Collectors enrich life

Dick Kirchgatter has six old ones. Dennis Wilkin has seven of them. And Jim Hartford has a couple of them.

"We are plowing under the wheat stubble. This is a nice time to try them out," said Kirchgatter, as he and about four other area farmers and tractor collectors hopped aboard their machines Sunday afternoon on his property at Ridge and Saltz roads.

Hartford has a 1941 John Deere B, as well as a 1927 Centaur and a 1955 Farmal Cub. "That one is just a baby," he said, as he watched his son-in-law, Robert Cassidy, plow on the Cub in the distance.

Plowing, harvesting, mowing and disking are recreation to Wilkin, who was sporting a bright-colored umbrella on top of his tractor Sunday. Besides that, restoring the old machines and using them ensures that the tractors are kept alive for future generations.

"If I don't do this, we won't see these things in the future," Wilkin said. "I grew up on these."

Fred Kleinow of the Tri-County 2-Cylinder Club, an organization to which some tractor collectors belong, said it best: "We do this to restore the tractors and bring them back so they don't go to the junkyard. To the older generation, they are just as good as the new ones."

Kirchgatter, who grew up on a farm in Iowa, said his dad took over his grandpa's farm, which didn't

To 'pole' or not

With the hunting season coming up, the Canton Observer wants to know if its readers want the newspaper to continue the "Buck Pole" that is published throughout the season.

Traditionally, the Observer has published the Buck Pole as a means of allowing area hunters to publicize their kill. Some readers have complained they are offended by the Buck Pole, as well as accompanying photographs. On the other hand, it's an opportunity to publicize local residents and their sport.

This is your hometown paper. Let us know whether you want the Buck Pole to continue or not. Write to us by Sept. 15. Please include your name and why you feel one way or another.

We'll let you know what readers decide. Send your comments to Joanne Maliszewski, editor, Canton Observer, 744 Wing Street, Plymouth, MI 48170.

Going home

Canton resident Greg Unger, 15, who underwent a double-lung transplant in early August, left St. Louis Children's Hospital Tuesday, Aug. 29, according to his dad, Bill.

Greg, who suffers from cystic fibrosis, is off oxygen and breathing with his new lungs. He also successfully fought off a bout of rejection recently. Kim Kitson, hospital spokeswoman, said Greg is in good condition.

He will stay in an apartment in St. Louis for about three months. He will be monitored and educated on his medications and how to watch for signs of illness.

"We never thought this day would come. Greg is coming home tomorrow," Bill Unger said over the hot-line phone line installed for interested residents to hear about Greg's progress. "We are real excited about it."

Bill Unger said that as of Monday night, Greg had been off oxygen two days.

Greg will remain on anti-rejection medication his entire life.

The transplant came just a few days before his 15th birthday Aug. 9. Greg became well-known to the Canton community as efforts proceeded to help raise money for the transplant and associated medical and relocation costs.

Canton firefighters and police officers spearheaded two benefit hockey games with the Red Wings Alumni to raise money for Greg.

Canton officer on sick leave during police investigation

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

While he is under investigation, a Canton police officer is on sick leave after admitting during his brother-in-law's attempted-murder trial that he had potential evidence in his possession that he did not turn over to police.

"We are gathering information right now," said Canton Public Safety Director John Santomauro. "We have a lot of hearsay information. We are in contact with the prosecutor and Westland police to determine whether a suspension is in order."

Veteran officer George Sharp testified that he did not mean to conceal evidence to protect his brother-in-law, Michael Janik of Canton, who is charged with trying to kill his wife, Karen, by setting her on fire at their former Westland home in January. Janik is a former Westland and Garden City resident.

He testified that he was given Karen Janik's clothing when he and his wife, Candace, visited her at the University of Michigan Hospital on Jan. 2. That was the day Karen Janik said her ex-husband doused her with lighter fluid and set her on fire with a cigarette lighter.

The 18-year officer said he was given Karen Janik's shoes, blue jeans, bra and panties. Her shoes were damaged during the fire.

He testified that he kept the clothing until after Michael Janik was arraigned on Jan. 10 on charges of arson and assault with intent to murder. He said in court that he didn't think of the clothing as evidence.

Sharp said when he turned over the clothing it was to defense attorney W. Otis Culpepper, not Westland police or Wayne County prosecutors. Culpepper brought the items to the trial in Detroit Recorder's Court Aug. 23.

Sharp also testified that he did not discuss the issue with his supervisors at the Canton Police Department. But under questioning from Wayne County assistant prosecutor Jerry Dorsey IV, Sharp conceded that police officers usually give evidence to the prosecution side of a case.

He testified that he tried to phone the Westland police sergeant in charge of the case but couldn't reach him.

"Our internal investigations involve the violation of department rules and regulations. We do not get into the criminal investigation," Santomauro said. As of yet, Sharp hasn't faced any charges.

Recorder's Court Judge Bruce Morrow later declared a mistrial for Janik. The mistrial stemmed from questions by the assistant prosecutor about statements Janik may have made to police after the Jan. 2 incident. Morrow's ruling stemmed from concerns that Dorsey exposed jurors to issues they should not have heard.

of felony murder in the death of her daughter, Chelsea, at their Windsor Woods apartment. The Wayne County Coroner listed Chelsea's death as asphyxiation from strangulation.

Judge Ron Lowe of the 35th District Court granted Solomon's attorney, Samuel Churikian, his request for an adjournment to Oct. 23. Churikian requested an independent psychological exam. He also requested, and Wayne County assistant prosecutor Maria Oxholm agreed, to allow an opportunity for reports from Solomon's past psychological reports to be included in the report of an exam ordered by Lowe that is being conducted at the Center for Forensic Psychiatry.

"I think it is reasonable in this case to wait for the reports to be available to the forensics center," Oxholm said.

Lowe said that as long as Solomon — who in July objected to a delay of a her preliminary exam on the charges — agreed to another delay, he would grant Churikian's request. Solomon remains in the Wayne County Jail. Not guilty pleas were entered on her behalf at her arraignment in July.

If both sides stipulate to Solomon's competency, the preliminary exam is expected to begin Oct. 23. "If it's a mater of needing the competency hearing, we'll have a competency hearing," Lowe added.

■ Lowe said that as long as Solomon — who in July objected to a delay of a her preliminary exam on the charges — agreed to another delay, he would grant Churikian's request.

At the preliminary exam that was adjourned in July, Solomon told Lowe she is competent, adding that she was in therapy and that after at least one suicide attempt, "I have no wish to take my life."

According to the police report, Solomon spent most of Jan. 28 in her apartment with Chelsea, though they spoke to each other only occasionally. Solomon told police she heard her daughter singing and playing. She said she also heard bumping and banging noises coming from Chelsea's bedroom.

Solomon reportedly told police that she later went to Chelsea's bedroom — she thought then she must have been napping or resting — to ask if she wanted some pasta for dinner. The mother opened the bedroom door and found her daughter. She said she pulled off whatever was around Chelsea's neck, lifted her up and off where she was hanging, and put her on the lower bunk bed mattress, according to the report.

Solomon told police she began CPR and called 911 shortly after 7 p.m. for help while continuing to try to resuscitate her daughter. Solomon then moved Chelsea to the living room, which would be closer to the front door when emergency personnel arrived.

The Canton Fire Department arrived shortly after the mother moved Chelsea to the living room. Chelsea was transported to Oakwood Health Center, from where she was taken by helicopter to the University of Michigan Hospitals in Ann Arbor.

ONE C-SECTION DOES NOT AUTOMATICALLY LEAD TO ANOTHER

by Maria Kossak, D.O.

Enjoying

A cesarean birth is surgery in which the baby is removed through an incision in the woman's abdomen and uterus. At one time, it was thought that once a woman had a baby through a cesarean, also called a C-section, she would have to have all future babies delivered the same way.

Today, many women who have had a C-section can successfully deliver subsequent babies vaginally, and if no risk factors are present, they are encouraged to do so.

Decision should be based on several considerations

Whether a second or third C-section is necessary depends on the reason the procedure was used before, the size and position of the baby, and the type of incision that was used for the earlier birth.

Most cesareans now are done through a side-to-side incision on the lower portion of the uterus. The uterine incision may differ from the skin incision. It is less likely that this type of uterine incision will separate if the mother attempts labor and a vaginal delivery.

Improvements in technology that allow for continuous monitoring of both mother and baby during labor also help ensure the safety and success of vaginal deliveries. If a problem develops during the trial of labor, a cesarean delivery can be done.

Many reasons to consider vaginal birth

There are a number of reasons to consider a vaginal birth after a cesarean. There is less risk of complications with a vaginal birth; and because no incision is made, there is reduced risk of bleeding and infection or other problems that can occur with any surgery or anesthesia.

It usually takes less time to recover from a vaginal birth, and the hospital stay is shorter. Mothers feel better sooner and there's an advantage for fathers, too: They can be more involved in the birth process, and in some cases even cut the umbilical cord.

If medical factors indicate that a second cesarean is not necessary, the decision on whether to try a vaginal birth is ultimately the woman's. She should discuss the matter with her doctor so she can make an informed decision.

Dr. Kossak is an obstetrician-gynecologist on the Medical Staff of Oakwood Hospital and Medical Center-Dearborn. Her practice is located in the Oakwood Healthcare Center-Canton.

School days start anew

For Ken Jackson, Fiegel Elementary third-grader, the school year got off to a wonderful start. "He found out Saturday who his teacher was; it was posted on the window over the weekend," said his mom, Canton's Diane Jackson.

"He got the teacher he wanted — a teacher who doesn't give too much homework. And he was greeted when he got off the bus by his best buddy. They're in the same class, and are sitting next to each other. So he's happy," said Jackson.

Fiegel fourth-grader Gassan Dirani isn't quite ready for summer to end.

"I wish it was still summer so I would be with my uncle. My uncle is moving to New York today," said Gassan, 9, walking down Fiegel's newly waxed hallways. "But it's fun to be with all my friends, and I like the new playground."

First-grader Emily Sparks had had better mornings. When she couldn't find her classroom, Emily sat in a corner with her teddy bear. But not for long: a teacher helped her find her way to Mrs. Hippen's room.

The Alber family recorded the morning's activities on their camcorder. Videotape was rolling as Alex, 6, and Katie, 5, got dressed, walked to the bus, and arrived at the school on Joy Road in Plymouth Township. "It was just like a wedding," said dad John Alber.

"They were very excited. They have family here and a lot of friends, so they were really looking forward to it," said mom Jovon Alber, wheeling 5-month-old Jackie in a stroller. Alber said her family enjoyed the open house Fiegel hosted the day before.

First-grader Kacie Loveday, 5, was a "little leery about being here all day," said her mom, Jacie Johnson of Canton, as the morning sun burned through the haze. "But she really likes school. She's been bugging me for over a month, wanting to know when school started again."

April Ca was impressed that her daughter's teacher phoned the day before. "She called Christina to introduce herself. That was really nice." Both Christina, a third-grader, and her sister Jessica, a fifth-grader, "were very excited. They couldn't wait to get back."

Enrollment is up by 300 over last year in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, with the biggest increase — 100 students — at the kindergarten level, said Superintendent Charles Little.

There are 60 more students than last year in both the first and second grades. Other grades with higher enrollment are sixth, seventh and eighth. The largest number of classes with 32-plus students is at the high schools. "There are over 12 of them," said Little. "There are three fifth grades with 34 students," he added.

To address the situation, Little is recommending that the board hire nine more teachers. If students don't transfer out in numbers roughly equal to those who've moved in, "we can cover the costs," said Little. The district receives $5,402 in per-pupil state aid.

Over the summer, the district hired 90 teachers. Many are replacing senior teachers who accepted an early severance package offered by the district.

The party's over: Tony Plott is less than thrilled about returning to Fiegel Elementary for a new school year. Mom, Cindy, does her best to soften the blow.

Teachers eager to get to work

By Leonard Poger
Staff Writer

The nearly 900 persons, many still dressed in summer garb, greeted each other with warm hugs or handshakes, talked about their summer vacations and chatted about the new school year.

In the background was the Phil Gram Dixieland jazz band playing "When the Saints Come Marching In."

No, they weren't students returning to classes for a new term.

They were teachers and administrators milling around the Wayne Memorial High School gym to collect materials about various community service and educational organizations on how to help their students, who returned to classes Wednesday, Aug. 30.

The get-together was planned by a staff development committee headed by co-chairs Charles Heard and Beverly Brooks, curriculum officials.

In explaining the planning of the Tuesday morning program, Heard said that new school Superintendent Duane Moore wanted "a partnership of the staff and community and let the teachers know what services are available for them and their students."

Among the organizations providing information to teachers were the Salvation Army, Wayne County Regional Educational Services Agency, Wayne-Westland Foundation, a P.D. Graham School PTA chapter, and others.

In the Wayne Memorial Stockmeyer auditorium for opening week talks, the teachers heard from Moore, hired several months ago, and Jane Kuckel, assistant superintendent for instruction, about the educational challenges they face this year.

Based on the developments in Lansing, Kuckel said, teachers can face those challenges through renewal, revising old ways of and reinforcing the current effective programs.

She also stressed teamwork, urging teachers to help each other.

Moore, in his first opening-of-school address in Wayne-Westland, defended public education which has been criticized by American business leaders as well as state officials in Lansing.

"We listen to a governor and legislature rant and rave about the failures of public education in our state, so we hear about schools of choice, not choice schools, we hear about the bureaucracy of our schools, but they discuss consolidation to larger districts," Moore said.

The superintendent also stressed that "public education does a tremendous job against fearsome odds," citing the major social problems of schools taking children from low-income families or have drug or alcohol disabilities.

"Schools have been beleaguered by a flood of social problems plaguing children and young people, from teenage pregnancy and juvenile crime to adolescent suicide to a growing AIDS epidemic."

Public schools are being made a "convenient scapegoat" by American business for productivity problem and for its unwillingness to pay for costly changes in production processes and training — the two keys to the successes of Japanese and German corporations."

The federal government, Moore continued, has added to the "education bashing" by cutting funding for education programs.

Store earns kudos

Arnoldt Williams Music of Canton has been listed in Music Trades magazine's Top 200 List, a sales ranking of the largest and most successful music products retailers in the United States.

The Top 200 music equipment retailers sold 37 percent of the $5 billion worth of items sold in 1994.

Arnoldt Williams Music, which ranked 68th on the list, was established in 1962 by the late concert piano technician and rebuilder Arnold Williams.

■ JUVENILE FIRE SETTERS

This is a program for youths whose parents, teachers or school principals are concerned about fire setting, pulling fire alarms or abnormal fixations with fire. Firefighters meet with parents and children. If counseling is needed, a referral is given. For more information, call fire prevention, 397-5348.

Police: Watch out for con artists

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Canton residents are reminded to be cautious when approached by sales people at their homes or over the phone.

"We are coming to the season where con artists are working," said Lew Stevens, Canton police community relations officer. "Don't believe everybody. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is."

Stevens offers a number of tips should you be approached.

- If you receive phone calls with high pressure sales, it could be fraudulent.
- If the sales person says the deal will offer no risk, but high yields, be suspicious.
- If a sales person asks for your credit card number or Social Security number, don't provide it.
- If you call a 900 telephone number, be sure you know the charges before you dial.
- Remember that the Canton fire and police departments do not solicit funds. If an organization tells you they are collecting for either department, contact the police with the name of the organization.
- Before you donate to a charity with which you are not familiar, check it out.

Township seeks to make sense with dollars

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Run-of-the-mill is how Canton Supervisor Tom Yack describes the proposed 1996 township budgets.

"It's a pretty mundane thing," he said, about the three major budgets — general fund, police and fire — that are currently under discussion.

The public is invited to a state-required hearing on the township's tax rates for the general, police and fire funds at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 12, at the Canton Township Hall.

The total proposed tax rate for 1996 — the new budget year begins in January — is 9.3523 mills, the same as this year. Of the total rate, 3.0915 is for fire, 5.1508 is for police and 1.11 mills is for the general fund. The police and fire millages were approved by voters in 1976 and 1977.

The owner of a $120,000 house valued at $60,000 would pay $561, while the owner of a $160,000 home valued at $80,000 would pay $748, if township trustees adopt the proposed rates. In other words, for the same tax rate as this year, property owners will pay a little more than this year.

Those rates would support a proposed general fund budget of $10 million, a police budget of $6.8 million and fire budget of $5.8 million.

The proposed budget and tax rates reflect the township's decision to capture increased growth in Canton. "We had a big state equalized value growth," Yack said.

Based on the taxable value of personal and real property in Canton, the township's value increased to $1.3 billion from $1.2 billion this year, said John Spencer, chief financial officer.

The increases provides the police department with about $600,000 in new dollars, $350,000 for the fire department and $130,000 for the general fund, Yack said.

Meanwhile, revenues from the state are expected to increase, as are court revenues and fees. "We anticipate another building year so revenues coming from fees will stay healthy," Yack said, referring to fees charged to developers and builders.

The significant expense in the proposed budget is $1.7 million capital outlay that includes replacing the air handlers on the township hall roof, improving the township hall parking lot and asphalt curbs, as well as improving the basement to accommodate the assessor who will move in next year.

Also significant is the lack of a healthy allocation for road improvements as in past years. "We are only setting aside dollars for projects that we thought would go this year," Yack said. Those projects include Koppernick, landscaping on the extension of Morton Taylor, Ford to Warren, for example.

"We are doing nothing new," Yack continued. "People said 'no' to spending money on roads. They believe it is Wayne County's responsibility. We have encouraged Wayne County to deal with our problems. We said to people we would do as much as we could as the opportunities arose with developers or a combined effort. We don't see any of that in 1996."

In the next year, however, Wayne County will widen Canton Center Road at $8-9 million and the extension of Morton Taylor at $1.6-$1.8 million. Wayne County is receiving state and federal money for the projects.

As far as new hirings, Yack said there are a few, such as in the Police Department, where some civilian public service officers will be hired. No hirings are planned for the Summit on the Park community center and Pheasant Run Golf Course. "The new hirings for both were in 1995," he said. "At some point there will have to be an assistant manager at the Summit. But we need to see where we stand financially."

While Yack does not expect the Summit to be self-sufficient, he does expect it from the Pheasant Run Golf Course. "In fact, we believe it will produce a surplus like Fellows Creek Golf Course does," he said. "The idea is to use the surplus from these operations that do well for facilities like the Summit."

S'craft board ponders paring health care costs

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

In an attempt to slow the rising cost of providing health care for employees, Schoolcraft College has hired a consultant to suggest strategies.

The board of trustees voted unanimously Wednesday, Aug. 23, to pay Great Lakes Strategies of Bloomfield Hills up to $30,000 to make suggestions.

Administrators had asked trustees to approve a plan to research only cafeteria-style insurance plans, but trustee Carol Strom objected.

"The only option we're being shown is the flexible spending," she said. "I'm concerned about the reaction that resolution is going to get from our staff members." The resolution was amended to permit research into other health insurance alternatives.

Schoolcraft vice president of business Adelard "Butch" Raby said the plan is to switch two non-union employee groups, executive and classified employees, to "unbundled" insurance packages next January if trustees approve. In that way, individual employees could mix and match coverage to assemble an insurance package suited to their needs.

However, the cost to taxpayers of Schoolcraft's health insurance is expected to continue rising even if all employees go to the unbundled package. "The cost of health care is beyond our control," Raby said. "What we're looking to do is manage the cost in the future."

Expansion of the program would depend on the willingness of the five unions representing Schoolcraft employees to accept the change.

■ 'I'm concerned about the reaction that resolution is going to get from our staff members.'

Schoolcraft trustee

College President Richard McDowell told trustees Wednesday that convincing the unions to accept cafeteria-style benefits won't be easy. "I don't see this as an easy job to sell," he said.

Two of those unions, representing administration and physical plant personnel, have agreed to one-year contracts at the college's behest. It is hoped, Raby said, that trustees and administrators will agree on an insurance package to offer by the time those one-year pacts expire.

Contracts with teachers and food service employees don't expire until 1998 and 1999, respectively. A contract with the Schoolcraft Association of Office Personnel union is being negotiated.

The contract for 43 physical plant employees represented by the Schoolcraft College Personnel Association was agreed on Wednesday by trustees.

The employees received a 3.25 percent total compensation increase, comprising a 2.5 percent pay increase and greater contributions to health insurance and retirement funds.

"This year, when we talked about settling contracts, we talked about total compensation," Raby said, meaning pay, health insurance and pension. "Historically, we would have only worried about that first number."

In terms of its budget, Schoolcraft is in good shape. For the fiscal year that ended June 30, revenue was $34,737,159, which is $189,761 more than anticipated.

Although enrollment was down, and tuition revenue fell short of projections by $396,454, an unexpected increase in interest income of $415,977 made up for it.

Summer enrollment was 1,091 students compared to 1,048 last year. College spokeswoman Saundra "Sam" Florek attributes the increase to efforts to recruit and retain students.

Hard numbers for the fall term are not in yet, but Florek said a slight increase is indicated so far.

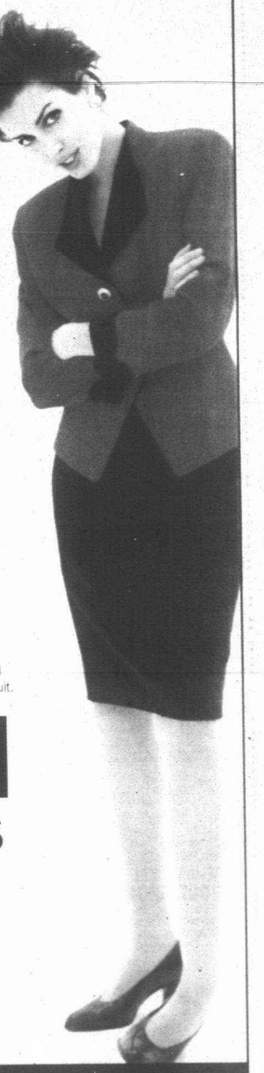

Trustees meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 27, in the Radcliff Center in Garden City. Trustees traditionally meet once a year at Radcliff.

Governor to split DNR, form new department

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Personalities aside, there are some real issues in Gov. John Engler's decision to split the Department of Natural Resources and create a new Department of Environmental Quality.

Engler has only one defender outside his political backers: State Rep. Tom Alley, D-West Branch, minority vice chair of the House Conservation Committee.

"I believe the restructuring of the DNR will elevate the status of conservation issues without lessening attention to the environment. I have always believed this," said Alley, who in the past has enjoyed verbally battering DNR managers.

The DEQ will become the 20th department of state government Oct. 1 unless the Legislature overturns Engler's executive order by majority vote.

A lot of name-calling is going on in Lansing. Five basic issues emerge:

1. No warning. Engler never campaigned on the issue, and he gave no advance announcement of his intentions.

Engler's order was "prepared in secret without consultation with groups representing the public interest," said the Michigan Environmental Council, a coalition of 20 organizations including Friends of the Rouge, Detroit Audubon and Sierra Club.

Engler has faced that criticism before: when he unilaterally ended the general assistance welfare program in 1991 and when he called for repeal of the school code in 1995, both after political campaigns in which the proposals never were voiced.

John Truscott, the governor's director of communications, offered no defense of Engler's secrecy. "I hope, in the future, the governor will be judged by his accomplishments and initiatives in environmental protection rather than the process by which he achieves those results," he said in a published letter.

2. No commission. DNR is governed by a policy-making and appellate commission. DEQ will have a single director who will decide appeals on environmental permits.

Drafters of the 1963 Michigan Constitution preferred solo directors: "The head of each principal department shall be a single executive unless otherwise provided in this constitution or by law" (Art. V, Sec. 3).

The constitution also provides for Senate confirmation of the director. In practice, the Senate has not voted on confirmation, letting gubernatorial appointments stand unless there is strong support for rejecting an appointee.

Groups like Michigan United Conservation Clubs and the Michigan Environmental Council argue for a commission form, subject to the Open Meetings Act, where decisions can be argued in public.

3. No staff. Engler left conservation officers in the DNR and set up the DEQ with little staff.

DEQ will have authority over these divisions: air quality, environmental response, surface water quality, underground storage tank, waste management, office of administrative hearings, office of the Great Lakes, and two environmental education offices, plus part of the geological survey.

DNR will keep the fisheries, wildlife, parks, law enforcement and real estate divisions.

MUCC's executive director, Tom Washington, argued that DEQ will "lack enforcement authority since no staffing is provided for this." Washington said DEQ's announced plan to contract with state police and county sheriffs' departments won't work because they "already are hard strapped to find time for enforcing criminal statutes."

Russ Harding, new DEQ director, called that argument "not true. In fact ECOs (environmental conservation officers) will be transferred to the DEQ. In the future we plan to contract for those services from the State Police and/or the DNR and phase the ECOs back to the DNR to enhance the CO ranks . . .

"By contracting for enforcement activities, we believe that the focus of individual investigators will be on enforcement 100 percent of the time and will alleviate investigators from burdensome administrative work."

The Michigan Environmental Council criticized "the likely diversion of budget and staff resources now devoted to environmental protection into new top supervisory positions at the DEQ."

4. No teeth. Harding himself is loathed by conservationists and Attorney General Frank Kelley. They fear he will cater to, rather than regulate, industry.

Harding feeds that criticism. "We need cooperative relationships with our customers — the public, industry and environmental groups," he said in written statement. His enemies say polluters shouldn't be considered "customers."

To express your opinion of the new DEQ and its director, write to your state senator and state representative, State Capitol, Lansing 48909.

have a single tractor. His grandfather used a horse and plow. "A tractor was the greatest thing in the world. I never got over that. You can't believe how much that saved farmers.

Robert Cassidy, who doesn't farm even in a small way other than to help his father-in-law, has six tractors, including a 1949 John Deere A, two 1937 F-12 Farmalls, and three 1938 F-14 Farmalls.

"It is something neat. I like old cars. But old cars are too expensive," Cassidy said, adding he likes the people who collect tractors and use them. There's no need to spiff them up when they are out plowing a field.

Cassidy — whose wife, Donna, bought him the F-12 and F-14 Farmals for Christmas — attends swap meets to get parts for the old tractors. "We went to Iowa to a tractor competition. We ran across the tractor junkyard there."

In fact, Dean Juergens, whose family owns Canton Power Equipment on Ford Road, restored a 1935 B Model John Deere and went home with Best of Show at the Tractor Expo in August in Grundy Center, Iowa.

In Kirchgatter's field, you could see the green of the John Deere tractors plowing row by row. "That is the color they stuck with consistently," Kirchgatter said of John Deere. "They are probably the only tractor company that has done this."

Kleinow said he plans to return to Kirchgatter's field or anyone else's next year because it is important to continue protecting the old tractors. "We want to try to get more younger people involved in this. When the older ones pass away, they will take a lot of information with them," said Kleinow, of the 2-Cylinder Club, which includes tractor collectors from Wayne, Washtenaw and Monroe counties.

Area restaurants help fight hunger

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

If you like to go out to eat, Thursday, Oct. 12, will be a particularly good day to do so.

Michigan Committee for World Food Day organizers are busy lining up restaurants to participate in the 7 Percent Solution, raising money for the Food Bank Council of Michigan. Since 1986, the event has raised more than $100,000.

"World Food Day is an international event," said Micki Grossman of Farmington Hills, project coordinator. The worldwide event is Oct. 16; the local fund-raiser is always held on the closest Thursday.

Grossman is a volunteer for the Jewish Community Council, one of the participating civic and religious organizations. This is her third year of being involved; when the local effort started, Miriam Imerman of the Jewish Community Council explained to the committee that although educational efforts were important, they weren't solving the problem.

Imerman had read of a program in Baltimore to raise money through the donation of 10 percent of restaurant receipts. "So that's how this event came into being," Grossman said.

In addition to raising money, the day is designed to raise awareness of hunger issues. The committee cites such statistics as:

- The number of Americans going hungry is up 50 percent in the last decade.
- About 30 million Americans are hungry; more than 10 percent of the population is regularly using soup kitchens, homeless shelters and other food distribution programs.
- There are 28 percent more Americans in food distribution programs than in 1980.
- In Michigan, the number in those programs rose 11 percent over just three years (1990-93).
- For those getting emergency food assistance in Michigan, 14 meals per month are still being missed.

Hunger issues have never been properly addressed, Grossman said, and government cutbacks have exacerbated the problem. "There's a lot of children, children who are going without meals." Seniors also are going hungry.

The vast majority of participating restaurants sign up from year to year, she said. She and other organizers aim for a variety of restaurants, to serve all tastes.

Restaurateurs get publicity, customer goodwill and tax credits, she said. "So how can you lose? Every year it attracts a little more interest."

Grossman, who has about 100 restaurants involved, will be lining up restaurants through Sept. 1. Interested restaurateurs can call (810) 539-4630. Other businesses, such as Royal Oak public relations firm 7th Street Productions, are also helping with donated services.

You can bet Grossman will be dining out that day. "Last year, I ate out three times. I went out for breakfast, lunch and dinner." She found it rewarding to see people involved.

Donations may be sent to Food Bank Council of Michigan, c/o Jewish Community Council, 6735 Telegraph, Bloomfield Hills 48301.

Participating restaurants include: The Redford Inn, 25800 Five Mile, Redford; all Ram's Horn locations; Buddy's Livonia, 33605 Plymouth Road, Livonia; John Edwards Restaurant, 9910 N. Telegraph, Redford; Buddy's West, 31646 Northwestern, Farmington Hills; Marco's Dining & Cocktails, 32758 Grand River Ave., Farmington; Sweet Lorraine's Cafe, 29101 Greenfield, Southfield; and the Trattoria Bruschetta, Hotel Baronette, 27790 Novi Road, Novi.

Road improvements

Canton should reset priorities

Leadership is a funny thing. Sometimes the right decision is the popular one. Sometimes the unpopular decision is the right decision.

That could be the case if Canton officials this year put money aside to improve township roads. But in the wake of the defeat of the township's $12 million bond issue to improve roads in April, Canton officials apparently aren't planning to allocate any major portion of revenues in the new 1996 budget year, beginning in January, for road improvements.

That decision — if followed through — is short-sighted at best and punitive at worst. As the fastest growing community in southeastern Michigan, Canton is in need of good and safe roads.

According to Supervisor Tom Yack, the people have spoken. They don't want their tax money used to improve roads. But is that a perception or the truth?

Informational meetings preceding the April election drew little more than 40 residents. The bond proposal fell to defeat by only 48 votes. Turnout was 15.5 percent, or 5,468 of the township's 35,175 registered voters.

Without more information, that seems more an issue of apathy than voters not wanting their roads fixed.

True, roads are the responsibility of Wayne County, which has come through for Canton, particularly considering the amount of revenues the county has to work with from a static gas tax. For the past eight years or so, however, Canton has spent its own money on roads, including offering local matches to entice the county to do its share.

Why is the township stopping now? It is wonderful to have one of the healthiest housing markets in the southeastern Michigan and to boast about the community's progress with the Pheasant Run Golf Course and Summit on the Park community center. But the barest of necessities — good roads to reach these places — is being put on a financial back burner and setting Canton back a step.

Voters have spoken before at the polls. Not too many years ago, voters said they didn't want to pay for a bond issue to build a community center. A $13 million Summit on the Park community center is nearing completion in Heritage Park.

Township officials say they are not using direct local tax dollars to finance the project. But federal block grant money and landfill tipping fees are among the methods used to finance the center — money that perhaps could have been used for something else. But township officials obviously felt the need for a community center was paramount.

On the other hand, approximately $5 million in bonds were sold — without a community vote — to build the new Pheasant Run Golf Course. Both the Summit and the golf course are drawing attention to Canton.

The need for good roads is equally important. Township officials should lead the community down the right road by allocating money in the 1996 general fund for road improvements.

Labor can mold bright future

In most of the industrialized world, organized labor marches on May Day. The origin is socialist. In the U.S., attorneys and judges use the first of May to celebrate Law Day, a fairly recent phenomenon.

In the U.S., Labor Day has been the first Monday in September. Until the 1960s, it was a big deal for unionists to parade down Woodward Avenue and, in election years, hear the Democratic presidential nominee.

No more. The parade has faded into virtual insignificance. Today's unionists are more likely to be closing the cottage on Black Lake, near the UAW Education Center, or tuning up the snowmobile than singing "Solidarity Forever" in a parade. Others are sighting in their deer hunting rifles for a trip to the Upper Peninsula, only dimly aware of the violent copper miners' strikes in 1913-14.

That may be the best indicator of labor's success in America — its transition into the good life of the middle class.

Labor Day 1995 seems less of a day for celebration than past years, given the struggles facing unions striking the Detroit Newspaper Agency. But this experience is not universal. The UAW, for instance, has made great strides in building a healthy working relationship with the Big Three that has benefited workers and their families.

Locally, United Parcel Service does an excellent job in managing its contract with the Teamsters. And, in doing so, United Parcel maintains a productive relationship with the Teamsters.

For United Parcel, safety is a high standard for all its drivers, and the company insists on very strict compliance. The employees and Teamsters understand why this is so important, and the standard is enforced. The result is a transportation company with an excellent safety record.

There are other local examples of productive relationships existing between labor and management. One is Schoolcraft College, which has worked very hard with its unions to develop and maintain labor peace.

Another shift in labor history worth noting is its membership demographics. Organized labor's image no longer is the blue-collar worker. The National Education Association at 1.9 million has almost twice as many members as the United Auto Workers. AFSCME, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, at 1.2 million dwarfs the United Steel Workers and the International Association of Machinists.

Even the American Federation of Teachers at 700,000 outranks the United Rubber Workers. The Postal Workers Union also outpaces the Retail Store Union, United Paper Workers and United Mine Workers.

Organized labor's chief bastion of strength is governmental workers, not those who sweat in factories, mines and stores. At the 1992 Democratic National Convention, the chief (friendly) rivalry in the posh hotel corridors of Manhattan was whether the NEA or AFSCME had the largest bloc of delegates.

This Labor Day, everything is not rosy. But there still is cause to celebrate. The UAW, United Parcel, Schoolcraft and others are pointing to the possibility of a new era in which the real long-term interests of labor are realized. Overdue but coming.

Relative question

Regarding "Relative problem: Schools must change policy," once again the editorial staff has failed to do its homework when editorializing about the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Nepotism can be an insidious problem in a school district, but this incidence does not smack of impropriety.

In another school district, where I work, the following qualifications would be highly sought after. The fact that this candidate was a relative of a hard-working employee of the system would only enhance the appointment:

- Lifelong member of the community;
- Graduate of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools (with honors);
- Current member of the community;
- Graduate of the University of Michigan (with honors);
- Major in Spanish and biology;
- Daughter of a valued school district employee. What a compliment to a school district to have one of its own come back to pass on what has been given to her by her community.

Much has been made by The Observer in the past few weeks of the new hires this year. Every teaching hire that has been profiled in the paper has sounded to me as if wise hiring practices prevailed. To pass up this particular candidate merely because a parent is a para-pro in the district is ludicrous.

Our neighborhood has been celebrating this appointment by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. We invite all of the district's family, including the newspaper, to celebrate with us.

Carole Jacobs, Canton

Put safety first

Let's not have another child KILLED trying to cross Morton Taylor going to or from Hulsing School.

A child's life was taken (or badly injured) at Hanford, Saltz at Gordon Street, Ann Arbor Trail and Sheldon Road. Traffic lights were installed and an over-head walkway almost immediately.

Why is a road kill necessary?

Statement questioned

I read with interest your accounting of Mr. Bolen's remarks to the Plymouth-Canton School Board on Aug. 14. Bolen is to be commended for the great effort he put forth in preparing his presentation. I was at the meeting and found his remarks notable. However, your report neglected to include a brief comment that Bolen made that reduced the noteworthiness of his comments.

Bolen stated that Plymouth-Canton teachers will receive over a 13 percent raise this year. In an aside he indicated this was true for approximately 30 percent of the P-C teachers. The remaining 70 percent will receive considerably less than this increase. My colleagues and I who are at the top of the pay scale have each contributed more than 10 years of professional experience and increased skills to the students of this district. Many of us have also attained additional degrees and attended numerous workshops to expand our experience levels. I will receive a 1.03 percent increase during the 1995-96 school year.

What is paid to the professional staff is of interest to us all. I hope that the Plymouth Observer will continue to attend to the details that are presented at board meetings so that all citizens will have correct information.

Joanne Kokoszka, Plymouth

'Save the doves'

Although public opinion polls unanimously show opposition to opening up a mourning dove hunting season in Michigan, it has been said that the state House of Representatives may pass SB 529, which would declare our mourning doves as game birds, because of pressure from such pro-hunting organizations as the Michigan United Conservation Clubs and, of course, the National Rifle Association, both headed by Michigan's own Tom Washington.

Senate Bill 529 is now in the House Committee on Conservation, Environment, and the Great Lakes, where committee members will decide the bill's and doves' fate in September.

It is imperative that Westland area residents who oppose our doves being added to the hunting hit list call Rep. Eileen DeHart, who sits on the deciding committee, at (517) 373-2576.

Phone calls from DeHart's district are very important. This bill has already passed the Michigan Senate and is expected to move quickly through the House as well.

Let's save the dove, but kill the bill!

Air clashes against Third Reich remembered

BY JOHN G. BATSAKIS
GUEST COLUMNIST

We are former members of the 8th Air Force that flew through flak fields of anti-aircraft fire that filled the sky with thousands of shells exploding at altitude and belching forth countless numbers of whirling and falling deadly jagged pieces of sharp and blunt metal bent on the destruction of the American bombers.

An equal and many times a greater challenge faced by members of the 8th Air Force was the intensive and most savage display of aerial warfare caused by the confrontation of two huge air armadas that had as their foremost goal the annihilation or total destruction of the other.

As the days began to lengthen early in 1944, the United States 8th Air Force heavy bombers were fueled and armed. The valiant, young Americans were eager to man their war machines, the fortresses and liberators, and to be accompanied by their aggressive fighter escorts, and to attack in force their targets, the German fighter aircraft factories, synthetic oil refineries, munition plants, railroad centers, and submarine pens.

In late February 1944, Allied weather reports indicated good visibility over Germany. The 8th Air Force was alerted for action. As the long white contrails threw their ribbons across the North Sea, Luftwaffe fighters scrambled to intercept. The world's two mightiest air armadas were about to clash in mortal combat four miles above Nazi-dominated Europe.

In the three weeks following, some of the most ferocious air battles ever fought took place in the skies over Germany. These clashes virtually decided which side was to command the air over the Western front and sealed the fate of the Third Reich.

The Luftwaffe was beginning to introduce the new long-nosed FW190D, with a Junkers Jumo liquid-cooled engine. This formidable machine represented a substantial improvement over the FW190A, with a maximum speed of 426 mph at 21,000 feet, a high rate of climb, phenomenal acceleration at the beginning of a dive, and a very tight turning circle. It was probably the best propeller-driven fighter to see service with the Luftwaffe during the war.

The high-pressure area which developed over central Germany on Feb. 19, 1944, brought with its clear skies that endured for a week. During this "big week' from Feb. 19 to 25 the U.S. 8th Air Force put up its most concentrated effort of the war so far, 3,300 bomber sorties dropping 6,000 tons of bombs on targets.

The Germans deployed fighters skillfully. Radar gave warning of American formations assembling over England and a flexible organization enabled fighters to be quickly summoned to the combat zone — sometimes from all over western Germany, Holland, Belgium and northern France.

The bomber box occupying the lower portion in the leading wing seemed to bear the brunt of fighter attacks. This hazardous position was taken in turn by the bomber crews. The Luftwaffe knew well that the lead ship carried specially trained crews. These became prime targets for the fighters.

The American escort flew a weaving protective pattern with maybe two squadrons of a group 3,000 feet or 4,000 feet above the bomber boxes. A third squadron provided top cover 2,000 feet or 3,000 feet higher. German interceptors had to run the gauntlet of both the top-cover escort and the lower echelons of U.S. fighters before reaching their prey — the bombers.

The German priority was to destroy the bombers. To this end, their fighters were equipped with more and more cannon guns at the expense of machine guns.

The initial bomber raids made in late February 1944 had been aimed primarily at the German aircraft industry. Although some loss in production was suffered, the dispersal of manufacturing facilities that the Germans had achieved since autumn 1943 made the attacks less effective than the Allies hoped.

Only a week after the huge air battles of late February 1944, the 8th Air Force attacked "Big B" (Berlin), by daylight. (Call Reichsmarschall Hermann Goring, Mr. Meyers). A small force got through to the German capital on March 4, 1944, but the first mass raid to hit Berlin was on March 6, 1944, when 730 bombers set out from England at first light with an escort of 800 fighters.

The Luftwaffe put up 400 interceptors — nearly half of its available strength in the west. American fighter pilots claimed to have knocked down 81 for the loss of 11 U.S. fighters. But the bombers took a severe mauling and 80 of them never returned to England.

And yet the American fortresses and liberators returned to Berlin 600 strong only 36 hours later. All the valiant efforts of the German fighter pilots could not stem the overwhelming tide of the American onslaught.

The veterans of the 490th Bomb Group will always be deeply indebted and grateful for the heroic efforts and sacrifices made by members of the 8th Air Force who preceded us before the 490th Bomb Group became operational in the European Theater.

Hunches, research face off in school debate jargon

Competition" and "choice" are two jargon words you'll hear repeatedly, if you listen to the far right wing of educational politics.

Their hypothesis says that if schools must compete for students, and if parents have a choice of where to send their kids, then education will improve.

I call it a hypothesis, not a theory. A hypothesis is a glorified hunch about something that might be true, but so far there is little factual matter to support it. It should be distinguished from a theory, a general principle abstracted from a body of facts.

Under the right wing hypothesis, the State Board of Education, with the heavy-handed prodding of Clark Durant, has been advancing an ideological agenda that would undo many public school reforms of the past decade. On the sidelines, cheering, is Senate majority leader Dick Posthumus.

And so we are bombarded with recommendations for public school academies that would be free from rigid rules (we aren't told which rules are rigid and why the rules can't be changed), streamlined teacher certification, schools of choice, new forms of governance, and so on.

Durant even brought in a Wisconsin professor, Howard Fuller, who advocated a pell-mell rush into chartering. Naturally, Fuller had no results from his last job as Milwaukee superintendent to share with Michigan. Naturally, Durant invited in no one who disagreed with his hypothesis.

One gets the distinct impression they have no research, no experience, no facts, to support their ideology.

TIM RICHARD

"This has not been thought through," said Dorothy Beardmore, State Board member from Rochester and one of the few voices of sanity in the Republican Party. (Actually, the majority of the GOP probably believes Durant's hypotheses are inflated rhetoric, but only a few brave souls like Dorothy Beardmore will say so aloud.)

Julius Maddox, president of the Michigan Education Association, a union that is often selfish but sometimes wise, called for "sound, research-based" study before the state dives blindly into the depths of new hypotheses.

Rep. James Agee, D-Muskegon, minority vice chair of the House Education Committee, issued a rebuttal report to the Durant notions.

So why do Durant and his sheepish followers — Marilyn Lundy, Gary Wolfram, Sharon Wise and Ruth Braun — want to ram these hypotheses into law?

A teacher from Zeeland may have put his finger on it. Dirk Koorstra expressed a fear that the kind of autonomous schools Durant advocates "can be controlled by special interests."

In other words, the goal isn't to change the way all 1.6 million public school students are taught. The goal is to bring a few thousand from private schools into the fold and change things for a few thousand already in public schools under the stern gaze of the churches that guide these enclaves.

Clearly the Religious Right — a few fundamentalist Protestant churches that want to impose their sectarian practices on everyone through the force of school government — have been exposed and have had little luck taking over boards of education.

So they are endeavoring to fractionalize school districts with "charter academies," autonomous schools and such gimmicks, to create their little fiefdoms — at $5,000-plus a year per pupil from the state treasury.

State's irrational board could destroy education

In case you were on vacation, here's a summary of the recommendations adopted by the State Board of Education at its July and August meetings:

- Repeal the requirement for a tough, mandatory, core curriculum for all K-12 students.
- Permit new, autonomous school districts to be carved out of existing ones.
- Allow students (together with their basic education grant) to transfer from their home school district to another one.
- Remove the limits, currently 75, on the number of charter schools and make it easier to get charters approved.

Thoughtful readers of this column will be pleased that board president Clark Durant and his sidekick, Marilyn Lundy, backed away from requiring schools to teach creationism alongside evolution.

Durant wanted schools to teach "various theories" on the origin of life, not just scientific ones. Lundy argued that since there is no scientific evidence for evolution, claims that creationism is not supported by scientific evidence are irrelevant. (Adopting the device typically used by folks caught making silly remarks, Lundy later claimed she had been misquoted.)

Most troublesome was the board's rejection of a mandatory core curriculum, the necessary pre-condition for real school reform. Business leaders, particularly, have urged tough statewide standards geared to global skills competition, and in 1993 the Legislature adopted a package of school reform laws that required each district to follow a core curriculum.

Interestingly, the State Board's recommendation runs counter to its own public opinion survey, which indicated that 87 percent of Michigan residents think the state should set educational standards. So much for Durant's claim that the board's very conservative majority is "on the same wavelength" as the public on educational standards.

What is remarkable overall about the State Board's continuing assault on school reform is that it flies squarely in the face of a set of compelling facts:

Item: Our 1995 high school graduates ranked 13th in the country on their Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores. Michigan's scores in both the math and verbal portions of the SAT have been rising in recent years, although they are not up to the level reached in the 1950s and 1960s.

Item: The board's $620,000 public opinion survey indicated lukewarm (52 percent) support for more schools of choice and a strong (84 percent) endorsement for making charter schools follow the same rules as traditional schools. Yet the board majority wants more schools of choice and easier rules for charter schools.

PHILIP POWER

■ Most troublesome was the board's rejection of a mandatory core curriculum, the necessary pre-condition for real school reform.

Item: This school year marks the start of two more school reforms from the package passed in 1993. Instructional time will rise from 900 hours over a 180-day school year to 990 hours, while a new proficiency test will replace the MEAP assessment for 11th graders. The test is tough; it takes 11 hours and stresses reasoning over multiple-choice questions.

The chasm between the ideologically driven irrationality of the State Board's majority and the steady progress of school reform and the common sense attitudes of most Michigan citizens has grown very wide. Even conservative members admit that their rush to save our public schools by destroying them is driven by fear that the board's right-wing majority may not survive next year's election.

I wonder whether Gov. John Engler, now enormously preoccupied with running for vice president, has any idea how much embarrassment he risks by allowing his hand-picked State Board of Education to gyrate unchecked into outer space. Maybe everybody would be better off if the governor got back to running the state and reigning in some of his extreme friends.

Area women to walk bridge

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Sharron LaCasse of Garden City and Ann Seykell of Livonia will represent Wayne County Parks on Labor Day as thousands of individuals march across the Mackinac Bridge to mark the end of summer.

LaCasse and Seykell won the local version of a contest that was held in more than 80 park and recreation departments around the state.

The departments are all participants in the Walk Michigan program, whereby group walks in natural settings are arranged throughout the summer.

At every event participating pedestrians may enter the drawing for a free trip for two to the Mackinac Bridge Walk.

Although a first-time winner, this is Seykell's third year participating in the walk program. Seykell, 66, usually walks with her husband, Michael and her sister, Lil Bueshcer of Livonia. During the winter they walk in Wonderland and Westland malls.

She's been a walker for the last 10-12 years and has done the bridge walk twice before — in 1991 and 1992.

LaCasse said she usually rides a bicycle, but has joined the walkers eight times since last fall.

From 1981 to 1986, LaCasse walked across the Mackinac Bridge every year with her husband, who is now deceased.

So the experience is not new for her, but getting the VIP treatment will be. "You don't have to stand in line and wait for the bus to take you from Mackinac City to St. Ignace," she said, noting that Walk Michigan winners ride ferry boats across the Straits of Mackinac and are among the very first walkers to cross the 44-year-old suspension bridge.

LaCasse is an administrative assistant with the Crohn's & Colitis Foundation, Michigan Chapter, in Farmington Hills.

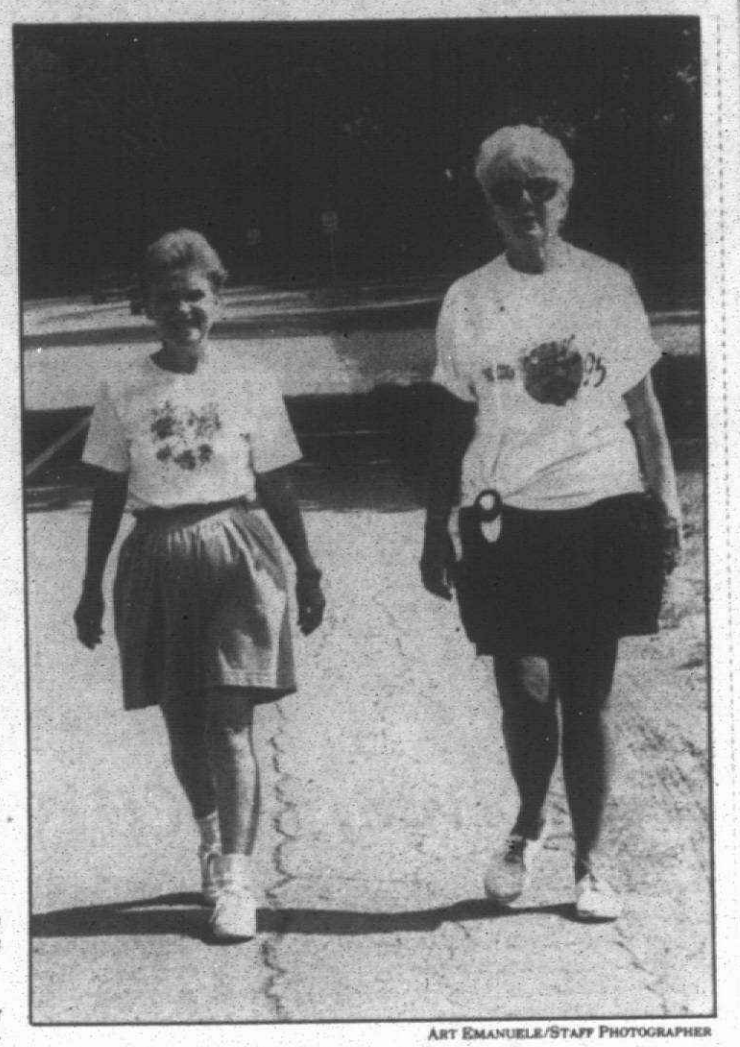

Wayne County Parks employee Anastasia "Tessie" Pitses, who supervises the local version of the Walk Michigan program, said there will be 250-300 people statewide who get free trips to the bridge walk, compliments of Blue Cross/Blue Shield and the Michigan Recreation and Parks Association.

The walkers traditionally gather in Audie's Restaurant in Mackinac City after the walk, Pitses said, and the governor generally stops to eat breakfast with them.

September Wayne County Walk Michigan events are as follows:

- 6 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 12, at Newburgh Pointe in Livonia.
- 9 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 16, at Nankin Mills in Westland.
- 6 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 20, at the Warrendale picnic area in Dearborn Heights.
- 6 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 26, at the Wilcox picnic area in Plymouth Township.

FAMILY ROOM

KAREN MEIER

Even in death there's a gift

One Sunday afternoon not long ago, I sat in someone else's family room. It was the family room of a neighbor of mine. During the hour and a half I was there, I saw Terri's eyes well up again and again. Her tears couldn't be helped. Just as Terri's young nephew couldn't be helped.

Terri's nephew was just 12 years old when he died four weeks ago, on Aug. 2. This young boy's death was tragic. He was a child. David was born in the spring of 1983, on April 28.

April 28th — like all those last days of April which every year overflow with promise and freshness and new life. I've always thought that April as a birth month makes perfect sense.

But David's death this August made no sense.

To save David's life would have required a liver transplant. But a liver just wasn't available. David's own liver was irreparably damaged by a rare genetic disease known as Wilson's Disease.

The trouble arose early in July. That's when jaundice set in, the yellowing of the young boy's eyes and skin. The doctors in David's town thought it might be hepatitis. The symptoms mimicked that disease — stomach pains, loss of appetite, loss of energy. And David gained 47 pounds in a matter of two weeks, all of it water weight.

Finally, the trip to Ann Arbor was arranged so specialists at Mott Children's Hospital could

She aims to take wrinkles out

■ Connie Kraska didn't start taking a close look at the skin care products she used until a routine physical turned up high level of nicotine in her blood even though she had never smoked. Now, she has developed a new approach to skin care that emphasizes a natural way.

Outer beauty: Personal care consultant Connie Kraska has developed specially formulated, all-natural products that are devoid of synthetic chemical compounds common to most skin-care products on the market today.

Wrinkles, cellulite, dull and sagging skin — all to be expected and accepted as we age, right?

Well, not necessarily, according to local entrepreneur and personal care consultant Connie Kraska. Kraska, of Farmington Hills, has developed a new approach to skin care and body toning to combat those dreaded visible effects of aging.

Specially formulated, all natural products — completely devoid of synthetic chemical compounds common to most skin care products on the market today — are the stuff of Kraska's budding Farmington Hills-based company, Eternal Youth Products, touted as "Skin Care for the 21st Century."

And, according to Kraska, a growing number of customers are discovering the "inner health and outer beauty" they always wanted.

"We all want results, of course. We want to look good for our age, to look the best we can," said Kraska, a 40-something former photographer and mother of two. "But the problem was that nothing that was out there worked and women became tired of spending money and not seeing the results they were promised.

"That's why there is such a demand for my skin care products. Many women see results in just a couple of days — and they are doing something good for the body, feeding it both inside and outside with these products."

Eternal Youth Products are a combination of herbs, botanical extracts, minerals and vitamins which nourish the body by stimulating circulation and cell regeneration, building elasticity, balancing body fluid metabolism and helping to release trapped wastes and pollutants.

Bath crystals, skin cleansers and mists, toners, body oils and lotions make up the skin care program. And since the products are "all natural, they are biologically compatible with our bodies," she said.

"It's so important for people to take responsibility and become aware of what they are putting on their skin," Kraska said. "Too many people don't realize that more than one-half of whatever is going on the skin is going into the blood and the tissue, too. What we put on our skin is absorbed into the body, and so much of that is what I call junk."

See SKIN CARE, 14A

Skin care

You need only to look at the ingredients of "most skin care products today, and you'll see that so many of them are 12 syllable chemicals," according to Kraska.

"People don't really know what they are putting on their skin. All that junk gets trapped inside and that can be really dangerous," she said.

Kraska first became interested in developing safe, yet effective, skin care products several years ago after using a cream which contained nicotine acid. During a routine physical, a high level of nicotine was detected in her blood though she had never smoked. She traced the nicotine to the cellulite cream which was made with nicotine acid.

"Here I was, using a product that contained a proven carcinogen, and hadn't even realized it," she said. "So I started searching for products that were all natural and that worked, but found none. Then I decided to do a lot of research on herbs and botanicals and all the healing, nourishing properties they have and worked with a cosmetic chemist here in the metro Detroit area and we came up with the formulas."

Special treatment: Connie Kraska shows Linda Saranen how to use her facial cleanser which she says is "all natural" and "biologically compatible with our bodies."

Eternal Youth Products contain no petroleum products, alcohol or animal byproducts.

According to Kraska, people are so quick to use Retin-A, alpha hydrox or turn to a surgical solution like a facelift to look better, but that's not necessary.

"You can be kind to your skin and find your pure beauty with our balanced system of body care products," she said.

Eternal Youth Products and a complete catalog detailing the product line and ingredients are currently available through mail order. Kraska is anxious to increase distribution which now includes the metro Detroit area, as well as some locations on the East Coast and parts of the western side of the country.

have a look. And within a day, David's sickness was given a name, Wilson's Disease.

His name was put on a list for receiving an organ donation. He was put on the Class 1 list — top priority. He had a common blood type — O positive — and he was a 12-year-old with a large build and could have even accepted an adult liver, if one had become available. Things, it appeared, were not bleak. As a matter of fact, everyone was hopeful, including Terri and her sister, David's mom.

The doctors had said that the wait for a liver for someone with David's medical profile would be anywhere from one to two weeks. No longer. David died during his 13th day at Mott.

The sadness, the frustration, the hopelessness, the helplessness, all understandable.

But the death itself, the death of this almost sixth-grader, is not understandable. It goes against sense when a child precedes his parents in death. That's not how it was meant to be.

I tried to put myself in David's mother's shoes. I tried to think of watching my very own son get as sick as her son did and then having to stand by him so helplessly. And I tried to think of watching skilled, almost God-like doctors become baffled and helpless as well. I tried to think of the words I would to say to my child. And that's when I just couldn't think anymore.

Of course, nothing can be done for David now. His time on this sweet earth has come to a final, irrevocable end. A young boy gone forever as summer played on.

The gift of life, a transplant, could have saved David. But the miracle didn't happen. Actually, I think miracle is the wrong word here because it indicates that saving David's life was next to impossible. But it was not impossible. It was well within reason. Except for one thing . . . the little stickers which are so easily available at the secretary of state's office. Not enough of them are stuck on the back of driver's licenses.

I have that small sticker stuck on the back of my driver's license. It says that I'll donate my organs in the event of my death. To put that sticker on my license didn't take me but a second and it certainly didn't hurt. And when someone follows through with my wishes stated on that sticker, that won't hurt either. As a matter of fact, thinking about it now, it makes me feel the opposite of hurt. It makes me feel good. I won't be needing my organs anyway when the breath has gone out of my body, so if someone else can live because of them, then that is good. What greater gift can there be?

If more people had just put that simple little sticker on the back of their license, young David could have been saved and the sixth grade and the world would have been that much better for it.

So here is a plea. If donating an organ seems to be the right thing for you to do, if it doesn't go against any of your values and beliefs, then by all means, take the time now, even before it's time to renew your license, and stop in at the secretary of state's office to pick up the little sticker that says you'll be an organ donor. And tell your family so they know about it. And then put that gift of life sticker on the back of your license.

It doesn't hurt. It heals.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON OBJECTIONS TO FIRE AND POLICE PROTECTION SPECIAL ASSESSMENT LEVY

Notice is hereby given that the Charter Township of Canton Board of Trustees will hold a Public Hearing pursuant to Public Acts 33 and 181 of 1951, as amended, for the purpose of hearing objections to defraying the expenses of the Fire and Police Protection Districts by a Special Assessment upon the property in the said districts for the tax levies effective December 1, 1995.

DATE: Tuesday, September 12, 1995
TIME: 7:00 P.M. to 9:00 P.M.
PLACE: Canton Township Administration Building
Board Meeting Room
1150 S. Canton Center Road

On May 18, 1976, a Fire Protection Special Assessment Levy was approved by the voters, and at the June 22, 1976 Public Hearing, the Board of Trustees for the Charter Township of Canton unanimously approved the creation of a Fire Protection Special Assessment District for the entire Township.

On August 27, 1977, a Police Protection Special Assessment Levy was approved by the voters, and at the September 13, 1977 Public Hearing, the Board of Trustees for the Charter Township of Canton approved the creation of a Police Protection Special Assessment District for the entire Township.

The 1996 estimated budgets submitted by the Public Safety Director and the Administration are as follows:

FIRE DEPARTMENT		POLICE DEPARTMENT
Salaries & O/T	$2,201,902	Salaries & O/T	$3,941,155
Fringe Benefits	863,514	Fringe Benefits	1,498,146
Capital Outlay	397,400	Capital Outlay	369,250
Operations	374,822	Operations	954,073
Total	$3,837,938	Total	$6,762,624

The proposed millage rates are as follows:

	1994	P.A. 5 Limit	1995	Increase (Decrease) over 1994
Fire Millage	1.0915	N.A.	1.0915	0.0000
Police Millage	5.1508	N.A.	5.1508	0.0000
Charter Millage	1.1100	1.0937	1.1100	0.0000
Total	9.3523		9.3523	0.0000

The Charter Millage is more than what the Township could levy under P.A. 5, 1982 (Truth in Taxation). The property tax Charter Millage rate proposed to be levied to support the proposed 1996 General Fund budget will be a subject of this hearing.

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON
NOTICE OF ENVIRONMENTAL DETERMINATION
PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD
HARRISON DRAIN CLEANING

Pursuant to an environmental review mandated by 43 FR 6030 (February 10, 1978), implementing E.O. 11988, the Charter Township of Canton has determined that the Harrison Drain, located south of US-12 and adjacent the Conrail railroad tracks beginning at Haggerty Road and extending east of Lotz Road (a total of approximately 3,000 feet), should be cleaned of debris in an area limited to the drain bed and adjacent bank, notwithstanding an area of wetland immediately west of I-275 and adjacent the drain.

The determination was made with due consideration of the following: (1) The project must be located in the drainage course and immediate bank area because that is the only practicable location to clean the drain in the project area to prevent the flooding of adjacent properties. The work will not be in a floodplain or wetland. (2) In determining to do the drain cleaning, the Engineer considered the impact on adjacent properties and the adjacent wetland. Project alternatives were considered including that of no action. It was determined that without drain cleaning the adjacent properties would continue to experience flooding and such flooding would continue to worsen over time due to increasing blockage due to the growth of vegetation in the drain. Changing the slopes of adjacent properties or redirecting runoff to another drain are financially impracticable and would result in greater environmental impacts than removing the vegetation in the subject drain segment. (3) The drain cleaning will be coordinated with the Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) and the Wayne County Office of Public Services (owner of the drain). (4) The NFIP (National Flood Insurance Program) criteria are demonstrably inappropriate for the proposed action because the work will not take place in a floodplain. (5) Publication of this notice will be in the legal newspaper of Canton Township on the dates indicated below. (6) The public comment period will run August 31 to September 18, 1995. (7) To minimize the effect on the adjacent wetland, the Engineer will specify the construction equipment to be used, the time of year that construction takes place, how and where debris will be disposed of, soil erosion and sedimentation measures, and replacement of vegetation. (8) The drain cleaning will not affect natural or beneficial floodplain values because the work will not take place in a floodplain or wetland and steps will be taken to minimize affects on the adjacent wetland. (9) Other involved agencies are the DNR and the Wayne County Office of Public Service, Conrail, and the Dept. of HUD.

The public comment period is specified in paragraph (6). Written comments or requests for information should be directed to: Gerald Martin, Development Specialist, Resource Development Division, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, Michigan 48188, (313-397-5417), or Susan Folsom, Engineering Services, (313-397-5404).

Zonta fashion show benefits WRC

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

It will be "Fashions with a Flair," when friends of the Schoolcraft College Women's Resource Center gather at Parisian at Laurel Park Place in Livonia Thursday, Sept. 14.

Presented by the Zonta Club of Northwest Wayne County and Parisian, the fashion show and dessert will feature the "very, very latest styles," according to Jane Bassett, special events coordinator for Parisian.

The evening will begin with miniature pastries and flavored coffees at 6:30 p.m. followed by the fashion show at 7 p.m. The half-hour show will feature career wear, play wear and special occasion clothing by designers like Jones New York, Ricke Freeman, Nightline and Carmem Marc Valvo.

The show also will touch on a rising trend in the American workplace, casual day, with models showing off the business casual designs of Lizsport and Barry Bricken, Bassett said.

Zonta is a longtime supporter of the work being done at the Women's Resource Center, making contributions to the WRC's scholarship fund. However, each year, the WRC will receive the proceeds from the fashion show.

"Zonta of Northwest Wayne County has had many years' affiliation with the Women's Resource Center, helping with the scholarship fund," said Pat Harris, club president. "This year we decided to designate our once-a-year fashion show proceeds to go to the Women's Resource Center."

Harris is hoping for a standing-room-only crowd for the event. The fashion show will be staged on the store's second floor, with seating for 175 available, and Harris would like nothing better than selling a "minimum of 175" tickets.

Tickets are priced at $20, show goers will receive a discount coupon offering $20 off a purchase of $125. Parisian will be open, so participants will have a chance to shop and use their coupons after the show, Harris said.

"The Women's Resource Center and in particular the volunteers are putting a great effort in helping to sell the tickets," Harris said.

Barbara Campau, the WRC volunteer programs coordinator, is thankful for Harris' compliment. Now is an especially busy time at the center, with the influx of students in need of financial help to pay for classes, books and the like, she said.

Benefits like the fashion show and the center's first-ever golf outing, the Tee Time Classic, which will be held Friday, Sept. 8, at the Cattails Golf Club in South Lyon, are ways the WRC raises money for scholarships for women.

At a time when federal support is declining, the center is seeing more and more women in need of assistance. Last year, the center provided $34,882 in scholarships, recovering tuition, books, child care and licensing, to 152 different individuals.

Tickets for "Fashions with a Flair" are available by calling Elaine Tomalty at the Women's Resource Center at (313) 462-4443, or Pat Harris at (313) 420-2923 or (313) 712-4141.

CHS to offer training for hopice volunteers

People interested in doing volunteer hospice work can register for the fall training sessions offered by Community Hospice Services.

CHS is offering the volunteer education program free to potential volunteers in an effort to further its mission of compassionate patient/family care as well as ongoing community education.

The eight-week class will be 9 a.m. to noon, beginning Tuesday, Sept. 26, at CHS's Westland offices, 32932 Warren Road, Suite 100. The course will focus on all aspects of hospice care and will provide a complete overview of hospice and summarize several aspects of patient care.

Guest speakers will address such pertinent topics as comfort and direct care measures, spirituality and the hospice family and family dynamics. The area of grief also will be explored and volunteers will learn how the loss of a loved one impacts a person's life from childhood through adulthood.

"Volunteers come from every walk of life and nearly every age group," said Doreen Vivyan, director of volunteer services at Community Hospice Services. "So often I hear that a volunteer is very grateful for past kindnesses shown to their family during a loved one's illness, and they in turn would now like to 'give back' to the community. Many people feel they can use the same skills they learned in caring for their family member to assist someone else."

Not only do volunteers give to others, they also receive back.

"Our dedicated volunteers indicated that they receive a sense of satisfaction from helping others," Vivyan said. And Elaine Flagg of Livonia, a CHS volunteer for more than 12 years, agrees.

"Hospice has given back to me more than I can ever give to the program," said Flagg.

"The caliber of our volunteers is impressive. Each person generously brings his or her own special gift to blend so beautifully with the needs of our hospice agency," said Vivyan. "Our compassionate volunteers give of themselves in many ways and many more areas. Each and every volunteer has unique skills and talents. These qualities are channeled to meet the needs of our patients and their families and to be rewarding to our volunteer and helpful to our agency in furthering our commitment to the community."

Volunteer activities can involve working directly with patients and families, or those numerous service functions which support the delivery of patient care. In fact, Community Hospice Services also is offering a free orientation program for individuals who would like to volunteer in the areas of staff support, Speaker's Bureau, marketing or fund-raising.

People who are interested in learning more about the hospice concept of care can attend an orientation session 5:30-8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 6, at the Westland office.

Individuals interested in volunteering for Community Hospice Services can contact Doreen Vivyan at (313) 522-4244.

Community Hospice Services was established in 1981 to offer compassionate, skilled home care to those individuals who face an incurable illness. Hospice offers supportive care, promotes quality of life and provides comfort and emotional healing for the patient and family members in western Wayne, southern Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties.

In addition to its Westland location, Community Hospice Services also has an office at 127 S. Main St., Plymouth.

Waldorf Education
75 years of Experience
Talk & Tour
One of the best kept secrets in education today is the international Waldorf School movement, founded in 1919 by the noted scientist and philosopher, Rudolf Steiner. Today Waldorf education, with over 60 schools, is the largest and fastest growing private, non-profit educational institution in the world. What makes Waldorf schools different is the belief that the whole child must be nourished through education intellectually, physically and emotionally.
At the Waldorf Kinder House, you can be secure in the knowledge that your pre-school and kindergarten-aged child is well cared for and gently nurtured along a path that develops your child's special gifts and abilities.
Imagination and creative skills are piqued throughout the day by the child's eager participation in a rich curriculum that includes language, musical and visual arts, creative drama, baking, nature walks and gardening and traditional nursery and kindergarten games. Children are also introduced to enrichment programs in music, foreign language and a form of creative movement called Eurythmy. Field trips, ethnic and holiday celebrations, plays and puppet shows provide additional meaningful educational experiences.
"Waldorf Philosophy strives to create an environment in which children will form a strong foundation of creativity and imagination." When they approach academic subjects in school we want children to be able to envision a whole myriad of possibilities, of ways of viewing the world and its opportunities, says Marsa Sabatini, "We want to kindle the flame of a lifelong love of learning."
Now accepting fall enrollment, the Waldorf Kinder House offers flexible programs to meet the needs of individual families. Half and full-day programs are available, with extended care until 6:00 p.m.
"Receive the child in reverence, educate him in love, let him go forth in freedom." –Rudolf Steiner
"Being personally acquainted with a number of Waldorf students, I can say they come closer to realizing their own potential than practically anyone I know." Joseph Wizenbaum, Professor MIT, Author, Computer Power and Human Reason"

Writer feels her experiences deeply

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene,

I would appreciate it very much if you can give me an analysis of my handwriting. I read your column and find it very interesting.

In the evenings, I would like to do some volunteer work, and it's important for me to be directed in the right area. I work in the clerical field and would like to do part-time volunteer work. I am right-handed and 57 years old. Thank you so very much.

S.J., Southfield

Pervasive in this handwriting are signs of a rapid pace. This suggests a person with a facile mind and quick perceptiveness that can make flash judgments.

Our writer is always hurrying and can become impatient with delays. Most of the time she strives for efficiency as she pursues her daily routine.

She is a person who feels her experiences deeply and remembers them for long periods of time, happy or sad. Forgiving and forgetting does not come without effort on her part.

This is an independent woman whose basic nature is peace-loving and empathic. While she likes to avoid friction, she sometimes has a little difficulty accepting authority figures. She can become firmly based, thereby creating problems for herself and possibly others. This may be a carry-over from early life when she had problems with the male authority figure.

Seemingly, she feels a little unappreciated at this particular time. Discouragement seems close at hand. Criticism has a way of touching her Achilles heel.

Relationships with others can be somewhat inconsistent. At times she is friendlier than at other times, leaving other people wondering just where they stand with her. She also is reticent about sharing her personal problems. She probably looks within herself for answers. So people who would like to help her do not always know when she needs them.

Some inconsistencies in her handwriting suggest insecure feelings. This gives rise to changeable moods, disposition and confidence level. The tenacity here is a good sign and tells us she does not give up easily.

In the matter of finances, she sometimes gets carried away, spending more than originally intended. Adhering to a strict budget may present a challenge.

Social mores and customs are important to our writer. She sometimes would like to step aside from her traditional lifestyle. On the other hand, she finds this is not easy for her to do.

Volunteer work is very commendable and would probably be beneficial to both you and those you help.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Objective feedback is welcome.

Bird Watcher: Heidi Marie Finley's artwork is inspired by 30 different species of birds living and raising their families on the 1 1/2 acres surrounding her Canton Township home. She creates dynamic pastels such as this green toucan (top). Another pastel entitled "Soulfrog" (above) by Finley questions "how this frog happened to land on this blade of grass."

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Heidi Marie Finley keeps binoculars on the cupboard by the kitchen sink in case she spots a bird worth watching outside the window of her Canton Township home.

Finley's untold hours studying the behavior of 30 different species of birds on the 1/4 acres that surround her home show in the pastel drawing of a great gray owl with family. Two young nestlings under mama's watchful eye, although not old enough to fly, appear ready for mischief.

Finley, a 31 year old avid birder/artist, is one of more than 100 exhibitors taking part in the Plymouth Community Arts Council's Artists and Craftsmen Show Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9-10, at Central Middle School in Plymouth. Visitors will be able to see paintings, photography, jewelry, fiber, wood, calligraphy and dried flowers. Held in conjunction with the Plymouth Fall Festival, the 24th annual show is the primary fund-raiser of the arts council.

Finley's love for birds is evident in each stroke of a green toucan, and a sable brown merganser duck.

"Birds come in all shapes and sizes. Each species has different shaped bills," said Finley who edits the Washtenaw Audubon Society Newsletter.

"I like watching their social activities. Some live alone; others live in large colonies. Some have peculiar habits. Chickens are very social and squabble among themselves."

Finley knows this first hand because she raises chickens. In fact, she has picked up one of her mother's habits of "taking in whatever animal needed a home." Last spring, Finley and her husband, David, as foster parents in the Huron Valley Bird Rescue, raised 25 Mallard ducks who'd lost their mother.

"I feel other animals besides ourselves are worth learning about and knowing because we share this earth," said Finley who graduated from Eastern Michigan University with a bachelor of fine arts degree. "I hope it helps to be able to see the beauty through my artwork."

Finley's focus was not always birds. A yearlong study of the work of late 19th century photographer Eadweard Muybridge led to Finley's exhibit of large scale oil paintings depicting the movements of animals in the EMU Intermedia Gallery in her senior year.

From Dec. 18 to-Feb. 1 she will have a one-person show of her pastels at the University of Michigan Medical Center where she works part time as a phlebotemist.

"I really work from the heart. I've been drawing lizards, fish and all mammals ever since I can remember. I credit my mother for teaching me to appreciate nature, and both my parents for supporting me in my art. They sent me off to art school without batting an eyelash," said Finley who studied pastel with Jon Onye Lockard at Washtenaw Community College.

For others who may be interested in becoming birders Finley recommends attending a meeting of the Washtenaw Audubon Society at Matthaei Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor.

"I encourage people to start looking. Watch and see how the sparrows act differently from the blue jays. Notice how they sit on the wire. Some sit so close their feathers touch. Others wouldn't be caught dead within 10 feet of each other. And watch how that changes with the season. How robins stick close together in early spring but later they're more spread out because they're interested in feeding their families."

Original pastels, color reproductions, and 30 different designs of notecards from Finley's "Feathers & Fur" mail order catalog business will be for sale at the Artists and Craftsmen Show. Whether your preference is bunnies or bathing black bears, the notecards come in packages of six with matching envelopes, priced at $4.50 for color, $3.50 for black and white.

In addition to the 100 artists and craftsmen, a booth will be available for Plymouth Canton Schools' students who wish to sell their artwork.

Young people are a focal point of the arts council which provides scholarships for students in all the fine arts as well as annual grants to teachers with the proceeds from the show.

Now moved into their new home on Sheldon Road, the arts council continues to support, educate and foster an appreciation for the arts in the community.

"One of the most exciting aspects of the new building is we've gone from offering six art classes a year ago to 30 classes," said show chairwoman Carolyn Simons.

"Art is something we need for serenity. You need a focus group like the arts council to bring it to the community. I don't think government can do that, and children must be exposed to the arts."

Plymouth Community Arts Council's Artists and Craftsmen Show

When: 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9-10.

Where: Central Middle School, Church and Main Streets, Plymouth.

MUSIC

Montreux brings out the best of the best

BY MITCH GENOVA
SPECIAL WRITER

Montreux Detroit Jazz Festival, Thursday, Aug. 31, to Monday, Sept. 4, is the largest free jazz festival in North America. Over 250,000 people from all over the country and world are expected to attend.

The 1995 Montreux Detroit Festival offers some exciting national headliners including pianist Ahmad Jamal, the Brecker Brothers, and Village Vanguard Orchestra, as well as some exciting national stars with local roots including saxophonists Charles McPherson, Kenny Garret and James Carter, and Straight Ahead.

But most of the music that fills the five-day, four-stage festival will come from the best of our own local jazz musicians.

Virtuoso pianist Gary Schunk of Redford who has played every Montreux Detroit Jazz Festival since the inception in 1979, values the Montreux tradition.

"I am really glad to see the efforts made to keep it going each year," he said. "It's an important tradition, it marks the passing of summer and identifies us to the rest of the world as an important jazz town. Besides, I met my wife, Joan at Montreux."

Bassist Don Mayberry of Farmington Hills who spends most of the year traveling with name entertainers including Mel Torme and Joe Williams, views Montreux as a really great treasure.

"It's great to see so many people enjoying good music," he said. A consummate sideman, Mayberry usually performs with several groups each year at Montreux, and he sees each performance as an opportunity to reach new people. "You always hope to touch people, heart to heart, and to get a positive response on a very human level," he said.

Since each year Montreux features the best of our local high school and college bands, the festival is also important for young musicians. Noted pianist and music educator Matt Michaels of Southfield has brought the Wayne State University Jazz Ensemble to Montreux each year. Montreux gives these young students the invaluable experience of playing in front of a live audience," he said. "And since they're playing the same venue as the pros, there is great peer pressure to do well."

For the past two years, fest-

Twins drawn to advertising

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

When Terri Bennett decided to start her own line of pet products, she wanted to feature an Irish Wolfhound on the label. To her, these gentle giants "represent the biggest and the best." After seeing a portrait Keith Rypkowski had done of an employee's dog, Bennett was sold on this young artist's talent.

The creative process took many hours as the 20-year-old Canton Township resident sought the right image. He drew hundreds of dogs rendered regally in line drawings as well as whimsical hounds resting, laying and sitting. Finally after filling an entire roll of paper, Rypkowski came up with a final design.

The result is his work will be seen by thousands of people when the new line of pet products, dealing with the problems of cleanup and odor control, hit the shelves after the first of the year.

"I really enjoy working with young up and coming artists because they have fresh ideas. Keith's design is very simple, bold, but simple," said Bennett who's owned Specialty Pet Supplies in Plymouth since 1979.

Rypkowski and his twin brother, Brian, are third-year students in the graphic communication department at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit. Both have drawn from the age of two. At age three, a greeting card design by Keith won him a Schwinn bicycle in a UPS contest.

Keith and Brian, both graduates of Plymouth Canton High School, devote untold hours to their art, although they sometimes take time out to rollerblade. Sports have never been their forte, but both were point guards on the basketball team when they were students at St. Mary's School in Wayne.

"I like going to the drawing board a lot. I enjoy coming up with ideas and concepts for everything from ads to packaging design," said Keith.

Brian's advertisement for Energizer batteries turns the energy beacons very cleverly into the Ren Cen towers.

Brian hopes to one day become involved with animation.

"I enjoy being able to play with a totally different medium," Brian said.

Both artists definitely are on their way to mastering the art of drawing. In their first two years at CCS they have learned to successfully take a concept from thumbnail sketch to final composition. Both are looking forward to interning this year at area advertising agencies, and both will go far in the field of commercial art.

Linda Ann Chomin is a free lance writer specializing in the visual arts. Her Artistic Expressions column appears weekly in the Arts & Entertainment section of the Observer Newspapers.

ival organizers have presented a wider variety of music at Montreux, covering a broader spectrum of the many kinds of music that are called jazz. Blues and boogie pianist Bob Seeley of Birmingham, a world-renowned exponent of early jazz styles, and a fixture at Charley's Crab in Troy, is appearing at Montreux for the second year in a row.

"It's really neat, a great honor. They have rounded at the styles to include Gospel music and blues. I get to reach another audience, give them something new. My music is well known in Europe, but in the United States, where it all started, people don't get to hear it," Seeley said.

For Sheila Landis, a well-known vocalist and Rochester native, Montreux is an important gathering together of the jazz community. Appearing at Montreux for the first time in several years, Landis has just released a new CD, which is receiving considerable air play.

"I consider myself a member of the jazz community, and I like to be involved in my community," she said. Landis sees Montreux as an opportunity to let other musicians hear what she is doing, and to see what others in her community are up to.

Veteran alto saxophonist Larry Nozero of Novi has played almost every Montreux Festival. His quartet was the first local group to appear at the Motreux, Switzerland Jazz Festival under the exchange program.

"I'm honored anytime anyone asks me to play," he said. "Montreux is a big event, but I feel honored whenever I take the stage."

Nozero who plays Monday evenings at DePalma's Ristorante in Livonia, performs frequently around town, but, he says, "for many musicians Montreux is the only time they get to be heard. It's the only visibility they get. That's really why Montreux is important."

To Eddie Nuccilli of Southfield, whose big band Plural Circle will close this year's festival, "Montreux is a prestigious event. The best of the best get to be heard and seen, if only for one weekend. At Montreux, for one long weekend, jazz is given its rightful place in people's attention."

Governor leads big Labor Day Walk

Michigan Labor Day festivities include the Mackinac Bridge Walk and Polish Day Parade.

■ Gov. John Engler will again this year lead the Mackinac Bridge Labor Day Bridge Walk on Monday, Sept. 4.

The Bridge Walk begins at 7 a.m. at the north end of the bridge in St. Ignace.

Walkers may begin their five-mile walk as late as 11 a.m. The fare is $1.50 per person. Those completing the walk will receive a numbered certificate.

■ 'At Montreux, for one long weekend, jazz is given its rightful place in people's attention.'

■ The Polish Day Parade is 1:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 4 in Hamtramck at Jos. Campus and Holbrook. The parade has grown in size to become the largest ethnic parade in Michigan. This year's parade honors World War II veterans and the end of World War II.

Mattingly paints Southwest designs including coyotes, cactuses, and lizards on blue denim shirts. She also handcrafts watchbands of turquoise and silver. The self-taught artist said, although she has never taken an art or craft lesson, she "found some latent artistic ability deep down inside."

If you went to school with Rose Abdoo, you might be tempted to say — "Who Does She Think She Is?" after hearing about her one woman show opening tonight at the Gem Theatre in Detroit.

"That's exactly what I want people to do," said Abdoo, 32, who grew up in Southfield, and now lives in Chicago.

"There are a lot of one-woman shows out there. I wanted mine to stand out. It has a double meaning. A lot of people might say, 'who does Rosie think she is doing a one woman show?' When people say, 'who does she think she is?' it helps advertise the show, and I like that."

Abdoo's show evolved from a monologue she wrote for a piece that was done with eight women, including MSU classmate Dorothy Milne who is directing this show.

"We all did 20 minutes about something that was happening in our lives. It seemed like I was always dieting and feeling guilty about not exercising, so I did my piece on that."

That monologue became the foundation for her 90-minute one-woman show on food and dieting. It was "enthusiastically received" by sold-out crowds in Chicago at the Organic Theater, and in Los Angeles at the Upfront Theatre.

"I did the show in Los Angeles at an over-eater's conference. My show is about personal acceptance," said Abdoo who grew up in a household where food and comfort were sometimes synonymous. She remembers not only watching her favorite TV shows, "Green Acres" and "Bewitched," but also what she was eating — Ritz crackers with jam.

"My show has something everyone can relate to," said Abdoo. "It's a quest for self-acceptance, and liking yourself. I consider myself overweight, but other people don't. It isn't how you look, it's how you feel inside that counts."

■ PREVIEW

As a performer, Abdoo said she is conscious about how she looks, and her one-woman show, grew out of that. The message is — "don't let dieting get in the way of personal acceptance."

After seeing the show in Chicago, her mother, Mary, who still lives in the house Abdoo grew up in Southfield, sister Lucia, and several friends encouraged her to try to bring the show to Detroit.

Word of Abdoo reached Chuck Forbes, owner of the Gem and State Theatres, and Theater District developer through a friend of his wife, JoAnne.

"She called and, said 'I saw the funniest show of my life in Chicago.' We're always out looking for shows of a variety of presentations for the Gem. I met Rosie and enjoyed her spontaniety during our meetings. I thought it would a great chance to get a hometown gal back on center stage."

Abdoo is hoping lots of people she grew up with come to see the show. She talks about people she knows in her act, and imitates some of her favorite TV characters including Lisa from "Green Acres."

Concidentally, Julie (Smith) Yolles, of Birmingham, who is media relations director for the Gem and State Theatres, in Detroit, remembers competing against Abdoo in high school forensic competitions at Southfield Lathrup High School.

"She went to Southfield High School, and we had mutual theater friends. She was very funny back then, and I'm pleased that she's doing so well as a comedienne."

Abdoo honed her comedic skills at Chicago's Second City Theatre, and performed in Detroit in 1990 at the Attic Theatre with the National Touring Company of The Secord City. She was most recently seen on NBC's "Pride and Joy," and the CBS pilot series "Meant For Each Other."

Abdoo dreams about doing her one-woman show in New York. "For me, to do your own work, and get laughs from your own work is rewarding."

Bloody 'Desperado' goes out for revenge

TICKETS PLEASE

JOHN MONAGHAN

Robert Rodriguez got Hollywood's attention when he directed "El Mariachi" for only a few thousand dollars south of the border. Though the movie, released by Columbia, didn't break box office records, he got the green light to reshoot with a big budget and actors.

The resulting "Desperado" now stars Antonio Banderas as the guitar player-turned-vigilante gunning for the drug dealer who killed his family. The oldest story in the book is given only a few new twists through clever camera work and the considerable charms of its star.

I can handle style over substance, but "Desperado" is so vacant of any genuine emotion that it works on no level other than purely visceral. Rodriguez has allied himself with Quentin Tarantino, but he's more akin to former Detroiter Sam Raimi, who took a similar stab at the genre with "The Quick and the Dead."

REVIEW

His action scenes are well-devised, using slow motion effects, rapid-fire editing, and countless rounds of ammunition. He wields a Western cliche like a taunt to the audience: You may have seen this scene before, but I bet it wasn't nearly so over-the-top or bloody.

Music by Los Lobos, heavy on gypsy guitar and played loud behind virtually all of these scenes, makes the movie look even more like a big screen music video.

Some of "Desperado" works, especially the opening scene where bug-eyed Steve Buscemi (he was Mr. Pink in "Reservoir Dogs") sidles up to a sleazy Mexican bar. You can hear a pin drop as he tells the bartender and other patrons about a gunfighter who shot up a similar place, though he adds carefully, "of course without this establishment's fine clientele."

As the Desperado's sidekick, Buscemi has little to do after this other than warn Banderas to hang up his guitar case full of guns. Rodriguez does have the sense to cut short a cameo by Tarantino, who goes into the same bar, tells a joke, and is soon shot in the face.

Given the limitations of the script, the handsome Banderas ("The Mambo Kings," "Tie Me Up, Tie Me Down") couldn't make a better hero. With his black jacket and guitar case, hair pulled back in a ponytail, the hitchhiking musician looks cool but far from dangerous.

Not when the bullets start flying. Here he's the devil himself, his hair stringy, blood-soaked, and falling into his face. Since he doesn't leave anyone standing after the smoke clears, no one can identify what he looks like.

His love interest is played by newcomer Salma Hayek, a stunningly beautiful actress who has a few moments of real chemistry with Banderas.

The villains are a disappointment though, from the white-suited drug kingpin to his stable of bodyguards. These hombres, the meanest-looking available from central casting, are almost interchangeable except for an assassin who dispatches his victims with a series of tiny knives.

Rodriguez enlists a pair of guitar case-carrying reinforcements for the climactic showdown, but we want to see Banderas handle it alone.

"Desperado" needs more of the well-scripted gallows humor that opened the film, the kind that transcended the only slightly better scripts of Italy's "Spaghetti Westerns," yet another Rodriguez influence.

Though the film will find an audience with rabid action movie fans, it signals a sophomore slump for the obviously talented Rodriguez. More hope lies in two Rodriguez productions — a segment in "Four Rooms" and the Mexican vampire epic "From Dusk Till Dawn" — both due out in the fall.

SCREEN SCENE

A sampling of what's playing at alternative movie theaters across metro Detroit as reviewed by John Monaghan.

■ DETROIT FILM THEATRE
Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward, Detroit. Call (313) 833-2323 for information. ($5; $4 students)

"Betty Boop Confidential." 7, 9:30 p.m. Sept. 1-2; 1, 4, 7-p.m. Sept. 3. So you've already seen those old Betty Boop cartoons on television? Think again. These newly restored prints of the classic Max Fleischer shorts show the cartoon cutie in all her unedited, "pre-code" glory. Included are "Betty Boop's Bamboo Isle," "You Try Somebody Else" (with a live-action Ethel Merman); and a personal favorite, "Bimbo's Initiation."

"A Great Day in Harlem" (USA - 1994). 7 p.m. Sept. 4. When "Esqüire" magazine arrived in August, 1958 to shoot the greats of Harlem jazz in one big family group shot, the result was something magical — and musical. This Oscar-nominated documentary chronicles that day with rare footage and live performances.

■ MAGIC BAG THEATRE
22918 Woodward, Ferndale. Call (810) 544-3030 for information. ($4; $3 students/seniors)

"Pulp Fiction" (USA - 1994). 9 p.m. Sept. 5. The theater has turned Quentin Tarantino's supercharged comedy thriller into a "Rocky Horror" of sorts, with intermission twist contest and T-shirt and poster giveaways. You can count on one hand the audience members who haven't seen the movie at least twice.

"Bullet in the Head" (Hong Kong - 1990). 8 p.m. Sept. 7. Hong Kong action master John Woo calls this the favorite of all his films. It's easy to see why. Three Hong Kong friends embark for Vietnam to get their piece of the lucrative black market but end up battling gangsters, soldiers, and themselves.

■ MAIN ART THEATRE
118 N. Main Street at 11 Mile, Royal Oak. Films play through at least Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 542-0180 for information and showtimes. ($6.50; $4 students and matinee; $3 twilight)

"Kids" (USA - 1995). An explosive first feature from director Larry Clark about a group of New York teenagers who indulge in every parent's nightmare: drinking, drugs, profanity, and unprotected sex. The year's most provocative movie, but also one of the hardest to watch.

"The Postman" ("Il Postino") (Italian - 1995). The story of exiled Chilean poet and diplomat Pablo Neruda (Philippe Noiret) and his relationship with an uneducated postman has proven a great audience pleaser.

"The Usual Suspects" (USA - 1995). Five guys who meet in a police lineup join for a simple heist. What happens next will keep you guessing in this cleverly scripted caper starring Gabriel Byrne, Kevin Spacey, and Chazz Palminteri.

"The Brothers McMullen" (USA - 1995). For what some people spend on a new car, Edward Burns made an engaging first feature about a young screenwriter and his two brothers in contemporary Long Island.

■ MAPLE THEATRE
4135 W. Maple, Bloomfield. All titles play through at least next Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 855-9090 for information. ($6; $2.95 twilight)

"Belle de Jour" (France - 1967). Catherine Deneuve plays a bored Parisian housewife who works afternoons as a prostitute in Luis Bunuel's dark, dark comedy. Unavailable for the last 20 years, it has been rereleased through the efforts of Martin Scorsese.

Wells ready to 'blow the roof' at Magic Bag

By Mark E. Gallo
Special Writer

"I didn't even know I was gonna be a musician at first," legendary blues harmonica player Junior Wells said by phone from his Chicago home last week. That he grew to be one of the most influential harp players of the genre surely wasn't something he could have predicted 50 years ago, when he was first bitten by the blues bug.

"I heard the original Sonny Boy (John Lee) Williamson, on 'Randy's Record Shop,' " he recalls of the Nashville radio show. "When I heard him, I knew that's what I wanted to do."

In short order, Wells had acquired his first harmonica, an American Ace ("they just give that to you, 'cause you could buy a Marine Band at that time for 15 cents") and tracked down the second of the famed harmonica players to use the name Sonny Boy Williamson, Alec "Rice" Miller. A bold 10 year old, he asked Miller to teach him the rudiments of the instrument. The gruff older man told Wells that he first had to go buy him a drink. It was common practice in those days for kids to walk into the drug store to buy liquor for their parents, so no one questioned the youngster.

PREVIEW

"So, I went and I got it for him," the now 60-year-old Wells remembers. "He showed me a few things, tried to show me a few things. And then he just told me, 'Now you know what? Now you bought that drink. Now it's mine. I want you to know one thing. Don't you put your hands on it. Now I want you to get outta my face, 'cause you're stupid, you're dumb and you ain't gonna learn nothin'."

Wells remembers the incident vividly half a century later as both hurtful and as strengthening his resolve to play. Within two years, having driven all the folks in his apartment building to jitters with his constant playing in the hallways, he was taken to meet the great Muddy Waters by a policeman who was dating his sister.

"That's the first time I saw Little Walter," he remembers. "The band took a break and the police officer went up said 'Would it be possible for this young man to come up and play a song?' Muddy said, "Well, I guess so. Do you know your time and all of that?' I said 'I think so.' He said, 'The first thing is that mike and that amplifier belongs to Little Walter and I can't give you permission to use his amplifier or mike.' He said 'I'll ask him.' Walter looked over at me and was laughing and said 'That little piece? Well, if you think he can do it, OK'."

By the time he was 18 he had replaced his friend in the Muddy Waters Band, perhaps the most influential combo in blues history. A year later, with his long-time friend Buddy Guy backing him, he released "Hoodoo Man Blues," which remains one of the classic blues harmonica albums ever recorded, and he was heralded as one of the most brilliant of the second generation blues harpists.

"A lot of people ask me now, 'Junior, why you got horns in your band?' I got horns in the band because that's what I hear. I just don't want a Delta-style band, where somebody plays a harp and somebody plays a guitar. There's more to blues and rhythm & blues than just somebody sittin' on the steps and playin'. That's not my idea of it. If you're gonna have a band, have a band, but don't have a band that can't play but one thing. So, that's why I have an 8-piece band."

Rest assured, it is an 8-piece poised to blow the roof off the Magic Bag.

Legendary blues: Harmonica player Junior Wells will be performing at the Magic Bag Theatre on Friday with his eight-piece band.

Baez concert: 'nostalgia made fresh'

Joan Baez, 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 2, Meadowbrook Music Festival. Tickets $25 pavilion, $12.50 lawn, (810) 645-6666.

Her first musical memory is "standing up on the bed at age 7, with my hand on my heart. It must have been midnight, and the radio by my bed must have been playing the 'Star Spangled Banner.' "

Joan Baez, long the reigning doyenne of American folk music, says there probably were other, earlier musical experiences, but that's the one that stands out strongest. Her first performance in front of an audience of non-family members came a few years later, in junior high school.

"I sang 'Earth Angel.' I was wearing a black jumper and little dirty black slacks, and I was very, very nervous. I was very self-contained, and I got an encore, which was the only encore all evening, and I just loved it. I couldn't think of what to do, and I did 'Honey Love.' It was just about perfect for seventh or eighth grade."

The audiences have grown a bit over the years. She headlined the first Monterey Folk Festival, in 1963. Before the year would end, she would play for the assembled multitudes at the historic 1963 march on Washington led by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and introduce Bob Dylan, via the stage of the Newport Folk Festival, to a worldwide audience.

She has seen what we call "folk" music go through many changes over the years, but as she told me by telephone last week, "I think, probably for me, it still just means unplugged and a little bit introspective. I think 'contemporary folk' is a good title for it (now). The Indigo Girls, Mary Chapin Carpenter — they write words that are worth listening to."

Coincidentally, these are two of the guests on Baez's latest disc, "Ring Them Bells" (Guardian Records). Recorded at New York's famed folk oasis, the Bottom Line, earlier this year, the recording captures her first club performances in decades, as well as offering a glimpse of the passage and continuing growth of Joan Baez. The lilting soprano has mellowed a bit but aged very well, indeed.

"It's kind of a leap from the last CD," she says. "Lots of guests: Chapin, and the Indigos, Mary Black, Dar Williams, Janis Ian, Tish Hinojosa. It's unplugged and it's very 'folk' and it feels like a comfort zone, but it's also very fresh. It worked, and it was sweaty palms, and it was just live at the Bottom Line. We couldn't go back and re-do anything. That's part of why it worked, I think."

A performance in Los Angeles for Amnesty International, that I was fortunate enough to attend many years ago, marked one of her last benefit performances. Those activities aren't done with, just put on hold.

"You know," she says, "that's in my blood, probably from before I started singing. However, six years ago, when I made the decision to pursue the career with some gusto, I really tabled all of the activism for this time period. I think I made the right decision because I always put it first. I wasn't that concerned about a career, and then I think that the realization that the vocal cords have a terminal point sort of snapped me into realizing that it was time to go full-bore into a music career — vocal training, all of the stuff you have to do to keep it going."

The new live CD is proof positive that Joan Baez is in no immediate danger of having to give up her career any time soon. The performances here, particularly on "Diamonds & Rust," with Mary Chapin Carpenter, "Don't Think Twice, It's Alright," with the Indigo Girls, and her extraordinary solo performance on "Don't Make Promises" point to the work of an artist in superb vocal shape. If this is any indication of what to expect Saturday night, and surely it is, it will be a memorable evening.

"It'll be good," she says. "I have bass guitar and percussion with me. We do a lot of things from the new CD, which are also things, a couple of things, that I skipped over 35 years ago. So, it'll be an interesting combination of nostalgia made fresh."

Soup — Blind Melon

The lazy New Orleans-style intro to Blind Melon's first single "Galaxie" from "Soup" (Capitol) is a big enough clue that there isn't going to be very many specials on this menu. However, wade through the introductory mess, and "Galaxie," the house special, is revealed. The song, written about Hoon's 1964 Ford Galaxie, has the same sing-along appeal that their break-through hit "No Rain" possessed.

Most of the other tracks have potential but fizzle out quickly. The song "2 x 4" starts out with a "Hand Jive" kind of groove but dissolves into a blase vehicle for singer Shannon Hoon to show off his rhyming abilities.

Having a baby with his longtime girlfriend brought out the sentimental side of Hoon. An ultrasound photo of his baby lies behind the words to "New Life" in the CD booklet patterned after a menu. He pays homage to his late grandmother in the musically gloomy "Vernie": "Roaming through the cupboard jar of pickles never opened since 1983/Peanuts in a pile and Elvis down the aisle singing gallantly/I wish I could be a little more like Vernie."

The bluegrass-tinged "Skinned," on the other hand, is upbeat despite the fact that it's an attempt to dissect the mentality of serial killer Ed Gein: "I'll make a shoehorn outta your shin/I'll make a lampshade of durable skin/And oh, don't you know that I'm always feelin' able/When I'm sittin' home and I'm carvin' out your naval."

Since the release of "Blind Melon" Hoon has definitely been affected by goriness like in the song "Skinned." "St. Andrew's Fall" is another one. The song was written after Blind Melon, while in town to play St. Andrew's Hall, saw a woman jump to her death from an Omni Hotel room window. "Car Seat (God's Presents)" was sparked by the murders of Susan Smith's children in South Carolina. With its lounge-act feel, "Car Seat" has the right ingredients for a second single.

All I can say is that this album's pretty lame. It's time to call "The Bee Girl" back in to rescue Blind Melon from the sophomore jinx.

Dance On The Stones — World in a Room

Subtlety is a musical tool few young bands today know how to use. It seems like 90 percent of alternative bands out there are openly loud and pounding, which isn't a bad quality but can sometimes help cover a multitude of sins, chief among them weak, unoriginal material. The rest, bands with no aspirations to rock out, often seem to be musically drifting, making quiet music that is pretty but shallow.

On their latest release, "Dance On The Stones," Ohio's World in a Room proves itself one of the few groups capable of keeping a song interesting without any overt hooks or blasting, repetitive riffs.

Vocalist and acoustic guitarist Jason Kilbey Smith sings in a deep, dramatic voice without lapsing into generic Vedderisms. His vocals are instead somewhere between Hunters and Collectors' Mark Seymour and Depeche Mode's David Gahan.

But the mellow, jangly instrumentation here is thankfully drum machine- and keyboard-free. "Train" showcases a brooding bass line and "Why," despite its regrettable similarity to the Eagles' "Best of My Love" is a nice, acoustic-strummed ballad. "She'll Be Fine" is the only misfire, spoiled by an uneven, sour chorus.

The other eight originals are to be admired for their ability to entertain and hold interest without being instantly memorable after two or three listens. Such subtlety is rare in so young a band.

World in a Room's "Dance On The Stones" is not a spectacular album, but will prove rewarding to fans of easygoing, earnest pop who don't need to be hit over the head with distortion to pay attention.

(World In A Room performs with Goober and The Peas at 9:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 22, at the Blind Pig, 206-208 S. First St., Ann Arbor. For more information, call (313) 996-8555.)

Buffalo Tom wary of too much success

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

The members of the Boston rock band Buffalo Tom are a little weary of performing on televisiop again.

You can't really blame them for feeling like they're bad luck after reviewing three of their recent appearances. In support of their fifth album "Sleepy Eyed" (East West) they performed on the "Jon Stewart Show" (it turned out to be Stewart's last show), and guest starred on the now-cancelled "My So-Called Life."

A previous appearance included a stint on the short-lived, Jamie Walters' launching pad "The Heights."

"People are reluctant to have us on their TV shows," guitarist/vocalist Bill Janovitz said with a laugh.

Those TV appearances, however, pushed them beyond the cult status that they held since forming in 1988 — just in time for the June release of their fifth album "Sleepy Eyed."

Buffalo Tom, who plays Pine Knob on Sunday, Sept. 3, doesn't waste any time kicking off the album with the juicy, ripe "Tangerine." The one-two punch of the aggressive guitar and hook-laden lyrics make it the hit apparent — but not without a fight.

The woosy ballad "Kitchen Door," during which Janovitz sings "I'm the number on your kitchen door/I'm the baseball team from Baltimore/I'm the number on your kitchen door/Like Cinderella she just sweeps the floor," is right up there. The toe-tappin' groove of "Your Stripes" is another runner-up.

Where their last album "Big Red Letter Day" buffed the rough edges, "Sleepy Eyed" sharpens them up again sharing Buffalo Tom's forte of playing live.

"'Sleepy Eyed' was recorded predominately live, which is something we realized we were — a live band, a garage kind of rock band. These songs are a little more urgent live. . . . We set up like it was a gig with little speakers on the floor, no headphones and we just let everything bleed into each other," Janovitz said.

Janovitz doesn't expect "Sleepy Eyed" to be a million-selling hit but he's already made plans in case that happens.

"I'd retire. I'd go down to the islands. It would be frightening," he said. ". . . If Buffalo Tom in some weird world was to sells millions, I would raise a few flags. I know it did for people like Kurt Cobain. Once they started selling millions, they wondered, 'What's wrong.' "

Opening for the band Live has given them a taste of what it's like to be million-sellers.

"I have a hard time thinking of us as a blockbuster band. When we play with Live, we get a feeling of what sells millions of records. They play big music. Everything about it is big — the issues they take on, the way they project it. Like U2 or Pearl Jam, these are bands that are made for that kind of thing. Our concerns are smaller concerns, and more important maybe. It's hard to convey that to millions of people at one time."

He hopes that they don't get notoriety based on their appearances on TV as the "token alternative band."

"That's kind of what I'm afraid of. It's this weird dichotomy of trying to expose ourselves to more people and get on soundtracks, and at the same time they just need an alternative rock band here and you're just kind of filling it in. I don't want to become this generic kind of thing."

"It's inevitable, though. Once you're mass marketed, it's like there's soap, Aunt Jemima waffles and then they show you."

Buffalo Tom opens for Live and PJ Harvey at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 3, at Pine Knob Music Theatre, I-75 and Sashabaw Road, Clarkston. The all-ages show is sold out. For more information, call (810) 377-0100.

Pavement percussionist critiques the critics

By Todd Wicks
Staff Writer

"Rock critics are usually frustrated grad school writers trying to prove that they're entertaining," said Pavement's Bob Nastanovich, sitting hunched over his dinner on a hot Lollapalooza Wednesday at Pine Knob.

"Unfortunately, they don't write enough about how the music makes them feel, they just try to be as pretentious as possible and force their readers to get a dictionary and a thesaurus to read their reviews."

Coming from the genuinely pleasant Nastanovich, this blow to the ego actually sounded a lot less evil than it reads now. Digging through some kind of breaded fish or chicken with his bare hands in the VIP area, Nastanovich, whose responsibilities with Pavement include playing percussion and screaming background vocals, expounded more on jaded music journalists whose reviews have turned ugly now that their "little secret band" has gone big-time.

"I think we've definitely reached a point where we're not sneaking up on anybody," he said. "We like to think of ourselves as a band who makes people feel things and isn't as cold and icy as graduate school is. None of us have ever been to graduate school."

This punchline is delivered with a totally straight face, just as one would expect from the sardonic Pavement boys including singer/guitarist Stephen Malkmus, drummer Steve West, bassist Mark Ibold, and guitarist Spiral Stairs. Earlier in the day, clad in long pants and work shirts under a broiling July sun, the band's jangly, obtuse set received a warm response. Its latest album "Wowee Zowee" (Matador), has continued the roll that began with last year's "Crooked Rain, Crooked Rain" and its breakthrough single "Cut Your Hair" and the oft-quoted "Range Life."

Despite his earlier rant, Nastanovich and his bandmates shouldn't really complain; since their first release in 1989 they have generally received one big, wet kiss from the media. And although Pavement has long since garnered the requisite number of raves from Spin magazine to become incredibly pretentious snobs, the guys in the band seem, well, really nice.

"We can be pretty snotty, but I see no point in doing it on stage in front of all these people today, three-fourths of which have never seen us before," Nastanovich said. "Shows like this, we're just going to get up there and introduce our songs to people. Not that anything we say would be over their heads, it's just that most of the people out there don't understand specifics about the band, and a certain amount of them probably couldn't give a crap."

■ 'We like to think of ourselves as a band who makes people feel things and isn't as cold and icy as graduate school is. None of us have ever been to graduate school.'

Bob Nastanovich

He sounds almost saddened by Pavement's inability to connect with more people. "Really, this is one of the best crowds we've had. I think today, a lot of people were trying to like us. There have been a couple of (Lollapalooza) shows where seemingly, about 100 people have been paying attention . . . . We feel much more confident in front of a crowd of 700 Pavement fans who know us a lot better than this."

Sandwiched between Beck and Cypress Hill, Pavement did seem a little overwhelmed by it all. Malkmus kept his body twisted away from the crowd, focusing more on his bandmates. They were working hard but seemed to be playing more for themselves than that lone kid standing up and dancing wildly out in the 47th row. As Pavement's acknowledged mastermind, Malkmus calls all of the shots onstage, which can sometimes lead to minor musical mishaps.

"Did you notice some confusion out there today?" Nastanovich asked. "We don't write a set list anymore. It makes for a better show. Here at Lollapalooza, he's (Malkmus) just calling them out as they come."

He attempted to explain further. "It's all to make him feel like he can play what he wants when he wants to play it and when he plays it, we'll play it." Oh.

Even if they can't always express themselves verbally, you've got to love a workaholic band on the rise who takes a break from the music scene just to give its fans a rest.

"We need time off to give people who care about the band a break," Nastanovich said. After six years of constant recording and touring, the band is due for a long vacation at the end of the Lollapalooza shows. True to workhorse form, he also cites their lack of new material.

"We only have eight new songs, and until we get that number up to 20, we aren't going to record."

According to Nastanovich, the recording studio is a funny place. "There are so many bands that are so great live and have worked so hard on their live show that they don't have enough energy to record," he said. "Their records are an afterthought." Then possibly spurred on by the sound of Hole screeching in the background, he added, "There are also bands who make great records but were obviously in the magical recording studio for their sound and just stink live."

"We fall into that category on occasion," he said, straight face succumbing to a rare smile.

Besides, Nastanovich sees no rush to create more product for an already-crowded marketplace. "There's no lack of new bands today," he noted. "There's almost as many kids playing in bands now as who play high school football."

Having moved the conversation into sports, Nastanovich finally relaxed a bit. "Pavement are all big sports fans," he said, adding that "horse racing rules my life." According to Nastanovich, who lives across the street from Kentucky's Churchill Downs, Pavement's slightly uncomfortable Lollapalooza campaign was arranged only to raise funds for the their live show that they don't have to get ready for the fall meet," he said, and like before, it was impossible to tell if he was joking or not. "I'm only focusing on raising money to buy a couple of cheap racehorses. That's my plan. I'm going to follow the dream I started when I was 16 years old, to find a decent racehorse and campaign it."

Nastanovich looked around for a minute, lost in thought and far away from the sweaty masses swarming close by, the same masses he had entertained only hours before. "I like Detroit," he announced out of nowhere. "There's a good racetrack up here."

Pounding the Pavement: Percussionist Bob Nastanovich says that "rock critics are usually frustrated grad school writers trying to prove that they're entertaining." His band was recently in town to play the Lollapalooza Festival.

Seat belt use boosted

Canton Township police will participate in a Labor Day weekend seat belt enforcement campaign.

Since the "No Excuses" campaign began in March, the Michigan State Police, Wayne County Sheriff's Department and 12 local police departments have written 5,276 citations to motorists who fail to buckle up.

The eighth special enforcement period is scheduled for the Labor Day weekend, Sept. 1-3. "There's absolutely no reasonable excuse for not buckling up," said Lt. John A. Mitchell of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

"Safety belts save lives, reduce injuries and their use is required by law. These enforcement periods help make people more aware of the law and its value in saving lives and reducing serious injuries to motorists."

Other nearby police departments that are participating in the enforcement period are Belleville, Huron Township, Sumpter Township and Van Buren Township.

The "No Excuses" public awareness campaign is financed by the Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning.

TV spot features resident

Dennis A. Krozek of Canton is helping Chrysler Corporation launch its all-new Chrysler Town & Country minivan by appearing in a national TV advertising campaign designed to capture the enthusiasm the Chrysler minivan platform team members have for the redesigned vehicle.

Krozek was one of seven Chrysler minivan platform team members selected to participate in the shoot, held last February in Los Angeles, for his commitment and hard work on behalf of the program.

The platform team members will appear in a series of ads highlighting the features found in the Chrysler Town & Country, including the easy out roller seats and the driver's side sliding door.

The ads, created by the Detroit office of Bozell Worldwide advertising, appeared Saturday, Aug. 26, on NBC's "NFL Pre-Season game." The commercials will also be shown on NBC's "ER" and "Friends," ABC's "Ellen" and "Lois & Clark," and CBS's "60 Minutes" and "The Client" in the following several weeks.

"When developing a launch strategy for the Chrysler Town & Country, we were looking for the ideal way to highlight the vehicle's newest features," said Steve Torok, general manager, Chrysler-Plymouth Division.

"Who better to do that then the men and women who actually work on the minivan platform team? The advertising captures the pride, dedication and enthusiasm the minivan platform team has for the vehicles. At the same time, it positions the Chrysler Town & Country as a vehicle with the unique balance of elegance and style for today's smart and self-confident consumer."

The first commercial, "Open Here," is an ad that features Krozek, as well as Floyd Allen and Timothy John Emmitt of Bloomfield Hills, Diana A. Cernis of Farmington Hills, and Dwight Roy Kleinlein of Shelby Township, all members of Chrysler's minivan team.

They wanted to put luxury at the customer's fingertips, such as leather seats with a memory feature and a dual-zone climate control system. Throughout the TV spot Kleinlein, Cernis, Krozek and Emmitt are seen opening one of the four doors of the Chrysler Town & Country.

The ad attempts to show the advantage the Chrysler minivan has over the competition.

Beehive won't sting your budget

BY RENEE SKOGLUND
SPECIAL WRITER

The Beehive Family Dining

- Address: 33290 Michigan Ave., (between Venoy and Howe), Wayne, (313) 467-6193
- Menu: Something for everyone – American, Greek, Italian, Mexican, great daily specials. Children's menu, senior citizen specials.
- Cost: Very affordable
- Hours: 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday-Saturday; 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday.
- Credit cards: Visa, Mastercard
- Banquet facilities: Catering for special events.

The Beehive is fast becoming one of Wayne's favorite eating spots. No wonder, it's the perfect "Honey, I don't feel like cooking tonight" kind of place. It has good food, good prices, friendly service, and homemade rolls the size of miniature pillows.

"Everything is homemade," says owner Bashar Almhiemid, whose personableness runs through his staff and is passed on to his customers. "And there's always someone coming around with coffee."

The Beehive's well-packed menu ranges from homemade soups at just $1.25 a bowl to a large selection of American, Italian, and Greek entrees, most priced between $5 and $7. Dinner specials like _ city chicken, short ribs, lake perch or roast turkey _ are offered daily. Also, breakfast specials run everyday, 6-11 a.m.

Addicted to those "2 for 1" dinners? The Beehive has them. For just $8.95, you and your favorite dining partner can choose from the likes of fish and chips, shrimp, or vegetarian lasagna. That should leave plenty of change for dessert.

Open less than a year, The Beehive already has a loyal following. To say that George Okins Sr., a retired engineer from Westland, and his son, George Jr., a Westland mechanic, are regulars would be understatement.

When asked how often they eat at The Beehive, George Sr., who just finished an "excellent" lasagna, responded first. "Well, breakfast, lunch and dinner, about four days a week. Will that make us regular?"

"I'm here every day, seven days a week," said George Jr., who lunched on a ham and cheese omelette. "I've tried everything but the liver and onions and that's because I don't like liver and onions. They have the best soup and the best biscuits and gravy."

"Absolutely the best," concurred George Sr. "And we can name names."

While the Okinses attribute much of The Beehive's success to its owner's affable personality and great smile, Almhiemid knows it takes a bit more.

"One of the things is I stay on top of things. I'm here from 6 in the morning. Since we have opened I have not missed a day. And the food always gets better. Plus, I'm here with the customers all day so I listen to what they say. For instance, we used to have tiles. The customers say "carpet, carpet,' so now we have new carpet."

Barbara Gribowskas, a Wayne business owner, appreciates the new carpeting, but she likes the soups and rolls even more. "They always have excellent soup. And these little dinner rolls are marvelous. You have to try one. The atmosphere is great. The waitresses are always concerned.

"Besides the food, it's the cleanliness," Gribowskas continued as she pointed out the "spotless windowsills" and the "no fingerprints on the pie shelves." Adding yet another accolade, she said, "It's affordable. I bring a lot of senior citizens here. In fact, once I bring them in here, they don't want to eat anywhere else."

Running The Beehive is somewhat of a family affair. Brother Mahamed is the head chef and wife Gail often acts as hostess when not busy with 6-month-old daughter Mary Elizabeth. Even the treasured roll recipe comes compliments of Almhiemid's mother, Kadrih, who lives in Syria.

Ah, those rolls! They're reason enough to pack the spouse and kiddies in the car and head to The Beehive. George Sr. summed it up when he said, "This is the closest thing to my mother's cooking."

Macker champs

These guys were no turkeys.

The Golden Turkeys, from Plymouth, finished first in the 13-14 year-old boys division at the "Mecca" of the Gus Macker 3-on-3 driveway basketball tournament — in Belding.

The Plymouth Salem freshmen, members of the Western Wayne Wildcat AAU team, were unbeaten in their six games and outscored their opponents 90-49. Team members are Adam Wilson, Aaron Rypkowski, Nick Szczechowski and Jacob Gray.

The Bus Drivers, a basketball team from the Plymouth/Canton area, were winners in their division at the Gus Macker 3-on-3 tournament sponsored by Oakland University last weekend. Team members were Nick Duca, Jim Reddy, Scott Setlock and Jeff Swartek.

Another entry, another winner: The Video Place, a girls team in the 13-14 age division, finished first at the Gus Macker 3-on-3 basketball tournament at Oakland University last weekend.

Team members included Katie Schwartz of Plymouth, Monica Mair of Canton and Beth DeCorte of Flat Rock.

Soccer champs

The '81 Michigan Hawks, and under-15 girls team coached by Tom Coyne, won a pair of tournaments this month including the St. Louis Friendship Cup and the under-16 Strikers Tournament in Aurora, Ill.

At the Aurora Tournament, the Hawks outscored their opponents, 24-3. Six different players scored including forwards Kristin Fisher, Janelle Harwood and Bridgid Bowdell.

Midfielders include Jessica Erickson, Lisa Tomasso, Kiley Enmark, Sarah Wittrock and Jessica Smith.

The defense consists of Bethany Bryant, Lindsey Mack, Sara McDonald, Colleen O'Brien, Melissa Lawson, Danah Manteuffel, Mary Gignac and Becky Peterson.

The goalkeeper is Beth Quiney.

Livonia Youth Soccer Club United, an under-16 Little Caesars Premier girls team, won the Waterford Soccer Tournament (Aug. 19-20.) United didn't allow a goal in five games and defeated Troy's TPSA Force in the final, 5-0.

The United players are Melissa Backus, Lisa Fabirkiewicz, Andrea Galindo, Lanette Moss, Stacey Nastase, Jenny Schmidt, Jamie Scott and Nicole Tobin of Livonia; Tina Atwood, Garden City; Meryl Denton, Farmington Hills; Tracy Hamann, Milford; Jamie Jandasek, Brighton; Jessica Kenny, Lydia Raburn and Carrie Wasalaski, Novi. Kristin Lukasik of Canton was the guest goalie for the tournament.

United is coached by Mario Galindo. Frank Raburn is the assistant coach, and Kathy Nastase is the team manager.

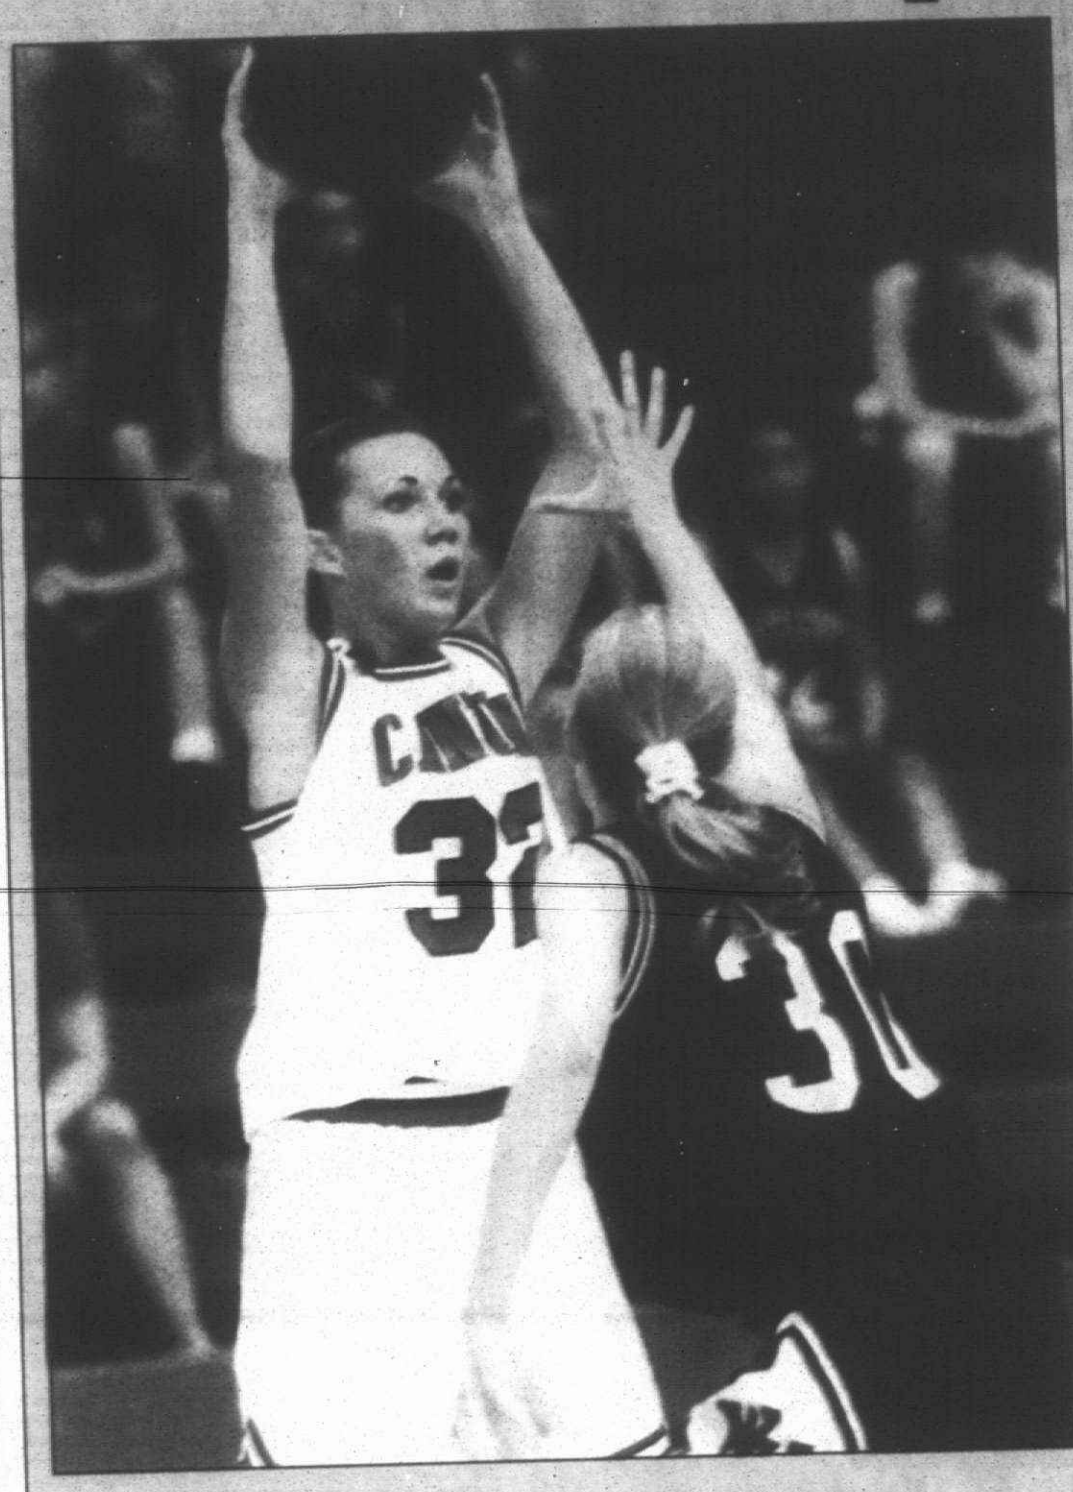

The Vardar III '83 boys team took the under-13 division last month at the Can-Am International Soccer Classic capped by a 3-1 championship win over the Windsor Football Club Nationals, avenging a 2-1 loss to the Ontario team earlier in the tournament.

Other members include Dan Mulcahy, Cliff Orr, John Mauro, John Palazzolo, David Rayner, Lee Oliphant, Kyle Lapkewych, Will Ros, Brandon Felker and Justin Detter.

Canton collects opening win

Bill Bresler/Staff Photographer

Searching for victory: Kristi Fiorenzi (with ball) and her teammates didn't have to look too hard. By halftime, they were in control of their opener against Kettering. Fiorenzi scored 16 points.

■ Perhaps it wasn't so much of a start as a resumption for Plymouth Canton's girls basketball team, which opened its 1995 campaign by hosting Waterford Kettering. Everything went according to the script for the Chiefs, who will face many a tougher challenge in the weeks ahead.

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

We've only just begun . . .

Yeah, it was a lousy song, and it's old, too. But here it happens to fit.

Both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem got their basketball seasons going Tuesday (not against each other, mind you), and the results were, well, mixed.

Let's start with Canton. After all, the Chiefs have several of the players who helped send them to the Class A semifinals last November returning for another go at it.

They picked up the right trail, certainly. After weathering a first-quarter comeback by Waterford Kettering that halved a 12-point lead, Canton rolled past the undersized Captains by outscoring them 50-24 over the last three quarters en route to a 70-38 triumph.

"They were small," said Canton coach Bob Blohm. "They were the smallest team I've seen in a long time.

"But they finished the first quarter really strong, closed a 12-point gap to six. But we got it going in the second quarter and went on from there."

That the Chiefs did. The heat in the Canton gym brought on the fatigue early, and Kettering had a harder time coping with it. With Nkechi Okwumabua coming off the bench to score five points (she finished with nine), Canton collected a 14-6 third-quarter advantage.

The third quarter was more of the same, with the Chiefs romping to a 21-9 advantage that left them in control entering the fourth, 55-29.

"We defended pretty good, and we ran the court well," said Blohm. "Our intensity was pretty good throughout the game. I think what happened was they got tired, and

Salem survives early-season challenges to stay unbeaten

Perhaps he might have been able to script a better start for his team, but Plymouth Salem soccer coach Ken Johnson will settle for the one he got.

The Rocks improved to 3-0 Tuesday by netting a goal with two minutes remaining in the match, the winning margin in Salem's 3-2 victory over visiting Ann Arbor Pioneer.

The victory has the Rocks rolling, thanks to their season-opening victory in the Gary Balconi Memorial Tournament Saturday, co-hosted by Salem and Canton. The Rocks walloped Grand Blanc 5-1 in their first game Saturday, then edged Portage Central 4-2 in Saturday's championship match.

Plymouth Canton was upset by Central 3-2 in the tournament's opening round, then ripped Grand Blanc 7-1 in Saturday's consolation final.

"There was good teamwork, it was well-played," Johnson said after the tournament title, the Rocks' second-straight. "There were a lot of chances we missed. But the passing was good."

In the win over Central, Salem got second-half goals from Drew Drummond and Ryan Konley to break a 2-2 tie. The Rocks led 2-1 at the half on the strength of goals by Matt Simons and Ronny Mashni. Both Simons and Mashni also picked up assists in the game.

In the opener against Grand Blanc, John Larson punched home two goals while Mashni, Chris Curry and Matt Huckal each scored one. Scott Loewe picked up two assists.

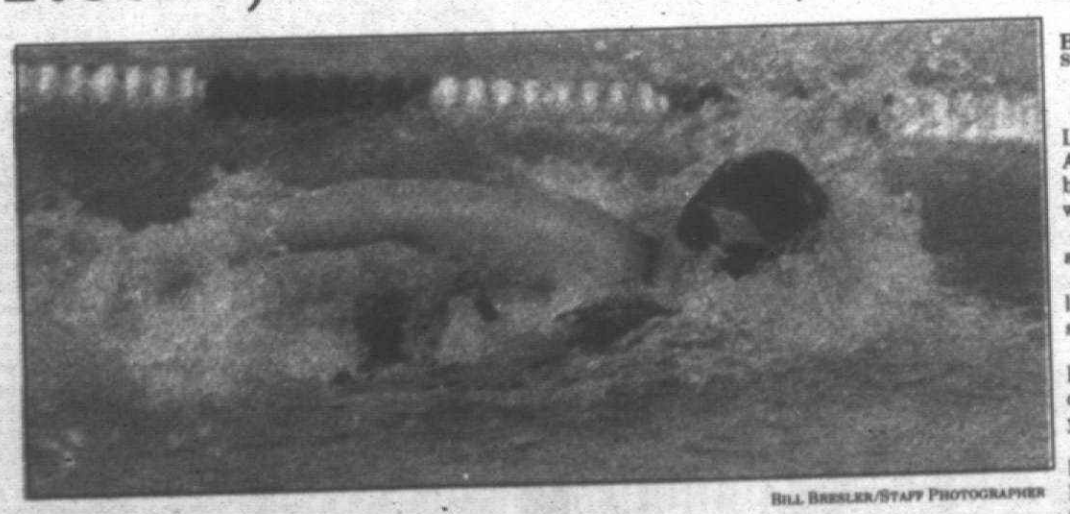

Brian Bacyinski and Andres Lopez split time in goal in both games.

In the win over Pioneer Tuesday, Salem fell behind in the first four minutes, but Andy Makins converted just six minutes into the match to tie it at 1-all. Larson then gave Salem the lead with a goal in the 17th minute, making it 2-1. Matt Sarkesian assisted on both.

Pioneer forged another tie six minutes into the second half, and the frustration mounted for the Rocks,

Strong sprint: Salem's Kellyann Williams finished fifth in the 50-yard freestyle at last year's WLAA meet.

By C.J. Risak

The gap is 357 points.

That's how far Plymouth Salem finished behind Livonia Stevenson at the Western Lakes Activities Association championship swim meet last November. The Rocks were fourth; Stevenson was an easy winner.

Which makes the object this year both clear-cut and simple: narrow the gap.

"We're looking to move up that ladder," said Salem coach Chuck Olson. "And we've got a real strong chance to do just that."

There are obvious reasons for Olson's optimism. Like the return of Zoe Yockey, the reigning WLAA diving champion, and Laura Berezak, a junior this year who was fifth at the '94 league meet.

And the return of Yvonne Lynn (third in the 100 back at the WLAA and a state meet qualifier) and Kellyann Williams (fifth at the WLAA in the 50 free) for their junior years bolsters hopes. Indeed,

Salem opens with Belleville

By Brad Emons
Staff Writer

When you're the top prep football prognosticator six out of the last eight years, you're bound to get somewhat complacent.

That's what yours truly (initials B.E.) is banking on as the high school season kicks off this weekend.

New year, new hopes and more resolve.

To refresh your memory, my able-bodied opponent (initials D.O.) whipped me by six games last season after a go-for-broke final regular season week went sour. But of course, I took it like a man.

He must be carrying a blarney stone in his pocket.

Luck of the Irish?

No such thing.

B.E. is going to rely on solid, basic prognosticating formulas for '95.

Is this the year D.O. goes down along with the Farmington Hills Harrison ship?

No such way, the smiling Irishman says.

B.E. says it's Farmington's year. You heard it here first.

Anyway, enough bluster.

It's time to get the season's first week of games under way.

GRID PICKS

FRIDAY'S GAMES
(all at 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Stevenson at Redford Union (7 p.m.): This traditional opener has been a lopsided affair for quite some time. Class AA playoff qualifier Stevenson (8-3) was racked by graduation, but returns a strong nucleus. RU (2-7) has a new coach in Glen Scala and so do the Spartans (Tim Gabel). An interesting matchup pits Stevenson tackle Eric Curl (6-3, 246) and RU tackle Steve Roe (6-3, 260). PICKS: Gabel wastes little time getting his first win at Stevenson. Scala and RU will have to wait another week.

N. Farmington at W. Bloomfield (7 p.m.): North (4-5) returns All-Observer receiver Richard Beal, while the Lakers (2-7) counter with interim coach Dan Shrewsberry, 25, who takes over for Joe Brandell. North won last year's opener, 14-7. PICKS: Looks like a repeat for North.

Dearborn at Liv. Churchill: Kevin Kreger is back again at quarterback for Class A playoff qualifier Dearborn (8-2)? Say it isn't so. It seems Churchill (0-9) will have to figure out a way to contain one of the area's best signal callers or it could be a long night. The Chargers, however, counter with bruising fullback George Shanlikian, a 240-pounder. PICKS: Dearborn puts one in the victory column.

Howell at Westland Glenn: Howell, a 32-0 victor over the Rockets in last year's season opener, appears to have an inexperienced group with only 14 seniors off an 8-2 squad that made the playoffs and tied for the Kensington Valley Conference title. Coach John Dukes' team is not as big, but returns running back/linebacker Ryan Arnold (5-10, 195), the team's third leading rusher and tackler. Leading the Highlanders' wishbone attack is quarterback is Matt Ventura (6-1, 165). Glenn (8-4), meanwhile, will rely on senior tailback Jay Jackson and fullback Matt Grigilo. PICKS: Emons says Glenn rides last year's playoff momentum. Is O'Meara just Howell-ing at the late August moon?

Belleville at Ply. Salem: The Gold twins, Jason and Jeremy, are gone, but there's still one left (Ian), who is considered one of the best running backs in the state. The Tigers (9-1), who also return speedy QB Nate Lewis, take on a Salem team that is banking on Dirk Schmeidel to step in and run the wishbone attack if the injured Nate Gray can't go. Lineman Tom Bish (6-5, 220) is a good one and running back Ashraf Youssef needs daylight if the Rocks are going to pull the upset. PICKS: These Tigers don't need Sparky Anderson.

Ply. Canton at Monroe: The Chiefs (4-5) will start junior Rob Johnson at quarterback. Senior wide receiver Ron Hunter is among the area's best. Tailback Mark Montgomery may be the key. Monroe (9-1), a Class A playoff qualifier last year, returns one of the state's best linemen in 6-4, 265-pound Eric Wilson. PICKS: Monroe absorbs Canton's shock.

D.H. Crestwood at Garden City: Coach Floyd Carter's team Crestwood team (6-3) should be at the top of the Mega's Blue Division. Garden City (4-5) will miss lineman Nick Bellovary, but return wide receiver Aaron Justice. The Cougars will be the underdog in this one. PICKS: Crestwood sounds like a good toothpaste as it brushes off GC.

Wayne at Adrian: In the past five years, Wayne holds a 3-2 edge in the series, including last year's 32-24 victory. The Zebras (5-4) boast one of the area's top junior signal callers in Lorenzo Guess, who has plenty of receivers to throw to including tight end Richard Rashad and Richard Buford. Adrian (4-5) will counter with Mark Bruggeman, who started all last year as a sophomore. PICKS: Emons likes Adrian in the opener; O'Meara says Wayne wings its way to a win.

St. Agatha at Clarenceville: The Aggies (8-3) lost a ton of talented players off last year's Class D playoff squad including running back Bill Matti (1,600 yards). But Mike Wilson, a 6-3, 223-pounder, returns at quarterback (1,500 passing yards) and linebacker. Clarenceville (5-4) is relying on freshman tailback Walter Ragland and tight end John Rose in hopes of avenging last year's 31-0 loss to Agatha. PICKS: Agatha is off and running again.

Red. Thurston at Country Day: The Yellow Jackets (11-2), last year's state Class B runner-up, lost All-Staters Matt Kives (quarterback), Gerald Conoway (tailback) and Brian Rubin (wide receiver). But don't worry, more Chris Webber-types are on the way including new QB Josh Collins, fullback Brett Gasper, and the Imsland twins, Brett and Jim. Thurston (6-3) is rebuilding, but hopes Catholic Central transfer Jason Robinson, a 6-2, 285-pounder, can beef up the line. PICKS: It's Country's day all the way.

Bishop Borgess vs. Ecorse (at Garden City Jr. High): The scouting reports on these two teams are thin. The Spartans are under new management in coach Darryl Arnold, who hopes to reverse last year's 0-9 season, including a season-ending 24-22 loss to the Red Raiders. Ecorse was last in the Suburban Athletic Conference and 2-7 overall. PICKS: Emons bets on Borgess, and Ecorse enlists O'Meara's help.

SATURDAY'S GAMES
(all 1 p.m. unless noted)

Sterling Hts. Stevenson at Liv. Franklin: The Patriots (1-8) are expected to be improved, but Class AA semifinalist Stevenson (10-2) is going to be a tough task. Stevenson, although drilled by Warren DeLaSalle in a recent scrimmage, boasts one of the state's top linemen in 6-5, 260-pound Dave Sucura, a two-year starter both in football and basketball. Junior receiver Tim Steele caught 63 passes a year ago. The quarterback is Mark Morris, who moves into the starting spot from the defensive secondary. Stevenson has a 73-man varsity roster. Franklin must get its running game going to be effective. PICKS: Another tough opener for the Patriots.

Waterford Mott at Farmington: Could this be the year the Falcons (6-3) break into the Class A playoffs? Things look promising with the return of tailback Jake Siskosky (1,183 years) and quarterback Tim Streit. Farmington, who beat Mott (3-6) in last year's opener, 24-14, will face a Corsairs team expected to challenge for first in the Oakland Activities Association Division II. Quarterback Jeremy Koger, a 6-foot-3 senior, is a three-year starter. Five other three-year starters return. Halfback Ben Robertoy could also be a threat. PICKS: The Falcons are flying high in their '95 opener.

Lutheran Westland at Dbn. St. Alphonsus (at Dearborn Fordson): The Warriors (4-5) have a new coach in Scott Wiemer, who plans to shake things up both offensively and defensively. St. Alphonsus (3-6) is also under new leadership. Dick Kennedy takes over with Walt Bazylewicz, that's right, the former Borgess coach, as his assistant. What a staff and what a runner the Arrows boast in Gino Williams, who has more than 3,000 yards in three years. PICKS: The Arrows find the mark, O'Meara says, while Emons likes Lutheran Westland.

Redford CC vs. Toledo CC (4:30 p.m. at Pontiac Silverdome): The Shamrocks (6-3) always open their season at the dome with the idea of playing for the Catholic League and Class AA championships in the dome as well. Fullback John Spolsky is a good one and quarterback Greg Cail could be flinging the ball around if coach Tom Mach decides to get a little crazy. Tight end Eric Gilbo should be on the receiving end of some of those aerials. Toledo CC (9-2) lost 15 starters to graduation, including quarterback Larry Smith and second-team All-State linebacker JoJuan Armour (now at Miami of Ohio). All-City first-team defensive back Eric Olsen returns as does punter Darek Chelminiak. Tailbacks Jeremie Forcher and Phil Larkin combined for more than 1,000 yards with the help of blocking back Jimmy Bailey. PICKS: Redford CC blows the roof off the dome.

F.H. Harrison vs. Birm. Brother Rice (7 p.m. at Silverdome): The nightcap of the doubleheader should be a dandy. Rice (7-3) lost QB Derek Carnine (SMU) and linebacker Walter Jenkins to graduation, but returns junior running back Brian Marshall (more than 1,000 yards), potentially rated one of the best ever to come out of Warrior-land. Dave Soltran, a wide receiver, moves in at quarterback and may give Rice a running threat. State Class A champ Harrison (12-1) has the speedy Jason Granger and quarterback Kevin Bambenek returning. Key losses include wide receiver Kevin Bryant (Michigan) and 250-pound fullback Nick Williams (Miami of Florida). Rice, which has beaten Harrison two in a row, won last year's opener between the two teams 28-21. PICKS: Emons takes Rice again, but it wouldn't be a Harrison-Rice game if Danny O. didn't disagree and take the Hawks.

FOOTBALL

PREP FOOTBALL TOP 25 PLAYERS

Editor's note: Players at schools in Redford, Garden City, Livonia, Westland, Farmington, Plymouth and Canton are eligible.

1. Jason Granger, senior tailback-defensive back, Farmington Hills Harrison: The 5-8, 155-pound tailback is one of the most feared backs in the state, especially when he's playing on the Pontiac Silverdome turf. He started his junior year with a long run for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage against Birmingham Brother Rice and capped his season with a big day in Harrison's 17-14 Class A championship victory over Grand Rapids Forest Hills Northern at the Silverdome. He's no slouch on grass, either, finishing with 1,551 yards and 13 touchdowns (9½ yards per carry).

2. John Spolsky, senior fullback-nose guard, Redford Catholic Central: A first-team All-Observer choice at linebacker as a junior, Spolsky (6-0, 235) makes the transition to nose guard. He ought to cause enough havoc to let his teammates enjoy a few more sacks and tackles for losses. As a fullback, he runs over players on a regular basis. He benches 405 pounds. If there was an All-Madden Team for high school players, he'd be the captain.

3. Jake Siskosky, senior tailback, Farmington: Siskosky (6-1, 190) is a three-year starter whose durability is as impressive as his ability. He gained a school-record 1,183 yards rushing with 12 touchdowns. He played free safety on defense, but will be moved to outside linebacker this year to take advantage of his nose for the ball.

4. Lorenzo Guess, junior quarterback, Wayne Memorial: To think, he's only a junior. The Zebras' two-sport star (he led the Wayne boys basketball team to the Class A state quarterfinals) has put up some impressive numbers in his first two years. The scary part is coach Chuck Howton plans on letting Guess (6-3, 210) do more.

5. Mike Wilson, senior quarterback-linebacker, Redford St. Agatha: Wilson has tremendous size (6-3, 223), a strong arm, and his mobility allows him to play linebacker for this small Class D school. A fierce competitor, he needs to work on having more of a quarterback's mentality. He threw for more than 1,500 yards.

6. Eric Gilbo, senior tight end, Redford Catholic Central: Is this what Kyle Brady (the former Penn State All-America and first-round draft pick of the New York Jets) looked like in high school? The 6-7, 250-pound Gilbo has great hands and is a fine athlete. Because of his size, he might end up playing tackle in college.

7. Rich Beal, senior wide receiver, North Farmington: Beal is the lone returning wide receiver from last year's All-Observer first team. The speedster caught 25 passes, including one for a 72-yard touchdown in last year's 7-0 upset win over Livonia Stevenson. He also had three interceptions as a defensive back.

8. Eric Curl, senior center, Livonia Stevenson: The 6-2, 246-pound Curl is a returning starter and the son of Ron Curl, the former Michigan State All-American offensive lineman and member of one of the Pittsburgh Steelers' Super Bowl winning teams in the early 1970s. It will be Curl's turn to shine as the Spartans graduated several big linemen from last year's Class AA state playoff team.

9. Matt Griglio, junior linebacker-fullback, Westland John Glenn: Griglio (5-11, 200) will see increased time in the offensive backfield with the graduation of tailback Brent Washington (University of Michigan). Griglio was second-team All-Observer as a linebacker.

10. Nick Shaieb, junior linebacker, Farmington Hills Harrison: In many respects, Shaieb (5-9, 185) is the heart and soul of the Harrison defense at inside linebacker. He is the leading returning tackler after recording 65 stops as a sophomore and also plays fullback.

NEXT 15 (alphabetical order)

Kevin Bambenek, junior quarterback, Farmington Hills Harrison: Bambenek (6-0, 150) started two thirds of the 1994 season, passing for 737 yards and seven touchdowns, with 51 completions in 84 attempts and only four interceptions.

Tom Bish, senior offensive/defensive lineman, Plymouth Salem: Bish has the size (6-5, 220 pounds) and experience to be a force as a two-way player.

Greg Cail, junior quarterback, Redford Catholic Central: A left-hander, Cail (6-0, 185) throws well, and is just as effective running the ball. When he gets free, he can outrun most defensive backs.

Gade Clark, junior tailback, Livonia Stevenson: The 5-8, 193 pound Clark is closing in on 1,000 yards rushing for his career. A slimmed-down Clark could get close to 1,000 more yards this year.

Brad Donahue, senior center, Farmington Hills Harrison: The 6-foot, 210-pound Donahue anchors the Hawks' offensive line as their lone returning starting lineman.

Ron Hunter, senior wide receiver, Plymouth Canton: Hunter (6-3, 195) should be a big-play receiver with the Chiefs, whose air attack starts with first-year quarterback Rob Johnson.

Jay Jackson, senior tailback, Westland John Glenn: The pint-sized (5-5, 150) senior spent most of his junior year as a receiver as all-stater Washington got a majority of the handoffs. Jackson had more than 100 yards against Class AA playoff qualifier Howell in last year's season opener while Washington was sidelined with an injury.

John Lossway, senior linebacker, North Farmington: He has impressive size (6-1, 235) as a returning inside linebacker, and is strong run stopper. He's also a good blocker as a fullback.

Richard Rashad, junior tight end-defensive back, Wayne: If Guess and Rashad (6-4, 195) click through the air like they do on the basketball court, they'll be hard to stop. Rashad doubles as a defensive back — there aren't many high school secondary players as big as him.

George Shanlikian, senior fullback-linebacker, Livonia Churchill: The 6-foot, 242-pounder is a three-year two-way starter for the Chargers, and a solid college prospect.

Mike Smiley, senior offensive guard-defensive end, Redford Catholic Central: Smiley (6-2, 210) gives the Shamrocks effective two-way play. He may be giving up a few pounds on either side of the line, but sound fundamentals and perseverance make him a solid contributor.

Aaron Smitt, senior tackle, Garden City: Smitt has good size (6-3, 230) and has good pursuit on the defensive side of the ball. His junior year was limited because of a broken hand, but he had a strong finish.

Mike Sosnowski, senior tackle-linebacker, Westland John Glenn: Sosnowski (6-1, 235) started all 12 games as a junior when Glenn reached the Class AA semifinals before losing to eventual runner-up Bay City Central.

Adam Tanielian, senior center, Farmington: The 6-3, 272-pounder has been moved to center after starting at guard last year. He also snaps for field goals and extra points and is a regular in goal-line situations as a down lineman.

Title defense won't be easy

GOLF

Last season was one of fortune for both Plymouth Salem's and Livonia Churchill's boys golf teams: good for Salem, bad for Churchill.

The Rocks edged Churchill officially by one stroke when their sixth (and usually non-scoring) golfer outshot the Chargers' sixth golfer at the Western Lakes Activities Association championship tournament, giving Salem the title.

Then at the Class A state regional tournament, one of three qualifying positions remained for the state final. That's right — Salem got it, by a single stroke over Churchill.

The Rocks have lost two of their top scorers from '94, Mark Wesner and Brian Covington, to graduation. Which means it may be Churchill's turn for vengeance.

Perhaps the Chargers have already embarked on that road. At last week's John Sandmann Invitational best-ball tournament, they edged Salem by a single shot.

Indeed, Churchill looks very impressive. The Chargers placed second at Monday's Brighton Invitational, with Salem finishing in the top 10 in the 24-team field. And Northville, another WLAA rival, was right behind Churchill.

"Churchill is very strong," admitted Salem coach Rick Wilson. "The league will be very good this year, especially Churchill and Northville in the Western (Division).

"I think we'll be very competitive in the Lakes Division."

Salem will be led by senior co-captains Mike Hjelmstead and Ryan Andrzejewski. Hjelmstead's 76 led the Rocks at Brighton.

"The other scorers were juniors Brian Fox, 80, and Ryan Deschaw, 83, and senior Dave Popeney, 84. Andrzejewski shot 85.

"Our fourth and fifth spots will probably be changing," said Wilson. He has another senior on the team, Nick Macy, who will contribute, and hopes to get some experience for four freshmen, including Adam Wilson and Mike Deschaw. Another player with experience, junior Jeff Lear, could return later in the season; he's currently sidelined with an injury.

Salem's first dual action is next Thursday against Dearborn. The Rocks open their WLAA dual schedule Sept. 13 against Westland John Glenn. Both are at Hilltop, Salem's home course.

Plymouth Canton

Last year was Tom Alles' first as Canton's head golf coach. The best news from that season — the Chiefs were 4-7 in duals and placed 10th at the WLAA Tournament — was that only one player was lost to graduation.

"We have seven returning lettermen," said Alles, "which is a lot better to work with than I had last year, when I had one senior."

Canton's top returnee is senior captain Brian Carlson. "He's really the best player we have," said Alles. Indeed, at Monday's Brighton Invitational, Carlson led the Chiefs with an 82; the team score was 345.

Others who figure to contribute are seniors Scott Belisle (86 at Brighton), Chris Wilson (90) and Jason Bricker, and juniors Miles Meibers (87), Adam Allen and Dave Dismondy.

"We have some young players who performed well in tryouts," said Alles. "We're hoping they'll contribute as the season goes on."

who twice hit the crossbar in the second half. Finally, with two minutes to play, Brett Konley angled a corner kick into the area in front of the goal — where Drummond awaited to boot it home.

"Boy, (the Pioneers) were good," said Johnson. "It was a good game. We played well, they played well."

Pioneer was aided by three foreign exchange students, two from Denmark and another from Nigeria. Salem helped, too — by misfiring on scoring chances once again.

Still, Johnson found something promising out of that. "We don't give up, anyway," he said. "The scoring opportunities were there. But (Pioneer) were good."

■ PCA 3, Inter-City 1: Chris DeRenzo's two goals lifted Plymouth Christian Academy to victory at Allen Park Inter-City Baptist in boys soccer action Tuesday.

The Eagles improved to 2-0 overall and 1-0 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference with the win.

DeRenzo, a junior forward, opened the scoring 10 minutes into the game after receiving a pass from senior halfback Jamie Neil. Allen Park (0-1) tied the game at 1-1 just prior to halftime.

DeRenzo's second goal of the game and third of the season put PCA ahead for a good 20 minutes into the second half. DeRenzo headed a shot into the Allen Park nets after being set up again by Neil.

The Eagles scored an insurance goal with five minutes left when sophomore forward Justin Stout scored. DeRenzo and Neil assisted on the play.

PCA coach Kraig Warmemuende praised the efforts of sophomore goalkeeper Ben Davis.

"He was excellent in goal and made several key saves early to keep us in the game," Warmemuende said. "On one save, he was able to tip a high shot off the bar, and he was able to get his hands on a number of corner kicks."

Late charge assures victory

BICYCLING

A dark Saturday night in Birmingham went a long way in vaulting Roberto Gaggioli into the spotlight Sunday afternoon in Rochester.

Less than 24 hours after late-arriving lights forced the cancellation of the seventh stop of the Blue Care Network's Tour de Michigan race in downtown Birmingham, the Italian born Gaggioli, riding for Guiltless Gourmet, used a final lap charge to pedal past the field in downtown Rochester and onto his third consecutive overall championship in Pro/Cat 1,2 competition.

Livonia natives Tim Swift (Saturn) and Jeff Pierce (LA Sheriffs) finished 19th and 42nd overall.

"I just got lucky because only two riders wanted to race hard," said Gaggioli, who barely outdistanced runner-up Scott Fortner of the Saturn Racing Team for the 40 first-place points, $8,000 in winnings and Saturn automobile.

Sunday's stakes doubled as a result of Saturday night's cancellation in Birmingham. Originally slated to start at 9:15, the race was called by the time the lights finally did arrive at 10 p.m. The $4,000 stage winning and points were then added to the Rochester race.

Olson has so many seniors — 13 on the team — four captains were chosen: Yockey, Sarah Casillas, Jenny Werthman and Melissa Mangan.

To start with, he may want to start his figuring at the bottom of the ladder. There are 23 freshmen on the team. "We're looking to see what kind of contribution we can get from this group."

If it's anything like last year's freshmen class, the Rocks could be solid. Last year, Carrie Dzialo — then a freshman — netted Salem points at the league meet in the 50 free. Two other sophomores who didn't swim for the team last year are pointed toward the same type of production.

Olson called Audrey Hala "the best on the team right now" in the free and butterfly. And Katie Bonner rates well in both the 200 individual medley and the 100 breaststroke. "She's moving to the top of the list," the Salem coach said. "I like that — I like that a lot."

But the swimmers he's counting on are his seniors. "They're a good group to count on," Olson insisted. Included are Andrea Bien, Megan Harvey, Anna Winkler and Jessica Geiseman (all freestylers); Carey Hyatt (breast); Abby Vanderlaan (back, free); Nicole Wallon (free, fly); and Meredith Whalen (free, breast).

There are problems. Olson figures he could use more quality breaststrokers. "That's our biggest question mark, but a couple of them have been working at it and are coming along pretty well for us," he added.

Of course, however much Salem improves may not show in the final point production at the WLAA meet. Stevenson returns Anne Aristeo, a double-winner last year in league, and figures to dominate the action again.

But the Rocks could catch, perhaps even pass, North Farmington (which was third) and/or Northville (second). And that would be progress.

Plymouth Canton

It hardly sounds like a positive building block.

"At least we know I didn't kill the program," Ron Krueger said as he approached his second season as Plymouth Canton's swim coach.

Krueger was recruited to coach the Chiefs just prior to the start of last fall's season. It seemed an odd position for him, considering he'd been most visible as the Salem wrestling coach.

But the program, while not flourishing, survived. Canton was eighth at the '94 WLAA meet, mainly due to the second/third place finishes in diving by Kari Jackson and Lisa Sabina.

Sabina returns for her sophomore season, and she'll have some support this year. As Krueger noted, the team size has gone from 36 in '94 to 55 this year.

Things will run more smoothly, too, Krueger believes. "This year I'm back because I want to be, not because I have to be," he said. "I'm wiser. With a year under my belt, I know what's going on.

"I hope things go a lot, lot better than last year."

The additional choices alone should benefit the Chiefs. Three seniors share the captainship: Erica Pendergrass, Kristi Wright and Heather Brooks.

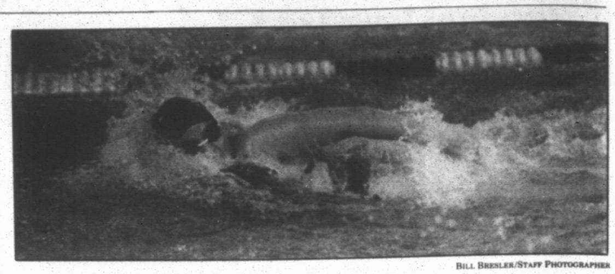

Four returning juniors should be counted on for scoring as well: Kate Jackson, Amy Sonnanstine, Donna Logsdon and Carla Howe. Howe, however, is suffering with bad shoulders, making her status somewhat questionable.

Sophomores who look promising are Angie Frost, Kristen Kalymen, Stephanie Butterfield and Sue Fanning, with several freshmen adding to the optimism: Teri Hanson, Jaclyn Benard, Andrea Cizewski, Leah Reeder, Megan Dowd and Courtney Ceci.

Joining Sabina in diving will be Jaime Skamiera, a junior, and Jenni Demsky, a sophomore.

"They're very coachable," said Krueger. "All of these girls are."

If there's any area the Canton coach sees as particularly improved, its depth. "I see us with a lot more depth than last year," he said. "Last year, where we had one or two breaststrokers, now we have four or five."

BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Scorer: Angie Frost made her first season on the Canton swim team a worthwhile one by finishing 10th in the 100 freestyle at the WLAA meet.

Krueger sees "us being a little better than last year, hopefully a lot better. We're good in the breast, back, fly and in the distances. We're a little short on sprinters."

The Chiefs are solid in diving, too. But they won't be making a mad march toward the top of the league ladder. "I don't see how anybody can not favor Stevenson," Krueger said. "Not with (Anne) Aristeo and those others. I see North Farmington being tough, and don't let (Salem coach) Chuck Olson fool you — he'll be a factor."

But can Canton be? Krueger hopes so.

Both Salem and Canton open their swim seasons at 5 p.m. today with the WLAA Relays meet, which Salem will host. The Rocks' first dual meet is Sept. 12 at Brighton; their first home meet is Sept. 19 at Ann Arbor Huron.

Canton has three consecutive home duals after the conference relays, hosting Novi next Tuesday, Monroe Sept. 12 and Salem Sept. 21. All duals start at 7 p.m.

Past champ ends CC grad's hopes

Steve Campbell had his chances Tuesday night at the U.S. Open Tennis Championship, but the Redford Catholic Central High product succumbed to 1988 champ Mats Wilander in five sets, 3-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

The match was seen nationally on the USA Cable Network and played before a jam-packed crowd in the grandstand at the U.S. Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow, N.Y.

Campbell, ranked No. 157 in the world and given a wild card into the grand slam event, appeared to be moving on to the second round as he led in sets, 2-1, and had a service break at 4-2 in the fourth.

But Wilander, the steady Swede and former No. 1 player in the world, won four straight games, breaking Campbell twice to force a fifth and deciding set.

In the fifth, Wilander jumped out to a 4-0 advantage by breaking the former Rice University All-American twice.

Wearing baggy shorts and an earring, Campbell broke back at 4-1. Wilander, however, took the next game, but Campbell, saving a pair of match points, broke back again to make it 5-2.

Wilander, 25-14 in five-set matches at the Open, closed out the first-round match when Campbell made an unforced error with a backhand into the net on a shot from the baseline.

"A half-hour before the match I had an upset stomach, maybe food poisoning or something, and I felt tired the first hour or so," Wilander said. "But I felt good at the end of the fourth set and I thought Steve didn't believe he could win once I evened it up."

The 2-hour, 42-minute match was the first five-setter in Campbell's pro career.

Campbell, 25, is a native of Detroit. He was a state Class A champ at No. 1 singles for Catholic Central in 1988.

He has been playing mostly on the satellite circuit the past two years, but did qualify earlier this year in another Grand Slam event, the Australian Open, reaching the second round.

COLLEGE SPORTS

Completely rebuilt SC's looking strong

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

■ VOLLEYBALL

Now this is different.

From start to bottom. There's no denying it, either — it's all changed.

Schoolcraft College volleyball coach Tom Teeters will tell you: "We have an all-freshmen team."

It may be the first time he's been in such a situation at SC (Teeters insists the past should remain there — in the past, which is why he recalls little of it). Certainly, it must be the first time he's had an all-freshmen team so small in numbers — just eight members.

"There's a positive and negative side to it," he said. "Drills are easier. You can concentrate better with fewer players. The negative side is if there are injuries."

Considering who Teeters has on his team, there is a certain amount of fortune: "I've got eight players who can contribute in a number of spots. This team has a wide variety of talents."

Which the Ocelots showed last weekend at the Kellogg CC Tournament, in Battle Creek. They reached the final against Southwestern CC, and won the first game in the best-of-three title match by a 15-5 margin, but dropped the next two 8-15, 11-15, to finish second.

SC reached the final after losing to Mott CC 15-11, 15-4; splitting with Kalamazoo Valley CC 15-4, 12-15; and beating 15-10, 15-8, in the first round. In the second, the results were more favorable for SC: a 15-9, 15-11 win over Delta; a 15-6, 3-15 split with Henry Ford CC; and an 8-15, 15-7 split with KVCC.

That put the Ocelots into the quarterfinals against Grand Rapids CC, which they edged 9-15, 15-8, 15-13. In the semis, Mott was the opponent — and SC reigned, 15-11, 15-13.

The Ocelots were led by Tracy Sledz, a 5-foot-11 middle blocker/outside hitter from Livonia Clarenceville; she totaled 68 kills with a .306 kill percentage. Other kill contributors were Michelle MacRae, a 5-6 outside hitter who had 48 kills (.213), and Jamie Clark, a 5-9 outside hitter from Livonia Churchill who had 39 kills (.195).

Sarah Fabirkiewicz, a 5-10 middle blocker from Churchill, added eight solo blocks and 12 block assists; Stacy Sailus, a 6-0 middle blocker, contributed 17 service aces and 10 block assists; Andrea Greer, a 5-5 setter from Livonia Franklin, had 135 assists to kills; Hermina Angeles, a 5-4 defensive specialist, had 91 digs; and Julie Schmidt, a 5-6 outside hitter, added 46 digs.

The strong showing by such a new team surprised even Teeters. "Our setting has been extremely surprising," he said. "Andrea Greer has never set before, but she's been very strong."

Whatever this team manages to accomplish will be acceptable to Teeters, whose '94 squad finished 31-15-3 but lost early in the NJCAA Region 12 Tournament, which SC hosted.

Teeters, who will be assisted this season by Dale Hartzell and Chris Calois, isn't going overboard on this season's team, however — even if it is bigger than most others he's fielded in recent years.

"We've got a 5-10 outside hitter, and that's something we haven't had since our national championship year," Teeters said, slipping into the past in spite of himself, then trying to correct the mistake: "We've still got a ways to go."

Their trip won't resume until Sept. 19, when they host Delta CC at 7 p.m.

Crusaders' goal: to improve

By C.J. Risak

■ SOCCER

The preseason has been one of gains and losses for Madonna University's soccer team.

"We didn't lose a lot," insisted coach Pete Alexander as he introduced the second season of soccer in school history. Which is true: All the Crusaders lost were substitutes, Chris Gajewski and backup keeper Tony Ouellette.

Which seemed to assure the 8-7 first-season record would be certain to rise.

Then the bad news started filtering in.

First, midfielder Seamus Rustin, a Detroit Country Day graduate and one of Madonna's top recruits, suffered a severe knee injury. He underwent surgery and will be lost for the season.

Then came the loss of sophomore defender Scott Barns. He suffered a fractured ankle and will be out until October.

After that, another major blow: knee problems suffered by Nate Stovall, a team co-captain last year who was entering his final season of eligibility (he spent two years at Schoolcraft College), was ruled out for the season.

Both Stovall and Rushton will be redshirted and will return next season. But that doesn't do much for this year's team.

"I still think we're going to be a good team," said Alexander. "We'll surprise some people."

Of course, Alexander had no sooner said that Monday afternoon when he received a telephone call from another of his top recruits, Charlie Bell, saying he would be unable to attend practice that afternoon.

A few minutes later, Keith Gniewek — another of Alexander's prized freshmen, Gniewek's from defending Class A champion Plymouth Canton — wandered into the office and told his coach he was suffering from tonsillitis and would also miss practice.

That's the kind of roller coaster preseason it's been for Madonna. The ups belong to the newcomers, who will make a good team better. Bell and Gniewek are two of the more promising; both figure to start.

Bell's story is an interesting one. The 18-year-old is a native of Derry, Ireland; he was given a full-ride scholarship to attend Duquesne University, but not enough of his credits would transfer to make him eligible under NCAA guidelines.

However, Bell did meet NAIA academic requirements. A friend who lives in the area introduced him to Alexander, and now Alexander will introduce Bell to U.S.-style soccer.

Gniewek will strengthen a solid defense with his marking ability. Joining him will be sophomore returnees Jason Hazinski (Redford Thurston) and Brock Becker, who missed the late stages of last season with an injury. Barns' return will help, too.

Scott Emert, brother of starting midfielder Christian Emert (both from Walled Lake Central), will start somewhere immediately, with sweeper a possibility. And John Hazinski (Thurston), older brother of Jason, will also see time on defense or in the midfield. John missed last season because of an injury; he could play stopper. Sophomore Chris Gossett adds depth.

The midfield will be strong, despite the losses of Stovall and Rushton. Bell, Christian Emert, John Courvall (Thurston) and incoming freshman Mark Garrett (Plymouth Christian/Plymouth Canton) make it much improved. Freshman recruit Kevin Wiljanen (Farmington) can fill in on either defense or in the midfield; so can returning sophomore Nick Matovski.

On offense, Alexander is counting on transfer Jason Stempien, a senior who played three seasons at Central Michigan University before the program folded, and Joe Kinnear, a sophomore who played three games last season before an injury sidelined him. "He has a knack for finding the back of the net," Alexander said of Stempien.

In goal, Dan McEvilly (Livonia Churchill) returns for his senior season, but he'll be challenged this year by junior transfer Mike Schroeder, who played two years at Walsh College (Ohio) and earned honorable mention All-NAIA honors. Mark Zathey, a sophomore from Churchill, adds further depth.

"We're improved in every aspect," said Alexander, "from goalkeeper to scoring up front. I think we'll be pretty well-rounded. I like our transfer students and our freshmen — they showed they can come out and play.

"My goal is to make us as good a defensive team as we can be, and build our offense from the back or at least the midfield."

Building his roster, or at least attempting to do so, isn't the only thing Alexander has been working on. This schedule will be far more difficult, starting with Schoolcraft College Wednesday. Also included are NCAA II team John Carroll University (Cleveland) and NAIA powers McKendree College, University of Findlay, the NAIA's No. 1-ranked University of Mobile, and William Carey-Mississippi.

"Even though we're improved, we're going to be tested," said Alexander. "Last year was almost like a scrimmage that lasted all year long. It was a whole season of adjustments. That's how I referred to it to the guys, as a scrimmage, but as a successful scrimmage."

Now it's time to see if they can take that next step.

Bloink paces Churchill

Chad Campau wasted little time in earning his first victory as Livonia Churchill boys soccer coach.

On Tuesday, the Chargers scored a pair of first-half goals and went on to beat host Sterling Heights Stevenson, 3-0, in the season opener.

Goalkeeper Bryan Stramecki posted the shutout.

Senior forward Jason Bloink scored twice for the winners, while senior midfielder Brian Zawialak scored on a penalty kick. Senior forward Dave Stirling added two assists.

"That first win is good to get out of the way," Campau said. "I'm going to celebrate my first win by working on lesson plans for school.

"I'm happy with the way we played. We're still not in game-shape conditioning yet, but we'll get there."

■ STEVENSON 1, TROY 0: Livonia Stevenson survived a tough boys soccer opener Monday at Troy, pulling out a one-goal triumph in a battle of perennial state powers.

Two injured players came off the bench in the second half to combine for the game's only goal.

Senior midfielder Steve Williford, beating a couple of defenders, made a 40-yard run to set up teammate Jeff Urbata in front of the goal for the game-winner.

Coach Walt Barrett also praised the play of defenders Scott Sersen and Jason Roy, along with midfielder Matt Quinter.

Goalkeeper Travis Miller posted the shutout.

■ FRANKLIN 4, FARMINGTON 1: Livonia Franklin won two of three games over the weekend to finish third in the Beverly Hills-Country Day Tournament.

The Patriots knocked off Farmington in the consolation final Saturday behind Steve Finneran's one goal and three assists.

Rob Vega chipped in with a goal and two assists, while Eric Kracht and Eric Bowman also scored for the Patriots.

Goalkeeper Shaun MacGillis saved a penalty kick.

Earlier in the day, Bowman's hat trick and one assist carried Franklin to a 5-1 win over Dearborn Edsel Ford, giving first-year coach Dave Hebestreit his first win. Rich Banjo and Adam Shanks added the other Patriot goals.

On Friday, tourney runner-up Birmingham Seaholm stopped Franklin, 2-1.

Bowman, who scored five times on the weekend, had the lone goal.

Franklin missed a penalty kick and hit the crossbar.

"We had 17 or 18 shots, but their goalie played phenomenal," Hebestreit said. "But we reacted well to the loss."

SOFTBALL

Salem grads lift Stingers

The Garden City Stingers softball program had two age-group champions in the Incredible Girls Fast-Pitch Softball League this summer.

The Stingers' 18-under team, featuring players from six different high schools, had a record of 14-2.

Members of the team included Kelly Shanks, Stephanie Smith, Angela Hudson, Jennifer Talbot and Jen Wilson, from Garden City; Amanda Wilks and Robyn Pitman from Taylor Light & Life; Andrea Mida and Nicole Miller from Willow Run; Rachel Owens and Shannon Coultas from Plymouth Salem; Kendra Dumke from Dearborn; and Danielle Devlin from Dearborn Heights Crestwood.

The team was managed by Bob Smith and coached by Larry Shanks and Don Hughes.

The 16-under team also finished with a 14-2 record, with first place decided by a doubleheader playoff showdown against the Commanders.

The Stingers entered the twin bill with two losses and the Commanders one. The Stingers won the opener, 17-3, setting up a showdown in the nightcap, winner take all.

The game was tied, 2-2, in the bottom of the fifth inning. The Stingers went ahead for good with five singles and three walks in the top of the sixth, finishing with a 9-2 victory and the championship.

The team was made up of players from three schools.

Andrea Callender, Danielle Biegas, Missy Krol, Christina Hudson, Katie Kendrick, Kelly Sylvester and Amanda Milatz were from Garden City.

Erin Watts, Andrea Otlewski, Shelly Luke and Leslie Brown were from Dearborn; and Emily Williams was from Redford Union. Craig Sylvester and Jen Horosko were the coaches.

The following awards were handed out to players in the Stingers' program.

Christina Hudson was named Most Valuable Player, playing catcher and designated hitter for the U-16 team with a .588 batting average.

Pitman won the Pitching Excellence Award for an impressive 12-win, 3-loss campaign on the 18-under team, including tournament games. Smith won the Offensive Excellence Award after driving in 43 RBI and carrying a slugging percentage of 1.026 for the 18-under team. Wilks (18-under) earned the Defensive Excellence Award behind the plate.

Shanks (18-under) won the Coaches Award after hitting .524 and playing steady at shortstop and second base. Sylvester (16-under) earned the Dedication Award, batting .345 with solid defense. The Tournament Player Award was given to another 16-under rookie, Williams, who led all batters at the Waterford Tournament with a .485 average, four stolen bases and solid defense. Watts (16-under) earned the Most Improved Player award.

when you get tired your shots start falling short."

Canton had an inside game to rely on, provided by Kristi Fiorenzi (16 points) and Sarah Warnke (12 points). They combined for 13 first-quarter points, and each had seven rebounds in the game.

Becky Vachow chipped in with 14 points, seven assists and five rebounds in a superb all-around performance.

"We got good balance," said Blohm. "I was happy about that."

Eron Vragan led Kettering with 11 points. Tescha Carr had eight.

The Chiefs play at Birmingham Marian Thursday.

■ Pioneer 51, Salem 50: A basket by freshman Angie Sillmon with 24 seconds remaining in the game gave Plymouth Salem its first lead since the opening quarter in Tuesday's season-opener at Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Unfortunately, the Rocks couldn't hang on to their advantage, surrendering a basket with 12 seconds left, then failing to get off a good shot at the game-winner.

"We put ourselves into a position to win," said Salem coach Fred Thomann, "and we gave it away, really."

Salem trailed 14-13 after one quarter and 24-19 at the half. The Pioneers extended their lead to 42-34 before the Rocks rallied, outpointing their hosts 16-7 in the last quarter — until that final basket.

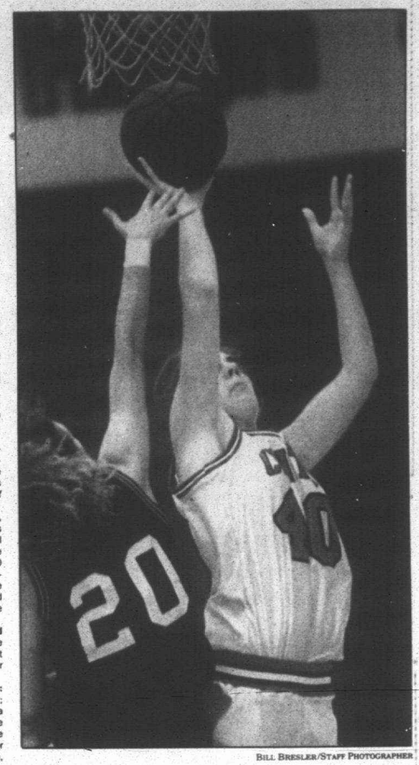

Janelle Sterling, Salem's smallest player at 5-foot-1½, led the Rocks with 10 points. Laurel Weiman and Shellye Sills added nine points apiece, with Weiman adding six assists and six rebounds. Sills had seven boards.

But Salem's biggest problem was stopping Pioneer's post player, Ryan Johnson, who riddled the Rocks for 20 points.

"We didn't do as good a job defensively as I hoped we'd do," said Thomann. "We didn't fight through their screens the way I wanted us to."

It bothered the Rocks to be without starting point guard Amanda Abraham, who injured her ankle the day before in practice and was limited to one quarter of action.

But Sterling filled her spot very well. "That wasn't the reason we lost," insisted Thomann. Defense was the problem, something he hoped to correct before Salem hosts Rochester Adams at 7 p.m. tonight.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

GIRLS BASKETBALL TOP 25 PLAYERS

Editor's note: Players at schools in Redford, Garden City, Livonia, Westland, Farmington, Plymouth and Canton are eligible.

1. Maxann Reese, senior guard, Redford Bishop Borgess: Reese (14.7 points, 7 rebounds per game) is the top player in Observerland for the second-straight year and the state's leading Miss Basketball candidate. She has three-point shooting range and her ballhandling and court sense gives the Spartans, in effect, two point guards. Reese, who has verbally committed to Michigan State University, has helped the Spartans win two-straight Class C state championships.

2. Adriane Bryant, senior guard, Bishop Borgess: Bryant can dominate a game without scoring a point, especially with all the weapons she has at Borgess. But when needed, she can score, as she showed in last year's Catholic League playoff semifinal when she poured in 10 points in the fourth quarter against Madison Heights Bishop Foley and star guard Darcy Rasch.

3. Sarah Warnke, senior center, Plymouth Canton: Warnke scored 11.5 points and grabbed 8.5 rebounds per game in leading the Chiefs to the Class A state semifinal game before falling to eventual state champion Flint Northern. She is strong, quick and a good leaper. Her competitiveness also stands out, because at 5-11 she's usually battling taller players in the low post for points and rebounds.

4. Shellye Sills, senior center, Plymouth Salem: Sills is one of the finest all-around athletes in the area, also excelling in volleyball for the Rocks. The 6-footer averaged 15 points and 10 rebounds as a junior, using her strength and aggressiveness.

5. Alyisha Smith, sophomore center, Bishop Borgess: Smith averaged four points and four rebounds a game as a freshman, but those numbers should improve considerably with the Spartans putting a greater emphasis on low-post scoring.

6. Carrie May, senior forward, North Farmington: May begins her fourth year as a starter on the North varsity. She averaged 10 points and eight rebounds per game as a junior and made the all-star team at the All-State Camp in Traverse City this summer.

7. Kristi Fiorenzi, junior forward, Plymouth Canton: The 5-9 forward enters her third year as a varsity starter. Her passing and shooting have improved. She's shooting the 17-footer with more confidence and responding well to coach Bob Blohm's emphasis on defense.

8. Amanda Abraham, sophomore guard-forward, Plymouth Salem: The 6-footer is one of several trees in Salem's forest of players and because of her versatility, coach Fred Thomann is trying her at point guard. She can shoot the 15-foot jumper, take the ball to the basket and her conditioning allows her to run all day, according to one area coach. Abraham, who averaged 10 points and 10 rebounds per game as a freshman on the varsity, is recovering from a recent ankle sprain in practice.

9. Yolanda Holt, junior, Wayne Memorial: Holt returns to playing full time after sitting out most of last season after transferring from Redford Bishop Borgess, where she started as a freshman for the 1994 Class C state-champion Spartans. The Zebras don't have an abundance of talent so coach Chuck Henry is experimenting with playing Holt at point guard, to make sure she has the ball in her hands.

10. Christie Glover, senior forward, Garden City: The 5-10 Glover put up some impressive numbers during a junior campaign in which she missed 15 games due to a back injury. Glover averaged 10 points in nine games, scoring 62 points in her final three games to lead the Cougars into the Class A regional final. She plays a lot like (although not nearly as well as) former Dearborn Divine Child and Livonia Ladywood all-stater Tara Overaitis, now at Michigan State University.

NEXT 15 (ALPHABETICAL ORDER)

Monique Anderson, junior guard, Farmington Hills Harrison: The 5-6 point guard is adept at handling pressure and will get after players on defense.

Rica Barge, junior guard, Wayne Memorial: She has two years of varsity experience. Having the talented Yolanda Holt in the lineup can only help Barge's game.

Kathy Dankert, senior forward, Livonia Ladywood: The 5-10 center will put up some good numbers despite having to battle taller players in the paint most of the time this year in the Catholic League Central Division.

Erika Greene, senior center, Farmington Hills Harrison: Greene averaged eight points and five rebounds per game in a senior-dominated offense. She has good touch around the basket, as evidenced by her shooting percentage of 47.

Nadia Grooms, senior forward, Farmington Hills Mercy: A defensive specialist, Grooms is being moved from shooting guard to small forward for the Marlins.

Kellie Main, senior forward, Livonia Franklin: Main gives Franklin steady play along the frontline. Like Dankert, she'll need to be an even bigger factor this year because the Patriots will be facing several tall orders in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Melissa Marzolf, sophomore guard, Plymouth Canton: Any freshman point guard who can gain a team lacking a center taller than 6 feet to the Class A semifinal deserves mention. Marzolf's strength is her defense; her footwork is tremendous. She needs to score more this year.

Stacey Nichols, senior center, Livonia Stevenson: A broken thumb hindered Nichols' progress as a junior. Her senior year is important; many players in her class have caught up to her since her sophomore year, when she was an up-and-coming prospect.

Tracy Rynkiewicz, senior guard, Livonia Franklin: Rynkiewicz made third-team All-Observer last year and is the Patriots' top player this year.

Becky Vachow, senior guard, Plymouth Canton: The co-captain for the Chiefs, Vachow shoots the three well and is a steady defender. This is her third year on the varsity.

Mary Jane Valade, junior forward, Farmington Hills Mercy: The 5-8 junior played in every game on the Mercy varsity last year, used mostly against zone defenses because of her fine perimeter shooting. She will play full time this year, has a good vertical jump and passes well in traffic.

Nicole Van Hees, senior guard, Plymouth Salem: The 5-10 left-hander is a very good athlete, quick and aggressive, and can score inside.

LaZandra White, senior guard, Bishop Borgess: White would be a go-to player for a lot of teams. Who knows, she might end up playing another four years for coach Dave Mann at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

Heather Wohlfeil, senior forward, Redford Thurston: Wohlfeil's progress isn't helped by not playing AAU basketball and the Eagles' weak schedule in the Mega Conference Blue Division. The 5-10 Wohlfeil is a slashing forward in the half-court game and good in transition. She can catch difficult passes on the run and convert layups as well as anyone in the area.

Lauren Wright, senior guard, Redford Union: The only thing that has slowed the progress of this tremendous three-sport athlete is knee surgery between her sophomore and junior years.

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

It was many years into the 1900s before man created a mate for the washing machine which had been produced much earlier. While the washer performed to perfection, it still did not dry the clothes to that point. The housewife of the '40s and before had to hang them on a clothes line using clothes pins and stretching exercises. Wash day of yesteryear meant just that. A day spent mostly doing the wash and drying it as well.

It wa a tedious chore and one which was displayed with pride when showing how white the whites could be.

I remember my childhood years in northern Canada when I would have to wear those longjohn underwear with the trap door in the back. Those big long ugly woolen things were rather a pain in my relationship with my parents. My father would make a full size rink in our back yard which was supplied with lights and boards and even a face off circle. My mother would hang the clothes on the line which ran about 30 feet perpendicular to the ice surface. Occasionally, when there was no one around, I would wind up and take a wrist shot at a pair of those most hated long johns. At constant temperatures well below minus 30 degrees you can imagine how hard those things had frozen.

The puck would just bounce off them and back onto the ice rink. I was always quick to ask her if she wanted me to bring the clothes off the line, so she wouldn't see the mark left by the hockey puck. I know she loved me very much because she used to iron those longjohns and she wasn't blind. I miss her today as I write this column and think about the times she would make me smell the sheets as she made the bed. The odor of bed linen dried by hanging in clean fresh air has a fragrance that the world may never know again. She used to tell me, "this is how heaven smells."

Into the 1940s and '50s we go to find the new clothes dryer which does the job in the home. It's easy, you set the dial for so long and walk away. The clothes dryer was built like an army tank and very little service was ever required. There are still many old Hamilton dryers out there in the American home which are between 30 and 40 years old. These dryers are still operating today and who knows how much longer. We all know the new saying that I use today, "they don't make them like they used to."

The clothes dryer of today has many more features, is more energy efficient, and dries with a much lower temperature than makes of yesteryear. An older dryer may be very hard on your clothes because of the high temperature it puts out, and because the garments of today are not the same as "it used to be."

Today's dryer needs to be taken care of by the consumer in many ways to make it last. The movememt of air through the dryer to the outside is of utmost importance to a long lasting dryer. The vent line should be solid aluminum and cleaned at least once a year. The lint filter should be washed with soap and water every month and the dryer taken apart and vacuumed out once every two years. The size or weight of the load you place into your dryer will determine how long it will last or how quickly you will replace parts.

I consider a clothes dryer to be a metal box which you place your clothes into to catch fire, almost. It is a product which starts over 13,000 house fires yearly across this country and a product which you should not turn on when leave the home or go to bed. Be aware and keep an eye on it.

An item such as a tablecloth or dishrag which contains vegetable oil could cause a fire in your home. In a study done by Whirlpool, a cloth with vegetable oil was put through the wash and dried in a clothes dryer. It was then folded and placed in a laundry basket with other clothes. After several hours of sitting in the basket, it created spontaneous combustion and resulted in fire. This should be a caution on what to put into a dryer.

Do not close the laundry room door and open a window when you use your clothes dryer. The dryer uses 200 cubic feet of air per minute while it is operating, so you need to supply it with constant fresh air for good smelling clothes.

When and if your dryer starts to make squeak or rumble noises which were not heard before, I would advise you to stop using your dryer immediately. Not only is this a sign that something is going wrong and you will cause more damage, it can be dangerous and cause a fire hazard inside the product.

The clothes dryer of today may not produce clothes that smell like God's little green acre or dry the cumbrous underwear of a lumberjack but it does do the job and make life a little easier for you. It is up to the homeowner to take care of it and prevent it from being a fire hazard in your home. Said and written many times by this writer, "If you are using plastic vent line, your dryer is a ticking time bomb."

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor" available at area bookstores.

LET'S REMODEL

If you use proper care, marble retains beauty

Q: While I was on vacation recently I could not help but notice how bright and shiny the marble floors and vanity tops were. It made me notice how dull and dingy my own marble floors and countertops really are. What can be done to revitalize them?

A: First it is important to understand the marble product and why your countertops and floors look the way they do. Marble is a natural stone created by high temperature and great pressure, with colors decided by the minerals present at the time of formation. Most true marbles are composed primarily of calcium carbonate. Calcium is violently affected by anything acidic (cleaning products, juices, perfumes, wines, alcohol, etc.). Acids actually melt the surface of the marble making it dull and rough feeling. Dirt is the second leading culprit. Dirt picked up and ground into the marble surface where there is foot traffic equals sanding your floor with a No. 400 grit sandpaper, actually sanding the finish off. The shine on your marble is brought out by sanding with increasingly finer grit up to No. 8000 grit in some cases.

Most problems with marble can be traced to three categories: traffic, cleaning products, and/or cleaning methods.

Traffic problems can be solved by the use of rugs at entrances, removal of footwear before coming in from the outside, or changing entrances into the home. Cleaning products that are neutral-based, especially those formulated for marble, will help protect and restore marble that has not had its finish damaged. Cleaning methods and procedures can also create a problem. This includes cleaning too much, using waxes and cleaning agents that leave residues, and water with high mineral contents. Since marble varies somewhat, you should check with a professional marble care representative for the right product and maintenance program for your floor.

Marble maintenance problems are usually easy to rectify. What can you do to restore the marble's luster? First, a marble surface that has been ground and repolished has a richer look than most new marble. This holds especially true on floors. (Floors that are ground after installation are flatter and more uniform, and the shine seems deeper and richer). One point to remember is that no matter how bad your marble looks, it is still far less expensive to refinish than to tear out the existing marble and replace it with a new floor. The appearance of all stone and terrazzo floors can be improved with refinishing. In some cases, when the tiles are set, lippage (unevenness), can occur and the refinishing process actually grinds the tiles flat with one another. Although most stains can be removed, it is a time-consuming process, often taking days or weeks. Prevention is the key here. See a spill — wipe it up. The longer it sits the more damage it can do. A 10-cent coaster under your glass or a foot pad under that metal table leg can save you an expensive repair. Preventive maintenance is essentially the key to a bright, beautiful, and long-lasting marble floor or counter top. The use of a proactive care system that incorporates an impregnator (for maximum stain protection and dirt repulsion), a conditioner (for protection against wear), a cleaner (too keep the luster) and periodic professional care can keep your stone floor looking beautiful always.

Marble is truly one of nature's most beautiful creations and with proper care and maintenance its beauty will last for a lifetime or more.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

Did you ever take what you knew was a prize-winning shot and then wonder if it could capture first place in a photography contest?

Well, there's a competitive spirit in all of us and unless you enter your picture in a contest, you'll never know how you'd do.

Today, I'm going to give you some advice about photo contests — where to locate them and how best to go about entering the competition. After all, you may win an exciting trip, new camera equipment or some useful cash.

The best source for finding contests is in the news media. Your local newspapers always announce photography contests and quite frequently sponsor their own contests. Check out one of the many photography magazines available. They always announce contests, too.

Major shopping malls in the area often conduct contests and, of course, camera clubs in the vicinity welcome your best shots in their competitions. And your favorite camera store can also keep you up to date on photo happenings.

Knowing what judges look for in a good photograph can be a valuable guide when entering a photo contest. Usually, judges base their score on three criteria.

First is subject matter. A judge will ask: Is the subject unusual, or if commonplace, is it treated in an unusual way? Does it stand apart from other entries and command attention? Are my emotions stirred and is the picture communicating anything to me? In short, does the image have impact and "stopping power"?

Second, judges will take a critical look at composition to determine if all the elements of the picture are arranged in the most effective way. They'll ask themselves: Is this photograph simplified and uncluttered? Is there a strong idea being expressed and does the composition complement the subject?

Third, and equally important, is the technical quality of the photograph. A judge will look for sharpness, proper exposure and good color saturation. He or she will look for a clean slide or print, and if the work is matted, will want to see neat, well-cut mats.

Make sure you read all the entry rules carefully and abide by them. You wouldn't want that special shot to be disqualified on a minor technicality.

Very important, shoot those subjects that interest you. By putting your own feelings and emotions in your photography, you most certainly will increase your chances of producing a prize-winning photo with impact. Shooting for the judges and not for yourself will result in pictures that will lack that all-important ingredient: you!

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then his mailbox number, 1873. His fax number is (810) 644-1314.

BOOK BREAK

This zany love story may break your heart

VICTORIA DIAZ

"Selling the Lite of Heaven," by Suzanne Strempek Shea (275 pp., $10.00, Washington SquaYe Press - Pocket Books).

This novel is a rather odd stew.

In it, occasionally awkward writing exists alongside beautifully articulated insight. It is a love story that sometimes reads like a Young Adult novel — except that its heroine is approaching middle-age. Now and then, it has the overwrought flavor of a short story grown long. At other times, Shea's exquisite attention to telling detail and her ability to say so much so concisely are exactly what keep it alive and make it fly. It's as zany as a cartoon. On the other hand, it may break your heart. Finally, its main character is something of an anachronism, but the story she tells is timeless.

The "Lite of Heaven" is a beautiful engagement ring the nameless heroine of the story is trying to sell through an ad in a little periodical called the Penny Saver. The ring once signified her own engagement to the too-good-to-be-true Eddie Balicki, who swore he loved her, won her girlish heart, then turned right around and left her for, of all things, God.

Worse things could happen, the 32-year-old Polish-American ex-bride-to-be supposes. But, at the time, it is hard to think of what they might be.

She should just dump the ring at a jeweler's, her mother advises, and get on with her ordinary, everyday life. But — maybe just to hold on to a bit of Eddie awhile longer, and maybe to exercise some control over who gets to walk away with the lite of heaven — she determines to sell it herself.

"Selling the Lite of Heaven" is really two stories in one: the relinquishment of the ring, and the looking back at how it came to be hers in the first place. Both hold equal appeal, and much of

Take it easy Labor Day weekend

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Labor Day weekend just might be your last chance for alfresco entertaining — make the most of the last days before school resumes, routines re-ignite and the weather shifts from hot and humid to cool. Keep the menu simple, and easy to prepare. Keep Labor Day non-laborious!

Recycle your Observer & Eccentric Newspapers by covering tables with them. Clean-up is a snap. Just roll up the papers at the end of the meal and toss. Use paper plates and cups, but for a little flair accent your table setting with red napkins and disposable red tableware.

Be one of the 70 percent of Americans who find themselves barbecuing on this National Holiday, according to a Weber Grill Watch Survey. Prepare accompaniments in advance so you can enjoy the outdoors without being enslaved by the kitchen. Stock up on citronella candles and pray for no rain.

Consider a menu that includes an assortment of kebobs. They are simple to make — cut up meat, poultry, shrimp, and other firm-fleshed fish such as sea bass, trout or grouper, vegetables or fruits into bite-size pieces, marinate for extra flavor, slide onto skewers and cook. Make fruit kebabs with a combination of three cups of your favorite fruits — quartered peaches, halved apricots, 1-inch slices of unripe banana, apple or pear wedges, pittled plums or cherries. Thread on skewers and grill over a medium fire for five to 10 minutes, then sprinkle with ¼ cup sugar and let it carmelize over the fire.

Timing is an important issue in grilling — if cooking corn on the barbecue — start it ahead, because it takes longer.

GRILLED SALMON ON LEMON GRASS SKEWERS

2 pounds salmon fillets, skinned, boned and cut into 1½-inch cubes
Fresh lemon grass stalks, outer layers removed ½ cup sake
¼ cup light soy sauce
2 tablespoons sesame oil
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 tablespoons fresh ginger root, peeled and minced
3 tablespoons fresh cilantro leaves, minced

In a bowl, mix together, sake, soy, sesame oil, lemon juice, ginger root and cilantro to make marinade.

Place cubes of salmon in a low, non-reactive dish and pour over marinade — let marinade for 1 hour.

Thread salmon cubes on lemon grass stalks (you may add vegetables if desired — fennel and mushrooms are delicious).

Grill skewers over coals of your choice — 5 minutes on each side — they should be lightly browned. Serves 8.

Lemon grass stalks are available at Asian markets, Strawberry Hill in Farmington Hills, and some Meijer stores.

SOUVLAKIA OF LAMB

1 pound boneless lamb loin
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon oregano
Salt and fresh ground pepper to taste
8 small onions
1 small red pepper
1 small yellow or green pepper

Cut the lamb into 1-inch cubes. Place the cubes in a glass dish or plate and sprinkle with lemon juice, oregano, and salt and pepper to taste. Blanch the onions in boiling water for 10-15 minutes or until almost tender; then drain. When cool enough to handle, cut off the root ends of the onions and squeeze off the skins. Seed the peppers and cut them into 1½-inch pieces.

Thread the lamb alternating with vegetables onto flat-bladed metal skewers or wooden skewers that have been soaked in water.

Preheat the grill. Place the skewers on the grilling rack and cook about 5 inches from the heat, turning every 3 to 4 minutes, for 12 minutes or until meat is brown outside, but still pink inside. Serves 4.

Garden ponds are one of the hottest trends in home landscaping next to retaining walls and brick pavers, but definitely much more pleasurable. Moving or still, water becomes the focal point of a garden by drawing the eye to its mirrored surface. By adding a few Japanese koi, goldfish and aquatic plants like water lily and hyacinth you not only create a miniature eco-system by copying a natural habitat but provide an enjoyable experience for young and old alike.

"Garden ponds began growing real strong in popularity about four years ago and have been increasing every year," said Marco Scappaticci, owner of the Rock Shoppe in Plymouth Township, where more than 35 different preform ponds are available.

"People can't walk by a pond without stopping. It's irresistible, the splashing of the water, the soothing sound of it rushing over a waterfall or a rock. It's a little corner of paradise."

For Karol Wilcox and her family, the hardest part of installing a preform pond was digging the hole in front of their West Bloomfield home. The pond is directly outside the kitchen window, and the family is able to watch birds, frogs and chipmunks while eating breakfast. Water lilies, floating hearts, iris and grasses shade the koi fish bred for their beautiful colors and keep nature in balance.

"I like the birds and the animals that it draws in. They eat the things that grow there. It's very calming to see how life goes on. And it's great for the kids to see how this all works together whether it's feeding the fish or helping Mom with maintenance," Wilcox said. "It doesn't take that much time to maintain, about an hour a week because nature just takes over."

Mark and Terri Wolnowski agree with Wilcox that the installation of a preform pond is a quick and easy project. The couple built one into a raised bed behind their Canton Township home last spring.

Black lava rock accents the gold color of the sandstone Windsor retaining wall. A trip to Mexico hooked them on yucca plants so three serve as focal points endowing the pond with a tropical feel. Instead of water lilies, Terri used impatiens, marigolds and vinca vine draped over the sides of the wall to add splashes of red, pink, gold and green.

"For the average person when you only have a weekend to do the project, the preform is the quickest," Mark Wolnowski said.

Liner or preform?

Installing a preform is easier but a liner allows you to create a pond of just about any shape or size. A garden hose is perfect to outline its form. Whether you use a liner (50 cents per square foot) or a preform (starting around $126 for a kit), a pump will keep the water recirculating. Connecting a fountain or waterfall to the pump oxygenates the water for fish and plants to produce a living habitat.

Carol Packard used a liner to build the pond in the corner of her Plymouth Township back yard. The liner allowed her to vary the depth of the water from one end to the other. It took about one evening for Packard's daughter Lynn and a friend to dig the 10-by-6-foot pond and is a work in progress.

Packard thoroughly researched ponds and water gardens beforehand by attending seminars at English Gardens, Grass Roots in New Boston, Saguaro Rare Plant Nursery in Whitmore Lake and Matthei Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor with friend Deborah MacGregor, who plans to install a pond next spring.

"You need the water at different levels because in Michigan you need 30 inches to overwinter the fish. Water lilies do best at 24 inches," said Packard, an elementary school teacher in the Plymouth Canton Schools.

Site selection

Location is everything. Ponds should be on the highest ground to avoid runoff of fertilizers and pesticides. Packard studied her yard and the movement of the sun over it a long time before deciding to place the pond near a towering evergreen.

"You also have to have the right portion of sun and shade for lilies to bloom. You need for the plants to give about 60 percent coverage of the pond to prevent algae from growing," MacGregor said.

Covering the pond's surface with lilies or floating plants reduces algae and cools the water, which is important to maintaining healthy fish. Water lilies require at least four to six hours of direct sunlight to produce blooms. The fish are an integral part of balancing the eco-system of a pond. At Fabulous Fins in Livonia, manager Jeff Wallace recommends about two gallons of water for every goldfish, 50 gallons per koi. Fish eat the submerged plants, keeping them pruned. They also eat algae and mosquitoes and their larvae.

"They'll eat insects and algae but most people end up supplementing the fish's diet. When it gets below 50 degrees you stop feeding them," said Wallace, who has noticed a definite increase in sales of fish for garden ponds. "A filter helps pull the waste from the water. Lilies keep water shaded for the fish."

Rocks for naturalizing

Rocks shield the edge of the liner or preform plastic from view. Decorative boulders make the pond or waterfall look like it has been there forever.

"Rock naturalizes the pond. You might pay $100 for a rock but it's what makes it, to have a little spot where the water trickles through," Scappaticci said. "It's just like a piece of art."

INTERIOR MOTIVES

Oriental influence adds sophistication

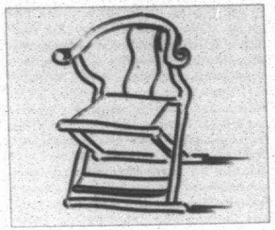

NAOMI STONE LEVY

The sophistication of an Oriental influence is unmistakable. I enjoy adding this touch of glamor to some of my work.

It is essential to know that there existed Chinese dynasties. To explain them would occupy much more space than I am allowed. Dynasties spell out periods of time, as exemplified by the Ming dynasty (1368-1643), followed by the Ching dynasty (1644-1912). The most usable for our purposes was the K'ang Hsi dynasty (1662-1722). There are many, many prestigious items available that are within the reach of some lucky buyers.

Their chairs were customarily fashioned of hardwood. Their introduction into the home changed domestic life in China. The yoke back rail or horseshoe shapes are probably the most easily recognized chairs. They each have a concave splat and splayed legs that produced an object that transcends the category of the decorative arts. (See illustration.) There is a direct relationship to the English Queen Anne chair. This chair arrived on the scene at least 150 years later, and leaves no doubt as to the derivation of its spoon-shaped splat.

Magnificent brocades and damasks, with gilt threads woven throughout, completely covered chairs for half the year as a protection against drafts in colder months. These fabrics also added importance and splendor in honor of very special guests. Desirable and coveted pieces are still available. Often they are in the form of an incredible kimono.

Beds, either testered or alcove, were so constructed that they could be assembled or dismantled easily. This permitted travel with an accompanying bed, only for the wealthy. To locate an antique bed would require research.

Couches, called Ch'uangs, had pads about two inches thick so they didn't distort the proportions of the piece. There were also daybeds that were long and very narrow. Over the years most of the antique ones were converted into tables.

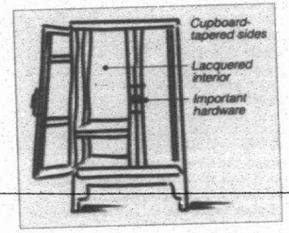

Chinese lacquered furniture tends to be heavier and more ornate, and ever more exquisite. Altar coffers were often cinnabar lacquer. Singular fully lacquered antiques are spellbinding, and are unparalleled in a contemporary or traditional interior.

The original cupboards stored bedding and personal objects, probably 17th and 18th century innovations. The interiors of these were also often lacquered, perhaps red or dark green. These often have a fascinating silhouette with slightly tapered sides. (See illustration.) Some cabinets with a more architectural feeling are stacked in two or three sections. Currently we might observe one section incorporated into a distinguished and incredible television cabinet.

Desks appeared in the 17th century. They were also portable, easily disassembled for travel. Tables and high stands, wash stands, stools and gaming tables rounded out other Chinese furniture. Antique accessory boxes, mirrors and tiny chests made of camphorwood are still to be seen in shops.

Hardware was of vital importance, and always makes its own statement. Handsome brass banding thence came into existence. There were standard shapes of bail handles: stop bail, post and bail, and square. These had a considerable influence on the West. Bail and drop pulls arrived here in the 16th and 17th century on lacquer chests, imported by the East India Company. They relate to William and Mary, and Queen Anne drop pulls. It is interesting to note that when the Chinese bat-shaped backplates were turned upside down they became the backplates of the English Georgian period.

One of the interiors I did a good number of years ago, and of which I am very proud, involved custom-made black lacquer Coromandel screens. The home had a sizable entrance foyer, a large open living room and an open adjoining dining room. I wanted the three areas to open up into one super-space, in which the clients could entertain. It even involved dancing on their wonderful hardwood floors. This space was executed by folding back these inordinate screen panels. They were made to slide on tracks that were countersunk into the floor. Each side of the entrance opening, whether viewed from the foyer or the living room, created a quiet elegance that is still awesome. When the entertaining was over the owners merely returned the screens to their original position and they bifolded and separated the three areas for everyday living.

I plan to devote an entire column to

Oriental porcelains and bronzes in the near future. I have previously devoted a full discussion of the many kinds of Oriental screens. Therefore I shall only mention in passing that all of these incredible accessories are unmatchable additions to any eclectic background. If you aspire to a sophisticated lifestyle, get out there and find some of the aforementioned treasures.

Marshall holds home tour

Marshall, Mich., will show its finest homes during its 32nd annual Historic Home Tour Saturday-Sunday, Sept. 9-10.

The tour offers exquisite private homes and businesses for public viewing and enjoyment. It will feature eight vintage homes built between 1837 and 1931, and five interesting museums covering diverse specialties such as unusual architecture, antique home furnishings, Civil War memorabilia, an 1860 schoolhouse and a restored antique post office. Closing out the tour's 15 structures will be two businesses from Marshall's historic business district.

During the home tour weekend, tour and non-tour visitors alike may enjoy the "Occasion for the Arts" arts and craft show and the DAR antique show at the Marshall Middle School.

Look for the Marshall Antiques Show and the United Methodist Arts and Crafts at the Marshall High School this year. New at the fairgrounds will be the Marshall Antiques Market and the Country Peddler show. Additional activities include home cooking at area churches, a variety of free musical entertainment and shopping in Marshall's many downtown antique and specialty shops.

Marshall is in lower central Michigan near the intersection of I-94 and I-69. Tour hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 9 and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 10. Tickets are $12, available tour weekend at the city's entrance points and at all homes on tour. For more information, call the Marshall Chamber of Commerce at (800) 877-5163.

Home & Garden Television (HGTV) has signed a contract with DIRECTV (TM), the direct broadcast satellite service, and will be included on DIRECTV's Total Choice and PLUS DIRECTV packages as early as Sept. 15, 1995.

After conducting extensive research, DIRECTV selected HGTV from a number of other networks due to its popularity and appeal with DIRECTV subscribers. As the leader in home and garden television programming, HGTV programs also play well to DIRECTV's audience by providing family-oriented, non-violent programming.

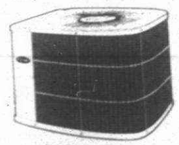

"We believe HGTV will add tremendous value to our programming packages and further broaden the diverse entertainment options available on DIRECTV," said Larry Chapman, senior vice president programming.

Give gardening books for interesting reading

MARTY FIGLEY

"Beatrix: The Gardening Life of Beatrix Jones Ferrand 1872-1959," Jane Brown (Viking, $50), is an in depth account of the life of one of America's greatest landscape gardeners. Born to an upper class family, she led a privileged life and spent many years at friends' large estates in the East. Here she studied the landscapes and decided at an early age that she wanted to be a landscape gardener.

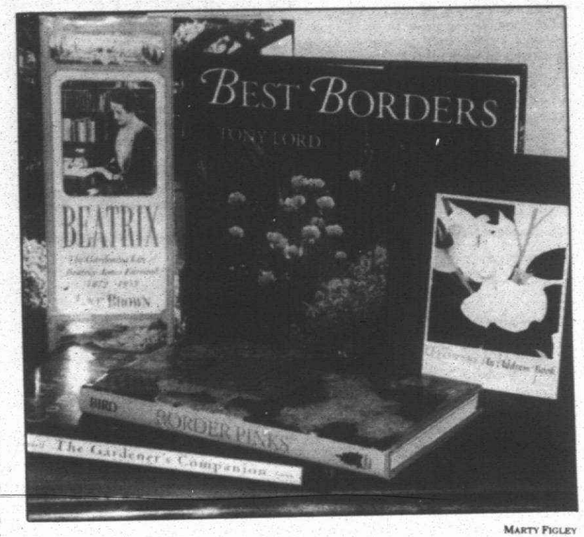

She traveled to Europe many times to study the gardens and met designers and others who were influential to her career, among them William Robinson. The American Frederick Law Olmsted was also a mentor.

Beatrix designed and consulted on more than 200 gardens during her career, which spanned 56 years. Croswick in Pennsylvania was her first major garden. Others include Dumbarton Oaks and the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C. In 1899 she became a charter fellow of the American Association of Landscape Architects, although she always felt she didn't deserve the honor and preferred to be called a landscape designer. Interesting stuff.

"Just Weeds: History, Myths and Uses," Pamela Jones (Chapters, $19.95), takes these plants to a new level. Jones gives much information about 30 North American natives and we learn to appreciate rather than abhor them. Some are now grown in our gardens — i.e. Achillea millefolium, Yarrow; Rumex acetosella, Sorrel — that we appreciate, others such as Stellaria media, Chickweed; and Taraxacum officinale, Dandelion; have yet to be welcome. The author relates her personal experiences in a conversational tone. Excellent illustrations by Bob Jones.

ioned a flower portrait out of each letter of the alphabet to guide to desired pages. The artist's work is seen in major museums throughout the country.

"Border Pinks," Richard Bird (Timber Press, $29.95), is an eye opener because of the variety of blooms. Although the genus Dianthus is quite large, the author has included only those plants that are considered hardy, suitable for the herbaceous or mixed border. Bird discusses the characteristics of the flower and other pertinent information, cultivation, etc. Color plates help with identification. Most of the book is devoted to descriptions and the history of each plant.

Although in "Best Borders" (Viking, $30) Tony Lord illustrates English gardens, many examples can be adapted here, from zone 4-11. Twelve very diverse styles of border gardens are shown at different seasons of the years to bring out the point that color and interest can be had through the year. The introduction gives an overall view of the evolution of these gardens as ideas, designs and plants changed. Simple line drawings help explain the designers' intent and designers and caretakes share their expertise, giving insight into the "whys" and "hows" of the gardens.

"Gardener's Companion: The Expert Guide to 500 Garden Plants," Christopher Brickell (Crown, $30), is an invaluable source for many plants — trees, shrubs, climbers, herbaceous perennials, bulbs, alpines, short-lived plants and warm climate, greenhouse plants. Each category is organized by season for quick reference. I like Brickell's approach and easy script, as he relates personal observations, and the fact that you don't have to hunt for the hardiness zones. John Elsley of Wayside Gardens is the American editor. A long list of U.S. plant sources is included. The book is produced in association with the Royal Horticultural Society.

Natural pesticides can often be used to control pests in the garden. Brooklyn Botanic Garden's "Natural Insect Control: The Ecological Gardener's Guide to Foiling Pests" ($6.95) tells how this can be done. It advises that the predator (or the damage it does) must be identified before the plant is treated and that cleanup in the garden can prevent attacks. Color illustrations help with identification.

The Horticultural Committee of the Garden Club of America, under the leadership of Janet Poor, has published "Plants That Merit Attention: Volume I, Trees" (Timber Press, $44.95). Experts have contributed to make the book "user friendly." Each entry includes a description, cultural information and landscape value. Three photos of each tree show it in full form, as well as the leaf, flower, bark or fruit that adds to its beauty or interest. The book is extremely well organized and is the first volume of several planned. Books about shrubs and herbaceous material will follow.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then her mailbox number, 1859. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Chill a non-reactive metal baking dish in the freezer.

In a small saucepan, combine the sugar and water — heat over medium heat, stirring occasionally until the sugar is completely dissolved. Let the sugar and liquid cool completely.

In a blender or food processor fitted with a steel blade — puree melon and add sugar mixture and lemon juice. Process until smooth.

Pour the melon mixture into the chilled metal baking dish — freeze until ice crystals begin to form (approximately 30 minutes) stir well with a fork — continue freezing — every 30 minutes stir with a fork. If you do not stir in 30 minute intervals, the granita will freeze solid. Continue this process until the entire mixture is frozen to the mixture of a grainy sorbet. Scrape the granita to serve — if it is too hard, let it sit out of the freezer for 15 minutes or until soft enough to scrape. Serves 8.

■ Here is my favorite way to preapre Grilled Sweet Corn in Husks. Have as many ears of corn per person as you feel appropriate. Peel back the husks, do not remove. Wash and remove the silk. Pat dry and spray with "I Can't Belive It's Not Butter." Pull husks back up and secure with kitchen twine.

Grill corn for 15-20 minutes or until husks are nicely charred — remember to turn corn frequently to ensure even cooking.

Add some salads to your menu — a mixed fruit salad — and vinegar and oil based cole slaw would be the perfect mix for this meal, along with a batch of long crusty French Baguettes served with herbed butter or margarine.

"Distinctive furnishings for the bedroom"

the appeal springs from Shea's talent for involving readers in her amazingly textured milieu. "Selling the Lite of Heaven" is one of the most clearly drawn portraits of an ethnic Polish-American community I've ever encountered as a reader.

Over time, as they knock at the door of the little house where the jilted ring seller still lives with her parents, each person who comes to see the lite has his or her own story (and most want a break on the asking price because of it). Paper hanger Richard hopes to wed in a year, although he and his intend- ed "have to wait until her mother croaks," so that they can inherit the house and fix it up according to their own tastes. Joseph hopes to buy the ring and sell it for a hefty profit. Sharleen, in a sense blinded by the light of her own mirror image, doesn't love the ring so much as she loves the ring on her pretty finger. Polite, athletic Randy, dropping by after playing a baseball game, considers himself "too dirty to sit down."

Several others show up, but for one reason or another, no sale occurs among the teacups and the bargain basement Laura Ashley and the stacks of People magazines.

Then, one day, the lite of heaven comes up missing. The police are called. The young woman's ill-tempered mother is mortified at what the neighbors might think, seeing a police car in her driveway. But she is not too mortified to quickly point an accusing finger at an innocent man.

The climax and denouement of this whirligig story seem its most troublesome flaw. Disembodied voices and things very much like ESP start to creep into the story and don't seem quite to fit. A final "big scene" works a bit to redeem the conclusion.

Shea's depiction of the young man who chooses the priesthood over marriage is ultimately rather spare. Eddie Balicki suddenly appears in town, and then suddenly decides to leave it. In between, at least on the surface, he appears to be the greatest Boy Scout ever, only grown up. But what exactly is his relationship with his mother? And why is he such a neatness freak? How is it that he seems so utterly disciplined?

Shea never really answers any of these questions. But then what is more charming than faint mystery — and Eddie Balicki is exactly as charming as he needs to be, which is a big part of the charm of this story.

But if Eddie is shadowy, his former fiance is not. Her voice, as she tells the story, seems to put us inside her heart, where its strange wonders — all of them invisible — are something to behold.

Build a better mousetrap, it's said, and the world will beat a path to your door. One Realtor has invented a product that he believes gives his agents and clients an edge in the marketplace.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Call it a real estate night light.

The device, invented by Joe Kollins, broker/owner of Century 21 Gold House in Canton, is a solar powered light used to illuminate for-sale signs when it's dark.

The light, used in combination with an information box containing fliers placed at the curb, gives a seller even more exposure to night time drive-bys.

"I'm doing it for customer service," said Kollins, a Westland resident. "It's part of our service _ no extra charge. I wanted my sales people to have an edge when they go to a homeowner, a competitive edge to get a listing."

More prospects hunt houses during non-traditional hours than one might think, Kollins said.

"A lot of families work afternoons," he said. "We closed two days ago on a house where a guy (buyer) said the only time he had available is at night. He's a cement contractor."

A conversation with Mary Jo Collins, a friend and former colleague, several years ago when Kollins first purchased the agency spearheaded the invention.

"I came to visit and he showed me down the streets of Canton where he had some listings," recalled Collins, no relation to Kollins with whom she now works.

"I said, 'Too bad it's dusk and you can't read the phone number (on the signs). If I really wanted to buy the house, who would I call?' "

That got Kollins thinking.

At first he tried low voltage decorative lighting around a sign, but found that homeowners had to move the lamps when they went to cut the lawn.

Kollins tinkered further and finally settled on a solar-powered light mounted on a metal frame that slips over the sign. No wiring to trip over, no moving lights around the grass.

The final product was launched about six weeks ago.

"I live on a street with no street lights," he said. "I'm so excited, I just wanted to test it. A lady had a Century 21 sign up, but a different company. I just put it on."

A family in the neighborhood walking to an ice cream store was charmed by the invention, the father so much so that he stopped to talk about the sign while the family went ahead, Kollins said.

And when Kollins went to remove the light, the owner of the house wanted it left behind.

"Joe is a Poindexter kind of guy," Collins said of Kollins' inventiveness. "He just always has to look at how things tick. He always has something going."

Like many inventors, Kollins also is good with his hands.

"I remodeled the office," he said. "When my car breaks down, I can fix it."

Kollins said he and a friend, Fred Pagel, have handmade 20 lights at a cost of about $1,000. That includes materials _ lights and metal _ a bender and band saw purchased to expedite the process and welding expenses.

The light can be turned on manually or set to go off at dusk automatically.

Donna Richard sold her house in one day to a buyer who saw the illuminated sign.

"It was neat," she said. "I live on a street without street lights. It was real noticeable. I think it attracts peoples' attention.

"I think it's helpful," Richard added. "If I were out looking in winter when it gets dark early, I'd certainly be attracted. It shows up easy."

Darlene Knoke, who has a night light on her sign, agrees. "You will be able to see it longer. It gets dark so early in winter and fall."

Sandi Dziurkowski said the illuminated sign isn't a distraction for her or her neighbors.

"From the house, you can barely tell it's on," she said. "It's set just high enough so it reflects down on the sign. It does make the sign very visible. From a distance, you can really tell."

Even though he has patent rights on the product, Kollins said he has no interest in leaving real estate to seek a fortune making light attachments. He'd just as soon sell the rights and concentrate on his first love.

"I want to continue being a broker," he said. "I don't want to manufacture the lights. My intention is to sell the idea. At this point, the light is to benefit my office, my office staff and our customers."

Sorry, cat lovers, they can be restricted by condos

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q: I really take issue with your statement that the problem of pets is a serious one. What nonsense to restrict cat ownership to one.

How far would any association get restricting loud offensive brats? The little "darlings" cannot compare to gentle velvet-footed cats, of which no one can ever have too many. Barking dogs are one thing, but gentle, clean, quiet cats? What gives?

A: You may have taken my comment regarding pets out of context. What was meant is that the issue of cats, dogs and other animals in condominiums is a frequent problem for the association to deal with because of the strong sentiments of parties on each side of the question regarding the maintenance of dogs and cats.

The Supreme Court of California, recently, unequivocally stated that an association has a right to restrict any and all animals and, in fact, to prohibit them, in their entirety. That decision highlights the willingness on the part of courts to recognize restrictions, which have been placed in effect at condominiums, must be complied with by all co-owners.

I, too, have been an animal owner, and while I may love them, I also recognize the need to comply with the restrictions of condominium projects, to the extent same have been implemented regarding pets.

Q: I just bought some property and am thinking about leasing it out. Is it possible that you can give me a brief overview as to premises liability in Michigan between a landlord and a tenant so that I might have some idea of my exposure.

A: Obviously, the topic that you have asked for me to comment on is broad and cannot be totally covered within the space limitations of this column. You are well advised, of course, to get a knowledgeable insurance person to assist you in all potential areas of landlord exposure under a lease.

You are also well advised to get an experienced real estate attorney to assist you in drafting a form lease to protect your interests vis a vis the tenant. However, there are certain basic tenets of real estate law in Michigan, which can be generally stated.

If a tenant has sole possession and control of the premises, the tenant will be liable and not the landlord. Also, while possession and control are certainly incidents of title ownership, those possessory rights can be loaned to another, thereby conferring the duty to make the premises safe, while simultaneously absolving oneself of responsibility.

Simply stated, for a party to be liable to a person on the premises, that party must have both possession and control over the premises. The courts state that a possessor of property must exercise reasonable care in avoiding harm to others on his property from negligent acts because he is in possession and control of the premises and in a position to exercise the power of control or expulsion.

Robert M. Meisner is an Oakland County area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation. You are invited to submit topics that you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Bingham Farms, Michigan 48025.

Michigan housing ranks 5th in affordability

STAFF WRITER

■ 'Basically, you've got relatively cheap land in the state and Midwest and it's available. You generally have good incomes in Michigan. Those two things tend to make housing more affordable.'

Brian Bragg
editor of U.S. Housing Markets based in Livonia

The price of a house in southeastern Michigan rose by 10 percent between 1993 and 1994, according to a national tracking service.

But Michigan ranked as the fifth most affordable state nationally last year in terms of percentage of household income needed to pay the mortgage, property taxes and homeowners insurance.

The weighted average selling price of existing and new houses combined in a multiple-county area including Oakland and Wayne rose to $127,600 from $115,700, U.S. Housing Markets reported. Average monthly housing expense was $1,010.

Statewide, the average house sold for $125,400 and monthly housing expenses were $840.

Iowa, requiring only 14.6 percent of household income to support housing costs, topped the list as the most affordable state.

Michigan, at 17 percent, ranked fifth just behind West Virginia, 16.7 percent, and just ahead of North Dakota and Alabama, 17.1 percent.

Nineteen states reported that household income supporting housing costs exceeded 20 percent. The most expensive states were Hawaii, 25.2 percent, and California and Montana, 25 percent each.

"The portion of average income needed to buy a conventionally-financed house in the U.S. plummeted 11 percentage points in five years," wrote Robert R. Denton, executive vice president of Lomas Financial Group which publishes U.S. Housing Markets.

Increases in household income and decreases in mortgages rates coupled with a softening of prices for existing houses have brought the affordability index down in most parts of the country.

"Basically, you've got relatively cheap land in the state and Midwest and it's available," said Brian Bragg, editor of U.S. Housing Markets based in Livonia. "You generally have good incomes in Michigan. Those two things tend to make housing more affordable."

A substantial property tax decrease for most Michiganians last year folowing statewide approval of Proposal A also made housing more affordable here, Bragg conceded.

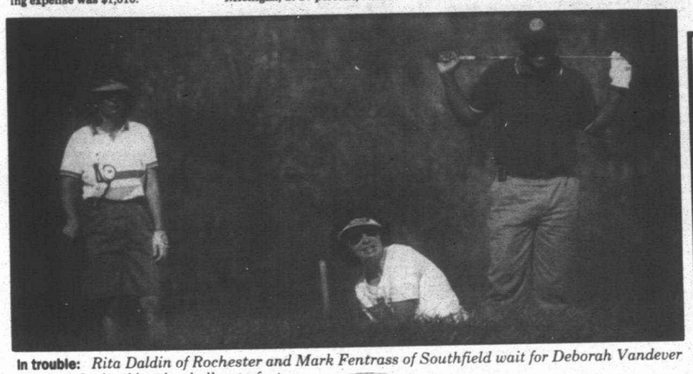

Tampa Bay, with 15.2 percent of monthly income needed to buy a house, was the most affordable of metro markets nationally, according to U.S. Housing Markets. Los Angeles, at 25.7 percent, was the least affordable.

Major metro areas in the Midwest and Rust Belt with more affordable housing than metro Detroit's 19 percent include St. Louis, 16 percent, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, 17 percent, and Minneapolis-St. Paul and Kansas City, 18 percent.

Tampa Bay also topped the most affordable monetary payment listing at $630 per month. That's based on a conventional rate, 30-year fixed mortgage with 20 percent down and includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance.

The metro Detroit area, at $1,010 per month, didn't crack the top 10.

The three areas with the highest monthly housing costs were San Francisco, $1,560, New York, $1,500, and Boston, $1,450.

Chamberlain tourney helps center

The Judson Center was the big winner of a recent golf tournament at the Heathers of Bloomfield Hills hosted by Chamberlain Realtors.

The social service agency that helps troubled children was the designated charity of the best ball scramble, which attracted 64 golfers. Judson stands to gain several hundred dollars when a final accounting of the event takes place.

As for the golf, the winning team consisted of Lois Pryde, Howard Rau, Corine Alonso and Mike Alonso.

Lola Boone, Debbie Amato, Matt Williams and Mike Taormino placed second, and Pat Gould, Kay Novak, Tom Cooney and Paul Laurencelle finished third.

Major sponsors included Republic Bancorp Mortgage, Chase Manhattan, Village Mortgage, Pulte Homes, Robertson Brothers Group, Bing Master Builder, Ross Mortgage, Capital Mortgage, Jandco/Tranex, Sterling Computer Service, First Federal of Michigan and Sir Speedy Printing.

Participants enjoyed continental breakfast, barbecue luncheon, prizes, gifts and promotional items.

Chamberlain has offices in Troy, Birmingham, West Bloomfield and Royal Oak.

Wayne Head Start director completes fellows program

Toni Hartke, director of Out Wayne County Head Start, is one of 84 Head Start directors from around the nation who have successfully completed the nationally acclaimed Head Start Johnson & Johnson management fellows program.

Conducted annually at UCLA's Anderson School of Management in Los Angeles, the program enrolls the country's top Head Start directors who are selected by a panel of educators and leaders from the child care community.

"The Head Start Johnson & Johnson management fellows program gives participants the tools to help them achieve maximum efficiency from the dollars invested in Head Start," said Helen Taylor, associate commissioner, Head Start bureau.

"Fellows who complete this program return home and share their knowledge with other Head Start managers. The idea is to create a ripple effect throughout the entire Head Start community."

Head Start has provided education, health and other services to over 13 million low income children and their families since its launch in 1965. Today, Head Start enrolls 740,000 children in all 50 states and has an operating budget over $3.2 billion. This expansion has created new challenges and opportunities for the hundreds of Head Start directors across the United States.

"Johnson & Johnson has singled out Head Start as one of our primary philanthropic interests in the field of education and health," said Ralph S. Larsen, chairman of Johnson & Johnson. "Head Start not only offers education services, but gives children and their families urgently needed health, nutrition, and family support services as well."

While attending the program, directors participate in lectures, group discussions, case studies and workshops focusing on Head Start needs and interests. Curriculum for the course includes topics such as human resource management, planning, financial management, external relations, and program evaluation.

For the final three days of the program, Head Start Fellows are joined by their supervisors as part of a strategic planning forum. The forum prepares the two member team to implement a management improvement project upon its return from the program. Examples include designing a strategy to solve a specific management problem or developing an organizational restructuring plan.

Johnson & Johnson spearheaded creation of the management education program because of concerns about the health of low income children and the company's assessment that more needs to be done to promote health awareness among disadvantaged people.

Head Start managers must have been directors for at least three years to compete for program fellowships, which are chosen by a program advisory board. Managers chosen to participate represent the Head Start program nationwide in terms of urban/rural mix, size and other demographic factors.

Certification: Toni Hartke, director of Out Wayne County Head Start, receives her certificate of program completion from Al Osborne, faculty director for the Johnson and Johnson management fellows program; Linda Carson, administration for children and families Region 7 administrator; and Nancy Lane, director of corporate affairs, Johnson and Johnson Health Care Systems.

The Head Start Johnson & Johnson management fellows program began in 1991 as a partnership between Head Start, Johnson & Johnson and UCLA.

Established in 1965, Head Start provides comprehensive developmental services to low income preschool children and their families each year through a network of over 1,900 grantees and delegate agencies across the country. It is managed at the local level by Head Start directors who oversee more than 37,000 classrooms with almost 130,000 paid staff and more than 1,150,000 volunteers.

Johnson & Johnson, manufacturer of health care products serving the consumer, pharmaceutical and professional markets, has its headquarters in New Brunswick, N.J.

Adoption agencies team up for 7th annual festival

By Sue Mason
Staff Writer

When the seventh annual Adoption Festival takes place Saturday, Sept. 9, the impetus will be in finding homes for the more than 1,000 children available for adoption in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

And with good reason. Voluntary adoptions in Michigan decreased in 1994 for the first time in five years, according adoption statistics gathered by the Michigan Federation of Private Child and Family Agencies.

Among private agencies, about 13 percent less infants and 12 percent less children with special needs were adopted last year. And the Michigan Department of Social Services saw a decline in the number of state wards that were adopted.

The festival is sponsored by Kinship, a coalition of 28 separate adoption agencies in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, and the Black Family Adoption Registry, and the biggest such adoption recruitment event in the country, according to Maretta Artis, this year's co-chair and coordinator of the registry.

"The whole principal for the festival is to find prospective families," said Artis. "But we're also cognizant that maybe if people see the children in a play situation rather than see a name and a face in a book, it will stick with the families."

"We had the first one to more or less tell the community that we have children, real children who need real families."

The fair will be 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the grounds of the Lutheran School for the Deaf, 6861 E. Nevada, west of Van Dyke between McNichols and Seven Mile roads, Detroit.

Family celebration

While the idea is to find permanent homes for children, the festival is a celebration of family. People interested in adopting and who have children are encouraged to bring them along. There will be activities and entertainment geared to different age groups.

Plans call for a Bunny tent where preschoolers can have their faces painted and be entertained by clowns and mimes. There also will be a basketball clinic for boys.

The festival also will feature booths manned by each of the participating agencies, workshops, slide presentations featuring children waiting for families and plenty of free food.

Offered hourly at noon, 1 and 2 p.m., the workshops topics are the adoption process, adoption and the effects on children's identity and development, defensive parenting — a successful parenting strategy, adoption and the juvenile court system, developmentally disabled children, adoption subsidy and reimbursement for non-recurring costs, cross-racial/cultural adoptions, adoption support groups and the tuition incentive program.

The 55-minute workshops are free, and foster parents attending receive credit for training. Registration is necessary and can be completed by writing the Ennis Center for Children, 20100 Greenfield, Detroit 48235. The deadline for registering is Friday, Sept. 1.

Children available for adoption also will be there, and prospective families are encourgaged to assist them with play, but not broach questions like "Would you like to live with me?"

"Our primary objective is to have all the children enjoy the day and be glad they came," Artis said. "We don't want the children to feel they are standing up to be chosen or to get their hopes up."

Growing interest

The festival committee has spent more than six months planning the event, which last year attracted some 2,000 people. Of that number, more than 260 signed up to pursue the adoption option.

Each year, more and more waiting children have participated in the festival. Aris estimates that between 200-300 children, ranging in age from 3 months to 17 years, are there. And usually, 60-70 children are placed with families.

And while organizers don't want the waiting children disappointed, Artis admits that the festival is important to them. Older children will tend to be more outgoing then youngters children and lobby families. She recalls one teenager who saw a family with children her age and followed them around the festival grounds.

"At first the mother thought, she was interested in her teenage sons, but when they went off to do their things, she realized the girl was following her," Artis said. "When we asked her why, she told us she thought that would be a nice family to be a part of.

"We had an eight-year-old who snuck out and took three buses to come because he wanted to find a family."

Kinship works as a committee to provide families for school-age children who are unable to remain with their birth families.

Cash paid for gold teeth

A gold recycling firm has opened a dental branch to accept and pay for gold teeth through the mail.

The sums paid are typically $5 to $20 per tooth, according to Richard Zakroff, vice president of the company, Lippincott Inc.

For more information, call (800) 538-8188.

"For many people it's like found money," Zakroff said. "People don't even insure it. They just send it. They're happy to get something for it."

Zakroff says a sophisticated system is used to separate the gold from the dental debris.

He says people should ask the dentist for their material back when work is performed.

"The patient paid for this gold when the original work was done," he says.

Sometimes Lippincott receives packages in the original cotton gauze used at time of extraction.

Many shipments arrive in plastic bags with units from years of accumulation.

"With a gold tooth fetching between $5 and $20 (depending on the amount of gold used in its original construction) the dollars add up," he says.

Can teeth really be big business? "You bet," says Zakroff. "We've already processed thousands of packages and the flow is increasing."

Write Lippincott Inc., Box 578, Wynnewood, PA, 19096-0578 or call (800) 538-8188, for a complimentary recycle kit.

Changing habits isn't easy, and often not permanent

STEWART L. TUBBS

A question people often ask is, "Why is it so hard to get someone to change?" Unfortunately, this is often asking quite a lot. If you have ever given up trying to stick to your New Year's resolutions, you know what I mean.

Many years ago I remember being told by my orthodontist that even though I wore braces on my teeth for three years, the teeth would tend to go back to their original position unless I wore a retainer every night to keep that from happening. I went off to college and left my retainer at home. You can guess the rest.

A few years later I read that one of the Air Force bases in Viet Nam that was built with millions of taxpayer's dollars had eventually been covered over by the original jungle and there was hardly a trace of it left.

In spite of all the failures to maintain change, if you watch any of the infomercials on television there is still a lot of interest in self improvement and change.

On any weekend morning you can see everything from Richard Simmons trying to convince us to "tone and sweat," to Tony Robbins exhorting us to live up to our potential, to Susan Powter telling us to "Stop the Insanity," to Dionne Warwick singing the praises of psychic readings, to real estate schemes to people telling us the advantages of drinking vegetable juices.

There is an adage that the only person who likes change is a baby with a wet diaper.

The change process seems to follow four stages, which I call the four steps to success. Knowing the process enables us to more successfully manage change.

Step One: The Status Quo

The status quo or the present situation is one in which we become gradually more and more comfortable with our routines. In fact, some have said that the only difference between a rut and the grave is the depth of the hole.

Another way of putting it is to say that we know we are in trouble when the rim of our rut becomes our horizon. The most extreme point of view on this is the philosophy that says, "Life is a race between incompetence and death and the best we can hope for is a tie." So the status quo has some downside risks.

Step Two: Cognitive Dissonance

This is defined as "mental discomfort" and is often caused when change is thrust upon us. The loss of a loved one, an unexpected health problem, a divorce. Being passed over for a promotion, a poor performance review.

All of these cause us to experience mental discomfort. The irony is that even though this is very difficult to go through, it also produces within each of us the strongest motivation to change thereby reducing the discomfort.

For some it may involve a religious conversion. For others it may stimulate us to go back to school to upgrade professional credentials. For others it may cause an inner search for insights, and for others it may lead to a change in careers.

The need to change also leads us to ask for the advice or feedback from others, in many cases advice that we were not willing to listen to when we were in the status quo stage.

This new information brings us to the third stage.

Step Three: Incubation

During this stage we often toss and turn at night and find ourselves fighting the new advice or insights gained in stage two. We have many debates with ourselves and with others on the pros and cons of changing versus staying the same. This stage may last for a long time as we try to find a way to resolve the dissonance without really having to change.

■ There is an adage that the only person who likes change is a baby with a wet diaper.

Viktor Frankl wrote about the insights he had as a prisoner in a Nazi concentration camp during World War II. He decided that no matter what was done to him he had the power to choose how he would react.

The philosopher Nietzsche said "If it doesn't kill you, it makes you stronger."

Both of these insights come from long hours of incubation. Eventually, we come through the contemplation with a resolve to take control of our situation and make the necessary changes. This takes us to the final stage.

Step Four: Action

In many ways this is the toughest step. It is easy to think about changing, but actually trying our new behaviors is the hard part. Without action the change process is not complete.

Then, just about the time when we think things are on an even keel, the cycle of the four steps of change begins anew.

The important question to ask yourself is:

Which step are you on?

■ CONSTRUCTION

Schoolcraft College has granted permission to J. P. Properties, a Plymouth development company, to use Fox Drive from Six Mile Road north to the end of the property it plans to develop. J.P is seeking zoning approval to construct a three-story hotel (92 rooms), two three-story office buildings (30,000 square feet and 45,000 square feet), and one restaurant on approximately 10 acres of land. The request includes creating a boulevard entrance at Six Mile, widening the roadway and adding three ingress/egress points to parking areas. Final design specifications will be dictated by Livonia's rezoning process.

■ SEAT PLANT

Milwaukee-based Johnson Controls, which has a facility in Plymouth, will open a 100,000-square-foot plant in Sao Bernardo, Brazil later this year as it gears up to be the primary supplier of seats for Brazilian-produced Ford vehicles. Starting in January 1996 the company will supply front and rear seats for cars and trucks produced by Ford's Sao Bernardo assembly plant. In addition Johnson Controls will begin supplying seat systems in Brazil for the 1996 Ford Fiesta. Annual complete seat production rates for Johnson Controls' Brazilian operation will be approximately 200,000 beginning in January 1996. "Our expansion into Brazil reflects our strength and our global strategy," said Chip McClure, vice president and general manager for Johnson Controls. "Johnson Controls is supporting its automaker custom-

There was a time when it was safe to say "A Rose Is A Rose Is A Rose". Today, we're faced with flowers of different petals.

Financial planning duo to launch Observer column

By Mary Rodrique
Staff Writer

Be it a single career woman, a two-income family with kids, or a fledgling new business, financial planners Tom Hogan and Beth Allen can create a plan to help them grow financially.

The two run independent financial planning and investment firms out of shared office space in Livonia. Starting in September, they will write a weekly column for the Observer newspapers giving readers financial advice on a wide range of topics.

"It's something Beth and I have been interested in doing for a long time," said Hogan, a former president of the southeastern Michigan chapter of the International Association for Financial Planning, which received a chapter of the year award during Hogan's tenure.

"Livonia is a wonderful place to live and work and have a business," he said. "I've been doing this close to 29 years. This (column) is a way to give something back."

Allen, a longtime Farmington Hills resident, blends a career of teaching and individual investment counseling.

Allen worked for the Ford Motor Co. as a product analyst, studying cost and design changes, for 11 years until 1980. After her son's birth that year, she returned to school to earn teaching certification. She was, for a time, a math student teacher at North Farmington High.

In 1987, she joined a Novi accounting practice and took additional training in stocks and bonds. She became securities licensed and started a career in investment bonds and planning on Oct. 19, 1987 — the day the stock market crashed.

"It was a great buying opportunity, but not a good time to build a practice. No one was buying," she said.

So she enrolled in a financial planning certification course at Oakland University. While high school teaching wasn't her niche, she found she loved teaching investment and financial planning courses to adults.

"I taught pre-retirement courses at OCC's Orchard Ridge campus, and I've been teaching ever since."

She works for a Troy firm that contracts with companies to teach financial planning/transition courses to victims of corporate downsizing.

One of her more popular classes, offered at various times through Farmington adult education and OCC, is called Investment Knowledge for Women.

A free, four-part series on money management for women at the Plymouth Library several years ago drew standing-room-only crowds. She has also taught money management and been a guest speaker at Madonna University and Schoolcraft College. Most of her private practice and courses are directed to working with women.

"If there's one investment mistake women make, it's that they are far too conservative," said Allen. "Often their income is harder to come by — they earn less than men. But even those with good incomes have a tendency not to take risks. They are a lot more hesitant to invest than men. They pressure themselves to make the right decision. They procrastinate."

She believes in two basic principles — the first step to financial security is through education, and financial planning is a continuous process.

Hogan also has had an evolving career over the years. In 1967 he joined the Phoenix Home Life Insurance Company as an agent.

"After 17 years, my clients were less interested in insurance and more intefested in investment work."

So Hogan left the insurance business and went into financial planning.

"I mostly work with executives of the auto companies and the self employed," he said. "We both have our specialties."

They plan to launch the column with a month-long series for small business owners — from the handling of employee fringe benefits to how to keep cash flow steady during less productive cycles.

"We will eventually invite readers to ask questions," he said.

Hogan says the biggest general concern investors have is "Do I have enough money to retire?

"People are living longer. They're worried about the money they've saved. Will it be enough?"

And companies are scaling back their benefit packages, added Allen.

"Many small businesses no longer handle health care for retirees," she said. "In that age bracket, when they really need the care, it's extremely expensive. Often times, insurance coverage is limited."

Another major shift in investment, notes Hogan, is the popularity of 401(k) plans.

"Ten years ago, retirement money was funded by the company. Today half of retirement income is funded through payroll deduction. That's been a tremendous shift," he said.

"That also means the employee is now responsible for investing the money. Employer plans could have you somewhat limited. Some companies are increasing options and it's often confusing for the client.

"Very seldom does a person choose an investment on their own criteria. They follow the advice of a co-worker or their brother-in-law or someone else.

"They have to meet their own needs. The most important thing we do for clients is help them put their financial plan in order."

Hogan is also no stranger to the classroom. He has been a financial planning lecturer and seminar leader at the Livonia Family YMCA, and taught in the Ann Arbor Community Schools and at Schoolcraft College in the continuing education program.

Hogan, through his HFA Planning Corporation, and Allen, through her firm, Elizabeth Allen, Financial Planning and Investment Services, share a suite at 38705 Seven Mile. They service clients primarily in metro Detroit. Both, however, do have clients across the country.

"We've seen clients come full circle," Hogan said. "Some come in with financial difficulty, but over the years they right that situation and are in good shape. That brings pride and satisfaction."

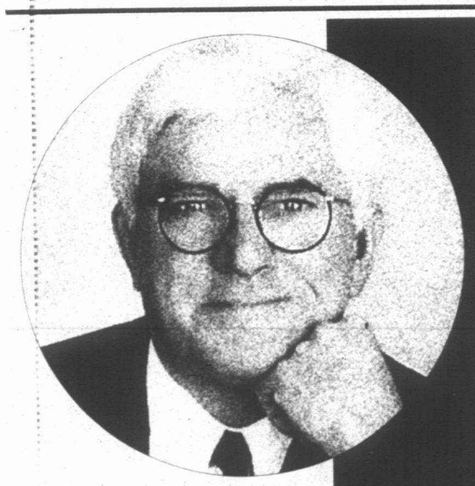

Allen recalls a client starting a business in an apartment bedroom, and watching it grow into a full blown operation with several employees.

Future columns will focus on various aspects of individual financial planning and reader concerns.

Movie web site becomes 'lame, cheesy, promotional'

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

A funny thing happened to a Web site put on the Internet by MGM/United Artists to promote the movie "Hackers."

"Hackers" co-stars Jonny Lee Miller and Angelina Jolie recently have become victims of their own movie plot. Some real-life computer hackers found their way onto the MGM/United Artists WWW page on the new movie and left their own version in its place.

The original site featured a big picture of Miller and Jolie and the hackers scribbled mustaches on them and gave them neon hair. The hackers also replaced mug shots of the other actors with a snapshot of someone drinking beer.

Some of the script on the original page also was altered on the hacked version. Examples on the hacked version include "This is going to be a lame, cheesy, promotional site for a movie [ ] and "We're just looking for interesting scenarios to help us make money off of other people."

Another alteration was made to the original site which offered a video preview clip of a scene from "Hackers." At the hacked version, the user sees "Video Preview: Click here for a Big Waste of Bandwidth." A later reference to the movie in the hacked version has this comment: "It sucks! Buy 'Teach Yourself C in 21 Days' instead."

The original Web page can be accessed using a Web browser or Lynx at http://www.mgmua.com/hackers/index.html and the hacked version can be viewed at http://www.mgmua.com/hackers/hacked/index.html. Lynx users, of course, won't be able to see the altered photos of Miller and Jolie but can read the altered text. Admittedly, not as much fun.

The story was first broken, to my knowledge, by NandoNet (the Raleigh News and Observer). I learned about it instead from Paul Jones who is associated with the office for information technology, school of journalism and mass communication at the University of North Carolina. Jones comments, somewhat with tongue in cheek but not entirely, that "hacked page is by far superior: better graphics, better and funnier text, and by far better links."

While this event has its humorous side, hacking also has a side that's far from funny — especially for its victims. The Webster who builds a site has put a great deal of personal energy, creative talents, and professional insight into its construction. Electronic vandalism of a person's creation is much like someone taking a knife and slashing an artist's canvas. In this case, though, the original was not destroyed and so we can grin as work has not been destroyed.

Jones wondered aloud whether MGM/United Artists did the hacking itself as a promotional stunt. The same thoughts were shared by Walt Nett and his associates at Starnet which maintains a movie Web site on the Internet. "I looked the stories over and said 'no' because the LA Daily News story said MGM/UA's provider, Digital Planet, had agreed to improve security measures in the future — a rather back-handed expression of culpability. It didn't fully dispel the twitchy feeling, but it was the same sort of assurance that reporters get from writing consumer fraud stories in which the target of the investigation signs a document in which he admits to no wrongdoing but promises to never do it again."

Stay tuned. If it's a hoax, we surely will hear more in the near future.

Women on the Net

In keeping with the 75th anniversary of women gaining the right to vote, there are some Web sites users, whether male or female, may want to visit.

"Women's Wire" is an interactive magazine that focuses on women's interests. The WWW site contains daily news about women, weekly advice columnists, statistics, quotes from newsmakers, and links to other women-oriented sites. Visit http://www.women.com.

"Women Leaders Online" has many resources of interest to women; including the archive of Political Woman Newsletter. This site, formerly known as Women's Ledership Network, can be accessed at http://worcester.lm.com/women/women.html.

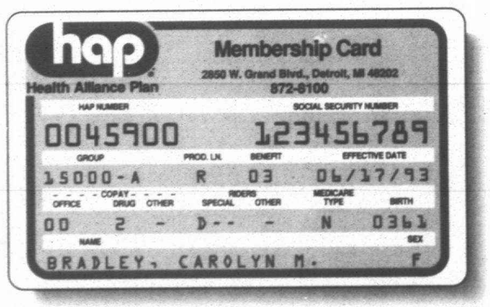

Dean Hughson of Braymer, Mo., has a new homepage on divorce. Those who visit this page will find useful information and links on divorce recovery, law, child support, finding people, communications, and travel for those who find themselves in divorce or separation. The URL is http://www.primenet.com/(tilde mark)dean.

The number of women online and on the Internet keeps growing. A column written by a male about sites on the Net of interest to women may not be the best approach. So women who read this column could be of great assistance to other women users by sharing their favorite sites with this writer who will then offer a column on shared sites. ■ COMPUTERS

Farmington Hills-based Data Systems Network Corp. has reached an agreement to provide computer equipment to the University of Michigan Hospitals. Total revenues from this contract are expected to exceed $4 million and will be acquired over a one year period. The agreement includes the purchase of 1,000 Compaq Pentium computers to place in the hospital's various nursing stations and doctors offices. Mike Grieves, President and CEO of Data Systems Network said, "Data Systems has had a long term business relationship with the University of Michigan and I am confident that our customers continue to purchase from us because we provide them with high level of service and our Company is well regarded throughout the industry." Data Systems Network provides a wide range of network integration services including installation, consultation, maintenance and training.

■ NEW POWER UNITS

Redford Township-based Detroit Diesel Corp. announced the introduction of a new line of Detroit Diesel-branded Power Unit models covering a power range from 57 to 300 horsepower. The Power Units are suited for stationary applications such as irrigation, hydraulic pump drives and other industrial applications requiring turn-key ready power. The ready-to-operate Power Units feature a shrouded radiator with guards to protect the operator from moving components, rear mounted instrument panels with safety gauges, isolation mounts, vernier locking throttle controls, and heavy duty sub-base with forklift slots for easy transporting. Additional options include hood assemblies, side doors with cooling louvers and locking handles, exhaust muffler, oil level shutdowns, overspeed safety shutdowns, and heavy-duty power take-off clutches.

■ NEW DIESEL

Redford Township-based Detroit Diesel Corp. announced that the new Detroit Diesel 4.41 engine, the first of the new 400 Series family of engines, is in full production. The Detroit Diesel 4.41 is the first of three new, direct-injection, four-cylinder engines that have been developed by combining the best features of both the 4.236 and 1000 Series engines. "The 4.41 engine is ideal for a wide variety of applications, including generator sets, compressors, welders, backhoes, harvesters, tractors, lift trucks, skid-steer loaders, tow tractors, wood chippers and pumps," said Jim Schock, Vice President, Selected Products at Detroit Diesel. "The new 400 Series family of engines includes the 4.41, the turbo-charged T4.40 and the spark ignited G4.40. The T4.40 and the G4.40 will be available in late 1995. The new 4.41 offers the same power as the 4.236 while providing cleaner emissions, lower fuel consumption, and quieter operation." The 4.41 has been designed to match the 4.236 in terms of power and torque. Due to technological refinements, the 4.41 engine produces 40 percent less noise and emits substantially less smoke. Oil consumption is approximately one-half that of the 4.236 with oil change intervals increasing to 400 hours. Additionally, fuel consumption has been substantially reduced. The 4.41 engine dimensions are virtually identical to the 4.236 and the new engine incorporates the same mounting points and external options. As a result, no costly re-engineering is required to convert existing OEM applications from the 4.236 to the 4.41.

■ NATURAL GAS ENGINE

The Redford-based Detroit Diesel Corp. Series 30G natural gas engine is in full production. Developed and manufactured as a result of an agreement between Navistar International Transportation Corp. and Detroit Diesel, the Series 30G is a spark-ignited, natural gas fueled engine for commercial use in on- and off-highway applications. "The Series 30G is one of the most advanced natural gas engines available today," said Jim Schock, Vice President, Selected Products at Detroit Diesel. "It offers the reliability and the robust design of a diesel engine and incorporates the proven technology of the Detroit Diesel DDEC III Electronic Control system." The Series 30G incorporates lean-burn combustion technology, has a compression ratio of 10:1, and uses commercially available compressed natural gas or liquefied natural gas. Current testing shows fuel efficiency substantially better than comparable gasoline-powered engines. In addition, the Series 30G has excellent driveability while meeting the California Air Resources Board's emission standards for heavy duty natural gas engines.

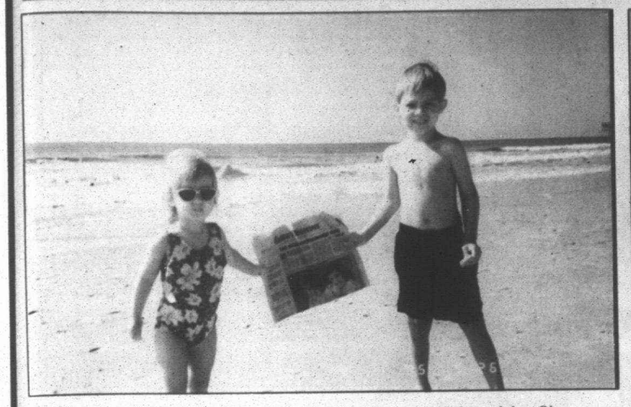

■ BRAKING STORY

Varity Corp.'s Kelsey-Hayes, based in Livonia, will supply four-wheel anti-lock braking systems to Automobili Lamborghini S.p.A. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed. Initial supply is targeted for the Lamborghini Diablo, beginning in the 1998 model year. The Diablo is among the world's fastest production cars, with a top speed of more than 200 miles per hour. ABS production will occur at Kelsey-Hayes' plant in Heerlen, The Netherlands in the spring of 1997. "We are excited to have the opportunity to work with Lamborghini," said Kelsey-Hayes-Europe president Jim Cote in a press release. "The demanding vehicle characteristics of Lamborghini models, particularly the Diablo, and the technology and performance of Kelsey-Hayes ABS systems are an ideal match." Kelsey-Hayes also supplies ABS systems to General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Isuzu, IBC, Mazda, Nissan, Lotus and Kia. In 1995 worldwide, Kelsey-Hayes will supply more than four million ABS systems for more than 25 different models.

■ ISUZU DEAL

Livonia-based Kelsey-Hayes and Isuzu Motors of America announced a new sourcing agreement for the supply of four-wheel anti-lock braking systems. The agreement calls for the supply of Kelsey-Hayes' latest generation ABS for Isuzu's new sport utility vehicle to be introduced in a future model year. The new sport utility vehicle will be assembled in North America and replace Isuzu's current Rodeo model. Kelsey-Hayes' latest ABS offerings were introduced at the Society of Automotive Engineers Exposition in Detroit earlier this year. The systems are up to 40-percent lighter and half the size of four-wheel systems developed in the early 1990s and give customers more packaging options and upgradeable performance features. "We are pleased to have the opportunity to expand our business relationship with Isuzu," said Kelsey-Hayes Group Chief Executive Edward J. Guilda in a press release. "Providing the latest and most advanced ABS technology on Isuzu's new SUV is an exciting proposition since both of us benefit through the partnership, and ultimately the end consumer gets a great vehicle."

Much is being said about the rigorous screening process we put our doctors through.

But don't worry.

Some survive.

It's a tall order. And maybe not every doctor is cut out for it. But then if we're going to make things easier for our patients, we must strive to provide quality doctors. So, before any doctors become Blue Care Network doctors, before they ever examine a single patient, they must first meet or surpass some rather lofty standards. Here's what it takes. First, all doctors (personal care physicians and specialists) are reviewed against specific written criteria. (Quality of care is the thing we're measuring here.)

Moreover, an on-site inspection is conducted by specially trained staff and the results are reviewed by Blue Care Network doctors in the area. Patient satisfaction surveys are conducted by a professional, independent research company. Here, we ask patients to evaluate their doctor's technical skills as well as the basic level of service and care. Blue Care Network also works with its personal care physicians to ensure that standards are met.

Oh, and one more thing. After meeting all these standards, the doctors who are selected have the pleasure of repeating this process all over again every two years. For as long as they're with us.

We screen our doctors so you get better choices.

Orion Woods draws buyers with impressive site

STAFF WRITER

Orion Woods, a site condominium community under construction in Orion Township, makes an impressive appearance.

The 116 detached units on a rolling topography will back up to the Bald Mountain Recreation Area and wetlands. The parcel is off Lapeer Road just three miles north of the Palace of Auburn Hills and access to I-75.

And prices start at $129,500.

"This is one of the most beautiful sites in Oakland County," said Sam Walker, the builder and president of Talon Development Group.

"The whole concept of this development is to bring affordable housing back to nature. People can get here quickly with 4,000 acres of park next to them."

Four models are available. Each contains as standard features sloped ceilings, two-car attached garage, dishwasher, ceramic tile in baths and foyers and pedestal sinks in the half baths.

The Bayfield, a multi-level of 1,720 square feet, consists of an unfinished lower level with laundry room connecting to the garage, a step-up to the living room and kitchen/dining area on the main floor and three bedrooms and two full baths upstairs.

The master has a shower, vanity sitting area and walk-in closet.

Basic price without basement is $129,500, with a basement $137,300. The lower level can be finished into a family room with a half bath for an additional $8,925.

All of the other models at Orion Woods include an unfinished basement and first floor laundry as part of the base price.

The Ashton, a 1,480-square-foot ranch, offers buyers a choice of three bedrooms or two bedrooms and a den with two baths. The plan also includes a living room, dining room and kitchen.

Special features at no extra charge include plant shelves in bedrooms and a half wall separating the kitchen from the dining room.

CARRIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Base price is $146,800.

The Canterbury, a story-and-a-half of 1,730 square feet, places the master suite with shower and walk-in closet on the main floor.

The kitchen/eating nook is off the two-story foyer. The dining room and living room extend along the back of the unit. An optional two-way fireplace can be situated between the master and living room.

Base price is $159,200.

The Durham, is a more traditional colonial of 1,900 square feet.

The living room leads to the dining room off the foyer, while the kitchen/eating nook with island and family room connect around the back of the model.

All three bedrooms are upstairs. The master has a separate tub and shower and dual sink vanity.

Base price is $162,500.

Extras include fireplace ($2,500), air conditioning ($2,350) and skylights ($700 apiece).

Exteriors are a combination of brick, vinyl siding and wood trim accents.

"The whole idea is affordability," said Mel Sambiagio of Talon. "Most people we have are first-time new home buyers, sometimes first-time buyers.

"We're going to get a nice mix. People with young kids just starting out may well end up in the Bayfield," she added. "Empty-nesters are buying the ranch. Move-ups, second and third time buys, will have colonials."

Bayfield model: Buyers have all kinds of finishing options with this multi-level house at Orion Woods.

Orion Woods is serviced by city water and sewers and Lake Orion schools. A sidewalk will wind along the interior of the development.

Scott Vedro, who is buying a Bayfield, said he was intrigued with the idea of moving into a brand new sub in a fast-growing community.

He' upgrading the basic model to include a basement, finished family room and covered porch.

"It's all open," he said of the design. "I'm a contemporary person. Windows were great. Every room except the bath is vaulted and that's really, really nice.

"I have a wonderful treed lot," Vedro added.

Michele and Michael Byrd also bought a Bayfield with several upgrades. Michele's family owned property near Orion Woods for several generations, which also proved to be an attraction.

"The home itself is ideal — tall cathedral ceilings, very open floor plan, exactly what we were looking for," she said.

"It's convenient near I-75," Michele added. "I'm heading to Detroit for law school and my husband just got a new job in Grand Blanc. It's a good halfway point for us."

The property tax rate for a house in Orion Township serviced by Lake Orion schools is about $28 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $146,800 condo in the sub would pay about $2,055 the first year.

Tunnel to lake makes the difference

By Doug Funke
Staff Writer

The tunnel at Vistas on Orchard Lake at Orchard Lake and Long Lake roads makes all the difference in the world.

Some 10 acres of vacant land with 1,400 feet of frontage along the popular all-sports lake had remained undeveloped because Orchard Lake Road runs along the fringe of the water at that point.

But when a tunnel was burrowed under the road about 18 months ago, allowing access from land to lake without risking life or limb, the parcel suddenly became more valuable.

Other improvements added to the value.

Water and sewer lines were extended from West Bloomfield. A well-landscaped entrance with security gates and a paved road were built, dozens of pine trees planted. A smallish marina materialized on the lake side of the tunnel.

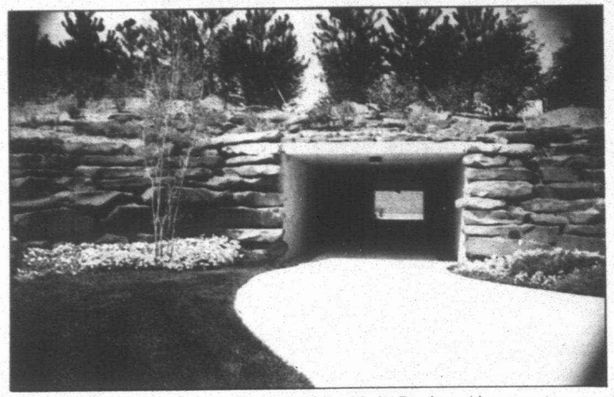

Since then, two of eight site condominium lots have been sold. One large residence of some 8,100 square feet is nearly finished.

All due to the tunnel.

"It's the only private tunnel built for pedestrian access under a public road to get to lakefront property in Michigan," said Karen Gold, publicist for Vistas of Orchard Lake.

"It's real interesting," said Stephen J. Carson, one of the partners. "People are shocked there's a tunnel here and they can get to the water."

The tunnel, 12 feet wide, eight feet high and 95 feet long, made it all happen. Lights automatically go on at night. Limestone slabs and landscaping accent the structure.

Instant access: A private tunnel beneath Orchard Lake Road provides property owners with safe, easy access from their lots to the water.

"It took five days," Carson said. "They worked 24 hours a day. We closed the road and redirected traffic. They came in with a crane, dug a hole in the road, put cement slabs on the sides, then covered and paved.

The tunnel, which cost about $100,000, was designed and built by Advanced Concrete in Waterford.

"We came in with care — what's the saying — underpromise and overachieve. Our idea was to leave the environment the way it's been for generations. We wanted to leave it as natural as possible," Carson said.

Three-quarter acre lots at the site range from $450,000 to $550,000, but are well worth the price, he said.

"It seems expensive, but if you look at homes as you drive around the area, they're on very small lots and on top of each other," he said.

"Say you spend $500,000 (here) on a lot and put up a house worth $600,000," Carson said. "When the whole community is developed, houses won't be put on the market for less than $1.5 million."

But there's immediate value, too.

"You get to enjoy a beautiful view, enjoy the water and know you're in a privately-secured area, know that your neighbors have the same goals and aspirations as you," he said.

Vistas on Orchard Lake is the only property on Orchard Lake serviced by Bloomfield Hills schools, Carson said.

Each condo unit must be at least 3,400 square feet. Buyers can hire their own builders subject to approval of the developers.

The monthly association fee initially has been set at $300.

Existing house sales shoot up 5% in July

By John D McClain
AP Newsfeatures

■ It was the third straight monthly advance. Sales rose in every region except for the Midwest.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of previously owned homes shot up 5 percent in July to the highest level in more than a year as low mortgage rates kept housing costs within reach of many buyers.

The National Association of Realtors said today that sales of existing single-family homes totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.99 million, up from 3.80 million in June and the highest since a 4.01 million rate in June 1994.

It was the third straight monthly advance. Sales rose in every region except for the Midwest.

"The steady month-to-month rise in sales indicates the housing market has benefited from lower mortgage rates, making houses more affordable for all buyers," said Edmund G. Woods Jr., the association president.

Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 7.61 percent in July, up from 7.53 percent in June, but well below the 9.19 percent average as recently as last December.

The monthly payment on a $100,000 mortgage with a 7.5 percent interest rate is $699, while the payment on the same loan with a 9 percent rate is $805 — a difference of $106.

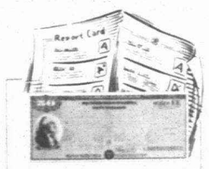

The median price of an existing home was $115,900, down from $116,200 in June but up from $112,400 a year earlier. The median is the midpoint, meaning half of the homes cost more and half cost less.

Regionally, sales jumped 14.5 percent in the West, to a 870,000 annual rate. The median price was $148,300.

Sales rose 6.3 percent in the South, to a 1.52 million rate. The median price was $101,500.

In the Northeast, sales advanced 1.8 percent to a 580,000 rate. The median price was $141,400.

But they fell 1 percent, to a 1.02 million rate, in the Midwest, where the median price was $96,500.

Oxbow perfect for first buyers, empty nesters

A growing family looking to buy that all-important first house need look no further than the 1145-square-foot Oxbow. This is quite a bit of house for your building dollar — a good selling point when you get ready to move on to a larger house. Not only is the open floor design enticing, the handsome exterior makes the street appeal a big plus. The Oxbow will also fit the special needs of empty nesters wanting smaller quarters now that the kids are grown.

The first thing to catch your eye is the covered front porch, with attractive railing. Summer nights will be a lot cooler when you are sitting out here with a tall glass of iced tea. To the right of the recessed entry is the kitchen-dining area. The generous dining room will enhance any meal. A large picture window admits the available light and delivers a clear view of the surrounding landscape. The U-shaped kitchen has all the built-in appliances, a sizable pantry and a garden window.

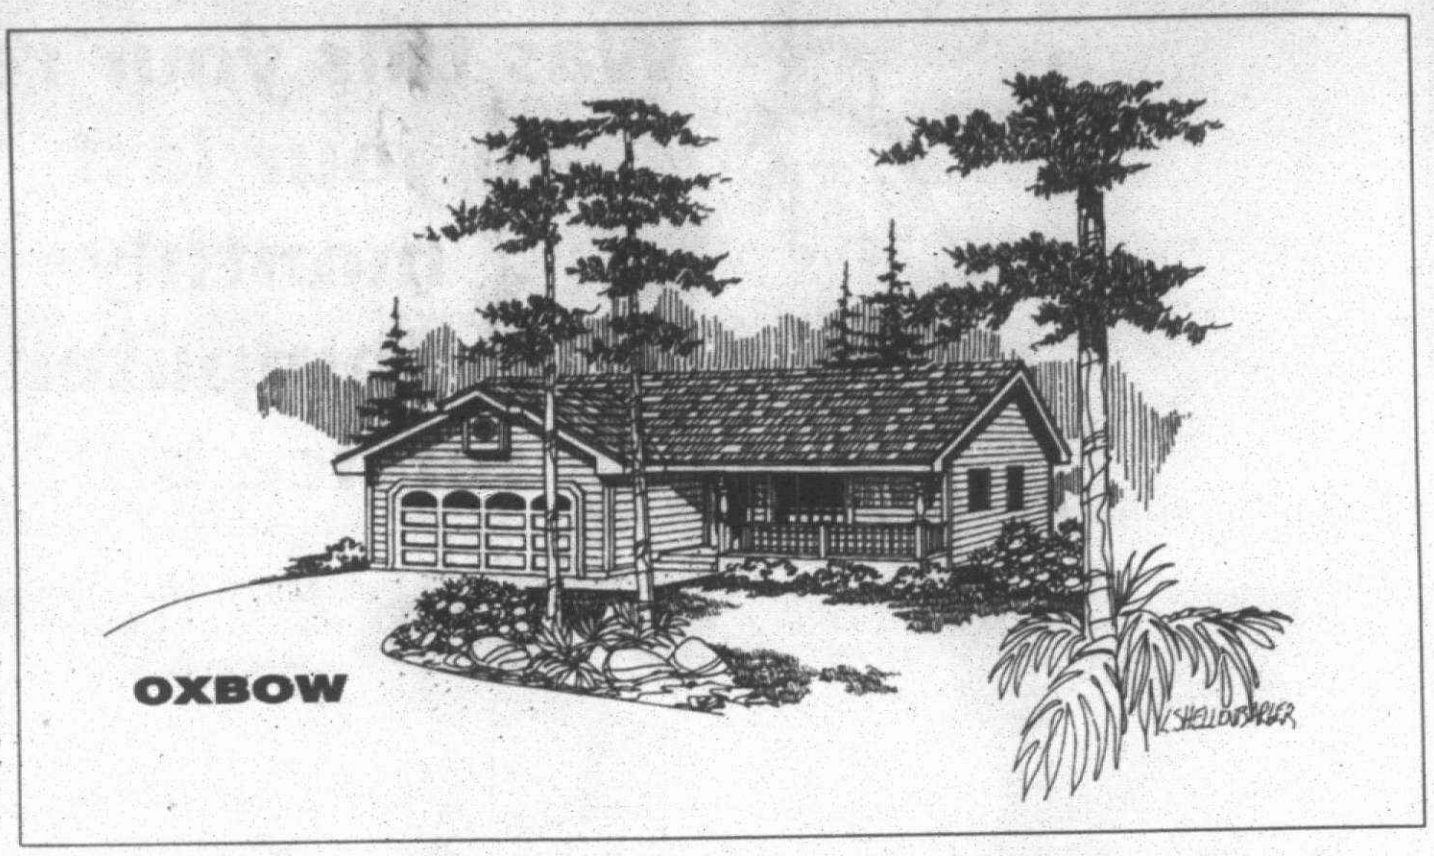

To the left of the entry, the isolated master suite will guarantee your privacy. There is plenty of room here, with 152 square feet of sleeping area, a private bathroom and a spacious walk-in closet. Extra closet space is on hand just outside the master suite.

The living room is the main gathering place in the house. Here you and your guests can hook up the VCR and watch the latest video or enjoy a game of cards. There is easy access to the back patio, where warm weather will find you firing up the barbecue and inviting over the whole gang.

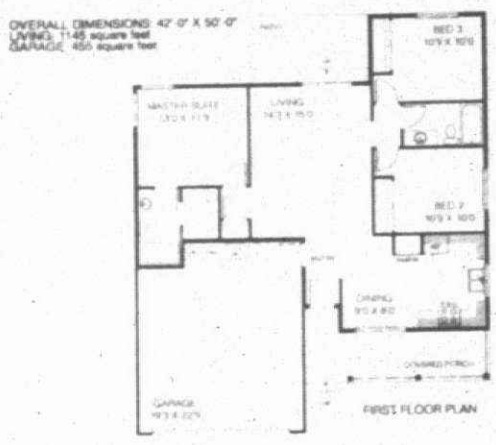

The two identical secondary bedrooms — separated by a full bathroom — each has a nice sized window and an ample closet. For those without children at home, these rooms can have many functions. They can be sealed off until guests are present or perhaps converted into a home office, library, sewing or exercise room.

The washer and dryer are located in the garage. A separate entry into the house allows you to carry groceries directly into the kitchen.

For a study kit of the OXBOW (404-40), send $10 to Landmark Designs, P.O.BOX 2307-OE48, Eugene, OR 97402 (Be sure to specify plan name & number) For a collection of plan books featuring our most popular house plans, send $20 to Landmark.

Good value: Young families looking for that first home and empty nesters looking for something a little smaller will find the answer in the compact but well-designed Oxbow.
