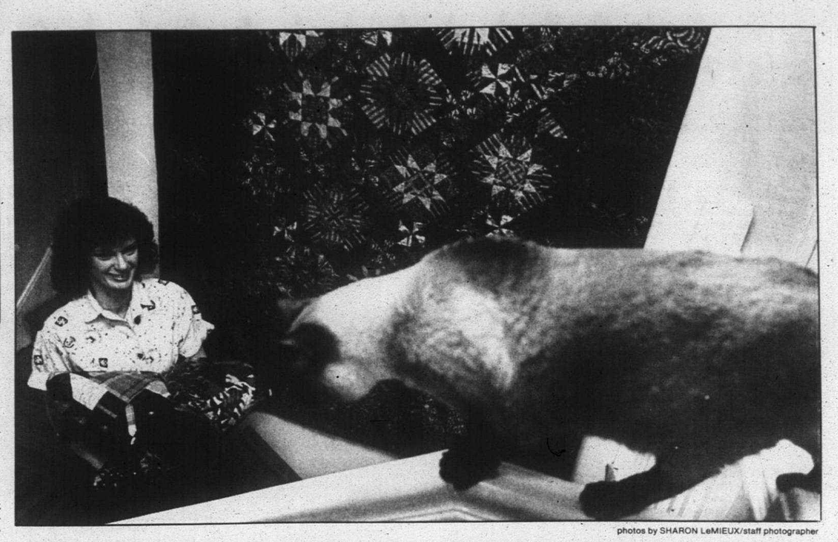
The Wintergreen quilt, 70 by 70 inches, is done in shades of gray and green with accents of violet, red and tangerine. The $4,800 piece will be on exhibit at Artpack Services.

Quilter's magic bold and bright



photos by SHARON LeMIEUX/staff photographer

Quilter Karen Kratz-Miller used vivid colors such as teal green, orange, red and gold against a black background to create "Fireworks," a quilt measuring 53 by 71 inches. The piece is machine quilted with variegated metallic thread. "Fireworks," priced at $3,900, is available through the Janis Wetsman 20th Century Decorative Art gallery in Birmingham.

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

Quilter Karen Kratz-Miller may have been drawn to her craft as a child resting on her mother's old bedspread.

The quilt artist memorized the pattern and the colors of the bedcovering as she ran her fingers over the lumpy, well-worn quilt each day at nap time.

And even if she didn't sleep, the familiar lines of the quilting were as relaxing then as they are today to the Farmington artist.

"I was so familiar with my mother's old quilt. Looking at the pattern every day, I'd see different pictures. I felt like I made that quilt myself," said Kratz-Miller, who will show two quilts at the Wetsman quilt exhibition through April 27 at Artpack Services in Farmington.

Kratz-Miller, who designed and sold her own line of clothing, accessories and wallhangings in San Francisco, retired her apparel line in 1978 when she began quilting.

That year, her first quilt, "Sundance," earned two awards (one for innovative design) at the National Quilt Contest in Santa Rosa, Calif. Since then, the fabric artist has picked up awards throughout the country at local and national quilting shows.

Though quilting techniques haven't changed much over the years, modern quilting is considered an art form, said Kratz-Miller, whose innovative quilts include dramatic combinations of colors and designs.

"I DON'T go for safe color combinations. I like surprises and I enjoy the magic that happens when I put fabrics together," she said. "Quilting doesn't have to be serious business. It's fun."

It's obvious the artist enjoyed creating the Maple Street Series, a collection of quilts depicting the four seasons. "Maple Street Rag," depicting fall, was inspired two years ago when the artist moved to Michigan from California.

"I was amazed by the change of seasons. When we first arrived, I lived on the front porch and watched the leaves turn," Kratz-Miller said.

"Maple Street Rag," named for the street on which she lives, features leaves and splashes of bold colors and patches of plaid on black background. Like her other quilts, the back is quilted with a complimentary pattern of colors.

"Wintergreen," measuring 70 x 70 inches, is done in shades of gray and green with accents of violet, red and tangerine. It's boldly highlighted by a black background. Fan and cable quilting suggest snow drifts and gusts of wind.

"EMERALD SPRING," 74 x 54 inches, includes dozens of plaid and solid greens, some hand-dyed, on a black background. The piece is random quilted, giving it a feeling of breeze, or air. The artist is still planning the summer quilt.

"Wintergreen," priced at $4,800, and "Emerald Spring," $4,300, will be part of the Wetsman exhibit.

When the artist is searching for fabrics to add to a quilt, she's not above using her own clothes or her boys' shirts. She literally conducted a "green hunt" while making "Emerald Spring," even using part of the dining room tablecloth to finish the piece.

Kratz-Miller, a native of Pennsylvania, learned early on to appreciate the simplicity of Amish quilts. Like the Amish, she generally uses black as a unifying color.

"What makes a quilt unique is the play between the colors and fabrics," she said. "Black brings the work together and makes the other colors pop out of the quilt."

KRATZ-MILLER, who attended Rhode Island School of Design, creates her quilts like an artist paints a landscape.

After selecting a theme, she pins fabric pieces on a layer of quilt batting, which is hung on the wall of her workroom. Seeing the pattern unfold vertically gives the artist a clearer perspective of the work.

Using 50-100 fabrics in each quilt, she is able to finish a project in four-to-six weeks.

The artist often becomes attached to a quilt as she makes it but because she can't repeat the creative process, she never attempts the same design twice.

"I love fabric and color and it seems so natural to put them together," she said. "Each quilt is very different and somewhere during the process of making it, it takes on a life of its own.

Exhibit spotlights quilts as art

The dramatic move from craft to art also is apparent in the shapes and subject matter of contemporary quilts.

Arturo Sandoval, a professor in the University of Kentucky's College of Fine Arts, will show his 54-by-66-inch "Ground Zero #8," which takes on an oval appearance from afar.

"I'm inspired by the things I see and feel," said Kratz-Miller of Farmington, a full-time artist who has fine-tuned her quilting over the last 15 years. "You're not going to see landscapes or recognizeable forms."

Harris, a Detroit interior designer inspired by African themes, agreed. "It's not narrative," she said of "Homage," a 50-by-90-inch geometric that features projections, or streamers, that reach to the floor. The quilt is dominant with black, purple and turquoise.

THE EXHIBITION also will feature the work of Faye Anderson, Elizabeth Busch, Lia Cook, Caryl Breyer Fallert, Sharon Heldingsfelder, Nancy Herman, Jane Kaufman, Terrie Mangat, Ruth McDowell Jan Myers-Newbery, Elizabeth Newbill, Esther Parkhurst, Pamela Studstill, Jane Sassaman and David Walker.

Founded in 1984, the Design Industries Foundation for AIDS was started by interior design, furnishings and architecture professionals. It now encompasses all aspects of design.

Its mission is to raise and distribute money to AIDS groups and projects nationwide. It so far has distributed $5 million to 250 groups providing AIDS education and services in 32 states.

The design industries also have donated millions of dollars in furnishings and design services to community AIDS groups, both through the foundation and independently.

House's renovation a fulfilling experience

Taking time from his job as lead singer of Steve King and the Dittilies, he began the tedious demolition, often working 12-hour days. He finished 18 months later, filling more than a dozen 30-yard dumpsters with debris. Much of the red brick was salvaged and donated to Livonia's Greenmead Historical Village, where it was used to pave the walkways.

Besides exceeding his $100,000 construction budget, Steve did more demolition than he originally planned.

"I wanted to save walls, but I realized the finished project would be much better if they were installed new. The project became larger and larger," he said.

AS WET plaster was replaced with drywall, he faced the problem of how to route air ducts after converting from steam heat to a forced air heating system.

For example, since head room in the basement was a premium, ducts had to be concealed and boxed into the north wall. The first-floor hallway ceiling was lowered one foot just to accommodate cold-air returns.

The couple changed each room's original design, except the library, which still includes the handsome, dark-walnut paneling installed in 1927. The couple also reused the original front door and restored the marble entry.

Since the Kings wanted an open floor plan, they raised the original nine-foot ceiling in the great room through the attic, vaulting it to the roof. Dramatically decorated in black and white, the room is flanked by expansive windows on the west side to allow in afternoon sun. The room also includes a zero clearance, mirrored fireplace.

A platform kitchen with walls of storage and a work island overlooks the living area. Boldly decorated in black and white ceramic, the kitchen includes cabinets of pickled alder wood, a black halogen stove and a matching Jenn-Air oven.

THE TWO first-floor bedrooms for Casey, 5, and Brandon, 8, include the original oak floors, which Steve pickled for a more updated look. Both have nine-foot ceilings, pickled woodwork and closet doors, plus a pair of lofty, double-hung windows.

The first-floor bath, decorated in navy ceramic with gold and white accents, includes a step-up tub with a narrow window overhead for natural lighting. The couple saved the old pedestal sink, reglazed and fitted with gold-tone fixtures.

The second-floor loft, formerly the attic and a dormitory-style room for Steve and his brothers, is a departure from the contemporary first level. Overlooking the great room, it includes the original red oak floor and is supported underneath by an exposed structural beam.

The loft has four large skylights, a walk-in closet and a whimsically decorated bath with a corner shower and a vaulted ceiling. The loft leads to a fourth bedroom for 2½ year-old Allyson, born during the renovation.

THE FINISHED lower level, decorated in gray tones, houses a spacious recreation room, a possible fifth bedroom, a bath with spa, storage and a concealed furnace room.

Debbie took on the job of decorating. Neutral, off-white walls are dramatically highlighted with colorful balloon shades, shirred-on valances and mini blinds or pleated shades. The children's rooms are decorated with colorful wallpaper borders, matching bedspreads and coordinated accessories.

"We don't like heavy window treatments or an over-decorated look," Debbie said. "The house is very bright and we've been able to take advantage of the natural light."

The Kings, who've always enjoyed touring the annual Homearama and browsing through building, decorating and garden magazines, had only one request for Morelli Landscaping: year-round color.

After the removal of about 20 overgrown evergreen trees, the Livonia landscaper graded the oversized lot and planted bunches of petunias and begonias for color when the Kings moved in last May. The wide bed surrounding the house also is filled with low spreading Junipers and dense yews for spring, summer and fall color.

THE YARD is dotted with Burning Bushes that provide a rich, red color in fall, a Flowering Almond shrub and a Dwarf Purple Lilac.

The generous-sized lot also is filled with Birch trees, a Candied Crab Apple, Crimson Maple, Sugar Maple and Lace Leaf Maple. The variegated Red Twig Dogwood flowers all summer and turns beet red for fall and winter color. Two varieties of Maple trees line the boulevard.

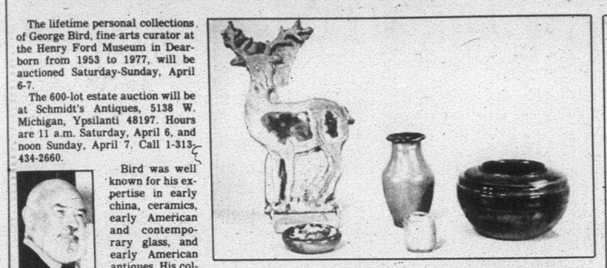
Estate auction to offer Bird collection

The lifetime personal collections of George Bird, fine arts curator at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn from 1953 to 1977, will be auctioned Saturday-Sunday, April 6-7.

The 600-lot estate auction will be at Schmidt's Antiques, 5138 W. Michigan, Ypsilanti 48197. Hours are 11 a.m. Saturday, April 6, and noon Sunday, April 7. Call 1-313-434-2660.



Auction lots will include these Pewabic Pottery pieces: a deer plaque (left), an iridescent vase, an iridescent bowl, an iridescent miniature vase and an iridescent vase.

George Bird

Bird was well known for his expertise in early china, ceramics, early American and contemporary glass, and early American antiques. His collection reflects his broad range of interests.

Saturday's agenda includes 18th and 19th century country furniture and accessories. Sunday's includes late 19th and early 20th century items.

The two-day catalog is $6 postpaid, $5 at the door. The preview starts Wednesday, April 3: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday-Thursday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday. There's a 10-percent buyers premium on all lots.

Sale proceeds will go to Bird's alma mater, Penn State University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in architecture.

BIRD LEFT his position as curator of the Berks County Historical Society in Reading, Pa., to become a research assistant at Henry Ford Museum in 1953.

He soon became curator in the decorative arts and the glass and ceramics fields. He retired as senior curator of decorative arts in 1977, after 24 years of research and curatorial work.

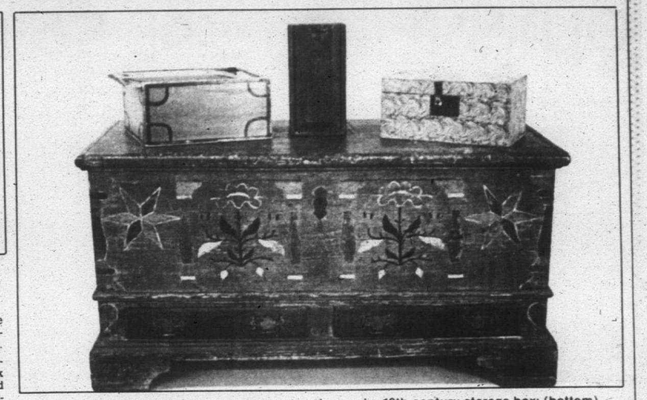
From 1977 until his death late last year, Bird continued to be active in the glass and ceramics field.

His volunteer work included curatorial work for Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester Hills and board of trustees work for the Jones Museum of Glass in Douglas, Maine.

BIRD LECTURED, taught and wrote about decorative arts throughout his career.

He grew up in Berks County, home of the Pennsylvania Dutch in the heart of Amish country. His early experiences there inspired his later collections.

He was part of the museum training program at the Philadelphia Museum of Art and took graduate studies at the New York University Institute of Fine Art.



From the Bird estate: (top) an 1854 slide lid storage box, an early 19th century slide lid box and a 19th century storage box; (bottom) a Berks County decorated dower chest.

Bookshelf yields wealth of green-thumb insight gardener's book nook

Marty Figley

Two books will be of interest to those who wish quick and accurate identification of many plants.

Although the title "Ornamental Shrubs for Use in the Western Landscape," by Emile L. Labadie ($13.95 paper, $17.95 cloth), may sound as though the book can only be used in the west, many of the plants can be grown in Michigan, although some may be annuals.

All the plant characteristics are given on a page opposite the very fine line drawings. Listed in alphabetical order by the botanical name, the common ones are also given.

The second, "Ground Covers in the Landscape," ($14.95 paper, $19.95 cloth), will take the guesswork out of choosing such a plant.

It is the same format as the shrub book with descriptions of plant parts that are lessons in botany.

To order, write: Sierra City Press, 2690 Las Aromas, Oakland, Calif. 94766. Add $3 per book for postage and handling.

THE BEGINNING paragraphs of the first chapter of "A Harrowsmith Gardener's Guide to Water Gardens," edited by David Archibald and Mary Patton (Camden House, $9.95 paper), will grab you and set the creative juices flowing.

Then, it continues with the considerations one must make when planning water gardens, pools and fountains.

Subsequent chapters deal with the how-tos of construction and maintenance, even suggesting that a small container makes receptacle for a plant or two. The final chapter details plants and their requirements.

All in all, this is a well-written, factual book.

"FOLIAGE, PLANNING and Planting" by Anna Pavord (Harper Collins, $16.95) is another in the Classic English Gardening Guides series.

Gardeners will learn about textures, shapes, colors and where and how certain plants can be used to the best advantage.

Descriptions are complete. A chapter is devoted exclusively to ferns, bamboos and grasses, which become more popular each season.

"AN ILLUSTRATED Guide to Attracting Birds" is the newest offering from Sunset ($7.95) and does a good job with the many photographs and descriptions.

The chapter with "Birdscaping Your Yard" will make you anxious for gardening weather.

Plans for feeders, houses and baths and where to put them are included. Sunset books are often sold in hardware stores and garden centers.

THE PHOTOGRAPHS of the many English gardens in "Creating a Cottage Garden" by Sue Phillips (Grove Weidenfeld, $29.95) clearly show the many varieties of plants that can be grown in such a garden.

In addition, the text describes some of the processes used to obtain such planned naturalness.

Early cottage flower gardens began in the front of the house and wandered around to the back, sharing space with animals, herbs and vegetables.

Phillips shows how a garden can use old plants as well as recent cultivatars effectively to achieve this look.

You may want to have a plant dictionary at hand, since in the text the author uses botanical names. The section devoted to traditional plants lists both the botanical and common names.

IN "The Cottage Garden" (Prentice Hall, $29.95), Christopher Lloyd and Richard Bird explain the history of such gardens and tell how to create one. Explicit plans leave no room for error, as the novice and experienced gardener can be successful, using herbs, flowering and foliage plants as well as vegetables.

When I first leafed through this book, I was caught by the vivid photos and details, such as favorites for particular times of the year.

The chapter "Tending the Garden" is a bonus, as are the recipes for using the harvest. Great!

"BOTANY FOR Gardeners" by Brian Capon (Timber Press, $29.95) contains an explanation in layman's terms of the plant kingdom, while making the subject come alive for the average reader. If one could learn to understand plants, perhaps their care wouldn't be such a mystery!

"The reader is invited into the realm of cells to better understand what goes on inside roots, stems and leaves when they grow," Capon said.

Thus the exciting processes that occur from the time a seed is planted, until the plant reaches maturity, is explained. All of us could learn from such information.

Marty Figley is a certified master gardener who lives in Birmingham.

Conservatory tours slated

Conservatory tours at Matthaei Botanical Gardens will be at 2 and 3 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays in April.

This month's topic: "Plants From Around the World."

The conservatory has one of the area's finest collections of world flora. Many plants are familiar through their products. Others are important trade items for countries far removed from their native land. The histories of some of these traveling plants will be covered in the tour.

Tour dates are Saturdays, April 6, 20 and 27; Sundays, April 7, 14, 21 and 28. No tour will be Saturday, April 13.

Just 30 people per hour can be accommodated. Visitors are asked to come to the gardens at least 15 minutes before the tour to register.

Conservatory entrance fees are $1 per person; Friends members with identification are admitted free.

The gardens is at 1800 N. Dixboro, Ann Arbor, 2½ miles north of the Geddes Road intersection.

● HELPING HAND

Helping design the Birdhouse Garden at the International Home, Flower and Furniture Show were Brazen Construction and Superior Scape.

The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources sponsored the Best Birdhouse Builder Contest in conjunction with the show, which ran March 16-24 at Detroit's Cobo Center.

The contest was open to seventh and eighth graders in the O&E circulation area.

● RECORDING PACT

Music director Neeme Jarvi and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra have announced details of recording plans for the second of five discs with Chandos Records Ltd. of Great Britain.

Repertoire for this all-French disc, due for release in fall, will include Ravel's La Valse and Bolero and Roussel's Symphony No. 3 in G minor and Bacchus and Ariane, Suite No. 2.

All four works will be recorded in Detroit's Orchestra Hall in May.

In January, the DSO and Jarvi signed a two-year, five-disc recording agreement with Chandos Records. The first, to be relased in May, features American works by Amy Beach and Samuel Barber.

● QUILTED ENCOUNTERS

The Center Galleries announces the opening of "For John Cox' Daughter," an exhibition that features a colorful array of contemporary African-American quilts from the southeastern United States.

Frances Dorsey, organizing curator, traveled throughout the southeastern United States to locate and select this many-hued display of original, handcrafted art from Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia.

Though the names of many contemporary quilters are known, the blue denim quilt from which the exhibition takes its title is simply signed "John Cox' Daughter," hence the exhibitions's dedication to this anonymous African-American quilter.

In addition to the display of these 12 quilts, a two-day sale will be noon to 3 p.m. April 27-28, featuring quilts designed by some of the quilters represented in the show.

Organized by the Jean Paul Slusser Gallery of the University of Michigan-School of Art, the exhibition at Center Galleries takes place concurrent with:

— the Henry Ossawa Tanner retrospective exhibition at the Detroit Institute of Arts and related programs at the Detroit Historical Museum, Your Heritage House and the Museum of African-American History, all in Detroit's Cultural Center.

A fully illustrated catalogue with an introductory essay and biographies of the quilters represented is available.

The opening reception will take place 4:30-7:30 p.m. Friday, April 26.

"For John Cox' Daughter: African-American Quilts from the Southeastern United States" will be on view in the Center Galleries from April 26 to June 7.

The Center Galleries are at Woodward Avenue and Kirby Street in the Park Shelton Building. Exhibitions are open to the public and admission is free.

Gallery hours are: Tuesday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Paid parking is available inside the Park Shelton and free parking is available in the Center for Creative Studies parking lots.

The Center for Creative Studies and the Center Galleries are supported in part by the Michigan Council for the Arts.

● OPERA TIME

Returning guest artist Travis Preston will direct the opera. Accompanist Martin Katz will conduct the University Symphony.

Show time is 8 p.m. each day. For tickets, 1-313-764-0450.

down to earth

Marty Figley

Here are some thoughts and tips from the excellent gardening conference I attended recently.

It was organized by Janet Macunovich of Perennial Favorites of Waterford. For information on the next one, call 681-7850.

In planning a garden, decide on its purpose. Who are you going to please? How much maintenance will be required?

If the garden is shady, judicious pruning of trees will let in more light and air circulation will be improved.

If there is standing water, use raised beds.

Garden areas can be planned for a particular time of the year for impact and bloom periods.

Put daylilies in front of daffodils. Their foliage will hide the maturing daff foliage and their blooms will provide extended color.

Before you think of color in a border, think about shape and form.

To keep a plant from blooming at its preferred time, put it in a holding bed and then when bloom is wanted, replant it in its original spot.

IF COLOR is needed in a shady area for a particular time, transplant a blooming plant from a sunny area.

Some plants that will make up the backbone of a border are gas plant, peony, oriental poppy.

Tall spire plants add pizzaz to borders and beds.

Lavender blooms on new wood and can be trimmed in May and June.

A bed of various shades of reds is striking.

When planting, put compost directly in the hole, where roots will be.

Annuals provide instant color, can be planted most anywhere and do have a place in the garden.

Perennials provide diversity and their colors and forms are ever-changing during the season.

Look at a plant's foliage when it finishes flowering.

THERE ARE perennial plants for all garden conditions, sun, shade, wet, dry and in between.

A drain spade, which has a narrow blade, is indispensible for digging around perennials. A spading fork, with flat tines, can be used to loosen soil around plants without disturbing the roots.

A claw/hoe, with a long handle, is very useful. Use a pruner with a scissors action. A "man" is a small tool, shaped like a "T" for scraping dirt off tools.

Dig tap-rooted weeds, don't just cut the tops off. If a few of these weeds are left in the garden and pulled before flowering, they will be gone and not re-seed.

Remember: One year's seeds equals seven year's weeds.

SOAKER HOSES and trickle irrigation save water.

Incorporate a slow acting fertilizer in October when roots are still growing, with top dressing. The best winter mulch is this area is snow . . . the second best is evergreen branches.

Some perennials need dividing at specific times, consult a good book. A general rule is: If they root on the fall, divide in the spring and vice-versa.

To control moles, put hardware cloth completely around mole runs . . . they can't penetrate it. To deter deer, hang small bars of soap on trees and fences.

Each garden is unique. It is the personal creation of the gardener.

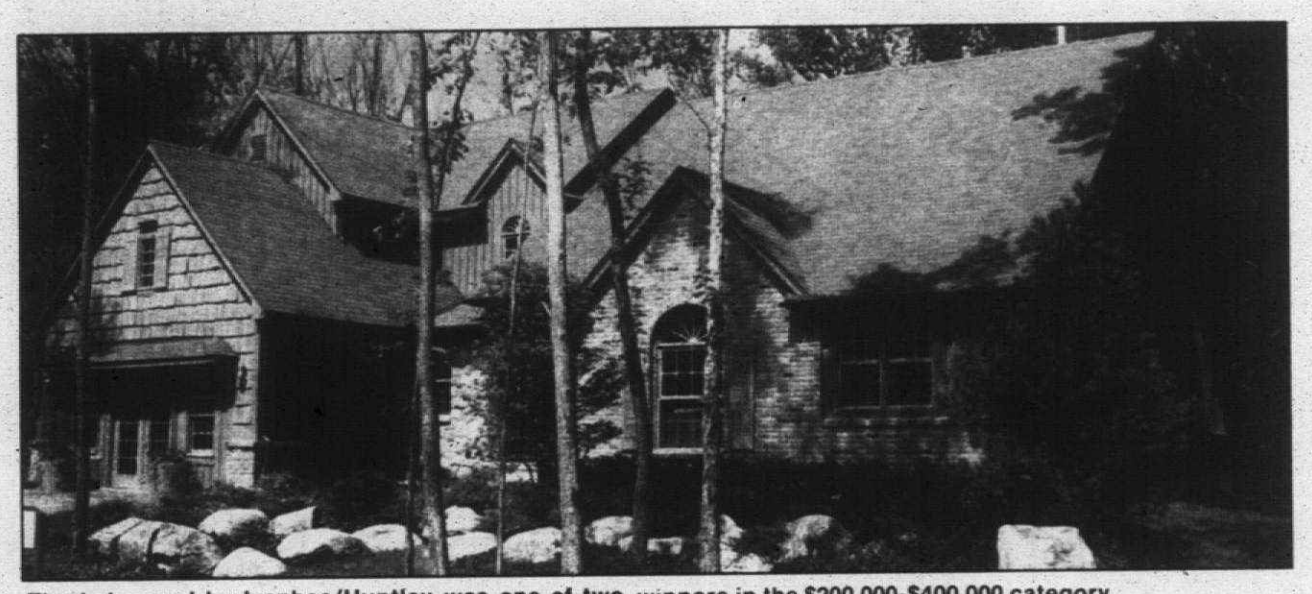
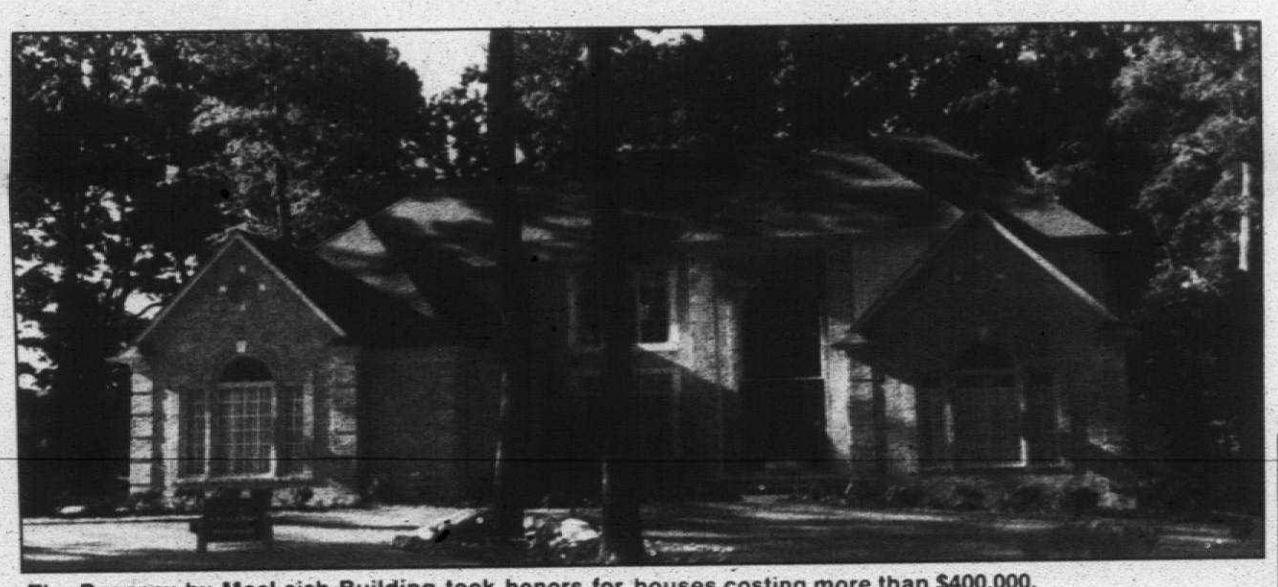
This Edward Rose colonial was judged best design for a house under $100,000.



The Lakewood by Ivanhoe/Huntley was one of two winners in the $200,000-$400,000 category.



The Regency by MacLeish Building took honors for houses costing more than $400,000.

Practicality, not pizazz, mark contest winners

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Designing a good house is part science and part art.

There are aesthetic concerns to deal with such as appearance, visual excitement and materials, and there are engineering and practical matters such as flow, space and value for the dollar.

Put it all in a jar, shake it up, and if everything works out well, a concept becomes a house.

Architects will tell you it's not hard to score a hit, but belting a home run, ahh, well that's another matter.

Detroit-area builders presented their best ideas in house design in the Second Annual Parade of Homes at the International Home, Flower and Furniture Show at Cobo Hall last week and allowed a panel of five architects to pick the houses apart, scrutinize and judge them on their design merits.

What did the judges find? For the most part, production houses in southeastern Michigan are of a fairly traditional design and solidly grounded in the basics.

• JUDGES MIGHT have hoped for more adventurous designs, they said, but realized that mass production — and even custom houses — are more grounded in practicality then architectural theory.

Judges were looking for houses that gave a sense of excitement, George Erdstein said. Erdstein is a partner in the West Bloomfield firm of Erdstein Bryce and Palazzola Architects and Planners and one of the judges.

Excitement, he conceded, is a subjective criterion.

"When you look at one house, something may leap out at you that doesn't leap out in a similar house. That's the benefit of having several judges — if more than one sees something exciting, that indicates a design's worth."

Karl Greimel, former dean and current professor of architecture at Lawrence Technological University in Southfield and a judge of the Parade of Homes, said that judging the Parade of Homes was unlike most design contests.

MANY ARCHITECTURAL entries are more theoretical than practical with new ideas and experimentation, Greimel said. In addition to aesthetics, judges for this contest also weighed livability and value, he said.

The judges, in recognition of the changing style of houses, added another category to the original four, Erdstein said. Under the original guidelines, the judges were to select houses from under $100,000, between $100,000 and $200,000, between $200,000 and $400,000 and over $400,000.

That setup, while not ignoring the attached-house market (condominiums and duplexes), did not clearly recognize it. "So we felt we had to add a separate category for attached homes."

WHICH DOESN'T mean there weren't qualities about the houses that could be judged, Greimel said. The number of rooms, bedrooms, the size of great rooms, how a house responds and interacts with the site, and things such as a house's flow — how functional a house is — greatly affected the judges decisions, he said.

Parade of Homes winners and judges comments:

• Colonial: Built by Edward Rose Associates in Southfield, this 1,650-square foot, $99,500 two-story colonial in Brownstown Township has three- and four-bedroom plans, a basement, two-car attached garage, kitchen with eating area, dining room, living room and family room. It was judged to be an exceptional value.

Fairgrove Manor: Built by Fairview Builders of Auburn Hills, this 1,600-square-foot, $135,000 detached condominium in Troy has walk-out basement, vaulted ceilings, two bedrooms and an option to convert a den into a third bedroom. It was recognized for its use of sharp clean lines and geometric simplicity.

Amberwood: Built by S.R. Jacobson Development Corp. Birmingham, this 1,900-square-foot, $180,000 detached condominium in Rochester Hills has high ceilings, open floor plan with a master bedroom suite and a second bedroom with an option to convert a studio loft into a third. It was also recognized for its clean design and simple lines but also scored for its dramatic roof angles, which the judges said created a sense of excitement.

The Lakewood: Built by Ivanhoe/Huntley, this 2,742-square-foot, $265,000 estate in West Bloomfield has a first-floor master suite and two additional bedrooms with an option for another, a large kitchen with nook and sitting area, cathedral ceilings, and a great room with fireplace. It was recognized for both its function and its dramatic incorporation of the exterior site.

Manchester: Built by Scaccia Building Co. in Rochester, this 3,900-square-foot, $399,000 estate in Troy has four bedrooms, great room with cathedral ceiling and circle top transom windows, first-floor den or library, formal dining room, large kitchen and two staircases. It was also recognized for its simple geometric design with a repetition of form and consistent use — and respect for — materials.

Regency: Built by MacLeish Building of Troy, this 5,300-square-foot, $475,000 mansion in Troy has nine-foot ceilings, a two-story foyer and living room, a circular foyer staircase and rear family staircase, four bedrooms with an option for a fifth bedroom, walk-in closets in the bedrooms, a bath for each bedroom, and a first-floor master suite. It was also recognized for its simple geometric design with a repetition of form and consistent use — and respect for — materials.

Buyers lean toward colonials

By David F. Stein
special writer

Suburban Detroiters are a conservative lot who have routinely steered clear of the adventures of excesses of homes in other parts of the coutnry.

But today's buyers are tiptoeing more carefully than ever as Wayne and Oakland builders and architects increasingly hear the refrain, "Make mine colonial."

"Colonials are more popular than ranches; most buildres don't even do a ranch model any more," Bloomfield Hills architect David Lubin said. "Styles have moved back to the traditional; pseudo-Tudor burned out. Spanish homes are out, the bi-level is out even though you used to get a lot of space for your dollar. We are doing a lot of story-and-a-half with the first-floor master bedroom raised a few steps."

Michael Horowitz of the Selective Group in Farmington Hills agrees.

"We see very little demand for the ranch home. People who are coming from condominiums or the empty-nester — even they tend toward a stacked ranch" Horowitz said.

Colonials are not only popular but practical.

Full, two-story colonials cost less to build per square foot of living space than ranches of story-and-a-half loft homes. The main savings come from relatively smaller basements and roof and perimeter wall surfaces, all of which drive up construction costs.

In addition, most builders said colonials have the best energy efficiency.

"Colonials are more energy efficient than older homes with more square footage in the basement. That's where a lot of heat loss occurs," said Paul Dyhdalo of Daimler Builders in Troy.

LIFESTYLE AND expectations often reinforce choices.

In contrast to most of Wayne and Oakland counties, ranches are still popular in some communities, Dyhdalo said.

"In Warren, eight of 10 are ranches; people like the ease of one-floor living, even families with a lot of children. It's simply a mindset for living," Dyhdalo said.

He is now building in Troy, West Bloomfield and Farmington Hills, where he finds most buyers prefer colonials.

But most builder agree that once popular styles, such as the bi-level and tri-level, are unlikely to regain favor. Most also scratch their heads for the reasons.

"In the '60s, tri-levels were very popular. They were very efficient since you were using half of the basement for living space," Dyhdalo said. "But now tri-level are out; you only find them being put up piecemeal."

ONE EXPLANATION is that families prefer more open, flexible floor plans than what is possible with segmented living space of bi-levels or tri-levels.

And the next generation always seems to want more different. Those raised in the spit-levels of the past may be looking for the feel of a colonia when they raise their own families.

Regardless of style, buyers still have big eyes when it come to size.

"Detroit has always been a conservative and traditional city," said veteran architect Ron MAyotte of Troy. "But no one comes to grips with size. Peoples fantasies are still out of line with their pocketbooks."

Developer Robert Katzman of Abbey Homes in Birmingham doesn't think bigger is better can last forever.

"Even though people want big homes, with taxes, heat electricity, houses will have to get smaller in the long term," Katzman said. "The floor plans will have to be very more wide open. Vaulted, cathedral ceilings will be in. We will think of cubic as opposed to square feet."

While buyers converge on the traditional in basic style, there is always room for change within the conventional forms.

The biggest change locally has been the addition of the master bedroom to the first floor of colonials.

"The traditional two-story is still the mainstay, said Deen Hyde, director of marketing for Pulte Home Corp.'s Michigan division. "But we are also finding as demographics change that people are going to master bedrooms on the first floor.

"People have children who are older and at school, but still come home. They want a family room, bedrooms and a bathroom for the children upstairs. The house lives like a ranch when the kids aren't home."

Hyde said there is an increased call for master bedrooms on the first floor of a colonial to be used as an office or a bedroom for grandparents.

"Even younger people are going on their own at a later age. Extended families over the next decade will want to live separate but together," Hyde said.

Meanwhile, architects are trying to add variety to the tried and true.

"We are trying to do an upbeat colonial, not as done in the pure sense of tradition," Mayotte said, but he admits that "there are only so many key plans and basic room arrangements to a home."

Mayotte has tried to individualize houses through the relation of the second floor to the first, 1½-story homes being popular, stairway placment, and ceilings as tall as 11 feet.

Different entrance points and the traditional shingle-style architecture of Long Isand's Hamptons is also being tried. The old-fashioned porch may even make a comeback.

Mayotte doesn't lay all the blame for today's sameness at the feet of consumers.

"The schools are turning out architects who don't know how to design in the traditional matter, with attention to detailing and design," Mayotte said.

Like Mayotte, architect Lubin is working to embellish the basic colonial.

On the inside, this includes more open floor plans, more angles, more ornate window treatments and shapes, and more detailed entry ways in addition to higher ceilings.

"The nine-foot ceiling on the first floor is almost becoming standard," Lubin said.

"Outsides are also becoming more interesting. There is an old adage that you catch people with the outside, then sell them on the inside."

The key here is more authentic detailing, said Lubin, with limestone and brick.

TODAY'S FAMILIES also demand as large a garage as possible.

"Attached garages are a must from security and weather standpoints; they also serve as a buffer to save energy," said Sam Blumenstein of Classic Construction Corp. in West Bloomfield.

"Even when the lot dictates a two-car garage, we find ways to add extra storage behind," Pulte's Hyde said.

While homes are tending to look the same, the sanctity of the individual private lot may be in for a shake-up, according to Horowitz.

"In the interest of wetlands and woodlands, the trend is to do more environmentally sensitive land use," he said.

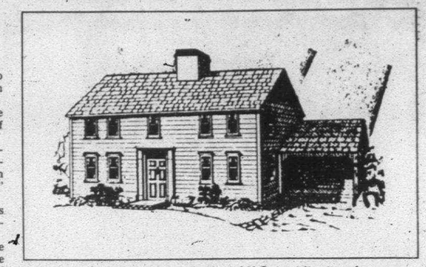
One solution is clustering of homes, using condominium law to subdivide the land, even when building detached, individually-owned homes.

Horowitz said there is an obsession in this area about too much density in subdivisions that is not common in other parts of the country.

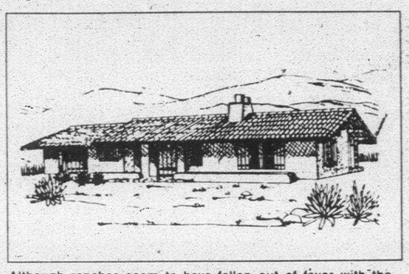
"There's a lot of hesitance," Horowitz said. "It's still the great American dream for people to own their own home and own land."

Developers can use the cluster concept to protect the environment and still create a development with the look and feel of a conventional subdivision.

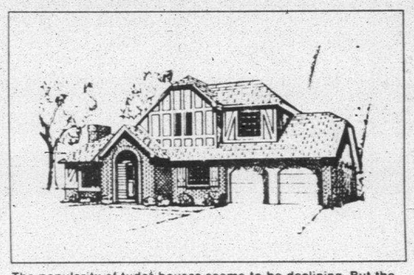
"Remember, in some areas like Birmingham, Northville and Grosse Pointe, people pay a premium to buy better homes, closer together," Horowitz said. "People want to live in a community first; the house is secondary."



The colonial has been a mainstay of U.S. architecture for many years. The main appeal seems to be the spaciousness and elegance.



Although ranches seem to have fallen out of favor with the house-buying public, they have the advantage of one-floor living. Ranches are usually more expensive to build than colonials, but they are often easier to maintain. The most popular style is the straight side-to-side ranch.



The popularity of tudor houses seems to be declining. But the combination of stucco and wood trim exterior makes the houses look appealingly unusual. They are also characterized for their gables, large angular chimneys and slate roofs. They appeal to families who want lots of space.

Color it back to basics

(AP) — Color and pattern changes are inevitable as people tire of the old. Current events and changing interests inspire the new.

Right now, a number of events and attitudes are turning the color wheel in new directions, displacing pastels, floral excesses and shiny fabrics.

Important among them are concern for the environment, a good feeling about natural materials, interest in ethnic designs of Asia, Africa, Latin America and American Indians, and a revival of colors and patterns inspired by the art movements of the 1950s and 1960s.

The trends were cited in programs on home furnishings fabric directions for the 1990s by Ron Splude, color analyst for the Du Pont Co.'s interior textiles department, and by Mary Louise Hawkins, color stylist for Cotton Inc., the marketing arm of American cotton producers.

"As we move into the new decade, we're seeing a shift toward natural materials and a pared-down style," Hawkins said.

Whites and neutrals are popular in the bedroom. For example, there's J.P. Stevens' new line of linens for bed and bath called Simply Cotton. The products are chemical-free, undyed and unbleached and come in their natural off-white shade. They require ironing because they aren't treated with permanent press chemicals.

THE COMPANY HOPES to capture the imagination of the environmentally concerned public with the collection in its Utica line. It will be in stores in late spring or early summer. A twin set of sheets will cost about $40.

"We have seen a groundswell of interest in natural products free of additives and preservatives and in packaging that is simple, recyclable and biodegradable," said Thomas J. Ward, J.P. Stevens president.

A hand-crafted ethnic style is particularly widespread, Hawkins said, with colors and prints that suggest the look of kilim rugs, paisley prints and mosaic motifs.

Contemporary art is furnishing two fabric trends. One is for fabrics that depend on texture and surface interest rather than color. Seersucker and pique, which have raised patterns, and solids with small dots are examples.

Moving on to more lively patterns, there are many with wavy lines, squiggles and splashes of bright color or inspired by the pop art and graphics of the 1960s.

Colors and designs that are less of a fad and longer lasting are more desirable now than they used to be. That's why more classic colors are being used in home decorating, said New York decorator Barbara Southerland.

THE MORE FAMILIAR the colors you select, the longer they are likely to give pleasure, she said. She advises steering clear of tricky colors in favor of more classic hues.

"Color is the most important aspect of decorating a room because people remember color far more easily than other things such as furniture or window treatments."

If you are unsure what color to select, you can find inspiration in a box of crayons.

"Not the big box," Southerland said, "but the basic small box we all got when we were 4, and none of the 10 or so colors were weird."

The primaries of red, yellow and blue retain their freshness and don't go in and out of fashion the way composite colors such as mauve do, Southerland said.

"A CLASSIC pale yellow wall will look good for 10 years. A lipstick red sofa or cobalt blue chair that looked great new in 1970 would have the same appeal if purchased today."

A formula that is easy to apply includes one or two strong clear colors for furniture and surfaces and neutrals such as beige, pale yellow or gray to keep the room from becoming too intense. Patterned fabrics can mix the shades and bring more life.

There are schemes men and women both tend to like. One that reminds her of the colors of Italy in summer mixes pale sienna (a kind of peach), terra cotta, pale yellow and a gray-brown she says looks like the stones of Florence.

"Men and women both find it very comfortable, and it's gorgeous at night."

Another popular combination is gray with white, yellow and black and a touch of red or pink.

Spring style mirrors the world

By Denise Lucas
special writer

WHO SAYS fashion is all fluff? Take a look around. Spring fashion trends not only reflect individual style but aspects of the world.

Fashion is the barometer of the ecological, economic, political and psychological spirit of this nation and planet.

● COLOR

The fashion word for spring '91 is color; high-volume bright, ablazing color. After two seasons of looking at a world in conflict along with a suffering economy, we have removed our black cloaks of mourning and will experience the magnificent color palette of spring — brilliant orange, lime, red, yellow, and fushia lift our spirits high along with hemlines.

● HMM . . . HEMLINES

Spring '91 has raised the hemlines to all-time highs, giving great legs over-exposure not only with short skirts but short shorts.

Fear not: fashion front runners, designers and authorities know we no longer live in a time of fashion dictatorship. Fashion has become an expression of self and lifestyle. There is something for everybody. Those short-short skirts look hot this spring, but it's also cool to wear whatever your mood or body parts tell you.

● NEUTRALS

Got the "bright frights?" Designers have also appealed to those who want soft neutral shades.

Our awareness and quest for a renewed environment looks to the earth, moon, sea and sky providing balancing neutral colors and harmonious tones by paying tribute to nature's wonders.

● SHAPES

Spring takes on a melange of shapes and contouring. Blazers are long over short skirts or short over short. The vocabulary of dress shapes include trapeze, sheath and wedge, baby doll, empire and sleeveless A-line.

Casual lines include full tops over tunics or leggings, while the femininity of draping, cowl necklines and sarongs are making front-page news.

● PRINTS

From big garden blossoms to psychedelic op art, to the '60s Pucci revival, prints are found on everything — dresses, suits, shoes, purses, head bands and tights.

● SHINE

The world is a brighter place to live. Watch for sequins, crystals, Lucite, matte metalics (especially in silver), for day to evening accessories. Black patent shines bright this spring.

● SIXTIES

It's the '60s revisited. Colors, shapes, prints and heroines — the Age of Aquarius saturated with peace and love.

Marilyn Monroe, Grace Kelly, Jackie Kennedy, Audrey Hepburn and Brigitte Bardot are remembered from the '60s. The decade of yesteryear brings to the '90s a revival of the "Jacqueline Kennedy suit, Grace Kelly head scarves, Marilyn Monroe peek-a-boo cutouts, John Lennon glasses, short trapeze dresses and denim, denim and more denim.

The world's posture also has reflected the '60s attitudes of home fashions and furnishings.

While we spent four days shooting our fashion section at Gorman's Gallery of Fine Furniture in Southfield, Bernie Morey, owner of Gorman's, said: "It's a year for everything . . . country French, contemporary, traditional, eclectic.

"Americans are returning to the home. They're 'cocooning,' spending nights in comfortable and inviting settings, entertaining at home and renting videos."

Like clothing fashions, home furnishing are looking toward natural, timeless designs with the focus on individual style and mixing the new with old family heirlooms.

O & E spotlights fashion trends

LIGHT AND lively.

That's the spirit of this special spring fashion section, appearing today in all editions of Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

To those who helped put together this sampling of what's hot on the fashion scene, we extend a big thank you.

Gorman's Gallery of Fine Furniture in Southfield provided the setting for our four-day shoot as well as the props and perches for our photographers and models.

We extend special thanks to Bernard Moray, Gorman's president, and his helpful and cooperative design, sales and store staff, including Ken Michlin, sales manager, Joe Osowski and Scott Bartshe.

Thanks also goes out to these hairdressers and stylists for their creative talents and cooperation:

● Hair by: Sherri Burrows, Sophia Contaguris, Stephanie Denha, Todd Skogg — from Salon Kennice Bashar, Farmington Hills. Mary Beth Hatropoulos, Kathleen Torgerson, Rheanne White — from Justin Parish, Birmingham.

● Make Up: Joan Smith — from Tamara's Institute de Beaute, Farmington Hills. Myles of Trenza Salon, Bloomfield Hills. Scott Barnes.

Classique Boutique of Tel-12 Mall in Southfield and Oakland Mall in Troy provided an array of hats, scarves, wigs and hairpieces.

auCourant Optical Fashions of Somerset Mall in Troy provided fashion eyewear.

ABOUT THE COVER:

The renaissance of femininity flows with the allure of fabric and expression of watercolors. A viridian green silhouette coat dress, $400, suggests graceful gestures of floating silk welcoming the romance of spring. With a poetic accent of a French imported silk rose pin, $30, and the innocence of the Louise Green straw hat with blossoms, $160. Presented by Kidz Kloz, Sugar Tree, West Bloomfield. Gorman's provided the French-inspired boudoir settee.

Staff photographer Dan Dean took the cover shot.

Special fashion writer Denise Lucas and O&E special sections editor Bob Sklar coordinated this section. Randy Borst, O&E graphics editor, designed the section, including the cover. Staff photographers included Jim Jagdfeld, team leader, Bill Breisler, Dan Dean and Sharon LeMieux.

Advertising coordinators were Gigi Badalamenti in Oakland County and Peg Knoepfel in Wayne County.

Direct queries about the section to Bob Sklar, 591-2300, ext. 2115, or Denise Lucas, 442-2339.

CONQUEST

The Voice of Active Older Adults and Handicapper Citizens

Debbie Reynolds

'...still singin' in the rain'

By Carrie Young
Executive Editor

FACE IT: We live in a topsy-turvy world.

Some fear it. Others steer.

Debbie Reynolds prefers it at the helm.

Tenacity got her to the wheel. Maturity has maintained her enviable position.

But, please...Don't envy. Rather, learn from Ms. Reynolds' life's obstacles.

She prefers it that way.

Recently, I learned this in an exclusive interview with Ms. Reynolds when we exchanged thoughts about growing older. We concluded that our anxieties about aging are pretty universal:

What if we're alone?

What if we can't take care of ourselves?

What if we run out of money?

What if we run out of hope?

"Hold it right there," Ms. Reynolds smiled.

"I may have anxieties about those questions of life. But, honey, I've already lived through them. And, I'm that much stronger for it."

Debbie Reynolds is a Hollywood legend.

Debbie Reynolds has also been alone.

Debbie Reynolds has not always been so certain where her next dollar would come from, nor who would take care of her in times of tragedies.

Yet, during those gloom-and-doom times, Ms. Reynolds never let go of hope:

"If you lose hope, then you've lost your faith," she warned.

Speaking more as a practitioner than preacher, Ms. Reynolds shared:

World Travel Aide

Specialty
- Physically Challenged
- Older Adults

Joanne Irwin believes that physically challenged and older adults have the same desires and inclination to travel and explore as any other.

The only difference may be, "...some need a companion..."

And that's where World Travel Aide, Inc. enters:

"World Travel Aide companions are unique...as unique and special as those they come to the aide of," says Ms. Irwin, president of World Travel Aide.

"The only degrees companions need are degrees in love, understanding, patience, and how to be a friend," she smiles.

But, professionally, aides come even more equipped. The idea is to allow people to live and be motivated and excited by life. Yet, the aides are ready to meet any challenge.

Ms. Irwin, from her resume, lists her credentials that extend beyond her personal commitment to treating travelers with dignity, respect and integrity.

Joanne Irwin
President/Founder

She has a liberal arts degree; is a graduate of Dale Carnegie; a certified nurses aide; home health aid; CPR certified, 1991; has been active in the field of recreation for the aging and physically challenged; and is a member of the Advancement for the Travel of the Handicapped, (SATH).

"I also have had seven years of being bonded, and I've been a travel companion to many over the years," she explained to CONQUEST. "There is nothing more rewarding than to take someones' world which has grown smaller, and smaller, and helping to expand their horizons."

From one-day excursions to half-year cruises, Ms. Irwin can make travel easy and fun. As it should be.

'I used my eyes to describe artifacts, while he used his fine sense of touch.'

"I've been a private travel aide for a 90-years-young prominent Hawaii businesswoman. It was an adventure for me to do anything that made her happy," Ms. Irwin said. "I traveled with an 87-years-young Birmingham gentleman declared legally blind. He has spent most of his life collecting Indian artifacts, and dining with Indian chiefs. I used my eyes to see and describe artifacts while he did the same with his fine sense of touch."

Trips range from overseas to trips to Frankenmuth, dinner theatres, plays, operas and family visits.

It is Ms. Irwin's dream to expand her travel aide to include the hiring of handicappers and mature adults to be companions to others.

"I want World Travel Aide to be a business of recommendations. I take great pride in professionalism and high standards," she told CONQUEST. "At the same time, I want down-to-earth people who want to treat life as an adventure and help like-minded people who want the same things out of life."

ELDERHOSTEL

"...century shock..."

John and Joan went up the hill to fetch a pail of water.

John did not fall down and break his crown. But, he was rained on. He was wet and muddy.

Bad day?

Wrong.

Bad century.

As for Joan. She did not come tumbling after. However, she did have to go to the bathroom pretty badly.

Tough.

No restrooms.

This is 1760.

No wonder they call this:

"Elderh-o-s-t-i-l-e," grunts this century-shocked reporter.

John and Joan break out into uproarious laughter.

"The name is Elderhostel," John said. "This is educational. This is pure adventure. We're living and breathing history as it were..."

This is Greenfield Village of Dearborn, MI. John and Joan Gabel are Livonia senior citizens.

They are just one couple which has joined the growing ranks of 250,000 older adults internationally who age 60 and over are visiting college campuses, universities and educational institutions.

To John and Joan, this is fun.

"You have to get up pretty early in the morning to get one up on us," John laughed. "Heck, we milked the cows before dawn and finished our morning chores on the farm.

New horizons, eh? John.

But, John. Look: No bathrooms. Look: No T.V. Look: No microwave. This reporter borders on whining: No electricity.

"Well, kids that's because ol' Thomas Edison wasn't born yet.

I'm beginning to see the light. Or lack there of.

Joan busys herself with the 39 other Elderhostelers who've come from all over the country and Canada to partake in "The Transformation of America: 1700-1950."

The womenfolk are now gathered in some house they say Sam built. Sam forgot heat. And, no bathrooms.

The menfolk quickly learn of equal rights and responsibilities. They, too, shall help in a highly unique experience called: Scratchcooking.

This reporter volunteers to watch over the chicken. It's dead. I have findly found something useful to do, and it's a sit-down job.

I warm up to the fire and the dead chick. People seem to warm up to me, as well. I think it's because I'm finally out of the way.

John pulls up a chair. He's still trying to figure out my gross incompatibility with period "roughing it."

"How old are you anyway, kid?" John asks.

"This kid happens to be 34-and-a-half," I reply.

"Well, that explains it," John smiled. "You're too young to be doing this kind of time traveling."

"To be an elderhosteler," John says: "You've got to be 60 years and older. You have to have stamina and energy to keep up with the programs."

I listen. John tells: He and Joan were both school teachers and for them this is a natural extension to lifelong education.

"This is a first for us. As soon as we turned 60, we began turning the pages of the Elderhostel catalog," both John and Joan agreeing the choices were so varied they didn't know where to begin.

But, for this twosome, once is definitely not enough.

Coming in Conquest

- Millions of viewers of the Lawrence Welk Show know Myron Floren, whom Welk calls "the Happy Norwegian — my right hand man for over thirty years." Known as the "Accordion Man" Floren joined Welk in 1950 and today is still touring. He is the highlight of Frankenmuth's Bavarian Festival June 8-15.

- Jim Byrnes, star of CBS-TV hit series WISEGUY speaks out for "The First Step," Easter Seals' multi-media campaign to change public perceptions about the physically challenged. Byrnes speaks from his own experience when he talks about how important it is that handicappers become aware of the subtle and not-so-subtle ways people discriminate. He became a wheelchair user after a 1972 auto accident. His interview with CONQUEST is hard-hitting.

OTHER STORIES: The 1991 World Waterskiing Olympics for the Disabled is being hosted in Michigan, and is organized by HomeCare of Dearborn. HomeCare President Randy Kowalski is excited, because "we will be hosting 14 countries. It is a major event for all."

For someone with a wheelchair there isn't a seat in the house.

In many theaters, this simple pleasure is still unavailable for the hundreds of thousands of people who use wheelchairs.
It's time we made room for everybody.
Awareness is the first step towards change.

"We're old enough to remember some of this," Joan agrees.

"People don't change much," John informs, "Just the machinery."

Rita Johnson from Columbus, OH joins in: "You better believe it, to me this is almost more fun than my last adventure...dragracing."

Rita is on her third elderhostel. Next trip is to China. "I hear the food is terrible...but now they have McDonalds."

One of the period women announce dinner is ready.

John nudges me: "One nice thing about no water. You don't have to wash your hands before dinner."

Good point. A definite mood brightener for me, despite the growing darkness.

The group seems like family. We sit down at a long wooden block. Someone refers to it as a table.

We say grace. Everyone is holding hands.

Then it happened. I sneezed like I had never done before.

And, just like family, I heard someone mumble..."Should have left the kid at home."

"As a kid, National Geographic magazine was my flying carpet to adventure and knowledge. Now, it's the Elderhostel catalog, and I don't just read—I DO!"

Guy Stanton, 85-year-old Michigan Elderhosteler

Guy is one of more than one quarter million active older Americans age 60-plus who've broadened their horizons by participating in the:

Elderhostel adventure.

Every year more than 1,200 college campuses, private secondary schools, universities, national parks and other kinds of educational institutions throughout the U.S., Canada and 40 countries overseas open their dorms to the army of elderhostelers.

With Elderhostel, older citizens can take non-credit courses. They need no prior knowledge of the courses ranging from history to drama.

Cost: Often cheaper than traditional vacations.

Elderhostel has been touted as a great way to exchange ideas, sample college life and make new friends with active, inquisitive, interesting people.

It's a unique opportunity to combine study with the adventure of exploring someplace new in friendly and supportive academic environments.

That's why the elderhostelers often comment: "Studying is half the fun!"

Medicare

By Michael Bragdon
Director of Operations
Fairlane Home Medical Supply
(313) 277-6000

The federal government's Medicare program has been in existence for many years and is still the largest single component in most Home Medical Equipment Suppliers' reimbursement picture. However, there are still many common misconceptions as to the coverage it provides. In order to have home medical equipment paid for under this program, you should have the following...

A. Medicare Part B (Medicare Part A covers hospital and physician bills not equipment in the home)

B. A physicians' prescription. Medicare needs to be assured that a licensed physician (not the patient) deems the equipment to be appropriate.

C. The proper diagnosis. Each piece of medical covered equipment has a Procedure Code assigned and a group of realted Diagnostic Codes. Your diagnosis must fall into this limited group. Please note - regardless of prescription and diagnosis some items (such as grab bars) are simply not covered, because Medicare does not view them as therapeutically necessary.

D. At times, a detailed letter from the physician explaining exactly why the patient requires the prescribed item. This is required for certain items only (TENS units, lift chairs, etc.)

Remember that Medicare will only pay 80% of the reimbursement price - which it sets - and the party receiving the equipment must either have complimentary coverage or pay the remaining 20%.

"Unsinkable" DEBBIE

"I don't know of anyone who hasn't had obstacles in their life of one kind or another. How we survive them is what makes us a worthwhile person. And, you c-a-n-n-o-t do that unless you have faith in God, and faith in yourself."

When you interview Ms. Reynolds, you must come prepared to interview her famed character counterparts, all of whom are equally etched in Hollywood history.

Saying hello to Ms. Reynolds means saying 'hey' to "Tammy." In minutes, soon emerges: The Unsinkable Molly Brown, and the naive starlet Kathy of "Singin' in the Rain."

The optimism of the backwoods teenager. The perserverance of Molly. And, the sweetness of Kathy are each part of that "never give up" philosophy and charm that has made Ms. Reynolds the success she is today both on stage and as a person.

Internationally famed singer, actress, dancer: Ms. Reynolds stands tall.

Ms. Reynolds has made more than 30 major films, appeared on stage, had her own T.V. show and toured with her own act around the world.

She has had her share of tragedies and disappointments, but has always landed on her own two feet. This is where she is most at home.

Centerstage in the game of life, Ms. Reynolds has been both student and teacher.

As student: Class is always in session.

As teacher: Ms. Reynolds' brand of wisdom is in again, though it never really went out of style.

"If we believe in ourselves—and that comes with maturity—you gain the wisdom that you have to be a strong person. You have to stand alone with your faith in order to survive," she shared. "There are many areas of life that can knock you down—I mean hit you hard. YOU have to be able to rise and move on when that happens. And, that is the hardest lesson to learn."

Ms. Reynolds learned life's lessons the hard way.

"I've been down many, many times through my lifetime," she said. "Once at the end of my first marriage to Eddie Fisher. Then again at the end of my second marriage when I was left absolutely broke at the age of 40 and had to begin again. I started over, and still maintained my sense of pride and self respect by paying off enormous debts.

"This was hard. Not easy. The word is hard. I was a single woman raising children alone. But, I did it! It took a long time, but what I think you have to do is to take large problems day by day while keeping in mind a long-range plan.

Today, Ms. Reynolds is the author of her own autobiography, "The Unsinkable Debbie." She provides a hearty laugh when telling this true story.

The day her book rushed the bestsellers' list, she received a phone call from a young reporter that morning at her home.

What was Ms. Reynolds' reaction, the reporter wanted to know, to winning yet another distinguished place in history.

"Well," Ms. Reynolds replied slowly, "I've got to see what's for breakfast."

"Breakfast?" the reporter asked.

"Breakfast!" Ms. Reynolds repeated. "I mean, this is a great honor—but you gotta' eat."

You have to admire this lady who doesn't allow the crowning moment of a lifetime to interfere with basic needs.

"Killer Disease"

"My dad never planned to be an alcoholic. He never said, 'When I grow up, I'm going to drink a lot and abuse my wife and children'..."

Suzanne Somers
Star of "Three's Company"
Entertainer of the Year, 1987.

By Carrie Young
Executive Editor

First in a Series

Ms. Somers provided those powerful words recently when she delivered testimony before the Michigan Legislature.

And, because of those words, she told CONQUEST:

"Michigan is the first state to acknowledge and respond. There is now a bill in the Senate citing the need for funding to be allocated to families of chemically addicted persons—both for the addicted person, and the co-addicted family."

The Michigan Office of Services to the Aging (OSA) hails Ms. Somers for her devoted efforts in battling this "killer disease," according to OSA Director Nancy Crandall.

"With our growing older Americans, alcoholism is no longer treated lightly with public assumption that it is limited to little old ladies nipping at their Geritol," she warned. "It is imperative we act today, because this is truthfully yesterday's problem with a foreseeable future of a disease out of control. Treatment is an absolute must."

Ms. Somers agrees. But she believes our nation must take initiatives to engineer treatment "before" the person reaches his or her advanced years.

That is why Ms. Somers went public with her bestseller: "Keeping Secrets," ironically a truth-based story of her own life growing up with an alcoholic father and its lasting tumultuous effects well into her adult years.

It is also why Ms. Somers is determined to end the alcoholics' bestfriend relationship with the little brown jug. Family, she encourages, can either perpetuate the disease by becoming inadvertant "enablers."

Or, with proper education, the family can become the beginning force that opens the doors to truth, confrontation with the disease and resolution.

Already, Ms. Somers has been making great strides. She merged The Suzanne Somers Institute of Palm Springs, CA with the Oxford Institute Network of Care in southeast Michigan.

The intent of this recent affiliation is to call attention to alcoholism as a "family disorder."

Douglas MacDonald, MD, chief executive officer of the Oxford Institute said, "we hope to have influence on health insurance companies to include family programs in their coverage of substance abuse treatment."

Ms. Crandall lamented that for older persons Medicare coverage is hit and miss, depending on individual programs.

"And, not all treatment programs or counselors are sensitive to the particular needs of older problem drinkers, she noted.

For example, there must be confrontation. But harsh confrontation,

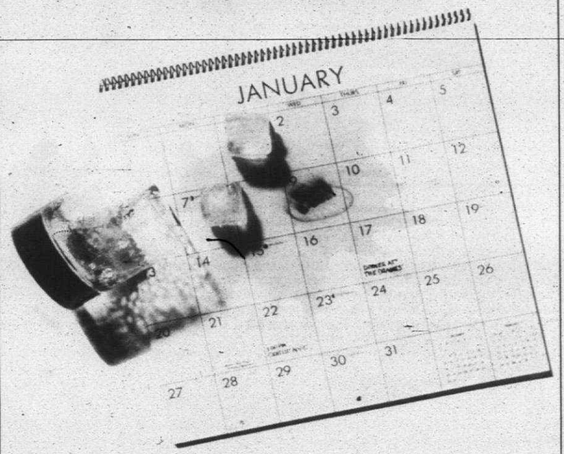
WILL ALCOHOL TAKE THE "HAPPY" OUT OF YOUR NEW YEAR?



... "For many people, the new year starts with a drink. For alcoholics, the drinking never stops, while their families watch another year of broken promises go by.

"I know because I'm a child of an alcoholic father. In our home, we experienced fear, anger, and disappointment instead of joy, comfort, and security.

"If alcoholism is a problem in your family, the programs and experts at The Oxford Institute can help. They understand family feelings — doubt, helplessness, confusion — and all the problems that occur when drinking takes over."

strenuous exercise and requiring the older adult to admit that he or she is an alcoholic may not be appropriate.

"Older people are not accustomed to airing their problems to others," Ms. Crandall said. "Critical to the program is that the staff MUST believe that the problem drinker CAN recover...

"Remember," Ms. Crandall stressed. "A treatment program is only the beginning. It is not the end.

Dr. MacDonald agreed.

"Freeing the alcoholic from addiction is the door opener, regardless of age. But, special emphasis on families is now learned to be essential for everyone's recovery," he said.

Ms. Somer shares in the philosophy that sucessful substance abuse treatment is directly related to family involvement.

That is why her visit to Michigan.

"The Oxford Institute is a perfect match with the Suzanne Somers Institute," she explained in interview with CONQUEST. "These program sare designed specifically to support those programs committed to recovery through strong family programming."

"Alcohol has been a killer for generations," she said. "It is only today that we are identifying it. They used to attribute deaths to cirrhosis of the liver, car crashes, diabetes, and all the other reasons that covered up the real reason: Alcohol."

Ms. Somers is a celebrity. But, her celebrity status has not insulated her from a life of personal tragedies. Her own life has been one of dysfunction and utter turmoil.

"One day I just shivered from all the madness alcohol was doing to my family. It's progressive. Don't let anyone kid you. As my father grew older, it got worse," she tightened. "Finally, I declared war. I just said, 'this has got to stop'."

And that was the day her battered family began its exploration to healing the wounds.

A day for new beginnings.

And, tips on detecting if you think an older loved one may be abusing alcohol and its potential devastating effects, particularly if mixed with medications.)

Zerbo: Happy 75th!

This month marks the 75th birthday of Harry Zerbo, who has spent 34 years of his life as a nutrition specialist to thousands.

Owner of Zerbo's Health Food Store, in Livonia, Zerbo represents the epitome of the active, healthy older adult. And, he practices what he preaches to others.

From the sight of this strong, stocky silver-haired man, one can only tell that his years of commitment to others' health have made his own life youthful and full.

Working as a chinchilla farmer back in 1950, Zerbo was probably as far away from being a nutritionist as one could be. But, after noticing medical problems and a decline in reproduction of his animals, he attempted to supplement their diets with vitamins, seaweed and soybean grits. Shortly after, he noticed a dramatic improvement in the behavior of his chinchillas. This phenomenon made Zerbo wonder how humans could benefit from similar nutritional adjustments.

After spending time studying nutrition and attending lectures with a pioneer in nutritional awareness, Frank Sawall, Zerbo opened his own food store in 1958. Since then, he has met with and helped people to nutritional "good health" with the count to more than 100,000 persons.

Michigan Governor's Conference on Aging

Plainly, Michigan's Aging Network is hogging all the attention.

To be expected. The aging community is poised for an invasion. Target city: Dearborn. Invasion date: March 25-27.

And the more attention they grab, the better, says Nancy Crandall, director of the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging (OSA).

Because, on that appointed date, more than 1,000 professionals from the aging community will come together at the only statewide gathering of its kind:

Welcome to the 1991 Michigan Governor's Conference on Aging.

"We are at the crossroads," Ms. Crandall told CONQUEST. "We're deluged with questions."

Question: Will future older adults be healthier, wealthier and less likely to depend on traditional senior programs?

"Most certainly," she said. "But, will disadvantaged older adults still exist? Demographers say they will.

More questions.

Can the Aging Network dovetail the needs of these two disparate groups in order to stretch funding dollars and provide efficient, effective services? And, at what cost?

With skyrocketing prices, how will the next decades' adults be able to afford health and long-term care insurance?

Will today's economic behavior bankrupt tomorrow's mature population?

While living longer and healthier is a tremendous benefit, Ms. Crandall queries: How will we find meaning in our lives during the third age?

And, for those to whom fate is not so kind and are faced with debilitating health problems, should they be able to say when they've had enough and determine when to end their lives? What are the ethical issues to be faced by an older society?

"These questions are faced by professionals within the aging

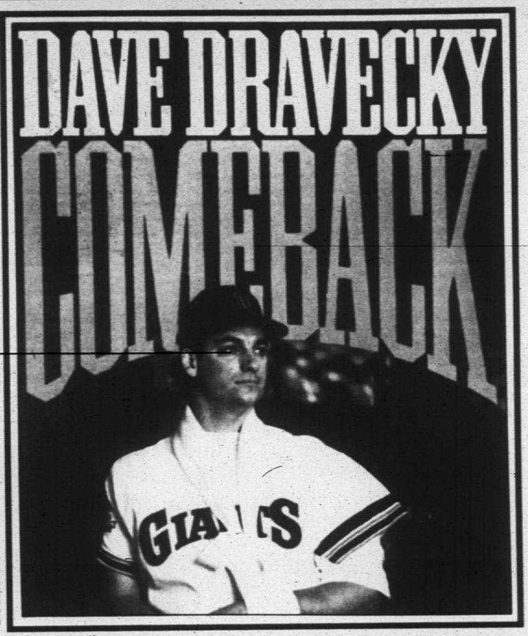
DAVE DRAVECKY COMEBACK



Dedicated to Dominic Macelli

Cancer Comeback

"Dave Dravecky's story is one of strength, hope, love of family, and belief in God. The remarkable faith and courage he has shown is an inspiration to us all."

–Ronald Reagan
Former President of the United States

To Ronald Reagan and the nation, Dave Dravecky has become known as the Comeback Kid.

Cancer struck him out of his all-star pitching status for the San Francisco Giants.

Courage returned him to the pitcher's mound for a celebrated victory.

Dave was in Michigan recently on a book tour for his autobiography: Dave Dravecky, "COMEBACK." He interviewed with CONQUEST.

The story of this San Francisco Giants baseball pitcher stands out as one of the great comebacks of all time.

When his doctors removed a cancerous tumor from his pitching arm in October of 1988, they removed muscle as well.

He was given a "near-zero" chance of ever pitching again.

On August 10, 1989, Dave Dravecky pitched again.

He won. He won that game. A championship game.

But, he won much more...

"I did what the experts said was impossible. To come back from cancer and pitch a major league baseball game," Dave savors that thought.

Without a deltoid muscle in his pitching arm, "...I won a game in a pennant drive in front of tens of thousands of screaming fans."

"What more would anybody want out of baseball?" Dave smiled.

More time, perhaps?

But, for Dave that was not to be.

Five days after that victory game, he pitched again and won. But, in the bottom of the sixth, he let the ball fly. He did not realize it would be the last pitch of his life.

A dull, sickening crack could be heard across the unusually quiet stadium. The humerus bone in his pitching arm literally snapped as he delivered with full force.

"My arm felt like I'd been hit with a meat axe." Dave said he had to grab his arm to keep it from flying toward home plate, as he screamed, tumbling headfirst to the ground.

It was enough to devastate the strongest of the strong.

Not Dave Dravecky.

Remarkable though it may seem today, his thoughts were not full of bitterness or self-pity. Rather, he found himself confident that God was writing another chapter in his life. At the time he had no idea of what it was.

Little did he realize, as he writhed in pain upon the ground, that he had delivered "the pitch heard round the world."

Now he does. And that's why COMEBACK has been written. It is why he travels in pain on book tours and interviews with newspapers such as CONQUEST.

"It's been such an exciting experience being able to tell what God has done in my life through this ordeal," says Dave.

HIS FAITH: "Life isn't fair. But the Bible taught me not to confuse life with God...Not to blame Him if things don't work out the way I think they should."

ADVERSITY: "I'm clearly not done with adversity. My future is as unknown as before. There are times in baseball when your body is tired and your spirit is weary, but you have to keep on. That's called: maturity."

INSPIRATION: "With the cancer, people who didn't even care about baseball reached out to me. They identified with the heartache. They were inspired, I think, by my attitude. Some wanted to know where did I get the ability to respond positively, without bitterness?"

Dave smiles: "God. Simply, faith in God."

Debbie Reynolds

And you have to wonder if Ms. Reynolds wasn't trying to teach us something about where good food and distinguished prizes ought to rank in the priorities of someone interested in leading a long and fruitful life.

Afterall, most of us will never win such honors, even if we live to be 100.

But we all gotta' eat. And most of us haven't even begun to exploit the possibilities of breakfast.

Ms. Reynolds nods approval.

Ah-h-h. Class dismissed.

"Not on your life," Ms. Reynolds politely scolded. "As long as there is life, class will always be in session."

"Yes, ma'am."

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age.
Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.
It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.
These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample send your name, address, and phone number today to: Department 99395, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.
